273 Perished In Jet Crash

By TIM CODER

CHICAGO (UPI) — The reek of death clung Saturday to the debris-strewn field where 273 persons died in the wreck of American Airlines Flight 191 as experts began a search for the cause of the worst crash in American aviation history.

Medical experts said it would be impossible to identify all the charred and dismembered remains — sorted by body part and placed into bags — but vowed to try "for the families' sake."

Federal aviation officials said it would take three to six months to complete the investigation of the crash.

The wide-body DC-10 was loaded to capacity with tourists, business travelers and Memorial Day weekend gadabouts when it left O'Hare International Airport Friday bound for Los Angeles. Its flight ended only 1½ miles from the airport.

Before the plane had cleared the fence at the end of the runway, the engine fell away from its left wing.

The plane rolled over on its side. The engineless wing burrowed into the ground. The plane bellied up, slammed to earth and disintegrated in a thundering blast and blinding fireball that left no doubt of the doom of all 271 aboard persons aboard. Two men in a truck on the ground also were killed and three persons on the ground were injured, one critically.

"The flame shot up in a mushroom cloud, just like an atom bomb," said one witness. "Anybody who saw that flame knew there was nobody left alive."

By the time rescue teams arrived, 273 human lives and a hulking, 120-ton airliner had been reduced to little more than debris and ashes.

It was the nation's worst aviation disaster — almost doubling the toll of last fall's collision above San Diego, in which 144 people died.

The plane's two remaining engines and two wheels were the only things at the crash site recognizable as parts of an airplane. Its other engine lay at the end of the runway from which it departed.

"If you can imagine a cemetery without coffins, portions of human bodies strewn about terrain — it is a large land crash area covered by bits and pieces (of people) almost unidentifiable from (the) airplane," said Cook County Medical Examiner Dr. Robert Stein.

"Never have I seen such singed and burned flesh and bone," said Stein.

"I wish to stress our number one job is identification. I cannot bring dead bodies back but I can identify them for the families' sake. Many bodies never will be identified."

Red Cross and other disaster workers worked through midday Saturday collecting remains.

The fragments were taken to a make-shift morgue, set up in an American Airlines hangar, and sorted by body-part into 260 bags. Twelve to 15 of the bags contained upper-body fragments, including heads and torsoes. The medical examiners

Shelby Explosion Takes Five Lives

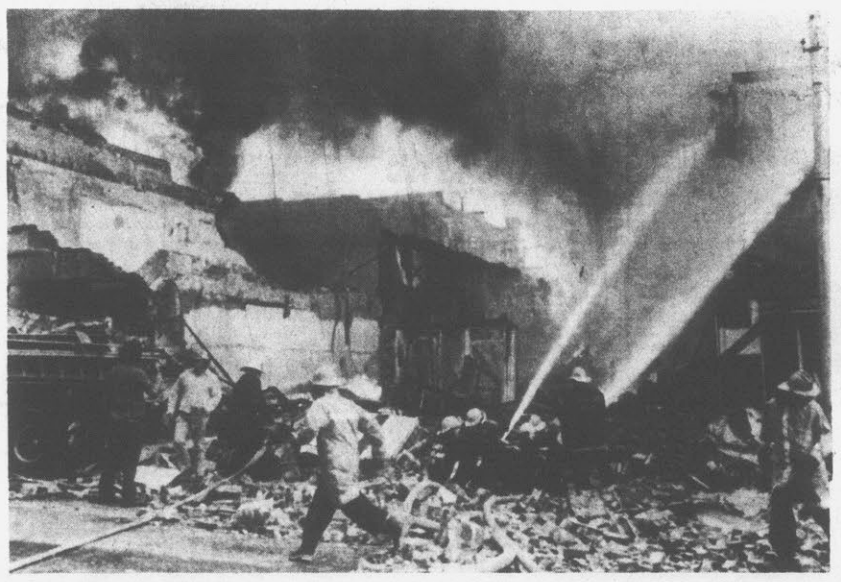

SHELBY, N.C. (UPI) — While authorities Saturday tried to find out what triggered a sudden explosion Friday night that killed five men, four of them firemen, this foothills town offered a massive outpouring of sympathy to the families of the dead.

Firemen on the scene said they suspected a buildup of natural gas inside one of the five buildings wiped out by the blast, but Shelby Fire Chief Glenn Barrett said it would take time to pin down the exact cause of the explosion. The blast sent bricks and glass flying into a crowd of firemen and onlookers about 6:30 p.m, injuring about 28 others.

Killed were regular city firemen Nathan Hall, 27, and Nickey Sharps, 31; volunteer firemen Gene Melton, 24, and George Magniss, 44; and city gas department worker Max Bolin, 45. Bolin had arrived to turn off gas lines and was behind te block of stores with one of the firemen when the blast occurred.

While funeral arrangements were incomplete, Barrett said there would be a memorial service

Vietnam Vets Week Proclaimed

At national, state and local levels, the week of May 28 through June 3 has been proclaimed as Vietnam Veterans Week, 1979.

Noting the uncertainty that prevailed among Americans during the time of the war in Vietnam, President Carter in his proclamation says "The honor of those who died there is not tarnished by our uncertainty at the moment of their sacrifice," and "Their courage and sacrifices in that tragic conflict were made doubly difficult by the Nation's lack of agreement as to what constituted the highest duty. Instead of glory, they were too often met with our embarrasment or ignored when they returned."

Earlier in May, Governor Hunt signed a Vietnam Veterans Week proclamation to present to State Commanders of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, AmVets, and Veterans of World War I, encouraging them to plan activities to honor those in the State who served in that conflict.

Mayor Percy Cox, pointing out that "these veterans have been burdened by an unfair and negative image in the public mind, due to their service in the unpopular conflict," has called on Greenville and area citizens to "give expressions of gratitude to those who gave a substantial portion of their lives at their Government's request and in the name of the people of the United States to serve in Vietnam."

Among activites planned locally is an open house to be held at VFW Post 7032, according to Commander Leon Evans.

Analysis Of Fuel Stocks

By GLENN RITT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Did oil companies guarantee long lines at service stations by severely cutting gasoline production last year and drawing down fuel stocks?

Do similar cutbacks jeopardize deisel supplies or home heating oil needed later this year?

Energy Action, a Washingtonbased consumer lobby, says yes, and presents a detailed analysis to support its case. The oil companies say no, blaming the Iranian revolution and price controls for the shortages.

Economists at the American Petroleum Institute, an oil industry group, acknowledge that Energy Action's statistics are for the most part correct. But they say the consumer group's conclusions drawn from the statistics are unfair.

Gasoline and distillate stocks were drawn down, these economists say. But they add that crude inventories didn't rise sufficiently to justify claims that stocks were built up in anticipation of decontrol and higher prices.

The Energy Action study makes these assertions:

—Distillate stocks, used for diesel fuel and home heating oil, were drawn down nearly 47 percent from October 1977 to May 1978, compared with only 35 percent a year earlier.

—Gasoline stocks, from January to July 1978, were drained 32 percent compared with only 13 percent during the same period in 1977 and 20 percent in 1976.

—Meanwhile, demand for distillates was nearly 4 percent higher in the first half of 1978 than during the same period in 1977; gasoline demand was 3.6 percent above 1977's level.

—Refineries from March 1978 to September 1978 operated at 87.7 percent of capacity, nearly 3 percent less than the average between March 1975 and September 1977, and about 5 percent less than what is considered maximum use.

—Under-utilization of refinement capacity continues. From January through April, refineries have operated at only 85 percent of capacity.

—Crude oil imports, despite the Iranian slowdown, were about 97 million barrels higher from October 1978 to April 1979 than during the same year-earlier period.

Piecing these figures together, Energy Action concludes: "The failure to refine crude when both crude and refining capacity were available meant causing a future product supply problem, whether or not an interruption of crude oil in fact occurred later in the year."

The petroleum institute counters by saying that crude oil stocks rose only 3 million barrels, or about 1 percent, from Dec. 1977 to April 1978, and 12 million barrels, or 3 percent during the same period a year later.

Those buildups were less than during the 1975-76 and 1976-77 periods, and should indicate that shortages were due more to worldwide production cuts than to domestic refining decisions, the API claims.

$10 Billion Budget Gets Senate Approval

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A $10 billion biennial state budget, the largest ever for North Carolina, won approval in the state Senate Friday after efforts to remove money for abortions failed.

The Senate sent the budget package to the House, where differences still remain over a minor provision altering the state retirement program for teachers and employees.

The budget is the first to ever reach $10 billion in North Carolina. It includes $78 million for a tax-cut package still pending that includes a small individual income-tax cut.

Of the total budget, a fourth of the money comes from the federal government, most for social services, schools and highway construction.

Sen. Anne Bagnal, R-Forsyth, offered an amendment to delete the $1 million a year appropriation for state-funded abortions to poor women. It was defeated on a 34-9 vote.

There was little debate about other parts of the budget.

Included is a pay raise to teachers and state employees totaling 7 percent with fringe benefits, plus a one-time cash bonus of $200 per person. It also includes a 5 percent pay raise for legislators, beginning in 1981.

There was no effort to remove the $40 million appropriation to upgrade the five predominantly black campuses of the University of North Carolina campus. But Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg, raised objections to a $4 million cut made by the House and Senate appropriations committees in educational programs for children with special needs.

The Senate voted 40-3 to approve the state's operating budget, which included the abortion money, and voted 40-1 to approve the budget for capital expansion.

Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, was the sole dissenter on that budget, saying later he opposed a $3 million start-up appropriation for Gov. Jim Hunt's new science and math high school and a $1.4 million appropriation for a new state helicopter.

The retirement provision would apply a "rule of 85," allowing early retirement at full benefits for teachers and state employees who are aged 55 or older, when the sum of their age and years of state service equals or exceeds 85.

The Senate version includes the provision, but the House appropriations committee's budget deletes it. If the House approves its committee recommendation next week, the budget would likely be sent to a conference committee.

Among the other major items included in the budget are:

—$112 million for other UNC construction.

—$25.8 million for new prison construction.

—$7.3 million for the state zoo.

—4,400 new positions for teachers and state employees in the next fiscal year and 1,700 more the second year.

—$6.6 million to develop the state ports.

—$42 million to complete the primary reading program in the first three grades.

—$29 million to reduce class sizes in grades four through nine.

PTI Graduation Ceremonies

In exercises held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday night, 134 students graduated, and more than 100 received certificates from Pitt Technical Institute.

At the first of the exercises on Wednesday, nine graduates of PTI's Nurse Assistant program received their pins and certificates at a graduation luncheon.

Ms. Angela Buck, PTI's clinical instructor for the Nurse Assisant Program, was guest speaker for the occasion. She discussed the role a nurse assistant plays in health care.

Two graduates, James O. Moore and Debra Oxley, were recognized for outstanding scholastic achivements.

Wellcome Middle School was the scene Thursday night of presentation of Achievement and Attendance Certificates to over 100 adults enrolled in Adult Basic Education and Adult High School Preparation classes. They were from ten classes throughout Pitt County.

Donovan Phillips, a member of the Greenville Board of Education, was guest speaker, and certificates were presented to students by Dr. Charles Russell, assistant to the PTI president and Mrs. Mary Outterbridge, PTI ABE Coordinator.

On Friday evening, 125 graduates of technical and vocational programs received degrees and diplomas.

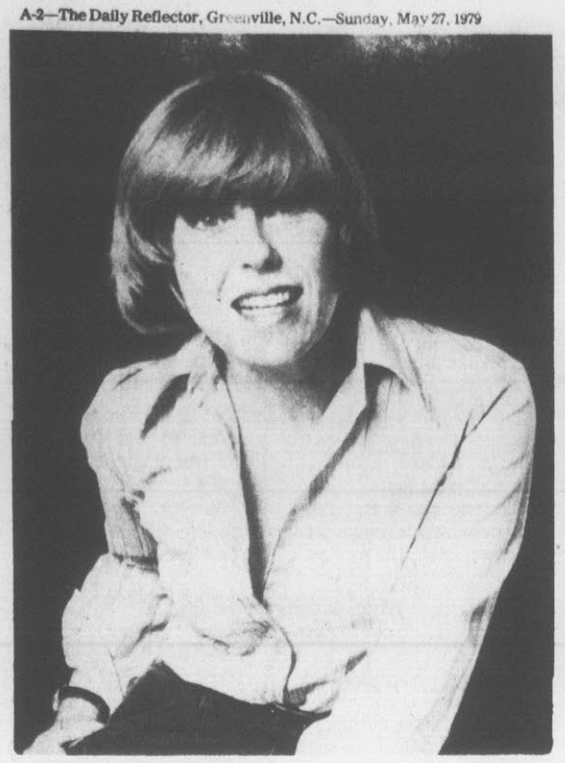

Robert Griffin, Greenville plant manager of Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co., urged the graduates to "take your education skills, join us in the working world, and take advantage of the opportunity to earn a good living for yourself and your family."

Officiating at the ceremony were Clifton Everett, Sr., chairman of PTI's Board of Trustees, who conferred the degrees and diplomas; G. Henry Leslie, a member of the PTI Board of Trustees; PTI president Dr. William E. Fulford, Jr.; and and Edgar L. Boyd, Dean of Students.

Ms. Darlene Harrell, a graduate of the architectural drafting course, gave the graduates' response.

Explosion Kills Two

PITTSBURG, Calif. (UPI) — A pesticide manufacturing unit at a Dow Chemical Co. plant exploded Saturday, killing two men and sending 38 others to hospitals.

One victim, Jack Wright, was decapitated by flying metal. A second worker, Gabriel Martinez, died in a helicopter en route to a regional burn center.

Dow spokesman Bob Mayo said 28 employees of three construction companies working at the plant were held over at six area hospitals for treatment of burns and 10 other workers were treated and released.

Mayo said the explosion caused $1 million damage to the chemical plant, 30 miles northeast of San Francisco.

The explosion released a 100-foot-high toxic white cloud of hydrogen chloride, and highway patrolmen and sheriff's deputies initially warned nearby residents to remain indoors. But the warning was withdrawn when Dow officials said the fumes, when dissipated, presented no danger to humans.

The explosion, heard in a radius of five miles, occurred in a 600-gallon nickel tank located outside under a metal roof and surrounded by pipes and other equipment in a new unit used for making pesticides.

The cause of the blast was not known.

One Injury

A vehicle driven by Ronnie Lynn Pope, 811-B Bancroft Ave., sustained an estimated $1,000 damage when it struck a utility pole along Heath St. about 5 p.m. Saturday, according to police records. Pope, taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, was treated for injuries and released. According to police records, Pope has been charged with careless and reckless driving.

County School Lunch Menu

Lunchroom menus in the Pitt County schools for the coming week have been announced as follow:

Tuesday — Ham and cheese sandwich, potato salad, garden peas, apple sauce, cookie, milk;

Wednesday — Chicken and pastry, candied yams, steamed cabbage, cranverry sauce, hushpuppies, milk;

Thursday — Barbecue on bun, french fries, sliced peaches, cookie, milk;

Friday — Pizza, tossed salad, fruit cup, lemonade, milk.

Reaction

ATLANTA (UPI) — U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young's comment comparing the execution of a Florida inmate to the new regime in Iran sparked angry reactions in Florida and predictions of a national controversy.

"If he can't see the difference between this and the political killings in Iran, then the man is plain blind," Florida Assisstant Attorney General Raymond Marky said angrily. "I mean, this is the most incredible statement I have ever heard. What's the matter with that man?"

Sadat Raises Flag At El Arish

By MAURICE GUINDI

EL ARISH, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat received a hero's welcome to El Arish Saturday, offered thanks to Allah for its liberation after 12 years of Israeli occupation, then kissed and personally raised the Egyptian flag over the "capital" of the Sinai Desert.

It was the first step under the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty that provides for eventual Israeli withdrawal from all of Sinai.

In Beirut, the PLO news agency Wafa said Israeli gunners and Lebanese Christian militiamen shelled the Palestinian-controlled southern port of Tyre and surrounding areas Saturday. Guerrilla sources said Palestinian and Lebanese leftist gunners in Sidon had earlier fired on Israeli gunboats that approached the Lebanese coast overnight. There were no reports of casualties.

The Palestinian Liberation Organization and hard-line Arab states condemned the Egyptian-Israeli talks on self-rule for Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza strip which opened Friday in the Israeli town of Beersheba.

A smiling Sadat, resplendent in the white uniform of supreme navy commander, flew into El Arish in a U.S.-made C130 military transport exactly 24 hours after Israeli troops pulled out of the dusty, Mediterranean township.

The Egyptian leader described the return of the town as a "triumph of love over hatred." He will be joined here for talks Sunday by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. Vance flew into Cairo during the day from Tel Aviv.

Sadat removed his shoes and cap and was joined by senior officials in a thanksgiving prayer moments after he arrived, kneeling twice on an old red carpet spread over the sand near the airport runway.

Nearby, Patriarch Shenudah III of Egypt's Coptic Orthodox Church and four church dignitaries prayed separately, touching the ground at the end with the tips of their fingers.

As Sadat prepared to leave the airport by helicopter to place a wreath on a monument to Egyptian war dead, some 200 soldiers and airport workers pushed forward, waving and chanting, "We give our souls and blood for you, Sadat."

Security was strict throughout El Arish. Several thousand central security men, the elite of the Egyptian police force, were trucked from Cairo for guard duty here.

In addition to its 35,000 Egyptian inhabitants, El Arish has a Palestinian community of about 5,000.

Editor Watches Death Drama

By PHIL MARTY
Cherokee Daily Times

I'd never seen anyone die. But Friday at 3:04 p.m., I watched as 271 people I never knew suffered a fiery death.

It was a story that all reporters seek, but no reporter really wants to write.

Through the television-like window of an Ozark Air Lines plane, I watched as American Airlines Flight 191, nonstop to Los Angeles, turned on its side and dropped to earth, bursting into a ball of orange flame and billowing black smoke.

As our plane rolled down the runway, my seatmate idly pointed out the big silver DC-10 taking off at a right angle to our left. I watched with only casual interest as the sleek jetliner lifted off, its nose jutting upward and tail dropping back in the familiar stance of departure.

But then, as the plane was just feet from the ground, something rolled over the top of the left wing. As the large metal piece hit the ground and burst into flames, I knew the left engine had fallen off.

It seemed like minutes that the jetliner hung there, clawing for altitude as smoke poured from the left wing. But it really was no more than 10 or 15 seconds.

The plane couldn't have been any higher than 500 feet, holding steady, when it rolled to its left. From its almost graceful plunge, the jetliner smashed into the ground on its left wing, creating a giant ball of fire.

Then the inevitable black cloud of smoke rolled skyward. I looked at my watch. It was 3:04 p.m.

Inside our plane, the sound of the explosion couldn't be heard. There was only the excited babble of our passengers and the blank stares of our flight attendants.

I didn't need a newspaper or television to tell me the fate of those aboard the American Airlines flight. Deep inside, I knew they were all dead.

Injuries In Clash

By KURT FRANCK

DECATUR, Ala. (UPI) — At least five people were injured, including one by gunfire, Saturday when police broke up a confrontation between about 100 black demonstrators and a group of about 80 Ku Klux Klansmen.

Authorities said shots were fired when Decatur police and Morgan County sheriff's deputies attempted to restrain the Klansmen, many of whom were robed and armed with clubs.

A spokesman at Decatur General Hospital said three blacks and two whites were admitted for treatment.

A car driven by the wife of Dr. Joseph Lowery, national president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was fired on at least twice, witnesses said. One of the bullets shattered a window, but Mrs. Lowery was not injured.

The blacks were marching from a predominantly black section of this north Alabama city to the Morgan County Courthouse to commemorate the arrest a year ago of Tommy Lee Hines, a retarded black man sentenced to 30 years in prison for the rape of a white woman.

Hines, 27, who still faces charges of rape and robbery involving two other white women, is being held in a state prison near Montgomery.

Ford Reveals U S Has Neutron Bomb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Gerald Ford says the United States already has a primitive model of the controversial neutron bomb deployed in Europe.

"We do have a neutron bomb in Europe, the only thing is that it is dirtier" than the new high radiation weapon President Carter put on ice last year, Ford said in an interview with United Press International.

"If there was an attack in Europe, the president has a neutron weapon he could use. The one he turned down had less fallout and more focus on the enemy."

That being the case, Ford said, he "absolutely" would have ordered the neutron bomb into production rather than deferring that decision, pending consultation with NATO allies and the Soviets, as Carter did.

Case Could Erode Nuclear Economics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of a Senate subcommittee that oversees the nuclear industry said Saturday the $10.5 million verdict against KerrMcGee Nuclear Corp. in the Karen Silkwood contamination case could "further erode the economics of nuclear power."

"The jury decision ... reflects a growing public determination that the nuclear industry should be held more accountable for unsafe operations and serious accidents," said Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., chairman of the Senate Environment Subcommittee on Nuclear Regulation.

Ralph Nader said the verdict should encourage more lawsuits by persons exposed to nuclear radiation in either the workplace or the community.

Bomb In Spain Kills Ten

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — A powerful bomb ripped through a cafe frequented by right-wing extremists Saturday night, killing 10 persons and wounding 4 others in the second day of a wave of political violence in Spain, authorities said.

The death brought the toll of political killings in Spain to 19 in two days and 72 so far this year.

At least 10 persons died in the explosion in the California 47 Cafe and about 40 wre injured, many of them seriously, the civil government of Madrid said.

Carter Sends Javits To Sudan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter decided Saturday to send a ranking Republican senator to the Sudan to show his support for one of the few Arab nations who support the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

began the identification process Saturday afternoon but no bodies were immediately identified. The strongest clues came from the airline's passenger manifest.

Scores of investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration, the National Transportation Safety Board, the FBI and various state and local agencies gathered on the crash site Saturday and set out to reconstruct the accident.

"It's like fitting the pieces of a puzzle back together," said FAA Administrator Langhorne Bond.

Investigators said for the most part, the pieces were little more than charred trash.

An hour after the disaster Friday, an American Airlines mechanic in grimy blue coveralls walked out of the hangar that is now a temporary morgue. His eyes were blank and he appeared numb with shock, He shook his head sadly.

"We work on these cans day and night trying to keep things like this from happening. And they still do.

"Why?" he asked.

The FAA in Washington said a DC-10 taking off from New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport lost a wing engine in a similar incident in 1975 but returned to the airport for a safe landing. That incident was blamed on sea birds being sucked into the engine. DC-10 engines have been "beefed up" since the incident, an FAA spokesman said.

The worst single-plane disaster in aviation history involved a Turkish Airlines DC-10 that crashed near Paris on March 3, 1976, killing 346 persons. It was blamed on a faulty cargo hold hatch.

The worst aviation disaster of all time was the collision of two Boeing 747s on the runway at Santa Cruz de Tenerife, Canary Islands, Spain, which killed 582 people aboard the Pan Am and KLM planes. Sixty-two people aboard the Pam Am jet survived.

The tragedy was only the second major crash of a wide-bodied jetliner on American soil since the plane went into service nearly a decade ago.

The first was Dec. 29, 1972, when an Eastern Airlines Lockheed L1011 Tristar crashed on approach to Miami International Airport, killing 100. About the same number survived.

O'Hare Airport ranks as the world's busiest airport, though traffic in recent weeks has been substantially below normal due to the machinist strike against United Airlines, which is headquartered at Chicago. The last major commercial air crash at O'Hare occurred in December, 1972.

The firemen arrived on the scene to fight what looked like a minor fire in a clothng store and had just stepped back into the street when the wall of the building came flying out.

"They had been on the scene probably 15 or 20 minutes," said Barrett. "They had two buildings full of smoke and fire was coming out the back of one of them. They were just setting up and making preparations to fight the fire. They had put ladders on the building and were laying their hose lines, and four men had went in and found nothing in it but smoke and a lot of heat."

"They came back, were regrouping and making plans to go back when it blew," he said.

Twenty-five persons were treated and released Friday night at Cleveland County Memorial Hospital. City fireman Scott Patterson, 26, and Donna Walker, believed to be a bystander, were reported in satisfactory condition. Volunteer fireman Bradley Butler, 17, was in good condition at Charlotte Memorial Hospital with a skull fracture.

Five businesses — half a block of stores — were destroyed by the explosion and fires that followed, and Barrett estimated the damage at about $2.5 million

Needs Brought To The Fore

City, Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce and county officials appeared at the N. C. Department of Transportation highway improvement hearing in Morehead City last week to present Greenville and Pitt County needs.

Mayor Pro-tem Charles Vincent cited need for a western bypass to tie in with the planned U.S. 264 east-west corridor which will end at the Stantonsburg Road near Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Vincent also pointed to the need for 14th Street improvements, and upgrading of Evans Street, Arlington Boulevard and Dickinson Avenue.

The mayor pro-tem suggested that railroad overpasses were needed in certain areas of the city

County officials also called for construction of the western bypass and the dual laning of U.S. 13 to Bethel.

East Carolina University representatives asked that planning proceed on a pedestrian overpass between campuses on E. Tenth Street.

These highway needs are essential for Pitt County to handle the growth and development we all see ahead.

The western bypass will be needed quite soon, and the various thoroughfares listed in Greenville badly need improvement. We have long been convinced of the need for the pedestrian overpass on Tenth Street.

We hope the Department of Transportation will take these needs into consideration and move the projects along as rapidly as possible.

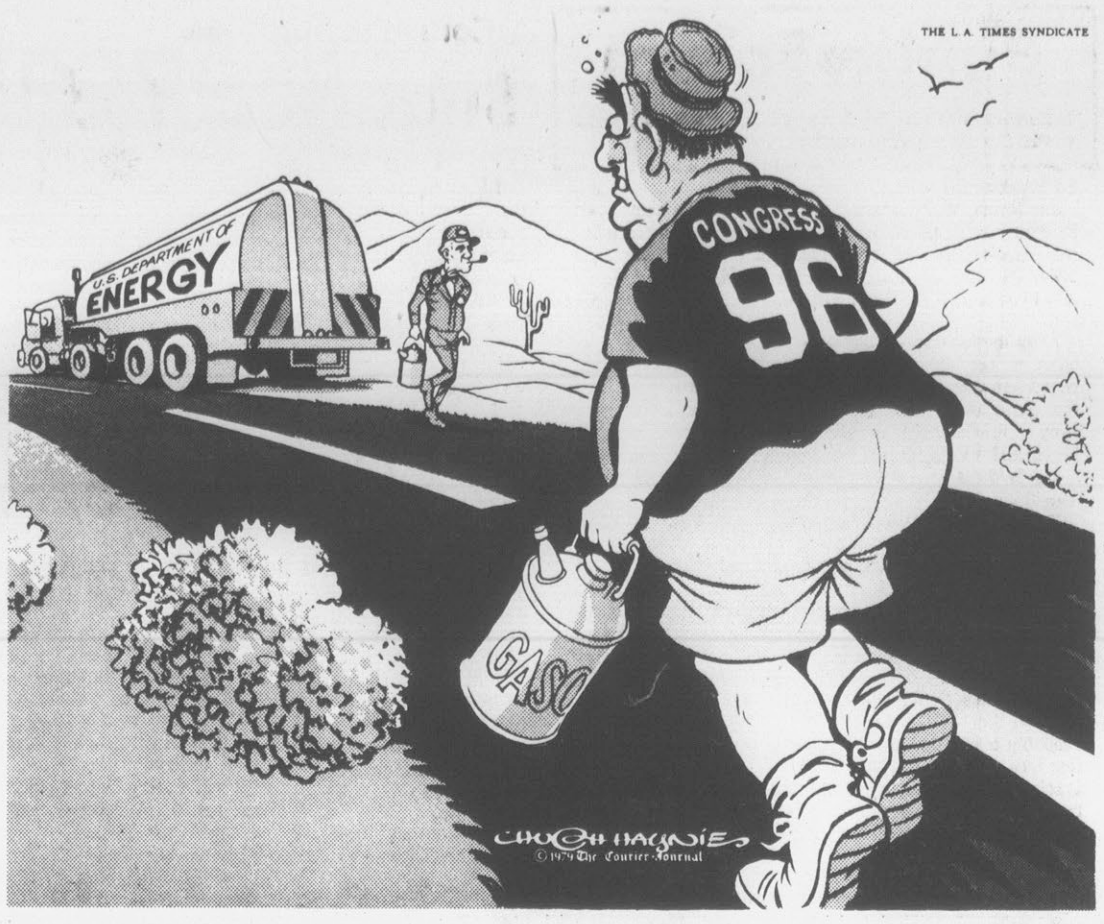

Distinctly Political And Democratic

The Pierce Fellowship Club is a phenomenon.

It meets once a year on the banks of Contentnea Creek. Some say it is not political but it draws large numbers of public officials — most of them Democrats.

The group met for barbecue and fellowship last week and it was mostly just that — this being an off-year politically.

Next year the group will swell, and it will include a large number of candidates for political office. The Pierce Fellowship Club has few rules, but its interests are distinctly political and Democratic.

Students Using Up Gas?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A pair of Republican legislators think high school students burn entirely too much gas driving their cars to school in North Carolina.

The state provides transportation, and the energy situation demands reducing nonessential use of gasoline, State Representatives Howard Coble and Margaret P. Keesee, both of Greensboro, believe.

The proposed solution: ban student parking anywhere on the school grounds except for the handicapped, those who have medical appointments, and those enrolled in vocational educational programs which mean an after-school job.

Obviously, banning parking on the school grounds would result in a major traffic problem on neighborhood streets.

So, the proposal would allow local governments to restrict curbside parking within 1,000 feet of a high school to residents and their guests. Stickers could be issued for that purpose.

Paid For

A gleaming new building is nearing completion near the State Legislative Building in downtown Raleigh which few Tar Heel taxpayers will recognize as being one built at public expense.

The headquarters of the North Carolina League Of Municipalities and the Association of County Commissioners will open this summer.

It will be fully paid for upon completion. The structure cost $1.5 million, with some furnishings and decoration on top of that.

How did the money to pay for this project come about?

Local governments — both municipal and county — agreed to double their membership dues for two years.

Where do local governments get the money for their membership dues?

From local tax funds.

Gas Supply

Waiting in reserve across North Carolina are service station flags: green for Yes,

BILL NOBLITT

we got gas; red for No we don't; and yellow for limited sales.

It is all part of an emergency plan set to go into operation with only a couple of days' notice should the gasoline shortage produce long lines at filling stations.

State officials say things will be all right so long as people don't panic and start filling up their tanks. Panic buying in California is blamed for siphoning off the reserves and putting them instead into vehicles which weren't really needed for essential transportation.

Politics

With so many items on the agenda for this session of the General Assembly, why is so much time, energy and attention given to pay raises for state employees and teachers?

Getting a straight answer to that question is easy privately; all but impossible in public.

The combined political influence of those on the government payroll keeps the politicians hopping while the taxpayer must wonder what is happening.

Sunday Morning Notes

Mayor Percy Cox and your columnist were among those who had breakfast at the Public Works garages in honor of Public Works Week last Wednesday.

The mayor told of being approached by a lady with fire in her eyes while he was shopping in a store recently.

"Are you Mr. Cox?" the lady asked.

"Yes ma'm," Mayor Cox answered.

"Well," she said. "I want to tell you a few things about your school system."

Mayor Cox stopped her right there to explain that she had the wrong public official. She wanted Glenn Cox, superintendent of city schools, the mayor told her.

And Frank Fuller was also in attendance.

He told of a call from a lady who went through a long explanation of her problem with the city.

"Why are you calling me?" Dr. Fuller asked.

"Aren't you on the City Council?" the caller inquired.

"Not since the last election," Dr. Fuller answered.

"Well,' the caller said with a note of exasperation, "Why am I wasting my time talking to you?"

"I was wondering the same thing," Dr. Fuller said he replied.

Greenville Utilities moved from its old operations center at the main plant off W. Third Street to the new facilities on Mumford Road about a week back.

Some of the employees felt that the old plant should not be left without something appropriate.

So on moving day they ordered a flower spray and placed it on the door of the old office indicating that the facilities had been buried," after "dying on May 18."

That was appropriate. The old facilities had been in use for some 75 years.

Someone commented to Mayo Allen, director of Public Works, that he had lost his neighbor now that Greenville Utilities operations center had moved. The old center was just across the Seaboard Railroad tracks from the Public Works garages.

Public Works won't be lonely for too long. Plans are being developed for construction of new Public Works facilities in another location.

A Job Title Book

NEW YORK (AP) — It's spring again, and a new wave of graduates, having earned their freedom from the academic grind, are scrambling for slots in the 9 to 5 grind.

The last of the postwar baby boom bunch should be clear of high school this year, but the classes ahead of them pretty much made "Help Wanted" an historical curiosity. For sure, such traditional roles as teaching, doctoring, lawyering and Indian chiefing have been spoken for.

What the newcomer needs, then, is a list of not so obvious jobs. Like the one put out by the U.S. Labor Department. Its "Dictionary of Occupational Titles" is an amazing document,

THE GALLUP POLL

Heavily Favor Controls

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — As concern over inflation continues to grow, support for wage-price controls has reached the highest point recorded in the five years since President Richard Nixon removed all controls April 30, 1974.

A majority in the latest survey, 57 percent, says they would favor having the government bring back wage-price controls, while 31 percent say they would oppose such a move.

The current percentage favoring controls represents one of the highest recorded over a period of four decades during which time more than 40 national surveys on the subject have been conducted. Support has been on a general upswing since February of last year, when 44 percent voiced support for controls.

Here is the question asked to determine current attitudes toward returning to wage and price controls:

"Would you favor or oppose having the government bring back wage and price controls?"

And here is the trend since February 1978:

FAVOR OR OPPOSE RETURN TO CONTROLS

	Favor	Oppose	No opinion
LATEST	57%	31%	12%
July 7-10, 1978	53	34	13
May 19-22, 1978	52	36	12
April 14-17, 1978	52	37	11
Feb. 10-13, 1978	44	40	16

A return to controls has support from a broad spectrum of the American public including members of labor union families and residents of every geographic region.

Sharp differences do appear, however, by political affiliation, educational attainment and family income. As one might expect, Republicans are less apt to favor controls than are Democrats or independents.

As has been the case in previous surveys, college-educated Americans are less likely to vote for returning to controls than are those whose formal education ended at the high school or grade school level.

Similarly, those in the highest income bracket are less likely to favor controls than are people in the middle and lower income groups.

President Carter continues to assert that he will not impose controls, despite mounting pressure from various quarters to do so. Business and labor leaders also continue to oppose controls. Labor leaders believe wage controls unfairly penalize union workers; business people fear that controls will cause shortages in some commodities.

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 1,490 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period May 4-7.

Figure-Juggling

(Kannapolis Daily Independent)

The package has been reduced. It started out at $91 million over the next two years. Now the talk is of an $85 million tax cut, with most of it coming in the second year of the biennium. (Could that be timed to help the legislators in their bid for re-election?

Under a plan approved by a General Assembly tax panel, the $600 dependent exemption would rise to $700 next year and $800 the following year. The standard deduction and all other personal exemptions would be increased 10 percent, effective next Jan. 1.

A Kannapolis certified public accountaint was asked to crank up his calculator and determine what that would mean in income tax savings for a family of four with an income of $15,000.

He came up with a savings of $42 in the coming year, or about 81 cents a week. The family would still pay $501 state income tax, or $9.64 a week.

But, if the breadwinners in that family receive pay increases, the tax bite would increase proportionately and the savings would be reduced, actually. That's how inflation works.

And, if the General Assembly happened to hike the gasoline tax a couple pennies, or make the tax fluctuate with the price of gasoline, this increase alone would dwarf the income tax savings.

The only way for a tax slash to be meaningful is for a person to pay less in taxes. Just shifting taxes around doesn't help much.

40 Years Ago Today

May 27, 1939

J.H. Rose, who is completing 20 years of service as head of Greenville City Schools, was elected Thursday by the Board of Trustees for another two-year term.

Since he has been here, the schools have grown by leaps and bounds until today the Greenville system is regarded as among the best in the state and the entire South.

Asked what, in his opinion, was responsible for the rapid growth and success of the schools, Rose replied,

"There are two things which have contributed to the success of the Greenville schools: 1) The fact that we have good teachers in all classrooms, and 2) the cooperative spirit of the parents and their belief in good schools and a school board which always has the interest of the children uppermost in its mind."

CHRISTIAN LIBERTY

Christian liberty is one of the most important doctrines of the Christian religion, but probably many Christians do not know exactly what it is.

It is much more than the liberty of worship as one wishes — a liberty which of course has been denied during long periods in the past. Christian liberty is that inner renovation of the spirit whereby we are freed from ourselves, from our sins, and made to walk through life with a new gladness.

The Bible describes this freedom by saying that where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. Where the power of God and Christ and the Holy Spirit are brought to bear upon a man's life, he experiences a great release from himself and from the burdens of life.

This is Christian liberty. It is an inner matter rather than an external matter. There is no spiritual privilege greater than this.

Home Mortgage Rates Soaring

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — One year ago mortgage rates for new single-family homes reached 9.3 percent. One month ago the rate had soared to 10.3 percent. By fall, some forecasts say, the figure could be close to 11 percent.

These are national averages. But already some California lenders are charging 11.5 percent. And the U.S. League of Savings Associations says similar rates might occur elsewhere by early fall.

Where will it end? When will buyers stop chasing prices and interest rates?

Pointing to a 2.1 percent decline in housing starts from March to April, some analysts claim the end is already in sight, but other statistics also suggest the turn might still be far off.

For example, regulations designed at least in part to restrain increases are falling in the path of the advance.

Less than a month ago the Department of Housing and Urban Development raised to 10 percent from 9.5 percent the maximum permissable rate on government-backed home loans.

And in Texas, the legislature passed a bill that would allow rates to rise to 12 percent from the current constitutional level of 10, because at less than 10 percent loans weren't being made.

Meanwhile, there has been little letup in price advances. If the rise in mortgage rates is large, then price increases are enormous.

Based on Federal Home Loan Bank Board estimates, the average price of a new single-family home in April was $71,700, up $10,100 in just one year, and $3,000 in just one month.

The board estimates the average price of used homes has soared to $67,000 from $52,100 in only one year's time, although that figure could be misleadingly high, since averages are subject to distortion.

Still, a median sales price basedon actual sales as reported by the National Association of Realtors, comes in at close to $54,000, a rise of $7,500 in one year.

While nobody can be certain when the increases will end, there is plenty of evidence to explain how the inflated market happened. Among a dozen explanations, these stand out:

—Individuals see homes as an investment as well as shelter. With dollar purchasing power falling by 9 percent or so a year, real estate provides financial protection.

—For some families, homes are the easiest of big ticket items to buy. Down payments in some instances are only 10 percent, and mortgage maturities have been stretched on average to nearly 29 years.

—Buyers are aware of tax advantages. They know that, in effect, Uncle Sam subsidizes housing for everyone, not just the poor. Real estate taxes and interest payments are deductible.

—Demographics and social change play roles. There is a bulge in the age group 25 to 34 years. In addition, singles are now more inclined to buy. The U.S. League says they make up 17 percent of buyers.

To the editor:

Jim Black, county school board member told parents at G. R. Whitfield School, "I don't care how you vote on liquor-by-the drink, but vote for kids on this bond issue." I was a kid under the influence of an adult under the influence of liquor, and I can assure you that a vote for liquor is a vote against kids!

As for the bond issue— why waste more money when the problem is not money? More money won't buy guidance counselors who can guide in moral behavior. Will it buy love that dares to call a thief, a thief, to punish him, to save him from a life of crime? Will mere money stop kids from shooting heroin and smoking grass? Will money make adults care when a kid is threatened with a knife and brave enough to do something about it?

Yes, it happens, parents, and you know it. Wake up! When we all yell, something will be done to stop these crimes against kids. When only a few yell, we're called "nit pickers," aren't we, teachers?

Perhaps more money would pay for more deputies to teach crime prevention, as we have only one now, who is paid for by Big Brother. I called Audrey Harbaugh and asked how parents could stop schools from contributing to the delinquency of minors. I have a letter from her but no answer to the question. I believe there is a solution to every problem, but Mr. Alford probably told her I am a troublemaker, because I expect teachers to maintain discipline and teach morals and basics. Is this asking too much? If so, then why have schools? Could it be to accomplish social changes? If so, then I for one don't like the changes. It's too much like George Orwell's "1984."

To the editor:

Why kid ourselves? Liquor-by-the-drink is what actually causes alcoholism. A person should not risk the first drink. It could be the begining of a terrible life, for himself, and the people around him.

It is a proven economic fact — the more outlets we have the greater the consumption. The greater consumption leads to an increasing rate of alcoholism; to a greater rate of crime; to more broken homes; neglected children, and economic loss.

We should not have liquor-by-the-drink, because it could cause more wrecks, and deaths on our highways. It would cause higher taxes for additional enforcement officers.

It is estimated by The Business Council of America, for every dollar taken in alcohol revenue it costs the general public $4.41. With the 10 ABC Stores in Pitt County, we do not need, or want any more outlets.

Sugar-Coated Bitter Pill From Sen. Kennedy

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

If Senator Edward M. Kennedy ever abandons his career in politics, he might wish to spend his golden years running a pharmaceutical factory. When it comes to sugar-coating bitter pills, the gentleman is unmatched in the world.

Alas, the senator shows no sign of abandoning politics, and the pharmaceutical industry would have corporate convulsions before it welcomed Mr. Kennedy to its membership rolls, but the senator's newly revised plan of National Health Insurance will create political and industrial spasms anyhow. Pick your metaphor for deception: This plan is candy-covered ipecac, a wolf in sheep's clothing, or the serpent beneath the innocent flower. If camouflage may be reagrded as an art form. Mr. Kennedy is the Rembrandt of his age.

Let me be fair. The plan unveiled on May 14 is better than some of the plans the senator has put forward in the past. In other years, Mr. Kennedy has proposed virtually to destroy the private health insurance industry and to create a monstrous bureaucracy in its place. Now he would preserve the industry, but in a captive status, and he promises a minimal expansion of federal agencies. When this has been said, the best has been said.

The senator is as filled with euphemisms as a jelly-stuffed doughnut. Consider his plan, if you will, in terms of what he tells us about cost, controls, and choice.

Health-care costs in fiscal 1980 are estimated at $171.4 billion. Of this sum, the taxpayers are compelled to pay $51 billion in federal taxes; they pay the other $120.4 billion under voluntary programs of health insurance or personal payment. Under the Kennedy plan, total costs would rise to $211.4 billion in the first year of full operation. The senator would impose $28.6 billion in additional federal taxes. Employers and workers would make "contributions" of an additional $11.4 billion.

But these "contributions" in the form of "premiums" would not be voluntary in any sense. They would be compulsory. Every employer in the country would be compelled to pay a certain percentage of his total payroll into the National Health Insurance Fund. The senator has not figured out what this percentage might be— 7 or 8 percent, maybe, "depending upon the success of cost containment programs." Workers might be required to pay up to 35 percent of this cost, in addition to their higher taxes.

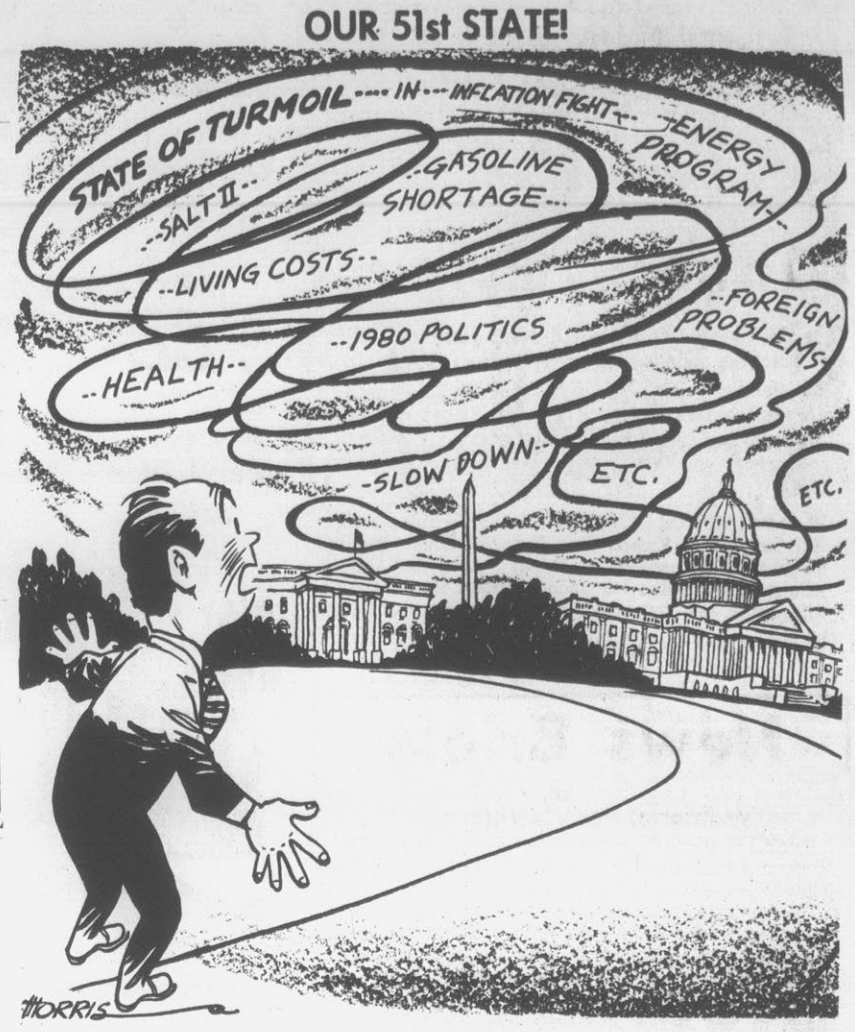

The senator insists that within four years after his plan would become operative, total costs actually would go down. This is fantasy in its purest form. It is inconceivable that the senator could provide "unlimited" high-quality health and hospital care to every human being, with no cost-sharing deductions, at less than current expenditures.

How would he perform his remarkable trick? The senator's answer is "controls." Through the federal bureaucracy, he would impose "the strongest possible cost controls" and also "quality controls." This means, ultimately, that every significant decision having to do with hospital costs and physicians' fees would have to be made at the federal level. The same wonderful folks who have given us Amtrak, the Postal Service and the rampant frauds of Medicaid would have their gummy hands on virtually the whole of American medical practice.

"The plan," says the senator, "assures freedom of choice." Baloney! There would be one uniform, comprehensive, mandatory federal policy of health insurance. To be sure, the individual citizen could buy insurance to cover something more — a single hospital room as opposed to a double room, additional psychiatric coverage, non-prescription drugs — but the individual citizen could not buy anything less. No longer could a middle-aged couple obtain health insurance tailored to their own needs and budget. Under the Kennedy plan, one policy fits all. There would be no effective choice whatever.

Sugar-coat it as he may, the senator is advancing a plan of ultimately socialized medicine under the guise of private enterprise. Maybe this is what the people want, but they ought not to be deceived. When the senator speaks of controls, and limits, and negotiated fees — when he speaks of contributions, and premiums, and regulations laid down by state and national boards — the senator is speaking of total governmental authority. Health care in America may suffer some ills, but the senator's cure, I submit, is much worse than the nation's disease.

Better Off Dead Than Long Prison Sentences

RALEIGH, N.C. — Society would be better off to kill every one of us than do what they are doing now; keeping men and women in these hellholes for unrealistic periods of time.

I'm not advocating this, because life is precious; but keeping people for years and years in this abnormal, loveless environment and then expecting them to cope with living in society is ridiculous. The majority of prisoners are set free some day. A man will control his rage in here because he has got a .30-.30 cocked at his head, but when you release him into society you're releasing a human explosive.

A British study has indicated that nine years is the maximum time a person can spend in prison without it causing permanent physical or psychological harm, and I would agree with that. In the old days, all the prison system wanted out of you was to make you work till you dropped. The human body can take that, but now they have brought in psycholgoists and psychiatrists who do nothing but keep you locked up all the time, and keep you knocked out with drugs. I personally have never had prison psychologists prescribe me tranquilizers; in fact, I have filed numerous civil rights complaints seeking a ban on the use of such drugs except for mentally ill persons. But here there is nothing to keep a man's mind occupied, and the monotony makes you worse when you leave than you were when you entered.

It would be better to do away with prisons altogether than to operate them this way. They are nothing but colleges for crime, violence and homosexuality. Every man in here believes he has been treated unfairly by the courts, so how can society expect him to respect the law when he gets out?

One solution would be mandatory sentencing: make the punishment fit the crime and not the individual. If the ruling class wants to make a certain act a crime, then everyone convicted of it should receive the same punishment. All discretion should be taken away from the courts, the corrections people and the parole boards, because so long as they have discretionary power the influential and the affluent will escape equal punishment.

The poorer and darker the offender is, the harsher his or her punishment will be. Imagine a prison system inhabited by people convicted of crimes peculiar to the affluent, such as price-fixing, buying political influence, violating minimum wage laws and safety standards, and you will see how distant this fantasy is from the prisons we have today.

The key to keeping people from committing crimes is correcting the economic system that leaves unfulfilled the real and psychological needs of the poor class and causes the people to commit violent and sexual crimes. The next best deterrent is swift and sure justice, not the threat of unimaginable prison terms or the death penalty. I also believe that property crimes should be handled in civil courts and the offender required to make resitution, i.e., pay in money for the damage he has done.

Each judicial district should have a restitution center. Anyone who commits a crime where there is a property loss should fully compensate the victim, and possibly make double compensation. If this offender has a family and a job in the community, I think it would do more harm than good to take him away from his wife and family and put him in the restitution center, but he should be required to make restitution and come to the center for counseling. People without community roots should be housed in the center and be helped to locate a suitable job, pay back their victims and pay room and board. This type of program

Pre-Schoolers Become 'Sticky Stuff' Addicts

The one thing all preschoolers have in common is an affection for sticky stuff. Paste, glue, gum, jelly, pine resin — you name it, and any preschooler who's ever had access to it has had it in his hair, on his fingers, on his clothes, and in his ears. But of all sticky things on this earth, the universal favorites are tape and Band-Aids.

Now, I, too, have an affection for Band-Aids. They have the same excellent qualities as a muzzle. I use them for cold sores, splinters, scrapes, bee stings, and stone bruises. Meg stops crying the minute she sees the Band-Aid box. I don't know about their medicinal properties, but I do know that they represent the most important psychological advance of the century. They're absolutely indispensible in the struggle against maternal insanity.

But tape is a different matter altogether. If Band-Aids are the salvation of mothers, tape is their curse. Ever since Meg got three rolls of tape in her Christmas stocking, I've been slowly falling apart.

It didn't bother me so much when she taped all the Christmas cards to the handles on the refrigerator door, or when she taped her baby pictures to the mahogany dropleaf table. But it did upset me a little when she beheaded my philodendron and taped its leaves to the TV.

It got to the point that we couldn't sit down on a chair or lean up against a wall without coming in contact with two or three pieces of tape. It was like living with an enormous, indefatigable spider. She spun her webs in the hallway, across doorways, and between bedposts.

I thought that at the end of the week when her three rolls were used up, life would return to normal. But I was wrong. Taping is an addiction at least as strong as alcoholism. I couldn't hide a roll of tape where it was safe. I did hide one roll successfully, but when I took it out in order to wrap a birthday present, it disappeared off the counter before I could get the wrapping paper out.

The thief made no effort to conceal her identity. She taped her dresser drawers shut. She taped her sheets together. She wrapped up 20 wooden blocks, one by one, in paper napkins. She taped the pages of the phone book together. She taped the bathroom door shut. She even bound together the handles of my kitchen cabinets with mummy knots.

It was no secret that I was becoming unglued. But I didn't reach my breaking point until one night at supper. I tried to sit down and found that she had taped the tablecloth to my chair. "I can't stand it any more," I screamed. "My head feels like it's going to split wide open."

Meg smiled eagerly. "Do you want me to tape it up for you?"

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, May 27, the 147th day of 1979. There are 218 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1941, the British Navy sank the German battleship Bismarck off France, with a loss of 2,000 lives. The Bismarck had been pursued more than 1,700 miles after sinking the British warship HMS Hood three days earlier.

On this date:

In 1905, a Japanese naval force wiped out a Russian fleet of 32 ships.

In 1933, the Century of Progress Exposition opened in Chicago.

In 1937, the Golden Gate Bridge across San Francisco Bay was opened.

In 1954, more than 100 crewmen were killed in an explosion aboard the aircraft carrier "Bennington" off Rhode Island.

In 1964, Indian Prime Minister Nehru died in New Delhi.

In 1968, a search was begun for the U-S Navy submarine "Scorpion" and its 99-man crew, which was overdue at Norfolk, Virginia after a threemonth training mission.

Ten years ago: President Richard Nixon asked Congress for legislation to covert the U.S. Post Office Department into a government-owned, selfsustaining postal service.

Five years ago: President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France was inaugurated.

One year ago: China said ships would be sent to Vietnam to evacuate Chinese who were being persecuted, indicating that relations between the two Communist countries were worsening.

Today's birthdays: Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is 56 years old. Golfer Sammy Snead is 67. British actor Christopher Lee is 57.

a catalog of almost everything men and women do for a buck, replete with descriptions of each task, but it is more: An inside peek at the intricacies of industrial society, a delineation in this automated age of where the machine ends and people are still needed.

And for the work-bound driver snarled in the morning rush, it may answer the question. "Where are all these people going?"

The person in the next car at the light, for instance, may bear the title of ripper or snipper or chipper or dipper or sticker, stacker, spudder, swedger, stiffener, stabber, crabber, bagger, bucker, gasser, napper, lurer, looper, truer, plugger, groover, necker, flesher, whizzer, jigger, domer, drummer, dulser or debubbleizer.

As is apparent, the dictionary, now in its fourth edition, is needed to explain not only what and where, but how and how come.

And some titles aren't what they suggest. A mother tester, for instance, inspects a metal thingamajig used to make phonograph records, and a maturity checker tends a machine that mashes peas and ascertains their hardness (maturity).

And sulky driver, aging room operator, fat pressroom worker, former helper, abrasive sawyer and crook operator don't mean quite what they imply, either. But other ambiguous titles do suggest socially worthwhile possibilities: advice clerk, clarifier operator, solutions operator, definer, lingo cleaner.

Even without descriptions, some jobs seem somewhat unpleasant. If you think you have it rough, consider the poultry debeaker, the worm picker, and the leacher.

Some things we just take for granted. How, for instance, could we do without the coat hanger shaper machine operator, the bobbin loose end finder and the shoelace tipping machine operator.

And you might even find your life's work in these pages.

Most Southeastern States Show A Surplus

By BILL RAWLINS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Congress, struggling to reduce deficit spending, should be so lucky as most Southeastern state legislatures.

Most of them have healthy surpluses to spend. In Florida, a two-year surplus of up to $1 billion is predicted by the end of 1981. Louisiana anticipates $600 million at the end of this fiscal year.

And some of the major battles of current legislative sessions have been how to spend the money. In many cases, the battles have boiled down to a struggle between the taxpayer — who contributed to the surplus in the first place — and the state employee who spends it.

In Florida, with legislators working on a two-year budget for the first time in 10 years, the surplus will come from burgeoning collections of the state's 4 percent sales tax. There, the struggle is a struggle between the House, which wants to spend most of the $1 billion on schools from kindergarten to universities, and the Senate and governor, who want to give most of it back in the form of tax relief.

Louisiana's surplus is about $600 million, chargeable in large measure to its severance tax on oil and gas production. The Senate proposing $50 in state income tax credits for each public and private school child, with probable 10 percent pay raises for teachers and state employees — costing about $155 million. One bill even proposes a tax credit for blood money — $25 for each pint donated.

Several states are girding for possible shortfalls in gasoline tax revenue, as a result of the current fuel shortage, that could harm state highway construction.Taking various forms, efforts along this line have been taken in Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi. A proposal to key the gasoline tax to the rising price of gasoline failed in Tennessee.

An Associated Press survey shows that South Carolina and Alabama, among seven Southeastern states, have the only Legislatures without a healthy surplus.

The major legislative issue in South Carolina is a struggle over the Public Service Commission. In Alabama lawmakers, are wrestling with a new state constitution proposed by Gov. Fob James — and trying to live with voting to increase their own salaries without money in James' budget to give other state employees' raises.

South Carolina's seven-member commission, which oversees utility rates, now is named by the Legislature and after four weeks, the House approved legislation proposed by Gov. Dick Riley that splits the power equally between the governor and the lawmakers. The PSC has reduced rate requests by Duke Power Co., Southern Bell Telephone Co. and other utilities, but any increase at all has become a hot political potato.

Meanwhile, back to the budgets, here is what other states have done:

—Tennessee: A $75 million surplus, anticipated on June 30, was promptly appropriated for next year. Of the total, $10 million goes toward a state pavilion at Knoxville's proposed Expo '82, a world energy fair that has not created unanimous enthusiasm in the East Tennnessee city. City streets and county roads would get $22 million — and state employees would get $8 million in longevity pay bonuses. The total budget, Gov. Lamar Alexander's first, is $3.5 billion.

—Alabama: James proposes increasing the state's 7-cent per gallon gasoline tax by 4 cents to provide $100 million to build roads and bridges with $20 million to wipe out illiteracy as part of a $1.2 billion education budget. Teachers leaked the results of literacy tests that show average scores are at or near the national average and ask that the money go for teacher salary increases.

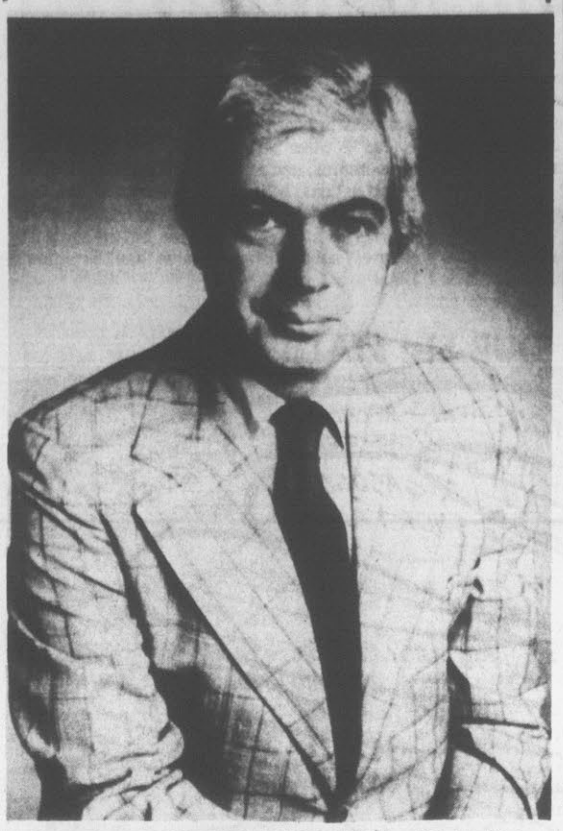

—Georgia: About $75 million in surplus was rebated to counties, after a dispute on how to spend it. The lawmakers finally agreed to let county school boards decide whether to use it to enhance local education, avoiding a tax increase, or rebate it to property taxpayers. And a dispute over teacher salaries caused a major stir as the lawmakers, in an unprecedented move, departed from budgets approved by Senate and House appropriations committees calling for 6.5 percent increases for teachers — and gave raises totaling 9.5 percent to both teachers and state employees.

—Mississippi: An $83 million tax cut over three years involved a $74 million decrease in state income taxes and $10 million through exempting prescription drugs from the sales tax. With one state senator convicted in federal court of defrauding the state in connection with a welfare contract and another resigning as an investigation into a similar contract was to begin, ethics legislation became a major push. A state ethics commission was enacted and the lawmakers strengthened the powers of the state auditor.

—North Carolina: Legislature is wrestling with a graduated income tax reduction by increasing deducations, as well as pay raises for teachers and state employees. Gov. Jim Hunt proposed 5 percent increases plus 2 percent in extra fringe benefits, but both House and Senate leaders are proposing a $200 cash bonus for each state worker. Federal wage and price officials contend the increase violates President Carter's 7 percent guidelines.

—South Carolina: Riley has proposed a $1.57 billion budget which, without anticipated revenue increases, would be $2 million in the red.

Memorial For VN Veterans

WASHINGTON (AP) — American soldiers who fought in Vietnam will be honored by a special memorial in Washington if three Vietnam veterans have their way.

The three said Friday they have formed an organization to collect money to build the memorial. They said no money has been raised yet but solicitations will be going out soon through several veterans groups. Their effort was praised by Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., who is trying to get Congress to make a chapel in New Mexico an official memorial to Vietnam veterans under the National Park Service.

Many Allegations Noted

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An Army officer who arrived in Charlotte to investigate charges of alleged recruiting malpractice found so many allegations that he asked for assistance, the Charlotte News said Friday.

The newspaper, which reported Thursday that the Army was looking into allegations of fraudulent enlistments by some local recruiters, quoted unidentified Army sources as saying top national recruiting officers have joined the investigation.

Bill Schult, a public affairs officer from the recruiting district in Charlotte, allegedly said two officers from the Army's recruiting command in Chicago were involved in the investigation. But Schult said on Friday that his statement was misinterpreted by newsmen, and that the two officers are from the Army's regional operation in Atlanta.

Claims Whites Benefitting

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal housing programs that provide low-cost housing are primarily benefitting whites in the South, a civil rights organization charged Friday.

The Southern Regional Council said a year-long study of federal Section 8 housing programs in Atlanta and Birmingham, Ala., showed blacks occupy only a small number of new apartments built under the programs.

At the same time, blacks occupy an increasing percentage of substandard housing in the South, the SRC report said.

According to the study, black families occupied eight of 722 housing units built in Atlanta last year. The report said that means blacks are being kept in older public housing while whites are moving into the newer and better housing.

Fuel For Food Haulers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department has announced emergency rules aimed at easing diesel fuel shortages for truckers hauling agricultural goods as well as surface mass transit systems and companies producing crude oil and natural gas.

David J. Bardin, administrator of the deaprtment's Economic Regulatory Administration, said the new regulations "are essential...to prevent a serious disruption in the food distribution system, to preserve the reliability of surface transportation services...and to continue domestic production of more oil and gas."

The rules, adopted Friday night, will remain in effect through July 31.

Brunswick Station Shut Down

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power and Light Co.'s Brunswick Nuclear Station has been shut down because of a structural problem, a CP&L spokesman says.

E.E. Utley, executive vice president of CP&L, said Friday that the utility will make modifications of some pipe supports. He said the supports hold water and steam lines in place.

The plant is expected to be closed down for 10 days.

Duke Marks 72nd Birthday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Wayne, the unconquerable hero of hundreds of Western movies, marks his 72nd birthday Saturday with his family near as he wages a battle against the one villain he has yet to beat — cancer.

A member of Wayne's staff at Batjack Productions said the actor's large family — seven children and 17 grandchildren — planned a quiet celebration with Wayne at UCLA Medical Center.

Wayne has been hospitalized since May 2 when he underwent his second cancer operation this year — this one revealing cancer in his intestine. In January, doctors removed his cancerous stomach.

will work and should be expanded rathern than build more costly prisons.

The way things are now, not only does the victim lose his property, but he also must pay for the offender's upkeep in prison, and this is big money now. The offender also becomes bitter, and gets an education in how to commit every crime in the book.

Lamenting A Death

EMOTIONAL RESPONSE — Anti-death penalty protesters outside Gov. Graham's office in Tallahassee, Florida, react emotionally to the news of John Spenkelink's execution Friday morning. (AP Laserphoto)

Snow Fell In Tennessee

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Snow fell Friday on Newfound Gap, one of the higher elevations in the Great Smokey Mountains National Park, park officials said.

Park dispatcher Jill Click said one inch was reported on the ground shortly before 5 p.m. EDT and snow was still falling. She said U.S. 441, which passes through the gap, was still open, but said, "We do advise caution."

Duke Power Steam Leak

SENECA, S.C. (AP) — A slight steam leak has forced Duke Power Co. to delay the startup of the second unit of its Oconee Nuclear Station, says the plant manager, Ed Smith.

Smith says an inspection of unit No. 2 on Thursday just before the plant was to be put on line turned up a steam leak caused by a faulty gasket on a valve.

"It's just a small whisp (of steam), but it will only get worse with time," says Smith, adding that it will be next week before the unit is started up.

May Never Go To Trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A defense lawyer in the court-martial of the skipper of the Cuyahoga says there's a fair chance a manslaughter charge will never go to trial because of a judge's order for an new investigation.

The judge, Cmdr. R.A. Appelbaum, Friday ordered further investigation into the two most serious of the three charges against CWO Donald K. Robinson — involuntary manslaughter and negligently damaging a vessel.

Appelbaum ruled that the investigating officer in the case, Capt. Edwin Daniels, had not followed procedures and that a new investigating officer should be appointed.

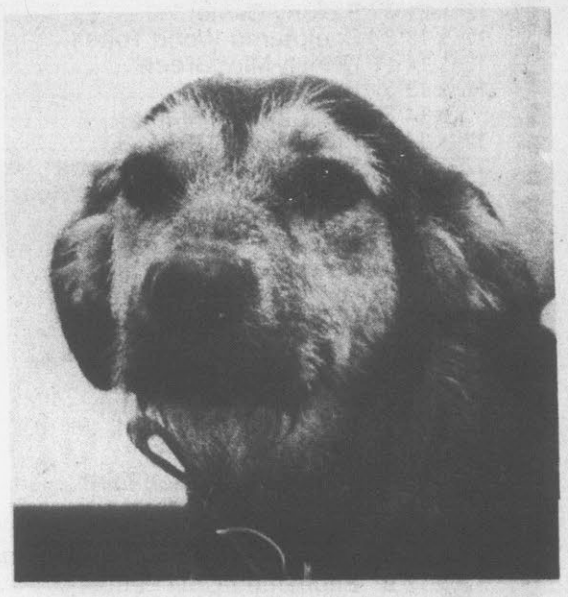

Radioactive Water Released

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Water containing a small amount of radioactivity was accidentally released from Duke Power Co.'s Ocnonee nuclear plant in South Carolina Thursday, the company said Friday.

The release of 2,335 gallons of water posed no hazard to station personnel or the public, Duke said. The incident occurred when an operator incorrectly released water from a tank connected to Oconee's laundry and shower drain system, Duke said.

The company said in a news release that the amount of radioactivity was not high enough to trigger an automatic shut-off device.

— A six month old medium sized dog, with white and brown markings. Call 758-1032 after 5 p.m.

— A cross Great Dane-German shepherd female. She's three years old and has been spayed. Call 746-4793 after 5 p.m.

New Jaycee, Jaycette Officers Installed

WARREN STROUD

MARGARET PETERS

New officers for both the Greenville Jaycees and Jaycettes took their oaths Saturday night at the annual installation banquet.

The banquet, held at the American Legion Building, saw Warren Stroud installed as the president of the Jaycees for 1979-80 and Margaret Peters installed as Jaycette president.

In addition to Stroud, Jaycee officers installed were: Ken Smith, internal vice president; Dick Briley, external vice president; Don Fleming, ways and means vice president; Neal Arrington, secretary; Bobby James, state director; Terry Whitford, treasurer; Glen Cutrell, assistant treasurer; Chet Emerson, chaplain; and Preston Sisk, parliamentarian.

Officers who will serve with Mrs. Peters are: Linda Gambill, external vice president; Susie Clark, ways and means vice president; Debbie Callow, secretary; Mary Jane Sisk, treasurer; Dorothy Smith, reporter; and Nan Garrett, parliamentarian.

Jaycette directors taking their oaths were Linda James, B. J. Cutrell, Linda Fleming, Eileen Foley, Donna Odom, and Ludie Smith.

Several awards were presented during the banquet, including: Jaycee of the Year to Doug Bonds; Spoke of the Year to Preston Sisk; and Spark Plug of the Year to Jerry Cox.

All project chairmen of the past year received certificates of appreciation and the officers and directors who served during the year received certificates of merit.

The special guest speaker for the banquet was Maurice Wilson, newly elected president of the North Carolina Jaycees. Wilson installed officers and directors of the local chapters.

Charlie Stovall from Elizabeth City, the regional director for the Coastal Region, was a guest of the Jaycees at the meeting.

Safety Awards To Be Given Tuesday

John Brooks, N.C. Commissioner of Labor, will be guest speaker at the Annual Safety Awards Banquet to be held here Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the American Legion Building.

Brooks will present safety awards to 50 businesses and industries located in the Greenville area.

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the Annual Safety Awards Banquet in cooperation with the Department of Labor.

Kenneth M. Buck, chairman of the Safety Awards Banquet Task Force, says the banquet is held each year to honor area businesses and industries for their safety efforts on the job.

Volunteer Greenville

Current needs for volunteers to serve in the Volunteer Greenville program have been announced. Among these are:

— Ten volunteers to help in various programs during the summer

— Volunteers to help with children's swim program during the summer.

— Volunteers to provide entertainment at nursing homes.

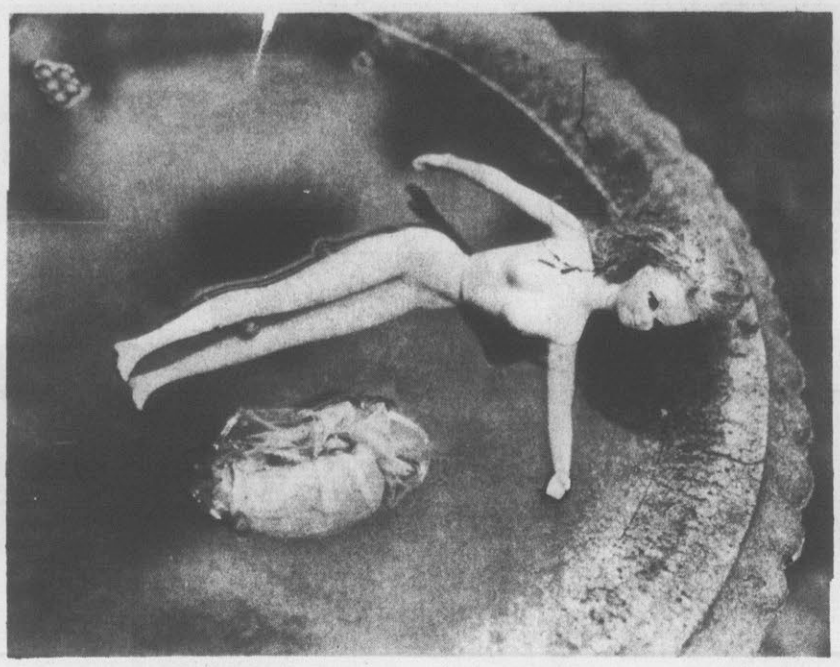

— Volunteers to help with a variety of clerical work.

For further information on these and other volunteer opportunities, interested persons are to call 752-4137, ext. 265 or come by the office at 2000 Cedar Lane.

Suspected Spy Held

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A 25-year-old Frenchman has been arrested as a suspected spy for the Palestine Liberation Organization, Israel Radio reported.

It said Robert Falkonary was arrested after he entered Israel from Jordan over the Allenby Bridge. According to the Friday broadcast, security officials believe he was recruited by the PLO in Lebanon and given a camera with instructions to film sections of the Israeli coast that could be used as landing sites for seaborne Palestinian attacks.

VICTIM OF RECENT RAINS — This doll, disrobed and forgotten by her young owner, is one of the known of many suspected doll victims in Greenville during the recent days of heavy rains. The doll, partially submerged in a pool of bird bath water, was discovered before severe damage resulted to her plastic body. With a good drying the doll was restored to her role as a child's toy. $2,536,962 In Building Permits

Building permits totaling $2,536,962 were issued in Greenville during February, according to a report issued by John Brooks, N.C. Labor Commissioner.

The permit valuation for Greenville compared with $1,820,757 reported for January.

According to Brooks, the first two months of 1979 resulted in a permit valuation total here of $4,357,719.

Totals for several neighboring cities for February and the first two months of the year included: Elizabeth City, $2,805,600, $2,947,150; Goldsboro, $1,022,000, $1,746,995; Jacksonville, $522,549, $1,476,291;

Kinston, $124,500, $553,997; New Bern, $112,000, $636,625; Roanoke Rapids, $118,733' $3,997,443; Rocky Mount, $1,492,376, $2,810,643; and Wilson, $483,063, $1,586,792.

Brooks said in his monthly report that the average North Carolina worker has been priced almost completely out of the market for the average new single-family home.

He said that, "the average estimated construction cost of single-family homes authorized in February was $37,738, up 22.6 percent from February of 1978, when the average cost was $30,775.

Brooks said that just noting construction cost alone does not adequately reflect the actual total expenditure for a new home, because it leaves out of consideration many other additional costs generally associated with such an investment, including purchase of lot, closing costs, finance charges, and the builder's profit.

At the end of 1978, the average single family home in the state sold for $50,000 and contained three bedrooms and a bath and a half.

"This information tells us that the cost of becoming the owner of an 'average' new home has simply gotten out of reach of the majority of North Carolina's 2,554,300 workers," Brooks pointed out.

Brooks said the February permits totaling $46,681,349 in the 38 cities of more than 10,000 population were down 2.6 percent from the $47,933,343 recorded for last February and 17.7 percent below the $56,740,881 reported for January, 1979.

Absentee Ballots

Margaret Register, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Elections, reminded area voters that absentee balloting will only be allowed on the $9 million school bond issue in the June 8 referendum.

Miss Register, who said that she had received numerous inquiries regarding absentee voting, added that current law does not provide for absentee ballots to be issued for the mixed beverage referendum.

Requests for absentee ballots for the school bond issue may be made by a voter or a near relative until June 6 at 5 p.m., she said. Citizens who will be out of the county on election day or not be able to visit the polling place due to illness or disability may also vote by absentee ballot, Miss Register explained.

Homes Out Of Reach For Most N.C. Workers

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The average North Carolina worker has been priced almost out of the market for the average new single-family home, Labor Commissioner John Brooks says.

Brooks, in a statement on February building permit activity in the state, said the average estimated cost of building a new single-family home in February was $37,738, up 22.6 percent from a year earlier.

He said when land costs, closing costs and other charges associated with buying a home are added in, the final price at the end of 1978 was about $50,000 for a three-bedroom, one-and-a-half bath house.

"If the old rule of thumb is still working, which says a family should be able to afford a home that costs two-and-a-half times its annual income," he said, "a family would have to earn an annual income of approximately $20,000 in order to buy an 'average' home in today's market.

"Yet the average annual wage of our largest single group of workers, the more than 800,000 factory production employees, is currently less than $9,500. This situation compels that there be at least two adult wage earners in many North Carolina families seeking to own their own homes."

Brooks said there were 434 multi-family dwelling unit permits issued in February, up almost 85 percent from the same month a year ago, indicating that "because of these financial considerations, rather than by actual individual preference, that more and more persons are turning to life in multi-family dwelling units..."

A total of 282 permits for single-family dwellings were issued in February, with a estimated construction cost of $10.6 milion, down almost 50 percent from the number reported a year ago. Construction costs rose 7.5 percent from January to February.

He said if the state escalated training programs for the skilled trades it might help hold down the rising cost of housing by easing the demand for skilled workers, a demand he said is driving up the wages paid in the field.

In February, Brooks said, building permits in the state's 38 largest cities totaling $46.6 million were issued, off slightly from the same month in 1978.

For the first two months of the year, said Brooks, permits amounted to $103 million, up just over 4 percent from the same period last year.

Top Influence Spenders

By IRA R. ALLEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 33-year-old lobby disclosure requirement described by critics as "more loophole than law" shows the Embassy of Saudi Arabia and Common Cause among the biggest spenders in trying to influence Congress.

According to summaries of records filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives for the first quarter of this year, the public relations man for the Saudi Embassy reported receiving $470,000 and spending $232,500 in the first three months of this year.

The lobbyist is J. Crawford Cook of Columbia, S.C., a former associate of Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., and former Gov. John West, who is now U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia.

Common Cause, a citizens' lobby group, reported taking in $1.36 million and spending $352,259. One of the group's lobbyists, Michael Cole, said Common Cause has been on top in terms of expenditures since it was created in 1970 because it reports everything honestly.

The list, printed in the Congressional Record, contains both organizations and individuals who lobby for them. Many overlap and few of the big law firms or corporate interests report more than minimal income and expenses. Some lobbyists list their clients but no financial data.

The list is studded with former congressmen and former federal officials, such as former Federal Trade Commission Chairman Calvin Collier, who lists major drug companies among his clients.

"By universal account, it is more loophole than law," said Cole. "Everybody agrees that reports filed by the great majority of organizations are next to meaningless."

The biggest loophole is that only groups whose main purpose is lobbying have to file. That excludes the Chamber of Commerce, which claims a purpose of promoting business, the big oil companies whose purpose is selling petroleum, or major industry associations — all of whom are among Washington's biggest and best lobbyists.

Corporate lobbyists who do file "have ridiculously low amounts" of expenditures, Cole said, and the list seemed to bear him out.

The law firm of Arnold and Porter reported receiving $4,600 from Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office while spending only $23. It took in nothing in the first quarter from the Kroger Co., but spent $8.40 or the equivalent of seven cab trips from the law office to Capitol Hill, with no tip.

No Takers

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Thousands of boxes of cigarettes lined the wall, the auctioneers were ready and everything seemed go for West Virginia's great bootleg-cigarette sale.

Only the customers were missing. In fact, not a single nicotine-loving West Virginian turned out.

The bootleg cigarettes were priced at a minimum price of $1.50 for a cartoon of 10 packs. Cigarettes usually sell for $5.50 a carton in the area.

"Well, we're a bit surprised. We really have no explanation for it," said Lloyd Fridley, assistant director of the state Excises and License Taxes Office.

The sale was extensively advertised and written about in local newspapers, Fridley said. "This has never happened before. We just don't know what happnened."

Police May Walkout

DUNN, N.C. (UPI) — Dunn's policemen are considering a walkout if the town board rejects their plea for town-paid hospitalization insurance at a June 7 board meeting.

All of the 34 officers, except Chief B.P. Jones, have signed a letter to the town manager asking for a 5 percent raise and paid insurance in place of a 7 percent raise with no insurance payment. The coverage now costs $44.50 a month and will go to $49 in July.

A walkout has been discussed by several people, said a source in the department.

The letter, written by attorney Gerald W. Hayes Jr. who was retained by the officers, said an annual 13 percent rise in the cost of living coupled with the insurance payments wiped out gains from the 7 percent raise.

Will Take Part In Chinese Negotiations

By ROBERT CRABBE

PEKING (UPI) — America's roving trade ambassador Robert Strauss arrived in Peking Saturday and said he would take a hand in the stymied negotiations on limitation of Chinese textile exports to the United States.

The politically explosive issue threatens the rapidly developing trade between China and the United States.

Congressional sources in Washington say that unless the textile aggreement is concluded, it will impossible for Congress to ratify the Chinese-American trade treaty initialed by Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps during her visit to China earlier this month.

"The textile agreement is a very important part of my visit, and there is a wide range of other things to talk about," Strauss said after his U.S government jet landed at Peking airport after a 23-hour flight from Washington.

Strauss soon will relinquish the post of President Carter's special ambassador for trade to become ambassador for negotiations with Middle East countries.

However, he emphasized that he is in China "basically as trade ambassador."

He was accompanied by an entourage of high-level American businessmen.

U.S. Ambassador to China Leonard Woodcock, who has been in Washington since early May for consultations, returned to Peking on the same plane with Strauss.

Strauss was scheduled to visit the Great Wall of China Sunday, and to begin working talks with Chinese officials on Monday.

The United States and China Friday broke off discussions on American demands that China sign an agreement setting quotas on its exports of textiles and ready-made clothing to America.

Mounting sales of Chinese textiles, which have increased every year since 1972, have aroused the alarm of congressmen representing textile districts. The United States already has agreements limiting textile imports from many Far East countries including Japan, South Korea and Hong Kong.

Nigeria Wants Oil Price Hike

NEW YORK (AP) — Nigeria has put added pressure on the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to increase oil prices when it meets next month by raising its own crude oil price to $2.45 a barrel, putting it at the top of the pricing ladder along with Algeria.

Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, a newsletter that covers the industry, quoted Nigeria's new price at $20.96 per barrel. The increases are not expected to affect U.S. gasoline prices by themselves. But added to other OPEC price boosts, they could add possibly three cents to a gallon of gas and raise heating oil prices.

Cautious Reaction

MOSCOW (UPI) — Jewish activists reacted cautiously Saturday to a reported Soviet offer to free more Jewish prisoners and further ease restrictions on emigration on the eve of the Vienna summit with the United States.

Jewish sources said Robert Hawk, president of the Australian Trade Union Council, acted as an intermediary this week and informed Jewish activists that the Soviet government was willing to release 12 of the so-called Prisoners of Zion.

Three Jewish activists, who have themselves been repeatedly refused permission to emigrate to Israel, issued a carefully worded statement.

"We are told that the Soviet authorities have decided to release longterm applicants for departure, to release the 12 prisoners, and to limit the maximum term of waiting for exit visas to five years," thee statement said.

"We consider that fulfilment of this intention would mean a profound improvement of the emigration policies and it should be responded to positively by the world."

The statement was signed by mathematician Alexander Lerner, engineer Vladimir Prestin and mathematician Viktor Brylovsky.

Both Jewish and Western diplomatic sources said the reported Soviet offer, if carried out, would signal a significant change in Soviet emigration and human rights policies on the eve of the Vienna summit and possibly would help clear the way for President Carter to liberalize U.S. restrictions on trade with the Soviet Union.

Death Penalty Method Among Pending Bills

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The sponsor of legislation to replace the gas chamber with lethal drug injections as North Carolina's method of carrying out death sentences says he hopes the execution of Florida convict John Spenkelink will spur passage of his measure.

Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincoln, who is a physician and supporter of the death penalty, said Friday the Spenkelink execution demonstrated his proposal is the most humane way to carry out capital sentences.

The bill is pending in a House judiciary committee, and Gamble said he has asked committee chairman Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, to take up the bill early next week.

Gamble's measure would do away with the gas chamber in North Carolina, where the last execution was in 1962. Instead, persons sentenced to die would be given an injection of two chemicals, one a tranquilizer to induce sleep and the other causing respiratory paralysis and death.

Gamble said use of the electric chair, as in Florida, or the gas chamber is "barbaric" because the victim is conscious for the intial electrical shocks or breaths of lethal fumes.

"Certainly using a medical injection is not barbaric," he said. "If it was me, I'd rather have the injection. It's like going to sleep."

In other legislative developments:

Open Meetings

The House enacted legislation revising the state's open-meetings law when it voted 97-1 to go along with the Senate on amendments. Only Rep. William Clark, D-Cumberland, opposed concurrence.

The legislation replaces the existing open-meetings law, which was greatly weakened by court rulings. It is more specific about what meetings by public boards and commissions must be open to the public. It also requires that boards give public notice of regular and specially called meetings.

Among the major changes made by the Senate was an amendment allowing the state Advisory Budget Commission and Council of State to keep their exemption and continue to exclude the public from their meetings.

Wildlife

A massive rewrite of the state's game laws won final approval from the House and was returned to the Senate for consideration of amendments.

The major difference to be resolved concerns the trapping of foxes. The Senate version would allow them to be trapped for commercial purposes starting next year. The House version is more restrictive, allowing trapping only after a Wildlife Resources Commission study is made of fox populations in 1981.

UNC

The Senate approved and sent the House a bill giving the lieutenant governor a seat on the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

Insurance

Two bills amending the state's automobile insurance laws were passed by the House. One prevents companies from adding a surcharge to premiums for persons who are clean risks but whose coverage has been placed in the reinsurance facility because of age or other reason.

The second measure, which was returned to the Senate for concurrence in amendments, raises the minimum amount of automobile liability insurance required by law. Supporters said the increase would cause a small rise in insurance premiums.

Day Care

Gov. Jim Hunt released a letter saying he opposes — at this time — legislation sought by fundamentalist church leaders to drop state regulation of church-supported day care centers.

The legislation is sought by the same groups that recently won passage of bills dropping regulation of private and church-supported schools.

Other Action

In other legislative action:

—The Senate approved and sent the House legislation reducing the state insurance commissioner's authority to regulate debt collection agencies.

—The Senate Finance Committee approved a bill allowing state-chartered mutual savings and loan associations to convert to stock ownership.

—The Senate voted 30-8 to give tentative approval to a bill sought by Attorney General Rufus Edmisten to make it illegal for mechanics to do unauthorized repair work.

—The House approved and sent the Senate legislation requiring the reporting of campaign expenditures in referendums, as are presently required for candidates in elections.

—The House approved and sent the Senate a resolution calling for a study commission to examine the issue of searches of newsrooms for evidence.

—The House approved and sent the Senate a resolution urging the International Whaling Commission to adopt a 10-year moratorium on the killing of whales.

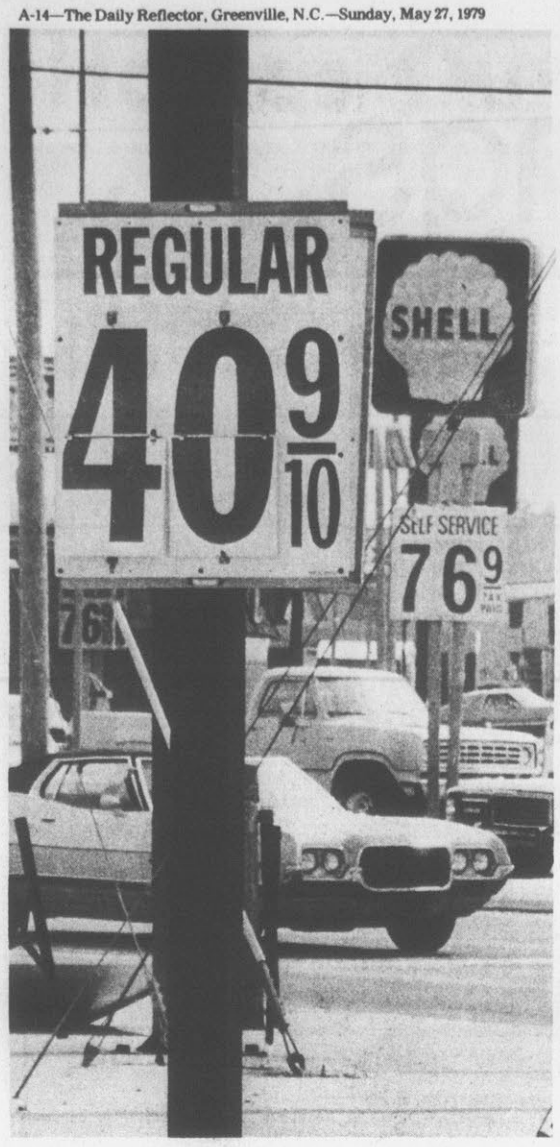

Refused To Issue Restraint

TRENTON, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has refused to issue a temporary restraining order forbidding the state from moving a $2.5 million container crane from Morehead City to Wilmington.

U.S. District Court Judge John D. Larkins Friday rejected the request by three Morehead City men after they were unable to post bond to cover losses the state could have suffered because of a delay in the move.

The men filed the suit Thursday, contending that the State Ports Authority's decision to move the crane was unconstitutional.

Meanwhile, work crews at Morehead City continued dismantling the crane and loading it on a barge to be taken to Wilmington.

WHOOPS! — Memorial Day motorists traveling along Greenville Blvd., may find this eyecatcher as they ride by. A prankster apparently readjusted a closed gas station's gas price signs to read 40 9/10, which is a dream price compared to present day prices of 76 9/10 shown in the background. Viewpoints On Death Penalty

By The Associated Press

As death penalty opponents across the nation mourned the execution of a convicted killer, others reasserted their belief that the electrocution of John A. Spenkelink was an act of justice.

"There is certainly no joy when someone is killed, even by a legal process," said Virginia Attorney General J. Marshall Coleman, commenting on the Friday morning Florida execution.

"But it makes it clear the public can express its anger in an appropriate and legal way against those who violate our laws in a violent and capricious manner."

Death penalty opponents expressed grief and outrage and vowed to continue to seek the abolition of capital punishment.

"The imperative need for our time is a reverence for life," said former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who had filed an unsuccessful 11th-hour petition for a U.S. Supreme Court stay of the execution. "I would hope that America would soon abandon this barbaric practice."

Despite Friday's protests, the author of Oklahoma's new death by injection policy said he believes public opinion is swinging behind capital punishment.

"I question whether capital punishment is effective, but most people think it is and if most people think it is, we'll probably see more of it," said State Rep. Bill Wiseman. "But if you are going to execute people, it should be done in a more humane method."

A Georgia capital punishment proponent, State Rep. Wayne Snow, said the execution will result in "expedited enforcement of capital punishment laws in Georgia." He said he expects "one or more" of the 68 prisoners on the state's Death Row will be put to death this year.

Indiana Gov. Otis Bowen said Spenkelink's execution may "open the gate" to more executions around the nation.

Civil rights activists warned that the execution of Spenkelink, a white man, could provoke the use of capital punishment against minority groups and the poor.

One of Spenkelink's attorneys, Millard Farmer, tearfully called the electrocution "a terrorist attack on the part of government against poor minorities all over the country."

Connecticut Civil Liberties Union Chief William Olds said, "You never see a rich person go to the electric chair."

In Atlanta, U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young likened Spenkelink's death to political executions in Iran and said the voluntary manslaughter verdict returned against former San Francisco Supervisor Dan White, who shot and killed his city's mayor and a supervisor, showed "the inequities in the system."

Nixon, Johnson Busts Installed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A marble bust of Richard Milhous Nixon, quietly installed in the Senate after a delay of 12 years, is attracting knots of tourists and some pointed comments.

Down the hall a similar marble bust of Lyndon Baines Johnson, installed just as quietly Friday, surveys the Senate staircase from a vantage point near a full length statue of Benjamin Franklin and a bust of Harry Truman.

Annual Atlantic Beach Run On June 9

BEAUFORT — Entry forms and regulations are now available to anyone interested in taking part in the Eleventh Annual Beach Run to be held at Atlantic Beach on Saturday, June 9.

Three categories are planned for runners — the 6.2 miles run; the two mile run; and the one mile fun run for runners under 12 and 55 and older.

Preregistered runners and late registrants must sign in and pick-up race packets between 8 and 10 a.m. at the Fort Macon Beach area.

All races will end at the Fort Macon bathing house area, with results electronically and hand timed. The awards ceremony will begin as soon as results are tabulated — at about 12:30 p.m.

Pre-registration fee (before June 2) is $4, and late registration fee is $5. The event is sponsored jointly by the Kiwanis Club of Morehead City and the Carteret County Parks and Recreation Department.

Persons wanting entry forms and other details are to write to: Donald Leatherman, Carteret County Parks and Recreation Dept., P. O. Drawer B, Beaufort, N. C., 28516. A stamped, self-addressed envelope is required to receive entry forms and other information.

ECU Student Wins Music Scholarship

Paula Scarangella, a rising senior in the East Carolina University School of Music, is the winner of this year's Presser Scholarship at ECU.

The scholarship, which carries a stipend of more than $1,000, is given each year to an outstanding junior music student at ECU.

Ms. Scarangella is a student of harp, and has appeared in several ensemble performances during the time she has been a student at ECU. She is from Norfolk, Va.

Tickets On Sale

HALIFAX — Tickets for the outdoor drama, "First For Freedom," to be performed June 28 through July 29, are now on sale.

Ticket prices are $2 for children under 12, and $3 and $4 for adults, depending on location of seats. Based on demand of prior years, advance reservations are recommended for those who may wish to attend on a specific date.

"First For Freedom " is the drama depicting a segment of early eastern North Carolina history, centering on this historic signing of the The Halifax Resolves on April 12, 1776.

The drama includes scenes of a spectacular battle between British soldiers and colonists, and the love story of a young couple, Sam Pickett and Josie Hamilton.

The script is based on a novel by Maxville Burt Williams. Del Lewis is director. The play is performed at 8:30 p.m. each Wednesday through Sunday at the Joseph Montfort Amphitheater in downtown historic Halifax.

Persons interested in reserved tickets can write to: First For Freedom, Box 1776, Halifax, N. C., 27839, or call the ticket office, 583-8901 between 9 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. daily.

Grants Announced

RALEIGH — A total of $50,000 in grants to non-profit historic attractions in northeastern North Carolina have been announced by N.C. Dept. of Cultural Resources Secretary Sara W. Hodgkins.

The grants are to be used within a 16-county area for planning, promotion and program development of historical attractions in the area.

Ranging from $480 to $30,000, the grants are the result of a 1977 General Assembly bill which stipulates a dollar-for-dollar match by the recipient for program improvement, and no match requirement for planning studies.

The largest grant — of $30,000 — has been awarded to Historic Albemarle Tour, Inc., for master interpretive/marketing /resource development study. The grant is to fund a comprehensive visitor resource study for all historic attractions in the northeastern counties.

Other grants awarded are:

— Beaufort County — $1,000 to Historic Bath State Historic Site; $2,000 for interpretive planning for Washington; and $2,000 to Belhaven Memorial Museum, Inc.

— Bertie County — $2,000 to Historic Hope Foundation, Inc.

— Chowan County — $480 to Historic Edenton, Inc., and $2,000 to the Town of Edenton, Inc.

— Dare County — $2,957 to Roanoke Island Historical Association for a promotional brochure.

— Halifax County — $1,000 to Historic Halifax Restoration Association, Inc.

— Hertford County — $1,063 to Historic Murfreesboro Commission, and $1,500 for a new promotional brochure.

— Hyde County — $2,000 for Octagon House Restoration, Inc.

— Perquimans County — $2,000 to Perquimans County Restoration Association.

Persons interested in more detailed information on planned use of these grants can contact: Northeastern Historic Places Office, P. O. Box 759, Edenton, N. C., 27932.

Persons interested in full details, including prices of room and board are to write to: Mrs. Flora Buffington, Southeastern Writers Ass'n, Inc., 3400 E. Evans Mill Court, Lithonia, Ga., or call her at 404, 482-1340.

Too Young To Disco

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — The City Council says elementary school children are too young to disco.

"When you get elementary children all used to going to dances like this when they're 10 years old, what will they do when they're 14?" asked Councilwoman Beth Gurrister.

She said such entertainment was too much too soon for young people.

The council voted unanimously to reject a request from Main Circuit Disco that it be allowed to hold Saturday afternoon dances for grade school children.

Currently, you have to be 14 to disco in Brigham City.

J. Erik Hart New Manager

WINSTON-SALEM — J. Erik Hart has been appointed General Manger of Winston-Salem's North Carolina Dance Theater. He succeeds Vicky Bell, the company's interim manager since Dec. 1978.

Hart helped found the Rhode Island Dance Company in 1971, and has toured the U.S. and Europe with the Walter Nicks Dance Theater. In 1977 he was the first Administrative Director of the New Orleans Ballet, and most recently was associated with the Ohio Ballet as Company Manager for its first national tour.

Pablo Cruise Concert Today

DOSWELL, VA. — Pablo Cruise will appear in concert today in two performances — at 4 and again at 8 p.m. — in the entertainment lineup for Kings Dominion over the Memorial Day period.

At 2 p.m. and at 7 p.m. on Monday, May 28, the featured performer will be Willie Nelson.

Attractions to be on hand for the summer are The Hanna-Barbera Water Follies Ski Show, and a new animated show, "The Wolfpack Five."

One-Woman Show

RALEIGH — A one-woman show of art by Joann Honeycutt, "People and Their Surroundings" will be on view June 1 through June 30 at the Little Art Gallery, North Hills Shopping Center. The public is invited to attend the showing.

Finds Tomb Of King

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet archaeologists have found the 2,500-year-old tomb of a Scythian king in a valley of the Altai Mountains in southern Siberia, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

The Tass report Friday said the tomb contained skeletons of eight royal aides, who accompanied their king on his "final voyage." The bodies had been dressed "in rich clothes, adorned with ornaments of gold, turquoise and carved bones, with richly decorated weapons and utensils," Tass said.

Eight Artists In New Show

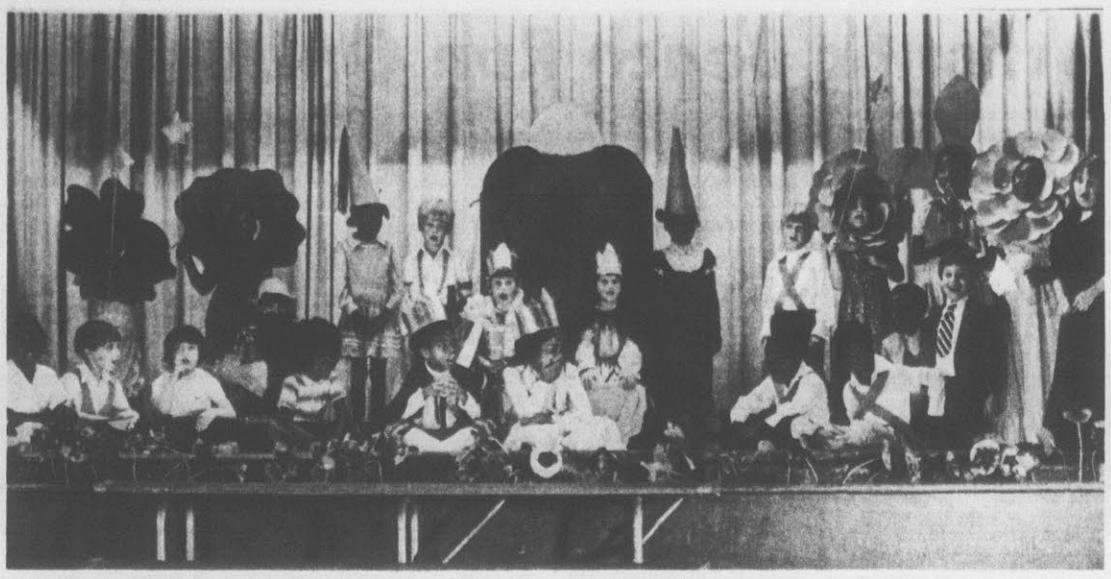

GREENSBORO — Works by eight artists will go on view June 3 at Green Hill Art Gallery, 200 North Davie Street, Greensboro in the 1979 North Carolina Invitational Exhibition.

Artists invited to show are Walter Barker, Bert Carpenter, Carla Ethier, Maud Gatewood, Roy Nydorf, Fay Page, Robert Postma, and Vernon Pratt.

The exhibit will be on view through July 31, and the opening reception will be from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, June 3. Gallery hours are 10 to 5 Tuesday through Friday, and 2 to 5 on Saturday and Sunday.

To Dance In Holland

NEW YORK — The Laura Dean Dancers and Musicians, following an appearance at the Woodstock Playhouse, Woodstock, N. Y. early in June, will fly to the Netherlands to perform in the annual Holland Festival. They will have six performances there, then return to the U.S. for three performances of a commissioned work to be given at the American Dance Festival program in Durham on three dates in July.

YOUTHFUL PERFORMERS — First graders in Elmhurst Elementary School got a taste of theater in a presentation of "Sleeping Beauty" last Wednesday evening. The large cast for the fairy tale favorite was drawn from students in first grade classes of Mrs. Chris Elmore and Mrs. Addie Lou Leggett. For the benefit of their peers, the cast presented the play again at the school during early morning school hours Friday. (Photo Courtesy Mrs. Margie Nobles)

Fat Nude In The Window

By TOM HILLSTROM

NEW YORK (UPI) — The case began last fall with an unidentified caller to a radio talk show telling Mayor Edward Koch of a 250-pound nude woman cooking a meal each night in a storefront window on Manhattan's West 23rd Street.

"Do you object to the woman's nudity, or her weight?" Koch asked.

"Both," replied the caller.

The mayor promised an in-depth investigation, turning the affair over to his Midtown Enforcement Project, which normally deals with such matters as massage parlors, peep shows and pornography shops.

Investigators followed the mayor's directive. Their report, a copy of which was obtained by UPI, follows:

"To: Mayor Koch

"From: Midtown Enforcement

"Re: The Squat Theater

"We have investigated the complaint regarding a production at the Squat Theater on 23rd Street during which a 250-pound woman was reported to have performed nude in a storefront window.

"It is true that this performance did indeed occur as described. It was, however, part of a radical avant garde theater group's play entitled, 'Andy Warhol's Love.'

"The play itself was not written by Andy Warhol. Nor did Warhol have any connection with this production, which has been described as the reflection of recent immigrant experiences in America. The production was staged by an extended family group of Jewish Hungarian refugees who fled from Hungary because they were about to be arrested for not conforming to the standards of Socialist Realism of the East Bloc nation.

"The scene involving the naked fat woman in the window was part of this group's theory about 'inside' and 'outside' theater. They created a concept of performing before two audiences — the audience in the theater and passersby on the street.

"The woman has been described as an authentic American witch who acts out a real witch's ceremony in the window. She was not cooking. It is doubtful that her act would be declared legally obscene.

"This play, supported with a grant from the state Council on the Arts, was apparently very popular. It received good reviews except from John Simon.

"The theater group is considered a serious group of artists who came to this country seeking freedom of expression through innovative methods."

By the time the Midtown Enforcement Project had completed its investigation, the rotund woman had dressed and taken her show to Amsterdam. But Koch kept the report on his desk, occasionally reading it for visitors and declaring it the best example he had found yet of "what it's like to be a New York mayor."

Hopes To Revive An Interest In French Composer's Music

By BEVERLY WOLTER
Duke University
News Service

DURHAM — An Israel-born pianist now with the Duke University music department hopes to revive interest in a 20th century French composer whom he feels the musical world has by-passed.

Boaz Sharon is the pianist. Charles Koechlin, who was born in 1867 and died in 1950, is the composer.

Orion Records is issuing a recording, performed by Sharon, of Koechlin's "Paysages et Marines" and "Pastorales."

Sharon, who joined the Duke faculty in 1976 as lecturer and artist-in-residence, said his interest in Koechlin started when he was an undergraduate student at the University of Texas.

He says he has a great respect for Koechlin's music and he feels the record has the potential of helping to revive interest in a "fine composer."

Sharon also feels that "you can't contribute much by doing another Ravel or Beethoven."

Koechlin was a prolific composer, but one who never hit the big time as far as continued public recognition of his work ,was concerned.

Although unknown to the general public, Koechlin, Sharon said, was considered a leading 20th century French composer by such composers of more enduring fame as Faure, Satie, Ravel, Falla, Poulenc and Milhaud.

While Koechlin was still a conservatory pupil, Faure asked him to orchestrate his opera, "Pelleas and Melisande." Debussy liked Koechlin's orchestration for his ballet "Khama."

Loechlin's students included Cole Porter and Poulenc, among others.

Writing in 1955, Paul Collaeir, said in his "A History of Modern Music," that "there is no doubt that this eminent composer deseres to be ranked among the best composers of our time," and "we would hope that from now on musicians will pay more attention to his music."

The composer Henri Sauget, introducing the first complete catalog of Koechlin's music in 1975, described his compositions as possessing "all the attraction that should compel recognition: imagination, variety, color, rhythm, originality, grace, freshness, tenderness, power, nobility..."

Asked why Koechlin's work hasn't been better known, Sharon replied, "Partly because much of his work is difficult for the performer and the listener, requiring great concentration to catch its nuances."

Perhaps most importantly, Koechlin had little sense of public relations. He disdained the use of the telephone and photocopying, for example.

Still, he was not unaware of the modern world — one of his compositions programmed this spring by the Dallas Symphony (Koechlin has not been totally neglected, but almost, Sharon noted) was written in 1933 and paid musical homage to film stars like Clara Bow, Greta Garbo, Douglas Fairbanks, Marlene Dietrich, Emil Jannings and Charles Chaplin.

BUYS FIRST RECORD, BECOMES STAR — England's Chris Rea poses by a jukebox recently in Los Angeles. After buying his first record at age 20, Rea became interested in music and with his debut album that has sold over a half million copies, has become a rock star. He was recently honored with a Grammy nomination for best new artist of 1978. (AP Laserphoto)

Two PBS Specials

The focus is on the use of feet and legs — in one instance running, in the other dancing — in two PBS Specials being aired this week over UNC-TV, Channel 25, Greenville.

— At 10:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 29, "Run America Run" examines the current mania for running and physical fitness in an upbeat and informative program which includes segments on the medical benefits of running; the psychological benefits; and personal responses from runners.

— The following night, Wednesday, May 30, at 10:30 p.m. is the premiering airing of "Estampa Flamenca " which will display the flamenco art of dancing, with Maria Benitez as the featured dancer. She will be joined by her partner Luis Rivera, singer Simon Serrano, and guitarist Carlos Sanchez. The veteran flamenco dancer has toured in Spain and South America, has performed with several American opera companies, and at dance festivals.

Pro Football Player Is Also An Artist

Ernie Barnes

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — When Ernie Barnes left North Carolina in 1960, it was to play pro football.

But he's back for a visit — as a professional artist.

An exhibit of his work opened May 20 at the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh.

Barnes, 40, was born and raised in Durham, the son of a tobacco-company laborer and a maid. He went to North Carolina Central University.

"This is my first exhibit at that museum," he said one day last week while swinging on the front porch at his mother's home in Durham.

"When I was 18, I went there on a visit with my college art class. I asked the docent, 'Where are the paintings by Negro artists?'

"She said, 'Your people don't express yourselves this way,'" he said, a small, ironic smile on his face.

"I never thought that my second visit (to the museum) would be with a one-man show."

Many people will find Barnes' art familiar. He has become enormously successful; a man some call "painter to the stars" in Hollywood, where he now lives.

Barnes, 6 foot 3 and 260 pounds, left Durham in 1960, drafted by the then-world champion Baltimore Colts.

He later played offensive guard for the San Diego Chargers and the Denver Broncos.

But the beginning of the 1967 found him in Los Angeles, broke and without a job.

Barnes said he went to Barron Hilton, owner of the Chargers, and offered to do a painting. Barnes said he would do the painting, of Lance Alworth catching a pass, for $90. Hilton offered him $500, with an additional $500 after the painting was complete.

"That $500 seemed like a million to me," he said.

After that, he became the official artist for the American Football League, guaranteed the same salary for a year's work as he made his last pro season — $13,500. Now his income is estimated at close to $100,000 a year.

Barnes said he started painting as a child and made money during high school painting signs in meat markets. He also did a mural in the cafeteria at Hillside High School in Durham but said it's long since been painted over. "How could they know?" he said, in reference to his later success.

His art often shows sports scenes, from sandlot football, two skinny-legged women looking on, to an intense oil of players sitting on a bench. Some of the art might be termed "ghetto art," scenes of black life, from a club in a painting he calls "The Sugar Shack" to one of a group of black women gossiping.

"I don't care what that art world is into; I do what I like," he said. "I guess I'm really my favorite artist."

Arts Council Meeting Set

A public meeting for the purpose of discussing the possible re-formation of an arts council for Greenville and Pitt County will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday, May 30 in the auditorium of the Greenville Parks and Recreation Dept. Administrative Bldg., 2000 Cedar Lane.

Jack LeSueur, Pitt County's liaison with the N. C. Arts Council, is coordinating the meeting.

All interested citizens are invited to attend.

Charlotte Purrington Gets Top Award In Quilt Show

BELHAVEN — Charlotte Purrington, a resident of Greenville and a graduate of East Carolina University, has won the "Best-in-Show" award in a quilt show now on exhibit at EEii's little KORNERS of the World in Belhaven.

The quilt which won this award for Ms. Purrington employs a wax resist technique used for an original, contemporary design of an underwater scene, featuring bright yellow fishdarting about against a background of green and purple fish

The title given her quilt is "The Today Show Off Bermuda."

First place winner in the contemporary category of quilts was won by Mrs. John Lang, formerly of Belhaven, now living in Grifton, for her quilt, "Carolina Sunset."

In the traditional class, Mrs. Opal Brown of Washington took first place for a blue and white quilt, "Dove of Peace;" and in the antique division, a quilt made by the grandmother of Mrs. Mary Willis, placed first.

The exhibition of quilts will remain at EEii's through June, and the public is invited to see the show during operation hours of the gallery. There is no admission fee charged.

Bluegrass Fest A Benefit Affair

MARSHALL — A benefit festival for the N. C. Heart Association in which the 40th anniversary of Bluegrass will be celebrated is taking place May 31 through June 2 at the Madison County Bluegrass Festival. The event is being held at Zenina Farms, Inc., Route 2, Marshall.

This anniversary event will feature the music of Bill Monroe, often called the Father of Bluegrass Music. The gates to the farm will open at 8 a.m. Wednesday, May 30, with 500 acres of free parking available to those attending.

Wilmington Show Opens

WILMINGTON — A showing of art depicting the "Medical History of the Lower Cape Fear" is going on view today at the New Hanover County Museum, 814 Market Street, Wilmington.

The public is invited to the opening reception being held from 2 to 5 p.m. today. Regular hours are 9-5 Tuesdays through Saturdays, and 2-5 on Sundays. There is no admission charge.

Dr. Tise Elected President

RALEIGH — Dr. Larry E. Tise, director of the Division of Archives and History of the Dept. of Cultural Resources and N. C. State Historic Preservation Officer, was elected for a two-year term as president of the National Conference of State Historical Preservation Officers at the recent meeting of that organization in Tampa, Florida.

Ayden-Grifton School Art Students Had Spring Art Show

By REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer

Ayden-Grifton High School art teacher Mrs. Betsy Reid termed the gathering for last Tuesday's school Spring Art Show a "big success."

Students in Mrs. Reid's three Art I and II classes set the mood for the evening with soft music and refreshments, as approximately 200 pieces of art work were displayed on individual easels throughout the school library.

"We tried to make the occasion a formal affair," explained Mrs. Reid. "We wanted to set the atmosphere to make it conducive to the appreciation of fine art."

A total of 43 students in the tenth, 11th and 12th grades at Ayden-Grifton participate in the three art classes, all taught by Mrs. Reid. Students are screened each spring, each submitting drawings judged by a panel of five Ayden-Grifton faculty members.

"Our fine arts program deals with basic drawing skills," noted Mrs. Reid. "We work with pencil, charcoal, pen and ink, pastels, oils, watercolors and some little ceramics."

Three students, Margaret Joyner, Becky Costello and Dee Wiggins, were honored by "National Scholastic" magazine for their works in charcoal, watercolor and pen and ink, respectively. The works were displayed with other selections Tuesday.

Although the students have not had the chance to work extensively with ceramics, several showed ingenuity in their experiments in slab and coil forms.

One student, Lynn McLawhorn, made a tiny slab form box, with a connecting drawer. Another student made a ceramic wall hanging to hold dried flower arrangements.

Two school groups, the Key Club and the Keywanettes, have donated two-thirds of their monies from the school year to aid the school in purchasing a kiln and potter's wheel for next year, according to Mrs. Reid. She spoke of her desire to build up the art program and student participation:

"What excites me is the students' enthusiasm and how much they take their work seriously. Some were still painting Tuesday to show their works that night. This, for them, was the big event of the year."

Abandoned Cemetery Survey

RALEIGH — The Commission for the Study of Abandoned Cemeteries in North Carolina, a special group formed by the 1977 session of the General Assembly, has announced the expansion of its state cemetery survey.

Originally envisioned to cover seven representative counties, the committee has decided, because of popular demand, to expand the survey to all interested counties.

To be included in the survey, a county must have a coordinating committee and a county coordinator to insure that a complete and accurate survey is made.

All surveys must be conducted so that the full and complete results may be known not later than the fall of 1980. The results of the survey will be used to recommend to the General Assembly measures which should be taken to preserve and protect thousands of local and family cemeteries throughout the state.

Persons and organizations interested in participating in the study are requested to contact Frank D. Gatton in the Dept. of Cultural Resources, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, N. C., 27611 or telephone 733-3068.

Exhibition Rules Listed

BOGUE BANKS — Some changes and restrictions have been announced for the use of exhibition spaces open to the public at the North Carolina Marine Resources Center at Bogue Banks this summer.

This year, the exhibit space will be only in the lounge and in the room opposite the aquariums behind the auditorium. The overflow will be on the lounge porch and lawn — not the main entrance.

Exhibition hours will be the same as those of the Center — 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturdays and 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Exhibitors are asked to limit exhibitions to a space of five by eight feet. Each space is numbered and will be allotted to exhibitors on a call and assignment basis. The person to call for space is Marion at 726-2660.

All calls must be made no later than 10 p.m. on the Thursday preceding the day of the show.

Craft fair exhibition dates are: July 21 and 22; August 18 and 19; September 15 and 16; and October 20 and 21.

Other numbers to call for information are 726-0256 after 4 p.m. or 726-0121 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. daily.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Willie Mae Gibbs

The library's new book collection includes several appealing novels for those who like highly entertaining fiction.

Graham Masterton in a book called Rich gives his readers the opportunity to experience what it's like to be extravagantly, wonderfully rich. This vicarious experience is made possible through sharing the engrossing story of an American family as it rises to the pinnacles of social and financial success. This extraordinary saga begins around 1900 as Johann Cornelius, a brash and penniless young Dutch immigrant, arrives in Texas to seek his fortune. It ends seventy-five years later when he and his children and grandchildren reign over a vast and powerful oil empire. Rich will take you from Texas boardinghouses to New York boardrooms, from post Eastern country clubs to Hollywood brothels — allowing you to experience much of the real history and glamour of the twentieth century. Mr. Masterton's novel is both a fascinating epic of the growth of America and a tale of a commanding family in the tradition of the Vanderbilts and the Rockefellers.

Maggie, a brillant first novel by Lena Kennedy is a haunting and compelling story which spans four decades and four generations. It is the life-story of a resilient Cockney woman who marries at age fifteen, and for the next thirty years endures a constant struggle to bring up her four sons and cope with a part-time husband and her determination to "better herself" despite the critical events of the period — the Depression, the Blackshirt marches, the war and the Fifties. Lena Kennedy writes Maggie's story with such sensitivity that we are forced to experience her hardships, feel her grief, sympathize with her loneliness and understand her confusion.

Joseph Hayes, author of the Tony-award-winning play The Desperate Hours, has written in Island on Fire a spell-binding, action-packed story of men and women rising to the challenge of crisis and stark tragedy with stirring courage and unforgettable passion. The setting for his novel is a village gripped in the terror of a volcano exploding with violent rage. The nightmare of the volcano's revenge penetrates the calm lives of the villagers plunging them into a human drama that becomes a profoundly moving encounter with the boundaries of faith, where God remains a mystery and man is forever at the mercy of nature. The unconquerable resolve and courage of Joseph Hayes' rich cast of characters in Island on Fire against the absurd fury of the elements will be deeply etched on the minds of all his readers.

Hospitality House Today

WASHINGTON — It's back to a full hour for Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" program over WITN-TV, Channel 7 from noon to 1 p.m. today.

Summer hair care will be freatured, with guest Hilda Johnson of Atlanta talking about hair care for ladies in the summer and also giving tips on checking hair dryers to see if it is lined with asbestos.

Another guest is Beth Crabtree, editor of the newly published version of "The Journal Of A Secesh Lady," the diary of Catherine Ann Devereux Edmondson, 1860-1866. Also appearing with Ms. Crabtree will be Terry Armistead, editorial assistant, and Mary Moulton Barden, a direct descendent of Catherine Edmonston. The publication is the fruit of 30 years of editing and research.

Music on "Hospitality House" will be provided by gospel singers Kay and Maynard Waters and Treva Tankard. Maynard Waters will also talk about the ministry in "The Barn."

Performing Groups Sought

ATLANTA, GA. — The Southern Arts Federation (SAF) is now in the process of planning for the 1980-81 Performing Arts Touring Program. In-region performing arts groups able to tour within a ten-state region of the Southeast are being asked to contact the SAF immediately.

Consideration will be given to groups within the ten-state region only — North and South Carolina, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Virgina.

Performing groups are selected for participation in the touring program of SAF, and the Federation does not coordinate tours for individual artists.

Interested groups are to write for forms which must be completed and returned prior to the deadline of June 15, 1979. Write to: Lou Hockett, Director, Performing Arts Program, Southern Arts Federation, 225 Peachtree Street, N.E., Suite 712, Atlanta, Georgia, or phone 404-577-7244.

Theater Production Available

COLUMBIA — Stage South, the state theater of South Carolina, will mount a major Southeastern tour of its production of South African playwright Athol Fugard's drama, "Sizwe Banzi Is Dead."

Agencies or groups interested in sponsoring a production of the play during January and February of 1980 are encouraged to contact Melanie Porter or Myrna Rodrigues at Stage South by calling 803-758-7928

For the next two months the Copper Kettle Soul Riders will be sponsoring a special half price discount offer off the regular $30.00 joining fee to anyone in the surrounding area interested in becoming a member of the club.

Members are as follows: William Yarrell, President, Amos Briley, V.P., Eddie Yarrell, Treas., Eddie Chance, Sec., Sharon Sharpe, Assist. Sec., James Brown, Terry Bymun, Billy Clemons, Hank Clemons, Levi Clemons, Larry Ebron, Ivey Garner, Roger Moye, John Streeter, Douglas Teel, Willie Wooten, Lindburgh Joyner, Phillip Perkins.

For more information, contact any of the above members or come and sit in on any of the club meetings held every Wednesday night at the Copper Kettle Clubhouse, Stokes Hwy., from 8:00 P.M. til 10:00 P.M. Call 752-1924.

Ten-Mile Gas Lines, And $2.24 A Gallon Water

By United Press International

In Turkey they have gas lines 10 miles long and the Irish use service stations as parking lots, waiting at their offices for the crucial call that fuel has started flowing.

Gasoline may be cheaper than water in Jeddah — 18 cents a gallon for gas, $2.24 a gallon for water — but that's Saudi Arabia. From other foreign drivers, some paying as much as $2.28 per gallon for gasoline, Americans are getting little sympathy.

Grunted a London cab driver when he heard about Californians lining up for gas, "They had it coming to them." Said another sarcastically, "Well, they need cars out there — they haven't discovered public transport yet."

In Britain, prices almost literally are going off the meter. The highest price most pumps can register is 99.9 cents (for a gallon). Already motorists are paying 1 pound ($2.04) for best brands and there are predictions the cost will be 1.10 pounds ($2.28) by July.

In an attempt to avoid hours of waiting, many Irish drivers park outside gas stations, then walk to work. They keep calling the stations from their offices to find out when gas will be available. As soon as it starts flowing, they run out and fill their tanks, never mind office hours.

UPI correspondent Donal O'Higgins reported from Dublin Friday that he had been unable to buy gasoline for eight days. When fuel is available, purchases are limited to 5 pounds ($10.20) — about 3½ gallons — at a time, although exceptions are made for tourists.

UPI correspondent Christopher P. Winner reported on the endless Turkish lines. "I counted every single mile," he said. "People get up before dawn and just park until the highway station opens at 8 a.m. I wouldn't say they're always that long, for fear of giving Californians a cardiac arrest."

Although the price in Turkey — $1.57 per gallon — is cheaper than in many other countries, it represents a 100 percent increase over the past six months, with no upper limit in sight.

Almost every foreign country outside the Middle East has been hit by the twin pincers of high prices and short supplies.

The Italian government ordered learner drivers to take a test in fuel conservation and in Yugoslavia officials banned autos from the roads six days a month.

Many governments are clamping down on weekend cruising. Last April South Korea banned Sunday gas sales to private cars, and Japan was scheduled to do the same this weekend.

Reasons for the problem include OPEC's continual raising of prices and the disruption of Iran's production by the revolution there. Even Britain cannot fully capitalize on its North Sea oil bonanza because not all the oil is suitable for conversion and much of it is committed to foreign buyers anyway.

The Philippines government has banned gasoline sales at night and newspapers are predicting rationing soon. India is working out with the Soviet Union a plan to swap rice for Russian oil.

Of all the conservation measures, few are as tough as those in South Africa, which has been on OPEC's blacklist for years because of its apartheid policies and which now has lost all supplies from revolutionary Iran.

The government recently decreed that gas stations close at night, Wednesday afternoons and all day Sunday. Nor is hoarding gas in the car trunk permitted. If a policeman catches a motorist topping up on a Sunday from a spare jerrican, the trooper can fine him and he'll almost certainly make the driver pour the gasoline on the ground.

Courts can hit speeding motorists with fines of up to $1,000 or several months in prison.

One country that doesn't have a gasoline problem is China. There are only two gas stations in all of Peking and no lines at either. But then there's scarcely a single private car in the whole of the city.

Pope Names Cardinals

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II has chosen the first cardinals of his reign — 15 prelates including two of his Polish countrymen, a Canadian and a Mexican, but no Americans, Vatican officials announced Saturday.

The new cardinals came from eight countries including Vietnam and the pope said they would receive their traditional red hats June 30 at the first consistory since his election as pontiff last Oct. 16.

The 59-year-old leader of the Roman Catholic Church listed 14 names, retaining one "in pectore" (in the breast), a practice sometimes used to protect churchmen in countries with anti-Catholic regimes.

The other countries named were Italy, France, Ireland and Japan.

John Paul granted the round red hat to Monsignor Franciscek Macharski, the man he personally appointed to be his successor as Archbishop of Krakow, and he filled a traditional cardinal's seat by naming the Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of All Ireland, Tomas O'fiaich.

The nominations will bring the total membership of the College of Cardinals — the body which elects the pope — to 135 and the voters to 121, one over the limit set by the late Pope Paul VI in 1975. Cardinals over 80 have no voting rights.

But John Paul set the June 30 date to coincide with the 80th birthday of Cardinal Frantisek Tomasek, Archbishop of Prague, lowering the number of voters to the prescribed 120.

It will be the first consistory since June 27, 1977, when Pope Paul invested four new cardinals in his sixth and final ceremony.

Quads Born

LOUVAIN, Belgium (AP) — A 26-year-old Belgian woman gave birth to quadruplets Friday after a nearly full-term pregnancy, a hospital spokesman said.

Chris Asselman, a physical education teacher, gave birth to two girls and two boys following a pregnancy of 35 weeks, about one week less than the normal term of nine months. It was the longest pregnancy recorded for quadruplets in Europe, according to a spokesman for St. Raphael Hospital here.

The hospital spokesman said the previous record term of pregnancy for quadruplets in Europe was 34 weeks.

Mrs. Asselman and the four children were reported in good condition following the birth which was completed by Caesarian section.

New Tower For WNCT-TV

The Federal Communications Commission has approved an increase in the height of the WNCT-TV transmission tower to 2,000 feet, according to Blake C. Lewis, Jr., Vice-President and General Manager of the station.

"The new tower will more than double the height of the antenna and make Channel 9 programming available to an additional 100,000 television viewers," Lewis said.

WNCT-TV was the first television station in eastern North Carolina, and is now in its 26th year of broadcasting. It is also the flagship of Park Broadcasting, Inc., owned by Roy H. Park, a Dobson native. Park Broadcasting now consists of 21 broadcast operations across the nation.

Rustling Moves Into The East

By JOHN W. FRECE

Cattlemen say rustling has increased in recent months almost as fast as meat prices have soared in supermarkets across the country.

The problem has spread to the East. Truck-driving descendants of Old West cattle rustlers have invaded central Maryland, stealing and butchering livestock and prompting calls for frontier justice.

"There used to be a law that cattle rustlers would get hung," said 57-year-old Carroll County, Md., farmer Donald T. Folk.

"They ought to hang a few now and wake 'em up a little bit."

The rustling problem is apparently also on the increase in Florida, Colorado and most other cattle-producing states, although statistics are virtually nonexistent and its extent is hard to pin down.

"Typically, we do have increased problems with theft when prices are on the upsurge as they have been the last couple months," said Bill Jones of the National Cattlemen's Association in Denver.

Cattlemen, who were losing as much as $100 a head back in 1974, have intentionally thinned their herds, thus increasing demand and forcing up the price of live beef on the hoof from 40 cents a pound in 1977 to an all-time high of about 75 cents a pound in recent weeks.

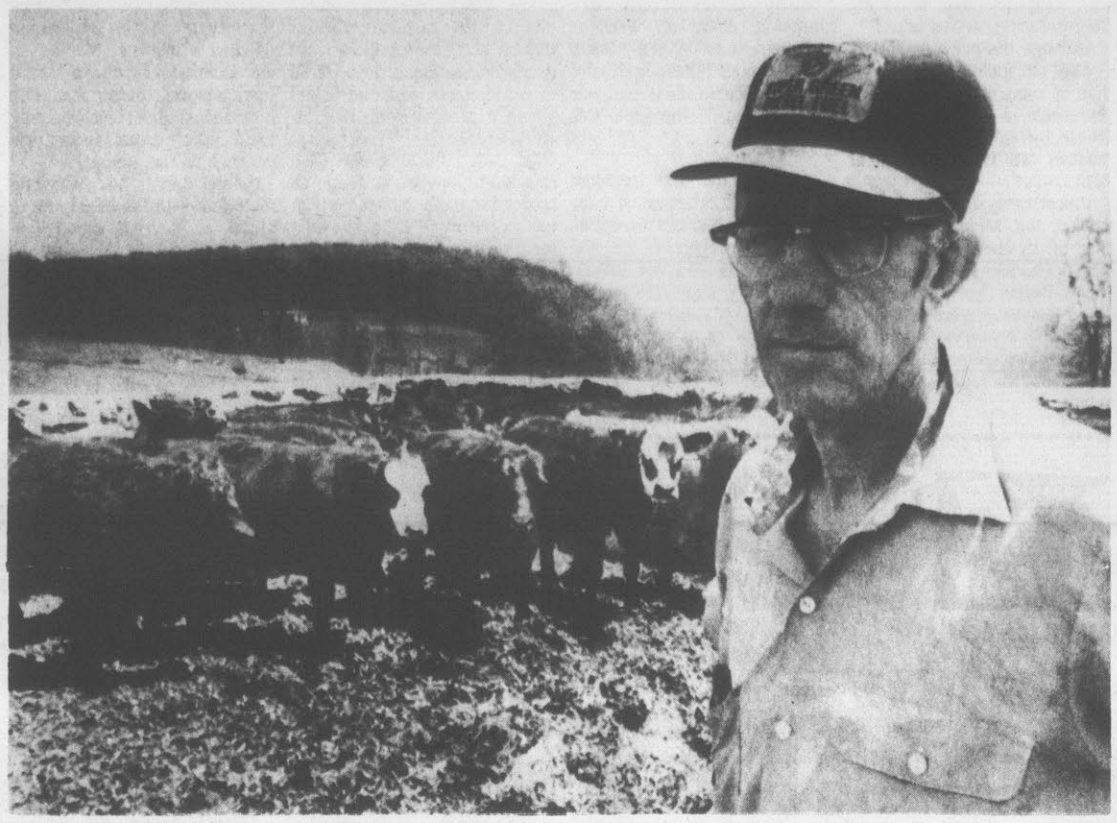

This is the same industry that as recently as five years ago saw some ranchers decide to shoot their own cattle rather than pay the cost of feeding them and then have to sell them later at a loss.

Although Jones said theft reports have been "rather isolated," he said "they have come all the way from Florida — clear across the country."

Don King, general manager of the 14,000-member Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association in Fort Worth, estimated that rustling in the Texas-Oklahoma area is up 30 percent in recent months.

"I suspect in your other cattle producing states it is pretty much of the same thing," he said. "There's a lot of ways of stealing cattle," he said. "We have them stolen almost every way you can imagine."

King's 102-year-old association is so intent on stopping rustling that it pays the salaries of 32 special Texas Rangers who investigate livestock thefts.

"This is a cattle state," he said. "We take a dim view of people stealing our livestock."

Neither police nor cattlemen say the rustling is out of control, although they say the financial impact can be staggering to the producer who loses several tons of beef on the hoof just before it goes to market.

Maryland farmer Folk said he was sound asleep one night this winter at his 180-acre farm near the Pennsylvania border when thieves slipped into his barn a couple hundred yards away and made off with nine Black Angus steers.

"If I had 'em now, they'd be worth a lot of money," Folk said.

The steers, which weighed more than a thousand pounds apiece, were collectively worth about $5,600 when they were taken and would bring about $8,100 now, Folk said.

Walt Bay, a Maryland extension agent, estimated that rustling in two central Maryland counties has affected less than 1 percent of the region's 3,000 or so farmers, but has unquestionably been on the rise since meat prices shot up.

"I think that has a whole lot to do with it," he said. "These animals are real valuable right now."

Newcomer, who thinks some of the rustlers may be carving up their booty to feed themselves, said with chagrin, "Everybody likes a good steak once in a while."

In Western states, cattlemen believe the best way to combat rustling is with a two to 10-year prison sentence, and the next best way is with a hot branding iron — a tradition often not followed by cowpokes in the East.

In Maryland, Folk, for instance, said branding would only help him if someone happened to recognize his brand on a stolen animal at a livestock market. Western states use much more sophisticated branding, registration and inspection systems.

In the East, police and local agriculture officials simply warn farmers to keep closer watch over their herds and their neighbor's property, and to report anyone near their livestock who looks suspicious.

They say cattle grazing in pastures out of eyesight or along major roadways are in the greatest danger of turning up missing.

The open road is equally advantageous to rustlers in Texas where King reports an increase in stolen livestock being taken out-of-state.

Insurance against rustling would simply cost too much, according to both King and Jones of the Cattlemen's Association.

"Unless it is on a real valuable herd sire or stallion or something, or racing type animal that has a tremendous value, then it probably would not be a feasible thing to do," said King.

Folk is one of several dozen Maryland livestock producers to discover in recent months that rising meat prices have made their livestock targets for rustlers.

State police believe the unbranded livestock is often sold at any of several weekly livestock auctions held in small towns nearby, or in Pennsylvania or Virginia.

Sometimes the animals are slaughtered and stripped of their meat right in the farmer's field.

"They leave the head and the hide and the hooves and the meat's gone," said Maryland State Police Det. Sgt. W.L. Newcomer of Frederick.

Folk, who in a lifetime of farming said he had never had livestock stolen before, has been forced to change his methods of operation.

"I got 'em locked up now," he said of his cows. "If you want 'em, you're going to have a problem to get 'em."

ECU Day Camp Schedule Given

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University's annual Summer Day Camp has been set for June 11 — July 7. The camp is sponsored by the ECU Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety.

According to camp directors Gay Blocker and Josephine Saunders, children may be enrolled in the camp for one or more weeks, on a half-day or all-day basis.

The ECU Day Camp is open to children ranging from kindergarten through 12 years of age.

Further details about the camp and application materials are available from "Summer Day Camp," Minges Coliseum, ECU, Greenville, N.C.

Since enrollment will be limited to assure a good staff-camper ratio, early application is advised.

Large Field (35) Set For Indy 500

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — An expanded lineup of 35 cars, the largest field of starters in 46 years, was filled Saturday in an unprecedented special session of qualifying on the eve of one of the most chaotic and controversial Indianapolis 500-mile races in history.

The two drivers added to the usual 33-car lineup were veterans Billy Vukovich and George Snider, who were among eight who took advantage of another chance to qualify under a ruling by a special U.S. Auto Club appeal board.

Five others were too slow, and the eighth, rookie Billy Alsup, went into the wall after two laps of what appeared to be a good qualifying run. Alsup's only injuries were cuts on his right foot.

The 35 cars that will take the green flag Sunday morning averaged 186.737 mph for their four-lap qualifications, nearly 6 mph slower than the starting field last year.

The overall drop in speed was due to a USAC rule change that lowered the allowable manifold pressure.The controversy that stemmed from that move was one of the factors in the defection from USAC by Championship Auto Racing Teams (CART), comprising most of auto racing's big names, and in the monthlong chaos that stretched from Gasoline Alley to federal court.

When qualifications finally opened two weekends ago, the situation was further muddied by charges that some teams were able to override the manifold restrictions and "cheat" their way into the lineup.

The entrants who were given another chance on Saturday had claimed their cars were either victims of earlier inconsistent rule enforcement or were bumped from the original lineup by faster cars whose illegal tactics were undetected.

In any event, USAC agreed to add the other cars to the field if they could match or exceed the slowest qualification speed among the original 33, an average of 183.908 mph by veteran Roger McCluskey.

Vukovich, whose father Bill Vukovich won the 1953-54 races and was killed in a crash while leading the 1955 race, was the first to make an attempt Saturday and earned his 11th start with an average of 187.042 in his Watson-Offenhauser.

"I'm glad I got another chance to qualify, but I was still apprehensive because I still had to go out and do it," the 35-year-old Vukovich said afterwards.

Snider, 38, earned his 15th straight start with a 185.319 run in his Lightning-Offenhauser, despite brushing his right tires against the wall near the end of his third lap.

"I took in pretty easy after that," said Snider, whose fourth lap dipped to under 181 mph. "I was just hoping nothing would fall off this bucket."

Besides Alsup, whose first two laps were over 189, the others who failed to qualify Saturday were Al Loquasto, Jerry Karl, Larry Cannon, John Martin and Dana Carter.

The largest field in Indy history was 42 cars in 1933, but a driver and mechanic were killed in qualifications and two other drivers and another mechanic died during the race that year, and the lineup was lowered to 33 in 1934. The number of 33 starters was based on the old American Automobile Association (the sanctioning group before USAC) safety standard of one car for each 400 feet of track.

Adding two extra cars was not seen a significant safety risk.

"We don't consider it a problem at all," said chief steward Tom Binford, who addressed the combatants in the annual drivers' meeting following Saturday's qualification session. "But you have to keep aware of where you are at all times. This has been an excellent month on the track. Let's keep it that way. Let's keep it safe."

The 35 cars, led by pole-sitter Rick Mears on the inside of the front row, will take the green flag in 11 rows of three cars each and a 12th row of Vukovich and Snider.

The only rookie in the field is Howdy Holmes, who qualified on the inside of the fifth row next to teammate Janet Guthrie, the ninth-place finisher last year who will be making her third start.

Alsup, who was trying for his first Indy start, said the crash occurred when "the car suddenly bottomed out, like a spring had gone down.

"The rear end started hopping and the back slid out. I hit the brakes and the pedal went all the way to the floor ...nothing. I tried to pump them up, but by then I was gone."

Alsup's Eagle-Offenhauser went out of control coming out of the first turn. He slid 560 feet, hit the wall, slid another 60 feet, hit the wall again, went another 300 feet and struck the wall for the third time, did a complete spin while sliding another 360 feet and hit the wall again, losing all four wheels. The car skidded along the wall another 420 feet and came to rest in turn two.

The last legal challenge to the race was settled later Saturday when a Superior Court judge threw out a lawsuit by car owner Wayne Woodward.

A qualification attempt by Dick Ferguson, driving for Woodward, was disallowed by USAC a week earlier for altering the wastegate. Woodward took the matter to court immediately, rather than going through the appeal procedure the others did.

Judge Michael Dugan on Friday ordered USAC to give Woodward a hearing, and his appeal was turned down Saturday morning before he went back to court.

Woodward is "a voluntary member of a voluntary club ...and courts should not intervene unless there are very unusual circumstances," Dugan said in his ruling Saturday afternoon.

Bench's Hit Lifts Reds

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Bench doubled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and Fred Norman pitched a six-hitter as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1 Saturday.

The Reds, who had been held to only three hits through six innings by loser Don Sutton, 5-4, broke a 1-1 tie with two runs in the seventh.

Dan Driessen started the winning burst with a one-out single to right and scored on Bench's double to right. Bench moved to third on a single by Ray Knight and scored on second baseman Davey Lopes' throwing error.

The Dodgers scored in the fourth on a double by Reggie Smith and a two-out single by Dusty Baker. The Reds tied it in the sixth on Ken Griffey's fourth homer of the season, a two-out shot over the right-center field fence.

Norman, 2-4, who hadn't started a game in two weeks, pitched his second complete game of the season and only the fifth for Cincinnati this year. The 36-year-old left-hander walked one and struck out six and was in command except for the fourth inning.

In the fourth, Smith doubled with one out and moved to third on an infield hit by Steve Garvey. Norman struck out Ron Cey but Baker lined a 1-2 pitch into left field for a single to drive in Smith. After Joe Ferguson walked to fill the bases, Thomas flied out to end the inning.

Sutton faced just one batter over the minimum for the first five innings. Cesar Geronimo reached base on an error to start the sixth, but Norman then bunted into a double play. Griffey followed with his homer.

Driessen singled with one out in the seventh and scored easily on Bench's double. After Knight's single, Dave Collins grounded to short but Lopes threw wildly to first in trying to complete what would have been an inning-ending double play.

Bench finished the day with three hits in four at bats and was credited by Norman with doing "an excellent job of calling the game."

John's Winning Streak Stopped

CLEVELAND (AP) — Bobby Bonds led off with the first home run of the season off Tommy John and added two doubles as the Cleveland Indians ended the previously unbeaten New York left-hander's winning streak at nine games Saturday by defeating the New York Yankees 8-4.

Bonds lifted John's second pitch in the bottom of the first inning over the center field fence — the first home run off John since last Sept. 3. Gary Alexander also homered off John, who was chased in the fifth inning and contrbuted to his own downfall with a throwing error that cost him two unearned runs.

Cleveland's Rick Waits, 6-3, scattered 10 hits, including a two-run homer by Cliff Johnson in the fifth.

The Yankees tied it 1-1 in the third when Chris Chambliss doubled, went to third on Bucky Dent's single and scored on Mickey Rivers' sacrifice fly.

The Indians went ahead to stay with two runs in the bottom of the third. Tom Veryzer singled, went to second on a wild pitch, moved to third on a grounder and scored when John knocked down Bonds' grounder and threw it past the plate.

Mets Outslug Pirates, 10-8

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Henderson lined a two-run homer to straightaway center field in the seventh inning, carrying the New York Mets to a 10-8 victory Saturday over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Willie Montanez led off the seventh with a walk off Pirate reliever Kent Tekulve, 2-5, and was sacrificed to second. Henderson then lined a 2-1 delivery from Tekulve over the 410-foot in dead center for his second homer of the season, giving the Mets a 9-8 lead and putting them in front for the third and final time in the game. Joel Youngblood homered in the eighth for the Mets' final run.

They had taken a 5-1 lead in the third on a two-run singles by Lee Mazzilli and Richie Hebner and an RBI single by John Stearns, all with two out.

The Pirates tied it in the fifth with three runs on an RBI single by Ed Ott and a two-run single by pinch-hitter Bill Robinson. The Mets went ahead 7-5 with runs in the fifth on John Stearns' RBI grounder and in the sixth on Mazzilli's bunt single, with Frank Taveras at third.

The Pirates forged ahead 8-7 with three runs in the seventh on Omar Moreno's two-run single and third and fourth RBIs of the game, and a sacrifice fly by Willie Stargell.

Skip Lockwood, 1-5, gained his first victory of the season by shutting down the Pirates over the final two innings.

Matthews Leads Braves To Win

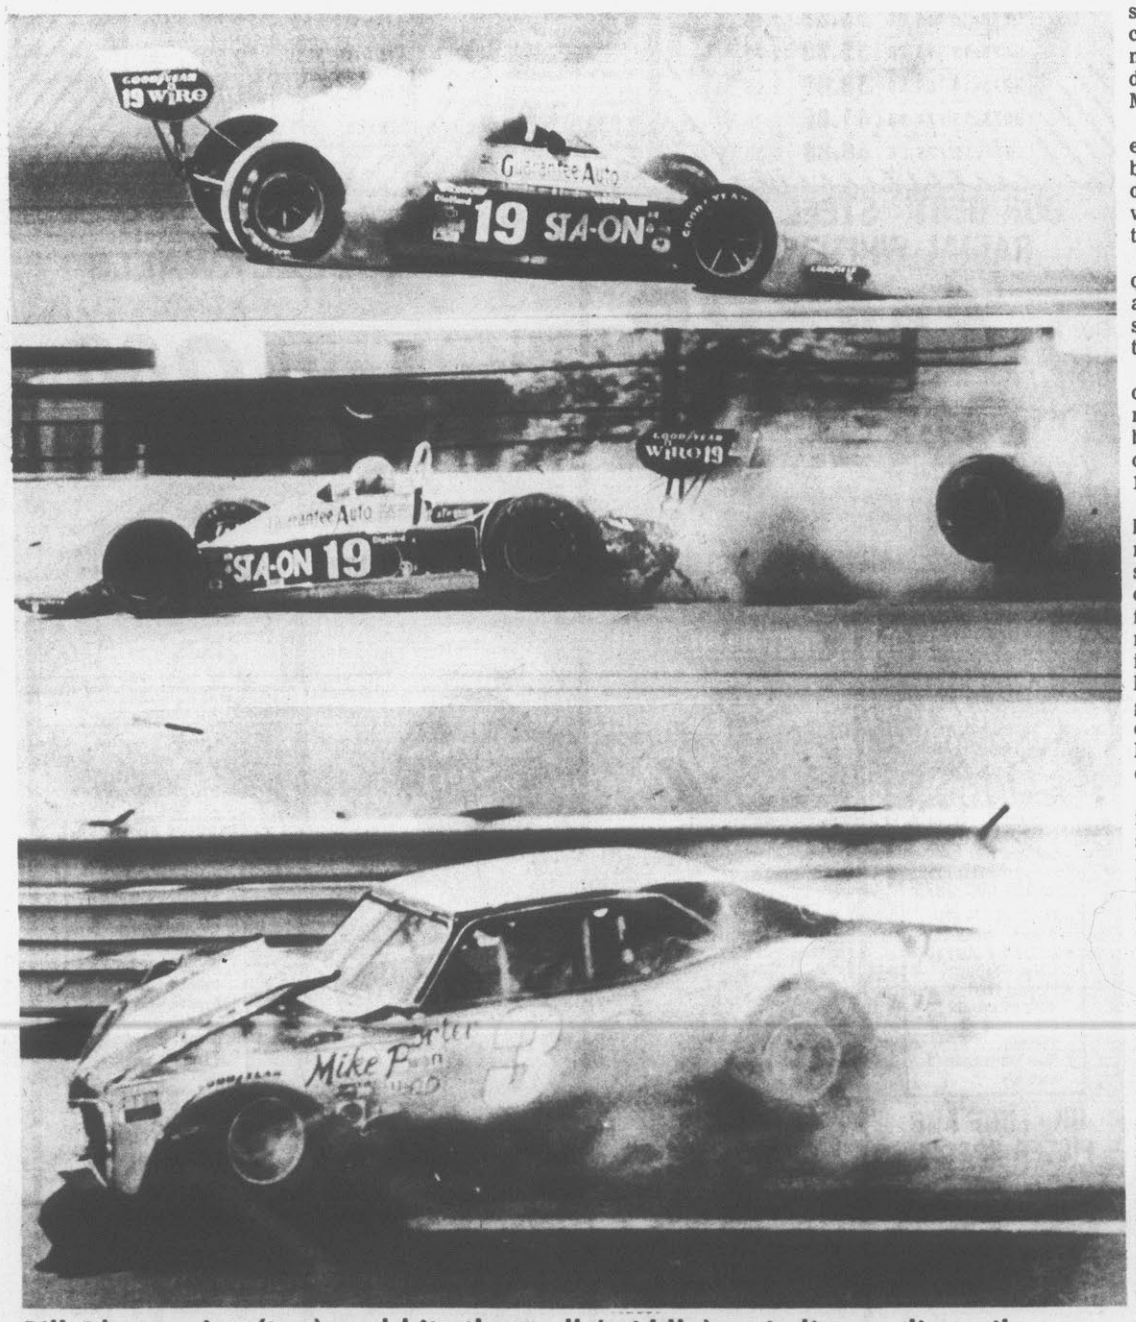

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gary Matthews, who hit a two-run homer earlier, greeted Tom Griffin with a two-run single in the ninth inning, driving in the tying and winning runs and lifting the Atlanta Braves to a 5-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

Pinch-hitter Charlie Spikes triggered the winning rally with a leadoff double off Dave Roberts, 0-1. Jerry Royster reached first on Roberts' fielding error, with Spikes holding second, and both runners advanced on Mike Lum's sacrifice.

Matthews, whose 10th homer of the season had given the Braves a 2-0 lead in the third inning, then jumped on Griffin with his game-winning single.

Rowland Office singled, stole second and scored on Pepe Frias' single for a 3-0 lead in the fourth off Ed Halicki, who left after six innings with a strained left knee.

Watson Holds Off Challengers, Builds Four-Shot Memorial Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Tom Watson, the outstanding player in the game for the past two seasons, turned back a pair of challenges and retained a commanding, 4-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the Memorial Golf Tournament.

A round of par 72 was good enough for Watson to repel the bids of host Jack Nicklaus and old pro Miller Barber, both of whom self-destructed at one time or another.

Watson, with a 54-hole total of 214, 2 shots under par, managed to finish the round as he started — 4 strokes in front of the frustrated field.

That lead twice dwindled to one when Nicklaus made his move on the front side. But he backed off with bogeys on three of four holes beginning on the 10th.

Then it was Barber, the chunky old pro they call "X," who made a move at the gritty Watson, the season's leading money-winner and gunning for a fourth title of the year. Barber ripped off four back-nine birdies, was within 2 strokes of the lead, then blew to a double bogey-6 on the 18th hole on the extremely difficult, 7,101-yard Muirfield Village Golf Club course.

The 48-year-old Barber finished second alone at 218, 2 shots over par, after a 71 in weather that remained cool and breezy, but was a distinct improvement of the horrible conditions that plagued the tournament Friday.

Nicklaus, with a 74, was tied for third at 220, 6 shots back. He shared the position with Lon Hinkle and Tom Kite. Kite also had a 74 while Hinkle matched par 72.

Cross-handed putter Bruce Lietzke and Lanny Wadkins, a two-time winner this season, were next at 221, 5 shots over par and 7 back of Watson. Lietzke had a 72 and Wadkins a 73.

Arnold Palmer shot a 74 and was at 230. U.S. Open champ Andy North had 76-231, PGA titleholder John Mahaffey 72-228 and Masters king Fuzzy Zoeller 71-224.

Watson, who has finished first of second in seven events this season has assured himself of becoming the first player in history to win $300,000 in three consecutive seasons. All he needs to do is finish the tournament.

His lead appeared in danger when Nicklaus, the Memorial tournament founder, course designer, host and moving force, made a move early in the round. He birdied three of the first five holes and only was a stroke back when he got his second shot in the water and made double bogey-6 on the sixth hole.

But Watson came back to him. Tom also made double bogey. His was on the par-3 eighth hole where he was plugged in a bunker, came out long and 3-putted.

That cut the lead to one again, but Nicklaus took himself out of it with his string of bogeys beginning on the 10th.

It was about that time that Barber bewan to move. He birdied the 11th and 13th then 2-putted for birdie 4 on the 15th while Watson had to scramble out of the woods to make par. Now he was within 2 strokes of the leading Watson, who was playing in the same group.

Watson cut a 4-iron shot to within 18 inches of the cup on the 17th and Miller, hitting next, got inside of him by a foot. Both birdied and the margin remained 2.

But Barber chopped up the 18th, shanking one shot, requiring 4 to reach the green and then 2-putting for the double bogey that left Watson 4 in front and in command.

"I guess I got excited about that birdie on 17 and tried to get a little cute," Barber said.

Wake's Hallberg, Buckeye Team Win

By SKIP FOREMAN

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (AP) — Ohio State rallied from five places behind to capture the 82nd NCAA Golf Championships Saturday at the Bermuda Run Golf and Country Club.

Wake Forest golfer Gary Hallberg took individual honors by shooting a final-round 73 for a four-day total of 287.

The Buckeyes, in winning their first championship since 1945, finished with a combined score of 1189, or 37 strokes over team par. Defending champion Oklahoma State, which led after three rounds of play, took second with a score of 1191.

Wake Forest started the day in third and finished in the same spot with 1196. Brigham Young took fourth place at 1198. New Mexico dropped from fourth to finish fifth at 1202.

Oral Roberts and North Carolina tied for sixth with scores of 1206. The Tar Heels led the tournament through the first two rounds but fell into a tie for fifth with the Buckeyes at the end of Friday's play.

Hallberg, a junior from Barrington, Ill., fired the low round of the day. Bobby Clampett of Brigham Young finished 3 strokes behind Hallberg at 290. He fired a 75 on the day.

Ohio State's Rick Borg, a junior from Columbus, Ohio, shared low round honors with Hallberg, also shooting a 73. He finished at 303.

Mike Bender of California State-Stanislaus, playing as an independent, tied for third with Wayne DeFrancesco of LSU. Both men finished at 295.

Four golfers were tied for fifth, including Bob Tway of Oklahoma State, Britt Harrison of Oklahoma State, Joey Sindelar of Ohio State and John McGough of North Carolina. All shot 297.

"I just wanted to play as solid as I could to help the team out," Hallberg said. "I tried not to think of the individual championship."

Hallberg said the emphasis on the team championship helped him shoot one of the two low rounds of the day, a one-over par 73.

Hallberg said once he learned the team's status while he was on the course, he tried harder for the team than for himself. He added that when he knew he had a chance to wrap up the individual crown, he bogeyed his last two holes.

"I'm pretty excited about this individual win. Sure, I was trying to play well as an individual, but from the team concept, I feel like a lot of the other guys out here. They wanted to win, we wanted to win, and we finished third," Hallberg said.

All week long, talk around the course centered around the fact that Wake Forest was playing on its home course, despite the fact the team has never actually competed on the course.

Next year, the talk is likely to surface once again. Ohio State will be the host team in 1980.

Little League

Pepsi-Cola 4, Moose 3

Pepsi-Cola choked off a Moose rally in the bottom of the sixth inning to save a 4-3 victory in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday.

Pepsi climbed to 4-1 with the win, while the Moose fell off to 0-5 in defeat.

The Moose scored first, getting a run in the first. Charlie Littleton walked and moved up when Greg Jones walked. Ron Deyton singled and Daryl Perkins hit a sacrifice fly to score Littleton.

Pepsi came up with three in the fourth inning. Kendall Phillips reached on a two-base error and took third on a wild pitch. Joey Hallow walked, as did Clark Stallings, loading the bases. a Walk to Lee Cox scored Phillips, and a passed ball brought in Hallow. Stallings scored on a wild pitch for a 3-1 lead.

Pepsi got the winning run in the top of the sixth. Cox walked and moved to second on a wild pitch. Two more walks loaded the bases, and another wild pitch brought in Cox.

The Moose then rallied for two runs in the bottom of the sixth and had the bases loaded when the final out was made.

Lions 15, Kiwanis 1

The Lions romped to a 15-1 victory over the Kiwanis in the North State Little League yesterday.

The Lions climbed to 5-0 with the win, dropping the Kiwanis to 2-3.

The Lions got all they needed in the first inning, scoring twice. Patrick Rand reached on an error and Tony Taylor walked. William Ward also walked, loading the bases. A wild pitch scored Rand and a passed ball let Taylor score.

The Lions added four more in the second, another four in the third, one in the fourth, and four more in the sixth. Rand accounted for all four runs in the sixth, hitting a grand-slam home run.

The lone Kiwanis run came in the sixth. William Smith reached on an error and stole second. A wild pitch and a passed ball brought him the rest of the way.

Auto Specialty 10, Dr. Pepper 9

Auto Specialty opened the Prep League regular season yesterday with a 10-9 nine-inning win over Dr. Pepper.

Auto Specialty scored its first run in the first. David Jester singled and stole second. He scored on a hit by Bill Messick.

From there, Auto Specialty added three in the second and five in the fourth for its first nine runs.

Dr. Pepper got its scoring started in the third with three runs. Jeff Guloti walked and stole second. He took third on a wild pitch. Andre Wooten reached on a two-base error, scoring Guloti. Marc Gatlin then hit a two-run homer.

Dr. Pepper added one in the fourth, two in the fifth, with Gatlin hitting another homer, this one a solo shot, and tied it up with three in the sixth.

Auto Specialty broke it up in the ninth with a run. With two away, Mike Kinley singled and stole both second and third. He scored on John Roveris' single to win the game.

Jester and Roveris led Auto Specialty with two hits, while James Smith had four and Gatlin had two for Dr. Pepper.

Jeanette Cox 13, Gr. Hardware 8

Jeanette Cox Realty rolled up a 13-8 victory over Greenville Hardware in its opening Prep League game yesterday.

Cox scored first with a run in the bottom of the first. Eric Woodworth walked and stole second. He moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Carlton Wilson's single.

Greenville Hardware tied it up with one in the top of the second. Ronnie Moore singled and stole second. Two wild pitches brought him around.

Cox added two in the second, while Greenville Hardware picked up one in the third. Cox added two more in the bottom of the third for a 5-2 lead. Greenville came back with five in the fourth for a 7-5 lead, but saw it tied by Cox, which scored twice in the fourth.

Cox then added two in the fifth for a 9-7 lead that was never overcome. Jeff Stallings reached on an error and stole second. A passed ball moved him to third and he scored on Mike Iaboni's single. Iaboni stole second, moved to third on Raju Singh's walked and scored when Wilson reached on an error.

They added four more in the sixth, while Greenville Hardware picked up one more in the seventh.

Billy Godley and Moore each had two hits for Greenville Hardware, while Ed Farley had three and Iaboni had two for Cox.

Babe Ruth

Planters Bank 6, Aaction Movers 4

Planters Bank won its second Babe Ruth League game yesterday, downing Aaction Movers, 6-4. It was the first game of the year for Aaction.

Aaction scored first, getting three in the second inning. Scott Wilson reached on an error and Bill Owens singled. Keith Stocks singled in Wilson, and a hit by Jeff Wilson brought in Owens. Billy Kittrell singled to score Stocks.

Palnters got its first run in the third. Jim Whitehurst reached on a fielder's choice and Mont Carter singled. Gordon Douglas then singled to score Whitehurst.

Planters added two more in the fourth and pushed ahead for good with two in the fifth. Douglas led off the fifth, reaching on an error. Crowell Pope followed with a double. A wild pitch scored Douglas, and Pope came in on an error for a 5-4 lead. The other run came in the sixth.

Aaction got its fourth run in the top of the fifth.

Keith Phillips led the Planters hitting with two, and was the game's only hitter with more than one.

Pepsi-Cola 9, Wachovia Bank 4

Pepsi-Cola evened its Babe Ruth League record at 1-1 with a 9-4 win over Wachovia Bank, which opened its season with the contest.

Wachovia drew first blood, getting a run in the top of the second. Bernie Carraway walked, stole second and took third on a wild pitch. He was sacrificed home by Edwin Hall.

Pepsi came back with two in the third. Billy Brannigan reached on a two-base error and moved up on an out, scoring on Emmett Walsh's single. Ricky Owens reached on an error and both advanced on a passed ball. Mike Holloman singled in Walsh.

After Wachovia struck for three in the fourth to take a 4-2 lead, Pepsi came back with four in the fifth for a 6-4 lead.

Terry Smith led off, reaching on an error and scored when Walsh doubled. Owens walked and Holloman singled in Walsh. Owens scored when Alan Dickens grounded out, and a hit by Lance Searl brought in Holloman.

Pepsi added three more in the sixth.

Home Builders 2, Coca-Cola 1

Home Builders took its second Babe Ruth League victory yesterday, downing Coca-Cola, 2-1. It was the second loss for Coke.

Home Builders got its first run in the second. Ashley Ferrell walked and Danny Woods singled. Both advanced on a passed ball and Horace Barrett reached on an error, scoring Ferrell.

The other run came in the fourth. Roger Williams reached on an error and moved to third on another misplay. A wild pitch scored him.

The lone Coke run came in the fifth. Paul MacMillian reached on an error and stole second. He took third on an out and scored when Steve Holloman reached on an error.

Williams allowed only one hit by Coke, while loser Jeff Porter gave up just two to Home Builders.

Wilson, Cruz Pace Royals' Win

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Willie Wilson drove in three runs and Todd Cruz knocked in two as the Kansas City Royals defeated the Minnesota Twins 7-4 Saturday.

The Royals had leads of 3-0 and 5-1 before Twins rookie John Castino slammed a two-run homer off Rich Gale, 4-3, with no outs in the seventh inning. Larry Gura replaced Gale and struck out four of the next six batters and later needed relief help himself.

A pinch-hit double by Jose Morales pulled the Twins to within one run in the eighth before the Royals put the game away with two runs in the ninth.

Angels Trip Chisox, 8-4

CHICAGO (AP) — Dan Ford smashed two doubles and Brian Downing and Rick Miller each delivered two-run singles Saturday to lead the California Angels to an 8-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Frank Tanana, 4-3, gained the victory but needed seventh-inning help from Mark Clear, who earned his fourth save. Rookie Fred Howard, making his major league debut, took the loss.

Howell's Homer Leads Toronto

TORONTO (AP) — Roy Howell hit a three-run homer with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning Saturday, lifting the Toronto Blue Jays to a 7-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Howell's shot over the right field fence was his third homer of the season and came off reliever Bill Campbell, 2-2, who put down a Toronto threat in the seventh inning and had retired all seven batters he faced.

The Red Sox, who erased a four-run deficit in the top of the seventh, took a 6-4 lead in the top of the ninth on Rick Burleson's two-run single. But with two outs in the bottom of the inning, Alfredo Griffin beat out an infield hit and then beat the throw to second on Bob Bailor's grounder up the middle. Howell then ripped an 0-2 pitch from Campbell over the 375-foot sign.

Seattle Hopes Defense Will Be Key In Third Game Of Series

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics, successful with the pressure defense, will continue to use it against the National Basketball Association defending champions, the Washington Bullets, in the league's championship series.

Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens is certain that the pressure defense is the key to Sunday's Game 3 of the best-of-seven series, tied at 1-1. Game 4 also will be in Seattle Tuesday night.

"We did it all season," Wilkens said Friday on a plane returning here from Washington. "It has become the trademark of what we have to do to win. They're going to try to counter it. You've got to pick your spot. But we can use different combinations to cross them up."

Forward Paul Silas, still savoring Thursday night's 92-82 Seattle victory, thinks the Sonics can build an insurmountable lead at home. "If we win two games in a row, there ain't no way they'll come back," he said.

When the series opened last Sunday, the Sonics were sluggish after a coast-to-coast plane trip the previous day, and, despite a fourth-quarter surge, lost 99-97 on a controversial foul with no time left.

Unable to handle the Sonics' defense, which Washington called a zone, the Bullets produced some of their worst offensive statistics of the season, including their lowest point total. They scored only 30 points in the second half, 14 in the fourth quarter.

"We are the No.1 defensive team and when we trap, we can hurt them," said guard Gus Williams, who has scored 55 points in the two games. "As long as we play a trap, it will cause them problems."

If the Bullets are going to solve the Sonics' defense, "our coaches are going to have to come up with a way for us to beat that zone," said Washington's Elvin Hayes.

Scoring Error Keeps Rankin From Sharing Lead

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Rookie Lynn Adams shot a one-under-par 69 Saturday and took advantage of an error on the scorecard of veteran Judy Rankin to move into the lead going into Sunday's final round of the $100,000 LPGA Corning Classic golf tournament.

Adams, with a 215, held a one-stroke lead over Rankin, Donna Caponi Young, Penny Pulz and Alice Ritzman after three rounds of the 72-hole Ladies Professional Golf Association event.

Amy Alcott, Sally Little, Sandy Spuzich and Bonny Bryant trailed Adams by two strokes going into the final round at the Corning Country Club golf course.

"I'm in my first year on the tour, and I don't mind admitting it. I am not ready to win. For some reason, I'm scared to win," said Adams, a 28-year-old pro from Kingsville, Texas. "I will be going out there to win, but you have a feeling in your own mind when you are ready. When I do win, I want to win consistently. I just don't think my golf game is at the caliber right now to constantly shoot the numbers I am shooting."

Rankin, the first player ever to win $100,000 in a season on the LPGA tour, remained in contention for her 26th tour victory. She lost the lead because she signed a scorecard indicating she bogeyed the 16th hole, a hole she actually parred.

"I don't see how that can be," Rankin said of the error. "I even added it up." Because of the error, one stroke was added to her score.

Pearson Watches As Bonnett Does Driving

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Cars fielded by the Wood Brothers racing team have settled into the pole positon in the last 11 straight NASCAR Grand National events at the Charlotte Motor Speedway, and the familiar red-and-white Woods' Mercury will be in that front row spot again when the green flag falls for the World 600 stock car race at 12:30 p.m. Sunday.

But David Pearson, who coaxed the Mercury to a track record pole run of 161.355 mph for last October's National 500, won't be behind the wheel of No. 21 as he was in the other 11 races.

Pearson and the Wood Brothehrs parted ways earlier this year and, while Pearson watches the 600-mile chase as a spectator, Neil Bonnett will be riding for the Woods.

Bonnett, who was hired by the Stuart, Va.-based Woods after their split with Pearson, grabbed the third victory of his career for the Woods last week in the Mason-Dixon 500 at Dover, Del.

Bonnett, of Hueytown, Ala., put the Mercury on the pole Wednesday with a four-lap average speed of 160.125 mph on the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

"Bonnett did an excellent job in qualifying for his limited experience in the car and the pressure he was under," Cale Yarborough said after he qualified for the fifth starting spot in his Oldsmobile.

"But he didn't surprise me. I caught timed laps just before the track closed for qualifying and I knew what he could do," Yarborough said.

"I think Neil did a hell of a job," said Darrell Waltrip, World 600 defending champion.

"There's just no other way to put it. I know there were a lot of people who didn't expect him to do it, especially since he was slow in practice."

"But I've seen Pearson be a second off in practice and go out and do what Neil did. That's just how good the car is. They have something super going here and it looks like if any of us want to win a pole here, we'd getter get in No. 21," Waltrip said.

Richard Petty, in a Chevrolet, will have the other front-row spot for Sunday's race. Lining up behind Bonnett and Petty will be Waltrip, Benny Parsons, Yarborough, Donnie Allison, Bobby Allison, Buddy Baker and 33 other drivers.

A total purse of $363,000 is up for grabs in the Wold 600. At 600 miles, the races is the longest on the 30-race NASCAR Grand National circuit.

Waltrip Wins Saturday Race

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The lead changed hands 30 times, but Darrell Waltrip came out the winner in Saturday's Sun Drop 300.

The second-place driver was John Anderson, who spun out in the first turn at the Charlotte Motor Speedway in one of the last laps. But he managed to re-enter the race.

Rusty Wallace was the third-place finisher, Dave Marcis came in fourth and Morgan Shepherd finished fifth.

Waltrip pushed his Nova to an average speed of 131.243 mph in winning the race. It was a record for a sportsman-type race at the speedway in the 300-mile category. He took home $13,260 in winnings.

The caution flag went up seven times, and four cars were forced out of the race because of accidents. No drivers were injured.

However, Kevin Meyer, a member of Mike Riley's pit crew, was struck by a skidding car driven by Roy Chatham. Meyer's injuries were described as minor, and he was treated at the track hospital and released.

Thomas Is In Field

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Ronnie Thomas of Christianburg, Va., didn't drive his Chevrolet fast enough in qualifying to make the 40-car field for the $363,000 World 600 stock car race.

But when the 600-mile clash starts at 12:30 p.m. Sunday the 1.5-mile Charlotte Motor Speedway, Thomas will be on the track, at the back of the pack, in position No. 41.

A spot was added for Thomas because he is currently among the top 20 drivers in points accumlated in previous races in the Winston Cup Grand National series. A special provision in the World 600 rules allows a top-20 driver who didn't make the field to get a spot at the back.

Thomas will start 39 cars behind Neil Bonnett, who will start on the pole by virtue of his qualifying speed Wednesday of 160.125 mph in the Wood Brothers' Mercury.

Qualifying for the World 600 ended Friday with the final 10 spots filled. Lennie Pond led Friday's drivers, pushing his Chevrolet to a lap of 157.348 mph.

FISHERIES BIOLOGISTS WITH the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission are trying to learn whether some of the state's largemouth bass populations are being overharvested. They have begun a bass exploitation study on Lake Townshend to test a method for determining how fast the legal bass are being removed from the lake.

"If this technique proves successful, we can determine the exploitation rate on larger lakes and reservoirs as well," said Roger Jones, fishery biologist from Burlington.

Frank McBride, another biologist and co-leader of the project, said the study involves collecting and tagging legal bass, then monitoring the rate at which they are taken by fishermen.

"The study is carried out by collecting legal-sized largemouth bass with electrofishing boats. These fish are tagged and released back into the lake," Jones said. He also stated that a special tournament was held at the lake to increase tagging efforts.

Several bass clubs were asked to participate in the event and their catches were tagged and released.

The study will include a year-long creel survey at Lake Townshend. "On selected dates, Greensboro city lake wardens and personnell from the Wildlife Commission's Division of Inland Fisheries will interview fishermen to learn how many tagged fish are being removed," Jones said.

In addition to the interviews, a tag depository will be placed at the lake's access point so fishermen who catch tagged bass on non-interview days can have that information added to the study.

According to McBride, "Many of the municipal lakes in the Piedmont receive considerable fishing pressure and we believe the information we gain from this study will help us manage them to provide the best fishing possible."

Both biologists stressed the need for the fishermen on Lake Townshend to cooperate with them and the city lake wardens in making the effort successful.

TWO GREENVILLE FISHERMEN got in on some hot blue fishing last week on the Chesapeake Bay.

Daniel Bullock and David Williams from Greenville, along with James Hill of Petersburg, Va., hauled in around 50 blues in 2½ hours of fishing last Wednesday.

The fish weighed between 10 and 21 pounds each.

A WINTERVILLE ANGLER, William C. Byrd III, will be awarded a citation in the North Carolina Saltwater Fishing Tournament for a 70-pound wahoo he caught off Morehead City on May 12.

The citation will be awarded by the North Carolina Department of Commerce.

Just Happy To Get The Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

A no-hitter would have been a nice birthday present for Ross Baumgarten but he got what he really wanted — a win.

"We're here to win games, not pitch no-hitters," Baumgarten, who will be 24 years old Sunday, said after allowing one hit in eight innings — Bobby Grich's leadoff double in the seventh — as the Chicago White Sox rolled to a 6-1 triumph over the California Angels and Nolan Ryan Friday night.

"He was thinking that I'd take the first pitch since we were behind," said Grich. "Actually, he came two inches from throwing a no-hitter."

In other American League action, the Seattle Mariners swept a doubleheader from the Texas Rangers 3-2 and 5-3, the Kansas City Royals edged the Minnesota Twins 4-3 and the Milwaukee Brewers nipped the Oakland A's 3-2. The Baltimore-Detroit, Boston-Toronto and New York-Cleveland games were rained out.

Baumgarten allowed the Angels an unearned run, walked eight, struck out five and was replaced by Randy Scarbery after walking the first two batters in the ninth.

"I'm not disappointed in being taken out," said the hometown product from the Chicago suburb of Highland Park, Ill. "I wasn't helping the team much by walking eight. That's the most people I've walked in my life."

Lamar Johnson provided most of the White Sox' offense with a single, double and triple, driving in four runs for the second consecutive game. He singled a run across in the second inning and added a two-run triple on the fourth and an RBI double in the sixth.

Mariners 3-5, Rangers 2-3

Leon Roberts, who had three singles in the opener, belted a two-run homer as Seattle won the nightcap behind the eight-hit pitching of Rick Honeycutt. In the opener, Seattle starter Mike Parrott went 62-3 innings, yielding four hits, before getting relief help from Byron McLaughlin and Shane Rawley.

Roberts' second-inning homer erased a 2-0 Texas lead in the nightcap and the Mariners went ahead in the third on a single by Ruppert Jones, an error and Dan Meyer's single. Willie Horton and Bruce Bochte added RBI singles in the fifth and ninth innings while Bochte and Julio Cruz delivered RBI singles in the opener.

"I think we have the best young arms in the league," said Seattle Manager Darrell Johnson.

Royals 4, Twins 3

Amos Otis had three hits and drove in two runs, including the game-winner in the ninth inning. Otis doubled off Minnesota relief ace Mike Marshall to score Willie Wilson, who led off the ninth with his second triple of the game. Marshall also yielded the tying run in the eighth on a double by Otis, who had three hits, and Pete LaCock's single. Darrell Porter homered for the Royals off Minnesota starter Roger Erickson.

Brewers 3, A's 2

Gorman Thomas singled home the winning run with two out in the eighth inning and Sixto Lezcano clubbed a pair of home runs, lifting Mike Caldwell to his first victory since April 29. Loser Bob Lacey, who relieved starter Craig Minetto in the seventh, walked Lezcano with two out in the eighth and Paul Molitor singled him to second. Thomas, with just three hits in his previous 39 times at bat, also singled to break the tie.

Lezcano, playing for the first time in a week because of a sprained wrist, hit his seventh and eighth home runs of the season.

White Oak Tops Greene Central

SNOW HILL — White Oak High School eliminated Greene Central from the State 3-A Baseball playoffs Friday night, gaining a 4-1 victory over the Rams.

Greene Central scored first in the game, getting a run in the second. Chip Hardy reached on a bunt single and scored when Cohen Cox singled.

But the Vikings came back with two in the third to take the lead for good. After two were out, Charles Cannady got a two-strike single and Richard Mattock followed with a walk. Charlie Farmville singled in Cannady, and a pair of errors allowed Mattocks to score.

The third White Oak run came in the fourth inning. Jeff Morton walked, moved to third on a hit and scored on another Ram error.

The final run, in the sixth, came on a homer by Louie Meadows.

Lady Rams Rip New Bern, 15-7

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's girls' softball team won their opening game in the State High School playoffs Friday, downing New Bern, 15-7.

New Bern pushed over three runs in the top of the first inning, but Greene Central countered that with five in their half of the frame. The Lady Bears tied it up with two in the top of the second, but the Lady Rams matched that in the bottom of the frame for a 7-5 lead.

Greene Central then put it away with six in the fourth, and added two more in the sixth. New Bern got one each in the fifth and sixth.

Lynn Shackleford was the winning pitcher.

Tootle and Battle each had two hits to lead New Bern. Martin added a two-run homer in the first inning, while Williams hit a solo blast in the fifth.

Greene Central was led by Gail Jones with three hits, one of them a triple. Shackleford, Sharon Suggs, Letha Taylor and Melody Ham each had two hits.

Ham's included a triple and a two-run homer, the latter in the second inning. Lisa Speight had a three-run homer in the fourth.

The Lady Rams will play host to Wallace-Rose Hill in the next round of the playoffs, to be held Monday at 4 p.m. at Snow Hill.

McPhatter Just Misses

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Cookie McPhatter, East Carolina's first woman ever to reach the national collegiate championships in track and field, was the fastest non-qualifier for Saturday's 800-meter finals, placing fourth in here semifinal heat Friday.

The junior from Raeford was timed in 2:10.8 in the third and final heat of the day. It was won by Christine Mullen of Georgetown in 2:10.0. Karel Jones of Hunter was second in 2:10.3, while Marcia Remesser of Cal State-Northridge finished third in 2:10.4.

Robin Campbell of Florida, the top entry, was the first heat winner in 2:07.8, and Susan Vigil of New Mexico was the second heat winner in 2:10.8. Nine advanced to the final.

The championships, being held on the Michigan State track, had competitors fighting cool and windy conditions Friday. Wind gusts to as high as 45 miles an hour were recorded.

Homer Parade Highlights Giant Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

It was that kind of a night in San Francisco — even pitchers were hitting home runs.

"I wish I could have watched the ball go out, but I kept my head down. I was afraid to think it was a home run," said Bob Knepper, who got his first major league homer on his 25th birthday as the San Francisco Giants beat the Atlanta Braves 6-4 Friday night.

Knepper's homer in the fourth inning not only helped the Giants win the game, but was a landmark shot. It was the fifth homer in the inning, tying a major league record.

"When I was between first and second base, I realized it was a homer and I felt like a little kid again. I wanted to shout and scream," said Knepper. "Then I said to myself, 'Wait a minute. You just gave up four runs yourself.' If the score was 8-0, I don't know what I might have done out there."

In the night's other National League games, the Los Angeles Dodgers walloped the Cincinnati Reds 17-6; the Chicago Cubs turned back the Philadelphia Phillies 3-0; the San Diego Padres edged the Houston Astros 2-1 in 10 innings and the game between the New York Mets and Pittsburgh Pirates was halted in the bottom of the 11th inning because of fog. The St. Louis-Montreal game was rained out.

The Giants led 1-0 entering the fourth, but Atlanta broke into a 4-1 lead when Jeff Burroughs clouted a three-run homer and Bob Horner followed with a blast even further over the left field fence at Candlestick Park.

Then the Giants went to work, starting with a leadoff homer by Willie McCovey — his third of the year and No. 508 of his career — in the bottom of the fourth. Bill Madlock singled and Phil Niekro retired two batters before Mike Sadek tied the score with his first homer of the season.

Then Knepper put the Giants ahead for good with his home run and they later got another bases-empty shot grom Jack Clark in the eighth.

Dodgers 17, Reds 6

Joe Ferguson led a 20-hit barrage for the Dodgers that included a club-record seven home runs. Ferguson homered and doubled to drive in four runs as the Dodgers tied a club record for home runs set in 1976 and were within one of tying the major league record for one club.

Leading 3-2 after 2½ innings, Los Angeles erupted for four runs in the third, three on a bases-loaded double by Ferguson, chasing Tom Seaver. The Dodgers hit three homers in the fourth, two-run shots by Steve Garvey and Gary Thomasson, and a solo home run by Ferguson, and scored five more times in the sixth on a bases-empty blast by Derrel Thomas, a run-scoring single by winning pitcher Rick Sutcliffe, and a three-run homer by Dave Lopes.

Dusty Baker, who had seven straight hits before he flied out in the seventh, hit the Dodgers' first homer in the second when Sutcliffe also homered, his first in the majors.

The game was disrupted by an eighth-inning fistfight. The first altercation was between Cincinnati's Dave Tomlin and the Dodgers' Dave Lopes after Tomlin walked Lopes on four very inside pitches.

On the fourth pitch, Lopes threw his bat in the air and yelled at Tomlin. Then the benches cleared.

No punches were thrown until the Dodgers' Derrel Thomas took a swing at the Reds' Rick Auerbach.

"He (Thomas) was talking to (second base umpire Bob) Engel, saying how bad it was that Tomlin didn't get thrown out of the game for throwing at Lopes," said Auerbach. "And I said something about Lopes swinging away at a 3-0 pitch (for a homer) in the sixth inning.

"They were ahead 14-2 at the time and I thought that was rubbing salt in our wounds. He (Thomas) said, 'Who you talking to?' And I said, 'I was talking to you.' We exchanged a few choice words and he came at me."

Cubs 3, Phillies 0

Chicago beat Philadelphia as Barry Foote hit a two-run homer and Lynn McGlothen and Bruce Sutter teamed up on a four-hitter. McGlothen gave up four hits, struck out six and walked one before needing Sutter's relief help with none out in the ninth.

Sutter, from Lancaster, Pa. — about 60 miles from Philadelphia — had family and friends in the stands at Veterans Stadium and pointed out that he liked to pitch there for that reason.

"I always try to do well here," Sutter admitted. "But once I come in I forget who is in the stands."

He didn't forget who was at bat Friday night, though. After McGlothen had put men on first and second with nobody out, Sutter struck out Greg Luzinski, then got Mike Schmidt and Garry Maddox on fly balls.

Padres 2, Astros 1

Dave Briggs drove in Gene Richards with a 10th-inning sacrifice fly to lift San Diego over Houston. Rollie Fingers pitched one inning in relief for starter Gaylord Perry to gain the victory.

Leading off the 10th, Richards took first when reliever Joe Sambito hit him with a pitch. Richards advanced to third when Sambito fielded Kurt Bevacqua's sacrifice bunt and threw wildly to second base for an error. Sambito pitched 11-3 innings and was saddled with the loss.

Mets 3, Pirates 3

Babe Ruth

Planters Bank 6, Coca-Cola 5

Planters Bank opened the 1979 Babe Ruth regular season with a 6-5 victory over Coca-Cola last night.

Coke scored first, getting a run in the top of the first as Mitch Brann walked, stole second and took third on a passed ball. He scored on Marshall Rand's single.

Planters came back with one in the bottom of the first. Mont Carter walked, stole both second and third and scored on a passed ball.

Planters took the lead with one in the third, but Coke came back with two in the top of the fourth for a 3-2 lead. Planters tied it up again with one in the bottom of the fourth. Both teams scored twice in the fifth for a 5-5 deadlock.

Finally, in the eighth, Planters pushed over the winning run. Marty Radford reached on an error and Jon Langley ran for him, taking second on a wild pitch. He moved to third on an error and scored when Gordon Douglas singled.

Randy Warren and Jeff Porter each had two hits to lead Coke, while Crowell Pope had two to pace Planters.

Home Builders 6, Pepsi-Cola 4

Home Builders opened its regular season in the Babe Ruth League Friday night with a 6-4 win over Pepsi-Cola.

Pepsi jumped ahead with three runs in the first inning. Billy Brannigan walked and stole second. Emmett Walsh singled and also stole second. Ike Smith walked, loading the bases, and Mike Holloman drew a walk, forcing in Brannigan. Wild pitches allowed Walsh and Smith to score for a 3-0 lead.

Pepsi then added a fourth run in the second.

Home Builders began its comeback in the fourth, getting a run, and added a second in the sixth.

Then, in the top of the seventh, four runs came in to give Home Builders the lead for good. Robert Still walked and Curtis Evans reached on an error. Scott Galloway reached on an error, scoring Still, but Evans was thrown out. Roger Willias walked and Lloyd Jackson reached on a fielder's choice that was errored, allowing both Galloway and Williams to score. Tony Burroughs doubled in Jackson with the final run.

Galloway and Burroughs each had two hits to lead the Builders, while no one had more than one for Pepsi.

Little League

Exchange 7, Wellcome 1

The Exchange is now 1-4, while Wellcome is 3-3.

Wellcome scored first, getting its only run in the top of the first. Scott Carawan was hit by a pitch and moved up on a passed ball. Terry Warren doubled him in.

The double was the lone hit of the day for Wellcome, as Billy Michel shut them out after that.

The Exchange tied it up in the bottom of the first on a Joe Hobgood home run.

They took the lead for good in the third, scoring four runs. Doug Bray walked and Tim Clark reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Bray, who had moved up on a wild pitch. Michel doubled and both moved up on an error. Steve Childers doubled, scoring both Clark and Michel. Childers then scored on a double by Monte Atkinson. That made it 5-1.

The other two runs came in the fourth inning.

Optimists 5, Coca-Cola 4

The Optimists halted a Coca-Cola rally in the sixth inning Friday and preserved a 5-4 North State Little League victory.

Coke added one in the second, while the Optimists came back with two in the bottom of the inning, tieing it at 3-3.

Then, in the fourth, the Optimists pushed over two to take the lead for good, 5-3. Hutton Cobb walked and moved up on an out. Barnhill reached on an error and stole second. Scott doubled in both runners.

Coke rallied to score one and had the bases loaded when the final out was made.

Barnhill and Scott each had two hits to lead the Optimists. No one had more than one for the Coke team. The Optimists are now 3-2, while Coke is 2-4.

L. League Dinner Set

The annual Greenville Little League chicken luncheon-supper will be held on Wednesday.

Lunch hours are from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. with supper hours from 4:30 p.m. until 7 p.m. Plates may be picked up from trucks at Elm Street Park and will be guaranteed until 6 p.m.

Plates will be available at $2.50 each for persons who did not purchase advance tickets.

The event is the only fund-raising project for the Greenville Little League. Mrs. Jack Whichard is serving as chairman of the event this year.

A double-header baseball game is scheduled for Wednesday at Elm Street field with Wellcome playing Pepsi-Cola at 4 p.m. and the Lions meeting Coca-Cola at 6 p.m.

Morning Is Fifth

RALEIGH — Roanoke High School's Chris Morning was the lone area placer in the State High School Track and Field Championships held Friday in Raleigh.

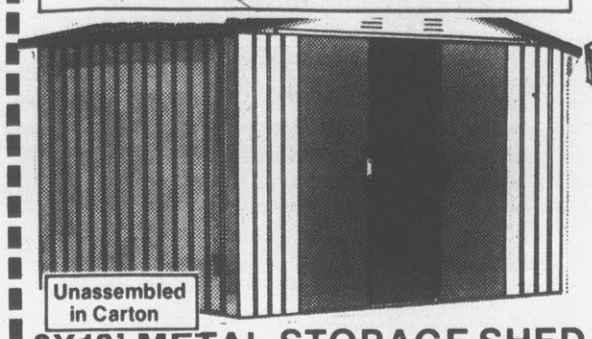

Morning placed fifth in the high jump with a leap of six feet even.

The only other area qualifiers were D.H. Conley's Bernard Hill in the long jump and Greene Central's Melvin Bynum in the triple jump, both failing to place.

Parker Davis, Best Make Independent Team

STATESBORO, Ga. — East Carolina centerfielder Billy Best and pitcher Parker Davis were named to the second team on the all-Southern Independent baseball team as chosen by the sports information directors of the eligible schools.

Best finished the year for the Pirates with a .294 batting average, and was the only perfect fielder aside from pitchers. He is a junior from Leland.

Davis, one of the country's top pitchers in earned run average most of the season, completed his year and Pirate career with a 5-4 record and a 1.62 ERA. A native of Eureka, he transfered to East Carolina from UNC-Wilmington.

Second Team: 1b, Randy Guerra (Miami) and Terry Loudahl (So. Miss), tie; 3b, Herbie Dawkins (UNC-W); SS, Bryan Smith (Campbell); OF, Bubba Baldwin (UNC-W), Billy Best (East Carolina), Kirk Eicheltz (Stetson), Jimmy Addison (S. Miss.), tie; P, Parker Davis (East Carolina), Neal Heaton (Miami), Chuck Lusted Ga. Southern). Catcher and second base were not chosen because of ties on the first team.

Valkyrie Winners

Memory Of 'Copa Girls' Still Alive

By FRED T. FERGUSON

NEW YORK (UPI) — Remember the Copa? And the Copa girls?

For 30 years, 1940 through 1969, celebrities sat at the Copacabana's best tables to be seen. Tourists spent big bucks for a chance to see them.

As much as the big name performers, the attraction was a parade of long-stemmed girls — it's debatable whether they danced as much as jounced — in the most daring costumes of the day.

The old Copa nightclub is long gone. A disco bears the name.

But the girls survive. They were on stage again the other night at the annual reunion of their own little alumni club.

Take Raquel Welch, Martha Stewart, Olga San Juan, Janice Rule, June Allyson — Copa girls all.

You are less likely to recall the girls who showed up at the reunion. But you might recognize Lorraine Richter. After the Copa, she appeared in 40 Phil Silvers' "Sgt. Bilko" TV shows.

In silver lame, she came to the reunion leaning on a cane. She had torn a muscle playing tennis at home in Greenwich, Conn. But she danced anyway, with cane.

There were three Copa shows a year. Mostly, new girls were hired for each. But Lorraine stayed in the line two years, 1957-58. She had this unintentional way of getting laughs.

"The first night I became a Copa girl, they put me in the front line. My shoe flew off. It hit Sid Caesar in the head. He came on stage and put it on.

"Later, I was the last to kick off stage. One night I kicked the drummer. Knocked him over, drums and all. I ran over and bent down. You are not supposed to do that in those costumes. He was all right but the audience had hysterics.

"I got my first love note backstage. It read, 'I love you — Joe DiMaggio.' Later, he dated my best friend."

At 62, Harriet discoed with the rest at the new Stork Club, reminiscent of the one the girls frequented wh herman Billingsley held sway and stagedoor Johnnies had lots of money. She wore a rouge tight top and layered ruffled skirt like the one she wore in that first gaudy review. Her headdress became part of the Copa's logo, a Carmen Miranda pile of fake fruit perched on a bright bandana.

"The stagedoor Johnnies would send back orchids and champagne," she remembered. "But we weren't allowed to drink it until after the show."

"I got roses and a gold necklace one night," said Joan Wynne, Copa '48-'49. "My mother made me give them back. But I dated the guy."

Harriet, a swimmer in Billy Rose' 1939 World's Fair Aquacade, later swam in Esther Williams films, danced the nightclub circuit, married a diplomat, then an advertising executive. Twice widowed, she spends much of her time in the Copa girls' charity drives.

Sisters Barbara and Sandy Baxter were among the last Copa girls, appearing in 1968.

Barbara: "We'd go to parties between shows. I remember undressing in a taxi caught in traffic to make a second show."

Sandy: "Milton Berle threw falsies on the stage. We were all looking down wondering which one of us..."

Both are legal secretaries now. Wearing sequined tights, ostrich plumes at the head and astern, they said they'd go on stage again anytime.

Barbara: "They're two different worlds. One was exciting. Guess which one."

Sandy: "I do miss the life I had."

Singer Terri Stevens, one of the few still in show business and nearly bursting the beaded top of her white silk gown, is president of the modestly incorporated World Famous Copacabana Girls of New York. "We really work hard raising money for charities," she said.

"We used to put 300, 400 tourists in the Copa every night," said Ed Blaine of New York's Gray Line sightseeing tours. "They'd come from all across the country and from abroad. They used to hold the show until the tour buses arrived.

"It was tough getting a reservation. Then you'd go and see empty tables. Suddenly, the place would fill up. The buses had arrived. It made some people mad."

The girls came from near and far. The Baxters, from the Bronx; Mary Lee Vaughn, Copa '62, from Philadelphia's main line.

Gloria Freeman, born in Smithfield, N.C., was reared in Newport News, Va. She differs from quite a few who are divorced.

Gloria and her husband recall chatting a while after he saw her in the show. Then, he said:

"Southern girl, you just spent your last night at the Copa."

She looked him over slow.

"Northern boy, you're so right!"

Their life in New York's suburban Westchester County, where he is in real estate and they have two college-age sons, makes her Copa stint seem distant. "It was in the '50s. I can't even recall the year."

Health Program Re-Accredited

ECU News Bureau

The occupational therapy curriculum at East Carolina University has been granted confirmation of accreditation by the American Medical Association's Committee on Allied Health Education and Accreditation and the American Occupational Therapy Association's accreditation committee.

Jean Pennucci, chairperson of the ECU Department of Occupational Therapy, received notification of the re-accreditation in recent letters from the committees.

The department's curriculum was surveyed in October, 1978, for its compliance with accreditation requirements, a regular process undertaken at five-year intervals.

This is the second such survey, Ms. Pennucci said. The program was initially accredited in 1973.

ECU's occupational therapy curriculum is offered through the School of Allied Health and Social Professions.

Students working in the BS degree program in occupational therapy are required to complete 133 semester hours of general courses, specializing in communications, education skills and social and behavioral sciences, as well as specific courses in occupational therapy.

High Price For Abdication Pen

LONDON (AP) — The fountain pen used by King Edward VIII to sign the Instrument of Abdication was sold recently at an auction for $4,000.

PEST PREVENTION

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For a home gardener, preventing pests can be more effective than using pesticides, says a government publication. How to do it is spelled out in a free reprint from the 1977 Yearbook of Agriculture. A copy is available on "Pest management" from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 623G, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

National Public Radio Is Planning Suit All Tastes

Television in Review:
By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's a station that in the next year will offer "Star Wars," an F. Scott Fitzgerald series, "Masterpiece Theater," live jazz and a highly acclaimed 90-minute news program.

Eat your heart out, television fans — that's the fare available on the 220 stations affiliated with National Public Radio.

Those of us who grew up before television remember with affection the days of network radio, with soap operas from "Helen Trent" to "Young Widow Brown," kids adventures from "Captain Midnight" to "The Lone Ranger" and "The Shadow," and nighttime drama from "Lux Radio Theater" to "Inner Sanctum" and "The First Nighter."

All the big stars were on radio — Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, the kind of top names not available to television — and the fast-developing world of broadcast news starred the likes of Edward R. Murrow, live among the bombs from the Nazi blitz of London.

Along came television, and network radio splintered into hundreds of disc jockey-dominated stations occasionally interrupted by an all-news outpost.

Today radio's counterpoint to public television, National Public Radio, has become the biggest radio network in terms of programming, offering its member stations 50 hours per week, including 18 series.

Presiding over the network is Frank Mankiewicz, best known perhaps as Robert F. Kennedy's press secretary to whom fell the melancholy duty of standing outside a Los Angeles hospital and telling the world that a second Kennedy brother was dead by assassin's bullet.

Mankiewicz has been head of NPR for two years and when asked about the size of NPR he recalls Sargent Shriver's visit to the Vatican when he was head of the Peace Corps. Shriver asked Pope John XXIII how many people worked in the Vatican. Pope John paused before answering, "About half."

NPR serves about 5-6 million listeners per week on a budget of about $12 million this fiscal year, going up to about $15-16 million in the upcoming year.

"There's a renewal of interest in radio," Mankiewicz said in an interview. "I see it in commercial radio, too, but I think we're leading the way. There are still an awful lot of top 40 rock stations from morning 'til night, or all news. But we are beginning to see drama on commercial radio as well as on NPR and there are interesting experiements all across the board.

"Radio revenues are up — maybe people are getting a little tired of television, a little bored with it."

Mankiewicz has the answer for anyone interested in variety — NPR is going satellite. Eventually there will be downlinks (receiving antennae) at every station, as well as 15 uplinks or transmitting stations, spotted around the country.

"That will make as a totally different radio system than any other — the sound will be absolutely perfect, with the highest fidelity, because there'll be no wire at all," Mankiewicz said.

"Secondly, and most important, we will have between four and 20 channels available at one time to broadcast on. At all times we will have at least four channels."

That would allow NPR to broadcast an important public event live on one channel, offer a concert on another, perhaps drama on a third and Spanish language programming on a fourth.

The system is scheduled to begin operations in March 1980, and Mankiewicz hopes to begin broadcasting "Star Wars" at that time, complete with the original sound track and as many cast members as he can obtain.

"Imagine that terrific sound stuff on stereo," Mankiewicz said, "like Darth Vader breathing. We might start with it on every night — maybe original broadcasts Monday, Wednesday and Friday, with repeats on alternate nights. The BBC is putting up the money — for an American production."

Other NPR network show of special interest include Jazz Live, hosted by Billy Taylor; a drama series called "Ear Play," which has presented several original plays that ended up on Broadway; Masterpiece Radio Theater, hosted by Julie Harris; an eight-part series on F. Scott Fitzgerald, his life and dramatized short stories, with Richard Thomas as Fitzgerald; and "All Things Considered," an award-winning hour-and-a-half news show that Mankiewicz described with pride as "like doing '60 Minutes' daily for 90 minutes."

Black Dolls In Museum Display

The 50 dolls in the exhibit were from the collection of Myla Perkins of Detroit, who began her hobby about 10 years ago.

Many were handmade around the turn of the century by a Georgia craftsman named Leo Moss, who was commissioned to make both black and white dolls. Quite a few of his black dolls are shown crying but, according to Mrs. Perkins, no one knows why.

SLANG BOOK

LONDON (AP) — The British Home Office announced recently that it had published a book on prison slang for use by visitors to the country's prisons. An official said 3,000 of the books were printed at a cost of $350.

Art Thefts: $50 Million Per Year In U.S. Alone

By LEO LLOYD

NEW YORK (UPI) — Talk about art thefts. People recall the disappearance of three Cezanne paintings worth $3 million from the Art Institute of Chicago last December.

That was only the tip of the iceberg. Thefts in the last few years have been many, varied and often not well publicized. For instance:

—Three swords and two daggers presented to President Truman by the rulers of Saudi Arabia and Iran were stolen from the Harry S. Truman Library in Independence, Mo., in March of last year. Value: $900,000 to $1 million.

—A silver and gold model of the ship "Morgan" was stolen from the Fall River, Mass., Marine Museum last October. Value: $100,000.

— A Picasso painting, "Femme au Chapeau," was stolen from a private art gallery in Toronto last February. Value: $500,000.

Art thefts are on the increase. Thieves are burglarizing museums, galleries, churches, historic sites and private collections nationwide and worldwide.

Thomas McShane, the only FBI agent assigned to art theft cases, believes some of these thefts are undertaken by gangs under contract to organized crime figures with "hot cash" to spend. An Interpol source claims the new rich of the Middle East are important customers for stolen art.

"While some thieves may be petty burglars who decide to make off with art they fancy, there definitely are gangs whose members may be from the art field and are very knowledgable about the art business," McShane said.

Experts say the value of art stolen in the United States could be in excess of $50 million a year and about the same amount is stolen in Europe. Interpol estimates there were 50,000 art works stolen worldwide in 1978. Few were recovered.

Law enforcement agencies have attempted to fight art crime but not all police have sufficient educational and cultural backgrounds to investigate art thefts. One New York City policeman does. He is Robert Volpe, 36, who has been investigating art crimes since the early 1970's. He says no art crime is typical.

"Anyone can investigate an art crime. However, to investigate it properly you better have a knowledge of the art world and also of the art which you are investigating. There are certain pieces which go in certain directions, in certain channels.

"If you are investigating the loss of an oil painting, there are channels. If you are looking for some antique glass or anything of that nature there is a different way to search it out. Many of the cases go national or international immediately. That's sometimes what you may call typical, the fact that most of your cases are not local once they happen."

As examples Volpe cites an alterpiece weighing 100 pounds which was stolen in London and which he recovered in New York's garment district and a Byzantine ivory stolen from Italy which he also recovered in New York.

"It's according to who takes it, how quickly it gets into the hands of a fence, how quick the fence is and how good his connections are within the art community. The piece taken from London was taken around December 22, it was here by January 2. The ivories, on the other hand, took almost a year to get to New York. Where were they in between? Were they being stored? Maybe they went to Paris first. Who knows? Maybe South America."

He says it helps to be based in New York.

"We have a situation which exists where New York City legitimately is the clearing house for art internationally. It is also the clearing house for lost, stolen and fraudulent works of art. If I was based in Texas I could make my recoveries but not to the extent of what I'm doing here. Even if the piece isn't stolen here there is a good possibility that it may pass through New York."

Volpe, a part-time painter and sculptor, says it would be difficult for him to function if he was not a member of the art community.

"There's no way to do it without knowing the community, without being accepted in it... You have a different kind of co-operation, it's a trust.

"I've had dealers call me up and say, 'Hey, Bob, I've just bought a piece that I think is stolen, would you come on up, and I know the reason they bought it — — to take it off the market. Now they stand to lose financially on this. If they didn't know you personally... they'd just let it go past them."

Volpe stresses the importance of co-operation among law enforcement agencies. He says personal contacts with other agents help. He has helped develop Art Central, a computer indexing of lost, stolen and recovered art in the United States.

Why is art theft so prevalent?

"The average art theft breaks down to somewhere between 15 and 20 thousand dollars per item," Volpe said. "That's a lot when you consider the average bank robbery nets the thief about three thousand, four thousand in cash."

Not all art thefts are nonviolent.

"We've had armed robberies and assaults, there have been murders connected with art," Volpe said. "When someone goes in at gunpoint to a street gallery during working hours and handcuffs all the personnel and selectively steals four or five items leaving cash and jewelry behind, you tell me how dangerous it's becoming. Art theft is becoming a very selective kind of thing. This is the theft-to-order concept."

Volpe is careful to distinguish between professionals and what he calls "local talent." He says the professional "has the qualities to be able to blend within the art community."

"He has at least a street knowledge of art. He not only knows where to steal from but when he gets there what to steal, and even more frightening he has developed the knowledge of how to dispose of it. This is the true art criminal.

"After seeing the theft and how it took place I can almost tell at times who I'm dealing with, whether I'm dealing with the sophisticated art thief or just local talent who turned art thief."

He points out that art theft networks are international in scope.

"The thief is not held back by bureaucratic guidelines and red tape. He gets excellent cooperation from the crime hierarchy. They may not care for each other but they work together for a common goal."

Volpe advises the private collector concerned about theft to "know the piece you have, have it photographed, keep up on the market so you know how much the piece is worth."

One organization that will photograph artwork is the International Art Registry, founded in New York by Alan Baer in 1970.

"We create a fingerprint classification system in much the same manner as if a human being is concerned," said Baer. "What we do is to record what is unique to that particular object whether brush strokes, blobs, whirls, whether it is the watermark in the paper falling in a particular spot, the grain of a particular piece of furniture, or the patina of a particular article of sculpture."

The art registry does this through 35 mm photographs taken by its photographers throughout the world who use a standard procedure — an overall view of the object, an intermediate view of the object and then a closeup detail of the object. Baer keeps two copies of the three pictures of each object he records and gives a third copy to Interpol.

Baer's organization photographs the whole range of collectables — paintings, drawings, prints, statuary, furniture, silver, tapestries, stamps, coins, armor, china, porcelain. But it will not do precious stones because they are often recut and loose their "fingerprint."

Baer gives labels to persons who register their art. The labels can be placed on the frame of the work and indicate that it has been photographed by International Art Registry. If any object registered is reported stolen, the Registry notifies local law enforcement agencies, the FBI, and Interpol. It tries to get as many photographs circularized in the art community as possible.

Baer says this procedure makes it difficult for criminals to sell stolen art. He says the fact that less than one percent of registered works have been stolen indicates the registry's effectiveness.

Baer said even famous works require identification. He cites Rembrandt's "Portrait of a Rabbi" stolen from the M.H. De Young Memorial Museum in San Francisco last Christmas day.

"Most people think how could you possibly resell something like that? It's so recognizable. Well, nothing could be further from the truth.

"You happen to deal with a particular artist that may have painted several portraits of a rabbi. Rembrandt didn't do one study of a Rabbi, he did several studies. So in the process of reselling that work of art, the provenance (origin) is laundered by substituting the documenation of one portrait of a Rabbi for another portrait of a Rabbi to fool an unsuspecting buyer and an unscholarly dealer."

Some persons in the art community blame press coverage of expensive art sales for encouraging art theft. Baer disagrees.

"I think the incident which occured at the Metropolitan Museum is a perfect example of the media making an object so difficult to resell," he said, referring to the theft last February of a Greek marble head from New York's Metropolitan. It was recovered in a locker in Grand Central Terminal. It was there presumably because the thieves could not fence it after the theft made the headlines.

Confusion, Disadvantages Plague ATS Accounts

By TIM CODER
United Press International

A woman who deposited money on promises of 5 percent interest — but not on the service charges that ate away at her profits — stalked up to the Charleston, W.Va., bank intent on venting her anger.

She flaunted a pair of scissors before startled bank officials and customers and, so the story goes, with relish snipped her checkbook into confetti.

"That's what I think of your service charge," she said.

Target of her frustration was the bank's Automatic Transfer Service authorized last Nov. 1 by new federal regulations. Better known as interest checking, the system allows a customer's savings account to glean 5 percent interest, with funds funnelled into a separate checking account as checks are written.

But a bewildering variation of plans, along with the computation of maintenance fees, transfer levels, transfer fees and other esoterica, can befuddle even the most mathametical mind intent on gilding the checkbook balance.

Many banks are careful to note that ATS is not for everyone. Indeed, while interest checking can benefit more affluent customers, payday-to-payday customers are priced out of the market.

Minimum balances up to $2,500 and higher are required to eliminate service charges. With a balance consistently below the required level, profits are eroded or wiped out by such fees.

One bank executive, whose bank has heavily promoted ATS in the highly competitive Chicago market, said high minimum balances, and substantial fees imposed if they are not met, are necessary for banks to break even.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the consumer affairs subcommittee of the House Banking Committee, is one of the most vocal critics of interest checking.

"The woman who stormed into her bank ... and cut up her checkbook exemplifies the frustration of customers who have been hit by high costs of ATS," he said.

"For most people, ATS is little more than giving with one hand and taking with the other. Some banks are imposing charges which could total well over $50 per year. For many customers, such charges can quickly eat up any interest earned under the plan."

FED UP — "That's what I think of your service charge", said an angry woman as she put a pair of scissors to her checkbook, so the story goes. (UPI Photo)

Bank of America in San Francisco offers a typical ATS program — 5 percent interest and no service charges if a $2,000 minimum daily balance is maintained. If it is not, a $3 per month fee is imposed along with a charge of 10 cents per check.

The customer who maintains a $1,000 daily balance and writes 30 checks per month does not fare well — receiving $50 interest for the year but paying $72 in service charges for a net loss of $22.

Like many other banks, Bank of America also offers free checking for the customer who maintains a $300 minimum daily balance. The customer able to maintain a $1,000 daily balance could sink $300 into a checking account, and put the remaining $700 in a Savings & Loan account drawing 5¼ percent interest to gain an annual net profit of $36.75.

A Bank of America spokesman said ATS accounts are being maintained well above the $2,000 minimum balance level.

"We're extremely pleased by the overwhelmingly positive response from both Bank of America customers and non-customers alike," said Barry O'Donnell, marketing project manager of demand deposits.

The Harris Bank in Chicago offers a more intricate variation of interest checking which it attempts to explain in a news release:

"The customer will select a transfer level for his account. When the balance in his checking account reaches this level, funds will be transferred automatically from the savings to the checking account, in $50 increments.

"The monthly maintainance (sic) fee for the service is $1, when the service is used. There is a separate daily transfer fee of 25 cents. Customers who keep a $2,500 average balance in the savings account will be exempt from other checking account maintainance (sic) charges."

Michael Wixted, Harris' assistant vice president for convenience banking, said the program "is still a pretty quiet thing. There's not a great deal of interest. It's growing, but very, very gradually."

But can interest checking be that good a deal when it requires such high minimum balances to eliminate service fees, which in turn siphon away interest profits?

"I don't think so," Wixted conceded.

The minimum balances, he said, are needed for the banks to break even. "We think $2,500 is what it takes to meet our costs."

Because of confusion over their program, executives at New York's Chase Manhattan Bank produced a television commercial that asked people to come in so it could be explained by bank representatives.

Adding a twist to convenience banking was a recent federal appeals court decision that clouded the future of services such as interest checking. It said federal regulators illegally permitted the programs. It urged Congress to determine their future next year.

Customers have hardly beaten down bank house doors to apply for interest checking — despite glossy, Madison Avenue-style promotions. As of the first of the year, Annunzio said only 400,000 accounts were in force in the nation's 50,000 banking institutions.

Some banks increased prices for other services when they began offering interest checking.

Among them was the Charleston National Bank in Charleston, W.Va., (apparently not the scissor woman's bank) which passed on increases to better meet its own costs, a spokesman said.

The bank increased to $300 from $100 the minimum balance for free checking. When the minimum balance is not met, Charleston National charges $3 a month plus 15 cents a check. It previously charged 10 cents a check on balances below $100.

Charleston requires a $5,000 minimum balance for free interest checking, the largest of all banks surveyed. Dana Pitchford, senior vice president and director of marketing, said the response to interest checking has been good.

"We have had more response to the service than ... a lot of banks our size. We didn't think it would be a real barn burner."

But other banks have decided benefits of interest checking are not worth the trouble it would take to implement the system.

Row Belcher, first vice president for deposit services at the National Bank of Commerce in Memphis, Tenn., said an extensive marketing research study determined only lukewarm customer interest.

"We just thought every resource it would have taken to bring up ATS could have been channelled to more productive ways," he said.

A forerunner of interest checking is the so-called Negotiable Order of Withdrawal, NOW accounts, which were started in Massachusetts in the early 1970s. They spread through New England in recent years and last fall became available in New York City.

The NOW system consists of a single account, compared to separate accounts for ATS, and likewise draws 5 percent interest. Most bank officials seem to prefer NOW accounts because they are more easily handled.

But a Federal Reserve Board economist, who said the NOW accounts were allowed as an experiment on the Eastern Seaboard, explained there usually is no practical difference in the two systems from the customer's standpoint.

"If the bank wants to," he said, "it can make either account identical from the customer's point of view, or can make them different."

Citibank, for instance, requires a $3,000 average monthly balance to eliminate a $4 monthly service charge. Bankers' Trust Co., which switched from ATS to NOW on April 1, requires a $2,000 minimum balance to skip the $4 monthly service fee.

The switch to interest checking has its problems for the banks. Consider the case of the Dollar Savings Bank, with 13 branches in the New York City area.

The bank last Dec. 15 notified 35,000 free checking customers that on Jan. 15 it would switch them to NOW accounts. Terms were established at $1,000 minimum balance for no service charge, $500-$1,000 at $1.25 a month and $0-$500 at a $2.50 a month charge.

"We cannot break even if a balance is less than $500," said Henry G. Waltemade, the bank's chairman.

When five New York legislators held a news conference protesting the switch, Waltemade huffed, "The hell with the legislators. They are not running the bank. They are looking for free lunches."

Waltemade said the bank lost an estimated 1,200 customers since the change was made but otherwise benefited handsomely. The average checking account balance rose from $353 to more than $600, he said, for an aggregate increase of nearly $6 million.

Congress is expected to take its usual lengthy look at programs such as ATS sometime after the first of the year because of the recent federal appeals court decision in Washington.

The court cast some doubt on the legality of interest checking and other new convenience banking services, ruling federal regulators have illegally permitted banks to allow them.

But the court acknowledged that "enormous investments have been made" and that a disruption of services would "necessarily have a deleterious impact on the financial community."

The three-judge panel thus postponed the effect of its order until Jan. 1, 1980, "in the expectation that the Congress will declare its will on these matters."

Reporter Tim Coder, 35, specialized in consumer reporting at Columbia University and later for the Omaha Sun Newspapers before joining UPI in 1974.

Admission Test Dates

ECU News Bureau

The nationally standardized Law School Admission Test, required of candidates for admission to most American law schools, will be offered five times at East Carolina University during the 1979-80 academic year.

Test dates are October 13, 1979, and December 1, February 2, April 19 and June 28, 1980.

The test is administered by Educational Testing Service under the policy direction of the Law School Admission Council, an organization representing the nation's 167 accredited law schools.

The half-day test is designed to measure certain mental abilities important in the study of law. Sample test questions and registration materials are available from the ECU Testing Center, 105 Speight Building, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834, or directly from Law School Admission Services, Box 2000, Newtown, Pa. 18940.

Chicagoans Brag; Earning The Name 'Windy City'

By MARC WILSON
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — A New York journalist dubbed Chicago "the Windy City" nearly a century ago — not because of the breezes off Lake Michigan but because Chicagoans brag so much about their city.

This century, promoters have dubbed Chicago "the city that works," and — the latest name — "dynamic Chicago."

Despite the unceasing work of the city's braggadocios, image problems remain. Chicago still is known as "the second city," implying that it is second best, second fiddle, second rate. That doesn't help when trying to compete with the cities in the Sun Belt. The lingering image that Chicago is still gangster Al Capone's domain doesn't help, either. Nor do occasional scurrilous reports that Clevelanders are telling Chicago jokes.

So the bragging continues.

When Michael Bilandic was mayor, he and the Economic Development Commission sponsored a 34-page advertising supplement in "Fortune" magazine headlined: "Dynamic Chicago, growing with a dynamism not to be found in the older cities of the Northeast or the highly publicized population centers of the South and West."

The supplement says Chicago has the longest strip of unspoiled "but not unused" lakefront of any city in the world, the world's tallest building, busiest airport, largest exposition center, greatest railroad hub and a symphony orchestra that "drew 10 curtain calls from the usually chilly super-critical Salzburg audience.

"Chicago is one city where the streets are swept, the garbage collected and where the fire and police departments do their jobs. Serious crime in the city dropped 19 percent in the past four years. City workers get paid, the budget is balanced, and between 1971 and 1977 the tax levy dropped by 2.2 percent."

And city officials and leaders are bragging that while New York and Cleveland face bankruptcy and ever-increasing taxes, Chicago hasn't raised taxes in five years and has a AA bond rating.

The city also is in the midst of one of its biggest building booms, with nine buildings from 24 to 57 stories each under construction.

"I wouldn't call it the biggest boom ever in the city, since there's no (110-story) Sears Tower, no (80-story) Standard Oil building, no (100-story) John Hancock building," said William Caples, recently retired director of the city's Economic Development Commission. "But I'd certainly say Chicago is doing more building in the central city than any city in the nation.

"The building is proof that there's no better place to run a business than Chicago."

Overall, the construction business in Chicago is probably as good as it's been since Mrs. O'Leary's cow allegedly kicked over the lantern that started the great fire in 1871. The city building department says it issued building permits in 1978 for more than 5,400 buildings worth $476.34 million. In 1977, the department issued just over 5,000 permits worth $245.51 million.

Still, there's a gap between what city officials see as the real Chicago and many persons' image of the city.

"I went to Europe for the first time in 1926 and have been back many times since, and I know the image of Chicago was machine guns and gangsters," Caples said. "That's not the image any city wants. Chicago doesn't deserve it. But we know it still exists."

Another image problem is the lurid picture of Chicago painted by novelist Upton Sinclair in his famous muckraking novel "The Jungle," which told of the exploitation of laborers in Chicago.

Caples emphasizes that the key to Chicago's success is the working partnership between business and labor.

"It's often over-looked, but it's a real triumvirate making this city work — unions and business and the government decide together what needs to be done then work together to do it," says Caples.

Admission Test Slated July 7

ECU News Bureau

The Graduate Management Admission Test will be offered at East Carolina University Saturday, July 7.

Application blanks should be completed and mailed to the Educational Testing Service, Box 966-R, Princeton, N.J. 08540 to arrive by June 15.

Wheelchair For The Overweight

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — The Methodist Medical Center machine shop has designed a special wheelchair to accommodate the hospital's heaviest patients.

The chair has an 800-pound load limit, motorcycle wheels in the back and racing-stripe trim on the sides.

The chair was designed by Ernie Wildhagen, plant services engineer, and replaces flat carts once used to transport heavy patients.

COMPUTER BOSS

LONDON (AP) — A union leader has warned secretaries not to annoy the office computer or it might decide to give them the sack.

Roy Grantham, commenting on a report by his union on the effects of new technology, says some offices are now using computers which measure a typist's performance and issue disciplinary warnings if the work is not up to scratch.

He says the machines can even time tea breaks.

MORE TOXICOLOGISTS — Dr. Gary L. Lage, director of a New Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science program, that expects to graduate around 30 new poison detectives annually by 1984. (AP Laserphoto)

College Producing Poison Detectives

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Chemicals that save lives also kill people, which is why America needs more toxicologists — lots of them.

"This is a hot, new professional field," says Dr. Gary L. Lage, director of a new Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science baccalaureate program beginning in the fall — one of only four such programs in the country.

Lage said fewer than 100 persons have obtained college degrees in toxicology since 1963. "Yet today," he said, "more than 1,000 new toxicologists are required right now — and another 1,000 in the next five years — because nearly everything we eat, wear or use has chemicals in it."

Lage said industry has been trying to fill the gap by giving two years of extra training to chemists or biologists who already have doctorates — when toxicologists might be coming straight out of four-year baccalaureate programs.

"There are several thousand new chemicals discovered every year and I'd say close to 1,000 get to the market. If these chemicals are not tested thoroughly for toxicity, for safety, it is reasonable to expect they could kill thousands in the future, from the residue, from exposure, just like asbestos did."

Lage hopes his program will graduate about 30 new poison detectives yearly by 1984. "They will improve the quality of life," he says.

"The goal is to determine toxicity before a chemical is used, not a decade later. Certainly government and academia together can predict and prevent toxic catastrophes, rather than react to them after they happen. For society it is mandatory."

Only three other American colleges now offer a toxicology degree — St. John's of Brooklyn, N.Y., which since 1963 has graduated only 43; the University of California at Davis with around 35 working in environmental toxicology, and Northeastern in Boston with a first class of 20 students.

"We'll have 25 freshmen the first year, increasing to 35-40 within the next three years," Lage says.

Lage estimates there are around two million known chemicals, of which about 30,000 are in current manufacture.

"It's just in the last 20 years that high potent toxic compounds have been developed for medical purposes, for food, for clothing," Lage says. "Pesticides have helped increase productivity of our farmers, but at the same time many are highly toxic, and can endanger birds and streams."

Federal law requires companies to test their chemicals for toxicity before they manufacture them, something drug firms have been doing for nearly two decades.

"Drugs must be proved safe, as well as effective, before they can be marketed, and now the chemical companies are going to have to do the same," Lage says.

"This will hopefully end those horror stories about unwarranted dumping and burying of chemical wastes into holes and rivers. By having more toxicologists on the job, you won't throw chemicals into the water until you know what the toxicity is today, not 10 years from now."

Things like asbestos in factories, and in hair dryers, were used extensively without protection because nobody knew about the toxicity of asbestos. Or that vinyl chloride, used in plastics, also could cause cancer.

"I'm not sure you can put a number on how many lives will be saved by checking chemicals first for toxicity, but I'm sure lives will be prolonged," Lage says.

"Some side effects, even deaths, are never going to be prevented ...even with prior testing for toxicity. But with toxicologists on the job in the plants before new chemicals are marketed life will be prolonged for the workers, and for many of the people who live near the factories."

Lage says until now chemists and biologists became toxicologists, and most have doctorates.

Monday Will Be A Holiday

The Sanitation Division of the Public Works Department will observe Monday, May 28, as a regular holiday (Memorial Day). All trash and garbage service will run one day late through Wednesday and will resume regular scheduled service on Thursday.

Citizens are also reminded that GREAT (Greenville Area Transit) will observe Memorial Day as a holiday. There will be no bus service on Monday, but regular service will resume on Tuesday.

For an emergency street or storm sewer damage or other problems connected with streets, contact the Police Department and they in turn will notify the proper Public Works official.

The Cemetery Division will also be closed for this holiday. However, the gates will be opened early morning and locked at sundown.

79 Year Of The Locust

THE LOCUSTS RETURN — The all-American version of the Biblical plaque of locusts is surfacing now in seven Eastern states as millions of periodical cicadas, as seen in this 1973 file photo, end their 17 years underground. Stanley G. Gesell, professor of entomology extension at Pennsylvania State University says, "there's no need to worry, they don't bother people, animals or vegetable crops. (AP Laserphoto)

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — The all-American version of the Biblical plague of locusts is surfacing now in seven Eastern states as millions of periodical cicadas end their 17 years underground.

"But there's no need to worry," says Stanley G. Gesell, professor of entomology extension at Pennsylvania State University. "They don't bother people, animals or vegetable crops."

The large, buzzing insects known as "17-year locusts" actually are not locusts at all. The misnomer apparently comes from frightened American settlers who thought they were witnessing a recurrence of the Biblical plague.

Periodical cicadas are found nowhere else in the world, Gesell said, adding, "In a year like this, when the cicadas emerge by the millions, it's easy to understand why the early Americans mistook them for locusts. The sight is spectacular and the sound is haunting and eerie."

To those in the know, however, "comparing cicadas to locusts is like equating a cow with a cat," Gesell said. "Locusts are a type of grasshopper...Cicadas...are related to scale insects, leaf-and treehoppers and aphids."

For 16 years and 10 months, the cicadas are underground, sustaining themselves with the juices of tree roots. When they surface for two months of breeding, they do not eat at all.

They just buzz and breed, buzz and breed.

When the time is right, in May or June, large numbers of cicadas tunnel up from their burrows, two to 24 inches deep, making a hole the size of a quarter on the earth's surface.

The emerging soft, white, big-eyed "nymphs," or nearly mature adults, then head for upright objects — trees, bushes, telephone poles or even blades of grass.

Clinging fast, they split and break out of their protective shells. Overnight, the inch-and-one-half-long nymphs harden, turn black and inflate little stubs into orange-veined wings. Their legs darken to a reddish color and their eyes turn glittering red.

Within a few days of this metamorphosis, they are ready to mate and the "music" begins.

The male cicadas produce their deafening, droning call to the females by flexing and relaxing two shell-like inflated drums on their abdomens.

The chorus begins at dawn and swells with rising temperatures to dominate the countryside until evening, when it subsides.

The sound will be familiar even to those who missed the cicadas' emergence 17 years ago. Similar sound effects are produced by the "dog-day cicadas" that appear every summer in much smaller numbers.

After mating, the females head for trees, where they slit open the bark on twigs, depositing between 400 and 600 eggs in batches of 24 to 28.

About a month later, in early July, the adults die. In a few more weeks, the eggs hatch and the new-born nymphs drop to the ground and burrow down to begin the cycle again.

Cicadas do some damage to trees while they are underground, but assessment is difficult, Gesell said.

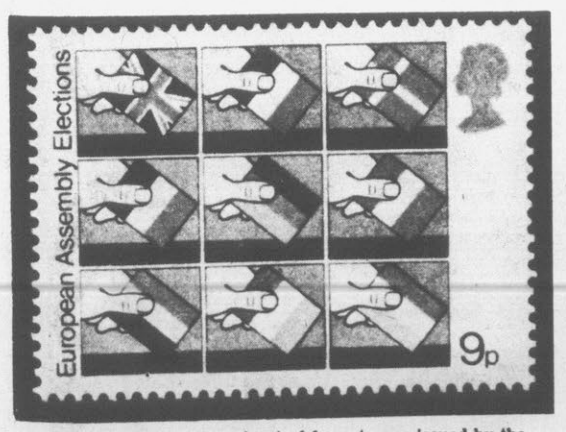

There are two types of periodical cicadas, Gesell said — 13-and 17-year varieties. The 13-year batch is based mainly in southern states, while their 17-year cousins exist predominantly in the mid-Atlantic states.

Each group is made up of sub-groups, called "broods," which have different territories, numbers and years of emergence.

Gesell said it is believed there originally were 13 broods of 13-year cicadas and 17 broods of 17-year cicadas — producing one brood, each year, somewhere. But some of the broods are nearly extinct, and with only 12 17-year broods left today, there are five fallow years.

But 1979 is the year of Brood II, Gesell said — one of the largest in both population and territory. This year's "plague" will hit sections of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

The various broods extend from eastern Oklahoma and Nebraska east, ranging as far north as Connecticut and as far south as northern Florida, Gesell said.

DIRECT ELECTIONS — A set of four stamps issued by the British Post Office, all of a design similar to the one shown above, marks a unique occasion, direct elections to the European Assembly which will take place June 7. The stamps, in denominations of 9, 10 and one-half, 11 and 13 pence, features nine hands and nine boxes, one for each of the member countries of the Assembly, with the flag of each member country in the form of a voting paper. The stamps are avaialble from the British Post Office Philatelic Bureau, Lothian House, Lothian Road, Edinburgh, EH3 9BB, United Kingdom.

Business Notes

RECORD SALES

In the three months ended March 31, according to Lee Thomas Jr., president, sales were $39,563,000 compared with $37,449,000 last year.

Net income was $2,316,000 or 60 cents per share compared with $2,495,000 or 65 cents per share in the year-earlier first quarter, Thomas said.

The corporation operates a plant in Greenville.

MERGER APPROVED

The shareholders of First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. of Raleigh and The Bank of Conway at Conway voted, in separate meetings, to merge the two banks, it was announced.

The merger, according to officials of the two banks, is now subject to approval by the State Banking Commission and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Favorable action by the regulatory agencies, it was reported, will result in the $4.2 million Bank of Conway becoming part of the $1.2 billion statewide First-Citizens Bank, with the new office known as the Conway office of First-Citizens.

MANAGERS HONORED

Two area residents were among 114 business managers from Ford dealerships in the Richmond sales district who were recognized for their performance during 1978 in the various aspects of managing the financial affairs of the dealership.

Martha Wheless of Leo Venters Motors, Ayden, and Pauline L. Barnhill of F & D Motor Co. of Bethel, were cited for special honors for achieving 16 consecutive years of earning the Business Management Award for Accounting Excellence. Special honors at a Williamsburg, Va. meeting went to 50 business managers who earned the award for ten or more years.

BOARD MEMBER

J. Richard Futrell Jr. has been elected to the board of directors of Planters National Bank in Rocky Mount, according to PNB chairman and president James B. Powers.

Futrell, who is executive vice president, joined the bank several months ago after 18 years with another bank in the state, PNB said. He is presently responsible for the bank's retail operation which includes branches, marketing, consumer credit and mortgage loans.

Signs Of Recession Evident

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Signs are growing that the that long-predicted economic slowdown or recession finally is upon us.

The news coming out of Washington this past week showed April inflation once again in double-digit figures, personal income down and business orders for durable goods falling at their steepest rate in 11 years.

Combined with other recent reports that new housing construction is slow, auto sales have slumped and industrial production dropped sharply in April, many economists conclude that the recession signs are stronger than ever, if it has not already started.

Not everyone is convinced that the latest reports indicate a recession. Carter administration officials reinterated their position this past week that the economy could maintain "moderate" growth this year. And G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, declared: "There will not be a recession but rather a pause and a consolidation."

Still the prevalent view that the economy is

Couple Marries On Saturday

BETHEL — Miss Pamela Lou Edmondson and James Edward Buckthal were united in marriage Saturday at five o'clock in the evening in the Bethel Baptist Church. The Rev. Curtis Tyler and the Rev. Norman Joyner officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Mahlon Edmondson of Bethel, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Edward Buckthal of Clinton.

A program of wedding music was presented by Susan Byers, organist. Ken Harrell of Clinton sang "More" and "The Wedding Prayer." The church was decorated with arrangements of greenery and white candelabra. Pews were marked with white satin bows.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white qiana over white peau de soie designed with a U-neckline outlined in white silk floral Venise lace that extended down over the empire bodice to the waistline which was encircled in the floral lace. Matching lace trimmed the sleeveless armholes. The gown and attached chapel length train were enhanced by a flowing knife pleated skirt.

The bride wore a fingertip length veil edged in scalloped silk Venise lace accentuated with appliques of the silk Venise lace attached to a tiara cap overlaid in matching lace beaded with clusters of seed pearls. She carried a formal cascade of miniature white carnations, yellow roses and stephanotis accentuated with baby's breath and greenery tied with white bridal satin.

Miss Mahlonie Edmondson of Bethel, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and wore a formal length dress of green and white print voile. The empire bodice featured a square neckline with bows tied on the shoulder. The long A-line skirt was edged with a hemline ruffle. She carried a colonial bouquet of white daisies, baby's breath and greenery tied with yellow ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Hilton Tetterton Jr. and Miss Cathy Martin of Bethel, Miss Jennifer Mapel of Vero Beach, Fla., Miss Kathy Tedder of Charlotte, and Miss Meg Griswold of Goldsboro. The attendants wore dresses identical to the honor attendant's and carried matching bouquets.

The mother of the bride chose a formal gown of blue silesta chiffon with a high neckline and shirred bodice. The mother of the bridegroom chose a formal gown of pink qiana with a sheer flowing cape. Both wore white orchids.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Tim Richardson, John Elmore, Terry Peterson, George Lee, Stuart Kaleel, all of Clinton, and Kim Hutchins of Chapel Hill.

A reception was held after the wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Louis Tetterton. Mrs. Frances P. Bland of Robersonville greeted guests and presided at the guest register.

Assisting were Mrs. Wesley Taylor of Clinton, Mrs. Alton Carson, Mrs. Bill Whichard, Mrs. Earl Manning and Mrs. Corinne Heath of Bethel. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Brantley Chesson.

After a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple will live in Chapel Hill.

The bride is a graduate of UNC-CH and is attending Wake Forest University School of Law. The bridegroom is a graduate of UNC-CH and is employed by Central Carolina Farmers, Inc., Durham, as a quality control chemist.

Parents of the bridegroom entertained members of the wedding party and friends at a rehearsal dinner Friday night at the Three Steers, Greenville. The bridal couple was honored at a dance following the dinner at the Greenville Country Club given by friends and relatives of the bride.

Mrs. Frances P. Bland and the bride's parents entertained the wedding party and out-of-town guests at a pig pickin' Saturday at McWhorter Park.

MRS. JAMES EDWARD BUCKTHAL

Walker-Pettus Vows Solemnized

The marriage of Cynthia Ann Pettus and Donald James Walker was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in a double ring ceremony performed by E. Gordon Conklin in Oakmont Baptist Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. McKay Lee Pettus Jr. of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Garnett H. Walker of New Bern.

Pre-nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Treva Fidler. Ms. Anita Bowman was organist and vocalists included Gerald Southeralnd and Mr. and Mrs. Greg Rogers.

Janice Crabtree of Henderson served as maid of honor and bridesmaid was Mrs. Wanda Hall of Greenville while Miss Nickie Woodard of Jacksonville, Fla., was junior bridesmaid.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Jimmy Smith of Spartanburg, S. C., David Pettus, brother of the bride, and Charles Jarman, both of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor length gown of organza and re-embroidered lace. The fitted organza bodice featured a split V-neckline and full length Camelot sleeves. Re-embroidered lace panels overlaid the bodice, trimmed the sleeves, encircled the cuffs and banded the natural waistline. The full length flared organza skirt extended into a chapel train. Re-embroidered lace bordered the hemline.

She chose a layered mantilla bordered with lace with an illusion blusher attached to a lace cap etched with seed pearls. The bride carried a colonial bouquet of daisies, baby's breath and yellow silk roses tied with yellow streamers.

The attendants were attired in yellow qiana gowns styled with fitted bodices with double spaghetti straps, accordion pleats from the empire waist. They wore a chiffon capelet over the dress. They carried colonial bouquets of yellow and white daisies, baby's breath and greenery. The junior attendant was dressed similar to the bridesmaid.

The mother of the bride selected a blue long-sleeved dress fashioned with a natural waistline and wore a corsage of white carnations. The mother of the bridegroom selected a green chiffon gown styled with a cape, empire waist and A-line skirt. She wore yellow carnations.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall which was decorated with spring flower arrangements. The cake table was covered with a cloth of Belgian linen.

Mrs. Tracy McLaurin poured punch and Ms. Elizabeth Grimes served cake. Mrs. Steve Stroud presided at the guest register.

The couple will live in Macon, Ga., after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

The bride graduated from ECU with a degree in special education. The bridegroom, also a graduate of ECU, is a sales representative with E. I. Dupont.

The bridal party and out-of-town guests were entertained at a rehearsal dinner given by the bridegroom's parents at the Ramada Inn. The bridal couple presented gifts to their attendants.

The bridal party and family were entertained Thursday by Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. J. Alfred Mayo at a dinner party at the New Bern Country Club.

Miss Dixon, Mr. Conway Wed

Miss Robin Elaine Dixon was united in marriage Saturday at 8 p.m. to Mark Aaron Conway in a candlelight ceremony at Saint Paul's Pentecostal Holiness Church. The Rev. Maurice Phelps, pastor, performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Scott Dixon and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Allen Conway Jr., all of Greenville.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Nancy Lancaster, organist. Mrs. Earlene Stocks sang "When God Gave Me You," Mrs. Delores Morgan sang "Sunrise, Sunset." The father of the bridegroom sang "The Wedding Prayer." Trumpeters were Brent Stocks and Obie Godley.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over peau de soie and re-embroidered alencon lace and seed pearls on the bodice front. The sheer back yoke and waist featured a row of lace and pearls. Appliques of re-embroidered alencon lace and pearls were scattered about the back of the train, bordered with matching lace around the hem of the A-line skirt. The bride chose a cathedral length mantilla of silk bridal illusion attached to a Juliet cap, accented with appliques of re-embroidered lace and pearls. The edge of the mantilla was scalloped with bridal satin. The bride carried a flowing cascade of white phaelanopsis orchids, talisman roses, ferns and gypsophilia.

Miss Kristi Hope Johnston was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Lorene Ormond of Bath, Miss Sandra Jackson, Miss Kelly Jordan, Miss Danna Malloy, Miss Elayne Yancey, Miss Lois Phelps, Miss Pam Cayton, Miss Kim Mills, Miss Gwen Tyson, Miss Rae James, Miss Ellen Pollock, Miss Phyliss Conway, Mrs. Deborah Jones, sisters of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Pat Conway, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, all of Greenville.

The attendants wore formal gowns of apricot organza over taffeta designed with ruffled portrait necklines with bertha collars, edged in miniature Venise lace. The waistlines featured inset bands, from which fell the modified A-line skirts. The attendants wore matching imported braid bowler hats and carried colonial bouquets of talisman roses, white daisies, yellow pixie carnations, accented with ferns and gypsophilia, tied with coral ribbons.

Miss Sherri Malloy, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She selected a formal length gown of apricot organza over matching taffeta with modified A-line skirt, deep ruffle flouce and bertha collar. She carried a wicker basket of spring flowers and wore baby's breath in her hair. Louis Mitchell Jones III, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Groomsmen were John Allen Conway III, brother of the bridegroom, Louis Mitchell Jones Jr., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Aubrey Scott Dixon, brother of the bride, Scott Brady, David Murray, Jeff Aldridge, Jule White, John Coffman, Billy Williams, Burney Fleming, Pete Harrell, all of Greenville, Eddie Horne, Beck Corbin and Perry Johnson, all of Richlands.

The mother of the bride wore a formal length yellow chiffon dress with V-neck and matching hand-painted cape, with a phaelanopsis orchid in her hair. The bridegroom's mother chose a mauve pink polyester jersey gown with dolman sleeves, wrap top and mushroom pleated skirt. She wore a cymbidium corsage.

Mrs. Scott Dixon Sr., grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Jane Perkins, great-aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Betsy Boles, cousin of the bride, were remembered with white carnation corsages. Mrs. Catherine Vinson directed the wedding.

The bride's parents held a reception in the Masonic Temple. Mr. and Mrs. Duane Williams received guests, with Mrs. Hazel Moss as guest register. Miss Lisa Carraway passed out rice bags, with Miss Tanya Malloy distributing scrolls.

Mrs. William H. Mills, aunt of the bride, assisted in serving, with Mrs. Ralph McLawhorn and Mrs. Roland Stocks, aunts of the bride, serving wedding cake.

After a wedding trip to Disney World, Fla., the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of Rose High School. The bridegroom attended Louisburg College and is presently in business with his father at Greenville Marble and Granite Works.

A bridesmaids' luncheon was held at the Holiday Inn,, given by Mrs. Thomas Carawan, Mrs. Carl Crawford, Mrs. Harold Daniel, Mrs. Amos Evans, Mrs. W. C. James, Mrs. Marvin Jarman, Mrs. Tom Scoopmire and Mrs. E. R. Sermons.

The bridegroom's parents and Mr. and Mrs. J. Z. Garris, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom, entertained with a dinner at Brook Valley Country Club following the rehearsal Friday.

As the school year draws to an end, various activities have kept Rose High students occupied. While the senior class continued to prepare for graduation, members of the junior class worked to organize the Junior-Senior Prom.

Featuring Johnny White and the Elites, the prom was held in the school cafeteria last week. Decorations carried out this is year's theme "Always and Forever."

As a result of high placement in a regional math contest, eight students traveled to the Research Triangle Park Thursday to participate in the State Math Contest. Congratulations are extended to Kevin Clark, Becky Dixon, Eric Downes, Caren Hix, Mark Grossnickle, Jeen Kim, Tom Chenier and Fred Parham for advancing to this stage.

Special congratulations are extended to Jeen Kim and Fred Parham, who placed first and third respectively in the contest. The group was addressed by Governor Jim Hunt, who also presented the awards.

On Monday night, the Keywanettes presented a plaque to President Hannah Taft for her dedicated services to the club. Other activities included making plans for a teachers' party Thursday, donating money to the Community Ambassador and planning an end-of-the-year cookout.

This year's All-Sports Athletic banquet was held Thursday night at the Moose Lodge. Master of ceremonies for the occasion was Dr. Dick Douglas, president of the Booster Club. Simon Terrell, executive secretary of the N. C. High School Athletic Association, was guest speaker.

Miss Smith, Mr. Mills Unite In Marriage

St. Rest Holiness Church was the scene of the Saturday, 2 p.m., wedding ceremony uniting Verna Lee Smith of Winterville and Clinton Ray Mills of Ayden. The Rev. David Hammond performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Smith of Winterville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lenwood Mills of Ayden.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her brother, Clifton J. Smith, wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of qiana and silk Venice lace. The empire bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline outlined with lace motifs and full length puff sleeves accented with lace appliques. The full skirt extended into a chapel train. The bride chose a chapel mantilla bordered with scalloped lace with an illusion blusher attached to a lace Juliet cap etched with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of white gladioli, carnations, and baby's breath, tied with pink and white streamers.

Nora R. Smith of Winterville, sister of the bride, served as honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Mary J. Burney of Seat Pleasant, Md., aunt of the bride, Carolyn Wilson of Greenville, Velma Harper of Winterville, cousin of the bride, Prisicilla Moye of Greenville, sister of the bride, and Yvonne Smith of Winterville, sister of the bride.

The attendants wore pink floor length silesta gowns with blouson bodices, v-necklines, and split dolman sleeves tied at the wrists. The maid of honor carried a nosegay of pink and white carnations with baby's breath and wore a pink circlet of flowers with streamers. The attendants carried nosegays of white chrysanthemums with pink streamers and wore flower headpieces.

Miss Ja-Fana Ghita Harris of Greenville, flower girl, chose a pink voile floor length dress, accented with lace. She wore a pink flower circlet and carried a white wicker basket filled with flowers.

Roger Ingram, organist, and Shirley Coward, soloist, presented a program of nuptial music. Ms. Coward sang "O Perfect Love," "We've Only Just Begun" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The mothers of the bridal couple wore formal gowns of blue crepe and wore white carnation corsages. Mrs. Katie Grimes, grandmother of the bride, was remembered with a daisy corsage.

Joe W. Dickens of Tarboro served as best man. Ushers included Johnny Moye of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bride, Ronnie Cherry of Greenville, Teddy Hyman of Bethel, Robert Gaskins of Ayden, and Ronnie Bright of Winterville. Donte King of Winterville served as ring bearer.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at W. H. Robinson School, Winterville. Guests were greeted by Mrs. Camilla King. After the bridal couple cut the first slice, cake was served by Ms. Annie Forbes and punch was poured by Mrs. Lucy Garris. An arrangement of mixed summer flowers flanked by candles centered the table. Mrs. Ruby Grimes, aunt of the bride, assisted with the reception. The wedding was directed by Mrs. Camilla King and Ms. Evelyn Boyd of Greenville.

Following a wedding trip to Atlanta, Ga., the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of North Carolina Central University and is employed by Wachovia Bank and Trust. The bridegroom is a graduate of Gupton-Jones College of Mortuary Science, Atlanta, Ga., and is associated with Flanagan Funeral Home, Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Manning of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Adcock of Clayton.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Ruth Taylor, organist, and Steve Reel, soloist, who sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white organza and chantilly lace over white peau de soie, designed with a low squared neckline outlined in scalloped chantilly lace, empire bodice overlaid with lace. The sheer all lace bishop sleeves featured ruffled cuffs. The modified A-line skirt was enhanced by insert panels of lace edged in miniature Venise lace which extended over a sheer second skirt which overlaid a deep inner skirt of chantilly lace edged in ruffled chantilly which flowed to a chapel length train. She wore a chapel length mantilla edged in chantilly lace, held in place by a Camelot cap adorned with lace. The bride carried a formal cascade bouquet of miniature white carnations, baby's breath and pink sweetheart roses.

Lynn Howard of Chapel Hill was maid of honor. She wore a formal length gown of candy chiffone designed with a portrait neckline featuring a bertha collar edged in ruffled chiffone that extended over the shoulders to elbow length in back. The waistline of the empire bodice was elasticized to form a flowing skirt. She carried a cascade bouquet of pon poms, pink miniature carnation and baby's breath with white streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Karen Adcock of Clayton, Miss Pat Bartlett of Raleigh, Mrs. Arleen Hanchey of Greenville and Miss Toni Weston of Brevard. Their gowns were identical to the maid of honor's. Each carried a cascade bouquet fashioned like the honor attendant's using pink streamers.

The Rev. Adock was best man. Ushers were Steve Manning, brother of the bride, Wesley Deal and Billy Ellington, all of Greenville, Rennie Adcock of Clayton, brother of the bridegroom, J.B. Reid of Madison and Andy Martin of Whiteville.

Mrs. Steale Pittman served as director of ceremonies. C.S. Hanchey distributed wedding programs, and Mrs. Bonnie Wilkes presided at the guestbook.

The bride's mother wore a formal length gown of seafoam chiffon designed with a high neckline with a motif of bugle beads on the collar. The modified A-line skirt was also of chiffon. She wore a corsage of cymbidium orchids.

A reception was held in the reception hall of the church. The guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Milton Howard and goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Steale Pittman. Serving at the reception were Mrs. Jean Deal, Mrs. Frances Lane, Mrs. Mae Tew and Mrs. Lorraine Hines who were assisted by the ladies of the church.

The bride is a graduate of the ECU School of Nursing and is a registered nurse at Wake Medical Center in Raleigh. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is currently attending medical school at UNC at Chapel Hill.

A bridesmaid's luncheon was held at the Colonial Inn in Farmville Saturday. Hostesses for the occasion were Miss Lynn Howard and Mrs. Milton Howard.

For the wedding trip, the bride changed into a light blue dress and white vest. After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Chapel Hill.

"I'M EVE". . .was co-authored by Chris Sizemore, left, and her cousin and lifelong friend, Elen Sain Pittillo.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Today, she is Chris Sizemore — and has been for five years; however, for 44 years she had 22 personalities.

Mrs. Sizemore is the Eve in "The Three Faces of Eve" and in her co-authored book "I'm Eve." She was in Greenville Tuesday for several speaking engagements.

"How my multiple personalities affected my family is the question I am most often asked. Certainly it has affected them, but not adversely. They had a responsibility, they met it and became very responsible people, particularly my children. In all honesty without the support of my family I could not have survived," she said.

Mrs. Sizemore has a definite recall of all 22 personalities, "not what someone has told me." "My personalities had names — that's how I think of them. Intellectually I am aware I was all these personalities, but emotionally its the same as having 22 women use my body for 44 years. You see, it started when I was two years old.

"The purple lady, who always wore purple, the strawberry girl, banana split girl, card lady, who collected playing cards,— this the is the only thing the personalities collected that I still do — and turtle lady, were some of my personalities. My favorite was the purple lady because she was warm and compassionate — she was a good person," continued Mrs. Sizemore.

"There was nothing that triggered a change, no rhyme or reason once the manifestation of the patterns of three occurred. Each personality lived long enough to fulfill a purpose," she added.

She is traveling across the United States lecturing about her emotional problems. "By doing this, I hope to help people understand those who have a disorder." Mrs. Sizemore is an artist and has exhibits in various cities. "Six of my personailties were artists." Her hobby is rock hunting and she has a rose garden.

"I'm Eve" was co-authored by Mrs. Sizemore and her cousin and lifelong friend, Elen Sain Pittillo. "Elen and I are preparing to write another book "The Attic Child," which will include excerpts from diaries of my other personalities, poetry, (my original and poetry by 10 of my personalities) as well as art work done by the other six personalities and an analysis of the 22 personalities with publication possibly next year," Mrs. Sizemore said.

When asked if she were ever embarassed by having her life revealed, Mrs. Sizemore replied, "It's the most important thing I have ever done. I know I'm well adjusted and stable because I am in control of my life. I like the secure feeling. I've just begun to live."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A group of gifted children in Ft. Lauderdale vowed they would not be "de-feeted" by the problem.

A priest in Stanford wrote, "We must assume God has a mission for my single green sock."

These are only a few of the thousands of replies received by this column from readers all over the country who offered an answer as to why socks disappear in the washer.

Some observations are significant.

Disappearing Socks make no distinction in sex, class, religion, politics, geographic location, smokers-vs.-nonsmokers. (There were more reported theories from Minneapolis than anywhere else, but it's been a long winter which can cause sitting around staring at your washer and other strangeness.)

Age was not a factor. The youngest theorist was 8 ½ years old and the oldest was 82. (A man who said quite scientifically, "You lose socks because you're a woman!")

All of the writers had one thing in common. Their socks had entered the Wash and Spin Bermuda Triangle and they had been lost. No one was amused.

Another significant factor of the letters was that the disappearance of socks was generally described in mystical terms — as a phenomenon that defied reason or explanation. ("They're in constant contact with great cosmic forces who demand a sock be sacrificed like a maiden.") Another popular theory was that another planet was dropping weird pairs of socks to spy on us and the missing one was returning with the information. Sailors wrote saying the problem was universal and was quite prevalent in Japan.

Poets wrote by the hundreds and ranged from simple hysteria — "I have arrived at this conclusionhey're forming an Argyle revolution!" to a "Gone-with-the-Wind" meter — "So next time your husband asks where I amell him, 'Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn.'"

Three socks wrote. One signed his (?) first name and said he defected during the wash cycle because of the "pressures of living in Boston" and he warned me to "stop prying or you'll be sorry."

I am devoting the next two columns to this myth. The first will deal with the theories behind the disappearance; the next one, the solution. Pray we do not become resigned like the man in Phoenix who gathers up two dozen pairs of new socks each year, tears them apart and throws out one of each pair . . . to save his wife the trouble.

FAMILY DINNER

Chicken Pie Salad
Rhubarb Compote
Cake Squares Beverage

RHUBARB COMPOTE

A springtime goodie.

2 pounds pink or red fresh rhubarb
1½ cups sugar
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ cup water

Trim rhubarb and wash; cut crosswise into 1-inch lengths; turn into an electric slow cooker. Stir together sugar and cinnamon; pour over rhubarb and add water. Cook at low, covered, until rhubarb is tender but still holds its shape — 2 to 3 hours. Chill. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

PICNIC LUNCH

Tomato Soup
Sardine Sandwiches
Fruit Cookies

SARDINE SANDWICHES

Deliciously savory.

3¾-ounce can brisling sardines
½ cup shredded (medium-fine) pared carrot, packed down
2 to 3 tablespoons minced scallion
3 to 4 tablespoons mayonnaise
Salt and pepper to taste

Mash sardines with their oil; add carrot, scallion, mayonnaise and salt and pepper and mix well. Makes about 1¼ cups. Use as a sandwich filling. If bread is regular thickness, ¼ cup filling should be used for each; if bread is thinly sliced, less filling may be used.

Couple Weds In Double Ring Vows

FARMVILLE — Jo Ann Sermons and Roland Scott Lang were married Saturday at 4 p.m. in the Farmville United Methodist Church. The Rev. Clyde Dunn performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Earl Sermons of Farmville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Octavius Lang of Farmville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of white qiana over white peau de soie, designed with an open neckline and stand-up collar of re-embroidered alencon lace, beaded with pearls. Panels of the beaded alencon lace extended over the bodice, encircled the waistline and formed short caplet sleeves. The knife pleated skirt and attached chapel length train were edged at the hemline with re-embroidered lace. The bride chose a finger tip illusion veil edged with a panel of re-embroidered alencon lace held in place by a tiara cap, overlaid in lace with pearl motifs. She carried a cascade bouquet of baby's breath, daisies and white miniature carnations, accented by ivy and stephanotis.

Mrs. Wiley Doby Jr. of Winston-Salem, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Anna Mooring of Farmville, Mrs. Wolly Smith of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Richard Hunter of Warrenton, sisters of the bridegroom.

The attendants selected formal length gowns of blue magic knit designed with cowl necklines, empire bodices, and trapunta panels at the waistlines. The dresses were accented with flared knife-pleated skirts. The attendants carried bouquets of baby's breath, pink miniature carnations, with accents of blue and yellow pom pons and pastel daisies.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Glenn Letchworth of Farmville, Williams Sermons of Farmville, Kenneth Sermons of Greenville, brothers of the bride, Richard Hunter of Warrenton, Wolly Smith of Atlanta, Ga., brothers-in-law of the bridegroom, William Lovic, Bobby Lewis and George Allen, all of Farmville.

Mrs. William Mercer, organist, and Mrs. Thomas Bullock, soloist, both of Farmville, presented a program of nuptial music.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Mrs. C. L. Eason and Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Letchworth. A centerpiece of pastel colored flowers with blue and yellow pom pons and pink carnations was placed on the bridal table with silver candelabras with blue tapers. Bakers' ferns were also placed around the silver punch bowl with baby's breath and pastel daisies. Individual ferns were scattered around the room.

After a wedding trip to Europe, the couple will reside in Farmville. The bride is employed with A. C. Monk and Co. Inc. of Farmville. The bridegroom is employed with H. F. and Ph. F. Reemtsma Tobacco Co., Hamburg, Germany.

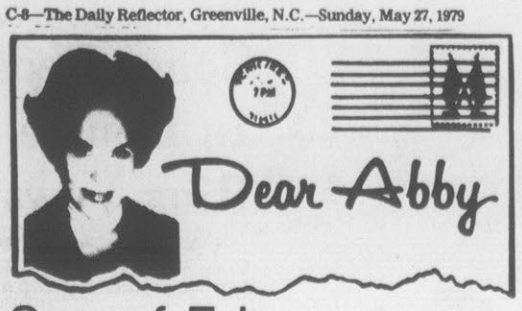

A keg party was held Thursday at the Farmville Country Club, given by friends of the bridal couple. A bridesmaids' luncheon was held Friday noon at the Colonial Inn, Farmville, by Miss Anna Mooring, Mrs. Wiley Doby, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Dewey Fuquay. Mothers of the bridal couple were special guests. The bride-elect presented her attendants with gold serpentine bracelets at this time.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland O. Lang, Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Hunter, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Wollaston Smith III served as hosts and hostesses for a rehearsal party Friday evening at the Farmville Country Club. Magnolia branches and hurricane globes accented the area, with a bouquet of early summer flowers placed on the serving table. Approximately 90 guests, including members of the wedding party, family members and out-of-town guests attended the event.

Mrs. Leymon B. Holmes, aunt of the bridegroom, entertained the bridal couple with a wedding breakfast at her home Saturday.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene C. Lux of Tucson, Ariz., announce the engagement of their daughter, Syrissa Kae, to Michael Wayne Seymour, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Seymour of Greenville. The wedding will take place June 24.

Son of Erin Is too Carin' O' the Green

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with this 29-year-old man from Ireland. I'm 20. I love him dearly, and he loves me and wants to marry me, but, Abby, you would not believe how cheap he is!

He takes me out and spends money on me, and has even bought me some nice gifts, but he will not spend a penny on himself. He lives with the barest necessities. I had to beg him to buy a kitchen table and chairs for his apartment because he felt as long as he had a coffee table and a couch he didn't need anything else. (He will drag the two chairs and coffee table from the living room into the kitchen!)

He doesn't have a bedroom set either. He sleeps on a bare mattress on the floor.

It's not that he can't afford a few pieces of furniture—he can; he just doesn't want to spend any money. I've had my dad and brothers and friends talk to him, but he's stubborn as a mule. That's why I'm writing to you.

I don't want to marry him in the hope that one day he'll change and spend some money. I want to be sure now, or else start looking for someone else. I want to get married soon.

STUCK ON AN IRISHMAN

DEAR STUCK: If you love this penny-pinching Irishman, make a list of everything he needs (within reason and within his means). If he gives you one of those fighting Irish battles, make another list—of eligible men you know.

DEAR ABBY: In 14 years of marriage, my husband has never said, "I love you." Yet I know he does. How do I know? Let me count the ways:

He appreciates my efforts as a wife, mother and homemaker. Although he's never told me so in so many words, he brags about me to others.

He never corrects me in public. He doesn't drink, gamble or try to make me jealous by flirting with other women in my presence. When he's wrong, he says, "I'm sorry." When I'm wrong, he doesn't keep reminding me of it. He never says "my" house or "my" children-it's always "ours."

I could go on and on. So what if he finds it difficult to put into words what he feels? There are many men to whom words come easily, but talk is cheap. Performance is what really counts.

LUCKY IN LOVE

DEAR LUCKY: Your husband is equally lucky to have a woman who understands his inability to articulate his feelings. I agree, actions do speak louder than words, but to some, words are the music of love.

DEAR ABBY: My husband insisted that Gary, our 12-year-old son, get a paper route to teach him responsibility and the value of money. Gary is our only child, a little spoiled and not the most ambitious kid in the world. He has a morning and Sunday route, so he has to get up at 4:45 to get those papers delivered. It's pitch dark at that hour and we're afraid to let him take his bike, so I get up and drive him in our station wagon while he throws the papers.

Lately, Gary stays up late studying and I haven't the heart to wake him up at 4:45, so I let him sleep and I deliver the papers alone.

Abby, I am 47 years old and I don't need a paper route. I've asked my husband to let Gary quit his route, but he says, "No, it will make a man out of him." Meanwhile, it's making a wreck out of me. What do you suggest?

HELPFUL MOM

DEAR MOM: Quit doing a single and wake up Gary. If he requires more sleep, he'll manage to get to bed earlier. It's generous of parents to help their kids with their paper routes, but where's papa?

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MAY 28, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Make whatever arrangements appeal to you that are connected with improving conditions at home. Get into matters involving your property and possessions, and work them out in a more satisfactory manner.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Extend invitations to those you want to entertain at home and learn a good deal through conversation. Make repairs to property that increases its value and adds to its beauty.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get in touch with one you admire and want to be part of your life in the future. Convincing him or her to go along with an idea you have in mind is relatively easy now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your financial status well and do those things that will make your money grow. Listen to what a successful person has to suggest. Follow the best of such advice.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Do what you can to improve your appearance so that you become more magnetic, charming. Come to a better understanding with allies and add to present success.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Analyze your present course better and know where you are going, and gain more prestige. Greater accord is possible with your closest partner. Beware of con artists.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are able to find persons who can be of help to you in the future. Attend social gatherings that appeal to you. Be charming and be happy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good day to improve your standing in your community by right activity. Bring your capabilities to the attention of bigwigs who can be of help to you. Be clever.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have not been to new sites for some time and this is a good time to seek new pastures. Your hunches are good for advancement, so follow them. Be careful of new-found friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find a better system for handling responsibilities and don't speak before you have thought. Show more cooperation for loved ones and gain the assistance you want.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Show more understanding for those of a highly emotional nature and be of help to them. A situation comes up which concerns another and should be settled quickly and well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care of chores early in the day and get a good deal done. Contact associates and make new and better plans for the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A smile and pleasant manner can make your duties easier and more pleasant, especially when dealing with others. Any special talent you want to put across can be well expressed now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have much understanding of whatever is basic in nature, so give a final general course that stresses business, property investments for best results. An emotional nature here that requires an early marriage, a home, children for stability and happiness. Teach figures early in life at home.

MIRACLE PILL

A recent article in a well-known national newspaper revealed the thoughts of doctors who hailed the attributes of the safe, natural L-TRYPTOPHAN, that can virtually eliminate stress, depression and sleeping problems, and is available without prescription.

It is not a drug. According to medical experts in the article, L-TRYPTOPHAN can calm you down by relieving nervousness and stress. It can pick you up when you are blue, and help you to sleep like a baby. L-TRYPTOPHAN has been tested and can replace Valium, Tranquilizers, and Anti-Depressants. It is the first safe non-barbituate, non-toxic sleeping pill that leaves you with a clear head in the morning. It is better than tranquilizers because it is non-habit forming.

Fringe Benefits Abound For Pioneers In Siberia

EDITOR'S NOTE — It's called the "project of the century" and for those who work on it the fringe benefits abound. They have to, to lure law-abiding Soviet citizens to Siberia.

By NIKKI FINKE
Associated Press Writer

BERKAKIT, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Siberia, home of labor camps and forced exile, is fast becoming a land of opportunity for a generation of young and restless pioneers.

Single or married, physicist or fitter, Russians are volunteering to live in "no frills" Siberian settlements to help open up the region's vast store of natural resources.

Many come for the money, which can be double or triple Moscow salaries. Others see it as a "romantic" experience, being hailed in the Soviet press as their country's newest heroes.

But for all, it's hard work, especially for the settlers of tiny Berkakit toiling on Maly Bam, the newest spur of the Baikal-Amur Railway nearing completion in the Soviet republic of Yakutia.

"We want to be able to say to our children 'this is what we've done,'" says Alikhom Sulemanova, a 30-year-old philogist who left his sunny home in the Caucasus to work as a mechanic.

Depicted as the "land of death and chains" by Maxim Gorky, Siberia began its modern development under Josef Stalin, who drew his labor force from Soviet citizens exiled to the North, later joined by deported Poles and German POWs.

Dissident leader Andrei D. Sakharov maintains that Siberia is still dependent on prison labor and estimates there could be as many as 2 million prisoners in work camps throughout the North.

Under Nikita S. Khrushchev, communists from all over the country were urged to "Go North," but few did. Now, under President Leonid I. Brezhnev, "the project of the century," as the railroad is called, is attracting brigades of Komsomols, members of the Young Communist League willing to stand the cold and isolation.

These Siberian pioneers range in age from 15-year-old construction workers in the coal-mining town of Neryungri to 30-year-old railway workers in Berkakit.

Some are university and technical school graduates sent to Siberia by the government for two-or three-year work stints. Others are people nearing retirement who can qualify for the state's highest pensions only after a year's labor.

But behind the propaganda about eager volunteers lies the hard fact that many Russians move to Siberia only for the money and a long list of fringe benefits that the government provides.

The incentives include extra vacation time, larger apartments, free travel to other parts of the country and looser restrictions on traveling abroad. There are substantial pay bonuses, and the settlers are allowed to keep their permanent residence back home.

Siberian pioneers are said to have the most cars per capita in the Soviet Union — and the fattest bank books.

One couple say they have managed to save 15,000 rubles ($21,950) in less than two years, an enormous sum when one considers that the average worker's annual pay is less than $3,000 elsewhere.

But even money can't make life in Siberia less grim.

"We've been cold long enough," said one 30-year-old railway worker who can't wait to return to her native Kazakhstan. "At the beginning it was, of course, very interesting and romantic. But now ... I want to go home."

Siberia is still plagued with an unstable labor force and severe manpower shortages. Some workers sign on for two-year contracts and leave once they have enough to buy the luxuries of Soviet life.

And housing construction hasn't kept pace with the influx of newcomers. Overcrowding was so severe in Neryungri, a Soviet newspaper recently pointed out, that many workers spent the winter camped out in schools and gymnasiums.

In Berkakit, a 4-year-old settlement of 5,500, some 300 recent arrivals are living in centrally heated freight cars or "vagonchiks" because of apartment shortages.

Berkakit is not a pretty town. Its apartment complexes look like army barracks, and outhouses are the rule. While the city has a cultural center and movie theater, most couples say they spend their evenings drinking vodka or watching television.

"If you don't like TV, there's nothing to do," complained one Siberian hostel manager. "Life here is dull, dull, dull."

To make the days more interesting, the town celebrates even the most obscure holiday. Builders' Day and Teachers' Day. And on New Year's, the people of Berkakit celebrate twice — once by Berkakit time, and later by Moscow time.

Do they want to go home very soon?

Salvage-Selling Business Good

By BRENDA MOONEY
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Merchants of an old school are setting up shop with increasing frequency these days in inner-city storefronts and suburban shopping plazas.

They are the entrepreneurs in junk who, in a poetic sense, turn sows' ears into silk purses for a pofit.

Although used-goods stores have been popular for years, Atlanta-area merchants of old goods say business is booming.

The reasons are mainly financial, said Charlie Kauffman, the owner of Record Heaven, a used-record store near downtown.

"Everything is going up. Even better-off people are looking for a bargain," he said. "You can't do anything about the cost of gas or heat or rent, but you certainly can do something about the price of records."

Kauffman said most of his customers were young married couples buying rock records or older folk shopping for classical bargains.

"We don't have many teenagers," he said. "Teen-agers have more money than people in their early to mid-20s. They're spending daddy's money."

The customers' desire for something different is the key to the business at Little Egypt Antique Clothing, said owner Patti Morrison.

While the low cost of clothing in her store — $12 average for a dress — does attract some customers, Ms. Morrison said, "I think it's more fun than financial."

Her customers are women of all ages, she said. "I would say the majority are in the 20s. We get some teen-agers. We costume little kids and grown-ups. And a neat little lady came in yesterday and bought $40-worth of stuff. She just loved it."

Ms. Morrison, who says she haunts thrift shops all over the country for merchandise, said she had grown up as an average middle-class child who "never knew about thrift shops."

Her big sellers are old sailors' uniforms, bowling shirts, silk nightgowns, slinky dresses and vests. "I don't deal in polyester at all," she said.

Bill Watson, the manager of The Paper Chase, a used-book store in nearby downtown Decatur, said most of his customers "easily could afford new books, but they don't buy them."

"We get all kinds of people, even businessmen," he said.

The customers tend to buy their favorite authors in new, hardback editions, but would rather buy light reading at half price, Watson said.

"Most new paperbacks are more than $2 apiece," he said. "We sell all of ours at half cover price." The store also sells paperbacks that are out of print.

Pace Academy

Pace Academy is an Independent Day School for boys and girls of average and above average ability that have no learning disabilities.

The Academy provides a traditional learning environment with structured classes and stress on phonetics, English grammar, writing, and a step-by-step development of mathematical and reading skills. Emphasis is placed on social studies and science by special teachers.

An excellent physical education program has been developed for the children featuring gymnastics, folk dancing, basketball, softball, and many other activities to help with physical and social development of Academy children.

Conversational French is an added advantage in grades K-5. In grades 6 and 7, French culture is emphasized with a visual, oral, and written approach to the language and people. This in depth study of French culture prepares the student for French I in the eigth grade.

Extra curricular activities include: an optional trip to Europe, boy's basketball, girl's basketball, student government, and cheerleading.

All teachers hold North Carolina "A" certificates or Masters degrees in education. Each is carefully selected for their position at the Academy.

Emphasis is placed on small classes with not more than 25 students per class. All children must pass an entrance test before entering Pace Academy.

The Academy is now accepting applications in grades 1-8. We invite you to come out and visit our Academy if you are concerned about your child's education.

Notice of Nondiscriminatory Policy As to Students

Pace Academy admits students of any race, color, national or ethnic origin to all the rights, privileges, programs, and activities generally accorded or made available to students at the school. It does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, national and ethnic origin in administration of its educational policies, admissions policies, scholarship and loan programs, and athletic and other school administered programs.

Juanita Kreps Pays A Price For Her Cabinet Post

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Juanita Kreps, the quintessential career woman, is happy in her work. But she says she pays a high price to serve as the nation's secretary of commerce.

"I don't see much of my husband," she says. "I don't feel I'm giving my children, young adults, the day-to-day thoughtful attention they merit. I feel that living alone has got to be uncivilized — not having anyone to say good morning or goodnight to.

"I hate it. I solve it by working all the time."

Mrs. Kreps, 58, who had a career as an economics professor, dean and vice president of Duke University, moved to Washington two years ago from Durham, N.C., to join the Carter administration. Her husband, Clifton H. Kreps Jr., a professor of banking at the University of North Carolina, stayed home.

Like many American women who are trying to combine a career with marriage and motherhood, Mrs. Kreps finds that she's not always comfortable with her role.

"It's bothersome," she says. "Tradition is the other way. In our culture, people are still surprised when roles are reversed. I'm enough of a traditionalist to have that give me some concern."

Traditional, perhaps, but unimpressed by the prestige of official Washington.

"It's expensive to have this job," she says. To take it, she resigned not only from Duke, but from many directorships including the New York Stock Exchange, J.C. Penney and Eastman Kodak.

She says she took a 50 percent cut in income to accept her $66,000-a-year job in Carter's cabinet, that she works 12 to 14 hours a day, and that while the position has its intellectual rewards, there aren't many others.

"It's not the kind of life most people would like," she says. "People say it's elegant to have all these perks and public attention. But I value my personal privacy very much, and I will gladly give up my public image."

In the two years she has been in Washington, Mrs. Kreps has impressed colleagues — and Carter — with her ability to grasp the wide variety and often unrelated issues at Commerce.

The department, which has 38,000 employees and a $4.3 billion budget, promotes growth of industry and commerce, administers the merchant fleet, aids ethnic minorities, explores and charts the seas, sets measurement standards, forecasts the weather, promotes tourism and takes the census.

Mrs. Kreps isn't a member of Carter's economic inner sanctum. Last year, she and Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall, also an economist with a Ph.D., were dropped as regular members of the interagency Economic Policy Group, headed by Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal.

Mrs. Kreps made light of the matter. "Boys will be boys."

Still, President Carter does consult her on economics questions, a distinction previous secretaries of commerce have not always enjoyed.

Carter has made Mrs. Kreps his chief economic diplomat, sending her on numerous trips abroad to promote trade agreements. Earlier this month she went to China, at a time when the administration seems to be nearing a decision to extend trade and other economic benefits to China. She also was asked to discuss a range of bilateral agreements on shipping, science and technology and meterological matters.

She has exerted domestic influence as well. Mrs. Kreps was one of the first to argue for a tax cut to stimulate the economy.

And when Carter's relations with the business community were on the ebb, she organized discussion sessions between the president and top business executives.

Jack Carlson, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, says Mrs. Kreps is more effective in selling Carter policies to businessmen than either Stuart Eizenstat, domestic affairs adviser, or Hamilton Jordan, Carter's chief adviser.

Carlson, who was an assistant director of the Office of Management and Budget in the Ford administration, rates her as above average. "Past Commerce secretaries have been out grazing in the pasture," he says. "But many times now, when members of the business community meet with the president, it's because she sets it up."

When Mrs. Kreps arrived in Washington, she had little previous experience in dealing with members of Congress. If testifying before them made her nervous, it didn't show.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, once noted that Mrs. Kreps' deputy, Anne Wexler, had been hired by the White House and asked Mrs. Kreps if she planned to replace Ms. Wexler with a man.

"I would," she replied with a smile, "if I could find one qualified."

Nor does she hesitate to tell Carter what she thinks. Last spring, Carter ended a cabinet meeting by asking his officers how the sessions could be improved. She told him that the meetings were dull and uninformative and suggested they might be better if Carter prepared an organized agenda.

Not long after she became secretary, an item appeared in a gossip column that two of Mrs. Kreps' top staffers, a man and a woman, were found sharing a sauna in the bathroom adjoining the secretary's office.

Mrs. Kreps' reaction: "I was concerned people would think I was being extravagant by having a sauna, that they wouldn't know that (former Commerce Secretary) Maurice Stans had installed it with his own money."

If Mrs. Kreps, the economist, is conscious of money, she's not averse to spending it on what she really wants. At home, she and her husband drive matching Mercedes.

She grew up in impoverished Harlan County, Ky., during the depression and worked her way through Berea College typing papers and washing dishes. Her parents divorced when she was 4, and she lived with her mother.

"All that hasn't made me thrifty or insecure about money," she says. "I love to spend it."

Tracks Ice Cream Origin

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — A Navy chief's visit to a local dairy bar has triggered a month of research into the origins of the ice cream cone.

Chief Torpedoman Ronald Bush says it all began when he read on a BeeGee Dairy placemat that the ice cream cone was invented by Ernest Hamwi.

"Hey, that's not right. It was my grandfather," Bush recalls saying.

"I used to tell my friends at school," Bush says, "but they laughed at me. Nobody believed he invented the ice cream cone."

Bush sent the placemat to his father, Cecil Bush, who lives in Akron, Ohio. And, according to Bush, his father's month-long search through family files confirmed what he has believed since childhood: the inventors of the ice cream cone were Bush's grandfather, Frank Menches, and Frank's brother, Charlie.

Bush says the pair made the first cones at the 1904 Medina County, Ohio, Fair. He says the first cone was made by wrapping dough around an old sailor's tool called a fid, which was used to open splices in rope.

Hamwi didn't come into the picture until several months later, at the St. Louis Exposition of 1904, Bush says. Hamwi was selling Persian waffle pastries next to an ice cream stand when he decided to combine the two, Bush says. The result was Hamwi's "World Fair Corncuopia," the career Navy man says. An ice cream cone, yes, but not the world's first.

After their first success at the Medina fair, the Menches brothers bought an Akron factory and opened their Premium Ice Cream Cone and Candy Co., Bush says. He says the brothers produced 60,000 cones per day and sought unsuccessfully to patent the source of their new-found fortune.

One Man's Story Of A Futile Rescue Try At Sea

By NILS L. MUENCH
For The Associated Press

About two hours after we rounded Great Isaak Light off the Bahamas, the Pirana — powered by a strong wind — faced the heavy seas of the Gulf Stream.

A light aluminum racing boat, the Pirana lacks the gentle roll of traditional sailboats, responding to high seas with a quick, jerking motion. On deck, care is called for — even when sitting you must hang on. At night, with blowing spray and waves sweeping the deck, extra caution is required.

At about 7 p.m. I went below. Then came the words all sailors dread: "Man overboard! Man overboard!"

Returning to the deck, I saw that the skipper, Bob Beck of Grosse Pointe, Mich., had tossed a life ring and strobe light into the sea, and Danny McKinley of Detroit was flinging another overboard.

There was much shouting. "Keep an eye on the man." "Jib the boat." "Get the engine started." All was done.

In the ocean was Tom Curnow.

Chuck Bayer of Grosse Pointe, Mich., turned on the ship's powerful lights, and I saw Tom's face low in the water.

The skipper made a last-minute maneuver with the mainsail, leaving us slightly farther from Tom than we would have wished — 15 to 20 feet. Less than two minutes had passed.

Several lines were tossed, but I could see only one had reached Tom for sure. He made an effort to grab the line, but missed.

Very slowly, almost dispassionately, he uttered his first words: "Better hurry. Better hurry."

The Pirana turned to make a second pass, and the sloop drew up only a few feet from Tom. The boat rolled and pitched in the high seas — sometimes by as much as 30 degrees.

More lines were thrown, but Tom failed to catch them.

It's impossible to hold a sailing vessel motionless in high seas and strong winds for more than a brief period. Soon the Pirana fell away, and a third approach began.

The sloop halted, with the aid of the engine, with Tom on the port beam 10 to 12 feet away. I saw him floating on his back, his body and face six inches under water.

I realized he could not survive without help — a situation I had mentally prepared myself for years ago. I dashed below, grabbed my flotation vest, ran topside and jumped overboard.

I learned later that Keith Newell of Grosse Pointe had thrown four of the ship's life preservers at Tom — but Tom did not respond.

When I reached Tom he was below the water, but the float vest allowed me to get his head into the air. He was lifeless and as far as I could tell he wasn't breathing. But I told him, "We'll make it. Hang in there. We'll make it."

After what seemed a very long time, but may have been only 10 or 20 seconds, a line was laid across my shoulders. I grabbed it with my left hand, holding Tom with my right arm.

The crew began pulling us in, but I realized that the boat was dragging me and Tom through the water rather than over it. Then the line was pulled from my grip. Later I learned that the mainsail had suddenly filled with air — carrying the boat away.

As the boat sailed away, the float vest escaped from my hand.

Tom was wearing heavy clothing and racing gear, including foul weather gear and boots, and I was also in full racing gear — safety harness, knife, flashlight, foul weather gear.

It was impossible for me to keep Tom afloat with his gear and my own without the float vest.

It was only a few feet away. With my arm around Tom, I began swimming toward it. I swam four feet, and the wind blew the float vest 4½ feet. I swam harder, and the vest floated off again.

Some of my shipmates later suggested that at that point I reached a "him or me" decision, but that was not the case. I was confident I would survive. Actually, I was saying to myself, "Tom, you'll never survive unless I get you that float, so you'll just have to do without me until I get it."

I struck out for the float, now about six feet away, grabbed it and returned to the spot where I left Tom. But he was gone, and in the darkness I had no way of finding him other than by feeling with my legs and my body.

I considered diving. But now, I believe for the first time, I considered that diving would mean abandoning my float vest and putting my own survival in question. I zipped on the vest and continued to tread water.

After a struggle, I found my pocket strobe light and held it aloft, hoping it would guide the Pirana — now distant but easily visible.

Pirana was too far away for me to see any details, but I thought the mainsail was down. Later, I learned that one line thrown to Tom had wrapped around the propeller — knocking it out.

Without either engine or sails, Pirana could not return until the sails were hoisted. But I was impatient. I shouted, although the crew could not have heard: "Come on back, you guys, quit fooling around."

But I was confident I would survive. I had confidence in Pirana and all aboard — or else I wouldn't have gone over.

The mainsail up, the Pirana approached, halting six feet away. I caught a line and wrapped it around one wrist, grabbing it with my other hand. I was jerked upward by a wave, and pulled aboard.

It had been 16 minutes since Tom went overboard.

Then someone thought of counting heads aboard Pirana. Conceivably, in the confusion, we could have lost another man.

We should have 11 aboard. Thank God, the headcount was 11. And then I remembered we started with 12. I could not suppress my tears.

Ghost Of Girl Haunts Castle

WINCHESTER, Tenn. (AP) — Tucked away in East Tennessee is an old English castle complete with towers, an exact replica of Sir Walter Scott's library, and its own ghost.

It is the 90-year-old Hundred Oaks Castle, a rich man's dream which in the end housed monks instead of princes and which today is a tourist attraction.

The castle was bought at auction in 1977 by Hal and Alma Reagan, a prominent Gatlinburg couple. They purchased it from Winton S. Douglas of Winchester for $418,500.

Douglas still runs the 37-room castle for the Reagans.

"Mrs. Reagan has been busy restoring it," he said in a recent telephone interview. "She has been redoing some of the rooms and making a showplace out of it."

He said that since the castle's tourist season had begun April 1, it had averaged 40 to 50 visitors a day, mostly from out of town.

The castle was the dream of Arthur Marks, son of Tennessee's 21st governor, Albert S. Marks.

Marks became obsessed with old English castles while serving as an American consul in London.

"He was infatuated with the baronial way of life," Douglas said.

When he came home to Winchester, he began building his dream castle patterned after the ones he had visited in England. He hoped, Douglas said, to entertain royalty in his own castle.

But Marks died before the castle, started in 1891, was finished and it was taken over by the Paulist Fathers, a Roman Catholic religious order, at the turn of the century. They left Hundred Oaks in 1965.

Douglas said each of the owners had done something toward finishing the castle and that Mrs. Reagan is finishing up the last part — the interior of one of the towers.

The ghost story? Douglas said that when the Marks family was living in the castle in the early 1890s, "some friends or family, it's not clear which, came to visit. While they were there, one of their children, a little girl 8 or 10 years old, disappeared. They couldn't find her but they kept hearing her all over the castle. A day or so later, they found her drowned in the spring cellar."

NCNB, Integon, Reynolds, Burroughs Wellcome Building Extensive Collections

N.C. Businesses Big Purchasers Of Area Art

By RALPH SPRINKLE
Associated Press Writer

Art is big business with some of North Carolina's big businesses.

Walk into the lobby of R. J. Reynolds Industries Inc. corporate headquarters in Winston-Salem and you're greeted by a 10-foot diameter, 3,500-pound sculpture titled "Aggregation for Growth," which balances on eight springs on a granite base.

The slightest touch sets the entire sculpture in motion. Employees and visitors are encouraged to touch it.

Integon Corp., a Winston-Salem neighbor of RJR Industries, has a small collection of original oils and watercolors depicting historic churches in the insurance company's 33-state operating area.

Begun in 1967 with a painting of a country church, the Integon collection now numbers 12, including seven churches in North Carolina, two in Virginia, and one each in South Carolina, Kansas and Georgia.

The collection includes a Bob Timberlake painting of the 1734 St. Thomas Episcopal Church still standing in Bath, North Carolina's oldest incorporated town dating from 1705.

Visit some of North Carolina's major corporations today and you'll find sculptures, oils, watercolors, lithographs, acrylics, pottery, pin and inks, terra-cotta and countless combinations decorating office lobbies.

In addition to R.J. Reynolds and Integon, the companies include North Carolina National Bank in Charlotte, CIBA-GEIGY in Greensboro, Burroughs Wellcome in the Research Triangle and Wachovia Bank and Pilot Freight Carriers Inc. of Winston-Salem.

The art works number in the thousands of pieces, and appraisals would show the cost of the combined works to be in the millions of dollars.

NCNB, a pioneer in corporate art, beginning in the early 1960s, now counts 2,100 pieces in its collection, ranging from simple glazed pots from North Carolina potters to monumental sculptures by internationally famous artists.

NCNB recently donated its six-ton bronze disc — "Il Grande Disco," by Italian sculptor Arnaldo Pomodoro — to Charlotte's Mint Museum of Art.

The disc, which stands in a small courtyard in NCNB Plaza, now has brakes to restrict its whirling. It's so delicately balanced it turns easily, and it used to gain such speed in a high wind that bank officials were afraid it would slam someone into the next county — hence the brakes.

Wachovia owns three complete sets of the rare Louis Orr etchings of 50 scenes in North Carolina. Orr, an acknowledged master etcher, had the distinction of being one of the small number of artists to have his works hang in the Louvre in Paris during his lifetime.

RJR Industries, a long-time patron of the fine arts, owns more than 700 works, 139 of which were selected in a 1977 North Carolina Artists competition.

The RJR headquarters collection includes signed prints by Andrew Wyeth and original works by such artists as Louise Nevelson, Lois Dodd, Harold Altman and Frank Faulkner.

"As one form of corporate cultural support, the collecting of art by the state's corporations holds great potential. It may encourage meaningful interaction among artists and business executives," says Lawrence J. Wheeler, deputy secretary of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources.

His comment is echoed by NCNB Board Chairman Thomas Storrs. "Business and the arts are natural allies, a tradition that dates to the Medicis of Florence and before," said Storrs. "An objective of the NCNB art program is to advance this alliance in the communities in which we do business."

Until 1970, NCNB hired part-time curators to manage its purchasing program. In that year, the bank hired its first full-time art-program manager.

Wachovia Bank began its collection about 20 years ago, and today has the state's largest corporate collection. Four thousand paintings, prints and drawings and more than 5,000 pieces of other types of art are displayed in 200 buildings across the state.

Burroughs Wellcome and chemical manufacturer CIBA-GEIGY acquire contemporary art. James Crowley, director of CIBA-GEIGY's Greensboro facility said: "Our collection contains the type of art which elicits a definite response. You either like it or you don't — you can't be indifferent."

Looking back on the start in 1959 of the company's art collection, Crowley said, "What started out as an attempt to add some color and warmth to the bleak white walls of our corporate headquarters resulted in a significant art collection."

Burroughs Wellcome in Research Triangle Park started its art program just last January, unveiling 22 paintings and scultures on loan from the Whitney Museum in New York.

"We wanted our employees to see the collection first," said Thack Brown, the company's manager of public affairs, "so we invited them to come to a special reception with their families. We couldn't believe the turnout! If anyone had told me a year ago that I could fill our auditorium with employees on a Sunday afternoon to discuss contemporary art, I would have laughed."

The company plans to start purchasing art works of its own and gradually replace the items borrowed from the Whitney Museum.

In 1968, Pilot Freight Carriers of Winston-Salem began commissioning one art work a year. The company has expanded its holdings to include a large number of Tar Heel crafts such as a huge tapestry by Jose Fumero of Blowing Rock.

Like Pilot Freight, most companies surveyed prefer the work of North Carolina artists.

Jan Walters, who is responsible for Wachovia's collection, noted: "North Carolina has an abundance of good regional artists. So, when we look for art to place in one of our new offices we try to purchase the work of an artist from that area. The employees and customers appreciate the art even more when it is from their locality."

"In 1970, no museum or private collection had really undertaken to develop a distinguished collection of North Carolina art, strange as that seem," said John Jamison, NCNB vice president and public relations director. "We found that in just a couple of years of serious concentration on acquiring works by state artists, living and dead, we had indeed achieved the goal of having the most important such collection in existence. Of course, we do not consider that we have completed the job, and never will."

A part of NCNB's participation in the arts is the sharing of its works with the public. A traveling exhibition of selections from the bank's collection currently is touring the state as the latest in a continuing serious of touring shows.

The NCNB exhibits began in the late 1960s and at one time the bank had three separate exhibits touring North Carolina communities simultaneously.

Reynolds also sponsors traveling exhibits of its art, and later this year will send an exhibit to Charlotte, Fayetteville, North Wilkesboro and Greenville.

Integon and Pilot Freight Carriers have found a popular way to share their art. Their paintings are reproduced and mailed to stockholders, customers and friends as the covers of company Christmas cards.

They also give larger reproductions, free of charge, to anyone asking for them. More than 4,000 persons request prints each year from Integon and Pilot gives away more than 3,000 yearly.

"MOUNTAIN DOCTOR" . . . by Philip H. Morgan of Greenville, N. C., is one of 64 pieces of art photography within the R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc. corporate art collection in Winston-Salem. The work was selected from some 1,700 entries in the R. J. Reynolds Industries North Carolina Photography Competition held last fall. (AP Laserphoto)

ECU Student Nickie Nichols To Visit, Study In Taiwan

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
Director, ECU News Bureau

In addition to a heavy college course load, Nickie E. Nichols regularly puts in another 60 hours or more a week at full-time or part-time jobs such as drugstore clerking, sweeping floors and fixing plumbing.

Now, Nichols says, a 10,000 mile trip for five and a half weeks of study in a foreign land this summer "will be like a vacation to me."

The enthusiastic 20-year old Bethel youth has borrowed from the bank and has used some of his $500 a year "Daily Reflector" scholarship money at East Carolina University to buy plane tickets for a trip to Taiwan which begins June 22 and will end July 31.

Nichols is one of 80 international students and journalists invited to the 1979 Seminar on China Studies sponsored by the National Chengchi University and the China Youth Corps.

In Taiwan, he will study Chinese culture, history, economy, traditions and customs, learn some of the Chinese language, eat Chinese food, and attend Chinese opera and recitals.

"It will be a totally new experience," Nichols says, "I'm really looking forward to it."

Nichols adds that "the travel I particularly like,"—although the invitation stipulates that roundtrip international fares to and from Taipei are to be borne by the participants themselves.

He consulted Robert Boudreaux, ECU Financil Aid Officer, and other ECU officials who gave encouragement and filed his application after the seminar was announced by one of his instructors, Dr. Ralph Steele of the ECU Parks, Conservation and Outdoor Recreation faculty.

Nichols is a PC and OR major.

Work No Problem

"The work involved is no problem," Nichols says. "I work the year round, but study, learning, is most important. I consider college now a big part of my life. I expect to learn a great deal from this trip."

One of five children, Nichols earned a four-year "Daily Reflector" scholarship to ECU while a senior at North Pitt High School, where he now also works a full 40 hours a week as maintenance supervisor. Then, on weekends, he works part-time at Bethel Pharmacy and in addition, works as custodian for a dentist's office in Bethel.

He credits a friend, Mrs. Betty Speir of Bethel, counselor at North Pitt High School, with help and support. "She helped me a great deal in going to college, along with Mr. Boudreaux."

Boudreaux says "I don't know a more deserving person." Mrs. Speir says that Nichols "is the most industrious young man I've ever seen.

"He's looked up to in the community. He's considered a leader among the young people, is active in scouting and in the church. At North Pitt, he does a good job of supervising and goes beyond that — he does jobs that others won't do."

Nichols has held various jobs including the school janitorial work since high school. While in high school, he suffered injuries in an automobile accident which resulted in hospitalization and a year's wearing of a brace. He made up the missed school work and was a national honor student.

A year ago, for a "vacation," Nichols motorcycled across the country to satisfy his longing for travel experiences. He budgeted his money, which he will also have to do in going to Taiwan.

Taiwanese Help

The Taiwanese sponsors will provide accommodation, meals and transportation within Taiwan plus subsidizing costs over $700 for transportation from the U.S. west coast to Taipei.

Nichols says he has "put $1,000 into it now" for travel and still worries some about funds for such things as laundry, postal services, phone calls, contingencies and spending money, which are not included. "I've still got to come up with whatever I will need for those things," Nichols says.

Three days of free time are allowed at the beginning and conclusion of the seminar which will include 15 special lectures in English, study of the Chinese language, and special tours.

The seminar will include 25 to 30 Chinese participants' all English speaking college and university students. Meals will be family-style Chinese cuisine.

Sightseeing and special tours are included. For example, the program features visits to major construction projects and museums, botanical gardens, the Sun Yat-Sen Memorial Hall, a wreath-laying ceremony at the Martyrs' Shrine and paying homage to the late Chiang Kai-Shek at his "temporary resting place" at Lake Mercy.

Preparation

In preparation, Nichols has been briefed by ECU Professor Rosina Lao of the Psychology faculty, who attended the National Chengchi University and also was a participant in an earlier international youth seminar in Taipei.

Tar Heel Lawmaker Is Also A Talented Rock 'n Roll Man

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — One night last week, Rep. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, slicked back his hair, pulled on his jeans and T-shirt and transformed himself from a mild-mannered freshman legislator to a 1950s rock'n'roll singer.

He hit the stage at a Raleigh nightclub with his guitar slung on his hip and an act reminiscent of the energy-charged performances of Buddy Holly and Jerry Lee Lewis.

"We're gonna do some songs from the 50s," he shouted into the microphone to an audience composed mostly of his colleagues from the General Assembly, who soon recovered from their astonishment and were rocking'n'rolling themselves.

When he got to the hard-core 50s style with renditions of "Johnny B. Goode," "Rock Around The Clock" and "Little Darlin," most of the dancing stopped, and the legislators watched and clapped in time as Barnes rocked across the floor to his music, bending low with his guitar then leaping in the air.

"Will you look at Barnes," was a comment heard more than once.

He is not surprised that his colleagues were a little surprised at his performance. He hasn't been the most visible lawmaker during his initiation session in the state legislature.

"I get a lot of comments from people," he said in an interview after the performance. "I guess they can't believe a legislator can do this. It catches them off guard.

"They just can't believe that I can make laws and enjoy music the way I do."

In contrast to his fireball performance, Barnes, who was raised on a farm in Sherrills Ford in Catawba County, is a soft spoken man who derives pleasure from the fact that his music is done for charity.

The proceeds of all of his performances with the Hot Sands Band go to the Oasis Shrine Temple in Charlotte.

The band is a special acitivities unit of the temple and has been the Oasis' leading money-maker for projects for crippled and burned children in the past. The current seven members have been playing together about two years, Barnes said.

"We played frequently until I was elected to the General Assembly," he said. "It's something I enjoy plus I've got a good reason for doing it."

Barnes said very few people back in the 29th District he represents know of his avocation.

"I did not use it in the campaign," he said. "I felt that when you're running for office you should stick to the issues. If I hadn't, some people might have favored my election for the wrong reasons."

Although music has been a part of his life since he was a child singing in a family gospel quartet, Barnes says he doesn't have any aspirations to be a professional.

"I've had several offers even as recent as a year-and-a-half back to go professional. But to do it professionally would take a lot of the fun out of it."

The switch from credit consultant and legislator to musician poses no problem for Barnes because of his upbringing. He spent his childhood weekends singing at gospel conventions with the family quartet and even performed once with Minnie Pearl.

"I started in music when I was very small," he said. "I grew up in a family of 12, and out of 12 we had two quartets and one duet.

"On Sundays we gathered around the piano and sang. On a farm, there was nothing else to do, and music was our pasttime."

Barnes got into rock'n'roll and contemporary music after he left home. During a stint in the Air Force when he was stationed in New York, he sang back-up vocals for the Kingsmen, a rock group probably best remembered for its risque song, "Louie, Louie." Barnes, however, was not with the group when they recorded that song.

The Hot Sands Band does whatever kind of music a crowd wants, Barnes said. During the performance for legislators last week, the group began in tuxedos with contemporary tunes, switched to the Sha Na Na look for the 50s set and ended in country garb with such tunes as Kenny Rogers' "You Picked a Fine Time to Leave Me, Lucille."

Barnes does lead vocals for the group and plays rhythm guitar. He also sings harmony and if pressed, can play piano and drums.

"I can sing soprano, tenor, alto, base — whatever needs to be sung, I can sing it. Being raised in a quartet, I had to learn to switch off."

Wants Exchange Of Plays With Russia

By ROLAND TYRRELL

MOSCOW (UPI) — Theater director Joseph Papp said Saturday he wants to take five American plays — including the Broadway smash "Chorus Line" — to the Soviet Union in exchange for five Russian shows to be staged in the United States.

Papp said he discussed the idea with Deputy Culture Minister Georgy Ivanov, whose initial reaction was "sympathetic and positive." The show swap could take place within six months, Papp said.

Papp, who is on a 10-day trip to Moscow and Leningrad, told reporters at an informal news conference at the U.S. Embassy that the agreement on a new Startegic Arms Limitations Treaty inspired him.

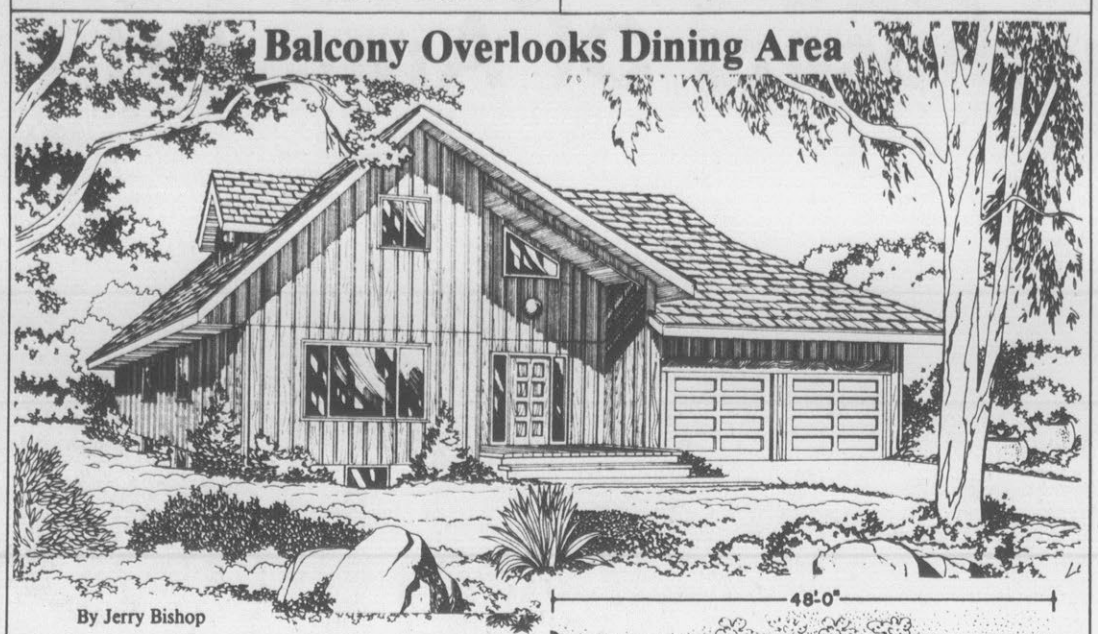

"Chorus Line," which deals with the life of a theatrical dancer in New York, includes heavy overtones of homosexuality — which is punishable by up to five years in prison in the Soviet Union's non-permissive society.

Soviet plays that Papp said might be suitable for the United States are "The Nest of Wood Grouses" by Viktor Rozov, "The Elder Son" by Alexander Vampilov, "Eenie, Meenie, Here Come the Soldiers" or "The Train Ride" by Vyacheslav Spesivtsev, Yuri Liubimov's adaptation of Fyodor Dostoyevsky's classic novel "Crime and Punishment" and "Don Juan Continued" by Edward Radzinsky.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Crainebrook

Balcony Overlooks Dining Area

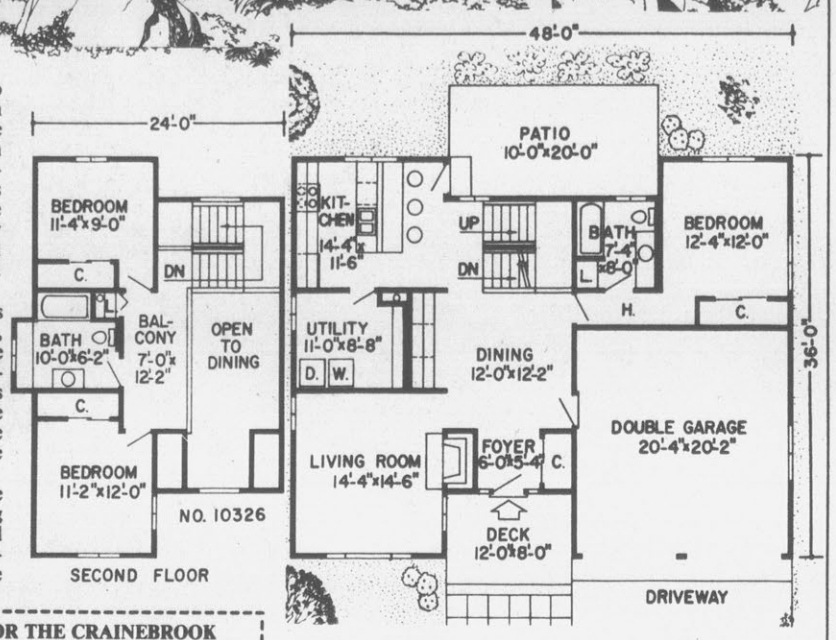

By Jerry Bishop

With the impressive two story dining area visible from the second story balcony, the Crainebrook, a three bedroom design, strives for contemporary appeal inside and out. Its up to date use of space includes a utility/laundry room, firelit living room, and informal kitchen complex with connecting patio.

Vertical siding sheathes much of the home's exterior, and the front entry double garage is placed for convenience. Inside, from a gracious foyer, visitors can glimpse the dramatic dining room, the design focus, and its double story sweep.

At rear of the plan, the service areas are grouped for efficiency. A utility room offers laundry and counter space that suggests added uses as a sewing or hobby center. The adjoining kitchen complex is made up of a corridor kitchen with breakfast bar and access to the patio, a bonus for barbecues.

Notable is the first floor bedroom, allowing parents a quiet spot of their own, complete with full bath and linen closet.

A partial second story includes two sizable bedrooms separated by another full bath. The level features abundant closet space and the unique balcony overlooking the dining area.

For additional storage space or possible finishing as a recreation room, a basement is outlined.

Critics May Frown, But Plate Art Collections Up

By BARBARA BASLER
AP Newsfeatures

Many Americans, it seems, like their chicken in a bucket and their art on a plate.

And just as gourmets don't like the idea of chicken in a bucket, some art critics are upset by the collector plate and its new popularity. The plates, they say, are something more than a plate, but less than real art.

Still 3.9 million Americans are now buying, trading and hanging plates which are made expressly for collectors. And dozens of firms, including Wedgwood, Royal Doulton, Royal Copenhagen, Gorham and Lenox, are producing the pates, often in numbered, limited series.

The plates feature everything from scenes of Americana by the late Norman Rockwell to birds, book characters and religious figures. Some series reproduce popular art, while others feature original works commissioned and executed as plate art.

Plate collecting is so popular, there is a whole plate culture. Plate collectors can subscribe to plate magazines and periodicals, attend plate-club meetings, and watch the Bradford Exchange — a kind of stock exchange that charts the ups and downs of plate trading prices.

Plate collectors even have their own fair, and this year the third annual National Plate Collectors Fair, sponsored by the Collector Platemakers Guild, was expected to attract 15,000 visitors in Chicago because, according to Guild President Emil S. Polk, "The Midwest is becoming the geographic center of the American plate-collecting world."

All of this plate activity is fairly recent, dating from the mid-1960s, when plates first became a mass-market item here. Until that time, only specialized plates for Christmas, Mother's Day or other holidays had been available in large quantities.

Most of these plates were Scandinavian or German, and other European firms entered the U.S. market only after a French-produced collector plate, featuring birds on etched crystal, proved phenomenally successful.

After a series of recessions in the late 1960s, more and more Americans began to look at plates as an affordable investment. U.S. platemakers saw that interest as an opportunity, and they, too, came into the market in numbers.

Today, platemakers are cautious about portraying their products as an investment, stressing instead that plates should be selected and purchased for their aesthetic appeal.

"I tell people to buy what they like, and if their plates gain in value, that's just gilding the lily. The rising price just confirms your own good taste," Polk says.

Buy what you like, Polk advises new collectors, and buy from a good manufacturer because reputable, known firms, "commission good artists and produce quality plates."

Collectors and platemakers are proud of their plates, and sensitive about criticism. Indeed, much of their literature is aimed at defending the hobby. Conceding that plates may be in the words of one critic, "canvasses for the masses", a platemakers' press release counters with "Why shouldn't the masses have them?"

And while those in the business have pinpointed their market — most plate collectors are over age 35, and 74 percent are female — the press release points out that, "There is nothing effeminate about plate collecting."

To buttress that statement, the release cites plate artists such as LeRoy Neiman, and points out that his work appears in such "macho magazines as Playboy..."

But, as Polk says, plate art has "an enormous appeal for the average person", because, as he explains, the art is easy to understand, and the art form isn't intimidating.

"After All," he explains, "Plates are familiar objects to everyone — we've been eating off them for years."

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Our 25-year-old dogwood is dying from borers. We sprayed last year but the borers are still there. What else can I do? (A.B., Cary)

A. One of the most practical ways to control dogwood borers is to dig them out with a sharp knife. Remove and destroy the damaged wood and then dress the wound with a tree wound compound. (R.L., Robertson, extension entomologist)

Q. My dwarf moonglow pear tree has been struck by fire blight. What treatment should I give it? R.D., Bailey)

A. Prune out blighted twigs 10 to 12 inches below any sign of discoloration. Are you sure you have a moonglow? Moonglow pear is supposed to have a high level of resistance to fire blight. (R.K. Jones, extension plant pathologist)

Q. Can anything be done to strengthen the stems of my rabbiteye blueberries? They can't support the berries. (R.N., Whiteville)

A. Blueberries are normally pruned in later winter each year. Prune to remove weak and spindly growth, and then cut back the remaining shoots. This will reduce the number of fruit buds and strengthen the remaining wood. If you did not prune last winter, and if your plants are now overloaded with young green berries, remove some of the berries as soon as you can. Either strip some of the berries off by hand or tap the shoots with a stick to shake off some of the berries. Berries on overloaded plants tend to be very small. (A.A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Q. Our peonies got black spots on the leaves after they bloomed last year, and I was afraid they would die. How can I prevent this from occurring again? (E.O., Greensboro)

A. Your peonies should not be seriously damaged unless 50 percent or more of the leaf area is diseased. If the disease does become very severe, spray several times at 14-day intervals with captan or zineb. Use two tablespoons per gallon of water. Remove and destroy old leaves and stems after they die. (R.K. Jones, extension plant pathologist)

Here's the Answer

Q. — I have to fasten some things to a concrete basement wall and intend to use expanding anchors, the kind that hold in place when a bolt is fitted inside them. The problem is how to make holes in the concrete to hold the anchors. A friend told me to use my portable electric drill to make the holes, but I don't seem to be getting anywhere with it. What is your suggestion?

A. — The portable electric drill is fine for that purpose, but you have to use carbide-tipped bits. Ordinary bits not only won't do the job, they will be ruined. Another way to make holes in concrete is with what is called a star drill, a long piece of metal which is placed against the wall, hammered, turned, hammered, turned and so on until the hole is deep enough. There are new fasteners on the market every few months, so see what your dealer has in stock before deciding which to use. If a lot of holes must be made in the concrete, consider renting or buying a stud gun, which shoots fasteners through wood into the wall. There are several variations of this tool.

Q. — Our house is very old, but we want to put some solar collectors on the roof to catch the sun's rays. How do we go about it?

A. — Many books have been written to answer that single question, so it would be impossible in this space to give you even an idea of everything that is involved. You should get your hands on some books on the subject, of which there are about 200, either from a bookstore or your local library. You can also call the National Solar Heating and Cooling Information Center, Rockville, Md., whose toll-free number is 800 523-1919, for specific data. Solar collectors work best when installed on the south side of the house, but remember that they are only part of the system. Besides being collected, the sun's energy must be distributed and stored. There are actually thousands of companies manufacturing such equipment, some of which make rather exaggerated claims. The government and industry are engaged in programs designed to determine which of the systems are living up to the claims made for them. If you are having a solar energy system installed, it is vital that it be done by experts.

Q. — Our cedar closet doesn't seem to be working any more. It used to have a definite cedar smell, but doesn't ever since I painted the inside walls a year ago. Should I have left them unfinished? Is that why the pleasant odor is gone?

A. — That's precisely why. You should not have put any finish on it. What you did was to seal in the odor that protects your clothes. You'll have to get the paint off, either with a remover of the non-flammable type or by intensive sanding or steel wooling. When the paint is off and the pores can breath, the aroma will return.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 17743.)

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Do you have a window air conditioner? Or do you intend to get one?

You already know it is a voracious energy user. But you wouldn't have it or contemplate getting it if you didn't also know how comfortable it can make you in the hot summer months. What you have to do, therefore, is to use it wisely so that you can get the benefits of it without wasting fuel.

A mechanical-engineering professor, Keith Hawks, knows something about that, since he pinpoints areas of potential energy savings at Purdue University. He advises following a rigid annual ritual that begins with proper positioning of the air-conditioning unit. Window air conditioners, he says, should not be placed in a sunny window facing west or south. Instead, it should be positioned so the afternoon sun will not hit it. Otherwise, when the sun strikes the coil and heats it up, the cooling capacity of the unit will be reduced considerably.

Suppose, for whatever the reason, the unit must be placed on the sunny side of the house?

"Build a sunshade of some kind over the top of the unit so that the sun's rays will not hit it directly. Such a sunshade can be made of sheet metal, wood or even plastic."

If your window air conditioner is undersized for the area you want to cool, it will run too often at full speed, obviously a wasteful method of cooling. If the unit is oversized, efficiency loss is again the price, since it will turn itself off and on too much, again reducing efficiency as well as shortening its life.

"To run at optimum efficiency," Hawks says, "the unit should be totally free of dirt and dust. One way of doing this is to remove the unit from its case and clean the coils with a garden hose. Don't underestimate the importance of clean or new filters, either. It's a simple maneuver to remove the front of the air conditioner and vacuum the interior, then change or clean the filter. It's a pretty good idea to replace or clean the filter every month during hot weather."

When the air conditoner is not releasing cool, crisp air, the most probable cause is a refrigerant that needs changing.

Should you turn off the unit to conserve energy if you are not home during the day?

The answer to that question comes from another Purdue professor, Frederick Morse, who teaches three courses in air conditioning. "No," he says, "because it would be like unplugging your refrigerator when you go out. It would just have to work harder when you turned it on again."

Getting back to Professor Hawks, would you believe he doesn't have an air conditioner in his own home? He says he has used them in the past, but at present has a 36-inch attic fan.

"It doesn't really help too much in the extreme heat of the day, but it keeps the house cool when the sun goes down and the temperature outside is lower than the air inside."

Special Diets Are On Menu

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Nutritious meals and special diets can be obtained in fast food restaurants, says dietitian Louise W. Hamilton. You just have to choose carefully from the menu.

She recommends broiled instead of fried foods. If you must choose the latter, remove and discard the breaded or fried coatings. Choose fresh instead of canned fruits, and go easy on dressings at the salad bar or on low-calorie platters. Stay away also from creamed or buttered vegetables and anything that is oily, greasy or soggy.

Ms. Hamilton is a professor of food science with Pennsylvania State University's cooperative extension service and president of the 36,000-member American Dietetic Association.

Urge Food Talk In Classrooms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many rural children are culturally richer than their urban counterparts, says Mary Goodwin, health coordinator for Montgomery County, Md.

"They know about wild berries, they grow their own fruits and vegetables," she says in an article in a USDA publication, Food and Nutrition. "They know what food is and where it comes from."

The health official would like to teach children good nutrition by making classrooms a "supermarket of people" talking about food. Cooks would tell them how to make peanut butter cookies. Grandmothers would talk about the foods they ate in the old days. Farmers would tell how to buy good food.

Final Meet Of Band Boosters

The D. H. Conley District Band Boosters will hold its last meeting of the school year, Thursday, May 31, 7:30 p.m., in the high school auditorium. All parents of band students are encouraged to attend the short business meeting before the concert.

"Band Night" will be featured, with conductors Ms. Candace Dixon and James Fleming. Ms. Dixon teaches beginning and advanced band and strings at A. G. Cox and D. H. Conley. Fleming teaches beginning and advanced band at Chicod and G. R. Whitfield. The public is invited to attend.

Underwriters Name Officers

The Pitt County Life Underwriters Association elected new officers to serve for 1979-80.

Officers elected at a recent PCLUA breakfast meeting were: Scott Smith, president; Barry C. Chesson, first vice president; William F. Deans, second vice president; and William H. Fleming, secretary-treasurer.

The association is comprised of life insurance agents from the Pitt County area.

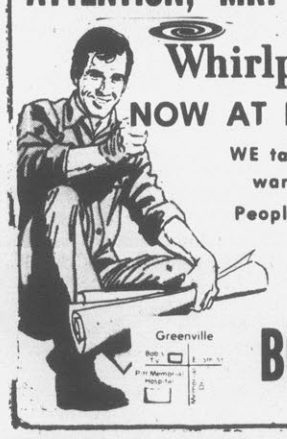

Honor Bachelor For Efforts

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 59-year-old bachelor has won an international award for helping neglected and homeless children throughout the world.

The 1978 International Humanitarian Award of Variety Clubs International will be presented to Hermann Gmeiner in New Orleans at the organization's 52nd annual convention May 23.

Gmeiner is being recognized for his work as founder and director of SOS Children's Villages, a private child welfare organization that provides shelter for the homeless in 135 special villages in 65 countries in Africa, Asia, Latin America and Europe.

Low Back Pain Not Always Slipped Disc

I think I have a slipped disc. I have a great deal of pain in my lower back. Can anything be done about this without an operation? I'm 24. The reason I think I have a slipped disc is because a friend of mine had exactly the same pain and he was cured by an operation for a slipped disc. Sometimes I can barely drag myself to work. — Mr. J.F., Mo.

Dear Mr. F.:

Identifying with a friend's problem is a sure way to run into trouble. There are so many causes for low back pain that the intensity and the location of the pain are in themselves no indication of the exact diagnosis.

The term "slipped disc" has found its way into modern jargon and is often wrongly used interchangeably with "low back pain." Although a slipped disc can cause low back pain, not all such pain is caused by a slipped disc. One cannot just "think" he has a slipped disc. This diagnosis can be established only by specific detailed medical, neurological and X-ray examination.

There are 33 bones, or vertebrae, that run from the top of the neck to the tail bone, or "coccyx." Between each of the vertebrae there is a solid elastic tissue known as a "disc." Each one acts as a protective shock absorber that cushions and protects against injury to the spine. These discs also protect the bony edges from rubbing against each other during the many complex rotational movements of the body.

Sometimes, as a result of injury, bad posture or an anatomical defect, a disc may protrude and cause pain, locally, or distant from the actual site. Terms such as "slipped"' "herniated" or "ruptured" may apply to this condition.

X-ray studies can pinpoint the exact area of a slipped disc if, indeed, it is present. Once the diagnosis is established, conservative treatment, bed rest and traction are first tried. In some special instances, the injection of an enzyme is considered. Only if intensive pain interferes with living a normal life is surgery contemplated.

Before you commit yourself to the homemade diagnosis of "slipped disc" you should find out if you have it. Incidentally, one of the great dangers for sufferers of low back pain is to have too vigorous massage or manipulation, without specific medical guidance. Too often a simple problem can be converted into a complicated one by poorly directed manipulation.

Violinist Never Stops Learning

By JOHN J. MULLINS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The bad thing is to rest on your laurels and stop learning, says Dylana Jenson, who at 17 became the youngest person and first American woman violinist to win a silver medal in Moscow's Tchaikovsky competition.

Ms. Jenson, who won the medal July 4, 1978, practices five hours a day and studies two weeks each summer in Switzerland with the noted violinist, Nathan Milstein.

At 74, Milstein, whom she considers "absolutely the greatest violinist in the world," continues giving concerts as well as teaching.

Asked what she'd like to be doing when she is his age, Ms. Jenson, 18 in May and a student of the violin since before she was 3, said, "I hope I'm doing what he does.

"The only way to do it is just to have the approach he has — you never stop learning... You can never look back and say, 'Look what I achieved.'

"I think every musician keeps hoping he just keeps growing. That's their goal, really... I feel I'm really my worst critic.

"I knew what I was after, technically and musically. Not that I knew how to get there, but I know I'm not there yet," she said.

Where she is — at an age when most girls are thinking about high-school graduation — is a concert violinist who has performed on three continents, beginning when she was 11; has been made an honorary citizen of Costa Rica, her mother's homeland, and teaches violin.

"I think teaching's important," she said, explaining she likes to become involved, finding it helps her playing.

Ms. Jenson, who lives in New York, was in Boston as a soloist with Concerts in Black and White. She will tour the Soviet Union in December and the Scandinavian countries the following month.

Ms. Jenson said her mother had begun teaching her and two of her other children the violin, although the mother did not know how to play. She said her mother had taught them for about one year, teaching herself at night "so she would know the problems we'd be facing."

"I didn't really read what I was playing (then)," Ms. Jenson said. "First you play, then you find out what you're playing," like speaking before one writes and reads.

Her father, a writer and former editor of a historical magazine, is now her manager. She is named for the poet Dylan Thomas.

"Both loved music," she said of her parents, "and my mom always wanted to play. She never got a chance, so she wanted to be sure we got the opportunity."

'Telescopic' View Of Child

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Fred Paster brought home some long cardboard tubes and told his son, Mark, 4, and daughter, Lisa, 3, that they were telescopes.

The following day Mark whispered confidentially to his mother that he'd looked through his telescope and seen God.

"What did he look like?" Mrs. Paster asked.

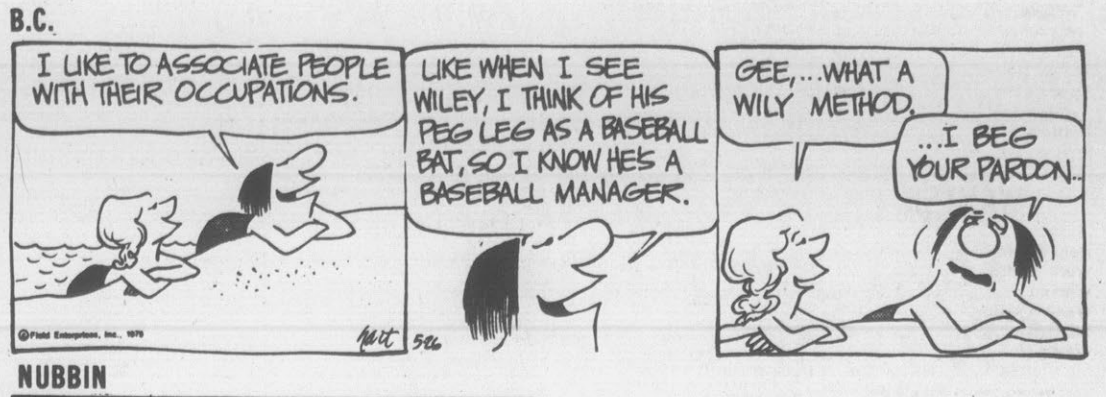

"He kinda looked like my dad," replied the youngster.

MEET OUR ERA MOVING MACHINE

WE LET YOU GO "INSTANT HOUSE HUNTING" RIGHT FROM OUR OFFICE!...FREE!

For the millions of families faced with a inter-city move this year, ERA represents a virtual revolution in real estate. ERA ends the expensive, time-consuming business of flying to a strange city, trying to determine which Realtor to call, and then looking at home after home.

Consider the refreshing ERA way.

Simply visit our office, tell us where you're going and what you're looking for in a home. Moments later, our ERA "Moving Machine" will begin spinning out pictures and descriptive data of currently available homes that meet your specifications. We call it arm chair home-hunting. And, within hours, the ERA Member Broker in your destination city will be in touch with you to help you select the home you want.

ERA. We're here to help you in the way we know best.

Donna Reed Returns To Television

After a long absence from television, Donna Reed returns to star in a miniseries on NBC, "The Best Place to Be," which will be presented on "The Big Event" Sunday, May 27, and "Monday Night at the Movies" May 28 (9 to 11 p.m. both nights).

Starring with Reed are Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., Mildred Dunnock, Betty White, John Philip Law and Stephanie Zimablist. Others in the cast are Michael Shannon, Gregory Harrison, Timothy Hutton, Lloyd Bochner, Madlyn Rhue and Rick Jason.

The contemporary romantic drama is based on Helen Van Slyke's novel, which was on the best-seller lists of both The New York Times and Publisher's Weekly for 32 weeks in 1976 and 1977.

"The Best Place to Be" is the story of Sheila Callahan (Reed), a beautiful woman widowed in early middle age who realizes she has been daughter, wife and mother, but never her own woman. A brief, ill-starred love affair with a younger man, Dr. Mancini (Law), restores her confidence in her attractions, much to the consternation of her elderly mother, Rose Price (Dunnock). A chance meeting with widowered Bill Reardan (Zimbalist Jr.). a former suitor, gives promise of a more conventional situation for Sheila until she concludes she has the unfortunate penchant for bringing tragedy to those she loves best. From the chaotic lives of her children, Patrick, Maryanne and Tommy — which reflect today's society — comes the answer to her own dilemma.

Donna Reed has come a long way professionally since she first faced a movie camera with Van Heflin in the film test for M-G-M in the late 1930s. Though the test resulted in contracts for both players, neither could forsee the heights each would attain in the acting field.

In fact, Donna, a Denison, Ia., farm girl, had one career well under way before she made the test. She had gone to Hollywood to attend school. While at Los Angeles City College she studied to qualify as an executive secretary, which was to be a waystation on the road leading to teaching. In the process of getting her education, however, she had also been elected Campus Queen, and it was this honor which brought her to the attention of the M-G-M talent scout who arranged for a screen test.

Although Donna was not an immediate sensation when she started acting, she drew increasingly important roles, and her career took a big leap forward when her sterling performance in "From Here to Eternity" was voted an 'Oscar.'

Then came television and the long-running hit series, "The Donna Reed Show."

Since the series ceased filming, Donna Reed has lived quietly and happily content to be a full-time wife and mother.

FAMILY DRAMA - Donna Reed stars as a widow who becomes involved in her children's problems and copes with the question of companionship, in "The Best Place To Be," to be colorcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Sunday, May 27, and "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" May 28 (9-11 p.m.).

Contemporary Drama Focuses On Conflicting Teen Values

"The Survival of Dana," a contemporary drama about conflicting teen-age values among the affluent high school students, will be broadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies" May 29 (9 to 11 p.m.). Starring are Melissa Sue Anderson in the title role, Robert Carradine, Marion Ross and Talia Balsam.

The drama focuses on a growing phenomenon, the mindless antisocial behavior among affluent teen-agers. Anderson portrays Dana Lee, a beautiful teen-ager who, when her parents decide on divorce, leaves the security of her North Dakota home to live with her grandmother in Southern California.

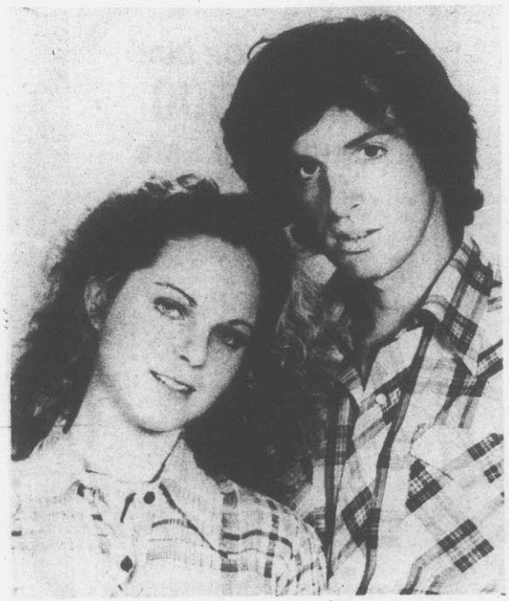

As a new student at the local high school, she finds her traditional values challenged by her peripheral involvement with a middle-class gang of schoolmates. It takes a disastrous confrontation, resulting in a tragic death, for her to realize that her original values were solid, her way of life true and that she will be a survivor.

Now 16, Melissa Sue Anderson's acting career has taken off by leaps and bounds, and it all started with television commercials about eight years ago.

"I really enjoyed those commercials. Everyone was very patient and helpful," she recalled. "In the back of my mind, young though I was, I knew I had found what I wanted to do for the rest of my life. My first dramatic break, as a result of the commercials, was a role in a segment of 'The Brady Bunch.'

"I guess dramatic is the wrong word," she continued, "but for the first time I had actual lines to speak that helped further the story's action. Then it was back to commercials, but I knew before long I'd have another chance to act."

Melissa's intuition proved correct. She was signed to portray Robert Culp's daughter in an episode of "Shaft," which led, at age 11, to winning the role of Mary Ingalls, the eldest daughter, in "Little House on the Prairie."

Melissa Sue Anderson and Robert Carradine star in "The Survival of Dana," a new motion picture-for-television about conflicting teen-age values, to be broadcast Tuesday, May 29 (9-11 p.m.) on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies."

Incredible Array Of Talent Needed At 500

The running of the Indy '500' Sunday, May 27, will probably bring together more professionals than any sporting event in the world — an incredible array of talent formed from an apprenticeship that was both lengthy and demanding.

This professionalism is evident from the moment a race car idea is conceived in simple sketches on paper. The final sketch is then turned over to a draftsman to perfect, and he brings the idea to blueprint stage. The mechanics lift out all the small parts and send them to machine shops to be made.

While waiting for the machine parts, the fabricators start the work of building and shaping the monocoque 'tub' to which the body panels will be attached.

But it hasn't always been this way. Every mechanic at Indy can remember the days when the whole thing was a back-alley hit-and-miss affair; when work was often delayed until there was money to buy a magneto or some other part. Not today. If you don't have a large budget and a team of professionals you simply can't compete.

A lot of car builders actually put their body designs in wind tunnels to test the aerodynamic — or 'slippers,' as they say trackside — characteristics. Others mount the wing on top of a pick up truck and drive around [illegible] to see how much drag they have and how much force it produces. But what-ever method they use, they study it. Nothing is left to guess.

The question around the pits at Indy is as old as the race itself: Which comes first, the driver or the mechanic? Nobody has ever successfully answered it, but all will agree that a good driver-mechanic combination is hard to beat. Sometimes impossible.

Unlike most sports where the mid-30s marks the end of a personal career, auto racing seems to have evolved into one where seasoned veterans keep going on and on. Practically all of the stars of the sport are in their late 30s or early 40s, which is rather unusual since the sport demands so much physically of its competitors.

'Dummy' Airs Tonight

Paul Sorvino and LeVar Burton star in the two-hour dramatic special, "Dummy," the impassioned true-life account of Donald Lang, a black deaf youth, illiterate and incapable of speech, who suffered injustice because of his severe handicaps after his arrest in connection with the murder of a Chicago prostitute. In the drama, airing Sunday, May 27 (9 p.m.), Sorvino portrays the court-appointed lawyer, Lowell Myers, himself completely deaf, who is faced with representing his client on a felony charge.

The lawyer manages to establish rapport with the young man, a human puzzle unable to communicate — and battles valiantly on behalf of his client, ultimately before the Illinois Supreme Court. In the process, he sheds light on the human suffering incurred by someone unable to communicate — a man already imprisoned outside the walls of a penitentiary.

Adapted from Ernest Tidyman's non-fiction book by the same title, about the events leading up to and including the precedent-setting trial, "Dummy" also stars Brian Dennehy, Rose Gregorio and Gregg Henry. It was filmed on location in and around Chicago, where the real action and trial proceedings took place.

While preparing for his portrayal of Myers, Sorvino went to deaf people and sought the information he felt he needed. "I was fortunate enough — although admittedly nervous — to meet the man whom I portray. He is profoundly deaf. That is, he has no sense of sound at all. I learned about the elongation of some words. It's what they call a 'time envelope' problem, because deaf people cannot gauge how long to hold vowel sounds. And 's's' are difficult — they're blunted because the silibant quality is of so high a frequency the vibrations cannot be sensed.

"I got a book on sign language, a means of communicating for the deaf begun over two hundred years ago in France, even though I am called upon to use signs only sparingly in one scene."

Sorvino met Myers during the making of the film, and says he was struck immediately by his intellect and sensitivity. Some of his preconceptions about him were wrong, however.

"He is an unprepossessing gentleman and would probably cringe at my saying this, but he is a heroic man. He undertook a difficult case with his handicap; and with the aid of his sister, Mrs. Jean Markin, represented his client in court by lip reading her simultaneous account of the testimony as she heard it.

"It was a challenging and rewarding role. Deaf people love to talk. They have so much to express."

Name Causes Confusion

Being David Niven's son can be quite embarrassing, especially when you're not.

The famous English film star has two sons, but neither one is 32-year-old actor Kip Niven. This non-relationship caused mass confusion when both worked for Walt Disney Productions a few years ago.

David played four roles in the studio's hit feature film, "Candleshoe," a suspense-comedy co-starring Helen Hayes and Jodie Foster. Kip Niven joined star Brock Peters in "The Million Dollar Dixie Deliverance," a Civil War thriller rebroadcast on "The Wonderful World of Disney" Sunday, May 27 (7 p.m. on NBC-TV).

"People come up to me and ask, 'Are you related to David Niven?'" said Kip. "They're utterly amazed when I say he's my older brother. I get a lot of mileage out of that one," continued Kip, who really has an older brother named David, a school teacher in Colorado.

A TV Guide writer once credited him as actor David Niven's son for a "Bionic Woman" episode.

"I wrote the gentleman a letter saying: 'Thank you for bringing it to my attention that David Niven is my father. For until now I had been under the delusion that I was the son of William and Elizabeth Niven, a charming couple I grew up with in Kansas. I never met dad, but I've enjoyed all his books. And if you see him, please tell him I'm looking forward to vacationing with him in Switzerland.'"

A Kansas City (MO) native, Kip received his education at the University of Kansas, and refined his acting skills doing community theatre work and summer stock. The Viet Nam veteran has built up an impressive list of motion picture skills, including "Swashbuckler," "Midway," "Earthquake," and "Magnum Force."

David, on the other hand, is a veteran of more than 70 films, including his Academy Award-winning performance in "Separate Tables." Among many memorable characterizations are the globe-girdling Phileas Fogg of "Around the World In 80 Days," the original Phantom in "The Pink Panther," and detective Nick Charles in "Murder by Death."

The sophisticate's two volumes of memoirs, "The Moon's a Balloon" and "Bring On the Empty Horses," have become international best sellers.

Deals With Child Abuse

Actress Cheryl Ladd will make her dramatic television debut on ABC when she stars in "A New Start," a straightforward look at the growing problem of child abuse in America.

Robert Urich co-stars with Ladd as her husband in a role that is an equally dramatic departure from the course of his career.

Cheryl Ladd, a parent of a small child, is an activist in the rehabilitation war against child abuse. She and her husband, producer David Ladd, have devoted more than a year to the development of this project.

Ladd plays a wife who wasn't ready for marriage and a mother who wasn't ready for motherhood. Urich is her ambitious, often absent husband, struggling to start a business in a new town. They are parents of Robbie, a typical rambunctious preschooler.

Dissatisfied with her life, her marriage, and unable to adjust to her new community, she often takes out her own frustrations on Robbie. Both she and her husband do not recognize that they have a problem until Robbie is seriously injured while being punished by her.

Only after an extensive assessment of her life, her marriage and her role as a woman, can she and her husband begin the mending of their injured family.

Also starring is Eileen Brennan, who will play the role of a concerned lay therapist.

Eichman's Capture Depicted

Nerves stretched dangerously thin by a 15-year international manhunt threaten to snap as Adolf Eichmann's captors come within 10 seconds of losing their prisoner after the most daring abduction in history in "The House on Garibaldi Street," the taut and true story of the Nazi War criminal's capture and removel to Israel.

The tense drama, starring Topol, Nick Mancuso, Martin Balsam and Janet Suzman, will air as an "ABC Theatre" presentation Monday, May 28 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Based on Isser Harel's best-selling book of the same title, the drama begins in February, 1960, with the discovery of Eichmann's whereabouts in Argentina and the decision to send in a team of crack Israeli agents headed by Harel (Balsam) to bring him out.

Painstaking investigation follows, with care at each step to be sure that no one knows why the agents (pretending to be German visitors) are inquiring about the activities of one "Ricardo Clement" — the man they are sure is really the Nazi war criminal responsible for carrying out the systematic plan to exterminate all of Europe's Jews.

After missing him at one address, the agents improvise a series of ruses to find his new home, but everything misfires until sheer accident leads them directly to his door — on Garibaldi Street in Buenos Aires.

The capture of 'Clement' is swift and smooth, and a medical examination quickly proves him to be Eichmann, but the pressure on the Israelis becomes almost unbearable as they are forced to hide out with their prisoner until means can be arranged to get him out of the country.

Topol stars as Michael, the senior agent reporting to Harel. Michael is a survivor of the death camps who must call on every ounce of his self-control to resist the almost overpowering urge to simply kill Eichmann and have done with it.

Nick Mancuso is Ari, a much younger agent, born in Israel and puzzled by the older man's fierce determination to capture and punish a man whose crimes were committed more than 15 years earlier.

Janet Suzman is Hedda, who finds that the intimacy of having to shave and feed this man that she loathes is almost too much to be borne.

Janet Suzman and Martin Balsam star as Israeli agents in the gripping story of the greatest manhunt in history, "The House On Garibaldi Street," airing as an "ABC Theatre" presentation on Monday, May 28 (9-11 p.m.).

Magic Of Wonder Woman Is Explained Once Again

For those who didn't spend hours of the past few years sprawled on the floor, chin propped up on elbow, watching 'Wonder Woman' on television, a short guide to the exciting lady's background and magical powers is provided here.

Lynda Carter stars as the legendary heroine who continues to battle evil in a special two-part presentation of "The New Adventures of Wonder Woman," airing Monday and Tuesday, May 28 and 29 (8 p.m. both nights), on CBS-TV.

WONDER WOMAN: Princess Diana of Paradise Island, who first left her island home during World War II to battle the forces of evil and returned in 1977 to fight for freedom. Charles Moulton created the mythical heroine in 1941, to provide a heroic female model for a comic book.

DIANA PRINCE: Wonder Woman's assumed identity in the world outside Paradise Island. Out of view of others, she can whirl into Wonder Woman at any time.

PARADISE ISLAND: Wonder Woman's invisible island home, located in the Bermuda Triangle, ruled by her mother, the queen, and populated by an immortal and ageless race of Amazon women extant since Graeco-Roman times.

STEVE TREVOR JR: High-ranking official of the intelligence community and son of the late Major Steve Trevor, with whom Wonder Woman worked during World War II.

IADC: Inter-Agency Defense Command, Washington-based intelligence service reporting directly to the White House, by which Steve Trevor Jr. and Wonder Woman (disguised as Diana Prince) are employed.

Finally, although Wonder Woman has a special fondness for Steve Trevor Jr., as she did for his father, she can express love for a man only at the cost of her ageless immortality and special powers — which she has pledged to use in the interest of all mankind.

'Runaways' Premieres

Alan Feinstein and Karen Machon star in the new series "The Runaways" premiering Tuesday evening, May 29 (8-9 p.m.) on NBC-TV. Feinstein stars as Steve Arizzio, ex-cop turned clinical psychologist who specializes in helping runaways and Machon co-stars as Karen Wingate, head of a student counseling and employment office.

Across the nation the Federal Government, with the help of industry, is assisting local centers or 'safe houses' to provide young runaways with food, shelter and counselling.

"The Runaways," a new one-hour weekly series premiering Tuesday, May 29 (8 p.m.), on NBC-TV, focuses on this youth problem that has reached staggering statistics. It will dramatically portray the plight of the two million-plus young people every year who close a door and become a runaway.

With Alan Feinstein as a former police officer in the Juvenile and Missing Persons Division of the L.A.P.D., turned clinical psychologist, the segment will dramatize factual cases of children on the run — the difficulties encountered by both the runaways and the people searching for them, the jeopardy and the adventure.

Executive Producer William Robert Yates sees the series as a contribution toward the understanding of why young people choose to disappear. Not only for the obvious reasons — conflict with family, school peers, etc., but those who seek activity in a life in the pop-music world, or for involvement in a religious movement or anti-social order.

In the premiere episode, "Dark Side of the Road," Susan Myers guest stars as a seventeen year-old working hard to overcome kleptomania. In an effort to start anew she transfers to a different school but is 'set-up' as a thief by a classmate. The humiliation and false accusations as well as her classmates' knowledge of her illness triggers the girl to run from the situation.

Another Carradine Is On The Scene

Robert Carradine loves acting and auto racing. The only problem is that he can not do one while he does the other, and he can't do one unless he does the other.

"It may sound like a vicious circle, but it isn't" explained Carradine. "Unfortunately, race driving and acting aren't too compatible, for me, at least as far as insurance companies are concerned. So, whenever I sign for an acting role, I forego racing. But to keep the creative juices flowing, I believe you have to have other interests outside the acting field. In my case, it's racing cars."

Carradine, who credits advice from his father, John, patriarch of the acting clan which also includes David and Keith, for helping him develop his talents in both acting and racing, stars in "The Survival of Dana," airing on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies" May 29 (9 to 11 p.m.).

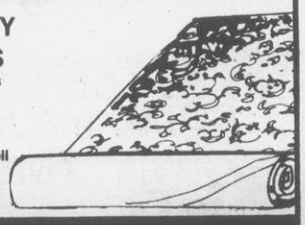

"Dad always encouraged us to learn as much as we could about whatever career or avocation we pursued," said Carradine. "For good acting discipline, he advised us to go to college and major in English literature. His reasoning was that it would give us an added advantage to be familiar with the classics — novels, plays and poetry. He was right."

Drama Stirred Some Memories

Topol — full name — Chaim Topol — is Israel's leading actor, known in the U.S. most especially for his stunning performance as Tevye in "Fiddler on the Roof," and stars as an Israeli agent in "The House on Garibaldi Street," airing Monday, May 28 (9 to 11 p.m.), on ABC-TV. The drama is the true story of Adolf Eichmann's capture (in Argentina) and removal to Israel.

Topol, talking with a visitor during a break in the filming, recalled the reasons for the importance of the Eichmann story.

"Even after the refugees began to arrive in Israel after the war — the British didn't allow them in at first, you know — it took time before they could talk about the death camps, but when they were there, in freedom, longer, the horrifying stories started to come out. And we — the Israelis — were absolutely convinced that we had to have the men responsible."

Three names were foremost among the known survivors from the Nazi murder machine: Bormann, Mengele and Eichmann. And quietly, relentlessly, the search went on.

"We knew there were amateur Nazi-hunters trying to find Eichmann to kill him in revenge, but I think Ben-Gurion did a very important thing by insisting that he be brought to trial so that the murder of the Jews could be put on record before observers from all over the world. It brought to light what the Holocaust really meant, and put the lie to the anti-Semites' claim that the death camps were only 'gossip.'

"The Nuremberg Trials, because there were so many, one after another, and because they came so soon after the war, didn't have the same impact on world awareness as the single, individual trial of Adolf Eichmann, who claimed to be 'a cog.' He brought to light what a little cog in a mammoth murder machine can mean, how effective that 'cog' can be."

The actor shook his head sharply, shaking the dark memories back into place, into a deeper place. "Here, we are doing the story of a manhunt, a suspenseful story, and if a message gets across, that's an extra, important bonus.

"We can only hope that this suspense story will also remind people of what a single creature — that looks like a human being from the outside — can do within a framework. Then maybe we'll be more careful when we choose our leaders. It seems that a holocaust always starts with a very little fire, and everybody laughs. As they laughted at the house painter from Austria — Adolf Hitler."

LeVar Burton Takes On Lang

During the three years since LeVar Burton was propelled to stardom as Kunta Kinte, the African youth kidnapped into slavery in the miniseries, "Roots," he has portrayed his share of streetwise kids fighting their way up, through, or out of the ghetto.

"Donald Lang is different," claims Burton, regarding the character he portrays in "Dummy," to be broadcast Sunday, May 27 (9 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV. "His ghetto environment is the same, but that's where any similarities end.

"I was intrigued by the uniqueness of Donald Lang's plight," continues Burton, "but the obstacles were overwhelming. As an actor, feeling and instinct are most important tools. However, verbal expression, the dialogue, is provided as the means to convey those abstracts. With Donald, there were no words, only the abstracts. He had never even been taught the sign language for the deaf. Everything was internalized.

"Sure, I was able to obtain the available information. I spoke with friends who had known him, and met people with similar handicaps. I spent time in the home of Carol McEvoy, who does the television deaf news broadcasts on KTLA in Los Angeles — her parents are deaf — and it gave me firsthand contact with these handicapped people. Deaf people in this country are invisible. They're discriminated against; people are not sensitive to their needs.

Holden Vengeful Rancher

William Holden stars as a Colorado rancher who sets out to find the men who attacked his home, slayed his family and stole his horses, in "The Revengers," a western drama on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Tuesday, May 29 (9 to 11 p.m.), Susan Hayward and Ernest Borgnine also star.

Holden portrays John Benedict, who arrives at his ranch to discover that a band of men have ridden off with his herd of horses after killing his family. Benedict learns the identity of the band's leader from a man captured by a sheriff's posse.

Louis Gossett Stars

Emmy Award winner Louis Gossett Jr. ("Roots") stars as an ordained minister who returns to his Alabama birthplace following the death of Martin Luther King Jr., and is persuaded to mount a campaign as the first black candidate for sheriff in the country's history, in "This Man Stands Alone." The World Premiere drama will air as the "NBC Movie of the Week" Wednesday, May 30 (9:30 to 11 p.m.).

Clu Gulager, Mary Alice, Lonny Chapman and James McEachin also star.

Gossett portrays Tom Haywood, a follower of Dr. King who quickly learns that life in Alabama has not changed during the time he was working as an activist on the West Coast.

Soon after his arrival in his home county, Haywood learns that a young girl has been attacked late at night. Despite local protests, Sheriff Johnson and District Attorney Tayman (Chapman and Gulager) move slowly to investigate the accident.

Members of the black community subsequently decide that their best response is to attempt to oust the sheriff, who has been in office as long as most of them can remember. Their first goal is to begin a voter registration campaign, but local merchants resort to intimidation and blackmail and the drive produces less than the desired results. When the election is held, Haywood does win, after the Federal government re-checks the ballot count. But as he takes office, the new sheriff learns that his problems are just beginning.

Gossett has a vast knowledge of the South and felt at ease in his role of Tom Haywood. "I grew up in Brooklyn, and my family was fairly poor," he says. "My parents each worked two jobs, and in the summers my cousins and I were all shipped down to our great-grandmother in Georgia, and she would take care of us by herself.

"According to the family Bible she was 117 when she died, but she may have been even older, she wasn't sure. And she actually remembered being a slave as a little girl. She was only about three or four, too young to work, but she remembered the day they were liberated from the plantation in Watkinsville, Ga.

"There's a rich heritage in my family," the prematurely-balding actor adds, "predominately black and some Indians — Seminole and Cherokee and some of the North-eastern tribes — and it seems some of them were also slaves. You can look at my mother's side of the family and see a gradation of color, gradations of qualities of hair.

"Me, I just happen to take after my father — he didn't have any hair."

Bob Hope Is 76

Bob Hope, who, through his association with the USO, has spent countless hours entertaining the men and women of the Armed Forces, will be in the company of service personnel once again for the special telecast of "Texaco Presents the All-Star Birthday Party for Bob Hope . . . At Sea," airing on NBC Wednesday, May 30 (8 to 9:30 p.m.). Much of this 76th birthday salute to the legendary comedian will originate from the deck of the USS Iwo Jima, helicopter carrier that will be anchored in New York harbor.

Hope is one of the few men in the United States whose newspaper photographs would be recognized even without a caption.

If the Hope family tradition of going strong until their late 90's holds, the nation can count on another 20 years of rapid-fire monologues and merriment in the Hope fashion, a style never successfully imitated because of his unique delivery.

'Stunt Seven' Has Action!!

A team of stunt experts attempt a daring air, sea and land rescue of a kidnapped movie star in "Stunt Seven", to be broadcast Wednesday, May 30 (9 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Christopher Connelly, Christopher Lloyd, Bob Seagren, Soon-Teck Oh, Brian Brodsky, Juanin Cley and Morgan Brittany star as the intrepid seven. Elke Sommer, Bill Macy, Peter Haskell and Patrick Macnee also star. Others included in the cast are Morgan Paull, Lynda Beattie, Santy Josol and Robert Ritchie.

Beautiful Rebecca Wayne (Sommer) is kidnapped by Boudreau (Macnee), a modern-day pirate who operates from Freeland, a sovereign fortress state located on stilts in the middle of the Gulf of Mexico. Rebecca is just about to finish work on her latest picture and her abduction has the frantic movie director (Macy) and producer (Haskell) in an uproar. Boudreau demands $10 million in 72 hours or, he threatens, he will kill the actress. In desperation, the movie company accepts the offer of a stunt man, Hill Singleton (Connelly), to organize a rescue team to besiege Freeland. Singleton draws together four other stunt men and two stunt women whose specialties range from hang-gliding to underwater demolitions to battle Boudreau and save the life of the actress.

Elke Sommer enjoyed the derring-do aspects of the film's 'stunt experts.'

"I understand stunt people perfectly," she says. "They're as insane as I am. I do plenty of crazy things. I raced an off-road jeep race in 109-degree desert heat, and won! There were just nine men and me."

Drama Encores

The first time-around the drama was titled "Aspen." Now it's coming back "The Innocent and the Damned." The six-hour presentation about a gigolo accused of murder in a glamorous ski resort will air in five installments as an "NBC Novel for Television," beginning Thursday, May 31 (9 to 11 p.m.).

The drama follows the development of the sensational trial, its effect on the citizens of the town and the professional careers of the legal staff assigned to the case, as well as the pressures brought to bear by infighting between real estate and ecological groups over a planned recreational development

Part I: Young attorney Tom Keating (Elliott), is furious when the murder trial of gigolo Lee Bishop (King) is not given to him by his law firm's senior partner. Keating's father has his own pressures from real estate interests. Keating pleads for a delay in Bishop's trial but is refused. Meanwhile, his longtime romance with Kit Pepe (Harper) ends.

Part II: Bishop tells Keating a totally different version of the murder, and his complaints bring about his dismissal from the law firm. The case goes to trial and the jury is given an incendiary charge before rendering their verdict.

Part III: The jury returns with a guilty verdict, and Keating begins a lengthy task of mastermind Bishop's effort to get off Death Row. Keating's successful blackmail plot against his former employers acts as a catalyst for his legal career.

HOLLYWOOD — MARLA ADAMS, long remembered as Belle on the daytime soap opera, "THE SECRET STORM," makes a guest appearance on "CARTER COUNTRY" this week as a conniving Southern Belle who is out after RICHARD PAUL's new wealth. It's one of the rare times the personable actress gets to showcase her comedic talent and those who do remember her from the daytime serial will definitely be impressed.

WILLIAM SMITH, who joins the cast of "HAWAII FIVE-O" this fall along with SHARON FARRELL, has a list of television and movie credits almost long enough to stretch from Hollywood to the Islands, but 'Five-O' is not among them.

MIKE FARRELL led a contingent of his "M*A*S*H" coworkers to a small Los Angeles theatre to see Mike's wife, JUDY, in a new stage play opening for an early-summer run. After the opening night, Judy confided that she wasn't the least bit nervous until she spotted her husband mouthing her dialogue — the result of Mike having helped his wife memorize her lines.

ERIK ESTRADA is now keeping company with a sultry and attractive lady named SHARON KOVAKS, who just happens to be Director of Talent Relations for NBC. Somehow that figures!

DONNA PESCOW may be denying any romantic ties with actor MARK HARMON, but she's not saying much of anything about the fact she and her TV husband, ROBERT HAYS, have been seen together frequently as of late.

Network and studio executives are not being at all effected by the gasoline crunch in Southern California. They've simply designated members of their staffs to take their cars and wait in the long lines of the service stations. However, there's a growing list of disgruntled employees since the task means they have to wait in lines twice a day, once for themselves so they can get to work, again for their bosses so the powers-that-be can leave work early for an afternoon on the golf course and tennis courts.

It may sound familiar, but OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN is once again saying that she and longtime boyfriend/manager, LEE KRAMER, are "seriously" thinking about getting married. Actually, Olivia offers such a comment about once a year.

ABC has plans for two new daytime series, "PARADISE HOTEL" and "LOVE IN THE AFTERNOON." However, details of the shows are still in the works and the network is tactfully not referring to the shows as 'soaps.'

Watch That Chocolate

George Memmoli, co-starring as Earl, the corpulent studio engineer who always cues star McLean Stevenson by firing a rubber dart gun in NBC-TV's "Hello, Larry" comedy series (Friday, 8:30 to 9 p.m.), tips the scales at 350 pounds — a relatively svelte figure compared to his former weight of 430.

As a result, Memmoli's character comes in for a lot of ribbing in the series as fat jokes pile up like pounds on his 5-foot 7-inch frame. But he remains philosophical about the physical put-downs.

"If the jokes are funny and it's relevent to the show, then it's OK," he said. "Some of the fat humor are cheap shots, though I get a few of my own in too.

"Everybody believes in the myth of the jolly old fat man. I know a lot of overweight people who are just depressing to be around.

"I think everybody's concerned with their faults, like myself, but can't control those faults. Every person who's overweight knows they should lose that weight, but they're too lazy, procrastinate, or they just talk about it.

"Believe me, McDonalds and Colonel Saunders don't help either!"

Memmoli, who's appeared in the films "Rocky" and "Mean Streets," has been heavyset most of his life, but spent three years slimming down, dropping 240 pounds in one year to a comparatively slender 190.

"Then I cracked my skull open doing a stunt that misfired while shooting a film in Georgia," he said ruefully. "That put me in a hospital for three months and I took six more to convalesce. I started gaining all the weight back while recovering. Who knows where my career could be now if not for that."

He considers the excess avoirdupois to be a career disadvantage, limiting chances for acting roles, and hopes to take three more years to jettison the poundage.

"I guess there are a lot of grossly overweight actors," said Memmoli. "If you post an ad in the show business trade papers for fat actors, you'll get a lot of responses."

Away from the series' set, Memmoli enjoys boating, collecting coins and guns, and cooking Italian dishes — though the latter may impede his crusade to lose weight.

"The key is eating a good balanced diet," said Memmoli.

"It's those chocolates — that's the killer!"

MIRTH AND GIRTH - George Memmoli, who co-stars as Earl, the corpulent studio engineer in NBC-TV's comedy series "Hello, Larry," weighs in at 350 pounds and is subjected to many "fat jokes" on the show as a result. Said Memmoli: "If the jokes are funny, and it's relevant to the show, then it's OK."

Michele Will Tell

Q: What has happened to Patti Roberts? She wasn't on Oral Roberts' last television show, and I would like to know why. P. YOUNG, MORGANTON, N.C.

A: So would a lot of other people. The Oral Roberts representatives only say that Patti is busy with her "international ministry" — whatever that may be.

Q: Has Judith Barcroft, the actress who played Ann Tyler Martin on "All My Children," left the series permanently? C. H., FAIRMOUNT, N.C.

A: In the script, Ann was 'sent away' to a mental institution, and her name is mentioned from time to time. Since she wasn't 'killed off,' there is a strong chance that she may one day return to Pine Valley.

Q: Who plays Kevin on "The Mackenzies of Paradise Cove"? Where do I write to him? M. ROGERS, PILOT MT., N.C.

A: Shawn Stevens plays Kevin, one of the five lovable orphans in the new series. Send your letter to him c/o the show, ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

Q: What's Rex Smith doing these days? He played Michael Skye in "Sooner or Later." Also, what's his address? L. KINLAW, ST. PAULS, N.C.

A: Rex is currently banking lucrative royalties from his hit recording, "You Take My Breath Away" and very busy with his first Broadway play, "Grease," in which he essays the role of Danny Zuko. Write to him c/o NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Q: Who narrates the segments of "The Dukes of Hazzard"? K. WOOD, WELDON, N.C.

A: Top music star Waylon Jennings, co-founder of the popular 'outlaw' style of country music, introduces the segments in ballad style and also fills in with off-screen homilies and observations.

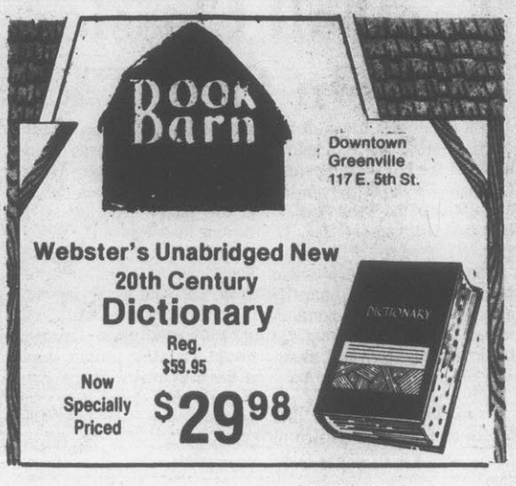

Terror Created

The discovery of an ancient sarcophagus turns a Caribbean pleasure cruise into a nightmare in "Cruise Into Terror," a suspense thriller airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," June 1 (9 to 11 p.m.).

The star-studded cast includes Ray Milland, Hugh O'Brian, John Forsythe, Christopher George, Lynda Day George, Frank Converse, Stella Stevens and Lee Meriwether.

Tarkenton Joins ABC Sports

Fran Tarkenton, one of the greatest professional quarterbacks ever, has signed an exclusive multi-year contract with ABC Sports as an expert commentator on its professional football coverage.

Football Superstar Fran Tarkenton will join ABC Sports as an expert commentator on their upcoming football telecasts.

The 39-year-old Tarkenton, holder of a most impressive array of career records, will join Frank Gifford and Howard Cosell in the commentators' booth for six 'NFL Monday Night Football' telecasts this coming season. In addition, he'll be a commentator for three pre-season contests and the Pro Bowl in Honolulu, for a total of 10 games.

Don Meredith will also be offering his unique commentary alongside Gifford and Cosell for 14 regular-season games, as he did last year.

As a pro quarterback, Tarkenton holds the following career records: most yards gained passing, 47,003; most touchdown passes, 342; most passes completed, 3,686; most passes attempted, 6,467; most consecutive seasons passing for 1,000 or more yards, 18. Last year, he added season marks for most passes completed, 345, and for most passes attempted, 572.

Tarkenton, who earlier announced his intention to retire from the Minnesota Vikings after 18 seasons in the National Football League, was known as "the scrambler" during his illustrious pro career, which also began with the Vikings in 1961 and included a five-year stint with the New York Giants before his return to Minnesota.

Following his return to the Vikings in 1972, he led the team into the Super Bowl three times.

A graduate of the University of Georgia, Tarkenton is a native of Richmond, Va., who now makes his home in Atlanta. He and his wife, Elaine, have three children.

The Teen Scene

VALERIE BERTINELLI of "ONE DAY AT A TIME" had hoped to utilize her hiatus time from the series by traveling to Pennsylvania and vacationing with her parents, but apparently such a visit will be short-lived if a contract can be worked out for Val's movie debut.

TONY DANZA has discovered that there's only one thing wrong with being a teen favorite and a parttime professional boxer. Now a lot of the boyfriends of his young feminine admirers want to challenge him in the ring!

It was "BUGSY MALONE" that launched SCOTT BAIO in his successful career, and early reports have it that his performance as the alcoholic teen-ager in the TV film, "THE BOY WHO DRANK TOO MUCH," will give his career another timely boost. Scott portrays a teen athlete who begins drinking too much.

Now it's rumored that KRISTY McNICHOL will return to "FAMILY" for the upcoming season but after that her representatives do want to free her from her contract because motion picture producers are anxious to get her signature on the dotted line — the result of her work with TATUM O'NEAL in "LITTLE DARLINGS".

JOHN TRAVOLTA suffered only minor injuries when a dog near his Malibu Beach home bit him, but the injuries were severe enough to cause a month-long postponement of his next film, "URBAN COWBOY." John's making use of the delay by continuing conversion of an old DC-3 airplane into his private flying hideaway.

Bout Will Air

CBS Sports has announced that it will present same-day coverage of the major heavy-weight boxing match between Kallie Knoetze, the World Boxing Association's number one ranked contender, and John Tate, the number three ranked contender, Saturday, June 2, on "CBS Sports Spectacular" (5 to 6 p.m.).

The bout, being fought in Bophuthatswana in southern Africa, is a 12-round event, and the winner will be in a favorable position to fight for the WBA heavyweight championship after the expected retirement of Muhammad Ali, the current champion.

Football Classics Air On CBS-TV

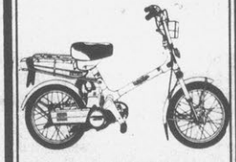

CBS Sports has acquired the rights to broadcast the 42nd renewal of the Blue-Gray Football Classic on Christmas Day and the 31st edition of the Senior Bowl, to be presented Saturday, Jan. 12, 1980.

The Blue-Gray game, played in Montgomery, Ala., annually matches players from northern schools against those from the south, as does the Senior Bowl, which is played in Mobile, Ala.

Frank Smith, President, CBS Sports, said, "We are pleased to add the Blue-Gray game and the Senior Bowl to our lineup of post-season college and pro football broadcasts, and we look forward to the games living up to the exciting matchups of the past."

With the acquisition of the Blue-Gray game and the Senior Bowl, CBS will be broadcasting three of the major college all-star football contests to be played this season. The other gridiron classic is the 55th annual Shrine East-West Football Game, which will be played Jan. 5 in Palo Alto, Calif.

Sports Fans Ask 'Dennis Who?'

Ask a lot of sports fans who Dennis Johnson is, and they will probably say something like, "Didn't he play on the Washington Redskins' defensive line?"

Those same people would probably scratch their heads if you told them there's a Dennis Johnson playing for the Seattle Supersonic NBA basketball team. Not only does he play for the Sonics, but Johnson is one of the toughest defensive hawks in the game.

Johnson and the rest of the Sonics get another chance to capture that elusive NBA crown when they take on the NBA Eastern Conference champion in the NBA finals. One of the final tilts will be broadcast Tuesday, May 29, on NBC-TV (11:30 p.m.).

When the Supersonic guard graduated from Pepperdine College in California a relative unkown, it did't take some of the league's finest shooters long to discover how difficult it was to score against the San Pedro native.

Of course, it's never easy when you have an aggressive 24-year-old breathing down your neck.

Last year in the semi-finals against the Denver Nuggets, Johnson had the unenviable task of guarding superstar David Thompson. But the Sonic bumped, pushed and physically wore the former N.C. State 'great' to a frazzle.

Thompson only averaged 23 points against Seattle and shot a low 435. All of a sudden, folks in the NBA began asking who this youngster was.

Lenny Wilkins, Seattle coach, says Johnson plays "the toughest defense of any guard in the NBA." A lot of the Sonic opponents would echo that feeling. He scores and rebounds well, considering most of his time is spent overshadowing the likes of Lionel Hollins, Pete Maravich, Paul Westfall, Quinn Buckner, George Gervin and Doug Collins.

He averaged 12.7 points during the regular season, 16.1 during the crucial playoff games last season. Despite his excellent play, Johnson failed to make either the all-rookie team or the all-defensive squad. Add to this a salary that is well below the astronomical salary of other teammates, and you have a youngster who wants to prove himself.

But it's still not too shabby for a young man who grew up in a family with 5 brothers and sisters. Johnson now lives in a beautiful house outside Seattle.

Now maybe he can help the Supersonics win an NBA championship and gain the recognition he deserves.

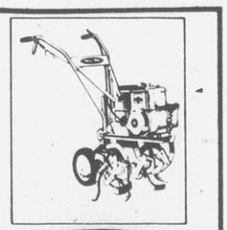

Nicklaus' Life A Delicate Balance

If you've ever griped about being pressed for time, consider the case of Jack Nicklaus, who plays in one golf tournament after another each year, heads a multimillion-dollar conglomerate and still is willing to drop anything to see his sons play a basketball game.

"You have to know where to draw the line," says Nicklaus, golf's all-time money winner. "If I'm playing golf, it's strictly golf. If it's a business deal, I don't want to talk about my golf game. The trick is, I never schedule work for part of a week and leave the rest of the time free. That never works because that open time gets filled up."

This week, the PGA event he's participating in, the Memorial Tournament at Muirfield Village Golf Club in Dublin, Ohio, is requiring even more of Nicklaus' time and energies. He created the tournament four years ago, and has been active in the intricate behind-the-scenes planning. He also designed the Muirfield course, the first course especially designed for tournaments. It is laid out so spectators can watch from the hilltops and cable for the television crews is buried underground.

Some of Nicklaus' competitors on the tour say that he has accomplished so much that he has no more goals to acheive. Nicklaus denies that.

Unser Is Not About To Quit

The inherent hazards of his profession haven't scared off race driver Al Unser, and he has no intentions of quitting. "If I thought about my most frightening experiences," he says, "I'd probably quit racing. I just put all that out of my mind. I don't worry about it. If an accident happens, it happens. I just erase it and go on to the next race."

Unser will again be ready to blast off in the race of races, the Indianapolis '500,' Sunday, May 27. ABC will televise same-day coverage of the classic event later that evening (9 to 11 p.m.).

The back-to-back winner of the Indy '500' is not totally immune to the risks of racing, however. "We're not iron men," saysUnser. "I think all of us have fear at times. I don't want to get hurt — no way!"

Unser, a 39-year-old veteran driver from Albuquerque, N.M., became the first driver ever to win all three USAC 500-mile races in a single season and set a prize-money record of $591,149, including year-end bonus money, last year. That figure easily surpassed the previous one-year earnings mark of $494,149, which he had set in 1970, when he won 10 races, including his first Indy.

Ironically, the USAC almost kept Unser out of this year's Indy when it banned six of the foremost Indy teams for being "in bad standing" with the organization. The six teams, Unser's included, are owned by board members of the rival Championship Auto Racing Teams that had split off from USAC last winter. Drivers who had won eight of the last 11 '500s' were likely to miss this year's race.

CART sued in Federal Court, claiming anti-trust violations by USAC and the Speedway. In the historic three-day hearing three weeks ago, Judge James E. Noland ruled the 'CART Six' could participate in the practice, qualifying and the running of the annual classic.

Rudyard Kipling Novel Airs

Two brawling, daredevil rogues set themselves up as rulers of a primitive country but find their dream of glory and riches filled with danger, in "The Man Who Would Be King," John Huston's movie based on the Rudyard Kipling adventure epic. Sean Connery and Michael Caine star in the movie which will air on CBS-TV Saturday, June 2 (8:30 to 11 p.m.).

Daniel Dravot (Connery) and Peachy Carnahan (Caine) are tough, shrewd ex-British Army officers determined to make their fortune in the wild and remote country of Kafiristan. The harrowing journey to their dream is filled with perilous challenges but eventually they reach Kafiristan, where they befriend an Ex-Gurkha soldier (Saeed Jaffrey), and help a village headman (Doghmi Larbi) beat a rival in battle.

Dravot's courage and success in battle leads to his acclaim as king and god by the natives as he leads an evergrowing army into greater victories. He is summoned to the holy city, where his greatest fantasy is realized — absolute power and enormous wealth. But despite Carnahan's warnings, Dravot lets his achievements corrupt him and puts their lives in jeopardy.

Director John Huston, who also wrote the screenplay with Gladys Hill, has directed many films in his career that have become classics, including "The Maltese Falcon," "The Treasure of Sierra Madre," "Key Largo," "The Asphalt Jungle," "The African Queen," and "The Night of the Iguana."

Dean Has New NBC Contract

Dean Martin, who has starred on NBC-TV since 1948, has signed a new, exclusive three-year contract with the network.

The new agreement includes the continuation of Martin's highly successful annual Christmas season special, several other variety specials and a major "Best of Dean Martin Roasts" special.

Greg Garrison, Dean's partner-producer since 1965, will continue in that capacity.

"Dean's distinctive talents have earned him the rank of unqualified superstar," NBC's Mike Weinblatt says. "We are delighted Dean is continuing on NBC, and one reason is that many top entertainers are drawn to television by Dean's graciousness and the relaxed format of his specials."

Customer, mechanic dialog should share same wave length

Talk is cheap, goes the old cliche. But when it comes to caring for your car, failure to talk can prove expensive indeed.

The nation is paying needlessly an exorbitant price in wasted fuel, deteriorated air quality and avoidable accidents. One reason for this stems from a breakdown in customer-mechanic dialog.

As a case in point, the average car owner tends to neglect proper maintenance of his or her car. We know that nearly 80 percent of all cars on the road today are undermaintained in areas affecting efficient use of fuel, emission control and optimum performance.

Basic service lacking

In addition, an unhealthy percentage of automobiles lacks basic service to assure maximum safety of operation.

A major root cause of the situation can be rectified by getting the motorist and the mechanic on the same wave length.

According to a U.S. government-financed study, the key to service satisfaction is effective communication. It depends on an accurate as possible description by the motorist of what the problem is.

When the motorist and the mechanic understand one another, there is a high rate of customer satisfaction with the job done, the survey states.

After all, an automobile can't talk. It lacks the ability to tell a mechanic what ails it. The person who drives that automobile has the responsibility to describe what the problem is, how long it has been occurring and when it occurs. The service mechanic must understand this description and provide competent maintenance guidance in return.

Unreasonable expectations

It is unreasonable to expect a mechanic to identify and correct a cooling system problem when you drove in complaining about the brakes. It is equally unreasonable of the mechanic to expect an engineer's explanation of a problem from average customers.

To establish such communication, it is most important that the motorist keep a record of all services performed on the car. By doing so, the motorist can avoid duplication of services such as a mechanic's installing a new set of spark plugs when plugs were installed only a few weeks previously.

And you, the motorist, have a right to expect these basics from your mechanic:

Contact from the mechanic before work is begun, if any problem beyond the ones you complained of are discovered. The same goes for any cost estimates much beyond the original estimate.

Return of any parts replaced. You may not want to keep a grease-coated set of old shocks, but you should at least be allowed to examine them.

Respect from the mechanic who should never overestimate your knowledge or underestimate your intelligence.

Now that the appealing time for motoring, the warm weather vacation period is upon us, getting your car in condition for the road makes sense. This newspaper section is intended to provide you with information to make you more aware of what it takes to care for your car.

Happy motoring

By using this information and your own common sense to communicate effectively with those who service your car, you'll enjoy happy motoring in the months to come.

Check ignition regularly

Ever since the Cain and Abel incident, which contradicted the Biblical adage "a man's span of years shall be three score and ten . . . ," the human race has taken a skeptical view of warranties. When Cain slew his brother early in life, Abel was in no position to ask for a recount.

The moral of the story for motorists is not to take chances on critical car parts just because the recommended service interval has been extended.

A case in point is the ignition system. New car owners manuals often identify their service-free life as being up to 30,000 miles. Although electronic ignitions have eliminated breaker points, they still consist of parts that are subject to wear, erosion or breakage.

WATCH PRESSURE

NAPA THE NAPA SIGN. COUNT ON IT.

We've got over 50 years experience.

Count your savings. Count your many additional maintenance-free miles. Count increased safety for you and your family.

That's because it is the symbol of NAPA.

NAPA is over 50 years old, and in that half century NAPA parts and NAPA people have earned a reputation for quality products, professional service, fast delivery and fair prices.

Today that sign stands for over 110,000 top quality parts, many better than original equipment.

So, whenever you need professional, dependable service, look for the blue and gold NAPA sign. You can count on it.

Problem chaser checklist to clip and use

Any lover of detective stories enjoys sorting out the clues and guessing in advance who the culprit is.

Motorists can play detective to more productive advantage by fathoming clues provided by their cars when mechanical problems occur.

By determining what's happening, when it happens and how long it has been happening, valuable information can be obtained to help lead to the solution of the problem.

The list below, provided by the Ford Parts and Service Division, Ford Motor Company, can help.

Most cars in Nebraska fail AAA emission test standards

Cars emitting excessive pollutants are not a problem limited to dense metropolitan areas. Not according to an emission test study waged by the Cornhusker Motor Club (AAA) which tested nearly 1,500 cars in Nebraska.

Over 55 percent of the cars tested failed to meet emission standards established for the test. In Nebraska's two largest cities, Omaha and Lincoln, more cars failed to meet hydrocarbon and/or carbon monoxide standards than cars met the limits.

Bob Blankenship, safety director of the Club, attributes the high rate of failures to lack of attention to maintenance. He said, "We feel that the reason a high percentage of vehicles are failing is due to people using self-service gas stations rather than full service stations.

"Smaller communities had a higher passing rate than the metropolitan areas due to the fact that people in small communities use full-service, whereas people in cities predominantly use self-service."

Both the Omaha and Lincoln areas are two of the major U.S. communities that will have to meet air quality standards by 1982, under the Cleaner Air Act. In Omaha, 248 out of 388 cars tested failed, and in Lincoln 112 of 185 cars failed.

High hydrocarbon readings may reflect poor ignition, including worn plugs, plug wires and faulty distributor components. Too much carbon monoxide usually means a carburetion problem.

Car Care Quiz

"IT AIN'T NECESSARILY SO."

The term "Old Wives Tale" is becoming obsolete in these times of sexual equality. Nonetheless, there remains a vast body of myths and false sayings that merit debunking. After all, handling toads does not really cause warts and eating fish doesn't do much for brainpower.

The automotive world has its share of maintenance myths that have earned obsolescence. This quiz asks you to separate fact from fancy by answering the questions with TRUE or FALSE.

	T	F
1. In summertime, it's best to keep tires underinflated because warm temperatures will cause heat buildup.	☐	☐
2. To improve gasoline mileage, it's best to buy a higher octane fuel.	☐	☐
3. It is generally a good idea to replace spark plugs annually.	☐	☐
4. The primary cause of most starting trouble is a weak battery.	☐	☐
5. If you install permanent anti-freeze in your car, it's best to drain it in summer and replace with distilled water.	☐	☐
6. Removing emission controls will automatically increase fuel efficiency.	☐	☐
7. Your car will get about 20 percent better gas economy at 55 miles per hour than at 70 m.p.h.	☐	☐
8. Electronic ignition systems completely eliminate the need for engine tune-up.	☐	☐
9. Misfiring spark plugs are leading contributors to excessive hydrocarbon emissions.	☐	☐
10. If there is no sign of smoke coming from the tail pipe, a car is not polluting.	☐	☐

Answers:

1. False. Both underinflated and overinflated tires wear prematurely. Also, underinflated tires cause excessive fuel consumption. Keep tires inflated to manufacturer's recommendations for long wear, best gas mileage.

2. False. Octane does not affect fuel mileage. For economy, use the lowest price gas that will not hamper performance.

3. True. Under current driving conditions and at average annual mileage, yearly plug changes will yield optimum fuel economy and emission control.

4. False. According to recent studies, tune-ups are twice as effective a remedy for starting trouble as is battery service. A run-down battery may be the symptom of ignition system trouble rather than the cause.

5. False. The term anti-freeze is a misnomer. The substance in the mixture is designed to protect engine cooling systems in the hot summer as well as the cold winter.

6. False. According to the Environmental Protection Agency, removing emission control devices may in some cases even cause loss of fuel economy.

7. True. High speeds are wasteful of fuel.

8. False. Electronic ignition systems eliminate breaker points and condensers. Most other parts of so-called conventional systems remain and need attention.

9. True. In recent tests merely replacing spark plugs alone resulted in an average 24 percent reduction of HC emissions.

10. False. Carbon monoxide and some hydrocarbon emissions are invisible. Most smoke emanating from tail pipes comes from gasoline that has not been properly ignited or from oil seeping into the combustion chamber.

Professor says—we love our cars

"We do not just use automobiles for transportation. We love them."

Those are the words of Dr. Michael T. Marsden, associate professor of popular culture at Bowling Green State University in Ohio.

"At times we become irritated with them, as we might with loved ones, but for the most part we are pleased with our symbols of technology that miraculously take us to and from our real and symbolic destinations day after day," Dr. Marsden told the Automotive Information Council.

"The automobile continues to be a major symbol in American life that is as much a part of our national character as the flag."

Dr. Marsden, who is planning a course entitled The Automobile in American Culture, said the automobile is able to resolve one of the essential tensions in our lives—that between our realized need for community and social groupings and our need, on the other hand, for individualistic expressions.

"Automobiles are socially acceptable means of self-expression," he said.

"We can choose the model that best suits our needs, we can add the options of our choice, we can customize our cars to our heart's content, and we can, in general, decorate them as extensions of ourselves. The automobile can also provide the environment for socializing.

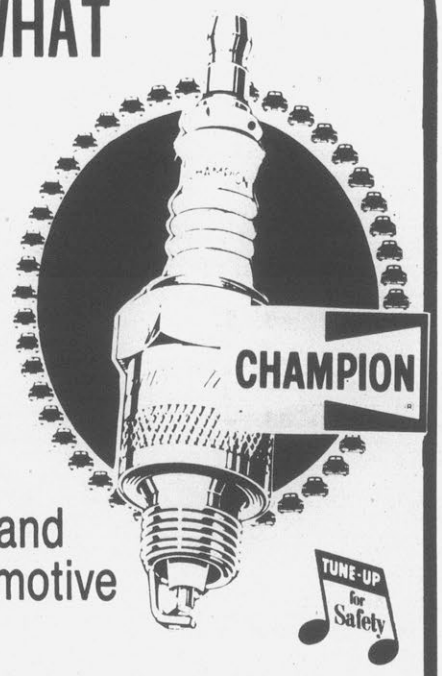

"People develop very sensual relationships with their cars. They wash them, scrub them, polish them, paint them, speak softly to them, name them and in general decorate them. The dashboard has become a mobile mantel on which are displayed objects of affection.

"A significant number of Americans work on their own cars not so much to save money as to reestablish an essential relationship with their machine and the sometimes bewildering world of technology.

"They want to be part of American technology, not in awe of it, or even victimized by it. The floor stick shift is in vogue because people want to feel their machine taming the wilderness (road) once again.

"The automobile is a metaphor for what America is all about.

Old car festival recalls horseless carriage era

DEARBORN, Mich.— Visitors to Greenfield Village during Old Car Festival can almost hear drivers coaxing and sweet-talking their 300 antique automobiles as the cars clang and sputter their way down quaint Village streets.

None built later than 1925, the cars recall the age of automobile adventure. Here one can see the drivers in goggles and dusters and flappers in their frills, symbols of an age revolutionized by the Model Ts, Stutz Bearcats, Studebakers and many more.

The Old Car Festival is one of the pre-eminent events of its kind—a chance for pampered motorists to glimpse early automobiling and for enthusiasts and collectors to compare notes and trade tales. The Village is an appropriate place for such a gathering: it was founded by the late Henry Ford.

A car that is well maintained can last indefinitely. This Rickenbacker (top) is one of only nine still in existence. And not many remember when this Saxon (below) was built a half-century ago.

Daily parade

During the daily parades, the cars clatter past a collection of more than 80 historic homes and buildings, relocated from all over the country and set down in the pattern of a typical New England Village.

The setting takes on a particularly Early American mood when riders on high-wheel bicycles, a special feature of this event, glide placidly by, exhibiting both balance and bravery.

Some cars, like the bicycles, have almost disappeared from modern memory, for few people can remember when a Jewett Touring Car or a Holsman Auto Buggy trundled down Main Street.

A car from the 1920s is new by Old Car Festival standards. It is a festival tradition to divide the cars into two categories: the venerable automobiles of the pre-1917 era and the upstarts from the 1918 and 1925 period. Cars in each group compete in separate contests and games, including judging for authenticity.

Amidst the Fords, Buicks and Dodges, there are cars recalling the shattered hopes of early manufacturers. Just ask an owner of a Wills Ste. Claire about C.H. Wills and his short-lived enterprise near the shores of Lake Huron.

Rare cars

Like some nearly extinct species, many cars are extremely rare. For instance, the five Rickenbackers at a recent event were among the nine sole survivors of about 55,000 cars.

Products of a simpler era, these cars invite tinkering. Collectors will have spent many a Sunday afternoon preparing for this event by polishing the outside and working on the engines, trying to turn those sputters into purrs.

Hunt for parts

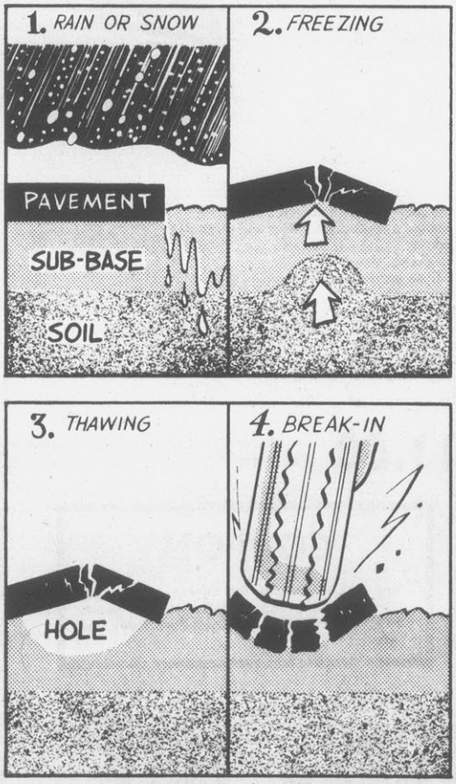

Many of the participants belong to antique car clubs, which prove to be convenient clearing houses for information on parts and repairs. They might barter with a local hot rodder for a rare part or track down the latest rumor about a cache of these valuable objects.

One entrant followed up the story of a lone hubcap lying in a farmer's field and discovered a veritable trove: a hubcap, two wheels and an axle.

That, of course, is part of the fun of owning an antique automobile; it takes more than just turning the ignition key to keep the car running. The owners take a lot of satisfaction in their avocation, and it is no wonder that they come to the Old Car Festival each year to show off the fruit of their labor.

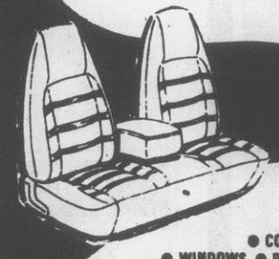

The 1979 Old Car Festival will be held September 8 and 9.

Where bumps come from

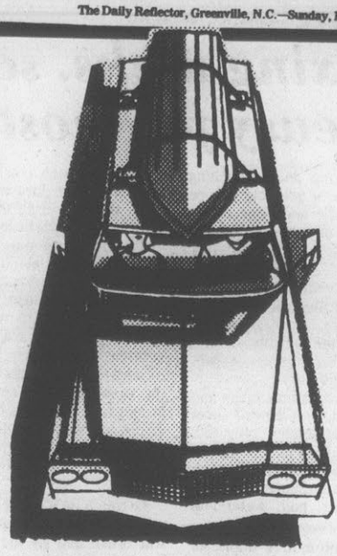

HOW A POTHOLE IS BORN—(1) Rain, sleet or snow works its way into the soil under the pavement. (2) When the temperature drops, the water freezes and expands. This pushes up the soil and pavement. (3) As thawing occurs, the water runs away and the soil recedes, creating a hole under the pavement. (4) A passing car or truck breaks the pavement, causing the familiar pothole. Tires can be seriously damaged by striking a pothole. Source: Tire Industry Safety Council, Washington D.C. 20045.

Fixing nicks, scratches is easy for most owners

Repairing and refinishing the body of your car can be worthwhile and done in the confines of your own garage.

Repairs of nicks and scratches, dents, small rust-outs and areas of surface rust are not difficult for the do-it-yourselfer, according to experts of the DeVilbiss Company, manufacturers of paint spray guns.

To repair minor nicks and scratches, you'll need sheet sandpaper grades 240, 320, 400, 600, sanding block, spot putty, masking tape, tack cloth, pre-cleaner solvent, newspaper, pail, water and sponge.

Use automotive duplicate color, touch-up paint found in small bottles or aerosol cans.

Normally, these paints are available for cars up to three years old. (Even when your car is new, it's wise to buy color matching touch-up paint, anticipating future needs.)

If you cannot find the paint in bottles or aerosol cans, then an automotive paint store usually can custom mix the paint.

The most common types of automotive paints are lacquers, enamels, and acrylic lacquers and enamels. Touch up your car with the same type paint originally used.

If the scratch is not too deep and rust does not appear, then repairing the surface won't be necessary.

To touch up nicks and scratches, first clean the surface with soap and water and let it dry. Then use a pre-cleaning solvent to remove thoroughly any wax and grease.

Sanding isn't necessary if the area is small and the primer has not been chipped off. A temporary touch-up for protection and improved appearance is all that's necessary.

To touch up a scratch, use a bottle of paint and a small soft brush and let the paint flow into the scratched area.

In either case, let the paint dry and apply several coats.

If the nick or scratch is deeper than the primer, sand and prime before painting. Wet-sand the area lightly using a 300 range sandpaper and taper the edge of the painted surface adjacent to the scratch.

Place a wet sponge above the sanding surface and allow water to flow down while sanding.

Determine whether the sanding is satisfactory by running your fingers over the area without feeling an edge between the bare metal and finished surface. Remember, the wider the featheredge around the repaired surface, the better the finished surface will appear.

Don't be afraid to enlarge the scratched surface up to five times its original size..

When the surface has been prepared for painting, remove all traces of dust by using a tack rag.

Practice spraying on a piece of cardboard. To use an aerosol can or spray gun, hold the sprayer 6-10 inches from the surface and move it in a back and forth motion, overlapping each stroke just enough to ensure an even coat.

Never release paint from the container unless the sprayer is in motion, and remember to keep the sprayer moving when you stop spraying at the end of the stroke. This allows the paint to blend into the original painted surface.

The sprayer should be held parallel to the surface to eliminate a heavy and light concentration of paint on the surface.

OVEN-READY FIBER GLASS — This infrared oven at the Molded Fiber Glass Company in Ashtabula, Ohio, bakes a high-gloss coat of paint on fiber glass panels for new farm tractor hoods. Fiber glass components give agricultural vehicles many of the benefits favored by automotive engineers, such as high strength-to-weight ratio, corrosion resistance and better design possibilities. Emission checks lower gas bills

Maintaining a car for clean air is as good for the pocketbook as it is for the lungs, according to a study by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA).

In a report submitted to the Society of Automotive Engineers, Ted Bayler and Leslie Eder of NHTSA tell of an average 4.7 percent improvement in fuel economy after repairs to correct high emissions.

Bayler and Eder claimed, "if this could be projected nationwide, it would mean saving about 1.8 billion gallons of gasoline per year and a subsequent savings of $1.1 billion per year for the consumer."

Data for the tests were collected in Alabama, Arizona, Tennessee, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico. As part of the test procedure, owners of cars emitting excessively were asked to correct the problem and report the cost.

Average repair cost to bring cars within acceptable emission limits was $16, NHTSA reports.

According to the authors, "MPG is often sensitive to relatively minor problems such as carburetor adjustments, timing, point adjustment or bad spark plugs, and these are relatively inexpensive to repair."

An over-all average reduction of 22 percent for hydrocarbons and 12 percent for carbon monoxide was realized after repairs were made. In addition, the vehicle failure rate for emissions decreased from 23 percent to 10 percent over a one-year period.

The report states: "Automotive traffic is responsible for 75 percent of all urban carbon monoxide emissions, 50 percent of all hydrocarbons and 50 percent of nitrogen oxides."

The Environmental Protection Agency studies indicate inspection and maintenance programs will reduce pollution from vehicles in a cost-effective manner and that most defects causing pollution and wasting fuel can be repaired at a reasonable cost.

Six car checks to make regularly

How long has it been since you took a really good look around your car? If you have to pause to remember when you last checked your tires, oil, coolant, battery or other components, you may have put if off too long.

Following is a list of car checks that should be made periodically by the owner, if not by the service dealer:

1) Fluids: Check engine oil, transmission oil, power steering fluid and coolant; add as needed. CAUTION: Never remove the radiator pressure cap when the engine is hot.

2) Battery: Check for corrosion on terminals, a common cause of starting trouble. Check electrolyte level and add water as needed, in batteries using water. ANOTHER CAUTION: When working near a battery, be sure there is no open flame. Do not smoke. Batteries emit explosive hydrogen gas.

3) Drive belts and hoses: While the hood is up, take a good look at them. Frayed or worn belts should be replaced, as should soft, brittle or bulging hoses.

4) Windshield wipers: Check them out. The rubber will become brittle with weathering and age and may be worn to a point where wipers smear or streak the glass. How's your supply of washer fluid?

5) Tires: Invest in a good tire gauge and use it frequently. If you haven't checked tire pressure since summer, you're likely to find them underinflated. Even a couple of pounds of underinflation can cost up to three percent in fuel economy.

6) Service sticker: Take a look at it on your door jamb. Time for a lube job, oil and filter change? One good reason for getting the car on the service station lift is so you or your serviceman can check around underneath for leaks: leaking exhaust system parts, leaking shock absorbers, leaking engine or transmission seals. And this gives you an opportunity for another, closer look at your tires.

Finally, as a part of your periodic inspection program, make a walk-around check of all your lights, including turn signals.

If you have no one with you to help check brake lights, you can do it yourself in broad daylight when another car is behind you at an intersection. Just tap your brake pedal and look for the reflection of your brake lights in his headlights.

Tow vehicles tested in Mansfield, Ohio, get disappointing gas mileage according to their owners. One reason is lack of good maintenance, the Champion tests showed.

Keeping car care records aids in scheduling service

The bill you received when you picked up your car from the repair garage can serve a more useful purpose than cluttering up the glove box.

Receipts form a useful record of all service done on the car when logged and filed in a folder.

Checking the log periodically can help you plan the car's maintenance needs in the coming months by comparing the records to your car's recommended schedule of maintenance, as outlined in the owner's manual. This can lead to more dependable driving by reducing unexpected and inconvenient repairs.

The log and folder also can aid in money planning. Many times the repair order will have a notation of other items that soon will need service. Those notations, plus a review of scheduled maintenance, will permit you to adjust your budget accordingly or even shop the ads for a sale on the work the car will soon need.

Also, by sharing the records with your mechanic you can avoid premature duplication of the service, such as performing a lube job when one was recently performed.

Simple record-keeping by saving service invoices can make it easier to stick to your car's schedule of maintenance.

New guide to traveling aids the physically handicapped

People who are physically disabled have traditionally had a difficult time of it when they have had to travel.

So many barriers had to be overcome that travel was avoided unless absolutely necessary, and a pleasure trip was fraught with so many worries that the pleasure was all but gone.

At long last, things are changing, and none too soon, as some 20 million Americans can testify.

At last, the various facets of the travel industry are undergoing a transformation, and are beginning to make provisions for the disabled.

Many hotels and motels in the U.S. now provide rooms that are easily accessible by wheelchair, with bathroom facilities that are suitably modified.

Most of the major carriers have made great strides forward and have made special arrangements or provide special facilities for those passengers with limited physical mobility.

A book has recently been published which describes in detail what facilities are available in the U.S. (and, to a lesser degree, abroad), and which advises handicapped travelers how to proceed in planning and carrying out their vacations easily and enjoyably.

This book, which is a veritable treasure trove of information, is called, most appropriately, TravelAbility (Macmillan, $9.95), and its author, Lois Reamy, who has thoroughly researched her subject, overflows with truly good advice.

She discusses the various modes of transportation—tells what it's like to travel on each, and the special arrangements that have been made and are available for the asking.

The question of package tours is probed, and the pros and cons of ordinary tours as opposed to those specifically designed to meet the needs of the disabled are thoroughly gone into.

So is the choice of a travel agent: how to go about deciding on one, and what he or she can be expected to do.

There is an in-depth discussion of the great outdoors, previously off-limits for the most part, and what is being done to make it accessible to the disabled.

The true stars of the book are the handful of handicapped people who, in the process of traveling, posed for the many pictures in it—to show what travel in a wheelchair is like and, most importantly, that it can be done.

To quote Dr. Arthur Abramson, who wrote the introduction to the book:

"I have been to every part of the Western Hemisphere from Alaska to Chile, from Nova Scotia to Brazil. In addition, I have been to every part of the world except Africa and intend to go there next year.

"I have traveled by train, by ship, by automobile, and by airplane. It was all done without walking a single step.

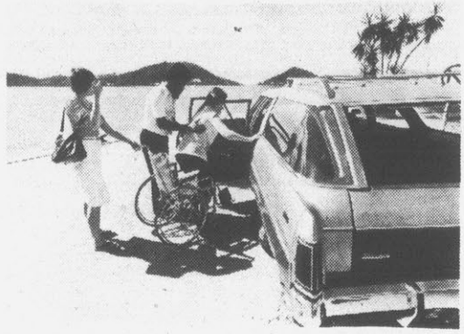

"It was fulfilling and, as a rule, not difficult.

"However, I would be less than candid if I said that the process was entirely free of problems. An uneventful life eventually must become dull for anyone.

"Traveling is never dull and always eventful. It is especially eventful for the disabled and a constant challenge to their problem-solving abilities, without which the disabled can never feel whole."

Dr. Abramson has made the world his oyster and he urges readers of the book to follow his example to experience the many things the world has to offer, something which they may have been afraid of doing for any number of reasons.

There is a whole world waiting out there, and this book may well be the key that opens it up, at long last, to that large segment of our population, the physically disabled.

THE WORLD IS ACCESSIBLE to many thousands of physically disabled people, thanks to improvements in facilities and their own courage and determination. Here, sightseeing commences on the scenic island of St. Thomas for one passenger on a luxurious cruise of the Caribbean. A wide range of invaluable advice is available to physically handicapped travelers in a new book, TravelAbility, written by veteran travel writer, Lois Reamy, and published by Macmillan.

Both brake systems need to be checked

Have you ever known anyone to shop for a "bargain" appendectomy? The term "cut-rate" seldom applies to surgery, as we hesitate to compromise where our physical well-being is involved.

A person's life and limb can be jeopardized, too, by cutting corners on safety services for the automobile. A good example is in the case of brake work.

To many of us, a brake reline means just that: new lining on the brake shoes. And occasionally you may run into a repair shop that would have you believe that's all there is to it.

Car owners should understand that the brake system is really two systems in one.

First is the brake mechanism itself, involving linings, disc brake pads (if the car is so equipped) and brake drums or rotors.

The second and equally important system is the hydraulic system, which includes the master cylinder, wheel cylinders, and the lines that connect them. These components could be overlooked in shoddy brake service.

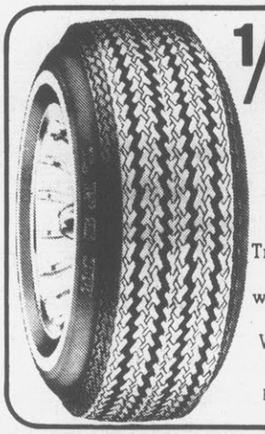

The hydraulic system has traveled just as far as the mechanical system when it is time for brake work, and it is subject to wear and deterioration just as brake linings are. Consequently, you should insist upon a thorough check of all parts of the brake system when investing in this vital service.

Other areas to be considered when having brakes serviced are front wheel bearings and grease seals. Chances are your wheel bearings have not had service in a long time, and seals may still be the ones that came with the car when it was new.

New grease seals are an essential part of brake service because an old, leaking seal could allow grease to get on the linings. The result: erratic braking action which usually can be corrected only by replacing the linings.

A complete brake job normally includes:

1) Replacement or relining of brake shoes or pads.
2) Replacement or machining of discs and/or drums
3) Servicing of calipers and/or wheel cylinders
4) Thorough inspection and servicing as needed of:
   brake hardware hydraulic lines and hoses master cylinder power brake booster wheel bearings and seals
5) Flushing and refilling of brake fluid
6) Road test.

Towing, launching rules

For all but the fortunate few who live on water or have a marina berth, owning a boat means trailering and launching it. This can be easy, says Starcraft, if weekend captains follow a simple checklist procedure.

Before you start out:

- Check trailer and car tire pressure.
- Make sure wheel bearings are greased.
- Check trailer ball to see if it is the proper size and fits snugly in trailer coupler.
- Make sure safety chains are properly affixed, with slack for turns.
- Stow all gear in the boat securely.
- Hook up trailer lights.
- Check brake lights, running lights, and turn signals.
- Make sure trailer bed is properly adjusted so it fits the contours of the hull.
- Winch should be tight and in gear, with winch line firmly attached to the bow eye.
- Secure stern ties.
- Tilt the engine out as far as possible.
- Tie down any canvas covers, etc., that might catch the wind.
- Check to see that license plate is firmly attached.

Of course, drive with care. When backing, your steering's reversed. . .so take it slowly and don't turn sharply or you could "jackknife."

Remember, too, that your trailer will sway toward passing vehicles. Leave lots of room.

Get the boat ready before you get in the ramp line.

- If your boat has one: Put transom plug in!
- Firmly affix bowline,
- Remove stern ties,
- Tilt engine up to clear ramp,
- Disconnect trailer lights,
- Keep the winch line fastened until you're positioned at water's edge. NOW disconnect it.

Launching a boat, even a sizable one like the Starcraft Montego runabout, takes three people to do it the safest and easiest way: a driver in the tow vehicle, a driver in the boat to handle the craft the minute it starts to float, and someone alongside to assist and direct the operation.

- Back up until the rear car wheels are just inches from water. Make sure the depth of water is sufficient to float the boat when it slides off the trailer. If it scrapes bottom, you might damage the hull. Tap the car brakes and your boat should slide right in.

Good helmsmanship counts on the highway and at the loading ramp as well as on the water. Knowing how to handle your trailer and boat gives you a chance to roam freely and safely this summer.

Spring car cleaning opens road to travel

If you're planning to take to the open road for a trip this spring, be forewarned. After winter's slush and grime, you're likely to be faced with the problem of "spring cleaning" your car before you can even think of leaving town.

Simply approach the problem of sprucing up your car the same way you would of cleaning your home.

Cleaning the interior of your car needn't be a cumbersome affair with messy pails of water and other paraphernalia. Now you can clean virtually all the interior surfaces of your auto—windows, mirrors, vinyl dashboard and seats, and chrome—with Glass*Plus® glass, appliance and cabinet cleaner. Just spray it on washable interior surfaces and wipe with a paper towel or lint-free cloth.

Attempting to scrub your auto with harsh cleaning potions can cause problems. For best results, wash the outside with some water and mild detergent; this should remove the dust and dirt so you can appraise the situation.

If your sparkling vehicle reveals some nicks or scratches, get some matching touch-up paint from your local car dealer; touching up small areas will help prevent rust and corrosion, and will help keep the body of your car looking like new.

Increase safety

Keeping your automobile clean can increase the safety of your trip.

Be sure to keep a litter bag handy for loose papers that may get blown around and obstruct a driver's vision.

Tire care reduces car operating cost

Proper maintenance of tires and wheel alignment can reduce vehicle operating costs, the Car Care Council advises.

For example, tires underinflated by only eight pounds can reduce gas mileage by five percent and cut tire life by 25 percent or more. Cost-conscious motorists, the Council suggests, will check tire inflation frequently with their own gauges, available in most automotive stores for less than two dollars.

Owners also should check tires for abnormal wear when vehicles are on lifts for lubrication or underframe service.

Further reduction of fuel consumption would be the result of incorrect alignment, which can result in at least a two percent per-tankful energy loss—as well as reducing tire life.

Incorrect alignment accelerates tire wear to an even greater degree.

The Council points out there are two easy ways to detect incorrect alignment of tire balance, indicating the need for cost-saving wheel or front end service:

1. Looseness or excessive play in steering, or difficulty in controlling the vehicle over bumps and around curves are indications of problems which need correcting.

2. Another is vibration or the slightest shimmy.

When vehicles are on lubrication lifts, another preventive maintenance check would be asking a qualified mechanic to check the front end and steering for looseness, and shock absorbers for leaks.

A good mechanic can determine the corrective measures needed for steering and suspension systems. . .or advise that ball joints, steering linkage and shock absorbers still are dependable but wearing to the point where replacement would be advisable in the near future.

If parts replacement is recommended, the Council advises against economic short cuts in quality of parts, extent of service and cut-rate estimates. Insufficient service to save a few dollars can mean much higher future repair bills as a result of the penny-wise philosophy.

Careful attention to steering, suspension and tires are among the major considerations to keep vehicle maintenance costs low.

Oil analysis looks at 'health' of car

The question "May I check your oil?" is taking on a new meaning.

With the use of oil spectroanalysis, checking the oil is more than merely making sure there is sufficient lubricant in the crankcase.

Using a technique not too different from hospital blood tests, technicians can determine the general health of an automobile engine from analyzing the oil.

Oil spectroanalysis for many years has been used by trucking fleets, aircraft and railroads to check on condition of equipment. More recently, it is being offered to individual car owners by a number of service outlets.

The tests are performed by extracting a small amount of engine oil at change time. The sample is analyzed by spectrometer, data fed to a computer which prepares a report to the owner.

Among the warning signs of engine problems the analysis can reveal are:

• Worn cylinder rings or faulty combustion may be the cause of a high carbon content in the oil.

• Presence of raw gas indicates the engine may need a tune-up, a carburetor adjustment and/or fuel pump service.

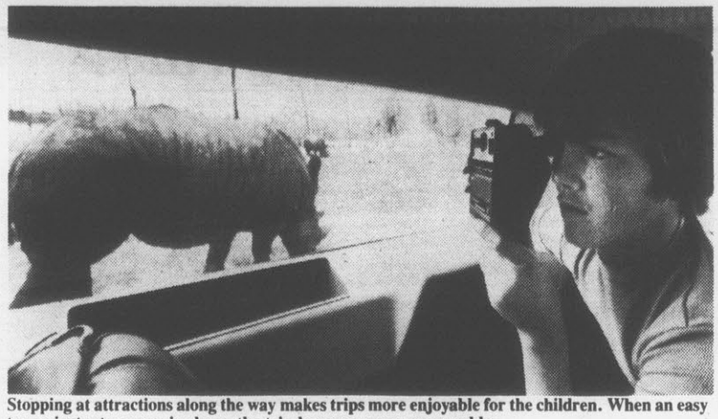

• Possible bearing failure may cause the presence of copper and tin in the oil.

• High silicon levels indicate dirt is entering the engine with potential wear of parts if the cause is not corrected.

• Boron or sodium in the oil may signal the presence of anti-freeze possibly caused by a leaking head gasket or cracked engine block.

• Nickel in the oil could mean a valve job is needed.

• High iron or aluminium content could be the sign of unusual wear of the cylinder walls—a condition that calls for immediate attention.

Stopping at attractions along the way makes trips more enjoyable for the children. When an easy to use instant camera is along, the trip becomes more memorable.

Traveling with kids is fun with right planning

With the summer vacation season in full bloom, millions of families will pack the family car and be off on long trips.

With small children, a bit of planning will keep them occupied and out of the hair of the parents and the other children.

There should be books, materials for drawing and coloring, and games which do not require a large area. Make the selection based on what they would enjoy on a rainy day at home.

Bear in mind that youngsters grow restless, so include plans to make stops at rest areas where they can run off excess energy. Bring along a ball so they can have a quick game.

A 10-minute stop will do wonders for both the children and the adults and the travel time lost will be compensated for by a more relaxed atmosphere in the car. Have them make a "pit stop" before resuming the trip.

A selection of snacks also will make the trip seem faster.

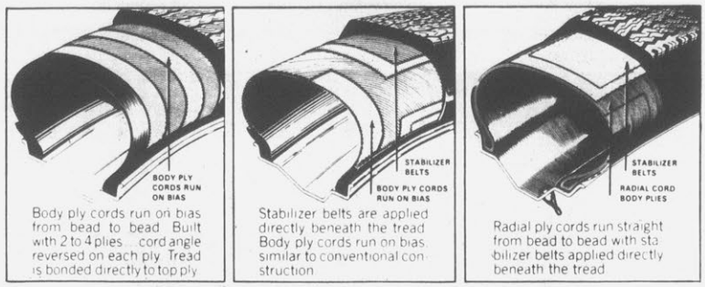

Bring along some shopping bags for litter and also carry some pre-moistened facehand wipes.

Try to create an interest in geography by showing the children maps and reading about points of interest you will be passing or visiting.

One of the most successful, yet educational, diversions on a long trip is a contest for spotting license plates from other states. The first 25 states get one point each for the spotter, the next 15 get two points each, four points for the next eight, and five points for the final two.

GENERAL MOTORS PARTS DIVISION

Most RVs lack maintenance

Despite the fact that virtually every recreational vehicle owner is seeking better fuel economy and is dissatisfied with present gasoline mileage, most display widespread inattention to basic fuel-saving engine maintenance.

Tests by Champion Spark Plug Company on nearly 200 motor homes and towing vehicles showed that 79 percent of the motor homes and 78 percent of the vehicles used to pull trailers had at least one maintenance deficiency that would adversely affect fuel economy, emissions, or performance.

In other words, four out of every five needed at least part of a tune-up.

An earlier Champion test of some 5,600 passenger cars found a similar situation with 79 percent requiring maintenance.

The most frequent engine malfunction discovered among the recreational vehicles was incorrect timing. A total of 67 percent of the motor homes and 60.5 percent of the towing vehicles had timing that was retarded or advanced at least two degrees from manufacturer's specifications.

Such incorrect timing is a major cause of poor performance, detonation, and wasted fuel, David L. Walker, director of Champion's Automotive Technical Services Department, said.

By comparison, Champion's earlier tests of U.S. passenger cars showed that 49 percent possessed incorrect timing.

Engineers from Champion's Automotive Technical Services Department performed diagnostic examinations of the engine and ignition systems on 76 towing vehicles at an Airstream Trailer rally in Mansfield, Ohio.

Champion engine specialists also checked 118 motor homes in Sioux Falls, S.D., at the national meeting of the Family Motor Coach Association.

Although the motor home or travel trailer is generally considered an expensive vehicle, owners are thrifty. All but one in the entire sample used regular gasoline, and many answered the question of what type of gas they used, with "the cheapest I can find."

Virtually every RV owner said that he was seeking better gasoline mileage and was disappointed in his present miles per gallon. Most admitted to getting just five to eight miles per gallon. Few exceeded 10 miles per gallon.

In terms of maintenance, the motor homes were in worse condition than the towing vehicles, Mr. Walker said. "I would suspect that a closer eye is kept on towing vehicles, because many are used as family cars when not pulling a trailer," he said.

The only exception to this was in the area of spark plug replacement. Of vehicles used for towing, 59 percent needed new spark plugs, while only 23 percent of the motor homes required the replacement of plugs.

There are currently no standards for emissions on motor homes. Increasingly, standards are being applied to the rugged recreational vehicles and pickup trucks frequently being used to pull heavy trailers.

The Champion tests showed that 59 percent of the motor homes and 65 percent of the towing vehicles failed emission checks, based on New Jersey passenger car standards. In Champion's earlier tests, 41 percent of cars failed these standards.

Mr. Walker explained that the high concentrations of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon pollutants found in the RVs are a sign that the vehicles are probably wasting gasoline and performing at a substandard level.

The amount of gasoline used annually in the pursuit of recreation is enormous. It is estimated that nearly one-fourth of the nation's yearly gasoline consumption—some 25 billion gallons—is used by Americans for recreational or social driving.

According to the U.S. Commerce Department in a recent study, urban Americans over the past decade have significantly changed their life style by working fewer hours for pay, spending less time on family affairs, and devoting more time to leisure. In fact, leisure time expanded for all categories of Americans sampled.

A U.S. Census Bureau survey says that one out of every five households has at least one RV.

But with this increase in leisure and recreational travel, thousands have let slip routine vehicle maintenance, Mr. Walker said.

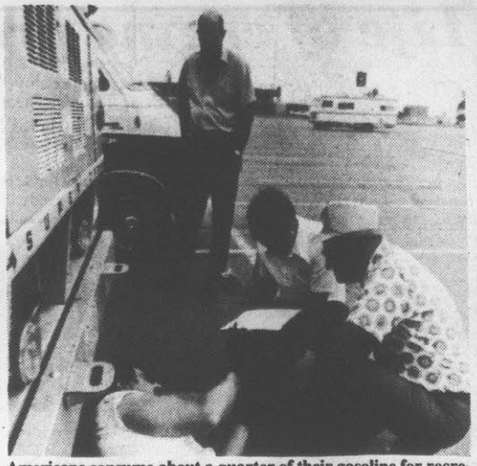

"The gradual falling off of engine performance frequently goes unnoticed to the average motorist because the deterioration has been slow. Heat, vibration, and normal wear gradually change the clearances between engine parts and the adjustments within the electrical, fuel, and ignition systems.

"When owners do notice the need for maintenance, it is usually only after fuel economy already has been sacrificed for a considerable amount of time," he said.

"The best answer for the RV owner to the questions of when and how often to tune is that seasonal maintenance, or even better, maintenance prior to every major trip, is recommended. This guarantees peak performance and fuel economy.

"Such a recommendation does not mean that a major tune-up is always necessary," Mr. Walker added. "The best definition of a tune-up is: Any service necessary to restore the engine to its manufacturer's specifications and performance standards."

However, he explained, a thorough examination of the engine is necessary. But then, only those parts should be replaced and those services performed that are required to bring the engine back to the performance levels it was designed to have.

Americans consume about a quarter of their gasoline for recreational pursuits, and condition of vehicles used for camping is a significant factor. Champion Spark Plug Company engineers who inspected tow vehicles in Mansfield, Ohio, and motor homes in Sioux Falls, S.D., found nearly 80 percent needed maintenance to achieve maximum fuel efficiency and reliable performance.

Life of engine prolonged with oil change, lube job

EDITOR'S NOTE:

The following is reprinted from the book "The Back-Yard Mechanic—Volume Two," which contains a number of articles on do-it-yourself auto service procedures. Originally published in "Driver" magazine, articles include buying a used car, basic tune-up, drum brake repairing, carburetor rebuilding and air conditioning service. Price is $1.60.

Preventive maintenance, in the form of a grease job and an oil-and-oil-filter change, is probably the best way to prolong the life of your vehicle's power plant and help insure that the engine won't go out to lunch when you need it most.

Why Change? Oil, like most other things, eventually wears out. The addition of aftermarket oil supplements may replenish some of the original chemical components, but they won't remove the accumulated acid, ash, moisture, or other contaminants that build up in motor oil over a period of time.

The oil filter can remove only so much of the accumulated junk before it, too, fails to function properly.

Why "change" chassis lubricants like you do oil? For the same reasons. . .grease "wears out" eventually and becomes contaminated with foreign matter, just the same as oil.

Since both chassis and engine parts are made up almost entirely of metal, they are subject to failure caused by contaminants in the lubrication.

Another is the formation of deposits of foreign matter caused by the inability of dirty lubricant to keep surfaces clean.

A third problem is the failure of metal caused by the attack of acids formed by combustion or chemical reaction. . .acids that can be defeated only by removing the contaminated lubricant.

How often? One thing is certain—you won't hurt your engine by changing the oil too often. We at "Driver" feel that frequent changes of oil and filter are the keys to long engine life.

With the exception of new cars using a reputable synthetic, we feel that 5000 miles is the longest your car should go without a change. In dusty areas of the country, 3000 is about the outside limit.

And while you're at it, don't forget to check and change, if necessary, the fuel and air filters, too.

Power brake systems often have an air filter, and automatic transmissions have a fluid filter . . . check 'em when you do your PM, change 'em as needed, and we think you'll find that the cars of today will go an awfully long time before major maintenance is needed.

Quality: All oil cans are supposed to be labeled with a code which indicates the oil's service limitations.

For pre-'71 cars, use oil graded at least SD (Service Deluxe). Newer cars require SE (Service Extreme) quality. Most premium-quality oil will provide adequate engine protection, so the choice of brands is personal preference.

If you do decide, for some reason, to switch brands, be sure that you continue to use the same type (detergent or non-detergent) and rating (SE or SD) that you have been using.

Most good quality oil filters are about the same . . . but be sure that, whatever brand or type you choose, it meets the car manufacturer's specifications and warranty requirements.

Lately, we've seen the development of two-stage filters and filters with internal additive supplies. Both new types appear to be well-tested and reliable and seem to have gained acceptance with the professional racer crowd. These new-type filters are not too much more expensive than conventional filters, and the added protection they offer may be worth the increase in price over single-stage conventional filters.

Elmer R. (Woody) Woodard explains the workings of his 1 Rite Time Saver Fuel Control System at his Elizabeth City, N.C., service station. After buying gas and recording her odometer mileage, the customer inserts a credit card into a machine that computes key details of the transaction. Later, she'll get a report on how efficiently she uses fuel.

Tune-ups don't cost; they pay in economy

A tune-up doesn't cost. It pays.

New proof for that statement comes from a formula developed by a North Carolina businessman who has devised a new system to achieve economical car operation.

Elmer R. (Woody) Woodard of South Mills, N.C., has applied computer science to his fuel dispensing operation to let customers know exactly how efficiently (or inefficiently) their vehicles are running.

Mr. Woodard's system, known as "1 Rite Time Saver Fuel Control System," provides issuance of periodic print-outs including the following:

- Quantity of fuel purchased
- Cost of purchase
- Miles traveled since last purchase
- Average miles per gallon on each purchase
- Average fuel cost per mile on each purchase

Mr. Woodard points out, "It's simple for a motorist to become aware that his engine needs attention when his fuel cost per mile goes up dramatically."

His basic formula involves a car averaging 10 miles per gallon, driving 1,000 miles a month, purchasing gasoline for 60 cents per gallon with 10,000-mile tune-up intervals.

Assuming an average tune-up cost of $40, eliminating a ¾ of a mile per gallon loss in fuel economy would pay for the price of a tune-up over a year. Under Mr. Woodard's formula:

LOST MILEAGE	WASTE
.25 MPG	$15
.50 MPG	$30
.75 MPG	$45
1 MPG	$60

Calculations are based on the fact that surveys show an untuned engine consumes more than 11 percent fuel than when it is tuned.

Mr. Woodard points out, "These figures are only on gasoline saved and do not take into account the more dependable starting and better performance a tune-up affords."

While Mr. Woodard believes his 1 Rite Time Saver system could benefit all motorists, his primary area of concentration is for fleet markets.

He says, "A computerized analysis of fuel purchases not only provides exact information on how fuel is used, but it is also useful for tax accounting purposes. It also helps a fleet owner detect any unauthorized use of fuel."

Mr. Woodard, a retired navy career officer, intends to franchise his 1 Rite Time Saver system nationally.

Fog settled in?

Good wipers fight hazards

Fog is a driving hazard—especially when a dense fog sweeps in while you are driving at expressway speeds.

When this happens, get off the expressway as quickly as possible. You'll be safer from rear-end collisions on lesser roads.

Better yet, don't drive.

As soon as fog creeps over the road, turn on your windshield wipers. "Dense" fog is merely a fine accumulation of mist.

Once the wipers are operating, you'll probably find the fog not as dense as you first thought.

If your wipers streak, squirt washer fluid on the windshield. This should wash away any oily accumulation.

Whenever fog rolls in, even in daytime, turn your headlights on low-beam. Without lights, you are invisible to anyone coming from behind at high speeds.

Headlights also let drivers approaching from the opposite direction see you.

Fuel consumption affected by your car's accessories

How your car is equipped affects fuel consumption.

• You might want to consider installing a dash-mounted vacuum gauge calibrated in fuel use and engine condition while driving. Cost is generally between $5 and $12 at most auto parts stores.

• Such options as air conditioning and—to a lesser extent—even electrical accessories such as heaters, defrosters and radios use more gasoline. When air conditioning is not in use, fuel economy improves by 5 to 14% or more. Air conditioning also adds weight—about 100 pounds—to a car, increasing fuel consumption even more merely because of the extra weight. (Some of the fuel is saved with air conditioning because driving with closed car windows means less mileage-robbing drag.) If you have it, use it sparingly.

• An automatic transmission can be a gas-using option. Manual transmissions generally use less gas, particularly in small cars, although this may not hold true in situations where frequent shifting is required.

• Power steering also uses a bit more fuel.

Some options can help conserve gasoline:

• If you want air conditioning, for example, a light exterior car color combined with light interior upholstery will reduce heat build-up and keep your air-conditioner from having to work so hard. Tinted glass also helps.

• Fuel injection usually saves gasoline by more uniformly and efficiently distributing the fuel than do carburetors. An electronic spark ignition system also is a gas saver since its improved spark means better combustion and less chance for fuel-robbing spark plug fouling.

• Top quality radial tires usually will result in a 5 to 10% fuel saving because rolling resistance is reduced. Steel-belted radials generally are even better than fabric-belted radials in this respect.

• If you'll be doing a lot of open-road driving, a cruise control option may be worthwhile since such an accessory can maintain a steady speed, rarely using the carburetor's accelerator pump.

Try radials

If you're in the market for new tires—and are trying to cut gasoline consumption at the same time—you might give a thought to purchasing radial tires.

While the initial cost will be higher than for regular tires, tests have shown that both steel and rayon belted radials increased gas mileage by up to 10 percent while improving car handling characteristics.

Timely reminder from the '30s

Car care made sense then as it does today. This advertisement appeared in a 1931 issue of "Saturday Evening Post," courtesy of Motor and Equipment Association.

Now known as Motor and Equipment Manufacturers Association and celebrating its 75th anniversary, that organization reports that many motorists still need to improve their car maintenance habits.

MEMA's survey of 10,000 households shows that an estimated one-third of car maintenance services that should be performed are either neglected or never performed at all.

Thus, this reminder from the '30s: Care will save your car.

Copy in the ad reads in part: "Care will save your car. Once a month or oftener, take your car in to be inspected. Pick a reliable shop or service station, one known to do good work at reasonable cost.

"There are many such establishments, doubtless one not too far from your home. Put your car in good hands and start today."

Master mechanic's advice:

Describe car's symptoms as you'd talk to a doctor

By MIKE KURTA

There is a lot of talk these days about the quality of automotive service, and the number of complaints brought forth by the motoring public. One of the reasons could be a gap in communication between the car owner and his or her mechanic.

Often there is a lack of understanding as to the basic problem with the car and the reason for asking for certain service operations. This may be a result of a sketchy or unclear description of the trouble, laced with opinions volunteered by friends and neighbors, and handed over from owner to service writer, to foreman to mechanic.

Here are some tips on how to talk to your mechanic:

First of all, if you try to imagine a patient taking his ills to a medical doctor, you will understand more clearly what your mechanic faces when he looks under the hood of your car. The difference is, your car can't tell him where it hurts, so you must be your car's voice.

Keep records. That means any and all previous service receipts should be kept in a folder in your glove compartment. They should be ready for instant inspection in the event of a warranty question on tires, batteries, mufflers, etc., and it will give your mechanic a running history of your car's maintenance routine.

Have these available when you arrive at the garage and offer to produce them if needed. Unnecessary work can often be avoided by checking back to see when the last job was done.

MIKE KURTA
GARAGE OWNER

Write things down. Many shops like a grocery list of items you want done, and it also helps you to remember things you might forget when you bring your car in.

If you have a particular problem, take time to write down the symptoms you have noticed. When did the problem begin? Have you had it before? Does it make noise? Does it happen when the engine is cold in the morning? Is there an odor?

All descriptions are welcome and any clue you can provide your mechanic may be the one he needs to arrive at an accurate diagnosis of your car's problem.

It has often happened that just one point of information by the owner steers the mechanic down the right road to locate the trouble.

Stick to the facts. Try to refrain from too much hearsay and opinion which tends to be misleading and might result in the wrong thing being fixed.

Don't be afraid to take time and explain in careful, thorough detail what you want. You don't have to be a mechanic to describe that cough, squeak, or oil drip.

Plain language will do. After all, who knows your car better than you?

If you have an intermittant problem, one that is not present all the time, such as a rough running engine or a balky transmission, try to arrive when the trouble is there, so you can demonstrate it.

There's nothing more frustrating to a mechanic than to try to locate a toothache that has disappeared. If necessary, offer to take him on a road test so he can see first hand what the problem is. And be sure to leave your telephone number in case he needs to call and consult you further about the symptoms.

One car owner even brought in a tape recording of the noise the car made, but only at certain times. Silly as it seemed, this method led to the correct repairs being made, and the problem was solved.

In short, be sure your mechanic understands the problem. Make a list of the car's needs and symptoms, and convey these things to him as clearly as possible.

Over cups of coffee, a motorist and a mechanic discuss needed service work on her car. By bringing in records of previous work done and a "diary" of maintenance she can assist the service man in a proper diagnosis of the problem. U.S. government surveys show proper communication between car owners and mechanics helps create satisfaction with the work—something that is most important during vacation travel time.

Booklet has cooling tips

Called "A Quick Course in Car Care," it covers all of the basic things you should know about getting the cooling system ready for the next season.

Written in non-technical terms, the booklet includes a diagram of a typical cooling system showing the location of parts and a quick quiz so that you can prove to yourself that you have learned your subject.

For your free copy of "Quick Course in Car Care" send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Automotive Cooling Systems Institute; 222 Cedar Lane; Teaneck, New Jersey 07666.

2255 MEMORIAL DR.

Six simple steps that will help you get the next 50,000 miles out of your car.

✔ 1. Figure out a tune-up schedule that makes sense. Then stick to it. Regardless of whether your car has a regular or electronic ignition, a periodic tune-up is the single most important thing you can do to keep it mechanically sound over the long pull. When an engine is out of tune, it not only performs badly and wastes gas, it also literally works against itself. Every ping, every tick, every click means that something is wearing out faster than it should. Figure on a spark plug change with a tune-up at least once a year. And, if you're a high mileage driver, make it somewhat sooner. You'll not only prolong the life of your engine, but you'll get added benefits of better mileage and better performance.

✔ 2. Change your oil at least as often as your manual recommends. Clean, fresh oil has always been one of the most important ingredients of a long-lasting car. If you want to change oil more often than recommended, go right ahead. The cleaner, the better.

✔ 3. When you change your oil, change your oil filter. Your filter traps sludge and grit. So never put clean oil through a used filter. It's like washing clean clothes in dirty water.

✔ 4. Keep your chassis lubricated. A lube job not only helps reduce wear of suspension parts, it also provides for a check of your car's power steering, transmission and differential fluids.

✔ 5. Flush your radiator every year and install new coolant. Today's engines run very hot. This promotes rust. It can build up and clog your cooling system, resulting in more heat, more rust. Flushing will clean your system and will contribute to longer engine life.

✔ 6. Watch wheel alignment and balance closely. This promotes longer tire life and will reduce wear and tear on your car's suspension system, bearings and steering gear. Makes driving safer and more pleasurable.

None of these things will guarantee another 50,000 miles out of a car. But look at it this way. If you don't do these things, you can pretty well guarantee yourself that you won't get another 50,000 miles. Think about it.

Merit Smashes Taste Barrier.

—National Smoker Study

Read what smokers had to say about MERIT in a recent nationwide survey.

Confirmed: Majority of smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

And in research conducted among current MERIT smokers:

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

First Major Alternative To High Tar Smoking

MERIT has proven conclusively that it not only delivers the flavor of high tar brands—but continues to satisfy!

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is the first real alternative for high tar smokers.

He'll clone a mouse. Squeak and all?

FOR CLEMENT L. MARKERT, professor of biology, Yale University

Since you have a Federal grant to clone a mouse, please tell me how society will benefit from your research. — R.S., Beachwood, N.J.

● Such an achievement will be important in the production of valuable strains of experimental animals and also, perhaps, of economically valuable animals such as cattle. It is true that the only creatures cloned by nuclear transplantation in the laboratory are amphibians — frogs, toads, salamanders. However, vegetative or nonsexual reproduction leads to the production of clones, and this is very common in nature. There are natural clones of fish, amphibians and reptiles, but none of birds or mammals. The advantage of cloning mice or other mammals, rather than just amphibians, is that these mammals are more valuable, both economically and in use for research in biology or medicine.

Farrah: She loves limelight.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

I have a feeling that, despite all she says, Farrah Fawcett-Majors really laps up all the publicity. Am I right? — I.W., Bangor, Maine

FOR FRANCESCA ANNIS, star of PBS-TV's Lillie

Please tell me how Elizabeth Taylor discovered you and got you into films. — J. Briggs, Decatur, Ill.

● She never "found" me, but I did make my screen debut in her movie, Cleopatra. I got it by a stroke of luck. My appointment to see the producer was for 4:30, but as something else cropped up for that time, I went earlier. The producer was just leaving. Had I waited until 4:30, I never would have seen him. As it was, he saw me in the corridor and gave me the part.

FOR PHIL DONAHUE, talk-show host

Most moderators talk more than their guests. Isn't it rude to the guests when some of them can't get a word in edgewise? — K.R., Gadsden, Ala.

● True, many of us in this game are accused of talking too much. Of course, ideally, the guest does most of the chatting. Some guests, however, share very little, while others float a battleship of words around a rowboat of thought. When this happens, the host has to step in and attempt to control the blizzard of words.

FOR BOB LAYCOCK, historian, Indianapolis Motor Speedway Corporation

True or false that your drivers are so superstitious about the number 13 that they won't enter a car with that number? — Mrs. L. Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● It is a fact that race drivers are generally a little more superstitious than the average person. But the reason they do not enter number 13 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway is that the present-day rules do not permit it. The only time that a car with the number 13 participated was in 1914.

FOR LUCIE ARNAZ, star of Broadway's They're Playing Our Song

Is being the daughter of Lucille Ball as exciting as I think it must be? — Mary Winfield, Waterbury, Conn.

● Since I've never been anything else, it's hard to compare. To me, my mother was never Lucille Ball, the celebrity and actress, but a great person who was simply a mom — I felt the same as every girl who had one. I never knew I was living in a goldfish bowl, the way everyone seems to think I was. I didn't notice because I was too busy growing up.

FOR ELIZABETH POST, etiquette expert

Who gets introduced first, the person you're with or the one who ambles on the scene? And do men get introduced before women? — B.G., Prescott, Ariz.

● It doesn't matter how you do it — as long as you do introduce your companion and the passerby. The only real discourtesy is to leave the one you are talking to unintroduced while you chat with the other one who happens by. Men should be introduced to women simply by saying the woman's name first: "Joan, I'd like you to meet John."

FOR MAX CLELAND, administrator, Veterans Administration

Which states have the largest population of U.S. military veterans? — George Hill, Seattle, Wash.

● The two states with the largest overall populations. According to V.A.'s latest estimates, there are 3,328,000 veterans in California (including 981,000 Vietnam Era and 1,433,000 World II). In New York there are an estimated 2,494,000 veterans (605,000 Vietnam Era and 1,173,000 World War II).

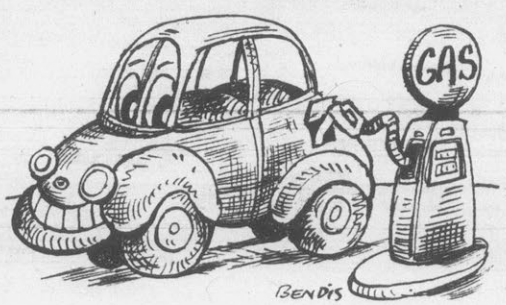

PRO AND CON

Are Car Fuel Rules Too Harsh?

PRO V.J. Adduci, president, Motor Vehicle Mfr. Ass.

The Government has set goals without adequately considering manufacturing and sales realities. Further, the Federal standards for fleet-average fuel economy require a more stringent rate of improvement in 1981 through 1983 than in past years, on the way to a 27.5 m.p.g. fleet average by 1985. Car makers face most difficult tasks in developing vehicles that meet these standards — and the transportation needs of American motorists. And, because of requirements to meet yearly standards, manufacturers can't commit financial resources necessary for long-range fuel economy research. Government standards place costly burdens on manufacturers.

CON Clarence M. Ditlow, executive director, Center for Auto Safety

With the U.S. spending $50 billion annually for oil imports, and gasoline prices fast approaching a dollar a gallon, high fuel-economy standards, under the Energy Policy and Conservation Act, offer the best way to fight inflation, reduce our foreign-trade deficit and make us less dependent on foreign oil. While the nation will save almost two-million barrels per day of gas from the fuel-economy standards, consumers will save $1500 in lifetime gasoline and operating costs for the average new car in 1985. In two years, driving new cars will pay for the cost of meeting the mileage standards — a bargain for consumers and a boost to the economy.

PETS: WHICH ARE HOT, WHICH ARE NOT

New York Zoological Society

By Leslie Savan

"If someone tried to break into my house, Casey would growl and snarl and, if necessary, attack," Ronni Tendler, a New York high-school nurse says proudly of her young Doberman pinscher. "But the image Dobermans have as mean, vicious dogs is unfair. With family and friends they are the most loving, affectionate dogs I've ever known. Most of them are absolute pussycats."

It may come as a surprise that the "pussycat" Doberman has risen from near obscurity to become the number-two purebred dog in America. But it makes sense. The Doberman appears to satisfy two of the most important needs of modern pet owners: physical security and psychological security — or love. And it seems to be love — more than anything else — that makes Americans such avid pet keepers.

In 1977, according to a study by the marketing research group Frost and Sullivan, we spent $5.8 billion on pet foods and products for our more than 554 million pets. About 57 percent of all U.S. households own one or more pets. So, our national passion for pets is going strong as ever.

But the pets we are choosing to own are changing, and those choices reflect our changing society. Let's take a look at the pets that are "hot" — and those that are not — and some of the reasons for our pet choices.

Big is better. Pure poodles have been the number-one breed of dog since 1960, according to American Kennel Club registrations. But a poodle's main attraction, good companionship, may no longer be enough in these pragmatic times.

"While the poodle is still far and away the most popular single breed, it is nowhere near as popular as it was 10 years ago," says the A.K.C.'s John Mandeville. "The poodle used to account for one in four registrations; now it's down to one in 10."

Other small breeds, such as the Pekingese and Chihuahua, have been totally squeezed out of the A.K.C.'s top ten by the bigger dogs. "Over the last several years," Mandeville says, "a number of larger breeds, such as the Doberman, golden and Labrador retrievers, and the German shepherd, have been gaining on the small dogs.

"The Doberman has risen from number 19 to number two in 10 years. While you can't pinpoint an exact reason for the rise in big dogs, the concern with security seems to be a factor."

Some Dobe owners need their dogs only for protection. Ed Lopez, a Colorado barber, bought a Doberman after his Denver shop was burglarized, "and it hasn't been broken into since," he says proudly.

But most owners of Dobermans go out of their way to stress how affectionate the breed is. "It's like having an 80-pound lap dog," says Shirley Goldman of New York City. "They love to cuddle — and yet they'll guard you with their lives."

Smaller is easier. But other practical concerns may overtake even the concern for security in determining our pet choices.

"I think we may see the return of the small dog," says Mandeville. "We're moving from a society of abundance to a society of less abundance, and many people may decide to stop spending $1 or $2 a day on dog food when they can spend 50 cents a day. The smaller pet is easier to walk, fits better into apartments and is easier to pick up after."

A number of cities have — or will soon enact — the so-called "pooper-scooper" laws: New York, Chicago, Albuquerque, San Francisco and Des Moines. And, indeed, informal observations at one Manhattan animal shelter indicate that shortly after the law went into effect there in August 1978, small-dog adoptions did seem to rise.

But the real beneficiary of such laws may in the long run be cats, whose scooping can be done indoors. Typical reasons for choosing cats are given by a St. Louis advertising man: "They give affection, but they're not all over me like a dog. They give me space, and I give them space."

According to the Cat Fanciers Association, the Persian and the Siamese have remained the number-one and number-two most fancied purebred felines, although most of our 23 million cats are mixed breeds. For many Americans, the cats provide major relief from the loneliness of modern life.

Cleveland Amory, animal expert, columnist, president of the Fund for the Animals and a former "dog person," is now pushing cats as the pet for today. "A cat needs so little," he says, "and yet it gives so much."

The media influence. But we don't always choose pets for such straightforward reasons. Sometimes the animal you see on TV will turn up the next day in your neighbor's backyard.

The Old English sheepdog, star of the Disney film, The Shaggy Dog, and later of the TV series, Please Don't Eat The Daisies, illustrates the media's influence most dramatically. "In 1959 we had only 112 Old English sheepdogs registered," says the A.K.C.'s Mandeville. "But by the mid-70's after the film and TV show, they were up to about 16,000. That's incredibly popular for a gigantic breed with all that hair. There definitely appear to be fads in some dog choices."

These days, Sandy, the large, sandy-colored mongrel who steals each performance of the Broadway hit, Annie, is causing quite a stir. "A lot of people call and write to ask about him," says Sandy's owner-trainer, Bill Berloni. "In fact, I got Sandy in a dog pound the day before he was to be put away. He had been an abused dog. So I tell people who want a dog to try their dog pound so they can help abused and forgotten dogs — truly the underdogs."

Pets that please the eye. Famous animals aside, a growing number of pet owners want to kill two birds — if you'll pardon the expression — with one stone, by owning a pet that's fun and decorative at the same time. The eye appeal of birds and fish, in addition to their relatively easy upkeep, may account for their rise in popularity.

There are now 340 kinds of fish swimming around U.S. households. Most of them are the old standbys: goldfish, guppies, mollies. "But saltwater fish, which are much more colorful and beautiful, are coming into their own, especially on the coasts," says a spokesman for Aquarium Stock Company in New York. "Ten years ago, we hardly sold any. But now maybe 20 percent of the fish we sell are saltwater, everything from the eight-inch angelfish to the three-foot nurse shark." Fish prices, he says, range from $1.99 to $150, averaging about $20.

The price is well worth it to Randy Socko, 24, of Manhattan, who keeps six highly unusual saltwater fish in a bathtub-sized tank in his living room. "Their colors are so bright, so flaming," he says. "For me, they're definitely better than a painting. And when company comes over, they tend to be a conversation piece."

Birds, too, are highy decorative, good conversation pieces, and now — as never before — status items. In 1977 Americans spent $82 million on the purchase of birds — nearly double of what was spent on them only five years earlier.

Some of the most expensive status symbols are macaws and cockatoo parrots (like the one on Robert Blake's TV show, Baretta), often costing more than $1,000 each. Nevertheless, the biggest bird is still the parakeet; at an affordable $4 to $8, they account for three of four birds sold.

Call of the wild. There is another pet need in America — a need not fulfilled by a practical, popular or even a pretty pet. Some pet owners want to be jostled by a little bit of exotic nature.

"I have two snakes, a tarantula and a scorpion," says Donald Hewitt, a 51-year-old machinist in New York. "It's kind of like bringing nature indoors."

"Frog Al," another exotic pet owner, manages to keep some 300 frogs and lizards in his three-bedroom Manhattan apartment. "I feel like I'm creating a modern-day Noah's Ark," says Al, "because half of these animals may not be around in another 20 years."

There are an estimated 145 million "others" crawling and creeping through our homes and basements. These oddball pets include 10-inch giant millipedes, lizards, spiders, and — probably the most common of the uncommons — the boa constrictor. At New York's Fang and Claw shop, where the boa is the best seller, they also sell, mass-market style, its favorite food — a frozen six-pack of freshly killed mice.

Also a smashing success in some urban environs is the gecko, a small lizard that climbs walls and ceilings to chase down and devour its all-too prevalent prey — roaches.

With the money spent on reptiles increasing between 15 and 20 percent in the last five years, according to Pet Supply Marketing magazine, the trend towards the exotic does seem to be getting healthier. But it's not necessarily healthy for the exotic pet, says Richard Lattis, a zoologist and curator of education at the Bronx Zoo.

"We're constantly getting these relatively rare animals dropped off at the zoo, almost like unwanted babies left at the doorstep," he says. "Skunks and raccoons are cute as babies, but when they mature and start to bite, people want to get rid of them." If you still have a yen for something different, Lattis strongly recommends "animals bred in captivity — gerbils, hamsters, rabbits, land hermit crabs, even laboratory mice and rats."

Of course, exotic pets aren't the only pets in danger. The advice from virtually every animal authority has been for years and still is: neuter, neuter, neuter. "You must neuter any animal — there are simply too many of them," says Holly Sherer of the Humane Society of the U.S. "There are between 15 and 17 million dogs and cats picked up or turned in to shelters every year. At least 13.5 million of them will be put to death."

A need for love. This may indeed be a disposable age: fast food, shorter marriages, higher job turnover. Some people also think in terms of short-term, even disposable pets.

But the opposite of disposability is commitment and love — and that's what presumably would cause people to take a pet in the first place. Debbie Reynolds, for instance, takes her apricot-colored poodle, Killer, everywhere with her — to rehearsals, concerts, interviews. "She's turned into a real show-business dog," says Killer's fond owner.

When choosing a pet, there's nothing wrong in considering its decorativeness, its trendy or exotic appeal. But the choices must be based on love and a realistic appraisal of the responsibilities involved in the care of the pet.

Brian Anderson, 21, seems to have both love and responsibility for his partly-exotic, partly-mundane menagerie. In his suburban Cincinnati home, he keeps not only a Doberman, but also a ferret, a raccoon, several birds and extensive diaries on each animal. "It gives me a lot of pleasure to think that somewhere along the line, I've learned from them," he says. "All of them." FW

SWEET EATING IS JUST A BOWL OF STRAWBERRIES

By Marilyn Hansen

It's fresh strawberry season again — time to pick your own field-ripened berries, choose the best from a roadside stand or simply select a fragrant basket or two in your own supermarket.

One of my favorite ways to enjoy them is to simply pile fresh berries in a bowl and then top with sour cream and brown sugar. Here are some other choice strawberry recipes for you to try.

Tom Cavanagh

STRAWBERRY OMELET

- 1 pt. strawberries, washed and hulled
- Sugar
- ⅔ cup sour cream
- 2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
- ½ teaspoon grated orange peel
- Basic Omelets for four

1. Reserve 4 strawberries for garnish. Slice the remaining berries and sprinkle with sugar to taste and set aside.
2. Combine sour cream, confectioners' sugar and orange peel; set aside.
3. Make omelets, using Basic Omelet recipe, shown below, for each serving.
4. To serve, spoon about ½ cup sliced berries on each folded omelet. Spoon sauce over the tops and garnish with the reserved berries.

Makes 4 omelets

BASIC OMELET

- 2 eggs
- 2 tablespoons water
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon butter

1. Mix eggs, water and salt with fork. Heat butter in 8-inch omelet pan or fry pan over medium-high heat until just hot enough to sizzle a drop of water.
2. Pour in egg mixture. Mixture should set at edges at once. With pancake turner turned over, carefully push cooked portions at edges toward center so uncooked portions flow to bottom. Tilt pan as necessary so uncooked eggs can flow.
3. Slide pan rapidly back and forth over heat to keep mixture in motion and sliding freely. Cook until top is still moist and creamy-looking. With pancake turner, fold in half or roll, turning out onto plate with a quick flip of the wrist.

Makes 1 serving

GAUFRETTE RIVER CAFÉ

- 4 egg whites
- 1¼ cups confectioners' sugar
- 1½ cups sliced, blanched almonds
- Dash vanilla extract
- 5 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1 qt. vanilla ice cream
- 1 qt. strawberries, rinsed, hulled and dried
- 1 jar (12 ozs.) melba sauce
- 1 cup heavy cream, whipped
- 2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar

1. Combine egg whites, confectioners' sugar, almonds and vanilla. Cover with plastic film and refrigerate for 2 hours.
2. Add flour, blending in with a wire whisk. Cover with plastic film and refrigerate for 2 hours. Note: First two steps can be done day before.
3. When ready to bake, preheat oven to 500°F. Grease cookie sheets.
4. Using a 2-oz. (4-tablespoon) measure, ladle out mixture onto greased cookie sheets. Shape each spoonful into a circle (4- to 5-inch diameter), using a wet fork.
5. Bake for 5 to 7 minutes until edges are lightly browned. As soon as possible, quickly remove cookies, called gaufrettes in France, from pans and invert on inverted coffee cups. Cool. This is when the gaufrette cools to its cup shape.
6. Store loosely, covered with waxed paper, in an airtight container. Or place in a box covered loosely with waxed paper. Best made on day to be served.
7. Just before serving, place each gaufrette on a dessert plate. Fill with about a ½ cup-size scoop of vanilla ice cream. Add about 6 strawberries and drizzle with 2 tablespoons melba sauce. Top with a heaping 2 to 3 tablespoons whipped cream, sweetened with confectioners' sugar.

Makes 6 to 8 generous servings

Editor's Note: This popular dessert is served at The River Café, Brooklyn, N.Y.

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM

- ½ cup sugar
- ¼ cup cornstarch
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅔ cup light corn syrup
- 6 cups milk
- 4 eggs, slightly beaten
- 3 pints strawberries
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 2 teaspoons vanilla extract

1. In a heavy 4-quart saucepan, stir together sugar, cornstarch, salt and corn syrup. Gradually stir in milk until smooth.
2. Cook, stirring constantly, and bring to boil over medium heat. Boil 1 minute. Remove from heat.
3. Stir about ½ cup of the mixture into eggs until blended, then add egg mixture to hot mixture in pan.
4. Stirring constantly, cook over medium-low heat 2 minutes. Pour into bowl. Cover; refrigerate until chilled.
5. Rinse, stem and crush strawberries; stir into cornstarch mixture. Stir in heavy cream and vanilla. Freeze in 5- or 6-quart electric or hand-crank freezer, following manufacturer's directions.

Makes about 5 quarts

REMOVE HAIR FOREVER

You can now remove undesirable hair PERMANENTLY in the privacy of your own home. A simple electrolysis instrument called Perma Tweez enables everyone to enjoy the benefits of eliminating the bothersome chores of repeated shaving, depilatory use, waxings, forever. Well over one million people like yourself found Perma Tweez an effective end to hair on the face, legs and body.

Perma Tweez is so unique that a patent was granted because it is the only electrolysis instrument that won't puncture the skin. This feature has made it the choice of over 15,000 physicians as well as hospitals, government institutions and university medical centers. Easy instructions make you expert in a few minutes. You'll save hundreds of dollars on salon electrolysis by doing it yourself.

STRIKE BACK AT RISING GAS PRICES! GET UP TO . . .

4 Extra Miles Per Gallon
100 Extra Miles Between Fill-Ups
SAVE Up To $200 A Year On Gas

OR DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

See our guarantee

Think of it! Thanks to an amazing automobile discovery, every single car owner, every fleet operator, every truck or camper owner . . . everyone who operates a gas-powered internal combustion engine, can now save up to 20% and more on their gasoline bills!

Yes, you can actually get up to 70. . . 80. . . 90 . . . even 100 extra miles from every single tankful! No matter how old or run-down your car may be . . . no matter how many gallons of gas it now devours each week . . . FROM THE VERY INSTANT YOU INSTALL THE BALL-MATIC GAS SAVER VALVE IN YOUR CAR, YOU MUST EXPERIENCE A DRAMATIC DECREASE IN GAS CONSUMPTION!

Here's why:

With all the advances made in automotive technology, the carburetor is literally 50 years behind the times! It is possibly the most inefficient component in the entire engine and is responsible for an incredible waste of gasoline! You see, the carburetor is pre-set at the factory for idle conditions. This means that it is most efficient in regulating the gas-to-air mixture when the car is standing still and up to speeds of 35 mph. When you drive over that speed . . . or start up from a dead stop . . . or negotiate grades and steep hills . . . or pull a trailer or camper . . . or carry a full load of passengers the whole system breaks down! Too much gas feeds into the carburetor and you get incomplete combustion. Every time that happens, it's just like pouring your money right down the drain.

The Most Significant Automotive Breakthrough Of The Past Ten Years!

Adding the BALL-MATIC GAS SAVER VALVE to your engine is like having a "mini computer brain" which actually monitors the air-to-fuel balance on a constant basis. As soon as it senses an over-rich condition, it opens to permit a precise measure of additional air to enter the system. The result: more efficient combustion and a fuel savings of up to 20% or more!

Controlled Tests Confirm Big Dollar Savings

In the Spring of 1978, we arranged for a local Shell Service Station to conduct a controlled, supervised, test using seven different cars owned and driven by non-professional drivers. Each car was fitted with a locked gas cap and the keys were kept in the possession of the testers.

After establishing base mileage consumption data for the various cars, the BALL-MATIC was installed and miles-per-gallon figures were rechecked. Every single car in the test showed dramatic improvement.

Year/Make Of Car	MPG Improvement
1970 Cadillac Eldorado	21%
1970 Chrysler Imperial	28%
1969 Cutlass	11%
1974 Vega	11%
1972 Gran Torino	19%
1967 Camaro	16%
1973 Cadillac Eldorado	40%
OVER-ALL AVERAGE	18%

Start Saving Immediately

As of now, tens of thousands of motorists all over the country have put the BALL-MATIC GAS SAVER VALVES in their cars. It takes only 60 seconds to install and no special tools are required (easy-to-follow instructions are provided) — it's so easy, anyone can do it! But best of all, the BALL-MATIC works immediately. There's no "breaking-in period" — you experience a significant savings with the very first tankful.

The BALL-MATIC fits all American made cars (except diesel or fuel injection) and all foreign cars except Volkswagen.

READ THE RESULTS FOR YOURSELF!

The BALL-MATIC (gas saver) that I purchased has proven itself. I drive a 1970 Oldsmobile, now I get four miles more per gallon.
C. T.
Orange, California

Just a short note to inform you of the performance of your BALL-MATIC unit that I have installed in my 1972 Ford stationwagon. Prior to using your device, I averaged 12 to 13 MPG, now that I have installed your unit my milage has gone up to 16 MPG around town.
A. C. — Sherriff
Orange County, California

Before it was installed on my 1973 Ford L.T.D. I was getting 9 miles to the gallon, since installation of the BALL-MATIC I am getting almost 15 miles to the gallon.
R. B.
Hickman, Nebraska

After installing the BALL-MATIC on my 1972 Oldsmobile Toronado I increased from 7.5 to 10.5 miles to the gallon.

Seeing this I took my station on as a BALL-MATIC dealer and within the first week sold over 100 valves.

This is the kind of extra income producer that other service stations should consider during this energy crisis to service their customers.
L. M.
Mobile Service
New Britian, Connecticut

I want to express my thanks for the BALL-MATIC. Since it has been installed in my car, my gas mileage has not been under 18 miles per gallon. This is an increase of 5.5 miles per gallon.

Claremont, California

LOOK HOW EASY IT IS TO INSTALL THE BALL-MATIC YOURSELF

All you do is simply slip the BALL-MATIC onto the line leading from the PCV valve and twist into place. (It's as easy as screwing in a light bulb). In fact even if you never lifted the hood of your car before . . . you can install the BALL-MATIC in just a few moments (no special tools required). Easy to follow instructions are included.

GUARANTEED SAVINGS

We firmly believe the BALL-MATIC GAS SAVER VALVE to be one of the best investments you can make to save money this year. It must deliver up to 2 . . . 3 . . . even 4 extra miles per gallon — up to 100 extra miles between fill-ups. Of course, gas savings will depend on the type of car you own and the amount of miles you drive; however, we guarantee that you must save at least FIVE TIMES the amount you paid for your BALL-MATIC in the very first year or WE WILL GIVE YOU DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK! (Double refunds limited to one unit per household or business.)

DO YOUR EYES MIRROR YOUR SOUL?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. When you tell someone what seems to you to be a sidesplitting story, he may laugh just to be polite. But you can tell whether it "bombed" or really went over big just by watching his eyes — if you know what to look for.

2. Whether the pupils of a person's eyes habitually become large or small when he encounters others, provides a clue to how well adjusted he is.

3. When you encounter an acquaintance and he is disinclined to meet your gaze — his eyes keep straying elsewhere — this indicates that he either has a guilty conscience about something or he's taken a dislike to you for some reason.

4. How well a person's eyes function has a bearing on his general outlook and personality characteristics.

5. Though men are often referred to as having a "roving eye," women actually spend more time looking at others than men do.

ANSWERS

1. True. A team of investigators at the U.S. Air Force Academy made an interesting study, which showed that how humor strikes a person — on a scale ranging from a "joke" that died on its feet to one that is hilariously funny — is instantly registered in the individual's eyes. It was found that the funnier the joke is thought to be, the bigger the person's eyes get, i.e., the larger the pupils become.

2. True. In an Illinois Institute of Technology study, undergraduates "eye response styles" were compared with scores on personality tests. It was found that when eye response tended to be accompanied by the eyes growing smaller — the pupils constricting — this was associated with problems in personality adjustment. "Neurotics showed significantly higher pupillary constriction than did the other personality groups."

3. False. It's more likely that he's depressed about something. Studies at Britain's University of Bristol show that when a person is depressed, the duration and frequency of his eye contact with others is significantly reduced. And the investigators suggest that this may be one of the clues that a specialist learns to use, perhaps unconsciously, when making a diagnosis of depression.

4. True. In a study of over two thousand men and women at the University of Texas, comparing their eyesight with other characteristics, it was found that people with good eyesight tended to be the most optimistic; that nearsighted people reported more illnesses than those with normal vision; and that nearsighted women tended to be more ambitious and energetic, while the reverse was found true for men.

5. True. In their definitive monograph Gaze and Mutual Gaze, a team of psychologists at Oxford and University College of Swansea (England) report on studies showing that women's eyes rove more than men's do, and their curiosity about others causes them to take in more details about people's looks, actions and general demeanor. ("If there's anything interesting to be seen, her eyes aren't still a moment. She's got eyes in the back of her head, checking out the action, never missing a trick.") A further finding: While males look more at the eyes, females look at eyes and mouth. It is suggested that "this could reflect a greater interest in listening on the part of females." It's interesting to note that other studies have shown that women do tend to listen to what another is saying with greater empathy and more acute perception of the feelings and thoughts that lie behind the words. CLIP THIS

A humble thing, the paper clip,
Yet for its size it has a grip
That holds, and for this use is nice,
Two paper pieces like a vise.

One thing alone it holds more tightly
Or clings to, if I put it rightly,
Just won't let go of, won't be done with,
Becomes, if truth be told, as one with.

What makes you then resort to force?
Another paper clip, of course.

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

During Sunday dinner our six-year-old grandson Jody was having a hard time trying to eat his peas without dropping any on the dark green shag carpeting. As luck would have it, a forkful spilled onto the floor, and Jody was told to pick them up immediately. After much searching we asked him why he didn't just pick them up and continue with dinner. There was a moment's silence, then from beneath the table came a tremulous voice, "But, Grandpa, I can't find them; they rhyme with the rug."

An Amazing Diet Breakthrough!

MEDICAL DOCTOR'S NEW DISCOVERY BURNS AWAY MORE FAT THAN IF YOU RAN 98 MILES PER WEEK!

DATELINE SAN DIEGO — An amazing diet breakthrough has been developed by a southern California M.D.

This breakthrough literally allows you to burn off body fat faster than someone who runs almost 100 miles per week.

This may very well be the most amazing weight loss discovery of the century. In fact, it may be the fastest way to lose weight permanently that has ever been developed.

Testing so far is incomplete but there is a very strong suspicion that this discovery makes it possible for an overweight person to lose as much as 2 pounds of fat and fluid everyday for the first week. Actually, it may produce a 6 pound weight loss in just the first 48 hours! After the first week, this discovery could conceivably allow a continuing weight loss of as much as 9 pounds every two weeks thereafter. If needed, it should be possible to use this method to lose 50, 60, 70 or even 100 pounds and more.

When you begin to use this program, you can expect to be able to measure the difference in your waistline in just 24 to 48 hours. You will probably lose more inches each week than even if you faithfully did hundreds of situps everyday. You may very well lose as much as 3 to 5 inches off your waistline in the first month. If you are a woman, you can lose as much as a full dress size in only 7 days.

The doctor who developed this formula is more than an ordinary M.D. He is also a psychiatrist who specializes in alcohol and drug addictions. In addition to his other patients, he has treated more than 2500 drug addicts. But strangely enough, his practice has taught him that overeating is as difficult to deal with as any hard-core drug addiction. He came to realize that what was needed was an anti-fat weapon that was both safe and very powerful. After a lot of research, he has developed just such a weapon. Apparently, what happens is that his crash-burn system turns up your body's "inner furnace" and breaks down your excess body fat and automatically flushes it out of your body forever.

The amazing thing, of course, is the speed at which this program works. It is rather remarkable to throw off as much as 6 pounds of fat and fluid in the very first weekend.

Another nice thing about this discovery is that it does not require fasting, exercise or will power. Now at last, it is possible to lose weight without fasting or discomfort.

This weight loss concept is now being tested nationwide. So far, the preliminary results are nothing short of amazing. The first informal reports indicate astonishing weight losses of as much as 12 pounds in the first 7 days. There are early indications that some people are losing weight 3 times faster than ever before (including significant losses of as much as 50 pounds.)

Of course, something like this cannot be kept secret. Rumors of this doctor-developed breakthrough are spreading like wildfire. The rush is on. It is easy to imagine that professional actors, actresses and other celebrities will be going out of their way to get their hands on this wonderful anti-fat weapon.

You can't blame them. Imagine how it must feel to drop up to 2 pounds a day and shrink your waistline up to 3 inches the first week.

". . . The amazing thing, of course, is the speed at which this program works. It is rather remarkable to throw off as much as 6 pounds of fluid and fat in the very first weekend . . ."

". . . Imagine how it must feel to drop up to 2 pounds a day and shrink your waistline up to 3 inches the first week . . ."

The first concern of the doctor who developed this program is safety. Therefore, his anti-fat formula contains absolutely no drugs. It is made up entirely of 100% natural ingredients. He first tested it on himself and he now uses it religiously every day. This program can even help people who have been hopelessly overweight all their lives including those who need to lose 20 to 30 or 70 pounds or more.

The doctor recommends, however, that you consult your personal physician before you begin this or any other diet program.

This is a totally new concept in the war against fat. There simply has never been an anti-fat weapon quite like this. It almost seems to evaporate fat and inches from the very first day. It automatically converts body fat to body fuel.

Remember — this amazing reducing aid is a doctor-developed formula. It starts to work as soon as it enters your system. It instantly begins to shrink your fat cells and also starts to safely stimulate your fat-burning metabolism.

If you want to lose weight and carve inches off your body, here are the results that are possible.

- 6 inches off waistline
- 4 inches off stomach
- 4 inches off buttocks
- 3 inches off thighs
- 5 inches off hips

Remember — you don't have to wait weeks for this diet secret to work. It starts instantly! You can actually see the results in just a few days.

The way you use this formula is simple. All you do is mix it with a glass of your favorite beverage and drink it everyday the first thing in the morning.

As soon as you do this, you will have automatically stepped up your fat burning metabolism. This will continue for the next 24 hours.

Then, during the rest of the day, you eat a wide selection of tasty foods which is scientifically programmed to maintain a high level of fat burn-off.

That's all there is to it. This may be the most effective fat-burning method ever developed. It is not a drug. It is not a gimmick. As you have read before, this is a formula and a program developed by a medical doctor who uses it himself.

It works. More fantastic test results are pouring in everyday. Here's how you can prove all this to yourself without any financial risk at all.

Go ahead and order a supply of this crash-loss discovery by mail. Order as much or as little as you need. Then, as soon as the mailman delivers this fantastic weight-loss miracle to your door — start the program. If you have not lost up to 6 pounds in the first 48 hours and up to 12 pounds in the first week, if you are not 100% satisfied — then send back the empty product container and the company will return your entire payment to you quietly and without question.

If you are extra skeptical you can postdate your check or money order by 30 days. If you do this, the company promises and guarantees not to deposit it for at least that amount of time. Then, if you decide to return the product container, the company will send back your uncashed check or money order with no questions asked. You can't lose money — you can only lose weight.

The price is just $8.45 for a full 10-day supply with complete instructions. A 15-day supply is $11.70. A 20-day supply is $13.95. And finally, a 30-day supply is only $18.95. (This is a 25% discount.)

To order, write your name and address and the words "crash-loss program" on a piece of paper and send it with your payment to:

Millburn Products
Dept. FW4, 161 Maplewood Ave.
P.O. Box 219
Maplewood, New Jersey 07040

Your order will be sent promptly by return mail. If you have any questions, you can telephone (201) 744-3777. Checks and money orders should be made payable to Millburn Products. (It is not a good idea to mail cash.)

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Adventurous Traveling

If spring has roused your hibernating wanderlust, and dreams of travel persistently invade your thoughts, a glance through the 1979 Worldwide Adventure Travel Guide (American Adventurers Association) will put you well on your way to making some of those dreams a reality. Published by Bob Citron, a veteran of many Smithsonian and National Geographic expeditions, the Guide lists information about 3,000 land, sea and air trips that will let you cover territory via every method from backpacking and bicycle-touring to river-rafting and hang gliding. So, if skydiving or studying swampland wildlife in Florida strikes your fancy, check your local bookstore for this guide.

If you're worried that seeking adventure will set your budget back, take a look at Gomer's 1979 Budget Travel Directory (Hammond). The guide lists over 4,000 hotels, motels and tourist homes that are good bets for the cost-conscious traveler, and, in addition, offers a number of helpful tips on keeping expenses down. The directory is available in bookstores, or by sending $6.50 (postage and handling included) to Gomer's Guide '79, Hammond Inc., 515 Valley St., Maplewood, N.J. 07040.

Marathon Mathematics

Einstein might have appreciated the dedication a group of seventh graders in Knoxville, Tenn., has shown toward mathematics. As a project, the 130 students decided to collect 1,000,000 of something; popcorn kernels were the final choice because they're small and inexpensive. Averaging the number of kernels per pound, the students arrived at a figure of 3,900. They then divided that number into 1,000,000 to arrive at the correct number of pounds. The corn filled 33 gallon jugs.

Twenty-five students volunteered to pop the 528 cups of corn. Forty-one hours later, they finished their chore and decided to apply to the Guinness Book of World Records for a new category.

What conclusions did they draw from their experience? It would take the average family 5.8 years to consume 1,000,000 kernels of corn if they popped at the rate of a pound a day.

Circus Act

Brie Quinby

There's a time in most people's lives when the thought of joining the circus is very enticing. But what is it really like to practice and perform a circus act? For Wally Naghtin, who travels with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, and whose uncaged bear act is the largest in the world, circus life is an exciting mixture of hard work, glamour and patience.

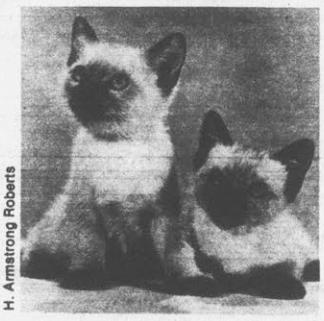

Wally, who's been working with bears for 20 years, has found that "most bears are very intelligent and enjoy learning tricks." He says that most bears are playful until they reach reproductive age (at about four years); in fact, his assistant's child plays with the smallest cub.

It takes most bears about two years to learn the kinds of tricks that Wally wants them to perform, and for some of the more complicated acts, such as bicycle and motor-bike riding, it can take even longer. "However, if we're working on a trick that a bear doesn't like, we don't force him," Wally says. "To be successful with any animal, you have to respect it."

Wally and his family don't ride the circus train, which is how most of the animals are transported. Instead, he drives the bears in a truck that has been specially fitted with cages and collapsible sides. "I'm with them all the time, and they trust me. Bears are dangerous animals, and my bears have all their teeth and claws intact. But as long as I'm around, they won't bother people. They're awe-inspiring creatures."

A Cat-astrophic Problem

Every year nearly 8.5 million unwanted cats and kittens are placed in animal shelters, and only 20 percent of these felines are actually adopted into homes. This year, the American Humane Association has proclaimed June as

H. Armstrong Roberts

Adopt-a-Cat Month, and the Association and 9-Lives Cat Food are launching a campaign designed to help animal shelters find good homes for their cats.

Participating AHA shelters will be offering "star kits" to all those who decide to let a "cat be the feature attraction" in their lives. The kit contains a cat-care book, an adoption certificate and a number of other treats. So, if a svelte Siamese or a mischievous calico seems like the pet for you, adopt one from your local humane society this June.

Lifestyles

Employment. An overwhelming 87 percent of the management executives of some 3,000 U.S. companies agree that affirmative action programs should be just as concerned with women, the handicapped, veterans and older workers as they are with racial minorities. But the same survey, one commissioned by Barnhill-Hayes, Inc., a Milwaukee, Wis., management consulting firm, found that 47 percent of the employers felt the handicapped would make the least-significant employment strides in the next five years, while women and blacks were felt to have the best chance.

Sports. Rodeo stars and football players have discovered that wearing women's pantie girdles gives them added protection against torn muscles. Because of its grip, a knee-length pantie girdle can prevent the thighs from splitting when a rider lands on the back of a bucking bull, steer or horse, reports Medical World News. The girdle prevents all kinds of bruises, tears and ruptures that might be caused by the rider abruptly hitting the animal's sharp spine. And football players with sore hamstrings have found that wearing a girdle can prevent further injury to those muscles.
