Gwinn Lyons, Ayden's Senior Citizen Director

Man In Love With Ayden

By REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — "Maybe I'm impatient, but I have gotten a lot of positive maybe," said Gwinn Lyons, director of Ayden's Senior Citizens Program of his fledgling operation. "Everyone's told me that I'm working against the garden, vacation and hot weather season."

Lyons, 73, has been working with the senior citizen program since early April. So far, he's had some success with a needlework class, as well as a first aid class. However, he has big plans for Ayden's older citizens.

"I want to have a quilting class," said Lyons." We've got some frames, and some folks have some old quilt tops that have never been finsihed."

Lyons, who has lived in Ayden for the past three years with his wife, Carol, their stepson, John, and their five year-old daughter, Chris, has nothing but praise for Ayden's surroundings and friendly citizens.

"I've just fallen in love with this town," he noted, smiling. "It's the most friendly town I've ever in, and I've got the nicest neighbors."

FIFTH RETIREMENT

Lyons, who's come out of his "fifth retirement" to take over the program at the Ayden Community Building, has led an active life since his graduation from Drake University in Iowa several years ago. His main experience has been as a purchasing agency for several firms and governmental agencies throughout the Midwest. His last fulltime job was with the Sheriff's Department in Marion County, Indiana.

What made Lyons decide to come to North Carolina, several thousand miles away from friends, home and family?

"My wife is a art education major, and she heard of East Carolina's fine reputation for its graduate arts program," Lyson said. "We also have a niece that goes to ECU, and she lives in Ayden."

Lyons and his family haven't been so lonely since they've moved to Ayden. He visits and receives visits from his three daughters by two former marriages, as well as his five grandchildren and one great-grandchild. They also visit his wife's daughter, who's recently graduated from high school, and his borther, who lives in Iowa.

Plus, the Lyons have made new friends around the community. Carol, Gwinn's wife, heard about the senior citizens job while in a class with Gil Davis, Ayden's Recreation Director.

Gwinn decided to try for the job after serving as a substitute teacher for the Pitt County Schools. Lyons recalled his experiences as a "sub" with a chuckle:

"When I substituted at Belvoir, it was really a blast! I wanted to bring all 29 children home with me. They thought I was Santa Claus. Most of my experience has been with D. H. Conley. I guess I've been the best babysitter the Pitt County Board of Education's ever had."

YOU'VE GOT TO BE NEEDED"

As fall draws near, the Ayden Senior Citizen Program should be moving along, with the promise of a bus to be funded by monies obtained through the Pitt County Council on Aging. The bus will enable the citizens to go to Greenville to run errands, go to the doctor, and generally have more chances to move around the county.

"We've got to get away from the idiot box," said Lyons. "Some of our folks are afraid to leave home, some can't dress themselves properly, they're just losing respect for themselves. I say, when you stop doing things, it's just the quickest way to go to the funeral home."

So, Lyons has set himself firmly in making a go of the Ayden Senior Citizens Program, helping people from the area he loves.

"I won't leave this area, not by choice," he stated. "The farthest I'll move away is Calico."

"I want to be the oldest guy in the Ayden Cemetery," he said with a grin. "So I guess I got about 30 more years.

After Three Years Of Captivity

Venezuelan Police Rescue U.S. Man

Venezuela (UPI) — Ohio businessman William F. Niehous was rescued Saturday by Venezuelan police after a shootout at a jungle hideout where leftist kidnappers had held him more than three years for $3.5 million ransom.

Venezuelan officials confirmed the nation's longest kidnapping was over but admitted the guerrilla band nearly recaptured Niehous all over again by ambushing the police escort taking him through the thick Venezuelan jungle.

Interior Minister Rafael Montes de Oca said Niehous was being taken to Caracas. The official gave no word on his condition.

Officials said Niehous, of Toledo, Ohio, was first rescued Friday by two federal police officers in the small jungle town of Maripa about 60 miles south of Ciudad Bolivar.

Niehous, vice president and general manager of the Venezuelan subsidiary of Owensllinois — Venezuela's largest glass manufacturer — was abducted Feb. 27, 1976, by ultra-leftists calling themselves the "Revolutionary Command Group, Argimiro Gabladon."

The abductors demanded publication of a strongly-worded political manifesto in the local and foreign press criticizing the administration of former President Carlos Andres Perez, whose term in office ended last March.

They also demanded payment of approximately $3.5 million and said that they would hold their victim until their demands were met.

In July of 1976, Niehous sent a last letter to his wife, beginning "My Dearest Donna," saying that he was alive and hoped that efforts would be made to obtain his freedom.

His wife offered $40,000 for her husband's release but the Venezuelan government refused to negotiate for his freedom. Owens-Illinois also attempted to meet guerrilla ransom demands, but the Venezuelan government refused to let the company deal with the kidnappers.

Since last year, police have assumed Niehous was dead.

Police reports said Niehous was first rescued during a shootout between two federal police officers and a group of guerrillas. Two guerrillas were killed.

Niehous and the two policemen began making their way back to Ciudad Bolivar, but were attacked once again by the guerrillas, who chased off most of the police but failed to recapture Niehous.

One of the police officers returned to Ciudad Bolivar for help, while Niehous and the other officer remained hidden in the jungle, said Carlos Jimenez Lopez, head of the national investigation department of Venezuela's Federal Police.

A party of police and army troopers returned to the Maripa area Saturday and rescued Niehous and the second policeman.

"I am waiting to see my husband," Mrs. Niehous said in a telephone interview

U.S. Embassy officials arrived in Ciudad Bolivar Saturday for what a spokesman said was "a routine measure to cooperate with local authorities on the verification of Niehous' identity."

Big Court Rush

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Defendants were lining up in twos and in threes last week in New Hanover County Superior Court.

But it wasn't because there had been a crime wave in the city.

Court observers say word had gotten around that a lenient judge was on the bench and that Friday would be his last day in New Hanover County.

Although it could not be determined whether sentences given out by Judge David E. Reid Jr. were actually more lenient than those given out by other judges, the defendants appeared to believe they were.

Reid held court in the county for six months and moves on to another county in the 3rd Judicial District Monday.

"I've never seen anything like it. It's incredible," said one attorney as defendant after defendant filed up to enter their pleas.

More than 100 cases were disposed of in four days of Superior Court last week. Defendants pleaded guilty in about 60 cases, and more than half came on Reid's final day.

The court became so busy that some defendants could not be squeezed in. "There just wasn't time," said one court official.

The judge became the focus of criticism, and possibly earned his reputation as a lenient judge, when he sentenced a woman to 90 days in jail after she was convicted of striking and killing a 13-year-old boy.

Reid, of Greenville, was appointed to the bench in 1977 by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Carter Speaks On Touchy Topic In South Korea

Urges More Political Freedom

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — President Carter, in his first public reference to the touchy human rights issue in South Korea, urged President Park Chung-Hee Saturday to widen political freedoms and enforce the rule of law.

He also pledged an "unshakable" American military commitment to the Asian nation's security.

In a lengthy toast to Park at a glittering state dinner, Carter repeatedly emphasized the strong bond between the two old allies, sealed in blood during the 1950-53 Korean War.

He then told the select audience, "There is a growing consensus within the international community about the fundamental value of human rights, individual dignity, political freedom, freedom of the press and the rule of law.

"The right to participate in the political process helps to unite a nation in pursuit of common goals," he said.

"There is abundant evidence in Korea of the dramatic economic progress a capable and energetic people can achieve by working together.

"I believe this achievement can be matched by similar progress through the realization of basic human aspirations in political and human rights."

Park, seated next to first lady Rosalynn Carter, did not react when the president brought up human rights, but defended his policy in his own toast earlier.

"We have found a democratic system which best suits our actual circumstances and which is the most effective in solving our own problems. This system upholds freedom based on law and order and assures the full creativity of the individual," he said.

Opponents of Park's 18-year-old government have protested Carter's visit on grounds they have received little American help on their complaints. They charged hundreds of dissidents were arrested after the announcement of the visit. There seemed no chance of demonstrations because so many opponents of the regime were in prison or under house arrest.

Hammering home the security issue again, Carter said, "Everyone must know Koreans and Americans will continue to stand shoulder to shoulder to prevent aggression in this peninsula and to preserve the peace.

"Our military commitment to Korea's security is unshakable, strong and enduring."

Carter has repeatedly referred to security since he arrived in Seoul Friday night from the Tokyo economic summit.

Foggy, rainy weather forced Carter to abandon plans to visit a South Korean camp only six miles from the demilitarized zone.

The president drove to Seoul in a motorcade and was greeted by an estimated 200,000 cheering, flag-waving Americans and Koreans in vast Yoida Plaza. He then held the first round of talks with Park at the Blue House, South Korea's presidential mansion.

Carter and Park met for two hours and 35 minutes, a half-hour longer than scheduled. For 70 minutes they talked alone.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Carter raised the human rights question but gave no details of the conversation.

He said they also discussed "continued efforts by North Korea to acquire a military preponderance" on the Korean peninsula, and ways to reduce tensions.

Korean security has been a major issue between the two allies since Carter announced his intention to withdraw all 30,000 American combat troops from South Korea.

Browning A Nominee

Superior Court Judge Robert L. Browning of Greenville was among candidates recommended for appointment to special Superior Court seats.

The recommendations were made by Gov. Hunt's four merit selection commissioners.

The final appointments will be made by the governor, and his office said the appointments would be made in two or three weeks to be effective Aug. 1.

Special judges serve four year terms and are assigned by the chief justice of the N.C. Superior Court to hold court anywhere in the state.

Unearths Indian Skeletons

WANCHESE, N.C. (AP) — An East Carolina University anthropologist has found four Indian skeletons between 1,000 and 2,000 years old during a dig.

The remains were found on land near Wanchese that served as a seasonal fishing village of pre-Algonkian people who inhabited the area between Jesus' time and 1,000 A.D., said Dr. David S. Phelps, an anthropology professor.

Three of the skeletons were in good condition and one was badly decayed, Phelps said. Two of the skeletons have been identified by sex, one male and one female.

The excavation was significant because many seasonal villages and burial areas on the coast have been destroyed by erosion.

The site is part of a planned seafood industrial park.

Now that the battle for Nicaragua's capital city has temporarily ended, it is hoped the population of refugee centers such as this will deminish. Band Of Tornadoes

By United Press International

A deadly band of thunderstorms that sent tornadoes plowing through the Plains pushed eastward Saturday, spawning a deadly twister in Tennessee and dumping heavy rain on much of the eastern half of the country.

A man and his 2-month-old son were killed early Saturday by a tornado that swooped down on the trailer home near Gainesboro, Tenn., destroyed it, then disappeared before other area residents even knew it existed.

Police said the twister probably touched down shortly after midnight but they were not alerted until late morning when a man who lives two miles from the site called authorities and said, "there's a piece of trailer in my yard."

Jim Meck, his wife, Karen, and their son were found 100 yards from the flattened trailer near Gainsboro. Officials said they were "probably caught up in the tornado." Mrs. Meck survived and was hospitalized in stable condition.

National Weather Service spokesman Chuck Carter said the tornado was part of the same storm system that devastated two Iowa communities Thursday night, killing five people and injuring 50 others.

A small tornado touched down Saturday in the tiny, Mississippi River community of Deer Park, flipping over several boats in Old River and damaging a number of camps. No injuries were reported.

Fought Fire In Container

A fire occurring Saturday within a large trash container truck took local firemen about one hour to extinquish, according to Chief Jenness Allen of the Greenville Fire Department.

The vehicle, owned by Buck Hill, P.O. Box 1524, was parked at 407 West Roundtree Drive when the fire occurred. Reported at 3:20 p.m., the fire was extinquished around 4:20 p.m. after burning trash in the container was dumped in a trash area behind Greenwood Cemetery.

However, no damage to the vehicle or injuries were reported. Allen said most of the paint was scorched from the outside of the trash container.

According to the fire chief, the fire may have been caused by burnt mattress that had been dumped within the container.

Hunt Sends Guardsmen Home

CAUGHT LIKE MOBY DICK — A great white shark, thirteen and a half feet long, is loaded onto a flatbed truck Friday evening at Island Sports Marina in Center Moriches, N.Y., to be taken to be weighed. The shark was harpooned about 15 miles off the coast and took 15 hours to be controlled and towed into Center Moriches. (AP Laserphoto)

By United Press International

National Guard troops called out by North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. to keep striking independent truckers from blockading regional gasoline terminals at Greensboro and Charlotte have been told to go home, a Hunt aide said.

Deputy Press Secretary Stephanie Bass estimated the 400 troops at each site Saturday would leave the terminals by the end of Saturday.

The driver of one of the trucks, 24-year-old Donnie Bryant of Dahlonega, Ga., was wounded Saturday by a bullet from a high-powered rifle. Authorities say the shot probably was fired by a sniper.

A few hours earlier and a few miles away from the other site, another truck driver was shot at when he passed. The State Highway Patrol said a bullet hit the truck driver's door but caused no injury.

In other developments, about 650 drivers met Friday to form the Carolina Independent Truckers Association. A leader in the state's strike movement said the group would continue to picket the Greensboro and Charlotte terminals "until President Carter gives us some relief."

The drivers basically are protesting diesel fuel prices and inconsistent state regulations.

It was because of those pickets that Hunt ordered out the guard earlier last week. He said the truckers were blockading the terminals and making it impossible for gasoline trucks to fill up and supply service stations.

In eastern North Carolina, officials at the produce market in Faison said brokers had a much easier time Saturday getting trucks to ship out the produce they buy from farmers.

"Last week was the most severe for us and it's definitely improved now," said Raymond Martin, a U.S. Agriculture Department fruit and vegetable market reporter.

Rebuffs U.S. Proposal

By MARTIN HOUSEMAN

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The provisional Sandinista government Saturday rebuffed a U.S. proposal to end the bloody civil war and said any future American role must begin by recognizing its right to rule Nicaragua.

Somoza tried to round up a quorum of Nicaragua's congressmen for a Saturday session in the Intercontinental Hotel — the only building in Managua considered safe from guerrilla attack — but opposition legislators balked at attending.

New fighting broke out east of the rebel-held city of Masaya, 16 miles southeast of Managua, in a guerrilla attempt to outflank the guard's main battle line south of the strategically-important city of Rivas.

A communique read on rebel radio from the "Junta of National Reconstruction," the provisional government backed by the Sandinistas, demanded the U.S. break relations with Somoza's regime and recognize the guerrilla's government.

The communique was a strong rebuff to negotiations conducted by new U.S. Ambassador Lawrence A. Pezzullo aimed at "gaining Somoza's resignation and creating a broadly-based interim government to lead a transition to democratic self-determination."

A CUDDLY PET — Prissy, a six-weeks old playful female skunk, loves cuddling up to her owner, Miss Rita Davis of Goldsboro, a student in the Special Education Dept. at ECU. Miss Davis said she had to wait three months to get Prissy from a breeding firm in Minnesota, due to demand for pet skunks and the fact that the animals only breed twice yearly. She feeds Prissy dog food and a special canned milk for animals. An inquisitive, active pet, Prissy likes music and enjoys going to night clubs. When it's sleep time, Prissy wants her pet toy, a small stuffed animal, and likes to sleep burrowed in a shoe box turned upside down. For the curious — yes, Prissy has been demusked. Remains Uncharged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The space agency said Saturday its estimated date for the fall of Skylab remains unchanged, with Friday July 13th still the most likely day.

"We still think it will reenter sometime between July 10 and 16 with the probable date being Friday the 13th," said Bill Pomeroy, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The prediction has remained unchanged since Thursday.

Calls For Gas Review

By HENRY DAVID ROSSO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Conference of Mayors, saying major gasoline problems are being felt in almost every community in the nation, called Saturday for a major review of the gasoline allocation system.

The mayors also asked for the creation of special set-asides of gasoline for individual cities "that could be distributed under the authority of the mayor in times of crisis or emergency."

The conference released a report based on a survey of 100 cities which it said "shows that the gasoline shortage is being felt in some form or another in almost every community."

The report said "all cities have had to contend with sharp and rapid increases for gasoline and diesel fuel" with Lincoln, Neb., reporting a fuel price increase of 140 percent and Albany, Ga., estimating an increase of 125 percent.

"The steep price increases are bound to have an impact on delivery of municipal services," the report said, adding that Portland, Ore., was forced to cut back on filling potholes because of a 100 percent increase in the price of asphalt — a petroleum product.

"Almost every city surveyed was operating with an allocation factor of less than 100 percent. Only five cities reported receiving 100 percent of their use needs," the report said.

The report indicated that an increasing number of Americans are avoiding gas lines and high prices and turning to public transportation.

"Public transportation ridership was up in 77 percent of the cities surveyed," the report said.

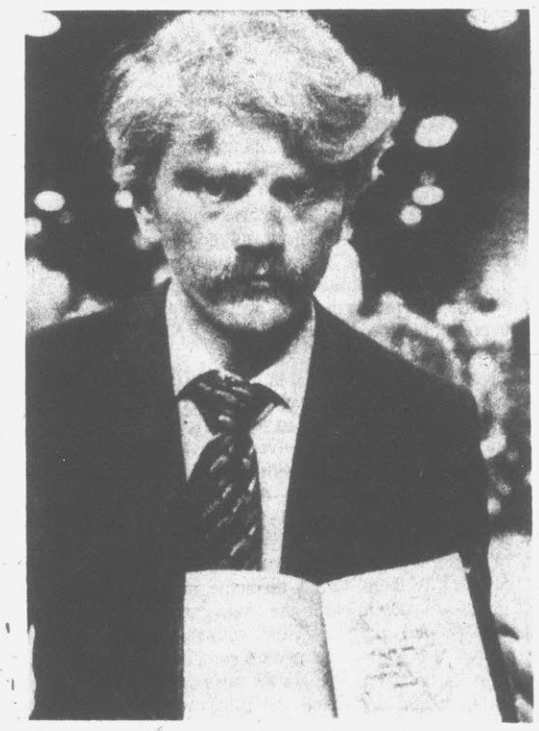

Condition Satisfactory

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — The husband of Commerce Secretary Juanita S. Kreps, Dr. Clifton H. Kreps Jr., was in satisfactory condition Saturday after undergoing overnight surgery for an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head.

A Duke University Medical Center spokesman quoted Dr. Jerry Oakes, the surgeon who performed the three-hour operation Friday night and early Saturday, as saying Kreps was "a very lucky man."

"He said it was unlikely that Dr. Kreps would suffer any impairment of movement or intellectual function," said Bob Wilson, the spokesman.

Wilson said Mrs. Kreps, 58, arrived in Durham from Washington late Friday night and "was as you can imagine very distraught."

Talks With Ayatollah

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan, remaining in office only because it is his "religious duty," arrived in Qom Saturday for crucial talks with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his inner circle of advisers.

A newspaper said Bazargan had threatened to resign if his authority was undercut by Khomeini's armed religious revolutionaries.

The Tehran public prosecutor Saturday ordered the Justice Ministry to halt all arrests until the huge Qasr prison is vacated by religious revolutionaries.

Bazargan, accompanied by several senior ministers, scheduled talks with the 79-year-old revolutionary leader and members of the secret council, which has held decisive executive powers since the February revolution.

DC-10 Probe Half Finished

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Admnistration, under pressure to return America's DC-10 fleet to service, has finished only half of its two-part safety probe and still needs to determine whether dangerous flaws were designed into the plane.

Federal safety investigators say they do not yet know exactly why the American Airlines DC-10 lost its left engine on takeoff from Chicago May 25, let alone whether that catastrophe signaled a fatal weakness inherent in all DC10s.

Until they do, grounding will probably continue with economic ripple effects that extend from the airlines to the U.S. balance of payments situation.

Ready To Push Gas Rationing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic congressional leaders, taking note of public distress over lengthening gasoline lines, are ready to push for quick approval of a standby gasoline rationing plan.

A House energy and power subcommittee will begin work on a rationing proposal July 11, two days after Congress returns from a 10-day Independence Day recess, said congressional sources who asked not to be named.

With gasoline supplies expected to be in extremely tight supply over the holiday, House leaders are indicating they expect the political climate to be right for enactment of what has been a difficult piece of legislation.

Protests Nuclear Plant

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (UPI) — An estimated 20,000 anti-nuclear activists, including California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and a number of musicians, gathered Saturday to protest the nearly completed $1.4 billion Diablo Canyon nuclear plant.

The California Highway Patrol estimated that 20,000 people gathered at Camp San Luis and said traffic on the road leading to the rally ground was backed up for 10 miles.

At Avila Beach, 10 miles from the rally, Pacific Gas & Electric Co., which has been trying to build and operate the plant for more than 13 years, held a barbecue and picnic for nuclear supportors.

Brown, who arrived with singer Linda Ronstadt, his frequent companion, met for an hour with protest leaders before they allowed him to give a one minute speech.

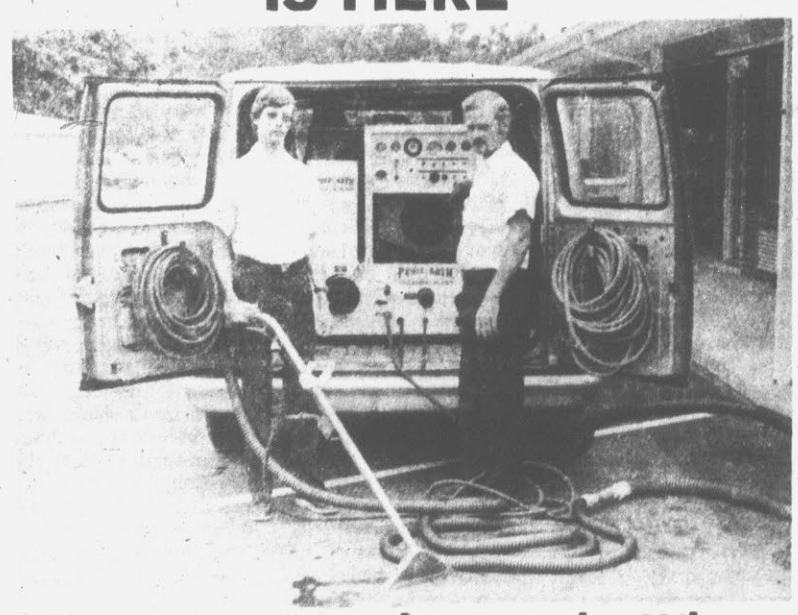

$2.37 Million to NCSU

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina State University officials said Saturday that 13 foundations had allocated $2.37 million to the school for the coming academic year.

The money will be used for teaching, research and public service programs, Chancellor Joab L. Thomas and Vice Chancellor Rudolph Pate said.

No End To OPEC Increases

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has come up with a formula for crude oil prices.

Representatives of OPEC agreed on a price of $18 to $23 per barrel for oil effective July 1. This represents an increase from the present base price of $14.55.

If the price increase seems steep, the experts say it could have been worse and it was held down thanks to the stance of Saudi Arabia and a few other moderates.

The price increase means one thing for all the world — soaring prices consumers pay for gasoline and virtually all other products. Nor is there any reason to believe that the OPEC nations have arrived at a price which will hold firm. New price increases could be mandated in only a few months.

The experts see the price rise adding around 4 cents per gallon in the United States. There is, however, also the matter of price deregulation of domestic oil facing us in this country which could drive the petroleum fuels even higher.

OPEC will never reach a truly satisfactory price level for its nations' oil. The price will go up as long as supply exceeds demand. Only when other fuels supplant the use of oil products will there be any downward pressure on oil prices.

Look Carefully At That Gas Meter

They will see gas priced at half the going rate.

Don't believe that the oil interests have suddenly become benevolent. N. C. Agricultureal Commissioner Jim Graham said last week that under emergency regulations half pricing of gas would be allowed because most pumps are not designed to go over a dollar per gallon.

So, when you gas up you'll have to double the figure to determine what you owe. For the consumer the price will only briefly look a little better.

Crackdown Pays Off

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — A state program of comparing computerized records of welfare recipients with employment records is paying off.

In less than six months, 44 county social services departments have found 510 cases of fraud amounting to $379,785.

Robert H. Ward, director of the Social Services operation at the state's Department of Human Resources says less than one percent of some $135 million being paid to almost 70,000 welfare cases involves deliberate fraud.

Trouble Ahead

More than a third of North Carolina's nearly 16,000 bridges are in need of repair or replacement, according to statistics at the state's Department of Transportation.

The average life of a bridge is about 40 years, say the engineers. Yet some North Carolina bridges built before the turn of the century remain in service, and some Tar Heel drivers are crossing bridges between 75 and 100 years old.

Up, Up, and Up

North Carolina's employment picture continues to improve, with total jobs up by 31,800 since April, 1978.

But the taxpayers are underwriting much of that healthy expansion — government jobs represent a third of the increase.

Federal employment, according to Employment Security Commission figures, remains almost without charge over a long period.

State and local governments are more than making up for the slack, however, adding 10,500 new jobs in a year. That is by far the biggest expansion in any single category. Tobacco, for example, added 2,100 jobs; construction 5,300; and machinery 5,600.

Education leads the way as classroom aides are added and class sizes trimmed — and this despite declining public school enrollment. State school jobs have increased six percent, from 66,200 to 70,200 in a year. Local school jobs, likewise, lead the way, showing a 3.6 percent gain; up from 129,00 to 133,700.

BILL NOBLITT

Incentive

A rewrite of North Carolina's wage and hour law has a unique feature to encourage jobs for the handicapped, for seasonal workers, for students, and for the people who have a hard time finding a job.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks calls it a "limited subminimum wage rate," and what it comes down to is a plan to "encourage employment opportunities for the economically disadvantaged...a national precedent."

The state law applies to all those places of employment not covered by federal minimum wage laws. The state minimum will be $2.75 per hour effective July, and $2.90 per hour next July.

A special wage rate of 85 percent of the minimum can be paid parttime help such as students and at seasonal recreational and amusement facilities and restaurants.

Also, the same lower wage can be paid on entry-level jobs for untrained and poor people — but for no longer than one year.

Sunday Morning Notes

Joey Jenkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jenkins of Greenville, is, like his father, a good golfer.

Joey also likes caps, such as many people collect.

Recently, while playing golf, he was wearing a cap which was put out by the "89 Lumber Co." . . . and the cap had a big 89 on its front.

Someone asked him about it.

"Oh that was my score on the first round," Joey answered. "I got it down to 69 on the second round...

Calls for a new cap.

A car was parked on a downtown street one day last week.

Apparently the license plate had been lost, so the enterprising car operator replaced it with a piece of card board. On it he had scribbled in pencil the license number, date of the tag and the state.

Eveidently it didn't impress a police officer, however. There was a red ticket on the windshield.

Still it wasn't a bad idea. It could really cut down on the cost of manufacturing license plates.

And over in Beaufort County recently a 102 year old lady died.

She was Miss Bessie Harding, who had been a resident of the Beaufort County Nursing Home.

Miss Harding was born April 25, 1877, taught in the schools and at Louisburg College. She was the oldest living member of First United Methodist Church in Washington and the oldest living graduate of UNC-Greensboro.

Miss Harding played a role in the beginnings of what has become East Carolina University. She was secretary to Dr. Robert L. Wright, first president of the institution

As most people around here know, Washington, N.C. is the original Washington superseding even the nation's capital.

Still there is often confusion as to whether the Washington referred to is our neighboring city or in the District of Columbia.

To make things even more confusing it is interesting to note that the Washington (N.C.) Housing Authority is located on Pennsylvania Avenue.

Unwed Couples Rising

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of unmarried couples living together has more than doubled in less than a decade, accounting for about 1.1 million U.S. households, the Census Bureau says.

Meanwhile, more than 20 percent of all households have only a single member as increasing numbers of young career-oriented Americans postpone marriage, according to a new bureau report.

The report on "Marital Status and Living Arrangements" was issued Tuesday.

Doctors Progress

(Asheville Citizen)

Because there are so many deplorable social conditions in North Carolina, it is encouraging to learn that the state is overcoming a shortage of physicians in rural areas.

Now before our joy is dampened by disbelieving readers, we hasten to add that some counties in the state's western and far notheastern regions still face problems. But even in those regions, progress is being made.

Much of the credit for this success belongs to the Area Health Education Center program, one branch of which operates in Asheville. The state's medical schools have recruited North Carolinians and persuaded them to enter the family practice program. This success has received little public credit, but medical schools deserve North Carolinians' gratitude.

Doctors who have remained in the state after training also merit commemdation. We like to think that the pioneering spirit of service, which for so long was a tradition of the medical profession, is being revived. When the public begins to see that, the profession will benefit, too.

Only a few years ago, the medical profession enjoyed perhaps the highest popularity rating of all professional groups. That rating was largely the result of work by "old school" general practitioners, whose breed seemed to vanish by the 1960's To them, family medicine, or general practice, was the most crucial field in the healing arts. Their younger counterparts did not share that enthusiasm and pursued specialities near huge urban medical complexes.

In the early 1970's the state's medical profession and legislators sought to reverse the trend away from general practice. The practice program was the result.

By 1976, North Carolina had matched the national average of one physician for every 1,650 persons in rural areas. And as Dr. J. Benjamin Ruffin, president of the N.C. Medical Society, said recently, "We have far outdistanced the rest of the country in improving the supply of physicians. It's going to get better the next year."

Lesson? When intelligent North Carolinians see a problem and unite behind a well-conceived solution, they usually succeed.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Anti-Business Crusade

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

The Anti-Business Crusader

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — In a California supposedly lunging rightward on an anti-government orgy, radical Tom Hayden has become a major political force by harnessing public hostility against big business.

Hayden's Campaign for Economic Democracy (CED) is only an infant but even now commands bigger precinct-level forces than dilapidated state Democratic and Republican organizations. It is intervening in dozens of local elections for both candidates and causes, with increasing success. Financed both by $15 dues payers and by angels (such as his actress wife, Jane Fonda), CED has spawned 30 chapters and field offices throughout the state.

Following his astonishing 41 percent in the 1976 Democratic Senate primary, Hayden himself clearly has his eye on that U.S. Senate seat up again in 1982. Whether he is still remembered by too many voters as a founder of the radical Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) and defendant in the Chicago Seven trial to be elected remains to be seen. But more interesting than his personal future is his formula for bucking the conservative tide.

The answer by Hayden and his CED: avoid unpopular liberal nostrums. In an interview at his 118-acre Laurel Springs ranch in the Santa Ynex mountains north of here, Hayden made clear to us he will not incur popular wrath by defending public service employment (while insisting, "My heart throbs" for the liberal humanitarian programs).

Similarly, he calls California's famous Proposition 13 slashing property taxes "half-good," objecting only to "giving away the candy store to the big real estate operators." He is sympathetic toward a federal balanced budget and flatly oppose racial busing on grounds it does not work.

Having thus avoided traps that snare liberls, Hayden gets down to what he really cares about: "An alternate structure" replacing American capitalism. He told us he would "charter" corporations requiring public members on boards of directors and eventually atial public ownership; nationalize oil companies; treat other energy companies as public utilities.

Such a package tastes too much like socialism for public consumption, and Hayden is not offering it as such. Instead, he operates on the indisputable theory that Joe Sixpack is as fed up with big usiness as he is with big-government. Thus, the various threads of Hayden's campaign share a common theme: the sins of American capitalism.

CED's most recent emphasis has been on rent control in the wake of Proposition 13, winning public votes in Santa Monica and Berkeley and city council votes in Los Angeles and San Francisco. Hayden is pressing hard against corporate culpability for industrial illnesses, particularly cancer. Fred Branfman, a notorious pro-Viet Cong activist, is working with Hayden again and last week publicly blamed the oil companies for the gasoline shortage.

Energy is the hub of Hayden's campaign, rejecting nuclear and exulting solar. But there is a suspicion — denied by Hayden — that stirring public fears about nuclear danger is only the means to the end of fanning public hostility toward corporate business.

That is the the underlying theme of "The China Syndrome," the anti-nuclear movie thriller starring Miss Fonda, a political activist herself who is her husband's partner in CED. The movie's real villain is the fictitious "California Gas and Electric Co.," a brutalizing pillar of the police-corporate state.

"The China Syndrome" and CED are inseparable. Bruce Gilbert, the movie's producer, contemplates future films about multinational oil companies and environmental causes of cancer — both priority Hayden items. "Organizations like CED shape public attitudes toward the issues," Gilbert has said. In fact, Gilbert's movies prepare the public for CED's organizers.

THE GROWTH OF GRACE

A very perceptive woman once said, "The grace of God is like pansies."

We have all heard divine grace likened to many things, but this is certainly an unusual and apparently unlikely comparison. But the relevance became clear as the woman went on to explain that if one wants to keep a flower garden in full bloom, it is necessary to pick the flowers frequently. And this is particularly true in the case of pansies. The oftener they are picked, the more prolifically they bloom

So here is the connection with God's grace. The more we avail ourselves of it, the more does God sent it to us in abundance. If we make no use of God's gifts, if we pass them by day, they disappear at last or are taken from us. Divine gifts retain their freshness and grow in profusion when we use them and take joy in them. And we can always be sure that God is eager to give His gifts.

IRS Package Could Hurt Many

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The combined effect of the dreaded I-R-S package, that is, inflationrecession-shortage, is likely to force Americans to cut back. But does a cutback mean a lowering of living standards?

No question: The I-R-S combine can do enormous damage to the economy, which is built on the assumption of plentiful supplies, an inspired consumer to want them, and a supply of money with which to buy them.

But what happens to the economy, assuming it occurs on a limited time scale, is not the very same question as what happens to the consumer.

The elderly, the infirm, the poor — some living at the limits of their finances and requiring special transportation, foods and medicines — could very well suffer if special measures aren't taken.

So could the unskilled, the poorly skilled and those whose skills are temporarily not in demand. So could the indebted household, and there are millions of them, whose loan repayments are beyond them.

But for millions of Americans the answer is not clearcut; it isn't at all certain that for them a cutback means regressing to an earlier, less advanced standard. Inconvenience might be confused with suffering.

So far, however, the answer — even by some government officials — has been yes, individuals must lower their standards. But only a little reflection suggests that for many the demotion may be in mind only.

The explanation lies in attitudes, habits, excesses. In rich food, needless travel, wasted energy. In calorie-larded diets, over-powered cars, overheated homes. In short, it lies in the family garbage heap.

Waste is an almost natural consequence of the super-consumer society, one in which acquisition doesn't stop when the need is met but continues in search of needs that might not have been discovered yet.

Statistically, a preponderance of evidence indicates that Americans can indeed cut back without materially lowering their living standards. And that in so doing, they might improve the quality of their lives.

Don't confuse today's longevity with soft living, the medical people say. They maintain it's a consequence of better medicine. They even insist that the modern consumer society is medicine's enemy.

The issue then is whether cutbacks lower living standards, or raise them instead. Even before I-R-S, the debate was on, with people wondering if somehow the quality of life was deteriorating.

Studies now show wealthy societies are demanding more fish, chicken, vegetables and grains, including pasta, foods long associated with less advanced societies. The trend is changing; people are reverting.

Musing about life as the industrial revolution was gathering steam, William Wordsworth observed: "The world is too much with us; late and soon, getting and spending, we lay waste our powers."

It's conceivable that some Americans, given time to reflect, might come to the same verdict a century-and-a-half later.

Biggest Threat

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — More Americans today name "big government" as a greater threat to the nation than cite either "big labor" or "big business."

Four in 10 (43 percent) single out big government, while 28 percent name big business and 17 percent big labor.

The proportion who think big business is the chief threat has more than doubled over the last decade, perhaps reflecting, in part, mounting criticism of the nation's oil companies. A recent Gallup Poll showed that only 14 percent of the American public believes that a gasoline shortage actually exists, while nearly six times that many (77 percent) are convinced that the shortage has been deliberately caused by the oil companies.

This question was asked:

"In your opinion, which of the following will be the biggest threat to the country in the future — big business, big labor or big government?"

Twenty years ago, when this measurement was started, big labor was thought to be the top threat, by 41 percent, while far fewer named big business (15 percent) or big government (14 percent).

Greatest Threat To Nation

	Big Government	Big Labor	Big Business	No Opinion
LATEST	43%	17%	28%	12%
Jan. 1977	39	26	23	12
Aug. 1968	46	26	12	16
Jan. 1967	49	21	14	16
Oct. 1959	14	41	15	30

Republicans lean heavily to the view that big government is the chief threat, while Democrats name big business about as often as big government.

Here are the latest results by party affiliation:

Democrats	36%	17%	34%	13%
Republicans	50	24	19	7
Independents	48	14	27	11

Views Of Labor Union Households

About equal proportions of persons in labor union families and non-union people name big government. However, among labor union groups, big business is named about three times as often as big labor.

Here are the results by union and non-union households:

	Big Government	Big Labor	Big Business	No Opinion
Labor union households	45%	11%	36%	8%
Non-union households	43	19	25	13

The results reported today are based on in-person, inhome interviews with 1,511 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period May 4-7.

North Carolina's Sales Tax: How It Came To Be

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancy retired last year after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column, he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

When I began covering state government news back in 1935, reporters were still talking about the debates in the General Assembly that had preceded passage of the sales tax in 1933.

The tax became the main issue in the campaign for governor in 1936, and to a greater or lesser extent it has been an issue ever since.

The sales tax was debated during the 1931 General Assembly, and was defeated after the lawmakers held their longest session on record up to that time. When he ran successfully for governor in 1932, J.C.B. Ehringhaus campaigned as an opponent of the sales tax.

However, the financial crunch resulting from the Great Depression prompted Ehringhaus to change his mind. As the depression deepened, revenue sources, particularly the property tax, dried up. The state and its local units were on the verge of bankruptcy.

In this atmosphere, Ehringhaus went before a joint legislative session on March 13, 1933 with a special budget message.

The governor recalled that he had opposed the sales tax and had said it would be justified only as a temporary emergency measure "to save the credit of the state and keep going its essential activities." That time, he said, had arrived.

"We are simply facing a terrific emergency, and the manifest necessity for the levy of some new taxes is apparent if the schools and the state's credit are to be saved from utter wreckage," Ehringhaus told the legislators.

He said if the sales tax were passed, it should be "with the distinct understanding that it is an emergency measure, adopted for the period of the emergency to save the state's credit and keep going it essential activities."

A few weeks later, the state Senate voted 24-23 to pass a 3 percent sales tax. Earlier, the House had approved a 2 percent levy. The votes came after lengthy and spirited debates.

Sen. W.K. Boggan of Anson called the sales tax "the meanest sort of tax that can be levied" and asserted that for the people its passage would be "the greatest betrayal since the days of Benedict Arnold."

But Sen. Augus D. MacLean of Beaufort contended the sales tax was equitable and justified becuase it would relieve property taxpayers and benefit the schools.

During its deliberations, the Senate defeated a proposal to levy a tax only on a limited list of commodities, including tobacco.

This proposal was opposed by Sen. Robert M. Hanes of Forsyth. Haynes said such a tax would reduce tobacco consumption and result in a reduction

NICE, BUT WE'D JUST LIKE TO KNOW WHEN!

Facing South

Joe Ingle Takes His Preaching To Jail

By GAIL MICHAELS

NASHVILLE, Tn. — Joe Ingle takes his preaching seriously. But instead of climbing into an ornate pulpit on Sunday, the 32-year old North Carolina native carries his gospel behind prison walls, into correction department board rooms, and into the hearts of thsoe who "want to do something."

In divinity school, "I was rethinking the gospel," Ingel recalls, "like e passage of Luke 4:18 where Jesus talks about freeing the captives. The more I read, the more it seemed that a mandate on prisons was clear." After seminary field work in New Your's Bronx House of Detention, Ingle returned South — to the nation's higest per capita prison population.

Today, Ingle directs the Southern Coalition on Jails and Prisons, a federation of prison reform organizations in 11 southern states. "We work with anyone who shares these concerns. The Coalition is a secular organization. It just happens to have a director who's a Christian."

Based in Nashville, Tennessee, Ingle travels the South visiting inmates on death row, speaking to a church conference, negotiating with state officials, meeting with a local prisoners' support group, consulting with field staff.

"Prison reform movements have to be rooted in what Prisoners want done," Ingle explanins in his molasses drawl. "We always try to build that presupposition into our work."

In Tennessee, for example, the prisoners wanted a forum set up just for people who were in for a long time. A group of ministers and businessmen got the Corrections Department to approve a prisoner organization. "The Lifers Club started out with weekly meetings. Our outside support group would come inside,'" Ingle remembers. "You had to have a 20-year sentence to belong." About one third of the statewide system were lifers, 500 at the Tennessee State Prison for Men, where the group began.

"We went out of our way to involve hard core convicts because the organization had to have the respect of the other prisoners. About 60 lifers came to the first meeting in June, 1975. And we got organized just in time."

In September, after a long hot summer, tensions erupted in the Tennessee prison. During a cafeteria dispute, guards fired into the air, setting off an already volatile situation, and the prisoners took over the unit. The associate warden called on Joe Ingle to help. "Here were my friends, men I knew through the Lifers Club, asking me to go into the yard. What was I going to say?" Ingle went in. He and the club leaders restored order during the night. "We were up 'til about 5:30 a.m. in negotiations, very tense, but we finally agreed on everything. I found out later that while this was going on, Nashville's metropolice came in and just started beating the hell out of prisoners."

The Lifers Club proved itself, quite literally, under fire. The organization has spread to the Tennessee Women's Prison and Fort Pillow prison in Memphis. The women's Lifers Club has sponsored several conferences inside the prison for church leaders, legislators, civic leaders and others.

Walking behind the walls is crucial, Ingle feels, for "breaking down the isolation between the prisoner and the rest of the community. After seeing what someone has to put up with inside, chances are you'll be angry and want to do something more."

People can do a lot. "A group of women with husbands in prison came to us and wanted to start a Prison Widows Project," Ingles remembers. "We helped them get it off the ground with a local church near the prison. The church became very active, giving the Prison Widows a place to operate from.

"We've got to keep saying over and over again that there are alternatives to prison," assets Ingle. "Most prisoners — 80% in Tennessee — are what we call property crime prisoners. They've stolen property. If someone steals your stereo, you want your stereo back. You want restitution, not revenge."

Ingle says that the whole criminal justice system can often be avoided. "Involve people in the community in the process of dealing with people who offend them," Ingle insists. "A local church group or League of Women's Voters could try initiating monthly hearings in a model neighborhood to show the police and the legislature it works."

Like many a good country preacher, Ingle believes that the old Christian values of the rural South can still work: "Jesus said 'love thy neighbor as thyself.' If we can incorporate this on a community level and translate it through the democratic process, rather than isolating people behind bars, then we're going to have a more effective and helpful system for surviving together in this country."

Absent-Mindedness Can Be Scary Feeling

By GAIL MICHAELS

In the third voyage of "Gulliver's Travels," Jonathan Swift writes of a race of people caught up in their thoughts that they were accompanied at all times by servants who flapped their mouths and ears gently with a bladder on a stick to get their attention.

I think that this is an excellent idea. There must be millions of us who suffer from the debilitating effects of absent-mindedness.

And the effects are definitely debilitating. We lose friends because we stare right through them when we meet them on the street. They think we're being snobbish. We're not. We just don't see them.

My father-in-law once followed me all around Farmville honking and waving. Inever noticed him. To this day he tosses me about the way I put my mind on automatic pilot.

But it's a scary feeling, especially in a car. I can sink into thought and emerge 15 minutes later, halfway across town, without remembering how I got there.

And I can't count the number of times I have followed a familiar route by rote memory only to remember when I got to my usual destination that I was not heading there this time and that I should have turned left three blocks back.

I have tried to change, but absent-mindedness is not easy to overcome. No one has read more articles on the art of being organized than I. And they all say the same thing: make lists, write memorandums, and so on.

But for the inveterate forgetter, this just does not work. I have made more lists than there are reruns of "Gilligan's Island."

I must be one of the few people in the world who can have a grocery list right in front of her and walk out of the store without two or three crucial items.

More frequently, though, I just forget to take the list.

As for the notes to myself, for two months I've been trying to remember to call the Consumer Product Safety Commission to find out if my hair dryer is turning my lungs into hot pads. Every night I leave a note by the phone. Every evening at 6 p.m. I find it.

Perhaps the biggest problem associated with absent-mindedness is the uncanny ability to tune people out. If my mind is on anything else, no matter how trivial, I don't even hear Meg and Phillip. This frustrates them both to the point of temper tantrums.

The other night, for instance, Phillip talked to me for five minutes, and I never hear a word. At least, that's what I'm told.

"Gail," he supposedly said. "What do you think about SALT II?"

"Umm," I said.

"Yeah, that's the way I feel, too. I just can't decide whether I'm for it or against it. What bothers me most is verification."

"Umm."

"Well, if that's not what brothers you, what does?"

"Umm."

He looked at me sharply, then got up and whacked me over the head with a newspaper. "I should be talking to the lampshade," he said.

His method is not as elegant as Swift's, but I guess it does the job.

As of March 1978, more than one American household in five consisted of someone living alone, the study said.

Most of the growth in singleperson households involved people under age 35, the report said, adding this "may reflect an increasing desire among young adults to seek advanced education and careers before marriage."

In 1970, the report said, 17 percent of the nation's households consisted of a single individual. By 1978 that had grown to 22 percent.

The bureau defines a household as a person or group of people living together in a house, apartment or other housing unit.

Sixty-two percent of these single-person households were maintained by women, although since 1970 the proportion of men living alone has grown more rapidly than that for women, the Census Bureau said.

The increase in unmarried couples living together has been even more impressive, up 117 percent.

In 1970, the bureau said, there were 523,000 such households. The number grew to 1.1 million last year.

Three-fourths of these households consisted solely of two partners, while the remainder had one or more children living with them. Among unmarried couples, the report said, seven out of 10 were under age 45.

Noting that young people are continuing to postpone marriage, the report said that as of 1978 nearly half of the women aged 20 to 24 had never married. This is an increase of more than two-thirds since 1960. Delay of first marriage was also indicated among women aged 25 to 29.

The bureau said that since 1970 the median age of Americans at their first marriage has increased by one year, to 24.2 years for men and 21.8 for women.

The report also noted that in 1978 there were 8 million families maintained by a woman not living with a husband, a 44 percent gain since 1970. There were 1.6 million families maintained by a man not living with a wife in 1978, bureau officials said.

Black families maintained by a woman increased 65 percent during the eight-year period, the report states, while among whites the growth was 36 percent.

Because of this growth in one-parent families, the bureau estimated that nearly half of all children being born today will spend a large portion of their lives before age 18 in singleparent families.

In 1978 there were 11 million children living with their mothers only, and 1 million with their fathers, the bureau said.

The study also noted increases in divorce for both blacks and whites and all age groups.

In 1970, the bureau said, there were 47 divorced persons for every 1,000 married in the United States. By 1978 this number had grown 91 percent to 90 divorced persons for every 1,000 in working marriages.

demonstarte against nuclear power on weekends, but I'm not one of them," Hayden told us. Although he looks like the old SDS activist on his ranch, dressed in blue jeans and sweatshirt, he now wears suit and tie in public, taking care not to alarm voters either by rhetoric or appearance.

Hayden certainly wore conservative business dress last week at Brownsville, Texas, while sitting in for Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. on the Southwest Border Commission. Hayden, the scourge of big oil, was seated next to conservative Republican Gov. William Clements, an oil millionaire.

The Hayden-Brown connection is tightening. While compalining that the governor is susceptible to "pressure from big business," Hayden supports him for president. CED is Brown's re-entry on the left. But if Brown is using Hayden, the reverse is equally true. Transcending Brown's political ambitions is Hayden's dream of a semi-socialized America. What makes it more than a dream is his pursuit of it not with demonstrations and rhetoric but with organizational elbow grease and shrewd tactics.

Cruel Kindness Comes From Supreme Court

By JAMES J. KIKPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Considered in a vacuum which is where the Supreme Court often seems to operate, the Court's recent opinion in the Laetrile case is sound, temperate and unexceptional. Considered by the bedside of a cancer patient, the opinion is something else entirely.

On the surface, the case involved little more than a routine matter of statutory construction. Under the Food and Drug Act, the government had banned the use of a drug product known as Laetrile. Did the government have the power to issue this order? A district court in Oklahoma City had said no. The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had agreed.

The lower courts turned a tolerant eye on Laetrile. The drug is derived from amygdalin, a substance that occurs widely in nature. Taken properly, it is no more toxic than aspirin. Though there is no scientifically acceptable proof that the drug is effective against cancer, thousands of persons have managed to give it a try. The testimonial evidence is impressive. The lower courts found that for terminally ill patients, it makes no sense to insist that drugs be "safe" and "effective." Let them have Laetrile if they want it.

The Supreme Court reversed. In a unanimous opinion by Justice Marshall, the Court held that the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration had not abused his authority. The statute is clear and unambiguous. The law contains no exception for terminally ill patients; the legislative history demonstrates that Congress intended no such exception. Laetrile cannot qualify for special treatment under the law's grandfather clauses.

"Under our constitutional framework," said Marshall, "federal courts do not sit as councils of revision, empowered to rewrite legislation in accord with their own conceptions of prudent public policy." No one can quarrel with that pious assertion.

Marshall went on to emphasize that the Court intended its decision to apply not only to Laetrile but also to every other drug that fails to satisfy the act's requirements.

"To accept the proposition that the safety and efficacy standards of the act have no relevance for terminal patients is to deny the commissioner's authority over all drugs, however toxic or ineffectual, for such individuals. If history is any guide, this new market would not be long overlooked. Since the turn of the century resourceful entrepreneurs have advertised a wide variety of purportedly simple and painless cures for cancer, including liniments of turpentine, mustard, oil, eggs and ammonia; peat moss; arrangements of colored floodlamps; pastes made from glycerin and Limburger cheese; mineral tablets; and 'Fountain of Youth' mixtures of spices, oil and suet."

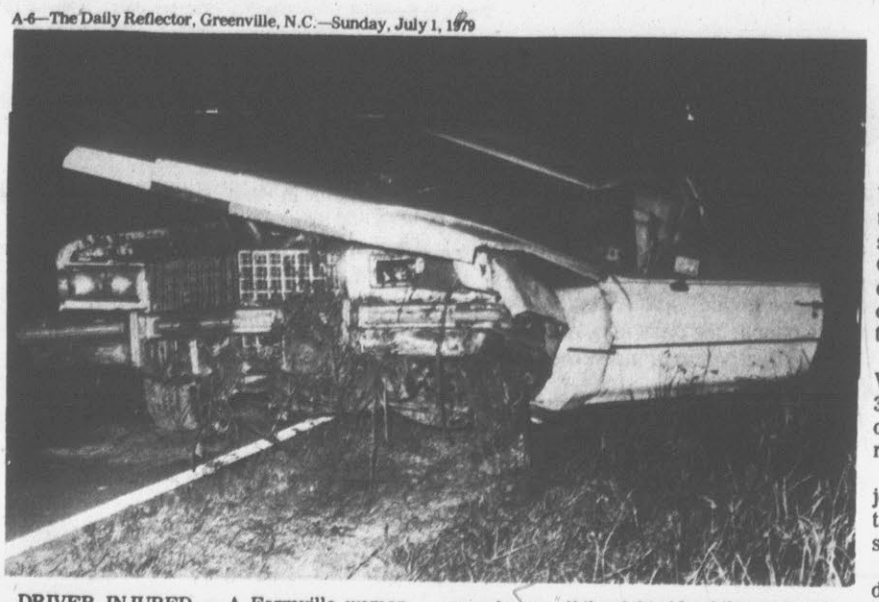

Very well. Under old principles of law, the Court was doubtless right. Under old principles of a free society, the Court was absolutely wrong.

At some point, a line must be drawn against the overweening solicitude of the government. At some point, the principle must be upheld that free people have a right to be wrong.

In its opinion the Court spoke repeatedly and approvingly of "legitimate therapy" and "conventional treatment" and the "general recognition of experts." But it has been but a tick of the clock since medical experts regarded leeches as the legitimate and conventional therapy for high blood pressure. Only yesterday, as time is measured, the wisest surgeons drilled holes in a lunatic's head to let the demons out. It is a characteristic of the totalitarian state, not the free state, to decree that a particular kind of medical treatment is "approved" and that other kinds are banned under penalty of law.

No one can quarrel with the basic objectives of the Food and Drug Act. Yes, the people should be protected — up to a point — against quackery and fraud. But it is a cruel kindness on the part of government to go beyond that point.

The First and the Ninth Amendments, in my own view, establish the right of a freeborn citizen to make his own personal decisions about his own medical treatment. By conventional standards those decisions may be wrong. But it is far better for the health of a free society to let its people make wrong decisions than to protect them insistently from their own folly.

DRIVER INJURED — A Farmville woman received minor injuries early Saturday morning when the car she was driving ran off the road into a ditch. According to Trooper Walter Featherston, the woman was identified as Audry Fleenor Dupree, of Farmville. Featherston said Ms. Dupree was headed east on rural paved road 1200, Statonsburg Road, when she ran off the right side of the road and lost control her car. Ms. Dupree was trapped in the vehicle for a short time. The car was listed as a total loss. Members of the Farmville Rescue Squad and Bel Arthur fire department responded to the call. Investigation into the accident is continuing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

VN's Fire On Ships Towing Refugees

By ISABELLE COMPARET

BALI, Indonesia (UPI) — Vietnam fired on two ships towing refugee boats from its shores and U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim Saturday called an urgent 60-nation conference to solve the crisis of the Indonesian "boat people."

Thai pirates repeatedly raped Vietnamese women aboard a 30-foot boat that spent 10 days on the South China Sea, the refugees said.

Asian nations meeting in Bali joined unanimously for the first time in demanding Vietnam stop the outflow of its refugees.

Vietnam recently promised to do its best to stop the departure of its citizens to non-Communist nations and observers said the attack by Vietnamese warships Friday appeared an attempt to back this pledge.

A West German Embassy official in Singapore said his government sent two supply ships from Singapore to a West German oil rig off the Vietnamese coast to evacuate 310 Vietnamese for resettlement in Germany.

The official said the ships, the Nordertor and the Alexandertum, were towing away the refugee boats when several Vietnamese warships appeared and started firing at them.

"The ships' captains quickly cut the ropes towing the boats and sped off," he said. But the Vietnamese warships caught up with one of the West German craft and tried to crush it between them.

The refugees were loaded onto the Vietnamese ships which also pulled the crippled German ship to an island about five miles off the Vietnamese coast, the official said. There was no immediate word on their fate.

Vietnamese special envoy Mai Van Bo told Indonesia and Malaysia on a visit recently his government was seeking to stem the illegal departure of refugees and already had reduced the flow by "50 percent."

At a news conference in Geneva, Switzerland, Waldheim said he was inviting foreign ministers of some 60 nations to meet there July 20-21 on the refugee crisis.

"Given the alarming proportions of the crisis in Southeast Asia, I have concluded that this situation requires special and urgent action," he said.

At Kuantan in Malaysia, Lam Ho Hien, a former teacher of French in Saigon, said Thai pirates repeatedly boarded their boat carrying 95 refugees from the Mekong Delta port of Rach Gia and each time raped several of the 21 women aboard, one of them pregnant.

"They took all our gold and money," Lam told UPI correspondent Alan Dawson.

When the refugees first landed, they were towed off again by armed Malaysiaan troops but were finally accepted when they sneaked in under cover of darkness Friday and scuttled their boat.

In Bali, foreign ministers of the five nations forming the Association of South East Asian Nations — Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand — unanimously blamed Vietnam for "the deluge of illegal immigrants from Indochina which has reached crisis proportions."

"The foreign ministers agreed that Vietnam is responsible for the unending exodus... and has a decisive role to play in resolving the problem," their communique said.

N.C. Sales Tax ...

in income taxes paid by manufacturers.

But Sen. Capus Waynick of Guilford disagreed. He said the state ought to derive more revenue from tobacco. He told the Senate the state's tobacco growers had received $48 million for their crop the year before while the big three tobacco manufacturers "had net earnings of twice that amount."

A few days later, the Senate and House resolved their differences and the 3 percent sales tax was enacted.

In accordance with Ehringhaus' request for passage of the sales tax as a temporary measure, the 1933 law described the levy as "additional and extraordinary taxes to meet a supreme emergency in shrinkage of the ordinary revenues of the state."

The 1933 law marked the beginning of debate over sales tax exemptions that continues to this day. The original law exempted nine so-called "primary and essential articles of food" — flour, meal, meat, lard, milk, molasses, salt, sugar and coffee. The legislature in 1935 eliminated these exemptions, but they were restored in 1937 with bread and rolls added to the list. This came after the 1936 governor's race in which Dr. Ralph MacDonald campaigned for repeal of the sales tax. He was narrowly defeated by Clyde R. Hoey who defended the levy as a temporary emergency measure.

The list of exemptions was broadened in 1941 at the urging of Gov. J. Melville Broughton to include all food for human consumption served in the home. These foods remained on the exempt list until 1961 when Gov. Terry Sanford called for additional revenues for the schools. Since then, all proposals to take the tax off food have failed, but they come up every session.

The language which described the sales tax as a temporary emergency measure has long since been deleted from the law.

Confederate Flag

A Confederate bible flag was recently presented to the North Carolina Museum of History Associates for inclusion in the collection of the State History Museum by Representative Marie Watters Colton of Asheville.

Colton said the hand-sewn silk bible flag, which belonged to her great grandmother, is the first flag design used by the Confederacy.

Two Thousand N.C. Tobacco Growers Attended Raleigh Rally

FEDAYEEN RALLY — Members of a crowd estimated at 40,000 persons listen to one of the speakers Friday at a rally of the People's Fedayeen, A Marxist guerrilla organization, at Tehran University. The Fedayeen, who took part in the effort to oust the Shah, are now under attack by Moslem fundamentalists. (AP Laserphoto)

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two thousand tobacco growers gathered in Raleigh Friday night to eat barbecue and rally against critics of the leaf at a "Pride in Tobacco" campaign.

Most of the tobacco boosters' criticism was leveled at Department of Health, Eduction and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.

"The continued success of the tobacco industry depends upon presenting a united front to the Califanos of this world," said Carroll Thompson, executive vice president of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Thompson spoke out against high cigarette taxes and campaigns to restrict public smoking. One of the largest anti-smoking drives ended in defeat last fall in California. Reynolds and other tobacco companies financed the campaign against the referendum.

Gov. Jim Hunt, wearing a white jacket emblazoned with "Pride in Tobacco," cited statistics demonstrating tobacco's economic importance in North Carolina. Tobacco growers in the state are expected to reap a second billion-dollar harvest this year.

"Today, the excellence of North Carolina flue-cured tobacco is recognized around the world," Hunt said. "This excellence is the result of a combination of climate, science and a cultural heritage that passes the art of growing tobacco from generation to generation."

Tobacco in many forms was evident at the gathering Friday night. There were ashtray door prizes, and to put them to use, hundreds of packages of cigarettes on the banquet tables.

Reynolds launched the campaign last year. Since then, the campaign has spread to other tobacco-producing states.

Competency Test Failure High For Black Students

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Of the 6,688 high-school students in the state who have flunked the state competency test twice, two-thirds are black.

That number, said state officials, means one out of every five blacks — 20 percent — who took the two-part reading and mathematics test failed at least one section.

The figure compares with a white student failure rate of 3 percent.

Some of the students, the educable mentally retarded, have little hope of ever passing the test. Only 382 of the 1,887 retarded students have passed the test, designed to measure basic competency.

The students who failed the test again when it was given in May will be given two more chances to pass next year and more remedial instruction.

Dr. Robert J. Marley directs the program, which serves 139,000 students statewide. The students get 30 to 45 minutes a instruction a day in classes limited to 10 students per teacher.

"People are always asking what effect Title I has on the compentency test results," Marley said. "I think there would be more failures without it, but I have no evidence to support it."

Said Dr. Lafayette Parker, vice chancellor for academic affairs at Winston-Salem State University, "The (public) schools are trying. It's just going to take forever."

The Ladies Really Loved It

GULFPORT, Ill. (UPI) — The tiny, rural community of Gulfport apparently was more than ready for "Fast Freddy and the Playboys" — a touring troupe of male strippers.

About 250 women, many from across the border in Iowa, crowded into a nightclub at Gulfport, a town of 200, to catch the act billed as the "hottest male go-go show in the nation."

"It was unbelievable," said Jerry Downer, owner of the Downer's Nightclub. "They really know how to bring the bad out in women. You wouldn't believe it."

Fast Freddy and his three "playboys" — Little Brother Tommy, Big Al and Sexy Rexy — started off their act in three-piece suits. By the time their peeled down to their bikini underwear, the roof was shaking with the shrieks of the female audience, Downer said.

"We had 10 times the normal business that night. To tell you the truth, it's disgusting to me but I'm having them back next week. I'd be a fool not to."

Downer said the return engagement will help him decide whether to feature the act on a weekly or monthly basis.

He said the entertainers, who disrobed while gyrating to disco songs, were warned in advance not "go all the way" because the club expected strict treatment from police if they exceeded the bounds of law.

But some of the viewers got carried away when Fast Freddy got down to his bikini-style shorts.

"One of the women pulled the back of his bikinis down, Downer said. "If you could have heard them screaming and hollering you could have seen them liking it."

Southern Travelers Turning To Trains

By The Associated Press

Southerners seeking to avoid gasoline lines — and high prices — are using Amtrak as never before, an official of the national railroad passenger line said Friday.

Advance bookings on the Crescent, formerly the Southern Crescent, which runs from New York City to New Orleans, are running higher than ever, the spokesman, Joe Vranich, said.

Amtrak's district office in Miami, which covers Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Alabama, West Virginia and part of Tennessee reported Friday that every station in the region had reported a 100 percent increase during May over the same period of 1978.

Vranich said the Crescent's "peak sector" — the part of the line with the greatest ridership — runs from Washington to Atlanta. The train is 99 percent booked in the peak sector for the next two weeks and is 77 percent booked in that area for the next 13 weeks.

For the next two weeks, he added, "advance reservations systemwide are running 127 percent higher than a year ago during the same period."

Vranich said he decided to check the Champion, which runs from Florida to New York City, Friday morning when it rolled into Washington, Amtrak's base of operations. "I walked through the train and there was a person in every seat," he said.

The Silver Star, the Silver Meteor, the Champion and the Palmetto, all of which run along the eastern seaboard, are booked from 97 to 99 percent for the next two weeks, the spokesman added.

Amtrak is better equipped to handle the situation than it was during the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo, he said, due to a computerized reservation system.

"The computer can tell us, for example, what train is getting near capacity and we can add another car to that train," he said. "Although now Amtrak is running out of cars."

Also, "the computer automatically cancels reservations for people who do not pick up their tickets by deadline and we're able to control much better the no-show factor than we were five years ago," Vranich continued.

The computer handles the cancellations at 2 a.m. every morning, he said.

He noted Amtrak has been criticized for not being better prepared for the crunch due to the gasoline shortage. The railroad tried to find out from several federal agencies what it could expect, Vranich said, and "the government never gave us a cohesive answer."

Also, Congress has refused Amtrak requests for money to buy more new cars, he said.

In May 1978, he continued, Amtrak turned down 68,000 requests across the nation for space "simply because trains were sold out. This May we turned away over 756,000 requests for space. That's an increase of 1,011 percent in business turned away."

But bookings on Amtrak trains can still be obtained, he said, if the person plans well ahead and tries to travel at mid-week or perhaps on Saturday, when ridership declines between the peaks of Friday and Sunday.

Crown Stripped From Miss N.C. 1978

By SKIP FOREMAN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — When 47 hopeful beauties gather in Raleigh tonight for the annual Miss North Carolina pageant, one traditional figure will be missing — the reigning queen.

Debbie Shook, who told reporters that being a beauty queen was "not a bed of roses," crushed her crown and kicked it onstage Friday when she learned she had been stripped of her title the day before she was to hand it to a successor.

Her action marked the end of a year she said was filled with battles she didn't expect.

Miss Shook, 22, of Spruce Pine, lost her crown after she made "unauthorized statements to the media," according to a statement issued by the North Carolina Jaycees, sponsors of the event.

"Her ... statements to the media at this time during the production of this year's Miss North Carolina pageant has caused an irreconcilable estrangement between Miss Shook and the North Carolina Jaycees, rendering it impossible without demeaning the entire program as well as the Miss North Carolina crown for her to continue to wear 'the crown,'" the statement said.

Miss Shook told The Associated Press on Friday night that when the pageant's executive director, Dan Surles, gave her the news shortly before preliminary competition was to begin, she crushed the crown that had been atop her head and kicked it to the stage. She kicked it a second time, until it reached center stage.

She said her mother, Luretta Shook, then walked onstage, to the cheers of the audience and said, "If you want to know what this is about, read it in the papers."

Surles was unavailable for comment.

Miss Shook, in a newspaper interview Friday, said if she had been aware of all the problems she was to encounter during her reign, she would not have entered the contest.

Miss Shook and her mother say that for the last three months they have been trying to collect more than $2,250 in scholarship money from the Winston-Salem Jaycees, host of last year's event. In addition, they have said she is due a framed portrait and over $5,000 in clothing as part of her prizes.

The Raleigh Jaycees, host for this year's pageant, said any problems Miss Shook may have had getting her winnings were between her and the Winston-Salem Jaycees. In most states, pageants franchised by Miss America Pageant Inc. are run by non-profit corporations. In North Carolina, Jaycee chapters vie for the chance to host the event.

They Followed The Rules

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) — Three cowboys barred from dancing in blue jeans startled some disco patrons when they complied with the rules.

The trio of out-of-town cowpokes arrived at Disco Etc. a few nights ago. But the bartender pointed to a sign which read "No Blue Jeans," and asked them to leave.

On the way out, the wranglers stopped in the men's room where they took off their jeans.

Clad in boots, shirts and shorts — one wore a hat — they came out, and, according to police reports, danced around the floor for about 30 seconds while the disco's 40 or so patrons looked on.

After the brief dance, they put their pants on and left.

A Lewiston police officer stopped the men several minutes later on the street. The men admitted the folly and were escorted back to the disco, but no one cared to press charges.

Concerned Over Damage Claims

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham expressed concern Friday over Smith-Douglass Inc. procedures for settling damage claims with farmers for tobacco ruined by a contaminated fertilizer the company manufactured.

Though he said he was satisfied that Smith-Douglass had settled with farmers who lost their entire crops because of the fertilizer, he said he was concerned that the tobacco remaining in the field was marketable.

"I have contacted the attorney general about this and he has advised me that once the farmer signs a document releasing Smith-Douglass from liability for his tobacco crop, he has no further legal grounds for claims," Graham said.

"I am not at all happy with the way this settlement is being handled," Graham said. He said he was satisfied with the agreement that farmers would receive compensation if their entire crop was lost. But Graham added that problems arose when the company offered to settle a partial loss, when it was likely the farmer could not market his entire crop due to the damage.

"We are simply saying growers whose tobacco crop is partially damaged not to settle with Smith-Douglass until they find out definitely that the tobacco is marketable and that the tobacco companies will buy it."

Buckley's Solution Offered

CLEVELAND (AP) — Syndicated columnist William F. Buckley Jr. says the United States sorely needs a national plan to deal with the two-headed problem of oil shortages and rising gasoline prices. So he offered one.

The conservative commentator said Friday the United States should sign a 25-year contract with Saudi Arabia to buy oil at a set price in exchange for military protection for the oil-rich Middle East country.

"Saudi Arabia would be a satellite of the Soviet Union tomorrow" if it weren't for the military might of the United States, Buckley said. He added that it's time the Saudis were made to "pay" for the protection.

Anita Comments On San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Anti-homosexual activist Anita Bryant says it is "frightening" that San Francisco's gay community is so large and influential.

"If that's what the people of San Francisco want, that's their choice, but it is frightening to see that happening," she said in an interview with her husband, Bob Green, as part of a series on the homosexual community for KRON TV this week.

There are some 100,000 persons in San Francisco's gay community, or about one-sixth of the city's population.

Miss Bryant said "it is sad when a particular group of people, no matter what they are, are able to ... thrust their way of life on a society."

Pope Installed 14 Prelates

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II Saturday installed 14 prelates from eight countries as cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church.

The 59-year-old pontiff had named the new cardinals May 26 and said at the time he had also chosen a 15th cardinal "in pectore" — in his heart — leading to speculation that the unnamed new prince of the church was from a Communist country.

The 15th cardinal was not identified after today's secret assembly.

There has been speculation he might be a Lithuanian bishop because of the Polish-born pope's interest in Lithuanian Catholics living under communism. Shortly after his election as pope last October, John Paul II was said to have sent his cardinal's hat to a religious sanctuary in Lithuania.

Testimony To Continue August 6

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Duke Power Co. now has until August to prove to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission that shipments of spent nuclear fuel on interstate highways in North Carolina and South Carolina can be handled safely.

The NRC panel heard over 85 hours of testimony stretched over 10 days.

Chairman Marshall Miller cut off the proceedings after it became clear opponents would take several days to complete questioning of NRC staff experts. Miller said the hearings would resume in either Charlotte or Washington on Aug. 6.

The delay is actually a setback for Duke, because the utility was planning to begin 300 shipments of spent nuclear fuel from its Oconee, S.C., plant for temporary storage at its McGuire plant north of Charlotte by November.

Conditions Force Cancellation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The same domestic problems President Carter is trying to combat forced cancellation of a meeting to talk over his possible plans for re-election.

A discussion of Carter's 1980 campaign strategy by southern Democratic governors was cancelled Friday after only three governors agreed to attend the meeting.

The meeting, scheduled for today, was to be held at the Research Triangle Park near Raleigh. But a spokesman for North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt said the cancellation was due to problems caused by the truckers strike and the gasoline shortage.

The meeting was requested by the White House, and Presidential assistants Hamilton Jordan, Jack Watson and Tim Kraft were to have talked with the governors about Carter's plans, according to Hunt's office.

Youthful Talent In Today's Sunday In The Park

GREENSBORO YOUTHEATER . . . Eight young ladies and eight young men comprise the talented musical group from Greensboro who will be in concert today in Sunday in the Park. The troupe, with members ranging in age from 14 to 22, have received wide critical acclaim and has been invited to tour Russia next year. There is no admission charge for today's performance, and the public is invited to attend.

A whirlwind musical world tour is the theme that The Greensboro Youtheater will bring to today's Sunday in the Park concert.

A new revue for the highly acclaimed Greensboro group, it was inspired by the tour they made of Roumania in May 1979, which was known as the "Cole Porter Revue."

As word of their talent spreads, the young musicians are attracting more and more invitations for performances. Already, they have been invited to tour Russia in 1980 to continue their international touring program.

Sixteen young talents, between the ages of 14 and 22, comprise the Greensboro Youtheater. The revue is compiled, directed and choreographed by Carole Lindsey, Supervisor of Visual and Performing Arts for the Greensboro Parks and Recreation Department.

Musical direction and some musical arrangements are by Brian Gray.

The musical world tour being presented today intertwines music of "Faraway Places" — from sources such as "Brigadoon," and songs like "A Foggy Day in London Town, "Edelweiss," "The Last Time I Saw Paris," "Arrevederci Roma," "South of the Border," and "Hawaiian Wedding Song."

They will also treat today's audience to a number of lively folk dances.

There is no admission fee, and the public is invited to attend. Financial support making this concert and all Sunday in the Park concerts possible is provided by the City of Greenville through the auspices of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

The concert begins at 7 p.m. and will be held in the Sunday in the Park site on the grassy slope east of Reade between West Third and West Fourth Streets.

In the event of rain, there is no rain date planned for this concert.

The appearance of this noted Oriental ensemble is part of the June and July American Dance Festival featuring top national and international dance talent. By ELIZABETH LELAND
American Dance Festival Writer

DURHAM — When the Dancers from Bali make their American debut at the American Dance Festival in Durham on Tuesday, July 3, they will bring with them Bali's famous 13-year-old child star, A. A. Gede Anom. He was named the best child dancer on Bali in 1978 by the government's Culture Office.

Anom will perform the celebrated "Baris Halus" (Elegant Warrior) in the dazzling costumes of Balinese dance. Anom is famous for his interpretation of the solo "Baris" which was originally a religious ritual to dedicate a warrior and his weapon during a temple feast.

Anom will be accompanied by four other Balinese dancers, including his father and first teacher, A. A. Gede Raka Kompiang, and Desak Nyoman Suarti, a female dancer considered to be the finest exponent of the male dance "Teruna Jaya" (Young Prince), a dramatic character study of a young Balinese prince. Others in the troupe are Desak Ketut Suarni, who — like her sister Suarti — won a government award for her performance of "Teruna Jaya," and Ketut Dibya, a specialist in both dance and music.

Dressed in bright costumes and masks, the dancers move with abstract and representational motions to the accompaniment of bronze gongs and metallophones.

The Dancers From Bali are the fifth of 11 groups performing at the American Dance Festival, now in its second season in North Carolina.

All performances are to begin at 8 p.m. in Page Auditroium on the West Campus of Duke University, except the July 28 performance of the Paul Taylor Dance Company which will be filmed live by the South Carolina Educational Television Network, and will, therefore, be at 9 p.m.

Tickets for the performances are available at Page Auditorium Box Office, 648-4059, or by writing the American Dance Festival, P. O. Box 6097, College Station, Durham, N. C., 27708.

Tickets for the Tuesday night performance by the Dancers from Bali are $5. For the Paul Taylor Dance Company performance, tickets will be priced at $8.

Hospitality House

A tribute to Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" is the topic today of Kay Currie's "Hospitality House," airing from noon until 1 p.m. over WITN-TV, Channel 7.

Among guests on "The Lost Colony" special, which was filmed in part at the WITN-TV studio and also at the theater site in Manteo, are director-choreographer Joe Layton, and associate producer-coordinator Bob Knowles.

Two typical scenes from the production are shown — one featuring Perry Turner, the actor portraying Old Tom; the other a scene with Mary Kaye as Queen Elizabeth.

Also making appearances are Carl Heffner as Sir Walter Raleigh and James Graham as Governor John White.

"The Lost Colony," is now being performed nightly except Sundays and will continue until August 25.

Seeks Homes For Burros

By DAVID HURLBERT

WENDEN, Ariz. (UPI) — The federal government is attempting to find homes for 600 wild burros it is rounding up in the western Arizona desert.

The burros, which weigh about 600 pounds, are cute in appearance, but at times, deadly to the fragile desert landscape where they live.

The "Adopt-A-Burro" program of the Bureau of Land Management originated two years ago with 650 of the animals adopted. Last year, there was no roundup because of lack of funds.

"We love our burro," wrote one Glendale, Ariz., couple.

"They are just fine and spoiled rotten," said a woman who adopted three.

The program is an outgrowth of the efforts by the late Velma Johnston, known as "Wild Horse Annie," to keep wild horses from being trucked off to packing plants.

Annie, who died last year, formed a group of animal lovers known as "Wild Horse Organized Assistance" and attended numerous legislative and congressional sessions to plead her case.

After the Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act was passed in 1971, WHOA policed roundups and, because the animals cause damage to the open range, supported the BLM's efforts to find homes for the burros and horses.

Since the protective legislation was passed, the number of burros has been increasing about 20 percent annually.

The BLM, spending some $120,000 on the project, hired a group of cowboys to capture the burros after they are pinpointed by spotters in helicopters.

The only cost to the adoptive parents is a $10 to $20 fee for a health certificate for the animals plus transportation from Wenden.

Up to four burros can be adopted by one family. Prospective "parents" must show they have suitable facilities for the animals and must provide assurances the burros will not be used for commercial purposes, such as burro rides.

Interested persons can apply for a burro through the BLM's service center in Denver. The applications are computerized and a waiting list is made on a first-come, first-served basis.

Anger In San Francisco Show

By TODD R. EASTHAM

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A twisted spider's web of red paint covers the canvas beneath a layer of shattered glass. It's called "City Hall."

On other walls are other forms of visual art, conventional and modern, alongside photos of an angry crowd, police officers in riot gear, burning buildings and broken glass — photos taken at the "White Night" riot at San Francisco's City Hall.

The riot came in the wake of a verdict of voluntary manslaughter for Dan White, a former San Francisco supervisor convicted of shooting Mayor George Moscone and homosexual Supervisor Harvey Milk in their offices last November.

Over 5,000 demonstrators converged on City Hall that night — May 21 — to express their rage at what many saw as a flagrant miscarriage of justice.

Now the rage has subsided; but the hostility is still apparent. You can see it on the walls of the Top Floor Gallery.

The exhibit is called "Art as Art," and it's billed as a festival of art and performances from the city's "gay" community in the Grove Street gallery upstairs from the Gay Pride Foundation. It's less than two blocks from City Hall.

It features evening performances — theater, poetry, rock, jazz — in an environment filled with visual arts.

It displays works by members of the Eureka Noe Valley Artists Coalition, many of whom are homosexual; but the emphasis is on art, not sexuality.

"Apart from this exhibit a lot of us (coalition members) are gay and a lot of us are not, but we don't make any bones about it," said Lee Mentley, a former administrator for the S.F. Art Commission who now works out of the Top Floor Gallery.

"We are artists first, gays second," he said. "Sometimes our art is homosexual, sometimes it isn't.

"Art is a positive way for people outside the community to see us for what we are. It's important to experience a community through its culture and art."

Greenville Correspondence-Artist George Brett

Has Show, To Teach At SECCA

Greenville artist George Brett is having an exhibition of his work and is also designated as guest curator of the gallery showing his work, the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) in Winston-Salem.

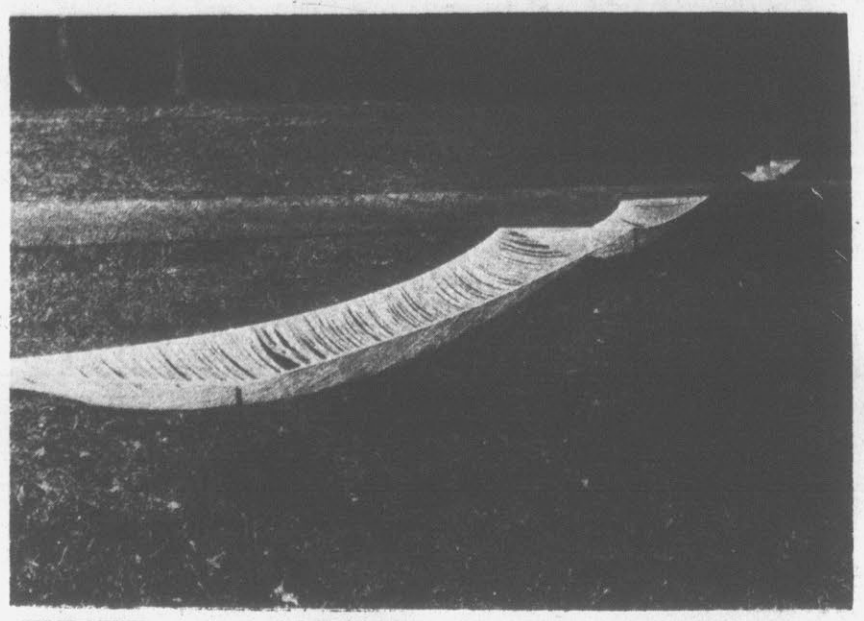

Brett's exhibition, entitled "SECCA at SECCA" — equates to Southern Exhibition of Contemporary Correspondence Art at SECCA, will include his correspondence art as well as similar art from correspondence-artists in Argentina, Japan, France, Italy and other countries, and from many Americans.

The show opens July 6 and will be on view through August 31.

In addition to his art and his stint as guest curator working with the gallery's permanent curator, Mackey Bane, Brett has also been appointed a visiting-artist at SECCA.

In this capacity, he will be working with students enrolled in CLOD (Creative Learning in the Out-of-Doors). Brett will be involved basically in art created for outdoors through the use of a knitting machine to form textile sculptures. His students will be in four age groups, and they will be learning about the concepts of working processes used by adult artists.

In this program, he will be working with SECCA's education coordinator, Susan Bingham.

Fayetteville Has New Garbage Plan

By TIM PITTMAN
Fayetteville Observer

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Fayetteville City Council has approved a plan aimed at making garbage-collection faster, and less expensive, and bringing the first four-day, 40-hour work week to city employees in the history of the city.

Council approvement came on Wednesday for a plan to use rolling carts for garbage pick-up.

Two piles of green, 80-gallon carts lie stacked on top of each other — waiting for late August, the earliest date Fayetteville residents will see carts lining streets

By Christmas, more than 18,000 carts will be delivered to Fayetteville garbage-collection points. Before 1980 is a month old, sanitation department officials and city administrators expect the curbside pick-up system to be working citywide.

The new system will also bring internal changes within the sanitation department. Those changes include:

—A four-day, 10-hour-a-day work week for sanitation workers. Since crews will be able to work routes faster, more homes will be serviced. For the Fayetteville resident, that means no pick-up on Wednesday, a day set aside for maintenance to the fleet of garbage trucks. The four-day work week is a first in the city's operations.

—The loss of about 40 jobs in the sanitation department.

—About 12 routes instead of the 21 now employed by the sanitation department.

—The size of the sanitation crews will shrink from four to three men. The city will be divided into three areas (instead of two under the existing system) and three foremen will direct operations in those three districts.

A roving truck designed to pick street-side trash not put in carts will move in each district to assist with garbage pick-up.

"We'll have to stay flexible," said William G. Thomas III, city manager. " We hope to avoid changes as much as possible, because we're asking a foreman and truck driver to remember whether a person on the route receives special service or regular curbside service."

Special backdoor service will cost $26 a year.

The option allowing residents to pay $26 to have a garbageman walk to the back door and roll the cart to the curb worries Harold Hubbard, assistant superintendent of the sanitation department.

Hubbard said too much specialized business will slow the operation down.

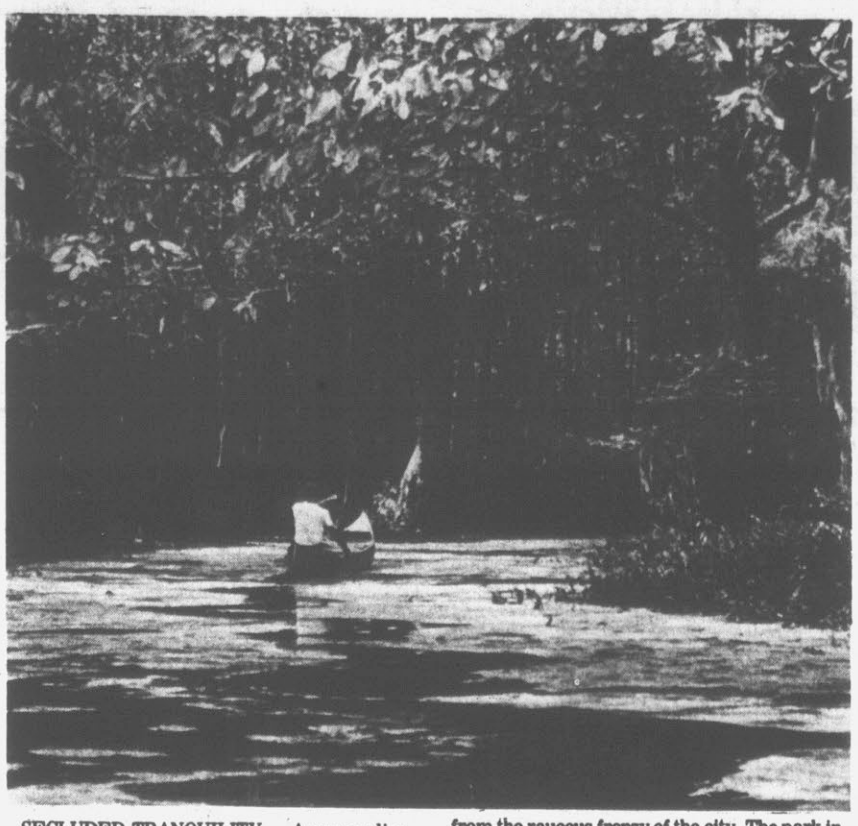

The city council has voted to spend about $670,000 to buy 19,000 carts. About 1,000 will be on hand to replace damaged, lost, or stolen carts and new business.

New routes and crews will be put together to initiate the roll-out system's gradual implementation.

City officials expect a savings of about $290,000 for the 1979-80 fiscal year, with the savings to come from reduced man-hours, gasoline and equipment savings, and, of course, the reduction of 40 employes.

Hubbard and Thomas estimate that, after a year, the savings figure will increase to about half-million dollars annually.

"Even when the first talk about roll-out carts began, there was no talk of a tax cut," Thomas said. "It is just one more method of dealing with double-digit inflation, of keeping services at the basic level and cutting costs."

McEnroe Upset; Top Women Take Wins

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Tim Gullikson, the righthander of the Wisconsin tennis twins, vanquished John McEnroe 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 Saturday in Wimbledon's biggest upset.

In a feverish atmosphere more like that of a football game, McEnroe shouted at spectators and skirmished with a foot-fault judge. The 20-yearold left-hander, who has won the Masters and World Championship Tennis titles this year, was seeded No. 2. His defeat left as the top contenders defending champion Bjorn Borg and third-seeded Jimmy Connors.

Borg and Connors are in the same part of the draw so could meet only in the semifinals. Borg will play Dutchman Tom Okker in the quarters. Connors next meets fellow American Bill Scanlon.

Borg, going for a fourth straight Wimbledon triumph, fought grimly Saturday to defeat Brian Teacher, the tall star from Beverly Hills, Calif., 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, 7-5.

Connors, looking in peak form, rolled over Mark Cox, the last British hope, 6-2, 6-2, 61.

The other men's quarters will pair Italy's Adriano Panatta with American Pat Dupre and Gullikson against Roscoe Tanner.

In contrast to the erratic form in the men's draw, the top eight women all advanced to the quarters. Defending champion Martina Navratilova had a difficult time against South Africa's Greer Stevens but surivied 7-6, 6-7, 6-3.

Chris Evert Lloyd, Tracy Austin, Billie Jean King and Virginia Wade all had staightset victories. Evonne Goolagong Cawley, the 1971 champion, had a harder time but got past American Kathy Jordan 76, 6-7, 6-1.

The action resumes Monday. There is no play at Wimbledon on Sundays.

McEnroe's frustrations started in the first set. He shouted at spectators who were moving about, and complained about the noise.

Excited Italians were screaming and yelling on the next court, where their hero, Panatta, was beating America's Sandy Mayer 7-6, 6-3, 7-6.

After one of these scenes, McEnroe dropped his service for the first time at 2-3. It cost him the set. From 2-2 in the second set Gullikson hit a superb streak and won eight games in a row. That took him to a two-sets lead and 4-0 in the third.

During that spell McEnroe was foot-faulted. He turned and said something to the foot-fault judge.

"McEnroe, come here," the umpire said sternly. McEnroe walked to the umpire's chair, exchanged a few quiet words and went back to his baseline.

The crowd were all behind Gullikson. They cheered every point won by the twin, and jeered McEnroe during his clashes with spectators and officials.

Gullikson served at 4-1 in the third set and at 40-30 was within a point of a 5-1 lead. But he missed an easy forehand volley, and went on to lose his service for the first time in the match. McEnroe crept up to 45.

Gullikson had four match points before clinching it. McEnroe finally surrendered by netting a backhand return.

McEnroe's defeat took place on No. 2 court where two other seeds, Vitas Gerulaitis and Arthur Ashe, had been upset early in the week. The court had become known as the seeds' graveyard. But McEnroe said there was nothing wrong with the court.

"Maybe the grass is a little slower on that court, but a good player should be able to play on any court," McEnroe said. "He played better than I did today."

McEnroe, who has been nursing a leg injury, said it made him a little hesitant. "It's partly in the mind and partly in the body," he said.

Teacher, excelling in overhead shots, gave Borg a lot to worry about. The Swedish star showed no sign of the hamstring injury which two days ago was reported likely to put him out of the tournament. But each set teetered in the balance, and Borg had to pull out his best shots on the big points.

Much of the duel was fought from the baseline. When Teacher went to the net he was erratic, and his missed volleys cost him vital points as he strove to edge ahead of the champion in the third and fourth sets.

The United States provided five men in the last eight.

Tanner's big service took him past the remaining South American, Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Scanlon, the 37th ranked U.S. player ended the run of Brad Drewett, the 20-year-old Australian, 6-4, 6-4, 6-7, 7-5.

Dupre edged Bob Lutz 3-6, 75, 4-6, 6-4, 8-6 in a see-sawing three-hour marathon.

The American Mayer brothers made their exits almost in unison. While Panatta was defeating Sandy, 35-year-old Tom Okker of the Netherlands was eliminating Gene 7-6, 5-7, 6-4, 64.

Navratilova worked hard against the plucky Stevens and said later she had a cold and a sore ankle.

Lloyd beat American Laura Dupont 6-2, 6-1; King downed Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova 6-4, 6-3; Wade beat fellow Englishwoman Debbie Jevans 6-1, 6-2 and Austin dumped Romania's Virginia Ruzici 6-2, 6-4.

Turnbull turned back fellow Australian Kerry Reid 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, and Fromholtz edged Betty Stove of the Netherlands 7-6, 76.

Billie Jean King returns shot on way to win over Hana Mandlikova.

Expo Homers Trim Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Two-run homers by Larry Parrish and Rodney Scott and Andre Dawson's solo shot powered the Montreal Expos to a 5-3 victory Saturday over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Scott Sanderson, 5-4, allowed the Pirates two runs in the first inning on Tim Foli's RBI-double and Willie Stargell's sacrifice fly. Sanderson then stopped Pittsburgh until he was removed for a pinch hitter in the sixth. Foli singled home Pittsburgh's final run off Elias Sosa in the ninth.

Dawson started Montreal's comeback when he led off the fourth inning with his 14th homer of the season. After Jerry White walked with two out in the sixth, Bert Blyleven, 5-3, served up Parrish's sixth homer of the year.

Dave Cash batted for Sanderson in the seventh and doubled. And when Grant Jackson replaced Blyleven, Scott hit his second homer of the season. The game was delayed by rain for 43 minutes after 7½ innings.

Seaver Gets 225th Victory

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tom Seaver pitched a two-hitter for his 225th major league victory and the Cincinnati Reds cracked a scoreless tie with two runs in the ninth inning for a 2-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

Seaver, 6-5, didn't allow a hit after pitcher John Montefusco doubled leading off the third. The Reds' right-hander retired the last 21 batters. He struck out five and walked one.

Cincinnati scored its runs off Ed Whitson, 2-4, who made an inauspicious debut in relief for San Francisco after coming from Pittsburgh in the Bill Madlock trade.

Ken Griffey opened the ninth with a single and advanced on a wild pitch. Dan Driessen was walked intentionally with one out and Harry Spillman was hit by a pitch, loading the bases.

Griffey scored on Cesar Geronimo's grounder, second baseman Joe Strain's throw failing to force the runner at the plate. Vic Correll then walked, forcing in Driessen with the other run.

Yaz's 399th Home Run Powers Boston To 3-2 Win Over Yanks

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — He wasn't even supposed to play, but before Carl Yastrzemski was done with them Saturday, the New York Yankees wished the veteran Boston star had followed his first inclination and taken the day off.

Yaz smashed the 399th home run of his fabulous career in the ninth inning, carrying the Red Sox to a 3-2 victory over the Yanks. It was his 16th of the year, a shot into the right field stands.

He limped through his home-run trot, favoring a stretched Achilles' tendon which almost forced him out of the lineup.

"I've had it for about three days," Yaz said after his three hits in the game pushed his career total to 2,950. "I wasn't too worried about it last night, but today I am."

Yaz thought about taking the day off — especially after playing all 13 innings of Friday night's 3-2 Boston victory. But after taping his right leg, he decided to stay in the lineup.

Smalley Paces Twin Victory

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Roy Smalley drove in five runs with a single, double and his 14th homer of the year as the Minnesota Twins, exploding for six runs in the fourth inning, coasted to a 16-4 rout over the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

Smalley hit an RBI single in the third inning, a two-run double in the Twins' big fourth and a two-run homer in the seventh to lead Minnesota's 19-hit assault against Ed Farmer, 2-3, and two Chicago relievers.

The White Sox got a run in the sixth on Smalley's bobble of Junior Moore's leadoff grounder to shortstop, an infield out and Chet Lemon's RBI double. Lamar Johnson hit his sixth homer of the year in Chicago's three-run ninth.

Waiting Bad For Torborg

CLEVELAND (AP) — "Being in limbo is no fun," says Jeff Torborg, waiting to learn if he will hang on to his job as manager of the troubled Cleveland Indians.

Recently ousted New York Yankees Manager Bob Lemon, an All-Star pitcher for Cleveland during the Indians' glory days, has been offered Torborg's job, The Plain Dealer reported Saturday.

It was the latest in a series of reports that Torborg, 37, would be replaced, and it followed a disappointing 8-6 loss to the Tigers at Detroit in a Friday night game in which the Indians at one time led 6-1.

It was the 11th loss in 12 games for the Indians, who are in sixth place in the American League East.

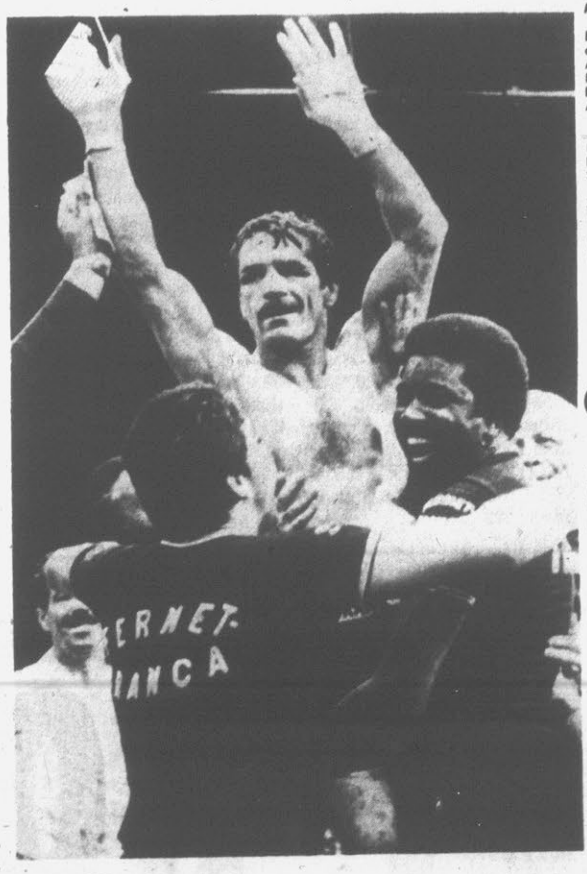

The Plain Dealer, quoting sources close to both the Indians and the Yankees, said that if Lemon accepts, he will get the Cleveland manager's job on a long-term basis. If he refuses, Torborg will remain as manager.

Torborg would be offered an executive post in the Indians' front office if he is removed as manager.

Lemon said he would return to his home in Long Beach, Calif., from New York. The report said a decision could come Monday or Tuesday.

"I'm kind of at a loss for words. I want to talk to my wife, to (Yankee owner George) Steinbrenner and more with the people in Cleveland," Lemon said Friday night in New York. "I don't know what I'm going to do. I'm just not in a frame of mind to make a decision now."

Bryant's 68 Gives Him Stroke Lead Over Kite In Memphis Play

By LES SEAGO

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Brad Bryant, a Texan who has been having mixed luck on the professional golf tour, fired a four-under-par 68 Saturday to grab the third round lead in the $300,000 Danny Thomas Memphis Classic.

Bryant's 54-hole total of 209 gave him a one-stroke edge over Tom Kite, who carded a 69 Saturday at the 7,249-yard Colonial Country Club. Peter Jacobsen, Jim Simons, Wally Armstrong, Cesar Sanudo and Larry Ziegler were bunched at 211.

Second-round leader Jack Newton of Australia slumped to 76 for 214, while defending champion Andy Bean stayed in striking distance with a 68—213.

The best round of the day belonged to Rod Curl, who had a 67 to run his total to 212.

Bryant, 24, who joined the tour last year, had four birdies for the day and seemed unaffected by wet fairways and high winds which produced less than satisfying scores for some of the early leaders.

Bryant, whose best finish this year was a tie for fourth in the Bing Crosby Open, missed the cut in nine of his 18 tournament entries this year. He qualified for the Danny Thomas with a two-under-par 70 Monday.

Bryant, who lists Bible studying, hunting and fishing as hobbies, said his golf game had improved recently.

"It seems I am playing a professional game instead of a high school or college game," he said, explaining that he was driving better and becoming more aggressive in his play.

Despite his position Saturday, Bryant said he did not have high expectations for Sunday's final round.

"The Bible teaches us that we should try to seek the kingdom of God first and He will add what you need. I don't hope for anything. I don't have expectations. To have expectations daily, it seems to me you are setting yourself up for a fall," he said.

Kite, whose best efforts this year have been third-place finishes at Phoenix and Sea Pines, was at 141 behind Newton's 138 as the third round began.

The 29-year-old Austin, Texas, golfer had six birdies Saturday along with three bogeys.

Kite said he could have improved his score except for a lapse as he made the turn.

"I got a little careless and made bogeys at 10 and 11," he said. "I went to sleep." He three-putted the two holes.

Pat Lindsey, a 27-year-old rookie in his second pro tournament, hit the tourney's second hole-in-one Saturday. His ace came on the 203-yard 12th hole where a hamburger restaurant chain had posted a $20,000 reward for the feat. Half the money went to Lindsey, who had barely missed an ace at the same hole Friday, and half went to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

Lindsey finished with a 76—223.

Judy Rankin Powers To Five-Shot Lead

By EDWARD K. MILLER

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Judy Rankin tied a single-round mark of nine birdies Saturday on her way to a course-record 65 and a five-shot lead going into Sunday's final round of a Ladies Profesional Golfers Association tournament.

Rankin, who went into Saturday's action three shots behind second-round leader Debbie Austin, played a skillful combination of shots from the rough, sand and soggy fairways for her 7-under-par round. She takes a 208 into Sunday's play, 8 shots under par.

The 17-year veteran needed only 23 putts in shattering both the mens' and womens' records at the Dearborn Country Club course — firing five birdies on the front nine for a 32 and four on the backside for a 33.

Austin, who carded a 73, was alone at 3-under-par 213. Amy Alcott, who shot the day's second-best round at 68, joined defending champion Sandra Post and rookie Beth Daniel in third at 214, two shots under par.

"I just had a golden touch with the putter today," Rankin said. "Fortunately, I made the right shots to get to the putts that counted. Sunday, I'll just let the law of averages take care of the putts — if I have any luck left."

The $150,000 tournament carries a first prize of $22,500. "I would rather have a five-shot lead on a difficult course than on an easy one," Rankin said. "And I consider this a tough course."

Austin, who toured the 6,411yard course with Rankin and Post, said, "I played better today than I did in the first two rounds. Sandra and I were on the green inside her (Rankin) many times, but she rolled them in and we didn't. We played just as well as Judy but our putts weren't going in.

"If Judy continues this, we're all going to be playing for second place."

Alone in fourth at 1-under-par 215 was Vicki Fergon, who shot a 73.

The third round was played under gray skies, but without the torrents of rain that plagued Friday's second round.

Only three weeks ago, Rankin was suffering from "tremendous muscle spasms" in her back, which had caused her to leave the tour off and on for the last three years. "I've been taking time off and it seems to have gotten better," she said.

She said a painful disc in her spine "takes me to my knees sometimes. I can't walk."

At even-par 216 were Barbara Barrow, Sandra Palmer, Kathy McMullen and Sally Little.

Donna Caponi Young and Laura Baugh were disqualified for improper play after hitting into water hazards earlier in the tournament. Tournament officials said the two continued play from beside — instead of behind — the ponds.

The $150,000 Lady Stroh's Open, in its second year, is sponsored by the Stroh Brewing Co.

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Cheered by the sight of their fine-feathered friend, 47,000 San Diego fan have welcomed back their beloved bird. And tiny Ted Giannoulas, the man behind Chicken Mania, was proud as a peacock.

Defrocked for two months by a court order, the 5-foot-4 Giannoulas returned to San Diego Stadium Friday night in a modified chicken suit.

The response was a thunderous ovation for the much-missed bird.

"That was the biggest thrill of my life. Chills went down my spine. I was crying, I really was," said Giannoulas, 24, who spent five years as the KGB Chicken before landing in hot water earlier this year. His employer, KGB radio station, fired him and filed a $250,000 lawsuit, alleging contract violations.

Giannoulas made a grand entrance as the San Diego Padres' mascot.

As the crowd chanted "We want the Chicken," Giannoulas, out of sight behind the outfield fence, climbed into a giant styrofoam egg on top of an armored car.

A roar reverberated through the stadium as the truck rumbled onto the field. Two motorcycle patrolmen, sirens wailing, provided escort.

Earlier in the day, Giannoulas said he shelled out a strange ransom to four egg-poachers who stole the empty egg from the ballpark and demanded four tickets to the game and $20 worth of beer for its safe return.

When the truck reached third base, a group of Padres gingerly removed it from its perch and placed it on the ground.

First the egg rolled toward second base and back again. Then it shook, began cracking and out popped the new multi-colored bird.

"I'm coming back to family and their laughter," said Giannoulas, who handed out stamped cigars proclaiming "It's a bird."

The new chicken will be named by his fans, he said.

Once in the stands, the furry Pied Piper was engulfed by a mob of squealing youngsters.

The crowd was the largest of the year for the Padres, who are averaging 21,000 fans per game.

Mostly orange, the costume contains all the main colors of San Diego's sports teams, Giannoulas said. Across his chest, his official crest was emblazoned with a flying egg and stamped with the letter C. "That stands for comedy and California," said Giannoulas, who insists he has made enough modifications to skirt the court order.

"Now if only Gaylord (starting pitcher Gaylord Perry) can throw a goose egg."

He didn't. Perry's first pitch was blasted for a home run and the Padres dropped a 4-1 decision.

Triumphant Return

Ted Giannoulas, known for his antics as the 'chicken,' returned to action Friday night in San Diego as some sort of hybrid. A standing room only crowd of over 45,000 cheered his return. He's seen here being carried off the field by San Diego Padres Kurt Bevacqua and John D'Acquisto. (Ap Laserphoto)

Waltrip Paces Speed Trials

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip, stock car racing's newest superstar, set a torrid 192.514 mph pace Saturday as the Grand National drivers opened practice for the $208,000 Firecracker 400 on July 4.

Waltrip's speed in his green-and-white Oldsmobile overshadowed a 190.780 clocking by Neil Bonnett in a Mercury and 189.966 by Buddy Baker's Olds.

Baker, who set a track record of 196.049 mph when he earned the pole for the Daytona 500 last February, was a little disappointed, but he said with a wink, "We're just sorting it out. We'll be ready when we go to qualifying Sunday."

Waltrip, leading in the point standing and money winning at the halfway point in the rich Grand National series, flashed a typical smile as he expressed satisfaction with his machine's handling on on Daytona International Speedway's 31-degree banking.

"I'm looking for my first pole position here, and it looks like I've got a pretty good chance," Waltrip said. "Baker is the guy to beat on this track, and we'll have to go a little faster than we are now to do it."

Bonnett, who replaced David Pearson at the wheel of the Wood Brothers Mercury, was pleased with his speed in a car less aerodynamic than the Oldsmobiles.

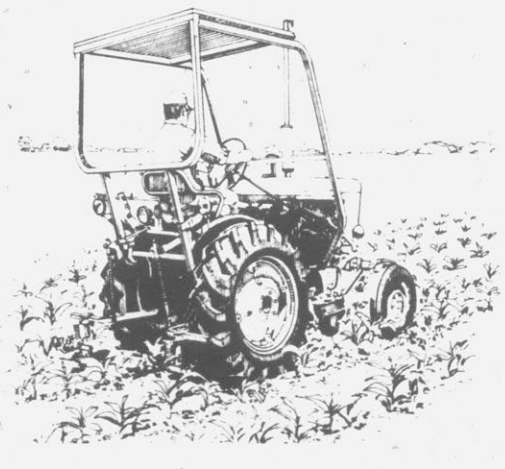

"If we could get their sloped nose, we'd be right there with them," Bonnett said. "Even then, I might make a run for the pole."

Snow Hill Bops Pitt, 11-4

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

One night after clinching the regular season Area I American Legion Baseball championship, Pitt County turned in a sluggish performance and fell to Snow Hill 11-4 Friday.

The game finished up the regular season in Area I and left Post 39 with an 11-3 record, while Snow Hill finished at 9-5, in a three-way tie for second place with Wilson, Rocky Mount and Williamston.

Pitt County enters the Area I tournament this weekend with a three-game series against Washington.

Post 39 coach Gary Overton made some changes in his lineup for Friday night's game, giving some players a rest and others experience going into the playoffs.

He started Jeff Allen on the mound, a hurler who has seen limited action this season. He was effective for the first three innings, but gave up four hits and five runs in the fourth before being pulled in favor of Bob Hemingway.

Hemingway lasted just over two innings and gave up three more runs. Mel Howard finished up the hurling duties for Pitt County and was responsible for Snow Hill's final two scores.

Collyn Beaman went the distance for the winners, scattering seven Pitt County hits. He gave up two earned runs, walked one and struck out four.

The game was error-plagued on both sides with a total of 12 misplays, including an error by Pitt catcher Curtis Spencer, his first of the season. Spencer was one of those players being rested, but had to enter the game after starting catcher Skip Topping was injured in a collision at the plate in the fourth inning.

Snow Hill took the opportunity to show some hitting power against the troubled Pitt County pitchers. Of the 12 Snow Hill hits, five went for extra bases, with a home run by Philip Gordon, two triples and two doubles.

The visitors scored first in the game with a single unearned run in the third. With one away, Beaman walked. After another out, Jimbo Fulghum singled him to second and he scored when Al Murray reached on an error.

The bottom fell out on Allen in the next inning as Snow Hill exploded for seven runs. Walt Tyndall led off with a double up the middle and Jeff Scott followed with a triple to right. Kevin Korpi singled Scott in, went to second on a wild pitch and was sacrificed to third by Robin Bowen.

After another out, Billy McLawhorn reached on an error to plate Korpi and Fulghum singled before Hemingway came in to replace Allen. The first batter he faced, Murray, tripled ot center field, plating McLawhorn and Fulghum. Murray followed on a throwing error. That brought up Gordon, who homered to right to make it 8-0.

Pitt got one run in the bottom of the frame. Topping singled with one away and was on first when Micah Dixon hit a fly ball down the right field line. The ball appeared to be a fading foul, but right fielder Jeff Scott reached over the line and got a glove on it, knocking it into foul territory.

Topping had started back towards first and Dixon passed him after touching first base. Upon seeing the ball dropped, Topping headed for second and slid in behind Scott's throw.

After some confusion, the umpires ruled Dixon out for passing Topping and sent Topping back to first. He scored fromt here on a double by Mike Campbell and suffered a cut over his left eye at home that took him out of the game.

Snow Hill scored again in the sixth when Gordon walked, moved to third on a pair of infield outs and scored on Korpi's hit up the middle.

The winners rounded out their scoring in th eighth with a towering home run for Pitt County and Post 39 added two more runs in the ninth. J.R. Neal led off the final frame, reaching on an error and Jeff Wilson singled him to third. Wilson went to second on a wild pitch and pinch hitter Will Sanderson hit an infield out that scored Neal. Wilson came in on Mark Shank's infield out.

Torrez, Guidry Match Zeros, But Boston Finally Gets Win

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Mike Torrez pitched a pretty good game. So did Matt Keough. Neither got a victory — but that's where the similarity ended.

Torrez silenced New York on three hits through eight innings Friday night, only to be chased during the Yankees' two-run ninth that sent the game into extra innings.

Neither he nor Yankee starter Ron Guidry were around when Boston, on Rick Burleson's double and Jerry Remy's single, won 3-2 in the 13th.

Keough, one of Oakland's luckless hurlers, pitched well enough against Texas, but got no support at bat or in the field and wound up with his 10th loss in the 5-3 decision. He has no victories.

In the rest of the American League, Baltimore swept Toronto 6-1 and 4-0 in a twinight doubleheader, Minnesota beat Chicago 5-2, California edged Kansas City 6-5 in 11 innings, Detroit defeated Cleveland 8-6 and Seattle beat Milwaukee 3-2.

The Yankee Stadium crowd was in an uproar as Torrez and Guidry matched zeroes for seven innings. Boston finally broke through for a run against Guidry in the eighth on singles by Bob Montgomery, Burleson and rookie Larry Wolfe. Then Jim Rice homered in the ninth off reliever Ron Davis. Third baseman Butch Hobson kicked away a potential double-play ball to allow the Yankees' two unearned runs in the bottom of the ninth.

"That was a bad break," Torrez said. "But we're too professional to let that bother us."

Rangers 5, A's 3

A similar mistake bothered the A's.

After Oscar Gamble and Pat Putnam singled off Keough in the third inning, Eric Soderholm hit a potential double-play grounder at Oakland third baseman Wayne Gross. But he let it get away for an error and, with the bases loaded, Billy Sample broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run single to left. Larvell Blanks hit a pair of sacrifice flies for two of the Rangers' other runs as Texas took a one-game lead in the West Division.

Orioles 6-4, Blue Jays 1-0

Home runs by Doug DeCinces and Lee May in the opener supported Scott McGregor's seven-hitter, then Steve Stone and Don Stanhouse combined for a four-hitter while seldom-used Pat Kelly and John Lowenstein homered in the nightcap of the Orioles' twinbill sweep.

"It doesn't matter who's in there when we're playing like this," coach Frank Robinson said after the Orioles, winners in 20 of their last 23 games, widened their Eastern lead to 4½ games over Boston.

Poor Return For Jackson

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "I stunk, but I did the best I could," Reggie Jackson said after returning to the baseball wars Friday night.

It wasn't a particularly auspicious return — Reggie went 0-for-6 and struck out four times in the New York Yankees' 13-inning 3-2 loss to the Boston Red Sox — and he only got to talk to Manager Billy Martin for a few seconds. But at least Jackson was off the disabled list and doing his thing, which is swinging a bat.

The bases were empty the first three times Jackson came up against Mike Torrez. He struck out twice, but in the seventh inning he sent center fielder Fred Lynn to the wall for his drive.

"I thought it was gone," he said. "It was one of the best breaking balls he threw all night and I was looking for it, but I swung too quick and hit on top of the ball. All night long I was getting the bat through the strike zone too quickly."

Jackson, who was the Yankees' designated hitter, was fanned by Torrez with runners at first and second and none out in the ninth inning. He fouled to the catcher against Bill Campbell following a lead-off single in the 11th and looked at a third strike from Dick Drago leading off the 13th.

"I didn't even get a chance to test my leg tonight," said Jackson, who was sidelined for almost a month by a slight muscle tear between the calf and Achilles tendon on his left leg.

"I'm not especially discouraged," he said. "I hadn't seen any breaking pitches and the guy made some good ones on me. The first couple of times I felt strong as a bull ... strong as an ox, but I was too anxious. I might hit before the year's over, don't you think?"

The long-awaited meeting with Martin never came off. After taking nine minutes of batting practice 2½ hours before the game — he had a definite limp and said his leg was "a little tired" — Jackson went into Martin's office and pronounced himself ready as DH. He was out in a few seconds and was promply surrounded by the media..

Giant Killers Fall By Wayside

By WINSOR DOBBIN
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — As quickly as this remarkable Wimbledon can produce a new giant-killer, so another is consigned to the role of yesterday's hero.

Just six of the 16 men's seeds remained in the singles after Friday's third round, but most of the players who caused upsets earlier in the week are gone and forgotten.

Surprise has followed surprise with increasing momentum, but few of the sensations have maintained their form.

Tim Wilkison, who ousted Guillermo Vilas Thursday, went the way of earlier giant-killers Chris Kachel (over Arthur Ashe in the first round) and John Sadri (over Jose Higueras in the second) when he lost in straight sets to Tom Okker, a Dutchman 16 years his senior.

Okker beat the 19-year-old from Shelby, N.C., 7-5, 7-5, 6-3.

But as Wilkison and Sadri (who was beaten 6-0, 7-5, 7-6, 6-2 by Sandy Mayer) bowed out, Brad Drewett, Brian Teacher and Gene Mayer came roaring into the headlines.

They accounted for the three seeds beaten Friday — No. 8 Victor Pecci of Paraguay, No. 9 Brian Gottfried of the United States and No. 11 John Alexander of Australia.

Meanwhile, the three top seeds in men's singles won convincingly.

Defending champion Borg, apparently unhampered by his much publicized leg injury, beat American Hank Pfister 6-4, 6-1, 6-3. John McEnroe beat Tom Gullikson 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 while Jimmy Connors defeated Johan Kriek of South Africa 6-4, 6-1, 7-6.

In the more predictable women's draw, defending champion Martina Navratilova beat Rosie Casals 6-3, 6-3 while second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd downed Kathy May Teacher 6-4, 6-3. Third-seeded Australian Evonne Cawley beat compatriot Cynthia Doerner 7-5, 6-2, and 16-year-old Tracy Austin passed fellow American Bettyann Stuart 6-2, 6-3.

Drewett, a 20-year-old Australian from Sydney, scored the biggest upset by beating Pecci 4-6, 7-6, 7-6, 6-4. It was only a few weeks ago that Pecci was playing the spoiler in big tournaments.

JOINT EFFORT — John Moore of Greenville, a teacher at North Pitt High School, and 10-year-old Reginald Johnson of Greenville display a 30 pound German carp caught in the Tar River at Yankee Hall, about mid-day Thursday. Young Johnson hooked the almost-three-feet-long carp and Moore landed the fish about 30 minutes later. The carp was hooked and landed on spinning tackle with 12-pound test line using night crawler bait in the middle of the river. Along with the carp the pair landed seven catfish and one white perch in a matter of about an hour. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Pirates Make Bid With Win

BY KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

He wasn't even upset by the final score, 6-5 in favor of the Pirates with the aid of Robinson's solo blast in the three-run first inning.

In other National League action, Philadelphia defeated St. Louis 8-7 in the opener of a two-night doubleheader before the Cardinals came back to take the second game 7-1; Atlanta whipped Los Angeles 5-2; Houston turned back San Diego 4-1 and San Francisco beat Cincinnati 6-4. The New York-Chicago game was postponed by rain.

The Pirates scored on an RBI single by Tim Foli and Robinson later added his 18th homer for the second run after a double play cleared the bases. Lee Lacy followed with another homer.

"This definitely could be the start of something big," Lacy said after the second-place Pirates moved to within 5½ games of first-place Montreal in the NL East.

Phillies 8-1, Cardinals 7-7

Greg Luzinski had four hits and drove in four runs to lead Philadelphia past St. Louis in the opener of their doubleheader. Luzinski hit a two-run single in the first inning and accounted for all three Phils runs in the decisive sixth when he hit a two-run triple and scored on Garry Maddox's sacrifice fly.

Tony Scott and Keith Hernandez knocked in two runs apiece and Pete Vuckovich hurled seven strong innings to help the Cardinals win the second game. Vuckovich allowed an unearned run in the first, then blanked the Phils six innings before giving way to George Frazier.

Braves 5, Dodgers 2

Jerry Royster's three-run double in the eighth inning broke a 2-2 tie and enabled Atlanta to defeat Los Angeles. After the Braves took a 2-0 lead, Ron Cey slugged a two-run homer in the seventh for a tie.

Astros 4, Padres 1

Terry Puhl hit a solo homer and Rafael Landestoy doubled in two runs to help Joaquin Andujar post his ninth victory of the year in Houston's victory over San Diego.

Andujar, 9-4, scattered seven hits while striking out four and walked two batters. It was Andujar's sixth complete game in nine starts. San Diego starter Gaylord Perry, 7-6, surrendered four runs, two of them unearned, through eight innings to get the loss.

Giants 6, Reds 4

Mike Ivie and Jack Clark belted run-scoring singles in the bottom of the eighth inning as San Francisco broke a 4-4 tie to beat Cincinnati. Mike Sadek started the winning rally with a one-out single off reliever Manny Sarmiento. Larry Herndon singled before Bill North hit into a forceout at second base, with runners at first and third. Ivie and Clark added run-scoring hits, making ex-Cincinnati reliever Pedro Borbon, 3-2, a winner in his San Francisco debut.

Two Appointed To Pitt S-W District

A.B. COFFEY

A. G. HICKS

Two changes in the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District have recently taken place, with Albert B. Coffey named district conservationist, and A. D. Hicks named district supervisor.

Coffey succeeds Roy Beck in the position of district conservationist. Hicks will replace Robert Halstead as supervisor.

Coffey, a Blowing Rock native, received his bachelor's degree in forestry management from North Carolina State University. He began working with the SCS in 1968, but was called away for a three-year tour in the U. S. Navy, where he served as gunnery officer on the U. S. Pawcatuck and 1st Lieutenant on the U. S. S. Dewey. He resumed his SCS duties as district conservationist for Lenior County, then served in Taylorsville, Rocky Mount, Va., and the Charlotte-Mecklenburg County districts.

Married to the former Susan Garrard of High Point, the couple has two children, Celia, 8, and Heath, 4.

Hicks, a Wilson native, has lived in Grifton for the past ten years. He works as a land surveyor.

Hicks and his wife, Nellie, have two children, David and April. Hicks is a member of the Greenville Moose Lodge.

Utilities Bill Surprises For Ayden Residents

AYDEN — When Ayden citizens receive their bills this weekend for public utilities, some may be extremely pleased with a low bill, with others sure to be upset with what seems to be an unduly large utilities charge.

The reason? Ayden has now changed its meter reading route for the first time in several years, in an effort to get consistant route readings.

Also effective in this month's billing is a one cent per kilowatt raise in electrical use, with a flat rate raise in water rates from $3 to $4. Sewer rates were raised from $1.19 to $1.25. The Ayden Town Board of Commissioners approved the raises during a June 11 meeting.

The raises, compounded with higher summer rate schedules for electricity and the increasing fossil fuel cost, along with the changes in the meter reading routes, have all moved toward giving some Ayden citizens a big headache.

"We're trying to be more consistent in our meter readings," said Ralph Ford, Ayden's Town Clerk. "The way we have been reading, we would read some streets to a certain point, then go up the other side of the street."

"Neighbors are going to compare bills," said Ford. "When one establishment is read one day, then the one beside it read two weeks afterwards, there's no way the bills are going to be the same, not with hot and cold spells."

"We're trying to read areas now straight through so there will be less consumption confusion," Ford continued. "We'e have to set up account numbers, leaving space for areas where there has been projected growth."

Ford noted that the town has grown since he began his position seven years ago, pointing out tht when he came to Ayden, only one meter reader was employed by the town. Now, there are three.

With the change in the meter reading routes, some Ayden citizens will receive billing for only two weeks of service. Some, however, will receive billing for six weeks' service as a result of the change.

"There's no such thing as a good time to do this sort of thing," said Ford of the reading route change. "We've been working on this for three months and had planned to have it around May or June, before summer rates came into effect. We knew this would cause lots of controversy, no matter when it took place."

Carolina Telephone List Rate Reductions, And Refunds Due

Carolina Telephone reported that its Pitt County area customers wil see a 40 or 45 cents per month basic local rate reduction in their June bills, and some customners will get other savings.

In addition, the company said that $18.96 will be deducted from each customer's June bill per telephone line as a one-time refund.

The basic local rate reduction and rebate were made possible by an April increase in statewide long distance rates requested by Southern Bell and authorized by the N.C. Utilities Commission for all state telephone companies.

In addition to the rate reduction and rebate, zone charges for rural customers are eliminated on two and four-party lines and reduced on one-party lines; extension phone rates are reduced by 20 cents per month for residence and 75 cents per month for businesses; color charges are eliminated, and business toll terminal rates are reduced by 50 percent.

Exchanges in which customers are getting the 40 cents reduction in the area include Bethel, Grifton, Farmville, and Greenville. Smaller exchanges in which customers are getting the 45 cents reduction in the area include Snow Hill and Fountain.

Carolina Telephone said the rebate will offset the higher instate long distance rates collected by the company since April 3, plus interest.

In an article published by "The Daily Reflector" on June 18, it was stated that Ayden residential customers on one, two and four-party lines will get a net increase of 35 cents per month. The statement should have indicted that two and four-party customers will get a 15 cents per month local rate cut. Businesses, one-party customers, who would have gotten a larger increase had it not been for the rate reduction, will get a net rate increase of 35 cents per month.

Named To Academy

Greenville area native John Mayo has been named to the National Academy of Engineers.

The Academy is an elite group of engineers added to in small numbers each year from throughout the world. This year, 99 were selected from the United States, and there were 18 foreign associates. Members are expected to participate in engineering efforts which benefit the country as a whole outside their own work enviroment.

Mayo is an executive vice president with Bell Laboratories in Murray Hill, N. J. He is the son of Mrs. W. L. Mayo of E. Ninth Street, Greenville.

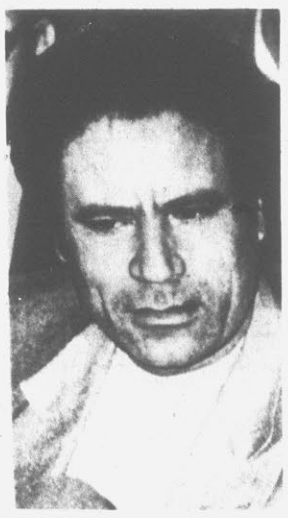

A Greenville High School graduate, he attended East Carolina Teachers College and got his B. A., M. A., and Ph. D. degrees from North Carolina State College, the latter in 1955. He has worked for Bell since he left school.

He and his wife, Lucille, have four children, Mark, David, Nancy, and Lynn.

Federal Funds For Pitt Schools

Congressman Walter B. Jones today announced approval by the Office of Education, HEW, of the application of the Pitt County Schools for federal assistance for current expenditures under Title I of Public Law 874 as amended which provides financial assistance for schools in federally affected areas.

An amount of $13,345.96 has been certified for immediate payment out of the tentative entitlement of $37,719.96 for fiscal year 1979.

OIL PLANS — Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy was quoted as saying in an interview published Friday he plans to shut off his country's oil exports for at least two years and is urging other Arab oil producers to do the same. The interview was conducted by the Damascus correspondent of the Paris-based Arabic weekly Al-Mustaqba. (AP Laserphoto)

Ayden Budget Is Approved

AYDEN — The Ayden Town Board of Commissioners adopted a budget Monday, totaling $3,247,430 for the coming year, maintaining its present tax rate of 73 cents per hundred dollars.

According to Town Clerk Ralph Ford, the electrical section of the new budget totaled $2,178,650, the most costly item in the list.

"This figure includes money for our normal operations, our purchase of power from the Greenville Utilities, our billing and receiving department, our meter readers, special services and contingency funds," said Ford.

To keep fishhooks from rusting when not in use, stick them in a cork and store the cork in a jar of baking soda.

Eight States Allow Camera In Court

By BRENDA MOONEY
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — America's television viewers have witnessed the assassination of Lee Harvey Oswald, the blood and gore of the Vietnam War and, more recently, the horror of an American newsman's murder in Nicaragua. Now they can look in on another kind of real life-and-death drama in some states — murder trials.

More and more states are allowing television coverage of courtroom proceedings. Florida, Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee in the Southeast are among the eight states nationwide that have altered judicial codes to allow the unprecented peek into justice at work.

The lurid sex-murder trial of Theodore Bundy began last week in Florida, and dozens of television reporters from across the nation staked out space for cameras in the Miami courtroom. Bundy is charged in the slayings of two Florida State University coeds and the beatings of three others.

Florida, which now has one of the most liberal camera-in-the-courtroom laws in the nation, also was the site of the televised murder trial of Ronald Zamora, the Miami Beach teen-ager convicted of killing an 83-year-old neighbor. Zamora, ironically, claimed that excessive violence on television provoked the crime.

Opponents of televised court cases include the American Bar Association and some civil rights attorneys, including two of Georgia's best-known trial lawyers.

"It's a joke. Why should we participate in their charade?" said Millard Farmer, the Georgia death row lawyer whose frequent clashes with judges led to a ruling forbidding him to represent Bundy in the Florida case. "The judges look very fair when they are sitting on the bench, but if only the television viewer could walk behind that and see what they really support.

"The viewer will be thinking how fair that judge is being or that prosecutor is being. Two days earlier, the judge says I can't see you about the trial now because I'm on my way to my club that excludes blacks."

Bobby Hill, a veteran state representative involved often in capital punishment cases, said he is "opposed to making a circus out of legitimate trials."

Hill said he also fears judges or district attorneys "knowing they are on camera running for re-election during a trial for one's life, liberty or property."

Chief Justice H.E. Nichols of the Georgia Supreme Court presents another side of the issue.

"It's always been my idea that the courts belong to the people, but the average person out there doesn't even know there is a Supreme Court, much less who's on it," Nichols said.

Georgia has televised its share of sensational cases, including the 1978 obscenity trial of Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt, who was shot and wounded on his way back to a Gwinnett County courthouse.

Georgia's first broadcast of a murder trial occurred in Columbus in 1977. During that trial, William Anthony Brooks was sentenced to the electric chair in the rape-murder of a church choir director, Carol Jeannine Galloway, 23.

"Strangely, the initiative for court coverage has come from the court itself in most cases," said Jack Bryant, the executive producer at Atlanta's CBS affiliate, WAGA-TV.

Bryant said the use of cameras "does not restrict or enhance our coverage of trials. Our interest in the trial is not generated solely by the acceptance of cameras in the courtroom."

Louisiana's chief advocate of broadcasting trials is state district Judge Guy Humphries of Alexandria. "I think every complaint against cameras in the courtroom is totally unfounded," he said.

Elsewhere, chief justices have mounted strong opposition. In January, Family Court Judge Harold Boulware of South Carolina allowed a television crew filming a child abuse documentary into his courtroom.

Chief Justice J. Woodrew Lewis of the South Carolina Supreme Court said Boulware violated the high court's standing rule against cameras in the courtroom. No formal action was taken but Boulware apologized.

Lewis and Chief Justice Susie Sharp of North Carolina are considered two of the most steadfast opponents. Justice Sharp is scheduled to retire in August. Her proposed replacement, Justice Joseph Branch, opposes but is willing to allow experimentation with televising court proceedings.

In Georgia, both parties in a case must consent to the camera coverage.

Charlie Webb, a spokesman for Georgia's highest court, said the courts get few requests for coverage and stations are seldom turned down when they want to televise a case.

"One reason they don't come out is that oral argument in the Supreme Court, for example, is dreadfully dull," Webb said.

But when they do want to set up cameras, he said, the required consent from attorneys on both sides is usually easy to get.

"Most attorneys see this as a possible opportunity to allow people to get a better look at what goes on in the courtroom," he said.

There are 53 opera companies in West Germany.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Can Cured Tubercular Suffer Relapse?

My daughter is engaged to a lovely young man. Our only concern is that he had mild tuberculosis about six years ago. He has been completely cured. But we worry that the condition might come back. Is it safe for her to marry him? Could she become infected? — Mrs. C.J., Va.

Dear Mrs. J.:

Since your future son-in-law has been completely well for so many years, the chances are great that he will not have a recurrence of tuberculosis. Nevertheless, it is wise that all cured patients be under the supervision of a doctor so that any new flare-up can be spotted immediately, treated intensively and cured completely.

His own doctor has undoubtedly taken repeated X-rays and done regular sputum tests in order to be certain that no residual tubercular infection is present.

It is most desirable that your daughter and her fiance have a combined consu tation. Only in this way can all their questions be clarified thus giving them the assurance that is so essential before embarking on marriage. They will, I am sure, want to know if the eventual children born in the family will be exposed to any greater risk than other children. Your daughter will learn, too, that since her husband is free of the infection, there is no possibility of her developing tuberculosis.

It must be understood that tuberculosis is not an inherited disease. This was a mistaken notion years ago because the infection so often occurred in more than one person in a family. The explanation for this, of course, is that tuberculosis is contagious. Families that lived in close quarters, especially those in underprivileged and undernourished circumstances, passed this infectious disease on from one person to another.

It is also a mistake to believe that this disease has been wiped out completely. In some parts of the world tuberculosis is still a threat to health and life.

It is true that the early recognition of tuberculosis and the active treatment that is available today with antibiotics and chemicals have markedly diminished the severity of the disease, its complications and duration.

The health food store where I shop touts zinc as a cure for my poor sense of smell. Is there any truth to this claim? — Miss R. O'M., Iowa.

Dear Miss O'M.:

For some unexplained reason, zinc has captured the imagination of many people interested in nutrition. When used alone or with other mineral and vitamin combinations, it has even greater attraction for some people.

Zinc is an essential nutrient. It is widely and readily available in a well-balanced diet. It is rare that supplemental zinc intake is needed, unless there is a known deficiency. This may occur in a few hereditary skin disorders. Then supplementary zinc is recommended.

The use of zinc to promote better smell and taste has thus far been disappointing. Unusually large doses of zinc may be hazardous.

Boaters Burning Much Gas

By JOHN W. FRECE

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — The gasoline crunch or no, if yachtsmen who sail Chesapeake Bay are any indication, the nation's powerboat operators are hitting the nation's waterways like there is no tomorrow.

"We're trying to use the boat as much as possible before the gas runs out," said Steve Nips as his boat pulled noisily away from a marina in Annapolis, which draws boaters from up and down the East Coast.

Lad Hakes of the U.S. Coast Guard's Washington office said periodic checks with the Coast Guard's 10 regional offices in the continental U.S. indicate no decline in boating activity.

And Jeff Napier, who monitors what happens to the nation's nearly 11.3 million pleasure boats for the Boating Industry Association in Chicago, said gasoline supplies for boats are "tight but adequate."

According to Napier, the problem is twofold: Is there gas available for the boats? And, is there enough available for the cars that pull the nation's 4.5 million boat trailers?

"That's probably the bigger part of the problem," he said. "People either do have problems or they are afraid they will have problems and will stay home — especially on Sundays."

He said marinas around the country have plenty of gasoline — so far.

"By and large, the concern is greater than the actual problem," he said.

Pleasure boats last year used less than one-half of 1 percent of all gasoline consumed in the United States, Napier said. Boats used about 900 million gallons of gasoline last year and this year's consumption probably will be no less.

In Maryland, Edward Cissel sipped a beer as he sat on the bridge of his 42-foot yacht, the Miss Kris, and said, "I don't think the price of gas — what it is now — has affected anybody who has a boat."

But Cissel, who runs a marine sales business in Annapolis, concedes that while gasoline prices may not have stopped his voyages aboard Miss Kris, they have shortened them.

A trip to St. Michael's, 25 nautical miles across the Chesapeake Bay, used to be a regular cruise for Cissel. But now that it costs him nearly $200 to fill his yacht's 200-gallon tank, he thinks twice about taking such cruises, which would cost about $120 in fuel for a round trip.

Sid French, who for the last 12 years has owned the Oak Grove Marina, where Cissel keeps his yacht, said the main effect of the gasoline shortage so far has been on those with boats on trailers who need fuel for their cars.

"That traffic has really died off," he said. "People are afraid they'll waste a tank of gas getting here and not be able to get gas for their boat."

French said his marina has had no trouble getting gasoline for its 5,000-gallon tank and power boat owners seem undeterred by prices that have shot up an average of two cents every week for the last two months.

"I haven't seen the price scare anybody yet," he said.

Don Walker, who owns a small powerboat dealership next door to French's marina, said 1979 is shaping up as the second best year for boat sales in his dozen years in the business.

"If a man wants to play in this country, the way it's geared, he'll play," Walker said.

At nearby Wilkins Yacht Sales Inc., the boats are so expensive that the cost of gasoline is virtually insignificant to those who can afford to buy them.

"The money problem doesn't bother them much, or the cost of the fuel — just availability," said Wilkins' salesman Bernie Moyer, who this month found buyers for two 53-foot Hatteras yachts priced at about $300,000 apiece.

"No matter how you figure it, a boat is a gasoline hog," the report said.

Napier said, however, some boats average as little as 62 gallons a year and that, nationally, the amount of gasoline used by power pleasure boats in a year would only half fill all the cars and trucks in the United States one time.

Dr. Irons Retires: Will Be Consultant

BY GEORGE A. THREEWITTS
ECU News Bureau

"I am excited," says Dr. Malene Irons, a Greenville physician who first organized and directed the East Carolina University Developmental Evaluation Clinic for 15 years and whose retirement from that job and a new appointment as a part-time consultant to the ECU School of Medicine begins today.

"I am excited about the new doctors that are coming to Greenville and the new abilities that we are able to use. I am excited about what the medical school is doing and what it can do," she says.

And speaking of contributions, Dr. Irons herself has made many. In fact, she is a pioneer, being the first woman doctor in Greenville in 1947 and later, in 1964, given the responsibility for establishing the DEC which was a forerunner of widespread efforts to bring better child health care to this region.

"In these 15 years that I have been here, I have been excited in that I think our clinic has improved in its ability to reach and to serve people," she said.

At present, the clinic caters to developmentally handicapped children between the ages of two and 12 years. It works with such problems as mental retardation, speech, hearing and vision difficulties, motor difficulties of cerebral palsy, epilepsy, etc. and slowness in developing some skills.

The staff includes physicians, psychologists, social workers, clinical nursing associates and consultant specialists who now serve a seven county area.

In its early years the clinic served 27 eastern counties. Dr. Irons and her staff were instrumental in the establishment of clinics in Elizabeth City, Rocky Mount and New Bern, all of which are now fully operational and serving their immediate area.

Dr. Irons said the need for the clinic had been talked about throughout the state.

"There was a need for a multidisciplined clinic that could reach a special group of children that no other type of clinic could reach."

In October of 1964, an agreement between the State Board of Health and East Carolina was finalized and the clinic was established in Greenville. Dr. Irons was named as its medical director and administrator-in-chief.

Ten years later, in honor of Dr. Irons' impact and leadership, ECU named the clinic The Malene G. Irons Developmental Evaluation Clinic.

"Malene Irons was one of the first to recognize the unmet health needs of children in eastern North Carolina, and she worked diligently and effectively to provide services to meet their needs" says Dr. Edwin Monroe, associate dean of the ECU School of Medicine and acting vice chancellor for Health Affairs.

"Dr. Malene, as she is known to the thousands of parents and children who have benefitted from the care, is loved and respected by everyone. The university and our community of eastern North Carolina are most grateful for all she had done and will do to improve health services for our people."

Dr. Monroe said that Dr. Irons is very modest about her accomplishments.

"Few people outside her immediate family are aware that earlier this month, Malene received the Governor's Award for distinguished meritorious service to the people and the state of North Carolina," he said.

"She richly deserves this recognition."

Dr. Irons graduated from east Carolina College in 1935 majoring in science and English. She was accepted at the Medical College of Virginia in 1937 and completed the MD degree there in 1941.

Following an internship and a residency in pediatrics in Richmond, she and her husband, Dr. C. Fred Irons, whom she had met during medical school and had married in June 1939, settled in Greenville.

"We wanted to live in either North Carolina or Virginia. I was particularly fond of Greenville because I had gone to school here and my father had been pastor of Jarvis Church.

"Dr. K.B. Pace, Dr. John Winstead and Dr. Walter Pott, who were practicing in Greenville, said we were needed and that we would make a living from the first day. They were right!"

Her husband began private practice and joined the East Carolina staff as director of the Infirmary, and she set up her practice in a small office over Key Brown's (now Beddingfields') Drug Store.

"I was so surprised. I must have been needed because I was busy from the first week."

"It took some time for other doctors to refer (their cases) but they seemed to appreciate my being here. In three years time, I felt as much at home working with the male doctors as if I had been here much longer and women doctors had been more frequent.

"I think that women who do their jobs well, really have no trouble being accepted," she added.

Her responsibilities as a physician were quickly extended by the birth of three sons. They were: Thomas in 1947, now a pediatrician in Raleigh; Ben in 1949, an assistant attorney general in the Department of Education and Corrections; and Fred in 1951, who is currently pursuing post graduate training in child psychiatry.

She says that it was her children that led her to the DEC in 1964.

"I had to have regular hours. With teenage children you have to be available. You cannot be tied up. You don't have to be with them but you have to be available."

In commenting on the changes that have occurred in Greenville and at ECU, she noted that there have been many. For example, there were less than 2,000 students enrolled when she first began her practice in 1947; Greenville had a small hospital and comparatively few doctors.

The plan for Greenville to become a regional health care center "is becoming reality," she said. "This is great."

Dr. Irons' future plans include working with the ECU School of Medicine. She and her twin sister, Dr. Isa Grant of Raleigh who is also retiring this year as Assistant State Health Director for Local Services, are joining the medical school as public health consultants.

"We will meet with clinicians, health department people and consumers to get their ideas on how the medical school can help serve the health needs of North Carolina."

Dr. William Laupus, dean of the School of Medicine since 1975, says that Dr. Irons' achievements were known to him long before he moved to Greenville.

"I am very pleased that Malene and her sister, Isa, have agreed to work part-time with the medical school and to make their remarkable abilities and energies available to us. Their knowledge of the region, its physicians and other health care resources will be of great value as the medical school moves ahead in its community involvements," he said.

"A woman that has a good husband has a special joy and a glory because he understands and appreciates what she is wanting to do and he is able to support and help. That makes all of her work better work," she said.

The couple celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary on June 10.

ECU Researchers Study Vaccine For Meningitis

By GEORGETTE HEDRICK
ECU Medical Writer

Investigators at the East Carolina University School of Medicine are exploring alternatives for a new vaccine against Hemophilus influenzae, the major cause of spinal meningitis and other serious infections in children.

Dr. Dan M. Granoff, associate professor of pediatrics and director of pediatric infectious diseases, says the goal of the project is to study various components of the bacterial cell wall which may stimulate immunity in very young children. The study is funded by a three-year, $158,000 grant from the National Institutes of Allergy and Infectious Disease.

Meningitis, an inflammation of the coverings of the brain and spinal cord, may affect people of all ages but is more common in children two-months to five-years-old. Each year, the disease strikes 15,000 to 20,000 children in the U.S.

Earlier research resulted in the development of an unsatisfactory vaccine from the "capsule" surrounding the bacteria. (Some of the field tests on that vaccine were conducted in Mecklenburg County, N.C.)

"The vaccine worked well in adults and older children, but unfortunately, it failed to provide immunity in the under 18 to 24-month-old group that gets the most infections," Granoff said during a recent interview. "Most adults already are immune to the disease not because they have been infected with this particular ageny, but because their bodies have been in contact with other bacteria with closely related structures."

The structure of the bacteria will come under close inspection by Granoff and his colleagues during the study. The project will focus on antibodies which work against surface components of the bacteria other than the capsule. The other units may ba capable of stimulating antibodies in young children who fail to respond to the capsular vaccine, Granoff said.

"We plan to do a systematic study of the outer cell membrane of the organism to try to define, chemically and immunologically, the surface components of the bacteria that appear to be important in immunity," he said. "Chemical methods will be used to separate the cell wall into its proteins and other constitutents to see if any of them show potential for development into a vaccine."

He noted that many vaccines useful in young infants are primarily composed of proteins.

What is needed to prevent the disease is an effective immunization program. "In other childhood diseases — polio, tetanus and whooping cough — we never developed curgs, but we do control these diseases with vaccines. We need that control for spinal meningitis because advanced technology and treatment are not effective in reducing the spread of infection or the resulting disabilities," said Granoff.

Mother And Daughter Wear Matching Mortarboards

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Daughters frequently follow in their mothers' footsteps, but few follow as closely as Mary Jane Johnson did when she walked up to receive her bachelor's degree from Flagler College here.

Since graduates march to the podium in alphabetical order, Mary Jane was only a few footsteps behind her mother, Derry Johnson, who also received a bachelor's degree.

In a way, though, Derry was following Mary Jane, since the daughter was the first to enroll in the coeducational liberal arts college.

Later Mrs. Johnson, 43, became one of the growing number of students who begin, or continue, their college education after they reach 35. Nationally, the number of students over 35 attending four-year colleges has more than doubled since 1965 from 5 percent to over 11 percent of total student enrollment.

For her mother, there was a gap of some 20 years between high school and college — a gap filled with motherhood and homemaking as she raised Mary Jane, 22, Alexander, 23, and Amy, 24.

Following the death of her husband in 1968, Mrs. Johnson decided to return to books and study.

"Reading's always been my favorite pastime," she said. "I disliked coming into areas I didn't know anything about."

Mrs. Johnson received an AA degree from a community college in 1970. Later, Mary Jane was so enthusiastic about Flagler College her mother decided to transfer there, too.

Like her daughter, Mrs. Johnson was an English major, but the similarity does not end there. They both achieved 3.7 grade point average, out of a possible 4.0, and were listed repeatedly on the Dean's List.

Both mother and daughter worked their way through school with a variety of jobs, such as waitressing, clerking in motels and bartending.

"And we did not have much social life for two years," Mrs. Johnson said.

What they did have was the cottage they had always wanted on the beach, some 15 miles south of St. Augustine.

Mrs. Johnson sees one of the benefits of returning to school at her age as having more in common with her children's generation, but Mary Jane said her mother sometimes slipped and called college students "the children."

"One may be fairly cynical by the age of 40, but just as babies reintroduces you to something, so does going back to school," Mrs. Johnson said.

Sometimes Mary Jane and Derry act more like college roommates than mother and daughter.

"We have a good time," Mary Jane said. "We agreed when we moved in together we would share the responsibility half and half, and share the household duties."

In spite of their high academic achievement, graduate school is not the next step for either mother or daughter.

She wants to be a newspaper reporter. A journalism minor, she served as managing editor of the college newspaper during her senior year.

Her mother's career plans are still vague. First there will be more undergraduate classes since she feels she has not finished that portion of her education, then the travel that's been postponed for years.

The Rev. Henry Gregory officiated, assisted by the Rev. Aaron Moore. Musicians were Dr. Odell Hobbs of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Betty Hines of Greenville. Soloists were Miss Debra Davis of Council and Mrs. Wanda McAllister of Greenville. Selections included, "If," "I Love You Truly," "Lost Inside of You," "You Light Up My Life," "The Lord's Prayer," and "Entreat Me Not to Leave Thee."

The chuch altar was accented with a 10-branch candelabra with tapers and daisies. Greenery and flowers marked pews.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white silk organza over white peau de soie designed with a high neckline, encircled with cluny lace. The fitted empire bodice featured a sheer yoke outlined with cluny lace, which also accented the full bishop sleeves. The full A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were enhanced by a double ruffle flounce falling from rows of cluny lace. She wore a six-layered veil with lace appliques around the edge and pearl earrings. She carried a colonial bouquet of white daisies and chrysanthemums centered with a corsage of white orchids and baby's breath.

Miss Yvonne Grant of Wilmington, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Ila P. Boone of Kinston was matron of honor. They wore matching formal gowns of melon floral print, featuring blouson bodices, spaghetti straps and open butterfly sleeves. They carried daisy nosegays.

The mother of the bride wore a green chiffon formal length gown with a sheer knit cape and white daisy corsage. The mother of the bridegroom selected a blue qiana formal gown with a corsage of white daisies. Margie Jones and Gloria McDowell, cousins of the bride, presided at the bride's book.

MRS. LEON WILKINS

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony. Mrs. Helen B. Brown of Durham headed the receiving line and introduced guests. The refreshment table was covered with a white linen cloth edged in lace and centered with a arrangement of gladioli. Mrs. Louise Tyson of Elizabethtown served cake and Mrs. Betty Pittman of Clarkton served punch.

The bride is a graduate of North Carolina Central University and is employed by the Tarboro City Schools. The bridegroom is staff sargeant in the U. S. Air Force, stationed in Semback, Germany.

The mother of the bridegroom entertained with a rehearsal dinner. The couple chose this time to present gifts to their attendants. A wedding breakfast was held at the Dowless Restaurant, Clarkton, honoring the wedding party.

After a wedding trip to Atlanta, Ga., the couple will reside in Greenville.

Couple Marries In Formal Ceremony

Miss Jamie Wawanna Lawson became the bride of Thomas Stewart Parsons in a formal ceremony at St. Peter's Catholic Church Saturday at 4 p.m. The Rev. John Paul Byron officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Millard Lawson of Clinton, Tenn., and Mrs. Norma Lawson of Knoxville, Tenn. The bridegroom is the son of Lt. Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Thomas E. Parsons of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was presented on the organ by Mrs. Hatti Pignani and Mrs. Mary Muzzarelli sang "For Baby."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a candlelight colored formal gown of silk qiana with a Victorian neckline and yoke of embroidered alencon lace embellished with seed pearl embroidery over a background of English net. The full sleeves carried the matching lace and pearl motif. The full A-line skirt draped over the waistline into a full cathedral train with matching lace and pearls.

The fingertip length mantilla framed her face with alencon lace embellished with seed pearls. She carried a nosegay of red sweetheart roses mixed with white daisies and baby's breath.

Mrs. Roberta L. Walker of Taylor, Mich., sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor and Miss Yasmin Lawson of Knoxville, Tenn., was bridesmaid. Both were dressed identically in dusty blue formal length gowns of polyester knit. The gowns featured an empire bodice with a low V-neckline and spaghetti straps. A flower accented the ruffle trim down the front of the gown. They carried nosegays of white daisies and mixed carnations tied with rainbow colored ribbon.

Miss Heather Looney of Powell, Tenn., was flower girl. She wore a formal gown of light blue and white dotted swiss with a ruffled round yoke. Lace trim accented the neckline and sleeves. She carried a basket filled with summer flowers tied with rainbow colored ribbon.

Charles Ferguson of Knoxville, Tenn., was best man. Eugene Parsons, brother of the bridegroom, and Cicero Looney, brother-in-law of the bride, were ushers. Brian Parish of New Bern was ring bearer.

The mothers of the bridal couple and Mrs. Roberta Brooks, grandmother of the bridegroom, were remembered with corsages of daisies and miniature carnations in colors matching their attire.

Church altar vases were filled with snapdragons, daisies, pom pons and baby's breath. The altar entrance was outlined with pots of yellow chrysanthemums. Pews were marked with white satin bows.

After the ceremony, the bridegroom's parents entertained at a reception at their home. The rehearsal dinner was given by the family of the bridegroom at the Three Steers Friday night.

After a wedding trip to the Outer Banks, the couple will live in Knoxville, Tenn., where the bridegroom attends a program in computer science at the University of Tennessee.

ARTICHOKE SQUARES

Tangy and ingenious!

- 2 jars (each 6 ounces) marinated artichoke hearts
- ½ medium onion, minced
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 4 large eggs
- ¼ cup fine dry breadcrumbs
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon each dried oregano, pepper and Tabasco sauce
- ½ pound natural sharp cheddar cheese, grated
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley

Grease a 10 by 6 by 1¾-inch baking dish with 2 teaspoons butter. Into a small skillet drain marinade from 1 jar of the artichoke hearts; add onion and garlic and cook gently until onion is transparent. Drain marinade from other jar of artichokes, refrigerating marinade for use as a salad dressing. Finely chop artichokes from both jars. In a medium bowl beat eggs lightly; stir in crumbs and seasonings, then cheese, parsley, chopped artichokes and onion-garlic. Pour into prepared baking dish. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until center feels firm to the touch — about 30 minutes. Remove from oven and let stand 15 minutes before cutting into 1-inch squares. Serve warm or at room temperature. Makes 72. Adapted from "With Love From Your Kitchen" by Diana and Paul von Welanetz (Tarcher-Hawthorn).

Chicken Passes Orange Juice

NEW YORK (UPI) — In 1978 for the first time chicken passed orange juice as the leading frozen food item in retail sales. The National Broiler Council says more frozen, pre-cooked, breaded, cut-up chicken was sold last year than frozen orange juice concentrate, which has been the leader for years.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My son, the school teacher, has just begun a relationship I have long dreaded.

He has a roommate.

Normally, I would keep silent, but I feel strongly about it and pointed out that this is my house and I have certain rules regarding these things.

He countered with his usual logic, "If it bothers you, just keep the door closed."

I almost wish we were talking about a girl.

"Killer" is a four-foot king snake that he bought for his class to "keep the kids from watching the clock." That's like dating Dracula to get your mind off your low blood pressure problem.

When school ended, he smuggled it into his room thinking it would never be discovered under the clutter. Knowing I was upset about the "arrangement" (I threatened to jump off the sink into the disposer) he made out a list of Killer's redeeming virtues.

Does not use gas.

Does not bark all night.

Does not smell or shed on the sofa.

Discourages door-to-door salesmen.

Does not get sick and need expensive antibiotics.

Does not need a license to leave the yard.

Has no weird sex habits.

No messy bowls or jars or cans at feeding time.

In retaliation, I made a list of Killer's imperfections:

Discourages breathing by your mother.

Grosses everyone out by eating a live mouse, then crawling into a bowl of water for a couple of days.

Generates hysteria whenever he walks into a room.

Is immodest about taking off skin in public.

"Is that all you can think of?" asked my son.

"No, I've got one more. A snake as a roommate is the fastest way I know to make a boy homeless."

A snake doesn't even have the manners to wave goodbye when he leaves a house.

FOUR-YEAR CYCLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Fashion trends in men's clothing usually go through a four-year cycle, according to an apparel specialist.

The first year a new style is the province of the avant garde, says Marvin A. Blumenfeld of April-Marcus, Inc., a merchandising consulting firm.

In the second year, the style is in general production but not yet popular, he said.

Keeps Track Of 3,500 Birthdays

SMETHPORT, Pa. (AP) — As sure as birthdays bring cake, candles and gooey icing, they also guarantee a personal greeting for more than 3,500 people whom Shirley Keller calls her friends.

For the past 33 years, Mrs. Keller has been collecting birthdates, addresses and telephone numbers from people she meets. The list in her well-thumbed birthday book has grown steadily to 3,541.

"They look forward to it," she said. "Especially the people who don't have anyone and live by themselves. They really love it."

Most of the recipients of Mrs. Keller's birthday cheer live in and around this McKean County community, but some greetings make their way across the continent and even overseas.

Most of the local celebrants are contacted by telephone. Those who are out-of-town are mailed greetings.

For instance, exchange students from Germany, Japan and the Netherlands who have attended Smethport High School have made the pages of Mrs. Keller's birthday book.

Mrs. Keller, a night custodian at the county courthouse, says she can recall most of the names and dates with little trouble. Of course, she has missed a birthday or two, and she hears about it.

Mrs. Keller's standard operating procedure is to telephone the celebrant of the day and start right in with the song, "Happy Birthday."

"Most know immediately who it is and reply, 'Hello, Shirley, I've been waiting to hear from you,'" she said.

Many of Mrs. Keller's contacts remember her in turn. On her last birthday March 12, she received 136 telephone calls and 148 cards from people she had wished luck and happiness to many times before.

Miss Lanier Weds In Goldsboro

GOLDSBORO — Herman Park here was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding ceremony of Lillie Mae Lanier and William Earl Andrews. The Rev. Charlie Wilson performed the double ring ceremony at 5:30 p.m.

Parents of the bride are Mrs. Nina Lanier of Rt. 2, Snow Hill, and the late Mr. Levie Lanier. Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Andrews of Ayden are parents of the bridegroom.

Roy Chester Lanier, brother of the bride, gave her in marriage. Mrs. Carrie Lanier Kornegay of LaGrange was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Miss Varnell Fields and Miss Connie Yvonne Moye, both of Kinston.

MRS. WILLIAM EARL ANDREWS

Ten Nays For Good Neighbors

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc

DEAR ABBY: After reading your Ten Commandments for Husbands and Wives, I decided to submit these Ten Commandments for Good Neighborliness:

1) Thou shalt love thy neighbor, but not his wife, nor shalt thou covet thy neighbor's house, or his car, or any other thing he owneth.

2) Thou shalt keep thy dog, and thy stereo, and thy lawnmower quiet while thy neighbor sleepeth.

3) Thou shalt borrow from the neighbor rarely, and when thou doest, returneth undamaged and without delay that which thou hast borrowed.

4) Thou shalt not alloweth thy pets nor thy children to run amok, despoiling thy neighbor's lawn, flower beds and fence.

5) Thou shalt keepeth thy lawn green, thy fence painted and thy driveway uncluttered even as ye shall also keep thy vehicles in thy garage where they belong.

6) Thou shalt watcheth always for criminals and fires in thy neighborhood and guard thy neighbor's home and his property even as thy own.

7) Thou shalt not useth thy home for any unsightly or illegal activity.

8) Thou shalt always stand ready to help thy neighbor in his hour of true need, even as he does for thee.

9) Thou shalt not parketh thy camper, nor thy RV, nor thy van in the street where it blocketh thy neighbor's view and createth a safety hazard to all.

10) Thou shalt not hold wild parties or orgies that lasteth until wee hours unless thou shalt inviteth thy neighbor, too.

ANONYMOUS IN OXNARD

DEAR ABBY: I'll get right to the point. I am a very attractive 20-year-old girl and I've never had a boyfriend.

I've had many dates, but nothing has ever come of them because the guys always seem to want something in the end.

My girlfriends tell me that if I were to give to a guy a few kisses it wouldn't hurt me, but I've tried that, and they are all over you in no time, and then you have a big fight on your hands.

Also, why does a girl have to give a guy a REASON for refusing to go to bed with him? I am tired of trying to explain that there is nothing wrong with me. (One guy offered me a chance to prove to myself that I wasn't a lesbian. How's that for a novel approach?)

So how do I get a decent guy who just wants good company? I'm not about to give up what I'm saving for my wedding night until I'm sure there's going to be a wedding.

SAVING MYSELF IN S.C.

DEAR SAVING: You can get a decent guy by being yourself. Don't lower your standards!

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

CRYPTOQUIP 6-30

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — INANE LAD ENJOYED SLOPPY JALOPIES.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: D equals S

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

She Blows Her Job Every Day

NORTH CANTON, Ohio (AP) — It's crystal clear to Sandy Donato that she blows her job every day.

She makes ornamental crystal objects that require her to blow, shape, etch and cut glass.

It started as a hobby but Mrs. Donato and her husband now have four stores in Ohio and West Virginia to market her products and she hopes to have a retail outlet in Florida soon.

Her love of the art goes back to her high school days when her boyfriend, Joe Donato, who is now her husband, gave her a glass ornament.

"While we still were at Glenwood (high school), he bought me a glass wishing well," she said. They have now been married 10 years.

"That started a collection and, when we'd go on a trip, I'd always buy a piece of spun glass," she said.

In 1970 they got into conversation with a glass-blowing artist at a festival in Lisbon and learned he taught a course in creative glass blowing at the University of Akron.

Sandy enrolled and attended every class for three years. In the course of her studies she kept some of the objects she made and began showing them at Stark County fairs.

Babysitting Co-Op Is Help To Parents

By GAIL WILLIAMS

ATLANTA (UPI) — Babysitting cooperatives are some neighborhoods' solution to the problem of too few teen-agers or teen-agers who don't want to sit or older persons with prohibitive fees.

Parents say their children love the idea because they are never lonely for their peers.

Co-ops also provide an excellent way for families new to a community or a city to make friends.

Atlanta's Morningside area has at least three, the first organized about seven years ago. The second was a spinoff about two years ago, when membership in the first had grown to 40 and its waiting list to 17 families. Now the second has 40 families and a waiting list. The third has about 15 families.

"It makes parenting a lot easier," said Martha Curtis, a mother in the second. "I couldn't live without it. I always had cousins, grandparents, aunts and uncles around before I moved here so it fulfills that extended family loss."

Larrie Del Martin is a neighbor of the Curtises and mother of two. The Martin and Curtis children play together often.

"I think the cooperative idea came about at the same time as food cooperatives and the 'neighborhood concept,'" said Mrs. Martin. "This whole lifestyle came about at the same time."

In the first co-op, she said, a secretary kept track of all services.

Because so many members in the second co-op work, Mrs. Martin said, "... we decided not to have a secretary. Instead we have 'chits.'" They are pieces of paper with silk-screen fronts that resemble playing cards.

Parents exchange chits instead of money for sitting services.

Each chit is worth 30 minutes sitting time. Each family that joins the co-op receives 40 chits at a charge of 50 cents each. The money goes to the woman who makes them. No family is allowed to accumulate more than 60. When a family leaves the co-op, it must either turn in 40 chits or pay 50 cents apiece for each one it lacks.

Mrs. Martin said the co-op's membership roster, which is updated periodically, lists members' telephone numbers, children's names and ages, doctor's phone numbers and parents' availability.

"This way we can match up ages of our children and proximity (in the neighborhood)," she said.

Most sitting is done afternoons, evenings and some weekends, she said.

The concept has drawbacks. Mrs. Martin said they found some families were in more than one cooperative at the same time. Current guidelines prohibit this.

Behavior problems also arise. Parents whose children are not well-mannered find it difficult to get anyone to sit for their children.

Families who want to retain their membership in the Morningside co-op after they move away can do so, Mrs. Martin said, as long as they don't join others.

Mrs. Curtis said most of the children "would rather go to a co-op house than have a sitter. I know a lady who has never paid a sitter (because she uses the co-op)."

"I used a sitter once, but life is easier when I'm sitting. When I watch other children, my kid loves it so much I feel I should have paid her (the other mother) the chits."

"I now know so many people, have so many friends, which is a direct result of the co-op. One of the ladies became my best friend, our kids are best friends and we've done everything together."

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is an excellent time to think in specific detail of your long-term desires and to make up your mind which are the most important. Then make arrangements so that they become a part of your everyday existence with successful results.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are full of adventure, but schedule your activities wisely for best results. One who is older wants to be of service to you. Show you are gracious and accept assistance.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have some pleasure planned but need to count the cost first, as well as its practicality. Meet with a successful person and get good advice on important matters.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are anxious to improve conditions at home, but do so witgh the approval of kin. Not a good day for entertaining, but fine for planning future entertainments.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Good day to plan for several activities you want to delve in soon and then to get details worked out. Make good use of past experience.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get together with good friends who can be of real help to you now. Look far into the future and pursue a more prosperous course. Avoid one who has an axe to grind and be safe.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Your personal wishes mean much to you and you would do well to avoid an irate bigwig who could give you trouble. Confer with experts who can be of real help to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Use a neat touch and precision in all that you do now. A new acquaintance can now give you good advice. Avoid that tendency to overspend on the unimportant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get busy at investigative work that helps you handle a constructive matter well. A new system you initiate can expedite all of your affairs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you handle worldly affairs more precisely, your reputation soars. Get into community work and get your credit improved, also. Avoid a known hypocrite.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You get some fine ideas that should be studied further before you put them in operation. Gain the advice of an expert. Relegate the evening to more social fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Contact those who can assist you to advance in your own line of endeavor. Understand the needs of loved ones better and try to be of assistance.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Good day to gain the favor of those with whom you have contracts, both oral and written. Get into activities that give you greater prestige.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will take antiquated projects and put new life into them so that they become more successful. One who will have no trouble finishing whatever has been started and this is the key to success here.

Cupid Was Late, But Came Just In Time

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Cupid is a new Social Security law to Mamie and Floyd D. Disterdick.

The former Mamie Kelley, 75, and Disterdick, 81, were married at the home of her grandson, Ted Carver, this spring, after having lived together nearly 23 years.

"I've had that thrown up to me so many times," Mrs. Disterdick, a great-grandmother, said shortly before the afternoon ceremony.

The couple live on Social Security and said they couldn't afford to get married when they met in the middle 1950s.

"Back years ago, if we got married they'd cut my Social Security," Mrs. Disterdick said. "And we just couldn't make ends meet without it."

A revised Social Security law that took effect last January allows senior citizens of both sexes to keep their benefits regardless of marriage or remarriage.

"It's wonderful," the bride said. "It's a dream finally come true. I've got the man, now I'm going to keep him."

Hundreds Reached By Local Arts Program

Text And Photograhphs By Jerry Raynor

STUDENTS DRAW FROM LIFE . . . Students in a drawing class taught by Emmy Whitehead draw from a real-life model. Posing as a clown is Dot Gronert, one of many who have volunteered their services in the "Festival of Learning" program conducted by the Greenville Art Center with local, state and federal funds.

"This has been the most rewarding outreach program that we could possibly offer," Ms. Edith Walker, director of the Greenville Art Center summed up the summer program of varied art instruction that will end on August 31.

In the application for grants to fund the Special Community Service Project, Mrs. Walker aptly titled the program a "Festival of Learning."

She emphasized that "without the generosity of Pitt County's Commissioners and council members of the City of Greenville, we simply could not have done the things we've been able to do for so many deserving people.

"This applies also," she added, "to the North Carolina Arts Council and to the National Endowment for the Arts, which together matched the funds appropriated by the city and county. These funds, together with Grassroots funds allocated by the state legislature have benefitted literally hundreds of people in our community."

For fiscal year 1978-79, which covers the period of July 1, 1978 to June 30, 1979, a grant total of $7,334 was available for the program — to cover a considerable number of scholarships for students, the cost of materials, and payment for instructors.

Of that total, Pitt County appropriated $1,850, and Greenville $1,500, with the N.C. Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts matching these two appropriations with $3,350. To this $6,700 an amount of $634 was added from Pitt County Grassroots funds.

Since local, state and federal guidelines make it possible to use funds from all these sources interchangeably, the Art Center was able to set up a wide spectrum of art programs from one basic money pool.

Programs At Art Center

Mrs. Walker enumerated programs that have been active this summer — most of which were also conducted in the summer of 1978. These include:

— A bronze casting class taught in the evenings by John Quinn. This is the first time this demanding technique has been offered by the Art Center.

— Drawing and painting classes, both for children and for adults, with Emmy Whitehead instructing.

— A figure drawing class under the instructorship of East Carolina University School of Art faculty member Wes Crawley; and watercolor classes taught by Warren Chamberlain, a retired ECU art faculty member.

— Printmaking and ceramics, taught by Maggie Noss;

— Puppetry, ceramics and drawing, all taught by Grian Salomon.

— Weaving classes instructed by JoAnn Underwood, and — Art classes incorporating outdoor activities, in a program designated recreational and therapeutic art, has been taught by outdoorsman/artist George Brett. Brett's classes included a number of field trips for his students.

Since instructional space is limited at the Art Center building — two upstairs rooms — the small brick garage behind the main building was cleaned and renovated to provide additional work space.

Satellite Programs

"One of the really helpful things about the Festival of Learning," Ms. Walker commented, "is that with these funds we were able to go into a number of satellite programs, to offer activities outside the Art Center."

Perhaps the most active of the satellite programs has been the one held at the Boys' Club on Skinner Street. There, John Quinn instructed the boys in arts and crafts, sculpture, drawing, painting, leathercraft, ceramics, fibers — "just about everything in the art field was taught by John," Ms. Walker said.

Young girls in Greenville have not been overlooked. At Operation Sunshine, which is for girls, classes in various arts have been taught by Ingrid Wright.

Another artist teaching at Operation Sunshine is Denise Stell, who specializes in arts and crafts.

Rudy Hofheinz has been teaching all the arts in a continuing program at the Extended Day School — first at Wellcome Middle School, then at Agnes Fullilove Community School when the Extended School activities were relocated there.

Through a cooperative arrangement with the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, some activities have also been provided to those attending programs at the Senior Citizens Center, supplementing existing programs there. Ingrid Wright has instructed classes there.

Volunteer Services

"One reason we've been able to do so much," Ms. Walker pointed out, "is that the community has provided support we had not anticipated.

"For example," she said, "several businesses have given us materials and others have given us discounts on purchases. Both in Greenville and in Pitt County, volunteers have freely given their time and effort.

"All this has meant," she noted, "that our money has gone much further than expected, and in these days of high costs, that's especially gratifying."

Program Continues To Grow

Now in its third year, the program of arts for the community has continued to grow. Prior to the summer of 1977, the Greenville Art Center had closed during the summer months. Board members of the East Carolina Art Society, however, decided that the Center could provide significant public services by remaining open during the summer, and it was at that time that Ms. Walker began planning programs for the summer months.

"In the first year of the program, in the summer of 1977," Ms. Walker commented, "all programs were paid for by the students, including fees for materials and instructions."

The second summer, matching funds and Grassroots funds made possible the awarding of scholarships to talented youngsters who otherwise would not have been able to take part.

"The main thrust of our programs have been designed to take place during the summer months," Ms. Walker explained, "since experience has shown that programs conducted during the school year did not reach as many people as summer programs did.

"This has really been an rewarding summer," Ms. Walker concluded. "Altogether, in all the programs, we have had literally hundreds of people enrolled and active in art programs here and in satellite areas."

Student Study Of Nature Areas Worthy Of Preservation

Text By Nancy Patterson

THE MARKER . . . designating the Elmhurst Nature Trail is the gateway to unexpected adventures within Greenville. The trail wanders through varied types of woods and streams within the city.

What areas in Greenville-Pitt County are worth perserving as city and suburbs grow? Susan Corda, a Greenville resident and biology student at East Carolina University, spent ten weeks last summer finding out. Working under an award from the National Science Foundation, Miss Corda identified ten valuable locations.

The areas identified by Miss Corda, mostly in or near Greenville, are: the Elmhurst Nature Trail, the high bluff on the Tar, Prince Road Pond, Hardee Creek and surrounding area, the oak forest in the Oakhurst Subdivision, a swamp area near Hardee Creek with a stand of tupelo gum, the natural area behind Rose High School, the wooded area known as Stratford woods, a mature pine forest behind Red Oak Subdivision, and the pocosin area off N.C. 43 in south Greenville.

She presented her impressive final report to the North Carolina Academy of Science, in Raleigh, in March of this year. Recently, local groups such as the Environmental Advisory Committee, which advises the Greenville City Council, have become interested in her findings.

For each of the ten locations, Miss Corda prepared a detailed biological description. It's the very kind of work she wants to pursue. Companies hire experts to prepare area descriptions for their environmental impact statements. These statements are necessary to decide whether the company will injure the environment or how it can cooperate with the environment.

Miss Corda graduated from East Carolina this spring and plans to attend North Carolina State University in Raleigh to continue her biology studies.

Dr. Vincent Bellis and Dr. Andy Ash, both of the East Carolina University biology department, assisted Miss Corda with the summer project.

Well-Planned Units Show Private Balconies

APARTMENTS OFFER TWO BEDROOMS, BATH, POWDER ROOM

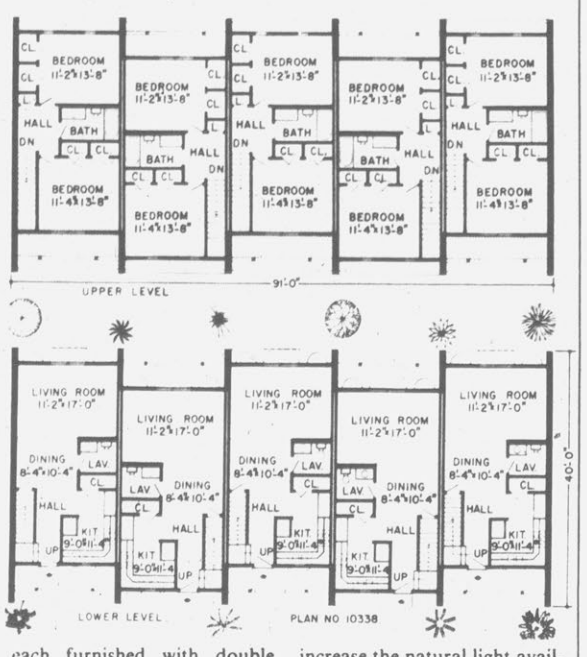

By Jerry Bishop

With upper floor plans staggered to allow for balconies on alternating sides, the Mountbatten, a five-unit design, manages to achieve the degree of privacy that tenants appreciate. In all, each unit calls for two bedrooms, one and one half baths, living room, dining area, and kitchen.

On the exterior, brick harmonizes with vertical siding, while the alternating balconies eliminate the monotony often found in multi-unit designs. Inside, the compact units are geared for contemporary living and feature large rooms, ample natural light, and adequate storage space.

An entry hall greets guests and directs them to living areas straight ahead. For added visual space, the living room is linked to the dining area, and the resulting L-shaped area has space for relaxing or entertaining. A first floor bath off the dining area is a convenience. Completing the first level is the kitchen, a functional area that faces front and edges a handy coat closet.

The entry hall allows access to the stairway to the second level. Here, two bedrooms are each furnished with double closets and are separated by a full bath. One of the bedrooms merits a private balcony reached via sliding glass doors. Besides the access to the balcony, the sliding glass doors have value in that they increase the natural light available. A linen closet is tucked in the hallway.

A wooden floor can squeak its way through its entire existence without any threat to its life or those who walk upon it — but it sure can be an annoyance.

Just as with metal, wood squeaks when two parts rub against each other. In the case of a floor, it occurs when two boards do the rubbing, usually as somebody steps on them but sometimes during the movement of the wood under certain low humidity conditions. A loose nail, moving up and down, also produces a cry of protest.

It is easy to eliminate the squeak when the underside of the floor can be reached, as in the case of a basement or a crawl space. In that event, you will need an assistant, someone to walk across the floor as you, from an underneath position, locate the area of the noise. Sometimes the squeak can be silenced merely by driving a few wedges between the flooring and the joists. Sometimes it is necessary to drive screws upwards from the bottom of the subfloor into the finish floor, but you must be sure to use screws that go through the subfloor and into the finish floor without coming out through the top side. To make the job easier, especially if the floor is made of hardwood, drill pilot holes for the screws. When driving home the screws, your assistant should stand on the spot to bring the two layers of flooring together.

When the squeaks are in a floor where the underside is inaccessible, nails can be used, but they must be ring or spiral nails or any type which has more holding power than ordinary nails. These nails should be hammered into the floor at an angle so that, when inside the wood, two of them form a loose V. Here again, especially with hardwood, drill pilot holes for the nails. As each nail head gets close to the wood surface, use a nailset to hammer it slightly below the surface, later filling the tiny hole with wood putty or some other wood filler. Usually, it is better if the nails go through the flooring into the joists or beams, but sometimes the squeaks will disappear when the nails only go into the two layers of flooring.

There are some temporary ways to halt squeaks in a floor. One is to spread some bath powder or graphite powder in the areas of the noises. I once read that, when the underside of a floor is accessible, the application of a rubber-type adhesive between the joists and the flooring will make the noises disappear, but it is a method I have not tried personally and can only pass along without commenting on its merits. With the bath powder or graphite powder, the remedy — when it occurs — lasts a matter of weeks or months, depending on how long it takes for the powdery material to wear away.

(Home do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Part of the outside of our house is stucco. I intend to paint it soon, using exterior latex masonry paint. Is it possible to use a roller for this job in view of the rough surface of the stucco?

A. — Yes. Use a roller with a thick nap. Be sure the roller is generously laden with paint each time you use it and stroke it well into each section. It might be a good idea to keep a brush handy so that it can be used if you run into any area where the roller does not thoroughly get between the stucco crevices and indentations.

Q. — The rungs on two of our kitchen chairs have become loose. One of these days I will get around to fixing them. While the glue in the sockets is drying, what's the best way to hold everything in place? Will an ordinary piece of twine around the chair legs take care of the clamping?

A. — Yes, but it's better to use something heavier than twine, such as a clothesline. After the rope is wound around the legs, place a stick in the rope and tighten it like a tourniquet, then brace the stick so that it holds everything tightly together. There are many other ways to keep the rungs in place while the glue is drying. There are special chair clamps, strap clamps and various other kinds of clamps. No matter which method you choose, be sure to use some type of padding under the rope or clamps to prevent the chair from being damaged.

Q. — I have a large, expensive hand saw. If I use paste wax on the metal, will it keep it from rusting?

A. — Yes, but since the sawing action may remove some of the wax from time to time, you will have to check to see whether to renew the coating in certain places.

Q. — After a recent windstorm, I noticed that some of the shingles on our old asphalt roof were a bit loose. Should I put nails in the edges to hold them down or use asphalt cement?

A. — Use the cement. Apply it under the lifted edges and press down on the shingles. A small putty knife is best for the job. If the top of the shingles have any cracks in them, be sure to put some of the cement in the cracks.

Dutch Flower-Auction Center Is World's Largest Of Its Kind

The world's largest flower-auction center, a mass of color, is so big that some employees travel by bicycle within the structure and tractors haul carloads of blooms in miniature railroad fashion.

Overall, the United Aalsmeer Flower Auction in Holland covers 104 acres, including 60 acres under a single roof. Thousands of carts in organized confusion deliver cut flowers and plants from the sellers to the auction rooms, then to the exporters for shipment around the world. Each day, more than 3,700 growers bring their products to Aalsmeer where 2,600 registered buyers seek their wares. Many of the flowers are grown in the miles of greenhouses in Aalsmeer and surrounding communities; some come from much further distances.

More than 80 percent of the products are sold for export. In 1977, sales by the cooperative venture totaled about 1.7 billion cut flowers and about 80 million potted plants. The co-op takes a commission of one percent for its expenses. In 1978, the auction reports, there was a turnover of 540 million guilders on cut flowers and 160 million guilders on potted plants. The current rate of exchange is approximately two guilders per $1 of U.S. currency.

The auction begins daily, except Sunday, at 7 a.m., and ends about 11.30 a.m. Within a few hours, generally the same afternoon, the flowers are en route to their destinations by air, truck or railroad.

There are five auction rooms at the center, each containing 308 seats for buyers. The auctioneer is seated in front below the sloping tiers of seats. An aide operates a computerized clock that registers bids. As the flowers appear through the rear doors on carts moving on a conveyer track, an attendant picks up one bunch from the cart and holds it aloft. The bidding — by exporters, shopkeepers and wholesalers — then begins.

Early in the morning, growers bring their flowers and plants to the auction site. There is a specific location for every kind of flower: roses, carnations, orchids, cut amaryllis, gerbera in glowing colors, tulips and narcissus, of course, and many others.

The growers put their flowers on carts with a delivery note. The loaded carts are stored in an area in front of the auction hall awaiting the start. All flowers have been inspected and the carts given a number and moved into the auction hall.

The auctioneer announces the name of the nursery-producer, the names of the flowers and comments on the quality.

For the benefit of the 200,000 visitors who come each year to watch the proceedings, there is a gallery, or walkway, which runs down about two thirds of the building from its front, then arcs back in horseshoe fashion. On the vast floor are workers walking, on bicycles, or aboard tractors hauling a dozen carts of flowers.

It takes about half an hour to travel the walkway, with brief stops to look again and again at the array of color below. Many of the varieties of flowers, tightly packaged, stand upright in plastic bins, awaiting loading on trucks ready to start them on their trips to the flower stands of a large part of the world.

West Germany is the biggest customer. Last year it took 84 percent of the cut flowers and 58 percent of the potted plants; Switzerland and France each bought four percent of the cut flowers; Italy took six percent of the potted plants and France seven percent.

How To Do It

By UPI — Popular Mechanics

Q. Several large window shades in my home won't stay down — they won't catch and hold in any position. The shades are not old, torn or discolored. What's wrong? Mrs. R.L., Chicago.

A. It is likely, according to Popular Mechanics Encyclopedia, that the rachet ends of the rollers have been filled with lint, or that the springs installed in them have loosened. Take the shades down, brush lint out of the ratchets and use the tines of an old fork to retighten the springs. If no parts are bent or missing, the shades should then work properly.

Q. I've stripped a chest of drawers which is veneered. With the remover washed off, some of the veneer has come loose and the edges have lifted. What happened, and what do I do next? R.D., Tulsa, Okla.

A. It is quite possible that you dampened the glue under the veneer pad and, thus, softened it enough to make it let go in places. I'd try lifting the veneer with a sharp chisel and forcing new glue underneath. Then clamp plywood on top, with wax paper in between, until the glue dries. If blisters result, slit each at its center, force glue through the slits underneath the veneer, and weight until dry.

Natural Gas Rate To Rise

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

The chairman of the American Gas Association estimates the average consumer will see about an 11 percent rate increase in natural gas prices in the next 12 months.

"It could be as much as another 11 percent the year after — but the probability is it will be less," John Kean says, because the number of gas customers is growing with tremendous rapidity.

"A lot of people are trying to switch to gas heat because of the Middle Eastern oil situation," Kean added in an interview.

He said the seven-year shortage of natural gas that began in 1972 is over, and "We can assure residential customers there will be more than enough for the foreseeable future."

He said prices are rising despite ample supplies because it costs more to get gas out of the ground and pipe it to customers all over the country. Drilling rigs, for example, are powered by gas or electricity. Labor costs are up. Materials such as pipes cost more.

Even so, residential gas consumers will pay lower prices than industry, Kean said — the National Energy Act mandates it.

The distributors trade association Kean heads is urging consumers to conserve energy as a way of saving money.

The association recommends attic insulation, storm windows and doors and a day-night thermostat that automatically maintains cooler temperatures at night and warmer temperatures by day.

"Our company won't hook up a customer unless they do these things first," Kean said of the insulation, storm equipment and thermostat. He is president of the Elizabethtown Gas Co. in Elizabeth, N.J.

He said a day-night thermostat is especially popular with working couples. It can be set to turn the temperature down when they leave for work in the morning, and up about 1½ hours before they return home.

"The preferred range is 58 to 60 degrees at night and 68 by day," Kean said. If you turn it too low at night, you'll need too much fuel to recover the warmth the next day, he said.

There's been a lot of talk about the wastefulness of pilot lights on kitchen ranges. The lights use about 30 percent of the gas burned annually by such appliances. But turning off pilot lights on gas appliances is a dangerous way to save energy, Kean said.

"People turn on the gas and forget to light it immediately." That can trigger flashbacks or set fires.

He recalled the case of a woman who turned on her oven, then stepped away to answer the telephone. When she returned and struck a match, the gas that had risen to the top of the oven cavity ignited and blew out in her face, singeing her eyebrows and hair.

"Gas is lighter than air. It can even flash back from a top burner," Kean said.

Some manufacturers build a safety factor into their ranges and gas furnaces to prevent such accidents, he said. If the pilot is turned off, the gas won't come on.

Appliances with electronic pilots work the same way, he said.

Kean also warned against salesmen touting energy saving devices such as furnace dampers and inspection services claiming they can detect heat leaks with infrared photos.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN:

Q.—Despite the fact that I have played bridge for many years, my best friends will testify that I'm nothing more than a duffer of the green baize. But the game continues to fascinate me. especially the expert's ability to know where every card is placed after only one or two tricks have been played. What are the qualities of a bridge star, and is it possible that I can become one?—L.J.D., Atlanta, Ga.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—The myth of the bridge expert is one that has been carefully cultivated—by bridge experts, of course. There is nothing superhuman about a bridge ace. Like every other mortal, he makes his share of mistakes—but he has mastered the art of making them less often than the average player.

Let us first dispose of the myth you presented—that, by the time one or two tricks have been played, the expert can place every card. As my colleague, Omar Sharif, stated in a column a short while ago, if ever an expert could read the cards that accurately, he would be on his way to becoming a millionaire in quick time.

What an expert does, and does very well, is to assimilate the clues that are available from the bidding and play, draw logical deductions therefrom, and then plan his play accordingly. Because the inferences he takes are reasoned and not simply guesses, he will be right far more often than he is wrong—but that is a far cry from infallibility.

Next among the facets to the makeup of the expert that set him apart from the rank-and-file player, is his ability to overcome unfortunate distributions. He is by nature a pessimist who has learned that even the simplest contracts can be wrecked by distribution, so whenever possible, he takes out insurance to protect against bad breaks.

He has at his disposal an arsenal of technical weapons and a sound knowledge of the mathematics of the game. There are many hands that offer a variety of lines of play for the contract. Where there are no indications to the contrary, his knowledge of the probabilities allow him to "take a right view" on most hands.

Next is his ability to combine various lines of play. There are many hands where declarer has several options. By taking them in the right order, he might be able to try all of them. Almost always the expert will have an alternate line of play in reserve in the event his main plan of attack falters, thus increasing his chances of making the contract. The non-expert, in contrast, usually can see only one line and blindly pushes on even when that line is doomed to failure.

The bidding methods of the experts vary. Each has carefully designed a system that suits his partnership. Sometimes they are very complex; other times they are relatively simple. However, no expert will willy-nilly adopt conventions simply to confuse opponents. Every time you use an artificial bid, you have to pay a price—you give up the natural meaning of the bid. The expert has carefully weighed the pros and cons as they relate to the specific methods he uses, as well as the intrinsic value of any gadget he adopts.

How do you become a bridge expert? There's really no way. I am convinced that bridge experts are born, not made. Unless you have that certain something that sets you apart from the average player, no amount of coaching will make you a star.

Send my questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, c/o this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Charles Goren and Omar Sharif personally cannot undertake to answer all questions submitted.

New Electric Car Is On View

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest electric car the Energy Department is showing off has been designed from the ground up. It does use gasoline, but just one gallon at a time.

It's designed to be mass produced by 1985 and sell for $6,400 in 1979 dollars.

The new vehicle is a hatchback with a range of 100 miles. It goes half again as far on a full charge as any previous model, assuming speeds up to 45 mph.

A member of the industry team that built the ETV-1 said Friday it is "the most advanced experimental electric car on the road today."

At 35 mph, the car can go more than 115 miles before needing a recharge that takes about 10 hours. In stop-and-go city driving with four passengers the driving range is about 70 miles.

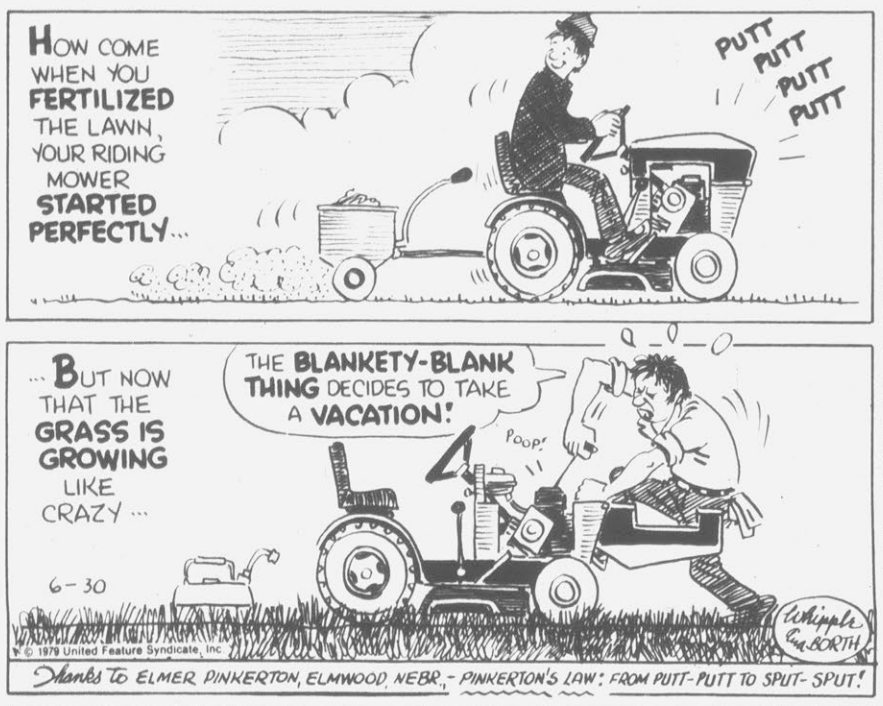

The vehicle can cruise at 55 mph and pass at 60.

Vincent J. Esposito of the Energy Department said the vehicle is different from four others displayed there recently because it was designed as an electric car from the ground up, rather than being an electric version of a conventional car.

It has 18 new lead acid batteries for power, and a built-in battery charger. Pulling down the front license plate exposes the plug, which can be hooked into any 110-volt wall socket.

The batteries are in an enclosed, streamlined underbody. They can be filled with water through a single spigot, located under the rear license plate.

The rear plate also hides the opening to a one-gallon gas tank. That fuel is used to run the car's heater.

Prospect Grows For Power Without Fuel

By LEROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

Ships, locomotives and airliners carry no fuel.

An automobile uses only a small supply of hydrochloric acid as a power medium — over and over again.

Fantasy or real possibilities?

Several small internal combustion engines already are being run in this manner on ultraviolet light without requiring any real fuel by a Miami, Fla., engineering company.

A California engineer says he is preparing to use an ultraviolet laser to extract hydrogen from water continuously to power an automobile.

No firm answer yet can be given to the question of whether either process is the key to solving the world's energy problems. But the leading article in the May Scientific American by Prof. Avigdor N. Ronn of Brooklyn College, entitled "Laser Chemistry," makes it clear that chemists around the world are working busily trying to use the energy of light as opposed to heat, the source of all energy up to now.

If it turns out as chemists are starting to believe, that light can trigger controlled chemical reactions to produce enormously more energy than any thermal reaction from fossil fuel, then man indeed could be on the threshold of a truly unlimited source of energy. We could stop using coal or petroleum for fuel and reserve it all for chemical feedstocks, particularly for fertilizer chemicals to produce food.

The bitter issue over nuclear power would subside for nuclear power simply no longer would be needed. Uranium henceforth would be useful only for making weapons.

The supply of light in nature is unlimited and artificial light in the small amounts needed to set off chemical reactions to produce large amounts of energy can be obtained easily and cheaply from an ordinary automobile generator and storage battery.

The Miami firm that is running small engines on ultroviolet light is Solar Reactor Corp. headed by Robin Parker. It is working on a reaction discovered partly by accident by Robert Scragg, an inventor. Scragg learned that ultraviolet light can set off a reaction between hydrogen and chlorine producing many times as much mechanical energy in a small engine as gasoline or diesel fuel.

Further, the reaction can be produced in a closed loop with the small amount of hydrochloric acid used over and over again like the vaper medium in a Rankine cycle steam engine.

The actual energy used in the reaction comes from small ultraviolet light plugs resembling sparkplugs made for Solar Reactor by Champion Spark Plug Co.

It looks like the nearest thing to perpetual motion yet achieved although it isn't really that. Parker and Scragg have not yet built the closed loop but it can be built out of off-the-shelf hardware obtainable from several chemical equipment manufacturers.

So far they have operated a Honda 4-cylinder motorcycle engine, two small Tecumseh appliance engines and a tiny turbine engine they built themselves by the method. Parker says they are planning to build a closed loop light engine for an automobile, one for a boat and one for a stationary motor-generator set. Ordinary four-cycle gasoline engines will be used. They have to be modified because no compression stroke is needed, but the valves are needed. The engines will fire like a two-cycle engine, thus doubling the mechanical energy output.

All this will take time and money, which must be raised. Parker, who is an architect by profession, says the 10 owners of Solar Reactor, are willing to license the process free to any company who will proceed to put it to work but they will not license it to anyone who wants to delay action.

Scragg made his discovery after realizing that all solar energy research up to now has been concerned with thermal energy, or the infrared end of the electromagnetic spectrum whereas light contains more energy. It is light, not heat, that makes plants grow. Light has the energy to move itself at a speed of 187,000 miles a second. This led him to think about the laser, a device for utilizing light energy invented some 20 years ago. But the laser is a very expensive device and has never lived up to original expectations.

Then one day he ran across a report published in the 1920s by a graduate student saying that, in the presence of ordinary ultraviolet light, hydrogen and chlorine react with extreme violence to produce vast amounts of energy. Scragg was staggered. It was like the famous case of the German student who synthesized a chemical and filed his report, which lay in a dusty library shelf for 50 years until somebody found it and tried it out as insecticide with astounding results. The chemical was DDT.

Scragg experimented successfully then sought backers. Hydrochloric acid is easily made from sea water, is easily broken down into hydrogen and chlorine and easily put back together. It takes as much energy to extract it from water as the energy it contains but what difference does that make if you can use it over and over again more or less indefinitely?

Brooklyn College's Dr. Ronn said he knows Scragg and has discussed his discovery with him. Ronn said it may have all the potential Scragg believes but it will take a lot of time and money to prove it.

The closed loop is essential to prolonged operation of the light engine not only to avoid consuming the hydrogen and chlorine but to prevent an exhaust. An exhaust from such an engine would be quite toxic and corrosive.

Scragg and Parker estimate that an automobile powered by a light engine would carry one to three gallons of hydrochloric acid in its closed loop system. The acid would pass through a converter to be broken down into hydrogen and chlorine and the separate gases then would be fed into the engine's cylinders and would react together violently as the ultraviolet plugs emitted light, creating the expansion to drive the pistons. Acceleration and deceleration would be controlled by a rheostat varying the timing of the light plugs, not by varying the flow of the gases.

Even though the reaction is induced by light instead of heat the temperature in the center of the cylinder reaches 1,000 F. The thermal energy thus created without combustion is at least four times that of a gasoline engine and the mechanical energy appears to be up to 14 times as high as a gasoline engine of the same size.

At 1,000 F. gaseous hydrochloric acid is not corrosive to metals but as the gas leaves the cylinders it goes though a scrubber to return it to liquid hydrochloric acid to renew the cycle.

Professor Ronn told United Press International he suspected the reaction at that high temperature might prove self-reversing after expansion, creating instantaneous recycling.

Scragg and Parker concede that they do not fully understand what goes on inside one of their engines when it is running and that it appears to violate some of the accepted laws of thermodynamics. That is one reason so much more work must be done.

Answers must be found to the following questions and probably to others:

—Will the light engine scale up? Can it be built and run efficiently in very large sizes?

—No corrosion, cooling or lubricating problems have cropped up so far but the engines have not been run for thousands of hours under full load. Will such problems develop and force the use of costly exotic metals, exotic lubricants and costly cooling methods?

—Can the acceleration and deceleration be controlled adequately? This and the engine's vibration characteristics must be studied carefully to avoid encountering mechanical transmission difficulties.

—Can hydrogen and chlorine be carried safely in the closed loop in a vehicle, either as separate gases or as hydrochloric acid? The safety problem is difficult but doesn't appear insuperable.

The California inventor who wants to use an ultraviolet laser to run an automobile by making hydrogen continuously extracted from water is Sam Leslie Leach. Four years ago Leach, who is independently wealthy, licensed his invention to Presley Cos. of Newport Beach, Calif. Presley stock promptly shot up and the Securities and Exchange Commission accused Presley of making false statements about the invention's capability. Leach now has reacquired it and is proceeding to develop it himself.

The Leach process has stirred controversy among West Coast academic scientists. A University of Orgeon research report on it financed by the National Science Foundation was quite favorable but two University of California scientists said it appeared to be a perpetual motion device and therefore couldn't work.

CHARLES KURALT anchors "CBS News Sunday Morning" (9-10:30 a.m.) on CBS. During the week, he travels across America for his "On The Road" series on the "CBS Evening News With Walter Cronkite." Updates of memorable "On The Road" reports are featured regularly on "CBS News Sunday Morning."

Kuralt: Still Traveling

For almost 12 years, Charles Kuralt and his crew traveled the highways of America in search of stories for "On the Road," rarely concerned with whether they were in Massachusetts, Missouri, or Montana, or with what day of the week it was. "That's changed," says Kuralt, who now anchors "CBS News Sunday Morning" (9 to 10:30 a.m.).

"Since we began 'Sunday Morning' last January, some of the romance has gone out of "On the Road' because we used to just wander and sort of forget about time. I mustn't do that anymore; I have to remember that I've got to get to an airport by Friday." Kuralt is "on the road" weekdays, and back at the network's headquarters in New York on weekends.

Relaxing in his office after a recent broadcast, Kuralt said: "Saturday is the most strenuous day I have now, because I try to write everything I say, so it's really necessary to be home Friday night, or, at the very latest, Saturday morning. Saturday is the day we put this thing together, except in the course of a continuing story when you have to get in early Sunday morning to update things."

Kuralt's "On the Road" series, which he calls "postcards to Walter Cronkite," has been featured on the "CBS Evening News With Walter Cronkite" since October 1967. And now Kuralt — and viewers — have an opportunity to revisit some favorite people and places. "Nearly every week we're updating an 'On the Road' story on 'Sunday Morning.' It's been interesting to look back and see what's been happening to those people. In many cases, I've known the answer to that question already," Kuralt admitted, "because we've kept in touch with most of the people we've done stories about over the years."

His present arrangement is the best of both worlds, says Kuralt. "I wouldn't have considered doing 'Sunday Morning' if it had meant giving up 'On the Road.' I've anchored other broadcasts, but I wouldn't want to be a regular daily anchorman. I'm one of the few people who doesn't covet Walter Cronkite's job. Obviously, it's the most important job at CBS News, but I think the fun is still out there covering stories.

"It's hard to put into words, but I think all of us here know what we're striving for on 'Sunday Morning.'" Kuralt concluded. "I think those little moments of silence at the end of the broadcast, the nature pieces, it's a nice way to leave people. After all, as Shad Northshield, the executive producer says, 'it's Sunday morning.'"

It's 'Big Apple' To The Core!

Erik Estrada is one person who can't say, "What did my home town ever do for me?" The City of New York, his home town, did plenty for the handsome young Puerto Rican actor, who is a star of NBC-TV's "CHiPs." He is reaping the benefits of what New York did for him, and he's not a bit reluctant about giving praise where it's due.

'CHiPs' — Erik Estrada stars as "Ponch" Poncherello, an officer of the California Highway Patrol, in the NBC series "CHiPs" seen Saturdays (8-9 p.m.).

Erik's first break came in high school, when, working with the drama club (which he joined in an effort to make points with a pretty girl) he experienced the joy of making believe onstage. He knew right then and there acting was for him. But how to find the break?

It was through New York's former mayor, John Lindsay, that Estrada got his break. The mayor, realizing that the Spanish-American neighborhoods were a tinderbox in the summertime when temperatures were high and morale was low among the Puerto Rican population, established a series of companies to sing and dance in the public parks as free entertainment for people who lived in the hot and crowded apartments.

Estrada's knowledge of the streets of New York finally paid off when Don Murray cast him as a young hood opposite Pat Boone in "The Cross and the Switchblade."

Deidre Came A Long Way

It's been three years since Deidre Hall joined the cast of NBC's daytime soap opera, "Days of Our Lives," and to say things have changed in her life since then is an understatement.

Indeed, Deidre has come a long way as Marlena, and a long way as the actress away from the sound stage.

"The high visibility has changed things, almost everything," the personable actress explains. "I don't seem to mind that visibility, although there are times when I don't want to be approached, I don't want to be looked at, but I think everybody has those days.

"Yet, I've had a couple of things happen recently that shows the adverse affect of that visiblity," she offers. "I took my beat-up Mazda to have it repainted, and when I first went in there, with no make-up, a sweatshirt on, I was told that the job would cost $125. By the time they found out who I was, the price was $275.

"Then, a little girl fell while roller skating in front of the house I bought — that's new since the show began, too. Anyway, I took her to a doctor for stitches because she fell on a sprinkler head, and then I took the child home. The next thing I know, I'm being sued!"

Deidre sighs and shakes her head as if amazed how just 36 months can change a person's life. Privately, of course, she and her husband, Keith, have divorced since Deidre joined the show and she shares the home she bought with her twin sister.

STILL BEAUTIFUL — To say Diedre Hall's life has changed during the three years she has been a member of the cast of NBC-TV's "Days Of Our Lives" is an understatement. One thing that remains constant, however, is her beauty.

Wild Humorous Adventure

Part I of "Charlie, the Lonesome Cougar," the story of a young forester who learns that cougars make troublesome pets, airs Sunday, July 1, on NBC-TV's "The Wonderful World of Disney" (7 to 8 p.m.).

During the timber harvest in the Cascade Range of the Pacific Northwest, Jess Bradley (Ron Brown), an industrial forester working for the Carbon County Lumber Company, is marking trees for the cutting crews when he finds and adopts an orphaned and starving cougar kitten.

The little mountain cat responds to Jess' care, and turns out to be playful critter. So his new guardian dubs him Goodtime Charle and they become close friends.

On Charlie's frequent visits to the lumber mill, he makes friends with the workmen and soon learns where the handouts are to be found. The first crisis comes when he tries for potluck at the cafe run by Potlatch (Brian Russell), the camp cook, and is chased around by the cook's cantankerous toy terrior, Chainsaw.

During the next few months, while Jess is in charge of a reforestation program, Charle never misses a day's work as observer. He considers himself an important part of a two-man team, but there are those who feel a small but growing cougar can be big trouble.

During a huge lumberdrive some 110 miles downriver, Charlie leaps aboard a kitchen wanigan and catches the new cook by surprise. The cook jumps ashore and the wanigan drifts from the bank. Jess sees the runaway wanigan and grabs the towline. The sudden jerk sends Charlie and Jess into the water.

Charlie boards a stray log and floats downstream while Jess tries to paddle the wanigan. A log jam intercepts Charle's log but Jess is swept right past him by the quickly moving current.

Many miles later, Jess is rescued, but is told that in return for Charlie's rescue, he must double for the cook.

Days pass, while Jess slaves over the stove and Charlie plays. He soon becomes as adept at logging as his human pals, helping to break up log jams.

Once Jess is back on the job, he is told not to bring Charlie to the mill any more. Reluctantly Jess agrees and builds a cage at home. Here Charlie begins the life of a "lonesome cougar."

WORK WATCHER — A cougar named Charlie rests atop the cab of his master's pickup truck each day as he observes work at a lumber mill, in "Charlie, The Lonesome Cougar" on NBC-TV's "The Wonderful World of Disney" Sundays, July 1 and 8 (7 to 8 p.m.).

Monkey Business Afoot!

Monkey business is afoot in the edition of ABC-TV's "Animals Animals Animals" airing Sunday, July 1 (11:30 to 11:55 a.m.), when host Hal Linden meets up with many of the world's 200 kinds of monkeys — from the woolly to the howler.

In Egypt, where the first libraries were built, Linden explains with graphics that Egyptian priests kept monkeys in the temples. Monkeys are regarded as sacred animals in India. And in ancient Greece and Rome the rich kept monkeys as pets.

Quick To Credit

Moses Malone is quick to credit other people for his leading the NBA in rebounds. "I couldn't have done it without the Calvin Murphys, Rick Barrys, Rudy Tomjanovichs and Mike Newlins. They did a lot of missin'," quips the Houston Rockets superstar.

'The Lawgiver' Continues

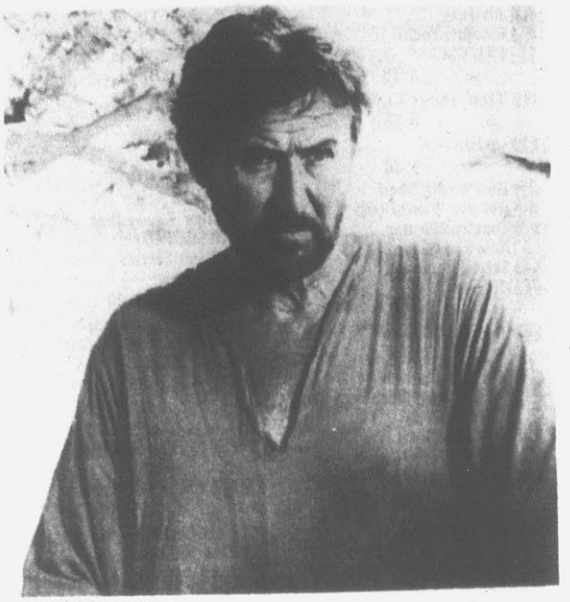

The Egyptians attempt to stand up under a series of dreadful plagues while Moses, portrayed by Burt Lancaster, insists that his people be freed, in the third presentation of the "Moses — The Lawgiver."

When Pharaoh refuses to give in to Moses and Aaron, with their demands for freedom, Moses threatens to convince the Egyptians with signs from God. The signs are plagues: the rivers turn to blood; the earth is tormented with a rain of frogs and locusts. Yet, Pharaoh stands firm. The final torment, that the Angel of Death shall take every first male child, is the ultimate threat. While the Egyptian captors fear for their children, the Israelites celebrate their first Passover, a ceremony to remind them of their origins, their troubles, and their passing over from death to life.

Anthony Quayle got to know Moses quite well long before he portrayed the Biblical patriarch's brother Aaron, in these drama specials.

The distinguished British actor had played Moses in Christopher Fry's play "The Firstborn," opposite Katharine Cornell, on Broadway in 1958, 15 years before filming of "Moses — The Lawgiver" began in Rome and Israel.

Quayle and Cornell had brought 'Firstborn' to Israel after the Broadway run of the poetic drama and they played it to great acclaim.

ANTHONY QUAYLE stars as Moses' brother, Aaron in "Moses — The Lawgiver." The highly-praised series of six hour-long drama specials, is being rebroadcast on six consecutive Sunday nights. Sunday, July 1 is Part III (10-11 p.m.) on CBS.

Free-Wheeling Mavericks!

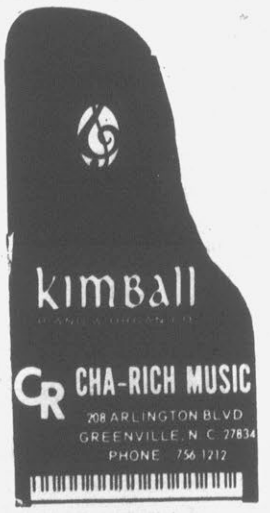

James Garner and Jack Kelly return as the legendary Mavervick brothers, joining forces with their handsome cousin in a free-wheeling western adventure involving an explosive train robbery, a fortune in stolen arms and a double-crossing judge, when "The New Maverick" airs.

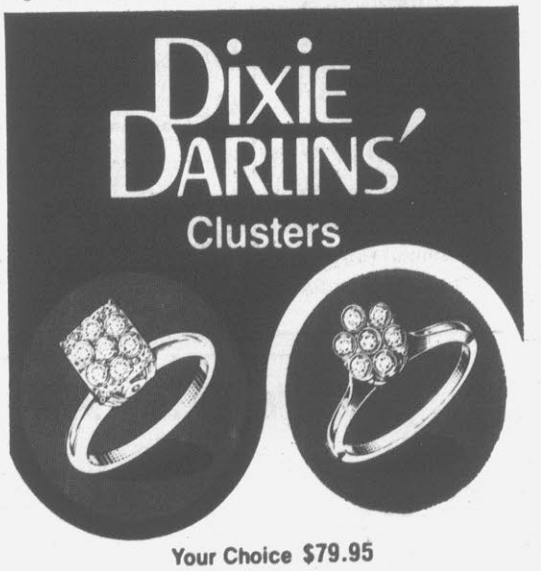

Hot on the trail of a fast buck, the senior Mavericks suddenly find themselves partnered with Ben Maverick (Charles Frank), son of their British-born cousin, Beau. The young eastern-born Maverick suddenly finds himself short of traveling money, the tie that binds him to his notorious cousin Bret (Garner) in an all-out search for their clansman and con game cohort, Bart Maverick (Kelly).

Along the way, Ben discovers Nell (Susan Blanchard), Bret meets his female counterpart, the legendary Poker Alice (Susan Sullivan), and Bart runs a con game of his own with a free-wheeling Frenchman named Leveque (Woodrow Parfrey). The situation looks hopeless — though never serious.

Coleman In Film

Gary Coleman, 10-year-old star of "Diff'rent Strokes," will star in his first motion picture, "The Kid From Left Field," slated to air on NBC-TV.

Emmy-Winner

The recent Emmy Award-winner edition of "Razzmatazz" — cited as "Outstanding Children's Informational Special" — will be rebroadcast Tuesday, July 3 (4 to 4:30 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

In the lead story, "Apple Jack," a hot-air balloon, not unlike the helium-propelled "Double Eagle III" that flew to France last August, takes Brian Tochi "up, up and away!"

Flying "Apple Jack" and "Goldfinger," another $6,000 balloon, is the hobby of Gail and Wally Short and their four children. Kevin Short shows Tochi how a balloon is inflated, and soon the Short family and Tochi are aloft over Albuquerque, N.M. — along with 265 other balloons racing in the seventh annual International Hot Air Balloon Festival.

Some Strange Secrets!!

Reincarnation, sentamentality and things done during early careers have been just some of the areas covered on NBC-TV's "All Star Secrets," Monday thru Friday (10:30 to 11 a.m.), when stars on the celebrity panel reveal their secrets to millions of TV viewers.

"Part of the show's charm is that viewers seldom can guess just what secret is connected to which star — it's not obvious at all," says show host Bob Eubanks.

"Can you imagine the hilarity when it's revealed that Pat Boone's secret is he was once arrested for breaking and entering?" Eubanks continues, "or that Orson Bean says he has the ability to talk to butterflies?"

Eubanks, who hosts the syndicated show "The Newlywed Game" and was a top Los Angeles music promoter and disc jockey, thinks the show's format is what audiences are looking for. "It's a little of the unexpected. You expect a pretty girl to have won a beauty contest BUT when Jamie Farr says his secret is that he once was named Miss Congeniality in Alaska, that's a switch and viewers like it," Eubanks continues.

Some of the other more notable "switches" secrets from panelists who viewers didn't associate with the secrets included:

Greg Morris — he believes in reincarnation and is convinced he was once King David.

Doc Severinsen — also believes in reincarnation and would like to return in his next life as a horse.

Della Reese — is a licensed barber.

HEARS STARS' SECRETS — Host Bob Eubanks, of NBC-TV's "All Star Secrets," gets to hear the varied secrets of the celebrity panelists when top personalities reveal never-before-told incidents in their backgrounds. The Monday-Friday game show airs 10:30-11 a.m.

Arte Johnson — has a I.Q. of 146.

Norm Crosby — has a good luck token — a small elephant — in his back pocket and has not performed without it in more and 25 years.

"I think as long as we keep coming up with some offbeat secrets," says Eubanks, "viewers will continue to watch us."

A Most Versatile Actor

From the sound stage of Los Angeles to the footlights of Broadway, Al Freeman, Jr., is known as one of the most versatile practitioners of the acting craft. A veteran of eight Broadway plays and musicals, he has as many movie roles and guest appearances on television to his credit and, in 1979, he received the Emmy Award for Outstanding Actor in a Daytime Drama Series for his portrayal of Ed Hall in "One Life to Live."

Al considers San Antonio, Texas, and Columbus, Ohio, as his dual hometowns, having moved back and forth several times as a youth. He entered Los Angeles City College as a pre-law major but his extracurricular involvement with the school's theater group became more important to him than preparing for a law career. He dropped out of school to join the Air Force, made friends with a student actor and made up his mind to abandon the courtroom for the stage.

Teen Scene

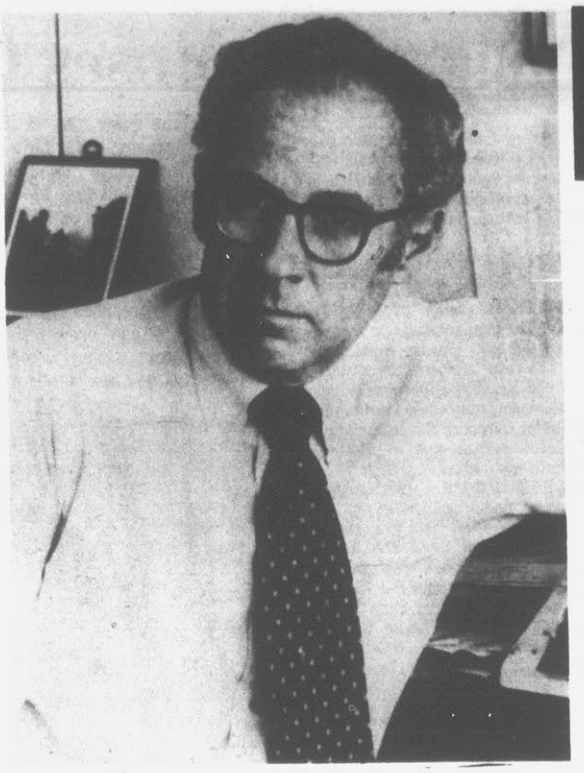

SHAUN CASSIDY will star in his own hour-long variety special for NBC in November of this year, parts of which will take the viewer behind the scenes of his upcoming summer concert tour. Shaun is also wearing the title of executive producer of the special, although at this time he's not set any guest stars. Still, the hour-long show will be about 50 percent music and 50 percent off-stage looks at his life.

KRISTY McNICHOL will star in a TV movie for CBS called "MY OLD MAN." Also starring will be WARREN OATES and EILEEN BRENNAN in the poignant drama of a 16-year-old girl and her hapless horse-trainer father. Kristy's character name in the film will be Jo Butler. No air date has been set.

K.C. of K.C. AND THE SUNSHINE BAND is eyeing the possiblity of adding acting to his career. While he and his band begin a summer tour in July on the heels of the release of their newest album, "DO YOU WANNA PARTY," K.C. has taken advantage of a lengthy stay in Hollywood to meet with producers and casting directors regarding the possibility of his first acting role.

When PETER BARTON makes his acting debut as SHIRLEY JONES' son in her new hour-long series this Fall, it'll mark the first time foxy Peter has ever been in front of a TV camera outside of when he appeared in the pilot for the series. In fact, as recently as last September he was attending college preparing to become a pharmacist, but in short order he was introduced to modeling which led to his promising acting career.

It'll be SUSAN RICHARDSON tying the marital knot on TV's "EIGHT IS ENOUGH" this Fall, marking the first Bradford daughter to leave the family nest. Also, GRANT GOODEVE'S role as David will take on a new and different look.

PAUL DUKE, moderator of PBS' "Washington Week in Review," is shown in his office at Washington, D.C. "Our duty is to inform rather than entertain so we look for a good mix of people and a good flow to the discussion to keep the people interested," he says.

Michele Will Tell

Q: Is the man who plays Dan Stewart on "As the World Turns" planning to leave the series? H. GREENFIELD, DUDLEY, N.C.

A: Unless a miraculous cure is found for Dan Stewart's terminal illness, actor John Colenback will have no choice BUT to pick himself up from his 'death bed' and make a dash to the nearest exit!

Q: When are some more movies about Gen. Custer's last stand coming back on TV? L. BEST, GREENVILLE, N.C.

A: There have been about 10 movies already depicting Custer's efforts, and I doubt that any producer can come up with a new approach for this time-worn subject. The films about the legendary battle of Litte Big Horn are mainstays of the 'late movie' programming, so keep an eye on your TV listings.

Q: Please tell me the name of the television series that starred Sally Field and John Davidson. F. CASSIDY, HARTSVILLE, S.C.

A: The series was "The Girl With Something Extra," all about Sally and John Burton (Field and Davidson) and their decidedly abnormal marriage (Sally had E.S.P.). 'Girl' aired one season (1973-74) on NBC-TV.

Q: Is the actor who played Grady in "Sanford & Son" the same one who was cast as 'Buckwheat' in "The Little Rascals"? FANS-IN-FLORENCE (S.C.).

A: No. Whitman Mayo played Grady Wilson on "Sanford & Son," and William Henry Thomas, Jr. was 'Buckwheat.' Thomas, now 47, appeared in about 90 "Our Gang" comedies and has been a film technician for Technicolor in Los Angeles for about 25 years now.

Q: Will "Salvage-1" return for another season? N. PRICE, GOLDSBORO, N.C.

A: ABC has given 'Salvage' a renewal for 13 episodes. Although it is not on the fall schedule, it will presumably be a mid-season replacement unless ABC changes its programming earlier — a practice which has been occurring in recent years.

'Get Down 'N Boogie!'

Discomania has hustled its way right off the dance floor and boogie-oogie-oogied its way into America's heart. The fashions, the flash, the dancing and the beat are reverberating throughout the contemporary culture — and their appeal is irresistible. Whether or not you've caught the fever yet, you're invited to "get down and boogie" Monday, July 2 with PBS' "Dancing Disco" (9 p.m.).

The eight-part series will feature dance lessons from teacher Randy Deats, who can untangle the complex moves of a Triple Hustle so that even non-dancers will soon find themselves fast-stepping to the beat of "Keep on Dancin'."

'Plain Old John'

Before John Bennett Perry of ABC's new action/adventure series, "240-Robert," arrived in Hollywood, he was known as plain old John Perry. But, when he was applying for membership in Actors' Equity, he was told that they already had a John Perry and that he would have to change his name. Instead, he added the middle name 'Bennett,' his mother's maiden name.

Quietly Setting Record

A low-key 'talking head' program — that deals with headlines but hardly ever makes them — is quietly setting public television records.

Of all the programs that launched the new national public television network, PBS, in 1969, only "Washington Week In Review" has continued uninterrupted ever since, with a new program each week.

Each Friday night, 52 weeks a year for nearly 12 years now, 'Washington Week' viewers have settled down to watch a handful of journalists from the nation's top newspapers and magazines talk with each other about the week's political news. For half an hour, around a table, they try out their opinions on each other. They interrupt each other, they disagree, they leave untidy loose ends when the program ends.

If there is a secret behind this success, one who should know it is Paul Duke, former NBC news correspondent who has moderated 'Washington Week' since 1974. "'Washington Week' works," says Duke, "because it is a program without rules or rehearsals. We have only one guiding principle — to tell it like it is. In a very real way the informal atmosphere makes us visitors in millions of homes, trying to enlighten people about their government and its leaders."

The series' history has not always been smooth. In 1973 it narrowly escaped anihilation under Administration pressures against public affairs programs on public television. Only a torrent of letters from viewers saved it. In December, 1976, the program was rocked in a very different way by the death of panelist Peter Lisagor. Widely beloved and respected by his peers and by viewers, Lisagor had been a mainstay of the show since its first weeks. Again viewers wrote by the hundreds, this time expressing a personal sense of loss.

It is now two years since Lisagor's death. The show's format has adapted to what producer Elvera Ruby calls "the changed chemistry" among the panelists. No longer can viewers expect to see the same four reporters each Friday.

Moses Gunn Guest-Stars

Moses Gunn guest stars in a two-part segment of "Little House on the Prairie" entitled "Blind Journey," starting Monday, July 2 (8 to 9 p.m. on NBC-TV).

Charles Ingalls (Michael Landon) tries to deal with Mrs. Oleson's strong prejudice against Walnut Grove's only black resident, Joe Kagan (Gunn), while also trying to find a new home for the children in the School for the Blind.

Harriet Oleson, the storekeeper's witchy wife, has used her unbelievable nastiness to become one of the show's favorite characters. She cheats, she lies, she's a social-climbing harridan and she's meaner than a snake spit — but 'Little House' fans love her anyway.

Katherine MacGregor, the rubber-faced actress who portrays Mrs. Oleson, has actually created a secret biography of the character so she'll know exactly how she should react to any given situation.

Viewers who love to hate Harriet, would be amazed to see the behavior of Katherine when she's not in front of the camera. She spends most of her time joking and playing games with the kids on the show — the same ones she terrorizes when she's in front of the cameras.

"I was an only child, and I was aimed at show business from the time I could walk," she says. "Maybe that's why I enjoy silly, childish play now. I missed all that."

She describes her own childhood as "neurotic," and says she could hardly wait to grow up and move away from her mother.

"I jumped head-first into acting, and thought I was having a ball. But I had two bad marriages and almost ruined my health with all that 'fun.' Thank God that I found my religion, and Alcoholics Anonymous. Life has been a lot better since then."

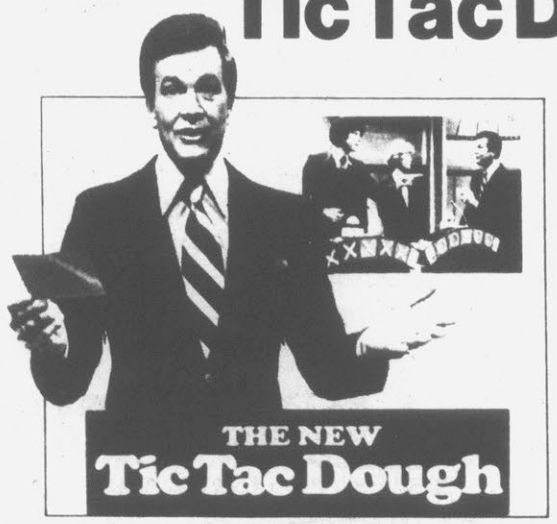

Her warmth and humor are plainly visible as she comments on various aspects of her life: "Will I ever get married again? No, no, no! But I'm not a 'crazy libber.' I like men — in their place."

CONCERNED HELPER — Moses Gunn guest-stars in Part I of "Blind Journey," an exciting drama about efforts to move a number of blind children through dangerous, wooded terrain, on NBC-TV's "Little House on the Prairie" Monday, July 2 (7-8 p.m.).

Johnny Cash Goes Dramatic!

JOHNNY CASH (l) stars as Thaddeus Rose and Bo Hopkins plays Eddie, in "Thaddeus Rose and Eddie," romantic drama airing as "The CBS Tuesday Night Movie," July 3 (9-11 p.m.).

Twenty-eight years ago, Johnny Cash bought his first guitar. He has been making music with it ever since.

Last year, he put aside his music to go completely dramatic in a motion picture for television, "Thaddeus Rose and Eddie," encoring on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," July 3 (9 to 11 p.m.). Cash stars as Thaddeus Rose, along with Diane Ladd, Bo Hopkins, and his wife, June Carter Cash.

However, once the movie was completed, Cash went right back to what he describes as his first love, singing.

Cash was in the United States Air Force, stationed in Germany, when he bought that first guitar for $5.00. Since then, he has become one of the guiding forces in the music world.

Cash likes the change of pace, but he is selective about the roles he plays.

"One of my priorities in making something is that it be good family entertainment," he notes.

"I chose the 'Thaddeus Rose' part because of that, and the fact that I've been through all of this — bumming around and farming. And it has a lot of comedy in it."

Cash relates the movie to country music, of which he is an acknowledged authority. "I think country music speaks of the basic virtures of human beings," he says. "It says that people aren't all good, but that they aren't all bad, either. 'Thaddeus Rose' isn't like that."

Cash says the concert tour is his first love and prime occupation. "I plan my tours six to nine months in advance, which is one reason I can't to do much movie work."

Cash does most of his touring on the concert in his $200,000 mobile home. Travelling with him are usually his wife and one or two of his children. June can often be found sweeping out the interior while Johnny is in the efficiency kitchen making his famous chili, which he dispenses with gusto to everyone within the immediate area — friends, fans or family.

He holds his fans in special regard. During the filming of "Thaddeus Rose and Eddie" on location in Texas, Cash often stood outside, signing autographs, smiling for pictures, and shaking hands. That's what makes him a star," a crew member said. "He doesn't forget who made him."

Society's Reflection

There was a time when the word "runaway," used in reference to children, meant something adventurous, amusing — even normal. But that isn't the case in 1970s. Today's teen-age runaways flee in desperation rather than for adventure.

It is largely the story of today's young runaways that was dealt with in NBC's series, "The Runaways," now airing again (Tuesdays, 8 to 9 p.m.). The age groups vary in each of the segments, of course.

TALE OF SURVIVAL — Robert Fuller stars as a pioneer who attempts to save his family when they encounter numerous obstacles crossing the plains en route to California, in "Donner Pass: The Road to Survival," on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Sunday, July 1 (8-10 p.m.).

Fuller Stars In 'Donner Pass'

Robert Fuller stars as a pioneer waging a desperate fight to save his family from a terrible fate, in "Donner Pass: The Road to Survival," a two-hour movie based on an actual incident to be rebroadcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Sunday, July 1 (8 to 10 p.m.).

Andrew Prine, John Anderson, Diane McBain, Michael Callan and John Doucette co-star.

Fuller plays James Reed, head of a family that joins up with the ill-fated Donner party as it crosses the plains heading for California. After surviving sudden sandstorms, stampedes, an attack by a wild bear and Indian raids, Reed is wrongly accused of murder and banned from the group. Rather than risk the safety of his wife and four children, Reed insists that they remain with the party while he goes on ahead alone. A sudden snowstorm in the high Sierras leaves the party stranded. Starving, they face a dreadful choice.

Prine stars as Keyser, a man whose greed endangers the entire party. Anderson plays Breen, a friend whose fear of starvation turns him into an enemy. McBain portrays Margaret Reed, who prays for her husband's return while trying to keep her children alive. Callan appears in the role of William Eddy, who tries to protect the Reed family when the normal rules of human behavior are abandoned. Doucette plays George Donner, the man picked to lead the wagon train — which lost more than half its members — in this grisly page from American history.

Not The Worrying Kind

Bo Hopkins is one actor who takes things in his stride.

"I just try to do the best job I can and let the others get excited," he says.

One of Hopkins' recent 'best jobs' was playing Eddie in the TV movie "Thaddeus Rose and Eddie," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," July 3 (9 p.m.). Johnny Cash plays Thaddeus Rose, with Diane Ladd and June Carter Cash as their respective girlfriends.

A majority of Hopkins' roles have been in westerns, which he enjoys. "But I don't want to get typecast," he emphasizes. "And that's what you have to watch for when you have a southern accent. I've been fortunate in being able to play different roles and I hope that continues. I want to play a variety of individuals, different characters."

Hopkins' accent comes naturally, having been born in Greenville, S.C. He entered the army at 16, later went back home and joined a local little theater group, which worked into a summer-stock scholarship and a trip to New York for a screen test.

"One thing that interested me in the role of Eddie," Hopkins says, "was that he is a man of about 40. I had never been aged in a movie before and I liked that challenge. And, it's a contemporary romantic drama set in the West, not a western."

Hopkins, who is known for registering sensitive portrayals, says he tries to bring a new insight or a new touch of artistry to his roles.

Kennedy Stars

Academy Award-winner George Kennedy stars as a middle-aged businessman who falls in love with a much younger woman doctor in "Never Say Never," a special half-hour comedy to be presented later this month on CBS-TV.

Hitchcock's 'Frenzy'

Chief Inspector Tim Oxford (Alec McCowen) of Scotland Yard finds telltale traces of face powder in Brenda's rifled handbag which may help identify the stolen bills and thus identify the killer.

JON FINCH stars as an accused murderer caught in an ever-tightening web of circumstantial evidence, in "Frenzy," the "Tuesday Movie of the Week," July 3 at 11:30 p.m. on ABC.

Unique Cure

Homesickeness suffered by Americans living overseas should be helped considerably by a new and unique project ABC Pictures International has begun, "Touch of Home."

"Touch of Home" prepresents the marketing of a variety of ABC-produced program abroad for non-broadcast purposes — for viewing in cassette form primarily by Americans and other employed in foreign locations. This effort recognizes that moral and personal adjustment problems may occur when Americans leave their homes in the United States, and, through familiar television programming, attempts to ease the culture change by keeping those individuals better informed about news and life in general back home.

David Cassidy As 'Rookie' Cop

Former teen hearthrob David Cassidy stars as a young rookie cop who poses as a high school student to bust a drug ring in "A Chance to Live," a special two-hour "Police Story" drama airing on NBC-TV Wednesday, July 4 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Recruited because of his youthful appearance by Abrams (Edwards), the head of a juvenile narcotics division, Officer Dan Shay (Cassidy) infiltrates a high school and becomes fast friends with some of the leading student drug connoisseurs.

As he patiently seeks a school connection to a major supplier, Shay constantly guards against disclosing his true identity and compromising his professional objectivity because of amorous advances by a few foxy 'classmates.'

Confused by these temptations, tempered only the by the love of his pregnant wife, Shay is disturbed by the overdose of an earnest friend as he nears the source of the school's narcotics traffic.

Original disco and rock music — in the style of the film "Saturday Night Fever" — was specially recorded for the drama.

Two songs — "Street Man" and "Touching in the Dark" — were recorded for the action-drama by the Brooklyn Dreams, and there are seven additional songs used to underscore the action: "Music, Harmony and Rhythm" and "Sad Eyes" by the Brooklyn Dreams; "Spank Your Thang" by Morris Jefferson; "Gotta Keep A Runnin'": by the Godz; "Silent Tears" by Stallion; and "Midnight Flight" and "At Last the Search Is Over" by the Pips.

'Sesame' Moves

"Sesame Street" has moved to the Smithsonian's National Museum of History and Technology where it will 'reside' through Labor Day. The special exhibit, "Ten Years of Sesame Street," was organized by the museum's Community Life Division.

MAX VON SYDOW, right, as a missionary to the Hawaiian islands, tries to help his son (Clas Von Sydow) face a family tragedy in "Hawaii." The epic motion picture will be broadcast as a special movie presentation, Wednesday, July 4 (8-11 p.m.) on CBS.

Movie 'Hawaii' Encores

The film version of James A. Michener's epic best-seller "Hawaii," which stars Julie Andrews, Max Von Sydow and Richard Harris, will be rebroadcast as a special movie presentation on CBS-TV Wednesday, July 4 (8 to 11 p.m.). Also starring in the film are Carroll O'Connor and Gene Hackman.

The Rev. Abner Hale (Von Sydow) does battle for a nation of souls and tries to hold onto the soul of a single woman — his wife Jerusha (Andrews). Transplanted from their staid and rigid New England home, Hale and Jerusha risk the dangerous and arduous trip around Cape Horn to settle in and civilize the lush islands of Hawaii.

The natives experience the first signs of civilization when Hale orders them to destroy their pagan idols, cover themselves with sufficient clothing and abolish their ancient practice of incestuous marriage. In return, he offers them the new ways. But change brings with it ravaging new diseases, commercialism and money hunger, and the corruption of a more demanding time.

Rafer Hoxworth (Harris), an arrogent seaman, comes with the tide of merchants and threatens Hale's position on the islands and even his marriage.

The motion picture was filmed on locations ranging from the Arctic Circle to Sturbridge village in Massachusetts, and to the beaches of Hawaii. The supporting cast of native Hawaiian players is seen against the background of the spectacular grandeur of the islands.

UNDERCOVER CUDDLING — David Cassidy stars as a youthful cop who is recruited to go undercover as a high school student to bust a drug-trafficking ring and Elvira Roussel plays one of the teen-agers he encounters on campus, in "Police Story: A Chance to Live" on the "NBC Wednesday Movie of the Week," July 4 (9-11 p.m.).

Into Character

It was an easy matter for beautiful Susan Sullivan to get into the character for her guest-starring role as a doctor on "The Love Boat," because Susan plays the title role in "Julie Farr, M.D." In the "Doc, Be Patient" episode of "The Love Boat," Susan portrays a doctor who nurses Doc (Bernie Kopell), the ship's ailing physician, back to health.

More Than An Actor

Robert Hays has gained almost overnight fame and success as a result of his role as Donna Pescow's husband in the ABC comedy hit, "Angie."

However, he is truly unspoiled by all the glamour and attention that's come his way, because away from the Paramount Television sound stage he is more than just an actor.

ROBERT HAYS stars as wealthy young pediatrician Brad Benson in ABC-TV's hit comedy series, "Angie," which airs Thursdays (8:30-9 p.m.).

"I floundered around a lot until I got into college," he explains. "My dad was in the service and we traveled around a lot. Although home was always Southern California, we never spent all that much time there when I was growing up.

"Well, I guess that vagabond style of living kind of becomes your nature because, like, I've driven across this country about 15 times, and in the process I pursued a lot of different vocations.

"At one point, I thought about being a mountain climbing guide, and when I got my Brown Belt in karate I though about teaching that. And I took scuba diving, got my scuba certificate to where I could teach scuba, so I thought I would do that. But in reality, I never knew what I was going to do until I decided to go to college."

That happened when Bob and his family returned to the San Diego area of Southern California, and when he went to enroll for his first semester, the only class openings were in track and field and beginning acting. Bob enrolled in both.

"I found out very quickly that in acting there was something I could do that I really enjoyed and could get A's in, too," he explains.

He quit college and went to work at San Diego's Globe Theater where he was paid $45 a week for appearing in nine shows each week. For extra money, he learned photography and took and printed pictures for aspiring actor friends while living in his Volkswagon bus, 'Buster.' He also cleaned classrooms at local colleges at night to earn extra money.

Eventually, small television roles came his way and then guest-starring parts before he was cast in the lead of a pilot called "Almost Heaven." When it didn't sell, he was hurridly cast in "Angie."

"It all happened so very fast!" he exclaims. "I did a test one week, and the next week I was on the set."

Still, when he's not working on the series, he works out at a L.A. Karate school and devotes weekends to taking pictures. During hiatus he's inclined to get away from it all in 'Buster,' just like he did before fame came his way.

Jones Tangles With A Cult

Barnaby Jones conducts a puzzling murder investigation that leads him to the ominous workings of a powerful religious cult, headed by a self-appointed "messiah," played by Pat Hingle, in a special two-part episode of "Barnaby Jones," to be rebroadcast on two consecutive Thursdays, July 5 and 12 (10 p.m. both nights), on CBS-TV.

When Lawrence Adams, corporate attorney for the Nettleson conglomerate, has his life threatened, he turns to his friend, Barnaby Jones, for help. Just as quickly, he asks the investigator to drop the case and, a short time later, is found murdered. Barnaby then assures Mrs. Adams that he's continuing with the investigation.

The trail leads to a missing girl, Diana Scott, and a religious organization headed by a self-annointed "messiah," G. Wesley Garrison. Scott is traced to the cult through the work of Barnaby's assistants, Betty and J. R. Jones, and the investigation centers around Garrison's considerable holdings.

SPOTLIGHT

John's Not Fat Anymore!

There was a time not too many years ago when John Schneider wasn't the tall, slender blonde-headed good-looking guy that he is today.

The star of CBS-TV's "The Dukes of Hazzard" was just a "big fat kid" who was always the victim of pranks and jokes by his friends and even his older brother.

However, hiding behind the 250 pounds he used to carry on his tall frame was a teen-ager who wanted to be an actor.

"Growing up in a small town in Georgia," John says, "you didn't really go around talking about wanting to be an actor, especially if you were as big as I was at the time.

"I mean, because I was so fat I lived a life that was sort of withdrawn. I just lived within myself and didn't do a lot with kids my own age because I always felt out of place. I had asthma when I was younger so I couldn't run and, of course that means I couldn't participate in sports or anything. So I always had this defeatist attitude about slimming down.

"You see," he adds, "I was always big for my age. When I was eight years old I looked 14, and when I was 14, I looked 20. I look younger now than when I was 18."

At that time John weighed almost 250 pounds and had a 42-inch waist. Today, his belt measurement is 32.

"One day my brother, Bob — who always called me 'Fat' and teased me unmercifully — said, 'There are a lot of people who are fat, but you don't have to be one of them. If you'd stop sitting around stuffing your mouth while watching TV, you could lose all that weight."

JOHN SCHNEIDER

That was the incentive John needed, and with the willing help of his mother he began dieting.

"I ate next to nothing for two weeks while I painted a neighbor's house," he explains. "I'd outgrown the asthma so I also exercised, and my mom fixed me low calorie meals and in two months I lost 50 pounds."

At the same time he gained the confidence to not only express but to pursue his interest in acting. While doing a play in Atlanta he was spotted by the producers of his current TV show and soon found himself in Los Angeles as a professional actor.

WEDDING BELLS promise anything but bliss for Suzanne Pleshette, Don Meredith (l) doesn't seem interested in preventing her unwelcome wedding to Tony Randall (r) in "Kate Bliss and the Ticker Tape Kid," western comedy-drama to be broadcast as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," July 6 (9-11 p.m.).

Multi-Talented 'Cowboy' Rides

Meredith reached the Big-Four-Oh while filming "Kate Bliss and the Ticker Tape Kid," a comedy, western.

He plays the leader of benevolent outlaws who harass a Texas land baron (Tony Randall) because he has tricked them out of their ranches. Suzanne Pleshette portrays a private investigator hired by Randall to find out who is tormenting him. Suzanne falls in love with Don when she realizes he is the good guy and her employer is really the bad guy.

If 40 is a time to reflect, Meredith, could look back with satisfaction on his earlier life. He left the small Texas city of Mount Vernon to enjoy great football success. A man of easy grace and charm and flat-out honesty, the handsome blue-eyed Texan moved deftly into broadcasting and, in recent years, to acting.

Bjorn Borg No. 1 Seed

Swedish tennis star Bjorn Borg, who will be aiming for a historic fourth straight Wimbledon singles title, has been seeded No. 1 among the men scheduled to compete in the 102nd edition of the All-England Tennis Championships. NBC Sports is presenting a total of 10 3/4 hours of 1979 Wimbledon coverage, the highlight of which will be first-time-ever live coverage of the men's singles final Saturday, July 7 (9 a.m. to 3 p.m.).

The beautifully groomed grass courts of the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club have, in recent years, been very much to Borg's liking. He captured his first Wimbledon singles crown just one month after his 20th birthday in 1976 by defeating Ilie Nastase. His 1977 and 1978 singles championships came at the expense of Jimmy Connors.

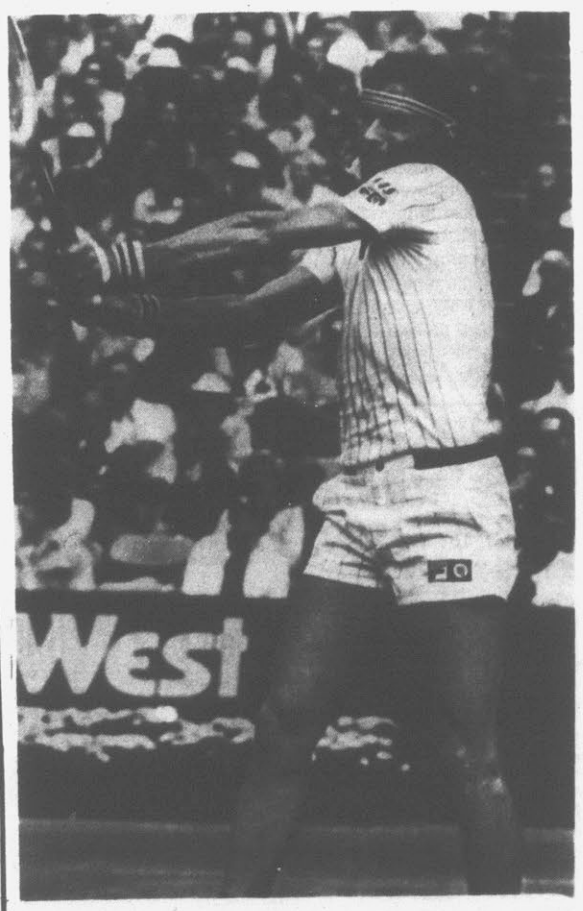

A 1979 Wimbledon singles title would firmly establish the 23-year-old Swede as one of the major figures in the history of the game. Coming off his second consecutive French Open triumph, and fourth overall (1974, '75, '78 and '79), Borg is in position to become the first man ever to win the French and Wimbledon titles four years in a row. Should he win, he will be the first man since Anthony Wilding to win Wimbledon singles titles four years in a row. Wilding' titles (1910-13) came when the tournament format known as the Challenge Round still existed.

The Challenge Round concept, which remained in effect at Wimbledon until 1922, enabled the previous year's winner to qualify automatically for a spot in the final. In addition to Wilding, only three other players — Willie Renshaw, Reggie Doherty and his brother, Laurie Doherty — have won four or more Wimbldon singles titles and most of those championshps were earned by winning a single match. Borg, then, has a chance to do what no other player at Wimbledon has ever done — win the coveted title four consecutive years playing the full grueling tourney.

Among the other top-seeded players expected to challenge Borg for the 1979 title are brash 20-year-old John McEnroe, the No. 2 seed who bested Borg in early May to win the WCT singles title; Vitas Gerulaitis, winner of the 1979 Italian Open and No. 4 seed; No. 5 seed Roscoe Tanner, whose rocket-like serves are even more explosive on the Wimbledon grass; and No. 3 seed, Jimmy Connors, who has played for the Wimbledon singles title on four different occasions, emerging victorious in 1974.

'Password Plus'

Pat Harrington (of "One Day at a Time") and Barbara Rhoades will team with contestants on NBC-TV's word-clue game, "Password Plus," this week. Allen Ludden is host.

BJORN BORG will be among the world's outstanding tennis players competing in the men's singles finals of the 1979 All-England Tennis Championships at Wimbledon, England. NBC Sports will present live coverage of the finals Saturday, July 7 (9 a.m. to 3 p.m.).

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE
PFA Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Although JACLYN SMITH and husband DENNIS COLE caught a red-eye special flight back to L.A. from the "CHARLIE'S ANGELS" location in the Virgin Islands, when they walked off their plane at 2 a.m., they were greeted by no less than a half-dozen photographers. Fortunately, as Dennis says, Jackie is beautiful no matter what time of the day or night it happens to be.

Showing that anything is still possible in Hollywood, GEORGE HAMILTON is now dating LIZ TREADWELL who, at one time, was the steady of ROD STEWART. Rod, of course, is now married to George's ex-wife, ALANA.

DONNA PESCOW arrived at a private screening of the new CLINT EASTWOOD movie, "ESCAPE FROM ALCATRAZ," on the arm of her TV hubby, ROBERT HAYS, something that is occurring with considerable regularity. At one point, Donna was splitting her time between Bob and MARK HARMON, but if there's a race for "ANGIE'S" affections, it appears that handsome Bob is presently in the lead.

The late TOTIE FIELDS' husband, GEORGE JOHNSTON has filed suit against two prominent Las Vegas physicians alleging that the doctors provided improper medical services which led to Totie's death. The suit claims that DRS. THEODORE JACOBS and PARVIN MODABER JACOBS, a husband and wife medical team, gave improper advice to a New York doctor regarding cosmetic surgery performed on the comedienne.

Production on TV's "EIGHT IS ENOUGH" was delayed one day as a result of a contract dispute between series star DICK VAN PATTEN and LORIMAR PRODUCTIONS. Dick failed to report to work on the scheduled first day of filming, which was a Friday, but he's signed a new pact by the following Monday.

PAM DAWBER is calling handsome PHILIP COCIOLETTI "just a good friend," but they're being seen together with increasing regularity, which certainly suggests that they're very, very good friends, at least!

The Man To Beat

South Africa's Jody Scheckter will be the man to beat in the French Grand Prix, to be run Sunday, July 1, in Dijon, France.

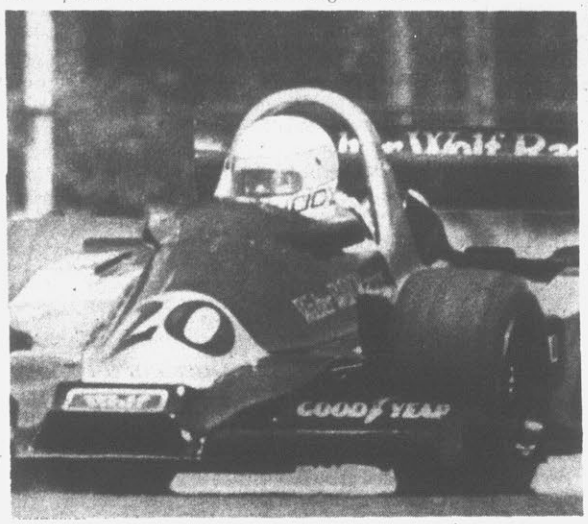

Among the Formula One drivers expected to challenge Scheckter, currently the leader for the 1979 world driving championship, are America's Mario Andretti, Argentina's Carlos Reutemann, and Jacques Lafitte of France.

Scheckter broke a tie with Lafitte for the driving championship by winning the Grand Prix of Monaco last month. Both men had 23 Grand Prix points entering that race, and the victory would normally have given Scheckter nine more in the standings. However, new rules this season, so Scheckter was forced to drop the three points he had received for finishing fourth in the Spanish Grand Prix. He now has a total of 30.

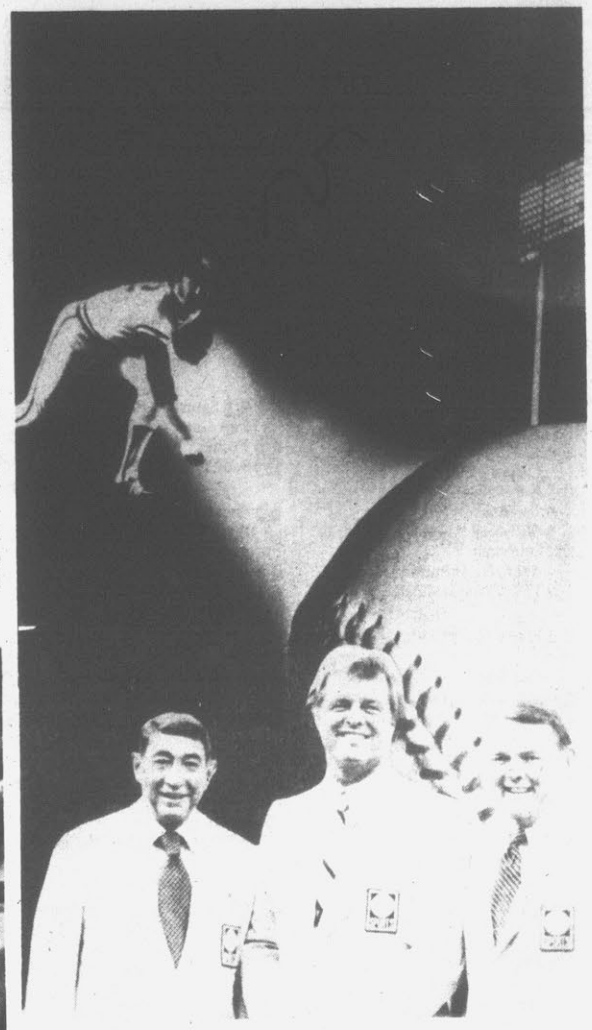

Lafitte, who did not place at Monaco, is now second with 24 points, and Reutemann, with 20 points, is tied for third with Canada's Gilles Villeneuve and Patrick Depailler of France.

Reutemann is another driver who lost points due to the new formula. Entering the Monaco race with a total of 19 points, his third-place finish there would normally have added four more to his total, or 23 points. However, in order for him to accept the four points, he first had to drop the three points he had

JODY SCHECKTER, the leader for the 1979 world driving championship, is the man to beat in the French Grand Prix. CBS Sports will present same-day coverage of the race Sunday, July 1 (1 to 1:30 p.m.).

ABC SPORTS enters into a new five-year agreement with Major League Baseball in 1979, with another season of "ABC's Monday Night Baseball," plus three Sunday afternoon games in September when the pennant races are hottest, culminating in ABC Sports' exclusive coverage of the 1979 World Series. Howard Cosell, Don Drysdale and Keith Jackson (l to r) once again will be the primary broadcast team for ABC's coverage of the National Pastime.

Not Bad Company!

ABC Sports, who only re-entered the major league baseball scene several years ago, has recently signed a new five-year contract with the baseball brass, indicating that their coverage of the 'Grand Old Game' is still alive and well.

That comfortable situation didn't always exist and it has only been within the last season that the network came alive in their baseball broadcasts.

This year, in addition to the 'Monday Night Baseball,' the network will also televise three Sunday afternoon games in September, providing action during the hottest pennant race period, and also has the rights to the 1979 World Series.

One of the biggest problems facing ABC when they began coverage of baseball a few years ago was camera-work. The network employees behind the camera were on strike and ABC officials had to provide the visual shots.

Once that problem was ironed out, another, more serious dilemma arose: a lack of talented voices behind the microphone. Bob Prince of Pittsburgh Pirate fame shared mike duty with Warner Wolf, a veteran of radio sports in the nation's captial. Both had problems adjusting to national broadcasting, and several other announcers were tried in the interim.

But three seasons ago, ABC decided to give one of their most gifted announcers, Keith Jackson, a crack at the baseball games. The results were heartening. Jackson provided coverage of the American League playoff between the New York Yankees and the Kansas City Royals in 1976.

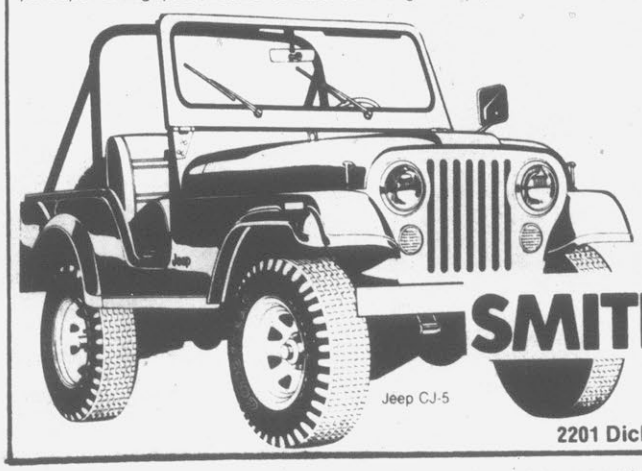

The experiment worked perfectly, and Jackson became a fixture on the 'Monday Night' series for the next two seasons.

The addition of nationally known "Humble" Howard Cosell aroused a lot more curiosity and a good bit of suspicion. The veteran broadcaster provided just the right chemistry for the network's NFL football games, but could he fit in with the sport that he once wise-cracked "belonged in the age of Henry the Fifth"?

RENALDO NEHEMIAH (far left), a world record holder in several hurdling categories, will tune up for a shot at the 1980 Olympic gold medal in the Pan-Am Games, to be broadcast over the next three weekends by CBS. Coverage begins Sunday, July 1 starting at 2:30 p.m. live from San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The Pan American Games

What could be considered the pre-Olympic event for athletes in North America will be held over the next two weeks, the Pan American Games, and CBS-TV will provide unprecedented coverage of this important amateur event with 12-and-a-half hours of exclusive footage, including live and videotape.

This year's Games are being held in San Juan Puerto Rico, and coverage begins Sunday, July 1, on "CBS Sports Spectacular" (2:30 p.m.). The broadcast will present highlights of past Pan American competitions, a history of the games and a preview of the forthcoming competition.

Additional coverage will be presented over the next two weekends, with five special 15-minute segments telecast Monday through Friday, July 9-13.

First held in Buenos Aires, Argentina in 1951, the Pan American Games most recently have become a showcase for top American and Cuban stars and a springboard for many athletes to Olympic stardom.

Among the Pan Am winners at the 1975 Games in Mexico City were Bruce Jenner in the decathlon, Sugar Ray Leonard and Leon Spinks in boxing, and Jennifer Chandler in diving. All went on to win Olympic medals the following year in Montreal.

The Cubans, under the constant pressure for excellence by Fidel Castro, have come alive on the international sports scene, especially in boxing. Teofilo Stevenson, the two-time gold medalist in the Olympics in the heavyweight division, has become the nation's super-hero.

But there are several other Cuban boxers waiting in the wings to steal the title from Stevenson in other boxing classes. In fact, most experts believe that the Cubans will dominate the field in the Pan-Am Games.

The Cubans are also beginning to sprout their wings in such sports as wrestling, swimming and the running events. The South American nations are starting to improve in swimming and track and field. Argentina always manages to field several excellent sprinters and nations such as Columbia and Brazil are always strong contenders in soccer and volleyball.

Enberg's 'Debut'

NBC sportscaster Dick Enberg is making his Wimbledon debut as he works with a select trio of well-known tennis figures — Bud Collins, Donald Dell and Billie Jean King — who are all providing viewers with commentary during the network's Wimbledon telecasts.

For Enberg, the former college professor who began his association with NBC in 1975, Wimbledon is another in a growing list of major events he has covered for the network. Best known nationally for his play-by-play work during college basketball and NFL coverage of Super Bowl XIII, providing the continuity in a fast-paced seven-and-a-half hour telecast. The sport of tennis is not foreign to Enberg, who plays four to five times a week when his schedule allows.

Bud Collins and Donald Dell have become virtual institutions in tennis, much of that recognition coming as a result of their work on tennis telecasts on PBS. Collins, a certified tennis nut who also covers the sport for The Boston Globe, formerly coached at Brandeis and, in 1961, won the National Mixed Doubles Indoor Championship (with Janet Hopps).

Rare, Inside View of Korea

During its 18 years on the air, "ABC's Wide World of Sports" has literally spanned the globe to bring viewers "the constant variety of sport." To be precise, 'Wide World' has presented 136 different sports, and has visited 45 different countries, from A (Australia) to Z (Zaire). Many of the locations to which the show has journeyed have been exotic, remote, and, in various ways, strange. But perhaps the strangest of all was the recent visit by a small production unit to rarely glimpsed North Korea. The occasion was the World Table Tennis Championships, held last month in Pyongyang, North Korea.

In charge of the unit was Eleanor Riger, a veteran producer who has previously covered assignments in such faraway places as Sofia, Bulgaria and Tashkent, U.S.S.R. Because so few people from the west have been allowed inside North Korea in the more than 25 years since the Korean War, this trip was unique for Riger.

She found Pyongyang, the capital, to be a beautiful city with many finely landscaped parks, numerous museums, theatres and amusement parts. "The street and boulevards are wide and beautifully laid out," observes Riger, "but there are virtually no people on them. It's scary as can be, almost like a ghost town." There are several reasons for this, she said. For one thing, there are no private cars allowed in North Korea. And there are few pedestrians out and about because the North Koreans have little idle time. Aside form their regular jobs, they spend much of their time studying, mostly technical subjects of political thought and ideology, and doing volunteer work for their country, such as helping in the planting and harvesting of rice crops.

Trained For Role

For Shirley Jo Finney, starring as the great track star Wilma Rudolph meant a big sacrifice on her part. She had to give up cheese cake and smoking.

"I was 20 pounds overweight and out of condition," she said. "I figured if I was going to play an Olympic star I'd better shape up."

"I began working out about two months before filming started in Nashville, Tenn.," she said. "I was determined that if nothing else I would at least look like an athlete."

THE FARM AT A&P

ADVERTISED ITEM POLICY

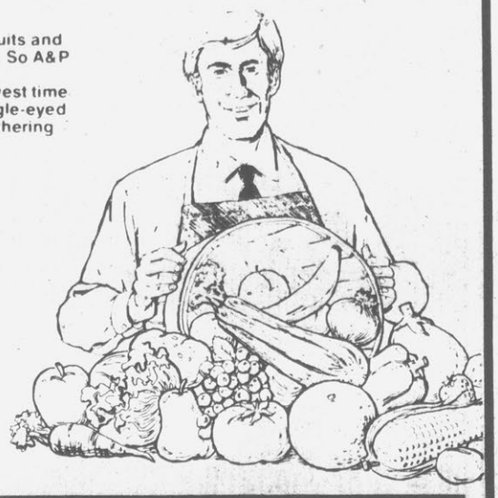

Each of these advertised items is required to be readily available for sale at or below the advertised price in each A&P Store except as specifically noted in this ad.

Where do you go for the freshest fruits and vegetables? To the farm, of course. So A&P brings The Farm to you.

Somewhere in the world, it's harvest time. And that's exactly where A&P's eagle-eyed produce buyers are right now—gathering the pick of the crop and getting it rushed to The Farm in your nearby A&P store.

Their demanding standards and their ability to buy in large quantities means you get exceptional value whenever you buy produce at A&P.

So come take a fresh look at The Farm at A&P and get to know the Farm Manager. He's so proud of his fine fruits and vegetables, you'd think he grew them all himself! And he'll help you find exactly what you need to be equally proud when you serve it to your family!

Moore's has everything you need to make your project easy and economical, from tools, concrete mixes and hardware to patio covers.

FOR W. MICHAEL BLUMENTHAL, Secretary of the Treasury

With inflation and taxes causing a loss in purchasing power, shouldn't U.S. bond buyers try elsewhere? — Max Hirschfelder, Centralia, Ill.

● Savings bonds have unique advantages which make them attractive to savers. Savings bonds are widely available in small denominations. They may be redeemed at any time after the initial holding period, at published prices, and thus are immune from market fluctuations. Such redemptions are without cost or penalty. The interest income is exempt from state and local taxation, and Federal income taxation of the interest on E-Bonds may be differed at the option of the holder. Because of these unique advantages, savings bonds cannot be readily compared with other securities and savings forms. The attractiveness of the savings-bonds programs has been aptly demonstrated by the progress of sales over the years.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Please clear up these questions about Gene Simmons of KISS. How long is his tongue? When he uncurls it, it seems to go on forever. What does KISS stand for? —Lisa Justis, Salisbury, Md.; S. Cole, Dothan, Ill.

● Gene swears his tongue is 7 inches long ("slightly longer than the average which, I believe, is about 4 or 5"). He said he first discovered he had an inch or so on everyone else way back in school — the first time he stuck it out at his teacher ("All the kids in the class watched it come out and out in amazement, compared it with their own, and decided mine was much longer than theirs.") Gene, however, doubts that he'll make the Guinness Book of Records with his tongue: "I'm willing to bet that there are others with longer ones, only they haven't bothered to measure them, and theirs aren't on public view." The meaning of KISS? Why, everyone remembers a kiss!

Gene Simmons: KISS and tell.

Why do you wear nothing but caftans on the show? —Marsha Nettleton, Pismo Beach, Calif.

● I viewed the character as a starry-eyed chorus girl, who came out to Hollywood with dreams of performing in Busby Berkeley films, saw those dreams fade away but still keeps her tap shoes in the back of her closet — just in case. Seemed to me that caftans and garish costume jewelry and a curly red wig would be the right costume for such a character.

FOR NANCY ADDISON, star of ABC-TV's Ryan's Hope

Please explain how acting has given you an entirely new personality. — G.V., Lafayette, La.

● I was very shy and introverted. I had a terribly difficult time being with strangers or going places on my own. Just knowing I was going to enter a room filled with people threw me into panic. Acting changed all that. It has given me inner strength and a sense of pride. Perhaps it would have come anyway, but much of the credit must go to acting.

FOR JACK LA LANNE, physical-fitness authority

How much good can a once-weekly visit to a gym accomplish, and can I improve the shape of the ugly parts of my body? —M. Donnelly, Flint, Mich.

● Once a week is certainly better than no time at all, but, of course, it will take much longer to achieve results — so don't get discouraged if they're slow in forthcoming. It is possible to reshape one's legs and arms or torso by exercising, but a regular plan is necessary to produce what you want. Even if you can't follow a gym's plan, you should work out at home.

FOR ARNO SCHMIDT, head chef, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel

What's the worst thing that can happen to a chef? — H.M., Muncie, Ind.

● What could be worse than knowing your guests aren't happy with what you've prepared? That heads the list of nightmares. After that, there's a breakdown in kitchen equipment; missing one vital ingredient of a recipe. The best equipment cannot remedy fish not being fresh enough, having under- or overripe vegetables or fruit.

FOR PEGGY WILLIAMS, clown with Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Is there a trick to get a whole section of a big arena to laugh at you, and what part of your job gives you the most trouble? —B.W., Morristown, Tenn.

● I spot a person in the audience who has a noisy, infectious laugh and direct my act to him (or her). Such a person gets everyone around laughing too. As soon as I find one of these guys or gals, my routine is a cinch. Toughest part of my work is changing costumes 14 times for every show.

FOR LETITIA BALDRIGE, etiquette authority

How do etiquette experts feel about gum-chewing? —Mrs. A.T. Knight, Sulphur Springs, Texas

● Noisy gum-chewing is visual pollution (a pretty girl, for example, with a contorted jaw loses her prettiness very quickly), but it's also noise pollution. Who needs to have his ears assaulted with the pop, snap and crack of a noisy chewer? The "art of gum-chewing" is at its most appropriate while driving a car, engaged in physical labor, watching or participating in sports.

PRO AND CON

Should Savings Bank Interest Rates Be Raised?

PRO Ellen Broadman, attorney, Consumers Union

Consumers are losing money left in savings accounts because of a Federal regulation called Regulation "Q." That regulation limits the amount of interest that Federally-insured banks and savings and loan associations can pay on savings accounts to 5 percent and 5¼ percent. These limits are so far below inflation rates that money left in savings accounts is diminishing in value daily. Regulation Q is partial to the wealthy. People with more than $10,000 to invest can earn interest close to 10 percent, almost double the rates paid on savings accounts. Is this the role of Government regulation — to make money from the poor to pay the rich? Of course not. Regulation Q should be phased out.

CON Saul B. Klaman, president, National Association of Mutual Savings Banks

Savings banks would like nothing better than to pay higher rates, but they simply can't afford to at present. Their income comes primarily from home mortgage loans, most of which go back many years, when mortgage rates were much lower than they are today. Providing savings banks with variable-rate mortgages and more investment flexibility would help to bridge this income gap. In addition, we strongly favor tax relief for savers. This would not only raise the after-tax return to depositors but help fight inflation. It would also restore some balance to our present tax structure, which encourages borrowing by allowing deductions for interest, yet offers no incentive to save.

FOR IRWIN ALLEN, DISASTER IS A REEL PLEASURE

By Rena Dictor LeBlanc

The secluded Hawaiian beach was a perfect setting for a romantic interlude. The sun was warm, the clear water sparkled, sand stretched from the shore to a backdrop of black lava rocks. He opened a bottle of wine for their picnic as she stretched languorously on the blanket. They chatted and smiled, a handsome couple obviously enjoying these moments together.

Suddenly their eyes widened in shock as they gazed out into the distance. The shock turned to terror as they scrambled off the blanket and toward the helicopter that had brought them to this hideaway. A volcano has just exploded, spewing fireballs into the air. Would they make it to safety in time?

The director called "cut," and Paul Newman and Jacqueline Bisset prepared to do another take. The scene would play on the screen for just a few moments in producer Irwin Allen's upcoming disaster film, The Day the World Ended, which will be released next Easter. But, while the 50-member film crew froze in silence, director James Goldstone had the stars do the scene over and over again.

The Day the World Ended will provide movie-goers with a smorgasbord of disasters, including a volcanic eruption, an earthquake and a tidal wave. Such on-screen catastrophes have become the trademark of producer Irwin Allen, who is often called "the master of disaster."

His specialties, served up to gasping audiences, have included such cataclysmic events as the monster wave that trapped scores of people in the bowels of an ocean liner in The Poseidon Adventure and the traumas of those unfortunates stuck in a 133-story San Francisco skyscraper in The Towering Inferno. He can also claim responsibility for the special effects on television's Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea, Lost in Space, Land of the Giants and The Time Tunnel.

On location for his newest movie, Allen sat several feet away from where the picnic sequence was being shot, relaxing under a beach umbrella and watching the scene slowly take shape. A burly, fiftyish man in sunglasses, a Hawaiian shirt and slacks, he looks more like a tourist than one of Hollywood's most notable wheeler-dealers.

According to Allen, the movie magic that makes a film such as The Day the World Ended possible is the result of modern technology. "The improvement of the techniques and processes in photography and the use of laboratory inventions make spectacular effects possible," he says. "There must be 100 new techniques that were not used as recently as five years ago."

Despite the precautions that are always taken, accidents have happened to actors in Allen's disaster movies. Yet, he's managed to round up another star-studded cast for this film. In addition to Newman and Bisset, the cast includes William Holden, Burgess Meredith, Ernest Borgnine and Red Buttons. "Stars have a sense of adventure," the producer points out. "They're aware that no matter how many precautions you take in a disaster movie, something may go wrong. Yet, I've never had a star back out of a role because of the possible danger involved."

There's $80 million in insurance coverage on the film, which "hopefully, we'll never have to call on," says Allen. "But, when you deal with explosions and floods, you don't know how badly people could be hurt, or — God forbid — killed."

Actor William Holden shrugs off the possible danger. "I think everyone has been subjected to little accidents that happen on the set. Most actors are reluctant to talk about it. Why blame someone because 40 thousand gallons of water came down at one time instead of 25 thousand?" he asks.

"When you're doing an explosion or a fire you prepare for it," director James Goldstone explains, "and prepare the people for it meticulously because there's physical danger involved — as well as the tremendous time involved in doing a disaster scene a second time."

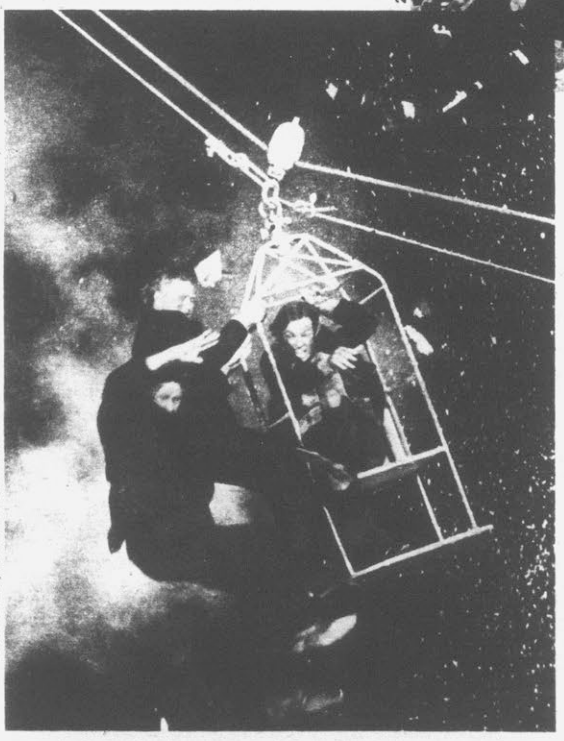

The movie's ultimate disaster, the volcano explosion, will be a combination of miniature, optical and lighting special effects, according to the director. "We are not going to ignite a real volcano," he says, smiling. "I would if we could, but I don't think one is about to accommodate us."

This is actress Jackie Bisset's first disaster film. "These kinds of parts are not an actor's dream by any means," she admits. "It's very difficult to be good in a picture like this, because you have so little character build-up. It's hard to register when you're really basically one of a group. But, it's a big picture and one that I think will be good for my career."

Actor Red Buttons has no qualms about doing this movie despite an accident that happened while he was working on Allen's The Poseidon Adventure. "I slit my foot open from my ankle to my knee on the last day of shooting," he said. "I had to escape through a jagged hole in the boat. I miscalculated as I climbed through, and my leg was ripped. They took me to the hospital, took care of it, and I came back and finished the scene. But I was bandaged up for most of that summer."

Other stars have been injured while working on Allen's films. Paul Newman burned his hands while trying to beat out the flames which were engulfing a man in Towering Inferno. And in Poseidon, Ernest Borgnine tore a ligament in his back while hauling a heavy rope. He was in great pain and had to be carried off in a stretcher. But, after treatment by a doctor, he was back to work the next day wearing a leather corset.

And, although Steve McQueen wasn't injured, he had a close call in Inferno when he momentarily lost his footing while clinging to a cable moved by a crane 60 feet in the air. He hung on desperately with his hands until he managed to get his footing again.

According to Allen, most of his special effects are based on his nightmares. "I continually dream and have the most horrifying dreams in the world," he says. For most people that would be a problem, but Allen's managed to turn it into profit. "I try to dream up new and hysterical special effects. I even keep a dictating machine at my night table so I won't forget them," he says with a chuckle.

This former Hollywood reporter, talk-show host and literary agent admits that he believes the reason his disaster movies are so successful is because "There's something wrong with human nature. If there weren't, people wouldn't stop and gape at an automobile accident, nor would they gather around fires.

"Groucho Marx once said, 'There's no sound as sweet as the crumbling of your fellow man.' That's not my philosophy," he stresses. "But, apparently, it must be true because people do seek out tragedy. And, how much more exciting it is to see it on a giant screen in the comfort of an easy chair in an air-cooled theater."

Allen admits that he has "a strong feeling such movies take the place of reality and let off steam. The films give people thrills they wouldn't normally have access to. The violence that occurs is not man against man, but the result of nature or some mechanical apparatus."

Making movies is a total gamble, Allen points out, but he's come up with a formula that he feels insures some measure of success. "You spend a lot of money, have a good script, the best stars available and go on location, as we're doing here in Hawaii. This gives the public the motion pictures they can't get on television. And, basically, to be successful you must make it big, make it hysterically exciting, but maintain an air of believability."

As far as his own life is concerned, Allen says a bad cold is the worst disaster he's had in years. "All my disasters are in my pictures," he declares. But he can't escape the occasional jokester who, in deference to his fame as "the master of disaster," crosses the street when he sees Allen coming. FW

WHY YOU MAY BE FIRED

Without realizing it, you may be giving your boss the strong impression that you're no longer interested in your job. Dr. Edward Roseman, president of a management consulting firm and author of Confronting Non-Promotability, explains that any of the following actions can make your supervisors wonder whether you're worth keeping. Withdrawing: You've begun to behave as if you're not personally involved with your job or the company's goals. Maybe you've been passed over for a promotion or raise. In your feelings of rejection, you're cutting yourself loose emotionally from your whole job scene. Winding down: Like "withdrawing," winding down is often caused by the feeling you aren't receiving the job recognition and privileges that are coming to you. In your frustration, you may be avoiding responsibility, not initiating work and careful not to "give anything for nothing." Wandering: You're bored with your job assignments, and it shows. You do as little as possible as quickly as possible. Wailing and warring: You may feel your past loyalty and services are unappreciated and that some "yes-men" with half your ability are getting rewards you deserve. That's your viewpoint. As your boss sees it, the wailer has become a first-class nuisance, a chronic complainer, discussing all kinds of petty and imagined injustices. And the person who is conducting a private war has become, in the boss's opinion, a very undesirable employee who is generally uncooperative and skeptical of authority.

If your reasons for behaving in any of these five ways are important enough, do yourself a favor and change jobs at your own initiative. But don't prolong the behavior and give your boss a reason for forcing you out.

You are protected by The Privacy Act of 1974 if you work for any United States Government agency. Attempts have been made in Congress to give you similar protection if you work for private industry.

Basically, the 1974 Act keeps information you give to a United States agency from circulating freely. Unless you give your written consent, the information may not be passed on. When information is passed on, the agency must record the date, nature and purpose as well as the name and address of the person who obtained the information.

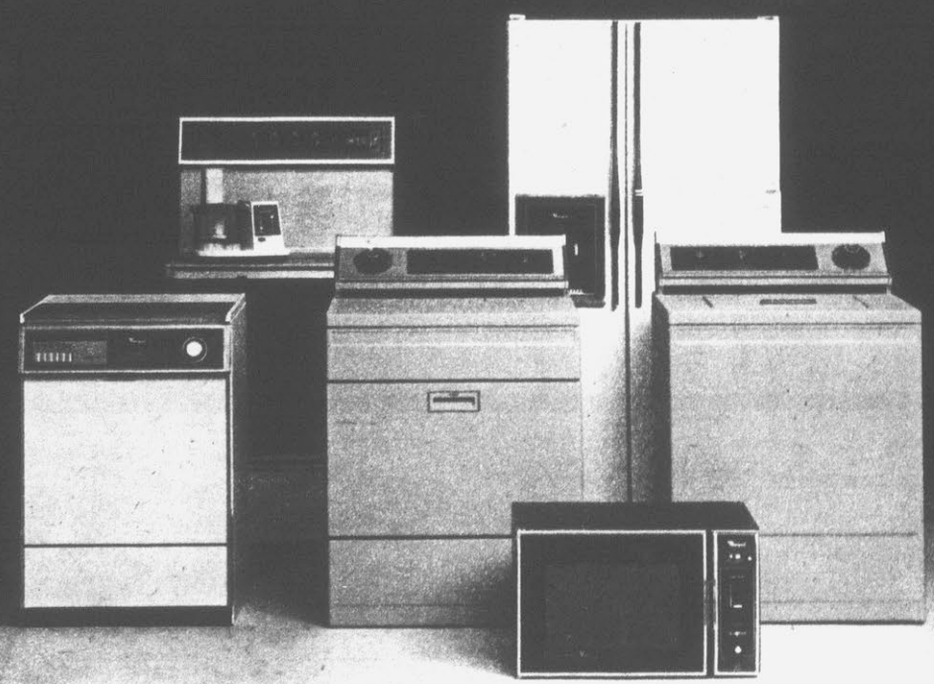

Most important, the agency has to give you this information if you request it. You must also be allowed access to any personal records about you. You, or the person of your choice, must be allowed to review what is in your records, copy any portion of it and request changes if you believe the information is inaccurate.

When you ask for a change, the agency must acknowledge receipt of your request within 10 working days. Then it must either make the correction you asked for or send you notice of refusal. And it must tell you why it is being refused, together with how you can have the matter reviewed and the name and business address of the reviewing officer. If after review, it still refuses to accept changes, it must permit you to write a "concise" statement to be included as part of your record. This statement can outline the dispute and give your position.

Philip G. Benson of Colorado State University, who has done an intensive analysis of The Privacy Act, believes that "nothing as global will probably be passed for private-industry employees. Private employees, however, are becoming very careful about passing on information from employees' records. They are protecting themselves against possible legal difficulties and also demonstrating a growing sensitivity to the privacy rights of employees." —S.R. Redford

BCG: A NEW WEAPON IN THE CANCER WAR

By Isobel Silden

There is still no cure for cancer, but scientists working towards that goal have discovered that a chemical originally used as a vaccine against tuberculosis is proving a formidable ally in their fight against death.

Donald L. Morton, M.D., is world-renowned for his research in cancer. Now 44, he is a graduate of the University of California School of Medicine, and former head of the tumor immunology section at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md. Currently, Dr. Morton is chief of the divisions of general surgery and oncology at UCLA.

Some of his achievements are regarded as miracles by his patients. Dr. Morton, a native of Richwood, West Va., brushes aside this praise. With his team of 25 scientists, he has won many battles against cancer, but not the war, he mourns.

Dr. Morton, and the division which he has headed since its inception in 1971, are best known for their work in the development and application of the immunotherapy of cancer: that is, the stimulation of a patient's immune responses to fight cancer cells.

He explains: "When I began experimenting in the early 1960's, I found that with immunization, mice and guinea pigs could prevent the growth of tumors in their bodies. Immunotherapy is like being given smallpox or typhoid shots: The patient is given a small dose of the actual disease, and the body fights back. Anything foreign is recognized by the body, and it forms immune lymph cells that react with this foreign substance. When bacteria try to invade the body, they elicit antibodies."

The substance that Dr. Morton uses is BCG (Bacillus Calmette-Guerin), a tuberculosis germ from cattle, which was developed at the turn of the century as a vaccine against tuberculosis. It was originally used on doctors and nurses to prevent their getting TB from their patients. It is still used in many countries today. Side effects of BCG are relatively mild.

Dr. Morton was not successful with the first patient to whom he administered immunotherapy. The second, whom he treated in February, 1967, is still "in temporary regression," he states. He will not claim the patient is cured of malignant melanoma nodules in the skin. With caution typical of the medical profession, he cites statistics only in percentages and adds hastily that BCG is not a cure-all for every cancer condition.

"Research is still going on, of course, and all the figures are not in. I think we might say that 80-percent of melanoma patients are cured by surgery. Where the melanoma has spread beyond surgical therapy, we can induce regression in 25 percent, if the tumors have not spread. If the tumors have spread to the liver, lung or brains, BCG may not help."

Dr. Morton and his associates have successfully treated melanoma, lung, breast and colon cancer, bone and soft-tissue sarcomas (growths).

For years, it has been standard procedure to amputate arms or legs if malignant tumors were present in the bone or muscle. The new procedure now combines immunotherapy, chemotherapy and radiation prior to surgery, and only the tumor and surrounding tissue are removed. If the bone itself is involved, a graft is done.

Often, patients with bone or muscle tumors have sarcomas — cancers arising from connective tissues — that spread to the lung. This condition formerly resulted in the death of 80 percent of the patients within two years. New developments have brought the figures down to 30-percent fatalities today.

In patients with early diagnosed lung cancer, BCG is injected into the tumor, and, two weeks later, the cancer is surgically removed. The two weeks allow the body to set up its defenses and fight any possible spreading.

"The ideal patient is one who is diagnosed while the tumor is still localized. If it has spread beyond the site, immunotherapy may work." Dr. Morton's tone and attitude are cautious.

Breast cancer has been successfully treated with a combination of BCG, chemotherapy and a tumor cell vaccine.

"When there is a lump in the breast, the cells may have spread throughout the body, and we don't know where they are. Sometimes immunotherapy will stimulate the body's own immunity to take them out," the doctor elaborates.

The UCLA oncology staff is also conducting research using heat, as a treatment for cancer. It has recently been recognized that tumors are much more sensitive to thermal injury than are normal tissues. The staff has worked with the university's School of Engineering, and a highly sophisticated device has been built to deliver 122°F. of heat to tumors.

Again exercising caution, Dr. Morton states, "This is really new. We're only into our third year of research. I would say there are about 18-percent regressions."

UCLA, Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York City and M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston are the major centers of immunotherapy, although there is research elsewhere.

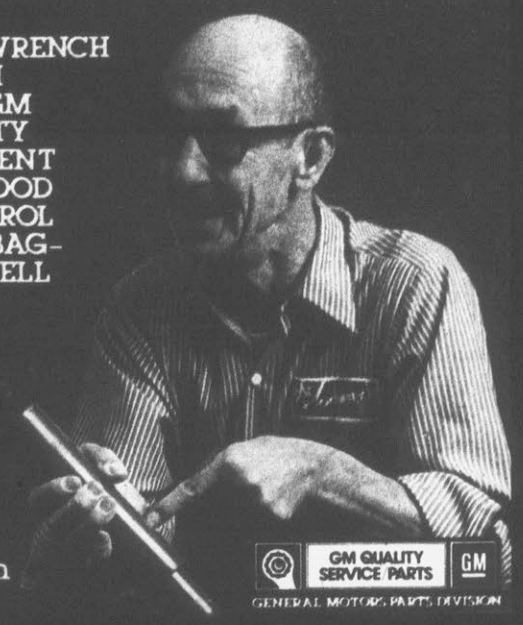

By 1981, two floors of the Jonssen Comprehensive Cancer Center at UCLA will house its expanded division of surgical oncology, with actor Dick Van Patten serving as honorary chairman of the fund-raising drive. Its goal is $1,085,155. The Grants and Special Events Committee acknowledges it is an incredible challenge, adding, "Miracles are what the surgical oncology division is all about!" FW

BUYING TOMORROW'S ANTIQUES AT TODAY'S PRICES

Whether you're a working woman or an active housewife, you might be interested in collecting masterpieces. And, while Picassos and Renoirs are probably beyond your budget, chances are that antique and reproduction furniture are not. Even if you eventually buy only a single piece, you'll have a wonderful time learning about period pieces.

Although the prices on today's antique market are skyrocketing, it is still possible to find reasonably priced furniture, particularly if you are interested in American-made pieces. However, if you've set your sights on a Chippendale highboy or a Hepplewhite chair, a well-made reproduction will probably be more affordable. Today, fine examples of original furniture are being reproduced accurately by manufacturers, both as reproductions, which are exact copies of originals, and as adaptations which copy the flavor of the original but with variations in size, finish or style. A number of these reproductions are being produced by prestigious furniture manufacturers in cooperation with cultural institutions such as the National Trust for Historic Preservation, the Williamsburg Colonial Foundation and various museums throughout the country.

Bettmann Archive

Fortunately, learning about period furniture can cost you nothing but your time. There are hundreds of places that exhibit fine, original masterpieces. Nearly all large cities and many towns have museums or historical societies which proudly display antique furniture. Start cultivating your new hobby at these museums by asking about particular pieces that strike your fancy. Carry a notebook and jot down names, dates and places of origin as you go. This will help you when you want to do further research on a particular period.

If seeing your favorite period pieces in historical settings appeals to you, there are a number of organizations and publications you can turn to for information. The American Association of Museums has compiled The Official Museum Directory which lists museums throughout the country. Or, if you're planning a traveling summer vacation, you might want to consult the Directory of Historical Societies and Agencies in the United States and Canada, a listing published by the American Association for State and Local History. Both references are probably available through your local library.

There are a number of historic houses that contain famous collections of antique furniture and are open to the public. The Winterthur Museum, in Winterthur, Del., is an old du Pont family mansion which contains over 175 room settings of period furnishings which were made or used in America between 1640 and 1840. Another excellent source of information is the National Trust for Historic Preservation. This group maintains 15 historic properties which are open to the public and free to members. The Trust also acts as a clearinghouse for a wide variety of books, and, for Family Weekly readers, a special list of recommended books on historic furniture is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the National Trust for Historic Preservation, 740 Jackson Place NW, Washington, D.C. 20006.

Don't, however, ignore your local museum. Depending on what part of the country you live in, you probably will be able to see original furniture from the early part of your area's history. At the restored Shaker Village in Hancock, N.Y., or at the Shelburne Museum in Shelburne, Vt., for example, you'll see masterpieces in whole, re-created homes. These displays can inspire ways to use reproductions of yesterday's treasures in rooms designed for today. Since many museums have reproduction agreements with furniture manufacturers, ask whether any of the pieces you like are available commercially, and from whom.

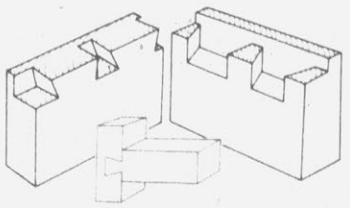

Don't forget that individual taste determines what is added to a personal home collection. Museums choose additions to their collections in much the same way that consumers should, so take a few tips from them on how to choose and care for collectibles. Consider these questions: Does the piece fit in, fill a gap or add a new dimension to the existing furniture?

Then determine the quality of the piece. This is an important part of any furniture-buying and includes checking for sturdiness (see if it rocks or moves when pushed), looking at the undersides of the drawers and the leg joints to determine that they are firm and are put together either with dowel, tongue-in-groove, mortise-and-tenon or dovetail construction. Traditional joints, such as mortise and tenon, are of value, not only because they replicate the construction of a period piece, but because they remain the most elegant and durable methods of jointing. But for joints that are not subject to a lot of stress, glues and modern machine methods have made dowelling a popular jointing method among reproduction furniture manufacturers. In any case, make sure that the piece you are considering is not just nailed or glued together. Also, make sure that the finish covers the entire piece, and that the color is even and blends well.

When checking for quality, remember that most fine reproductions are made of hardwood, and the material's quality characteristics are inherent. Therefore, quality considerations are centered on the actual craftsmanship of the piece you are considering. If you have questions, do not hesitate to ask. Any reputable furniture dealer will be glad to help, as will the people at the museum in which you first saw it. These experts love to share their knowledge.

And once you get it home, how should you care for it? If it's hardwood, it's easy. Hardwood furniture will last for generations with only regular dusting and semiannual waxing.

So be a collector. Chances are, only you and your pocketbook will know that the pieces you've collected are not originals. You'll have yesterday's beauty and tomorrow's antique at today's prices. FW

WOMEN WHO MADE AMERICA GREAT: A HISTORY QUIZ

Photos / Bettmann Archive

Wild Bill's wife and an easy rider.

By Susan Duff

She said "no" to World War II.

Her American chic won a British lord.

Celebrating a patriotic holiday such as the Fourth of July usually means giving our forefathers their due credit. Too often, we forget that great women, as well as great men, played an important role in our history. This year, see how many influential American women you know about by identifying the ones described below.

QUESTIONS

1. She was originally elected to the House of Representatives in 1917, becoming the first woman member of Congress. She returned to serve a second two-year term in 1941. On December 8th, 1941, the day after Pearl Harbor, Congress voted to mobilize the armed forces and enter World War II. If not for her dissenting ballot, the vote would have been unanimously in favor of war. Who was she?

2. Born in Missouri in 1852, this legendary eccentric performed riding stunts while riding the Pony Express through perilous Indian territory where most men didn't dare to travel. She was a crackerjack gambler who won enough money from railroad barons to send her daughter to the best schools in the East. Wild Bill Hickock was her husband; who was she?

3. This woman managed the family farm while her husband attended to matters of state — the writing of our Constitution. In letters to her lawmaking spouse, she warned him not to "put unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. All men would be tyrants if they could." Who was this woman who wanted the Equal Rights Amendment written into law in the 18th century?

4. In 1849, alone, traveling at night guided only by the North Star, a black woman escaped to freedom above the Mason-Dixon line. Though the Southern authorities put a high bounty on her head ($12,000, dead or alive), she kept returning to the deep South to help other slaves flee to the North. Some 300 black Americans owed their freedom to her courageous efforts. Her name?

5. In a revealing series of articles written in 1902, a magazine journalist took on no less an adversary than John D. Rockefeller and his Standard Trust monopoly. Her writing inspired public action which eventually broke up that oil monopoly and, as one of the first great investigative reporters, she herself inspired the coinage of a new journalistic term, "muckraker." Irate oil profiteers liked to call her "Miss Tarbarrel." What was her real name?

6. She was a gutsy Yankee lady who showed European society what fashion was all about in a day when Continentals still sniffed haughtily at the very idea of American chic. In 1873, a London journalist wrote of her, "She could govern the world!" Instead, she had a snake tatooed on her wrist, married an English lord, and bore a son who became one of Britain's most famous statesmen. Who was she?

7. She first achieved renown as a newspaper reporter when she wrote articles which exposed the inhumane conditions of insane asylums, jails and sweatshops in articles which appeared in the New York World. But her name became a headline instead of a byline in 1889 when she challenged the fictional Phineas Fogg's record of circling the world in 80 days. She did it, in 72 days, 6 hours, 11 minutes, and 14 seconds, to be exact. What was her name?

8. A natural orator even as a young girl, this woman was nicknamed "Long Tongue" by the whalers in Nantucket where she grew up. She spent her adult life speaking out against religious dogma, slavery and the oppression of women. In 1848, she helped organize the Seneca Falls, N.Y., convention which launched the women's movement. Who was this Quaker minister?

9. Her father, an opinionated Yankee politician, insisted she stay at home and do "woman's work," but this young woman's spirit soared beyond the walls of her family's New England home. Only a few of the poems she wrote in the mid-19th century were published during her lifetime; the prolific work found in her room after her death, however, made her a famous poet. Some scholars claim she is the greatest poet in the history of the English language. Who was she?

10. In the late 1600's, when most Puritans believed that their church should be the official religious arm of the government and that the church's laws should be incorporated in Federal law, one intellectual spoke out against the colonial hierarchy. A Massachusetts woman who was called a transcendentalist, she proclaimed that the separation of church and state was essential to religious freedom and democracy. She spent her later life north of New York City near a river which has since been named after her. What was her name?

THE UNDENIABLE LURE OF SURF FISHING

By Frank Bianco

It was the kind of experience that addicts people to surf fishing. I'd been casting into the breaking surf for over an hour and had almost concluded that the beauty of the sunrise was going to be my only reward. Suddenly, a school of feeding bluefish erupted onto the ocean's surface, and I knew my fortunes had changed.

The blues had chased a school of smaller bait fish into a channel of deep water between a sand bar and the beach. As the tide dropped, the water between the beach and the bar became a fast-moving rip current. Disoriented by the rolling surf and the current, the small fish were easy pickings for the foraging blues, who quickly herded them into the channel.

H. Armstrong Roberts

Not more than a minute or two passed before I arrived at the scene. The surf was puckered with activity. The bait fish, frantically leaping into the air to escape the bluefish, wound up in the mouths of the birds who circled, screaming above. The action was so close to shore that my first cast overlaid the school by several feet.

I hadn't cranked the handle a full turn before the line tightened, and my fiberglass rod bent heavily toward the water's surface. As I looked toward the end of my line, a bluefish exploded from the water, its jaws firmly clamped around the lure.

My delighted whoops and yells might have raised some eyebrows if I hadn't been completely alone. But the struggle was on. Line sizzled from the reel as the blue streaked seaward. Then, abruptly, he leapt straight into the air, shaking his head furiously as he attempted to rid himself of the lure. Suddenly switching directions, he sped toward me, as though he knew that if I didn't reel quickly enough to keep the line taut, he might have just enough slack to spit out the hook.

By the time I had hauled all seven pounds of that blue through the surf, the rest of the school had moved far down the beach and I had to sprint to catch up with them. I successfully repeated the scenario 10 times before the current veered out to sea, taking the bluefish and their hapless quarry beyond my casting range.

That morning's pleasure sparkles in my memory alongside a myriad of other surf adventures. The windblown October afternoon I caught a quartet of 20-pound class stripers in Montauk's howling surf was no more exciting than the countless nights I have spent sitting under the stars with my wife and children, our surf rods sentinel-like in their holders, the baited lines stretching into the darkened waters far out over the breaking waves.

It has all been so much pleasure for so few pennies. A surf rod, spinning reel and tackle box of necessary gear won't reach the $100 mark. Very little time and no athletic aptitude are necessary to learn how to cast with a modern-day spinning reel. And the ocean's bays and shoreline couldn't be freer.

Perhaps the biggest incentive of surf fishing is the democratic nature of fish. They are as likely to swallow a beginner's hook as that of the most seasoned surf caster. I once watched a slip of a woman, pole in hand, as she eyed an old-time angler skillfully probing the surf for 45 minutes without getting a nibble. When he stepped away disgustedly she cautiously took his place and barely managed to fling her baited hook into the wash before a trophy-sized bass engulfed it.

If you're planning to try surf fishing, keep in mind that surf fishermen and their suppliers are good sources of information. Frank Woolner, editor of the Salt Water Sportsman and a familiar face along the beaches around Cape Cod, advises beginners to check local fishing tackle shops to find out where fish are being caught and what is used to catch them.

Learn the surf: When you catch a fish, remember what the weather was like, what time of day it was and what the tide was doing. Join a surf club. Fishing with knowledgeable regulars speeds up the learning process.

"See who's catching fish and try to find out what they're using," suggests Nick Karas, one of the nation's most traveled surf-fishing writers. "While surf fishermen will rarely reveal their favorite spots to strangers, they will readily offer helpful tips about local conditions."

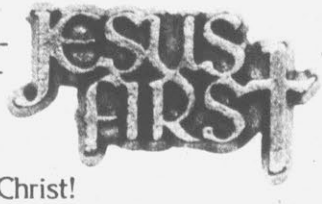

Though surf fishermen often return home empty-handed, few other forms of recreation provide such consolation prizes — sunrises, sunsets and fresh air laced with the smell of salt. And when success does come, as it inevitably will, you will be able to savor not only the thrill of the catch, but the free dinner that is to come. FW

ABC

By Bruce Pollock

It had to be the most perfect situation-comedy casting in the history of television. There was Suzi Quatro, suddenly appearing as Leather Tuscadero, that sweet little semi-tough rock 'n' roller, on an episode of Happy Days. Diehard fans of Detroit music might have thought they were caught in a time warp. Suzi looked no older than she did the day when she was slugging it out with Motor City heavies like Mitch Ryder and his Detroit Wheels, 15 years ago.

"Everybody says, 'How'd you do it? How'd you act for the first time?' I said, 'Act? That's me!' " Suzi recalls. Only a few times did she have to stop being Suzi: "I had to go back to being 18 in the show. I had to act like I was scared to go on stage. That was acting. I've never been scared to go on stage in my life."

When Suzi buzzed through New York City on a publicity tour to support her hit single, "Stumblin' In," and her new album, If You Knew Suzi, it was a kind of homecoming. Aside from her occasional commutes to the set of Happy Days, she's lived in England since 1971. Her break to Britain came after about seven years of rock 'n' roll hard luck here.

"We had no success at all," she says of those Unhappy Days. "So when Mickey Most came to Detroit to produce a record by Jeff Beck, by hook or by crook we got him to see the group perform. He liked me, and asked if I wanted to come over to England and make an album. I said, 'Give me a second to pack.' "

Two years later, Suzi had her first hit, "Can the Can." It sold more than three million copies internationally, but only went as far as number 56 on the American charts. "We never had a hit record or hit album here," she says, "which was frustrating, because we were so close." During Suzi's three U.S. tours in 1974 and '75, her fans held lit matches aloft to encourage encores after every show. "We were so close, Suzi says again, "but the record company wasn't right: we didn't get the airplay...And that is frustrating when you're so big everywhere else. But now we've finally got a hit...Now they won't say 'Suzi Who?' anymore."

Suzi "Who" started out in life as one of five children of Art Quatro, a part-time musician and General Motors employee. Growing up in Grosse Point, Michigan, she studied classical piano, sang in the choir and took dancing lessons. But the charm-school polish didn't take. She got kicked out of high school at 14. Like many of the boys in her generation, Suzi raced out to get her first guitar after seeing the Beatles on the Ed Sullivan Show.

"My friends and I started an all-girl band," recalls Quatro. "Since all the other instruments were taken, I played bass, and, lo and behold, after about six months, I fell in love with it."

Against an early-60's backdrop of Shelley Fabares and Lesley Gore — pin-up pop stars in party dresses and ballet shoes — Suzi lit out for rock 'n' roll's back streets in leather jeans. Surpassing even the Crystals, Ronettes and Shangri-las in her tough-girl stance, she went on to front an all-male band, adopting the essentially macho approach which characterized her sound until recently. "Elvis was my big hero," she remarks. "I also wanted to be Otis Redding."

Which doesn't sound exactly like something that Leather Tuscadero would say. But that in no way diminishes the perfection of the casting. As Suzi tells it: "They had that Leather Tuscadero script for six or seven months, and they tested a lot of actresses. But it's a hard part to play, because the girl has to be tough, and she has to be soft — and she has to be able to sing and be convincing. I guess when I walked in they decided I was the one." Not hurting Suzi's case was the fact that one of the women in casting saw a poster of Suzi on her daughter's wall, in the defiant pose that graced Rolling Stone's cover in January 1975.

Subsequently, Happy Days' creators expanded Suzi's part to make her a semi-regular member of the neighborhood, and signed her to a 15-show contract.

However, it now appears that she may not fulfill her 15-show allotment, because Paramount is writing a script for her. Meanwhile, she and the band will be touring here this summer.

After that, is it possible that our comely expatriate may find it necessary, what with her newfound American success and the possibility of a film career, to return to her native land to live? Suzi glances at Len Tuckey, her guitarist, songwriting partner and husband of the last two years, and smiles. "I could live in America," she says, "but he's so English, the old man; he won't leave." A GRANNY WITH AN EYE FOR CRIME

Peter Tatiner / Liaison / Gamma

By Larry Clinton Jr.

We recently heard about a female private detective in Santa Clara, Calif. Intrigued, we dispatched our own undercover agent, namely me, to bring back the facts. Here is the report:

Hunched up my collar against the damp, walked toward a seedy flat-topped building. It looked like a good setting for a private eye's office.

Inside, I was intercepted by a man, long aged by suspicion, who scanned me up and down as if he were a human Geiger counter. We stared at one another. Finally I broke the ice, "I'm here to see Olga Walker." He shuffled off wordlessly. I took a well-worn seat and let my mind play with the name, imagining what its owner would look like.

Olga Walker. Maybe a Mata Hari-type. My reverie was punctured by a plump woman with short gray hair, smiling as she approached.

She ushered me into her office — a hodgepodge of vintage linoleum and dingy wallpaper. But she'd added a few personal touches, an Oriental rug, a vase of rosebuds. I also spotted a desk-top plaque reading "World's Greatest Grandmother." I couldn't believe my eyes.

"Now then, what can I do for you?" she asked. Pleasant, but businesslike.

"I need some — ah — special help," I replied, not wanting to tip my hand. "But first I'd like to know a little about you. How did a person like you wind up in a business like this?"

"I started as an employee of the gentleman who greeted you," she offered. "That was back in 1974. He trained me and encouraged me to get my own license. Now we share office space."

"What did you do before that?"

"Most recently, I was in real estate. I still keep my real-estate license. It's a good cover." Hmm. Pretty shrewd. I decided to press on.

"I notice you call yourself AAA Women Detectives. Do you only handle dames?"

"Oh, no, only half of our clients are women, but all my operatives are women."

"Yeah? How many?"

"There are five, all part-time. Some are college students, some housewives. One is a freelance legal secretary. We find women are less obvious when tailing a subject."

"What kinda cases do you handle?"

"Marital problems mostly, and background investigations for employers or people planning to get married — or even just to live together. We've also investigated cases of employee pilferage. And once we went through a firm's garbage at 4:00 in the morning to find out its supplies for a competitor."

"Well, your kind of job can get sorta rough. Do you carry a gun?"

"No, but I do take my dog Shadow along when I'm on surveillance. He's a German shepherd trained as a protector. And I keep a cattle prod in my car."

"A cattle prod?" Now I couldn't believe my ears.

"Oh yes, although I've never really had to use it, just threaten someone with it once or twice."

My head was spinning. I took another tack.

"How does your family feel about this line of work?

"Oh, they think it's fine. My husband sometimes goes along. And I used to take my oldest grandchild along on stakeouts. He'd help me to pass the time."

"How many cases have you blown, ma'am?" I asked bluntly.

"Well, she said, "once a woman retained us to check up on her husband. Sure enough, he was cheating. When we brought back the evidence, she wanted us to keep him under surveillance. We did, but we found she couldn't keep her mouth shut. She kept confronting her husband with the evidence we'd bring her each week. Pretty soon he caught on, recognized our tail and shook us. Now," she asked, "how can I be of service to you?"

"Well," I stammered weakly, "I lost my wallet. Do you think you could help me find it?"

"It'll probably turn up anyhow — without the cash," she replied. FW

HERE COMES THE SUNBURN — SO WATCH OUT BELOW

By Glori Randall

In the summer, beaches all over America are jammed with vacationers who bare their oiled bodies to the sun for hours to acquire a bronze finish.

In the winter, everyone envies the men and women who return from the Caribbean sporting a healthy-looking and attractive tan.

But evidence is piling up that in the long run, a tan may be neither attractive nor healthy. While moderate amounts of sunshine can be healing and soothing, intense, extended doses can be damaging and destructive.

For many years Dr. Frederick Urbach of Temple University, who is chairman of its medical school's department of dermatology and medical director of its skin and cancer hospital, has studied the effect of exposure to the sun on human skin.

He says that the greatest risk is the development of skin cancer and that this condition is increasing. More than 300,000 cases in this country were reported last year.

The culprit is ultraviolet rays that pass, without being seen or felt, through the skin and soft tissues. Many experts believe that the rays are even more lethal than they once were because the use of rapid aircraft, aerosol sprays and fertilizers are destroying the ozone layer in the earth's upper atmosphere. In the past, this layer offered more protection against the sun.

But skin cancer is not the only danger. The penetrating ultraviolet rays can also cause irritation below the skin's surface. They may alter molecules that carry "blueprints" for the manufacture of new cells, which may result in the production of cancer cells.

In addition to increased risk of cancer, the sun may cause serious skin eruptions in sensitive persons. Sometimes a dermatitis, or skin breakout, will appear in persons who have used perfumes and colognes made with oil of bergamot. And the ingestion of some drugs, followed by long periods in the sun, may cause eczema in their users. Such drugs include the sulfas, tranquilizers, antibiotics, barbiturates and salicylates. Persons with the illness, lupus erythematosus — a disease of the connective tissue that holds the body together — can have serious flare-ups after even a short time in the sunshine.

At the least, too much sun may result in severe sunburn, which causes excruciating pain and makes one feel faint, nauseous and sick to the stomach.

Physicians say that much of the danger can be avoided if exposure to the sun's ultraviolet rays, which are most intense between 10 A.M. and 2 P.M., are avoided. They urge swimming, boating and sunbathing early in the morning or late in the afternoon. Bald men should wear hats at midday, and everyone should wear nonporous clothing which shields them from the sun. Transparent shirts and blouses offer little protection.

Even persons with darker complexions, who are at lower risk of developing skin cancer, should use sun-screening preparations that contain PABA (para-aminobenzoic acid). Lotions and creams containing baby oil and cocoa butter will soften the skin, but will not protect it.

Persons who follow these simple rules will not only decrease the risk of skin problems, but will have smoother, younger-looking, more wrinkle-free skin as they grow older. "Remember," cautions Dr. Urbach, "the sun-goddesses in their 20's become leathery-looking ladies in their 60's."

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Portrait Of Our Artist

Jim McCloskey, the artist who painted our Fourth of July cover, first put paintbrush to palette on a dare from his wife. McCloskey had suggested that his wife, a commercial artist who uses mostly black and white for her sketches, begin painting primitives so she'd have an excuse to use more color. When she retorted, "If you think it's so easy, why don't you try?" he decided to do just that.

During the two years he's been painting, McCloskey has had a number of shows. He's exhibited in New York's Gerald Kornblau gallery, and he recently had a one-man show at the University of Maryland. This is the first time, however, that he's done a cover exclusively for FAMILY WEEKLY.

McCloskey, who was originally a lawyer, now considers painting his profession. "I really enjoy doing it," he says enthusiastically. "And while I think I do have a good idea of composition, believe it or not, this is as good as I can do. I know nothing about art; my paintings are just fun things to do." And fun things to look at, as well.

Up In The Trees

During these long, lazy, hot July days, why don't you build a tree house? Yes, a tree house. Living up among the foliage would certainly be a soothing experience, and, if you've got doubts about your architectural abilities, David Stiles can put your mind at ease. Stiles, who's just written The Tree House Book, says he's "been interested in tree houses since I was a kid, and in doing research I found that nothing had been written on them.

H. Armstrong Roberts

"Every town has its share of tree houses," explains the author, "and it is often the first big project a kid tackles. Since trees are so oddly shaped, there are no architectural standards, and I saw a need for some helpful hints on building tree houses." Stiles's hope is that both children and adults "will realize that building a tree house is very simple and a fun thing for parents and kids to work on together."

So, the next time you're contemplating the trees in your backyard, just think: In those leafy boughs lies the beginnings of your very own elevated empire.

Aches And Pains

Do men and women perceive pain differently? "Yes," says Dr. Ada Jacox, an associate dean in the school of nursing at the University of Colorado.

Dr. Jacox, who has been studying "real pain experienced by real patients suffering from arthritis and cancer," found that in terms of rating the intensity of pain, men and women appear to be similar. "However," she says "when we measured personality characteristics and illness, we found that men and women report pain differently."

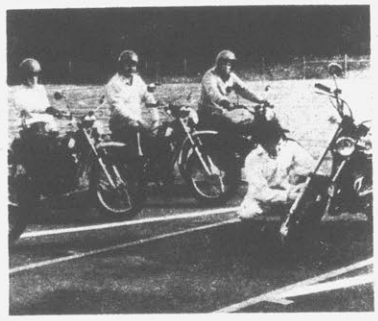

Jacox found that men are generally less willing to express pain. They ask for fewer pain medications than women, despite the fact that they are in no less pain. Dr. Jacox believes that the outstanding reason for the discrepancy is that "the way people express their pain is determined not only by the disease but by their culture and their personality." Maybe "the strong, silent type" is an apt description of the American man.

Hair Dryer Hazards

When the news broke that the disintegration of asbestos insulation in hair dryers poses a potential health hazard for hair dryer users, the Consumer Products Safety Commission was inundated with over one million requests for information. Consequently, the CPSC recently issued Hair Dryers, a 20-page bulletin that lists a number of hair dryers manufacturers and the asbestos content of their models. For a free copy, write to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 689-G, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Motorcycle Safety

As the price of gas soars, motorcycles are becoming an attractive transportation alternative for many people. However, riding a motorcycle is much more complex than riding a bicycle, despite what many buyers think. Studies have shown that 25 percent of all motorcycle accidents involve riders with less than six months of riding experience. Statistics such as these prompted the Motorcycle Safety Foundation to develop its Motorcycle Rider Course, a program designed to teach the novice rider everything he or she needs to know and do for safe, enjoyable riding.

Motorcycle rider courses are offered in nearly all of the 50 states. For more information about times and locations, contact the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, Dept. GB, 780 Elkridge Landing Road, Linthicum, Md. 21090.

Lifestyles

College. Attending college in the 1979-80 academic year will cost American families an average of 9 percent more than in 1978-79, reports the College Scholarship Service of the College Board. At public four-year colleges, expenses will increase to an average of $3,258 a year. At private four-year colleges, expenses will average $5,526 for students who live away from home. However, financial aid funds will exceed $12.3 billion in 1979-80, so many eligible families stand a good chance of receiving the money they need.

Health. Americans received a record $16.4 billion in benefits from health insurance companies during the first nine months of 1978, reports the Health Insurance Institute. This was an increase of nearly 18 percent over the same period the year before.

Radio. Remember the old College Bowl quiz show that was broadcast back in the 50's? The show pitted students from colleges across the country in a battle of memory and wits as the moderator questioned each team and kept score of their answers. Starting this weekend, CBS radio is featuring the new College Bowl, with Art Fleming as the weekly show's host. Check local listings for the time in your area.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by Hal Foster

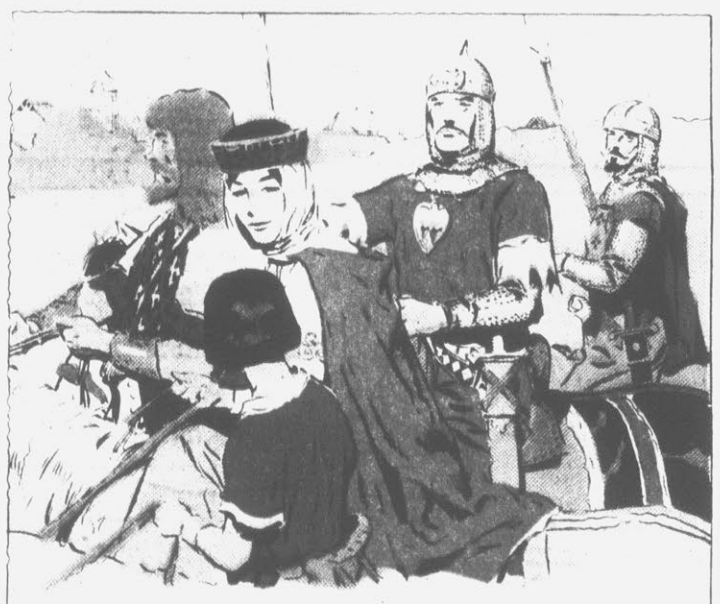

Our Story: IT WAS GALAN'S FIRST DAY AS A PAGE BOY AND THE OTHER BOYS PLAYED THEIR USUAL CRUEL JOKES. THEY TRIPPED HIM AS HE SERVED THE KING'S DINNER AND QUICK-TEMPERED GALAN USED THE KING'S LEG OF VENISON AS A CLUB TO LAY LOW HIS TORMENTOR. KING ARTHUR PARDONED GALAN BUT SAID HE WOULD HAVE TO CONTROL HIS TEMPER BEFORE BECOMING A PAGE.

SIR VANOC APPROACHES VAL AND SAYS: "THAT LAD HAS SPIRIT AND MY LADY ENID AND I WOULD BE GLAD TO TEACH HIM THE DUTIES OF A PAGE."

GALAN IS PLEASED WITH THE CHANGE, EXCEPT FOR ONE THING. WHEN WILL HE AGAIN FEEL HIS MOTHER'S SOFT CARESS OR THE WARM GOOD-NIGHT KISS?

AT EVENING THEY PUT UP A PAVILION AND PREPARE FOR DINNER. GALAN WOULD LIKE TO KNOW HOW HE WILL LOOK WHEN HE, TOO, BECOMES A KNIGHT.

HE IS NEARLY CRUSHED BY THE WEIGHT. THEN HE HEARS SIR GAWAIN APPROACHING AND STRUGGLES TO GET FROM UNDER THE HEAVY ARMOR.

GAWAIN LOOKS AT THE OVERWEIGHTED WARRIOR AND THROWS UP HIS HANDS. "I AM HAUNTED! FIRST IT WAS VALIANT, THEN ARN WAS MY SQUIRE, AND NOW I FIND GALAN STUCK IN MY ARMOR!"
