

Energy-Economic Consultations

Carter Cloistered In Studies

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, having canceled an energy policy speech, today continued what was described as "almost a domestic summit" that may keep him cloistered at Camp David, Md., "well into next week."

Carter also scrapped plans to address a meeting of the nation's governors but called a group of state executives to Camp David.

A White House official, who asked not to be identified, said that while the key issues were energy and the economy, "the discussions will not be limited to those subjects." He declined to elaborate.

This source said the president "decided now is the time" to review a broad range of domestic policy questions.

The consultations began Thursday when Vice President Walter F. Mondale led a group of Carter advisers to the mountaintop retreat, where the president took his family Tuesday for a short holiday.

In Atlanta, the secretary to Charles Kirbo, an attorney and Carter confidant, said Kirbo was flying to Washington, presumably to see the president. The White House has promised consultations "both in and outside of government."

The White House official said "the president will not be returning to Washington until he's seen the people he wants to see, and has had time to assess what he has heard."

Also summoned to Camp David for talks tonight were Gov. Julian Carroll of Kentucky, chairman of the National Governors Association, and a "representative group" of other state executives.

Carter canceled plans for a weekend trip to Louisville for the summer meeting of the governors group. He announced that Mrs. Carter and Mondale would make the trip instead.

Mondale and top advisers to Carter spent Thursday night at Camp David and most apparently will remain there with the president at least through the weekend to conduct a series of meetings.

A presidential aide, who asked not to be named, said Carter had set no date for the end of the conference.

Besides Mondale, the aides at Camp David were press secretary Jody Powell, political adviser Hamilton Jordan, media adviser Gerald Raftery, domestic policy adviser Stuart Eizenstat and pollster Patrick Caddell.

With reasons for the speech cancellation still cloaked in mystery, White House press secretary Jody Powell issued through his office Thursday evening a brief statement that raised as many questions as it answered.

Powell said, in full:

"The president is in the process of assessing major domestic issues which he believes are important to the country and which include, but go beyond, the question of energy."

"He will be consulting with a number of individuals whose judgment he respects, both in and outside of government."

The canceled speech, set for television-radio broadcast Thursday night, was to have dealt with inflation and the threat of a recession, as well as with energy.

A White House source, who asked not to be named, said Carter's motives for shelving the address went beyond dissatisfaction with a draft text.

This source said it would not be incorrect to say Carter was displeased with the draft. But he added, "That's not the whole story. I'm not in a position to discuss it further at this time."

Another source, discussing the speech draft, said Carter "asked for a bold new approach and the material he got turned out to be not so bold and not so new."

Both The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution reported in today's editions that the speech cancellation resulted from a deep split among Carter's top advisers over whether to remove all controls from gasoline and let it seek a free market — both in price and availability — or to keep controls, perhaps even rationing.

Unemployment Rate Falls To 5.6 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate fell to 5.6 percent in June, the lowest level in nearly five years, the government said today.

At the same time, wholesale prices continued to moderate, rising 0.5 percent last month, the Labor Department said.

Food prices actually declined 1.2 percent, thanks to sharp drops in the prices of beef, pork and poultry. Non-food items rose 1.1 percent, with sharp advances in petroleum prices taking the blame.

Both the unemployment and wholesale price figures were good news for American consumers. The economy is gearing for the impact of more oil price increases that will result from the recent decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to raise crude oil prices an average of 25 percent.

President Carter and his aides have said the OPEC increase will cost 800,000 Americans their jobs by mid-1980 and add between 2 and 2.5 percentage points to the U.S. inflation rate.

The unemployment rate had held steady in the range of 5.7 percent to 5.9 percent for the past 10 months. The decline to 5.6 percent in June, the lowest level since August 1974, "was due almost entirely to a drop in teen-age joblessness," said Labor Department analyst Kathryn Hoyle.

"The number of unemployed teen-agers fell by 130,000 in June, while their unemployment rate dropped from 16.8 percent to 15.3 percent," the report said.

Ms. Hoyle said that although the figures are seasonally adjusted to account for changes such as heavy summer hiring, some of the improvement in teen-age unemployment likely was due to summer job programs.

The unemployment rate had been 5.8 percent in May. It averaged 5.7 percent in both the first and second quarters of 1979, compared with about 6 percent a year earlier.

Total employment rose by 440,000 last month, to 96.8 million, the Labor Department said. The employment gain in May had been only 140,000 jobs.

The department said employment recently has been rising by about 300,000 jobs per month and now stands 2.1 million ahead of June 1978.

Next Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Skylab's time is running out fast. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration believes the 77.5-ton craft will crash into the atmosphere sometime next week, most likely Wednesday.

The North American Air Defense Command in Colorado, which has been tracking the 118-foot-long space derelict, predicted earlier in the week that the reentry would be between July 10 and July 14, with Thursday the most likely date.

But NORAD advanced its projection one day Thursday to the July 9-13 period, with the target date of July 11.

The low point of Skylab's orbit Thursday was 133 miles above earth, six miles less than the day before. The high point was 144.8 miles, three miles higher than Wednesday.

Skylab's final plunge will begin when it hits the thickening atmosphere.

Meanwhile, the State Department has alerted key personnel around the world to be set to provide last-minute Skylab information to their host governments.

"We have been in continuous contact with the posts for some months now and they have been provided all of the information that has been released by NASA," said a State Department official, who asked that he not be identified.

"We have requested that each of our posts identify key personnel who will be available for providing Skylab information."

Such information won't be available until the final hours of Skylab's life. Then, NASA says, it will be possible to identify the orbital path in which Skylab can be expected to reenter.

Pieces that survive reentry, a few weighing more than 1,000 pounds, will probably fall in an area 4,000 miles long and 100 miles wide along the orbital path.

Signing Pact In Peking

PEKING (AP) — The Chinese-American trade agreement will be signed in Peking Saturday afternoon, the U.S. Embassy said today.

A spokesman said U.S. Ambassador Leonard Woodcock will sign the agreement for the Americans, and Foreign Minister Li Zhiang (Li Chiang) for the Chinese.

The spokesman said the text was not immediately available.

He also said the two countries have not yet reached agreement on textiles, one of the items expected to be a major stumbling block when the overall trade pact comes up for ratification in Congress.

Strauss Prevails On Egypt, Israel

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
ALEXANDRIA, Egypt

(AP) — U.S. mediator Robert Strauss announced what he termed a "breakthrough" today in unearthing the logjam that had been holding up talks between Israel and Egypt on the issue of Palestinian autonomy in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

"They arrived at a broad solution quicker than I thought they would," Strauss said at a news conference after the two former enemies put aside their attempts to write an agenda for the talks and accepted his concept of working groups.

In a joint communique, the three sides agreed they would assign the working groups to discuss how to hold an election for the 1.2 million Arabs living in the occupied territories and what powers and responsibilities the elective council would have.

"We have a structure now for coming to grips with practical problems and it will let progress go forward," Strauss told a news conference after today's session.

Strauss said there was "far more agreement than disagreement" in the first Egyptian-Israeli talks he attended as President Carter's new Mideast troubleshooter.

A communique read at the news conference said a working group would begin holding discussions within two weeks to plan for the election of a Palestinian council to administer home rule in the Israeli occupied areas.

At the same time, the full negotiating committees will continue discussing other issues and may set up other subcommittees, the communique said. The full teams meet again in Israel on Aug. 5.

Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil, Egypt's chief negotiator, said details of the working group's makeup and the site of the talks had not been set.

"I think we made a lot of progress," Khalil said.

The negotiators delayed their session for 30 minutes today while Strauss met with Khalil and the Israeli chief delegate, Interior Minister Yosef Burg, to settle a squabble over the number and tasks of the subcommittees.

Strauss, who reported "some progress" in the resumption Thursday of the autonomy talks, proposed the working groups to get around an Israeli-Egyptian stalemate over which issues should take precedence at the bargaining table. The two countries have been deadlocked over an agenda for future talks since they began negotiating in May.

Strauss said earlier his first day at the negotiating table on Thursday "went very well." The negotiators met twice behind the high walls of the heavily-guarded San Stefano Hotel and continued their dialogue over dinner at a seaside restaurant.

Captured After Police Standoff With His Rifle

DENVER (AP) — A 19-year-old Denver man, described as an expert marksman, held Denver police at bay for more than an hour by standing on top of his car armed with a .22-caliber rifle.

The standoff ended Thursday afternoon when an unarmed police captain jerked the alleged gunman, Marty Richardson, from the car roof. There were no injuries.

Richardson, a former Army private described by friends as despondent over a separation from his wife, was taken to city jail for investigation of criminal menacing.

The incident began when Richardson's mother interrupted a card game at his girlfriend's house across the street from his west Denver home, the girlfriend, Carol Newsome, said. Richardson's brother, Brian, said Marty ran inside, grabbed a rifle and started firing.

Clad only in bluejeans, shoes and a hat, Richardson circled slowly atop his car, surrounded by scores of police riflemen. Despite pleas from police and friends, he refused to yield.

Finally, Capt. William Brannan approached the car, offering a glass of water. As Brannan approached, Richardson raised the rifle.

Brannan spoke to Richardson as he reached the car and gently set the glass down on the roof. In the same motion, Brannan swept both his arms around Richardson's legs and jerked him to the pavement, pinning his arms behind his back. A dozen other officers swarmed in and handcuffed Richardson.

Asked what he had said to Richardson, Brannan replied: "I told him, 'Hey, there are five gunshots trained on you. If you lower that rifle at me, you're dead.'"

To Camp David

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt and several other governors from around the nation planned to go to Camp David today for discussions with President Carter.

A spokesman for Hunt said he would fly to Washington this afternoon and spend the night at Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland.

"Governor Hunt and about seven other governors were invited by the White House," said Stephanie Bass, Hunt's deputy press secretary. "They will meet with President Carter at Camp David. They are going to discuss major domestic issues."

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

ROOFING WOES

I had work done by Nick's Roofing Company which advertised in your newspaper and the work was extremely unsatisfactory. I have written to the Greenville address and got my letter back unanswered. I don't know who to go to now, but I feel I deserve either my money back or the work redone. J. H.

Two officials have told Hotline they'd like to have your specific complaints in writing. One is Greenville Chief Building Inspector Alton Warren; the other, Darlene Buckman of the Consumer Protection Division of the N. C. Department of Justice, Box 629, Raleigh, N. C. 27602.

Hotline has letters from the Greenville Building Inspector's Office stating that an item is on the Greenville City Council Agenda requesting that this firm's privilege license to operate in Greenville be revoked immediately. The memo sent to the City Manager by Warren states, "This Department has received numerous calls and complaints concerning Nick's Roofing Company out of Wilson, North Carolina, in regards to roofing and repair work being done in Greenville. Further, we have received calls from the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office. I have contacted Mr. Tom Carpenter of the Inspection Department in Wilson, N. C. and he says that he does not allow them to do any more work in Wilson."

Warren also sent us a copy of a letter sent to Cecil Nichols, Nick's Roofing Company, 310-A Pennsylvania Avenue, Greenville, which stated, "You are not to start any more new jobs until such time as the jobs that you have worked on have been repaired and completed in acceptable construction work. If you are caught on any new job without a permit, a warrant will be issued immediately and you will be taken off of the job. At such time as jobs have been completed, we will be happy to discuss with you the status of your privilege license."

Hotline has attempted to call and talk to either Cecil Nichols or Michael Nichols, but have reached only an answering service. Our calls have not been returned in more than a week.

Hunt Task Force Will Review 'Hodge-Podge'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt today named a task force to make a thorough study of what he called the "ridiculous hodge-podge of varying state regulations" that face independent truckers as they drive across the nation.

At a news conference, Hunt said he expects the task force, to be headed by John A. Williams, his executive assistant, to make an initial report within 30 days.

He asked the task force, made up of five state officials and six truckers, to "recommend permanent administrative and legislative changes that would be appropriate in state and federal regulations."

Hunt noted he had temporarily lifted weight and load limits for independent truckers in North Carolina and had urged other states to do likewise. He said he would urge Congress and the federal government, including the White House, "to adopt a uniform system of regulations governing truckers."

In other matters discussed at his news conference, Hunt:

—said he expects to have a decision by early fall on whether he will seek re-election to a second term.

—praised President Carter for "strong and effective leadership" at the recent Tokyo conference of heads of state and said he could foresee the day when the industrialized nations would be able to say no to the price increases decreed by OPEC.

—called the state's competency and achievement test programs "probably the greatest single thing done to improve education in many decades."

Discussing President Carter's low ratings in the polls, Hunt said that it was largely due to the energy problem. He said he did not think that the president should get all the blame because he did not have a cooperative Congress and the American people largely had not taken steps to conserve energy.

Investigate Navy Ship Fires

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Navy investigators are looking into a rash of suspicious fires that killed one person and damaged six ships at eastern ports in the last three months, military authorities say.

First hit was the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy in Norfolk Naval Shipyard in Portsmouth, where seven fires April 4 killed a civilian worker, injured 34 Navy crewmen and caused $506,000 in shipboard damage.

Six smaller fires broke out on the Kennedy on June 9, and since then five other ships were struck by minor blazes, Navy officials said Thursday. Damage estimates were not available.

The officials said the Kennedy fires plus three June 22 blazes aboard the aircraft carrier USS Forrestal, based at Mayport, Fla., were declared cases of arson. The others fires were listed as suspicious.

The officials said they had no suspects or possible motives. They said the outbreak was the Navy's worst arson problem since 1972, when a young seaman set a series of fires that did $7.5 million damage to the Forrestal.

The Navy has not attempted to cover up these fires. Neither has it sought publicity, an Atlantic Fleet command spokesman said when asked why the Navy had not reported all the fires earlier.

"There is a good reason for this. Although there is no way to prove it, there appears to be a correlation, or direct relationship, to the amount of publicity given to fires and the number of fires aboard ships."

Officials said the Naval Investigative Service is looking into the fires. Crewmen and workers at the Portsmouth shipyard have also put up a $4,500 reward for information leading to the conviction of the arsonist responsible for the fatal Kennedy fire.

The most recent fire occurred Tuesday aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Iwo Jima, also hit by fires June 19 and June 26.

Also reported hit by fires in the last month were the frigate USS McCandless, berthed near the Iwo Jima at Norfolk Naval Base and struck on June 15; and the destroyer tender USS Puget Sound at Newport News, struck June 16.

A June 9 fire aboard the dock landing ship USS Portland, berthed at Little Creek Amphibious Base in Norfolk, was also being investigated, but officials said there was a chance it might have been an accident.

Navy spokesmen were close-mouthed about what the Navy is doing to prevent additional fires aboard its 250 Atlantic Fleet-based ships, including 180 based in the Norfolk area.

"The arsonists would like to know what we're doing about it, too," said one official, who asked that his name not be used.

The principle behind an elimination play is to compel the adversary to make a favorable lead for you. At a suit contract, you will usually need a trump in each hand to accomplish this end. But delicate timing is often required. Declarer took one false step on this hand and regretted it.

The auction might seem wild, but it was well reasoned. West's takeout double cannot be faulted, nor can North's preemptive jump to four spades. When East bid hearts at the five-level, South could visualize that his partner would hold at most one heart, so he gambled on the slam.

West led the king of hearts, ruffed in dummy. Declarer crossed to his hand with a trump to ruff a heart. Back with another trump for another heart ruff. That third heart ruff was the death knell for the contract.

Declarer cashed the ace and king of clubs, but now he couldn't cross to dummy to ruff a club without expending its last trump. And if he did that, the defenders would no longer be subject to an end play, for they would have exit cards in either hearts or clubs. Declarer hoped for a miracle by leading ace of diamonds and another, but West won with the queen and cashed a second diamond trick for down one.

A proper sequence of plays would have landed the slam. It was fine to cross to the closed hand once with trumps to ruff a second heart, but then declarer should have cashed the ace and king of clubs before ruffing his last heart. Now he can ruff dummy's last club and draw a second round of trumps, ending in dummy. Declarer leads the jack of diamonds. If East covers, there are no further problems. If West wins the trick, there is no lead he can make with comfort. A diamond return gives declarer two tricks in that suit, and any other exit yields a ruff and sluff, permitting declarer to get rid of his diamond loser while ruffing with dummy's last trump. Six spades bid and made.

Wreck Injured Local Persons

NEW BERN — Two recent Rose High School graduates were injured, one critically, in a head-on collision 8 mile north of Bridgeton Wednesday morning about 9:40.

N. C. State Highway Patrolman Clerow Green said Laura Lauffer, 17, of 220 York Road, Greenville, sustained extensive injury when the car in which she was riding was struck by a vehicle traveling on the left side of the highway, U. S. 17.

Green identified the driver of the car which he quoted witnesses as saying was traveling on the wrong side of the highway as Sheila Arthur Wade, 32, of Rt. 2, Grifton. Ms. Wade was charged with driving under the influence, plus operating left of center.

The driver of the car in which Miss Lauffer was riding was identified as Lisa Thompson, 17, of 1202 E. Wright Road, Greenville. Her injuries did not appear to be as severe as those of Miss Lauffer, Trooper Green said.

Ms. Wade appeared to have minor injuries, he said. All three women are patients in Craven County Hospital, New Bern.

In his report, Trooper Green wrote that drivers of three cars said to be traveling in front of the Thompson car told him they had to pull into the left lane to avoid having the Wade car hit them.

Green estimated damage to the Thompson car at $1,200 and damage to the Wade car at $800.

Juanita Kreps Not Resigning

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials in the U.S. Department of Commerce say Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps has no intention of resigning her post this year in order to spend more time with her husband.

Mrs. Kreps' husband, Dr. Clifton Kreps, has been hospitalized at Duke Medical Center since last week after undergoing surgery for a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

There has been speculation that Mrs. Kreps would resign in order to be closer to her husband. Homer E. Moyer, Mrs. Kreps' personal counsel, said Thursday that she has made no decision on the matter.

"She has obviously been focused primarily on her husband's health...while she's in Durham," Moyer said. "I think she has simply not addressed the question of longer term plans."

However, two Commerce Department officials said Thursday said Mrs. Kreps has let it be known that she would not give up her Cabinet post. The officials said she plans to keep her job until President Carter's first term ends next year.

"She apparently was alarmed at those rumors and is taking pains to let people know she's not going to resign," said a Commerce Department official, who asked not to be identified. "She had a conference with Cliff's doctors and they said she can't help him. The conclusion seems to be there's nothing she can do for him by resigning. Consequently, she is saying she'll stay."

Both officials said they expected Mrs. Kreps back in Washington on Monday in time for a Cabinet meeting.

Kreps, 59, a University of North Carolina business professor, was found shot in the head at the couple's Durham home last week. Doctors say Kreps, a psychiatric patient at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, was on day-leave from the hospital at the time of the shooting.

Kreps is expected to recover from the wound without brain damage, doctors say.

Free Room If No Gas

ATLANTA (AP) — Free lodging for one night for certain travelers unable to buy gasoline on Sundays has been offered by a national motel chain.

Richard C. Kessler, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Days Inns of America, Inc., announced the plan Thursday at a news conference.

Guests registered at a participating Days Inn or Lodge on Sunday night get a free room on Sunday night if no gasoline is available within a five-mile radius Sunday, Kessler said.

Kessler said the offer became effective immediately and will be valid through Sunday, Sept. 9, 1979. It is subject to all federal, state and local regulations governing the sale of petroleum products.

Days Inns of America, Inc. is the sixth largest full-service lodging chain in the United States, and most of the motels sell gasoline.

The states in which Days Inns and Lodges are located are: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

Study To Measure Loss Of Prized Farm Acres

How much agricultural land is being converted to nonagricultural uses? What are the specific reasons for this occurrence?

The answers to these two questions will be investigated nationally by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the President's Council on Environmental Quality in the next 18 months. The Soil Conservation Service in North Carolina will be involved with other federal agencies whose actions affect agricultural land, says Jesse L. Hicks of Raleigh, who heads the SCS in the state.

National co-chairmen of a special study group will be Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland and CEQ Chairman Charles Warren. They have signed a memorandum of agreement to carry out the study, which will be completed by Jan. 1, 1981.

Representatives of several federal agencies will assist the study. One phase of the study will assess efforts of local and state government to retain agricultural lands, and will suggest ways to make these efforts more effective.

Nationwide, agricultural lands have been disappearing at the rate of nearly three million acres a year, according to the Department of Agriculture. Many of these acres are converted to urban use or to highways, airports, shopping centers, residential areas and other non-farm purposes. Some are covered by water.

"If our best farmlands are used for other purposes," said Secretary Bergland, "we may face decreasing production, increased energy needs and higher prices for commodities."

The U. S. Department of Agriculture issued a revised land-use policy which expressed a determination to maintain agricultural land as a national policy.

The policy declares that well-managed farm and forest lands provide important environmental benefits, including wildlife habitat, open space and recreational opportunities. Keeping such lands in their best use also helps provide a stable economic base, the USDA policy continues.

Another phase of the national study will evaluate the role of federal agencies in agricultural land conversion and recommend policy changes if any are needed.

"Here in North Carolina, we have more than eight and a half million acres of cropland and pasture land, not to mention our forest resources," said Jesse Hicks. "This is a definite asset in natural resources and environment, especially since we have great agricultural production in North Carolina."

Toddler Commutes To Day-Care With Parents

By DALE SINGER
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Rush-hour traffic is a family affair for Don, Carol and Amy Evans. They share the 40-minute trip from their suburban home to the downtown area, where the parents go to work for the telephone company and Amy, 4 years old this month, is dropped off at a day-care center.

Day-care centers are not new, of course, and many businesses have facilities for children of their own employees.

The Downtown Day Care Center at Christ Church Cathedral is different. Director Lee Anne Harness says it is a true community effort.

"It's a 'given' that young people working downtown will have children," she said in an interview. "But the concept is new. This is really only one of a few centers sponsored by a group of downtown businesses."

"Some will provide for their own employees, but the cost is generally too great for them to do it by themselves. This way we can spread the cost around, and if one business pulls out for any reason, the program can go on."

The program, which opened in November, has space for 60 children. Ms. Harness said personnel offices and downtown civic groups helped spread the word.

Some businesses, notably Edison Brothers, provided basic funding, but the majority of the budget is paid by the $35 weekly fee for each child.

The center uses classrooms that house the cathedral's Sunday school. A rooftop playground plus parks surrounding nearby buildings give the children badly needed outdoor play areas.

Ms. Harness and her staff try to use the entire downtown area as their classroom.

"Just last week we went on a field trip to an office where two of the children's mothers work. The children got to see where their mothers work, and the people in this office saw how the downtown day care center works.

"That gives parents a good feeling. It shows them that they are important in their children's lives beyond the scope of feeding them and loving them at home."

For the Evanses, the downtown center came at the right time. Amy had been cared for by a woman near the family's home, but that arrangement was about to end.

"We checked several places in our area, and most of the time the hours were from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. In bad weather we knew we couldn't make it, since we live 40 minutes from work."

"With Amy downtown, she's close in case of an emergency. We can go have lunch with her there or take her out. We know we're not far away in case we do need to get to her. That's a relief."

Ms. Harness said lunchtime visits from parents are common.

"We encourage parents to feel they don't have to make special arrangements to see their children. It gives them a feeling of security to know that we're doing the types of things we'd be happy for them to see."

The children, separated into three classes according to age, may have a long day away from home, so the staff tries to make it easy for them.

"Too many centers are too educationally oriented to the point they impose on the children's personal lives," Ms. Harness said. "They need time to be off by themselves — to just be children."

She added that families need time to be families, too, and the center is proud to be able to help.

"Some parents drive 45 minutes or an hour each way, so now they have time to have a nice chat they wouldn't be able to have otherwise. For a child with siblings, this can be a very special time alone with Mom or Dad."

'You Get Old Sitting Around'

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — To tell the truth, 82-year-old Blanche Younce and her two "kid" helpers would rather paint, but since 1912 Mrs. Younce has probably put up enough wallpaper to cover half the homes in Montgomery County.

"And if I live to October, I'll be 83," said Mrs. Younce, stretching a roll of paper to fit snugly into a ceiling corner.

The day begins at 5:30 a.m. for Mrs. Younce and her helpers, 62-year-old Sylvia Loughman and 59-year-old Phyllis Hefflinger. They arrive on the job promptly at 7 a.m., change into their working clothes and stay at it all day until 4 p.m.

"I wouldn't want anyone to see us dressed like that. Our work clothes are such a mess," she said.

She started with her sister at age 15, but her sister quit later to get married. She has had many partners over the years and admits she has papered some homes six or seven times.

Mrs. Younce hangs the paper, the others do the cutting and pasting, and all paint when that's what the customers order. The workers are busy, booked this year through September.

"They're terrific painters," said Barbara Denny as the women worked in her New Lebanon home.

Donna Cavender, another customer, prefers paper.

"Wallpaper to me adds warmth, total warmth to a room," Mrs. Cavender said.

"But knowing what these women have done will stay with me the rest of the days of my life. I'll complain less, I know that."

"These new houses are the toughest. They have more angles and corners than the old ones. But some of those 17-foot walls we sometimes run into in the older houses — well, that's about the only thing I don't like about this job, climbing up that high," said Mrs. Younce, whose truck driver husband died nine years ago.

Mrs. Younce said she had been blessed with good health and saw no point in retiring.

"I'd be sitting around with nothing to do. And when you sit around with nothing to do is when you get old," she said.

An Adaptive Response For Adoptive Parents

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am the editor of a newsletter for adoptive parents. It is called OURS (Organization for a United Response).

Some years back you had a column about the typical stupid questions all parents of adopted children were asked. You offered some wonderful suggested replies. Could you please hunt up that item and run it again? I would like to run it in our newsletter with your permission.

ANN G. IN EARLINGTON, KY.

DEAR ANN: I found the item, and here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: A prospective adoptive mother asked you for help in replying to 'dear, kindly, well-meaning' friends and relatives who ask personal questions about the adoption.

May I help? I have been through it four times and have heard all comments and questions. Here are some tried and true responses:

Q: Oh, isn't it a shame you can't have 'children of your own'?

A: Not really; there's a lot of insanity in both our families.

Q: Do you know all about the parents?

A: Everything. One was male. The other was female.

Q: Did the adoption agency try to match your features, coloring and personalities?

A: Good grief, I hope not!

Q: Aren't you worried about hereditary factors?

A: Heaven, no. Regardless of how bad their ancestors were, they've got to be better than ours!

Best wishes!

BEEN THERE

DEAR ABBY: The night before Mother's Day our son called and invited us out for a Mother's Day dinner along with his wife, her brother and his wife, and his wife's mother. Now here's the clincher: "Would we pay our own way since he was broke?"

My wife turned down the invitation, so our son said he'd stop by the house in the morning to wish her a happy Mother's Day.

Abby, this same son went to Nassau last month for a vacation with his wife and his wife's sister and brother. Last summer they had a lovely vacation in Europe, and plan to go again this summer. (They're taking her folks along.)

I am fed up with this whole outfit. It is plain to me that we are not accepted by our son's wife and her people. How can I make my wife see the light? I hate to hurt her feelings. Sign me...

DISGUSTED IN THE LAND O' LAKES

DEAR DISGUSTED: Your wife must see the light as clearly as you. There's no point in rubbing it in. Why discuss the obvious?

DEAR ABBY: You should have told A CARPENTER'S DREAM who was flat as a board to develop a sense of humor about her utterly hopeless condition.

For example, a group of anatomically deprived women here in Northridge has founded a self-help organization called "Bosomless Buddies," seeking to provide support to those whose living bras are dying of malnutrition.

We meet every Saturday at a pre-teen bra counter for such uplifting activities as throwing darts at a poster of Dolly Parton. After the meeting we march through the store two abreast singing, "I've Got Plenty of Nothin'." Then we all go to the Pancake House for lunch. You may sign this, "Two Sunken Treasures in Northridge" or

Summer's Berries Are Good With Sauce

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Deep down in our hearts, some of us believe the best, and purest way to serve summer's lovely berries is with heavy cream, "pour" or whipped. Nevertheless, there are other delectable but less calorific accompaniments.

Strawberries, blueberries, raspberries and others of their clan are delicious accompanied by a simple custard sauce. Another calorie-cutter is cream-style cottage cheese whirled smooth in an electric blender with a little milk — ersatz sour cream. And of course there's always yogurt.

The custard sauce accompaniment is one we grew up on. The ersatz sour cream is an idea we hit on many years ago and that since has captivated cooks. Yogurt has begun to be extremely popular around our house, since we've been making it at home.

Just this week we tried a new combination we're in love with. If you try it, you may become equally enamored. We baked a "Very, Very Easy Crustless Cheese Cake" and served small squares of it with fresh berries.

We found the recipe for the cheese cake in a delightful "charity" cookbook, "Specialties of the House" (Our Lady of Grace Montessori School, Manhasset, N.Y.) — well worth looking into.

HELEN PARSANE'S EASY CHEESE CAKE (Crustless)

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 4 eggs
- 8-ounce package cream cheese
- 7 1/2 or 8-ounce package farmer's cheese
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1/4 cup flour

Melt butter in an 8-inch pan in a 375-degree oven; remove from oven. Into a bowl break the eggs and add cream cheese, farmer's cheese and sugar. Mix well. Add milk and flour. Mix together thoroughly. Pour into pan and bake in the preheated 375-degree oven until well set. Serves 10 to 12.

Food Editor's Note: We followed the above method of mixing, but used an electric beater — tiny flecks of the farmer's cheese showed. We substituted an 8 by 8 by 2-inch cake dish for the "8-inch pan" and baked the cheese cake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a knife inserted in the center came out clean — 25 minutes. Our cake had a slightly curdy texture which we enjoyed and we liked the dessert served at room temperature (after it had cooled) as well as after it had been chilled. — C. B.

Store Fresh Fruits Properly

Most fresh fruits remain at their best for only a few days, but some, if stored properly, may last longer.

How you handle fresh fruit makes the difference. Before storing fruits, sort them and either use or discard damaged fruits immediately, say specialists with the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service.

Most fruits, except berries and cherries, should be washed and dried before storing.

Unripe fruits should be left to ripen in open air at room temperature and out of direct sunlight.

The length of time that a fresh fruit will retain high quality under home storage conditions varies with the condition of the fruit when purchased.

Seasonless Styles

KNITS ARE making a fashion comeback. These, in lightweight herringbone textured rayon knit jersey with the luxurious feel of silk, are right to wear for summer and throughout the year. At left, a two-piece with peplum top over slim back-slit skirt. At right, a one-piece V-neck to wear loose or belted as shown. They're packable, seasonless and come in teal, cherry, rust and black. High Enthusiasm For Event

There was intermittent rain, and the street dance was wiped out, but none of it dampened the enthusiasm of area people for the annual July 4 celebration.

Sponsored by the Jaycees the day includes many activities on the mall along Reade Street, prizes for contestants and the climatic fireworks at the end of the day.

Jaycee officials estimated that eight to ten thousand people participated in the various events during the day. Participation in games and events during the afternoon was "larger than usual," Mike Joyner said.

The inevitable thunderstorm came up during the afternoon. The big fireworks display of the evening went on as scheduled, however, and drew a large crowd. Again the rains came but few people seemed to mind.

Similar activities were staged in Farmville and other Eastern North Carolina towns.

These home oriented activities offer splendid diversion for local people on holidays such as the Fourth.

As gas for travel becomes more expensive—and scarce — these events may become even more important parts of our lives.

Yes, Teachers Do Need Our Support

A California teacher told in at interview at the National Education Association meeting of helping a student who later broke in and ransacked his home.

The story was indicative of the frustrations which face teachers today.

It is also an excellent argument for stronger discipline in the schools, with better backing of teachers by the administrations and the courts.

THIS AFTERNOON

Can't Stop N.C. Growth

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — After all else is said and done, just what does Balanced Growth mean for North Carolina?

It means people can keep on living in the diverse regions of the state where the out-of-doors, the benign climate, the gardens, the sports, the hunting and fishing and boating make the living good.

The underlying purpose of Balanced Growth is to bring the jobs where the people obviously want to live.

Gov. Jim Hunt says this regularly, and in doing so echoes what governors before him have said.

Of course the goal is to put jobs in the great open spaces from mountains to Piedmont to coast, so people can continue to enjoy life there. But the purpose also will keep from happening here the congestion and ugliness jammed into one place which plague industrial states of the Northeast and Midwest.

Is North Carolina an attractive place in which to live and work; and an attractive place for industrial and other economic growth?

Growth

Without doubt, say any number of specialists. A researcher with a private organization commented recently: "You could build the Great Wall of China around this state, and you couldn't keep growth out."

The 1980 census will confirm that North Carolina ranks among the nation's Top Ten in population, pushing Massachusetts from that position.

Comparing the two states physically illustrates why this state will keep on growing — even if somebody tried to stop it:

"The climate is good, with commerce going on even during the rare severe winter weather. The Sunbelt locale is a major plus;

-Plenty of water both on the surface and below ground make industrial expansion particularly attractive, and studies continue to show that with proper management the water will remain plentiful and clean;

at Chapel Hill, ran some surveys in 13 states, including five in the South, asking, "All things considered, would you say that your state is the best state in which to live?"

Best

North Carolina was judged by her own as the best of all; 90 percent of the natives are convinced this is the very best state.

Cutting across social and cultural lines; ignoring income or race; Tar Heels proclaimed this state home second to no other.

Alabama was second, followed by Texas, Louisiana, and then Florida.

So despite a steady stream of bitterness from those accusing the state of being harsh with justice, persecuting "political prisoners", suffering the ills of malnutrition, poor health, low wages, no unions, and bad schools — the people keep on coming to North Carolina and liking what they find.

TO RUN, OR NOT TO RUN

Mixed Advice For Green

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green is getting conflicting advice from his top supporters as he tries to make up his mind what office to run for next year.

Green, weighing a decision whether to seek a second term or to run for governor, received the results Thursday of a poll he commissioned assessing his popularity and that of Gov. Jim Hunt.

Top Green aides say Green feels under pressure from supporters to make up his mind quickly and begin building a campaign. And they say he hopes to decide on his 1980 plans within the next week.

"I think he'll go ahead and make up his mind in the next two or three days," said state Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, chairman of the Jimmy Green Cabinet. "Why put it off? His people want to know and he's got to tell them."

Green press secretary Jerry Mobley said after a meeting of Green advisors Thursday that he expected the lieutenant governor would make a public announcement of his plans sometime next week.

Green said as the General Assembly adjourned early last month that he would make a decision on which office to seek within two weeks.

"He needs to go ahead and make a decision," Mobley said, "because everywhere he goes people are asking him to go on and make a decision."

Lawing said Green's supporters appear to be evenly split in their recommendations on which race to enter. Lawing, Senate majority leader, wants Green to seek a second term as lieutenant governor, where he presides over the Senate.

But some other supporters want him to challenge Hunt. Green's long-time political foe. "It's just a question of how much of a chance you want to take," one Green aide, asking not to be named, said.

House Speaker Carl Stewart, D-Gaston, has all but formally announced he's running for lieutenant governor, and Lawing said that's one reason Green needs to begin campaigning.

Green's committee received the results of their survey, conducted by New York pollster Dick Morris, after canceling their contract for the survey earlier in the week.

Green and leaders of his campaign organization made the turnabout after a dispute over a question about state Sen. Larry Leake, D-Buncombe, that was included in the telephone survey. Lawing said the committee canceled their contract with Morris after learning the survey included a question referring to Leake and his previous arrest on an obscene telephone charge.

The committee did not authorize that question and was embarrassed that it was included, Lawing said. The question asked respondents what they thought of Hunt for appointing Leake to the seat.

But Mobley said the committee had already paid Morris half his bill for the survey, and agreed Thursday after talking with Morris to pay him the remaining money and receive the survey results.

Leake was once charged with making an obscene call to a teenage girl, and later pleaded no contest to a lesser charge.

Morris could not be reached for comment. William Henderson, treasurer of the Jimmy Green Cabinet, refused to say how much the poll cost.

Strength For Today

A SECOND CHANCE

"Jesus turned and looked upon Peter" (Luke 22:61).

What tragic mistakes Peter had made. He had boasted that even if all the world forsake the Master, he would not. When accused of being a follower of Jesus he denied the charge. When it was repeated again, he cursed and swore that he did not even know the man under discussion. Boaster, liar, coward blasphemer.

Yet Peter stands today in a most honored place in church history and tradition to which Jesus assigned him. He fell from grace, and even from decency, as ignominiously as one could possibly fall. But he pulled himself together and marched to the heroic destiny of martyrdom to which he had been appointed.

God always gives us a second chance, even after our friends or we ourselves have refused to do so. This is just one more example of how God's mercy and understanding are beyond human understanding.

Where The Know-How?

WASHINGTON — The one thing all of us in this country prided ourselves on was "American Know-How." No matter how messed up things got politically, we always could say, "What makes this country different is that we've got Know-How."

Now, for the first time, our faith in A.K.H. is under siege and everyone seems to be asking "What happened to good old American Know-How?"

I found American Know-How taking a coffee break under a tree.

"How do you feel?" I asked.

"Not so good," Know-How said. "I keep goofing up. I guess it must be age."

"Don't say that. You're as young as you feel."

"Nothing seems to go right lately. Skylab won't stay up, they grounded the DC 10s, the nuclear energy plants are under fire, and they've recalled all the Firestone 500 radial tires. I guess I'm no longer infallible."

"No one is infallible, but you're still pretty good."

Everyone makes mistakes.

"Sure, but you never heard about them before. Now a day doesn't go by when someone somewhere doesn't screw up, and everyone says, 'That's American Know-How for you.' It isn't my fault."

"Whose fault is it?"

"I can't get good help. I've inherited a whole generation of people who don't give a damn."

"Why?"

"I know you're going to think I'm nuts, but I blame it on the day that parents stopped insisting children clean up their rooms."

"I'm not sure I understand."

"In the Sixties and Seventies people gave up asking their kids to do anything around the house. It was too much of a hassle. The kids dropped their clothes all over the floor, they left a mess everywhere they went and they got away with murder. Now they're grown up and they're a bunch of slobos. How can someone design a safe automobile when he doesn't even know how to make up his own bed?"

"I can't believe that's the answer to the problem."

"Have you been in a college dormitory in recent years? It looks as if a typhoon hit it. These kids, who live in their own debris for four and six years, have come out of school to be our doctors, lawyers, engineers and scientists. We're putting people in charge of nuclear plants who don't know how to hang their own clothes on a hanger. We have engineers designing dams who have never shined their shoes. We have doctors doing open-heart surgery who have never washed out a bathtub. Sooner or later they're bound to mess up."

Solution to the Dollar Devaluation and Oil Crunch:

If the United States would sell all the country, the Washington Monument, Washington, D. C., in fact, New York, Los Angeles, Detroit, everything, then you would have all the American dollars over here.

After all the American dollars are recovered from all the OPEC countries, then nationalize everything they bought by just saying, "It all belongs to the people." That's just what's been happening to American foreign private enterprises for years.

As far as oil, just tell the OPEC countries, "You want $20 more a barrel for oil, we want $20 more for grain." Very simple, they can't eat the oil and Russia can't supply them because they can't feed themselves. The United States has let the Russians have tons of grain every year for years.

Is there a Harry Truman around? If so, please step forward. You could get this mess cleared up fast.

London Times Waits

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Surrounded by seven silent telephones, with rows of covered typewriters stretching into the gloom, news editor Rodeny Cauton of The Times of London gets through the afternoon with the help of Wimbledon tennis on television.

"When we come back, we'll have some exclusives that will give the rest of Fleet Street a nervous breakdown," he says.

Cauton's enthusiasm is undimmed after reporting almost daily to a newsroom that hasn't put out a paper for more than seven months because of a showdown battle between the owners and the print unions.

There is now cautious hope that The Times, Britain's most prestigious newspaper, The Sunday Times and three associated supplements will reappear in six weeks.

In his drawer, says Cauton, are half a dozen good stories, written, polished, still news and ready to run.

"Once we get a target date for republication, I have no doubt there'll be more top stories the others have missed," he said. "We'll come back like the Resurrection."

Cauton and a night editor come to the office most days and stay for five or six hours. Most of the other 500 journalists employed by Times Newspapers run in once or twice a week to collect mail, exchange gossip and keep their clipping files up to date.

"We all come in on Thursday mornings for a staff meeting. That gives some structure to the week," says defense correspondent Henry Stanhope.

He and half a dozen others are writing books. About 20 turn up for a French course started by the paper for reporters with time on their hands. Some do free-lance work. Some say they have the best-tended gardens in Britain. All are on full pay.

Meanwhile, big news has come and gone at home and abroad, but the 194-year-old Times has been unable to report it.

Rationale Of Two-Piece Suits

By GAIL MICHAELS

Several weeks ago I was dressing for one of my rare evenings out when Meg asked me why I was wearing a skirt. I knew exactly what she meant. She has always believed that while other people's legs are made of flesh, mine are made of blue denim.

But the prospect of an escape from the house had put me in such a playful mood that I pretended to misunderstand her question.

"I'm wearing a skirt," I said, "because Daddy would be embarrassed if I went out in an underwear."

"Why?"

"Because nice people don't wear underwear in public."

She looked puzzled. "But they do at the beach."

"I certainly couldn't argue. The only difference between underwear and bathing suits is that the underwear covers more. Bathing suits have become so little that I recently heard of a girl who made two bathing suits out of a washcloth.

I don't wear bikinis, but then I don't worship the sun. I've got nothing against the sun either, but I'm not so crazy about it that I lie in it in April when the chill factor is 50 degrees and the sun-bathers are lavender. Neither do I intend to broil in it for an entire July day when I can duck into some air-conditioned haven and ready.

Even when I do venture out onto the beach, I cover as much as possible. My idea of modest beach apparel is a warm-up suit. The only kind of pictures I let Phillip take of me in the sand is the kind where I'm buried up to my hips.

But if I have an aversion to bikinis, Meg loves them. That's all she wants to wear. Every time she gets a bathing suit, we fight over whether it will be one piece or two piece.

My objections to bikinis on little girls differ from my objections to bikinis on me, but they are just as strong. I think bikinis on little girls are tacky. Those plump tummies look much cuter in one pieces. And they're not as susceptible to sunburn.

Now, Meg does have a bikini. I didn't buy it for her; her grandmother did. That, of course, makes it extra special.

It doesn't matter that the hem has come out of the skirt or that the colors all ran the first time it got wet. Meg insists upon wearing it.

It's the way she wears it that really gets to me. The top is made of two pieces that tie together. She wears one on the middle of her chest and the other under her arm.

Then there's the bottom. She can't keep it up. When she runs, she has to clutch the front of it. And every time she jumps in the water, it ends up around her knees.

The last time we went to the beach, I put my foot down. She would wear her one-piece. She cried and she screamed, but I was firm.

And naturally, the first thing she needed to do after she got wet was to go to the potty.

As we stood on the slippery restroom floor and struggled to get the Spandex down over her bottom before it was too late, I finally began to see the rationale behind a two-piece.

Police Suspect A Sleeping Guard Cost Five Lives

No Gang Surveillance

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Motorcycle clubs in North Carolina, like the Outlaws in Charlotte where five members were slain in their clubhouse Wednesday, are not kept under continuous surveillance by state law enforcement officials.

The heads of the state Highway Patrol and the State Bureau of Investigation said Thursday that they investigate incidents that fall within their jurisdiction but do not keep tabs on the clubs.

"As of about three or four years ago, we stopped maintaining files on these questionable groups of people," said State Bureau of Investigations Director Haywood Starling.

The state Highway Patrol hasn't kept tabs on motorcycle gangs "because they've never given us too much trouble," says Col. John T. Jenkins, the patrol's commander.

The killings Wednesday touched off speculation in Charlotte that a running feud between the Outlaws and their rival group, the Hell's Angels, was the cause.

But Charlotte police say there is no evidence linking the killings to the Hell's Angels. There are no suspects in the case as yet, police said.

FBI agents and Fort Bragg authorities say they are investigating a May 21 slaying that is believed to have stemmed from a violent feud between two Fayetteville motorcycle clubs, the Norsemen and the Confederates.

Spec. 4 Carl Newman Jr. was killed while standing guard at a Fort Bragg printing plant on May 21.

Authorities said Newman was shot once in the head with a small-caliber pistol after he opened a door in answer to a knock. He lived off the Fort Bragg reservation with a member of the Norsemen club, although he was not a member of the gang.

Investigators say Newman may have been killed because he was believed to be spying on one gang for another gang. No charges have been filed in the case, according to the FBI.

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Local police believe a motorcycle gang member who fell asleep while on guard at the gang's clubhouse may have given gunmen the chance early Wednesday to carry out the methodical execution of five persons.

William Allen, 22, was apparently on guard duty on a porch beside the two-room house when the killers struck.

"Allen was a probate (novice gang member), so he would have logically been the one to pull guard duty," said a police officer who asked that his name not be used.

Allen, three other men and a woman were shot to death in what has been dubbed the July Fourth massacre.

Investigators said there were no signs of a struggle, and it appeared that the victims were all asleep.

"If Allen fell asleep, that cost them all their lives," the officer said.

The killings touched off waves of speculation that a running feud between the Outlaws and their rival group, Hell's Angels, prompted the slayings. But police Sgt. W.J. Horner, who heads the investigation, said Thursday that there were no suspects in the case and there was no evidence linking the killings to Hell's Angels.

However, he added that gang warfare had not been eliminated as a possible motive.

Another investigator who asked not to be identified said it appeared at least three killers opened fire simultaneously to kill all five victims.

"It had to be on cue," the officer said. "How else could it have been? If it wasn't that way, someone would have woken up."

Police department spokesman Emily Hedrick said Thursday that local authorities have received reports from "all across the country" that Outlaws members from other chapters are rolling toward Charlotte for a gathering in the wake of the shootings.

Gov. Jim Hunt said the state Highway Patrol would be available to help local police if gang members mass in Charlotte.

Li. Virgil McDaniel, commander of a Dayton, Ohio, police district where the Outlaws have a clubhouse, said he heard from Outlaws Thursday morning that fellow gang members from that area were gathering to head for Charlotte.

McDaniel estimated at least 150 gang members from across the country would come to Charlotte for a funeral ceremony.

"It's a ritual, some of them always show up for another Outlaw's funeral," he said. "But that's usually for somebody killed in an accident or shot in a bar fight. It's very rare for one to get dusted (executed) and you had more than one. So the Outlaws have to have a show of strength. You'll have a hell of a crowd."

Ms. Hedrick said police agencies as far away as Los Angeles had reported that Outlaws were on the road to Charlotte.

Authorities worry that the massing of Outlaws in Charlotte could trigger further violence. Both the Outlaws and the Hell's Angels have chapters scattered across the country and in Canada, and both have members in Charlotte.

"We don't expect them to be here very long and we don't expect any trouble. We'll be prepared," Ms. Hedrick said. She would not elaborate on what preparations police were making.

Police identified Allen and the female victim, Bridgett Benfield, 17, of nearby Mount Holly, a few hours after the shootings. But the identities of the other three victims, all apparently from out of state, were more difficult to establish.

After tentative identifications were reached, persons believed to be related to or acquainted with the three men flew to Charlotte Thursday.

Horner released the identity of another victim Thursday afternoon, giving the man's name as William Roswell Dronenburg Jr., who would have been 32 years old Sunday.

Declaring he wanted to protect Dronenburg's family, Horner would not say where the man was from.

The families of Ms. Benfield and Allen were making funeral arrangements Thursday and Ms. Hedrick said both families "have requested that no bikers be present."

The mortuary handling Allen's funeral would not reveal the time or place, saying the dead man's family wanted only a private funeral.

A spokesman for Carothers Funeral Home in Mount Holly said Ms. Benfield would be buried Saturday after a 2 p.m. service at the mortuary.

Murfreesboro's People See Williamsburg Role

MURFREESBORO, N.C. (AP) — The town of Murfreesboro has enough of the same character and appeal to become the Williamsburg of North Carolina.

At least that's what the residents of this Hertford County town think.

"Oh we don't have the money the Rockefeller do, and we certainly can't hope to be as elaborate as Williamsburg," says Mayor William H. Hill. "But Murfreesboro has a lot of the same character, the same culture and appeal."

After nearly a dozen years of work, the plan is taking

Spivey's Corner Looks For Answer In Skylab

town's historical background.

"We're not on the level to compete with Williamsburg yet, but when restoration is complete, the town certainly will have its draw."

Lackey says the restoration will turn out to be the biggest asset the town has.

"It'll bring in more income and nothing will be taken away except memories of how things were."

There are several reasons for the sagging spirits in the tiny crossroads.

The weather ruined attendance at this year's Hollerin' Contest.

And then, Spivey's Corner's only successful entry ever for Miss North Carolina was fired last week, just a day before her reign was to end.

SPIVEY'S CORNER, N.C. (AP) — Times are tough these days in Spivey's Corner, the dot on the map in Sampson County that hosts the National Hollerin' Contest each year.

Times are so tough that folks are looking for a new claim to fame and a way to raise the residents' spirits. They think they've found the answer in Skylab.

There were also reports that folks were down because the town lost its (tongue-in-cheek) bid to host the 1980 Olympics and got its invitation to be the haven for the exiled Shah of Iran turned down.

Now they are turning their gaze skyward because their newest scheme involves Skylab, which is scheduled to fall from orbit next week.

Spivey's Corner is offering its fenced-in football stadium, site of the National Hollerin' Contest, as a crash site for the spacecraft.

Ermon Godwin, one of the town's chief promoters, says the stadium is a perfect, safe site for Skylab. Hollerin' is over until next June and football is still a few months away.

"We've appointed a committee of three," said Godwin. "If and when Skylab does fall at Spivey's Corner, we are hoping it will fall in the area fenced off."

The three men are then assigned to round up all the leftover souvenirs from the Hollerin' Contest and haul them to the football field for peddling to the tourists who are bound to come to town to see the fallen Skylab.

What are the expectations for the success of this scheme?

"Your guess is as good as mine," Godwin said.

Private School Growth Slowing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State education officials say recently-complied figures show a tapering off in the rate of growth of private schools in North Carolina.

Private school enrollment in North Carolina increased from 18,300 to 51,658 in the six years from 1967 to 1972 — a gain of almost 300 percent. But from 1973 to the 1978-79 school year, it increased to 56,192 pupils, a gain of less than 10 percent. By contrast, public-school enrollment in the state totaled about 1,250,000.

The enrollment trend in private schools nationally, however, appears to be up somewhat. The National Association of Independent Schools says enrollment in its 825 private schools has been increasing by 1 percent to 1.5 percent per year.

reappear April 17, and the editors planned to publish all the missed obituaries and a day-by-day summary of the news since Dec. 1 in several special supplements.

But negotiations with the union stalled and the shutdown continued. With so news piling up, editors are unsure how many obituaries the paper will be able to handle. Instead of the day-by-day news summary, they plan supplements with comprehensive articles.

None of the journalists have quit, though some have had good offers.

"The worst thing is the misery of waiting, always expecting the paper to come back, getting ready for it, hoping, then worrying about the future," says education correspondent Diana Geddes.

She has attended innumerable education conferences she couldn't write about, does some free-lance articles, and recently began devoting mornings to some "private, personal writing."

"Without a daily deadline, I find I take a week to write for free-lance the sort of article that would have taken a couple of hours before," she said.

Said another staff member: "I messed about with a novel, sort of doing nothing. Now I spend more time really doing nothing. I've found I'm not one of those would-be-novelist or would-be-another-kind-of-journalists, I'm just a journalist."

Churches Lead In Refugee Aid

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Although it often goes unnoticed, whatever American help is extended to relieve the mounting human tragedy of refugees in Southeast Asia is done largely through religious organizations.

They provide most all of the local sponsorships that are required for admitting the castaways, and have promised to line up such hospitality for as many of the refugees as the government will admit.

"This central role that Protestant, Catholic and Jewish bodies are playing in this massive human calamity is rarely recognized, but it's essential to saving lives," says Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum of the American Jewish Committee.

"It's a great demonstration of religious faith in action." With thousands fleeing tyrannies in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam, many to die, starve or drown in the South China Sea, Christian and Jewish forces have joined forces to press for all-out rescue measures.

It's "the greatest humanitarian crisis of this decade," they declared in a joint statement, urging government leaders "to do everything in their power to meet this vast human catastrophe now."

Already, U.S. religious organizations have resettled thousands of the 210,000 Indochinese refugees admitted to this country. Church sponsors are awaiting others still in detention camps, and pledged to handle all additional refugees allowed in the country.

"The churches and synagogues are experienced hands in resettling refugees, and we're ready to resettle more in their desperate, excruciating plight," says the Rev. George Harkins of the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A.

Religious organizations have been in the business of sponsoring resettlement of outcasts and the homeless throughout this century, including hundreds of thousands after World War II and in subsequent upheavals around the earth.

All major denominations and interchurch bodies have overseas staffs working with refugees and also departments to arrange sponsorships for finding homes and employment through local congregations.

With thousands now "desperately seeking help" in the "terrible human saga" in Indochina, "we cannot sit idle," says Episcopal Presiding Bishop John M. Allin. He urges the U.S. to use military and civilian aircraft and ships to bring the refugees from overcrowded camps and drifting boats.

Uncounted thousands of refugees already have perished, including about 200,000 boat people drowned at sea, with other thousands dying on the land, doubtlessly including many of the 40,000 Cambodians recently forced back into Cambodia at gunpoint by Thailand to face starvation or execution.

Refugee experts estimate that the tide of refugees will total a half million by fall, a million in a year, and that under present conditions, 50 percent to 70 percent of them would perish.

If greater rescue efforts are not made, "we may later look back on a new holocaust," says Bishop Thomas C. Kelly of the U.S. Catholic Conference, referring to the Nazi slaughter of 6 million Jews.

HOW SOON WILL WE BE REBORN?

No one wanted the old country church torn down when the new building was put up across the road. It just didn't seem respectful. Charlie Swenson suggested, "Why not make it a museum?"

You should have seen the activity here one Saturday. Everyone for miles around turned out, bringing mops and paint brushes — and, of course, chicken salad and apple pies. Then we had a dedication ceremony. Charlie Swenson's wife accompanied us on the old piano as we sang "The Church's One Foundation."

Now tourists from the city come out to see the pot-bellied stoves, rustic pews and old lamps in our church museum. Once each summer we worship here.

For some of us there will always be a place in our hearts for this little church where we first learned about the teachings of God's Son. We love the new one, too. It is leading new generations into finding the same enduring values.

SUCCESSFUL TRANSPLANT—Dr. Harold Dick, chief of Orthopedic Pediatric Services at New York's Presbyterian Hospital, left, gets an admiring glance from his patient Daisy Diaz, of Jersey City, N.J. The fifteen-year-old girl recently underwent a 14-hour operation in which two teams of microsurgeons headed by Dr. Dick, transplanted the upper 12.5 inches of Daisy's healthy left fibula into her right leg, disabled by the bone disease osteomyelitis. The doctors have announced the operation was successful and that Daisy eventually will be able to walk unaided. (AP Laserphoto)

May Help Buy Wood Stoves

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — City dwellers need not apply. But if you're in the country, the Tennessee Valley Authority may help you buy that wood-burning stove it told you to chuck 25 years ago when it promised cheap power for all electric homes.

The federal utility's directors will be asked at their next meeting July 12 in Tupelo, Miss., for $5.3 million to approve wood stoves for 5,000 homeowners who want to cut their electric bills.

Nearly $3.6 million will go to providing no-interest loans of $800 to $1,000 to buy and install each stove in at least five different areas in the seven-state region TVA provides with power.

Darlene McDonald, a TVA spokeswoman, said Thursday the areas for the expanded demonstration have not been chosen. But 22 counties already plagued by air pollution have been ruled out because the stoves would only worsen the problem.

"We just feel that before TVA starts encouraging wood stoves in these areas, we ought to allow them to continue their cleanup," Joe Duncan, an environmental engineer for the agency, said.

He said the stoves produce carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons and photochemical oxidants. With proper ventilation, the by-products pose no hazard to users, but they may add to the haze which settles over polluted communities on warm days, he said.

Cities such as Bristol; Knoxville; Chattanooga; Nashville; Memphis; Paducah, Ky., and Decatur, Ala., already exceeding pollution limits under the National Clean Air Act automatically are excluded.

TVA began testing the wood burners two years ago, giving 120 of them to residents in six low-income counties in East Tennessee. They reduced individual homeowners' winter power bills 50 percent.

The program was expanded last November to provide interest-free loans to 1,000 residents in six north Georgia counties. The savings were even greater—heating bills dropped 60 to 80 percent.

Compared with more exotic energy-saving technologies, the benefits are outstanding, if you live in an area where there is plenty of available cheap firewood. The stoves cost a one-third to one-fourth the amount of solar water heaters, pay for themselves a lot sooner and save more electricity.

The agency's toll-free help line last winter was swamped with calls from homeowners wanting to know how they might qualify for the loans. Officials said the calls are again beginning to come in from people already preparing for next winter.

The stoves, bearing little resemblance to the pot-bellied variety of a half century ago, have thermostats and controlled combustion chambers allowing a single piece of wood in them to burn for 10 to 12 hours.

And wood? TVA foresters estimate there is enough unused forest resources in the region to annually provide the energy equivalent to 16 million tons—$400 million worth—of coal the utility burns.

Gas Squeeze Eases For Weekend

By The Associated Press
American motorists who have been waiting, scheming, siphoning and even shooting to get a full tank of gas in recent weeks should find the filling up a bit easier this weekend.

On Thursday, Rhode Island became the latest state to introduce statewide odd-even rationing in an attempt to ease long gas lines. Previously the plan had been effect in four cities in that state. Some odd-even rationing is in effect in at least 10 other states and Washington, D.C.

According to the American Automobile Association and an Associated Press spot check, long gas station lines will be rare and supplies should be fairly plentiful in most parts of the nation.

The shortest supplies likely will be concentrated in the Washington, D.C. area and parts of New England and the Great Lakes states.

The AAA said Thursday it found the "first good news in weeks for many American motorists" in a survey of nearly 6,200 gas stations.

Motorists should expect "more gasoline available, more service stations open and shorter station lines," the AAA report said. "Fourteen percent more stations will be open this weekend than were open last weekend."

Officials attribute the improvement to increased supply, due to delivery of July fuel allocations, and decreased demand, due to a slump in driving.

"We're telling people we believe the gasoline situation should be a little less of a problem this weekend because most stations received their July allocations this week," said Kevin Kneisley of the Kansas Department of Economic Development.

"The lines are getting consistently shorter, people are worrying less about getting fuel," said Danny Alvarez, fuel allocation officer of Florida's Dade County, which includes Miami. "The facts and figures indicate we shouldn't have any lines at all."

State officials reported that travel over the Fourth of July holiday was down considerably from past years, apparently because of the gas crunch and, in some areas, bad weather.

The gas shortage also has changed buying habits and trimmed sales at some of the nation's largest retailers, according to June sales reports released Thursday. Retailers reported sales dipped for some items, such as tires and luggage, while catalog sales improved.

In other gas-related developments: —A survey released Thursday by the Conference Board, a business group that periodically reports on consumer attitudes, found that Americans have cut back dramatically on vacation plans, especially if they were going to go by car.

The survey found that 39 percent of the 5,000 families interviewed nationwide planned a vacation this summer, down from 46 percent in February and 47 percent a year ago.

—The Sun Co. announced Thursday that it has begun buying gasoline on the "spot" market in an effort to increase supplies at its service stations. Company officials said they had resisted such a move but are now convinced that the shortage is more serious than they had thought.

—The auto industry reported June sales were 21 percent below last year, and analysts blamed the slump on worries over gasoline and a possible recession.

—A national motel chain, Days Inns of America, says it will offer a free Sunday night's lodging to any patron who is unable to continue a trip because gas is not available within 5 miles.

Tobacco Curing Fuel Said Tight

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina tobacco farmers who have been beset by cool damp weather that inhibited growth and promoted the spread of blue mold now face problems in obtaining fuel to cure their leaf.

"We hear that it's going to be kind of tight," said John Cyrus, chief of the Tobacco Affairs Section of the state Department of Agriculture, when asked about the fuel situation. He said a report on the fuel picture is being compiled for Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

Cyrus said that with warmer weather recently reports he has received indicate that the blue mold outbreak, that began in the East and spread all the

Counter-Offensive Opened By Somza Forces Could Be Test

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza pressed a counter-offensive today that could prove if he still has enough military might to save him.

The 53-year-old dictator sent about 1,000 troops, planes, armored cars and at least one tank against the Sandinista guerrillas holding Masaya, 20 miles south of the capital. Reporters observed the planes bombing, rocketing and strafing the city.

It was Somoza's first counter-offensive against any of the 24 cities the Sandinistas have taken since they launched their offensive six weeks ago to try to end the 42-year-old dictatorship of the Somoza family.

If the national guard cannot recapture Masaya, there will be little prospect of Somoza regaining control of the rest of the country. The guerrillas of the Sandinista National Liberation Front now hold all the major population centers except for Managua, nearby Granada and ports on the Caribbean.

Somoza sent 600 troops from Managua and 200 from another part of the country against the rebels in Masaya, presidential aide Max Kelly said. Two hundred others had been sent in earlier.

Meanwhile, the guerrillas' Radio Sandino reported that the rebels had taken the army garrison in the town of Jinotepe, about 30 miles southwest of Managua.

The broadcast said the guerrillas were also still attacking the army post at Rivas, 60 miles southeast of Managua and 25 miles north of the Costa Rican border which the rebels began attacking Tuesday and where they plan to set up their provisional government.

But Somoza's press secretary, Rafael Cano, continued to claim that Rivas was under full government control after a sharp guerrilla attack.

Late Thursday evening anti-aircraft guns at Managua airport and around Somoza's heavily fortified bunker headquarters opened up on a plane flying over the capital. About 75 percent of the city also was blacked out, but the cause was not immediately known.

Regarding published reports that Somoza would flee the country soon, a presidential aide who requested anonymity said: "If the president's departure is imminent, you'll have to admit that he is selecting a peculiar manner of preparing for it by launching a major attack."

"The president was very dismayed and was close to resigning after the OAS resolution that he should resign. But he picked himself up again, and told me, 'Well, sir, strap on your pistol because we are going to fight them all the way.'"

Seventeen members of the Organization of American States, including the United States, approved a resolution last month calling for Somoza's resignation to end the war. But Somoza has refused to step down until the fighting ends.

Cannon said that several residents detained Moore until police arrived at Glendale Court Apartments following a 1:15 a.m. incident.

Police, in checking ownership of a car that had allegedly been operated by Moore, discovered that the vehicle had been reported stolen from Hampton, Va. Moore was charged with possession of the stolen vehicle.

Bond for Moore was set at $5,000 on each of the counts, it was reported.

Rule Death Is Suicide

GRIMESLAND — Suicide has been ruled in the Thursday morning death of a Grimesland woman who apparently drove her car into the Tar River near here.

Pitt Medical Examiner Dr. Stan Harris attributed the death of Myrtle Johnson Wilson, 51, to drowning.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that witnesses at the Seine Beach boat launching near the Tar River bridge reported seeing Mrs. Wilson drive her automobile into the river in the area of the launching site.

The sheriff, who said that deputies found no evidence of foul play in the incident, noted that the Sheriff's Department was notified at 10:22 a.m.

The body of Mrs. Wilson was recovered by personnel of the Greenville Rescue Squad.

Girl Injured As Car Hit House

Lizzie Mae Reed of 16 Contentnea Street was reported injured Thursday when the car she was driving left the road and struck a house at 705 Cherry Street.

Investigating officers said that the 8:25 p.m. wreck resulted in damages estimated at $500 to the home and property of Mrs. Pauline Thomas.

Lizzie Reed, who was not charged, was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries suffered in the wreck, police reported.

Damage to the Reed vehicle was set at $300.

Scientists And Engineers Still Trust Nuclear Power

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
Associated Press Writer
OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) —

Scientists overcame unimaginable hurdles in the wartime race to build an atomic bomb, and they say they are not about to duck the challenges posed by nuclear safety problems.

At the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, nuclear physicists, chemists and engineers are studying the Three Mile Island reactor accident in an effort to regain public trust in nuclear energy.

Nuclear power is under attack across much of the nation as too dangerous, too expensive and too much of an environmental menace, but Oak Ridge — one of the largest centers of nuclear expertise in the nation — remains an unabashed pocket of atomic fervor.

"This is a new technology, an immensely complicated new technology, and there are obvious risks," says an operator who runs one of six experimental reactors at Oak Ridge. "But if I didn't think we could clear the hurdles, I wouldn't be here."

For years, scientists said an accident like the one March 28 at Three Mile Island would never happen. There were too many safeguards, too many back up systems.

Now that the danger has come and gone, the scientists here view Three Mile Island with equanimity, even optimism. They are quietly pleased that reactor systems were capable of preventing catastrophe following a remarkable string of equipment and operator errors.

And perhaps more importantly, they are convinced that the TMI incident demonstrated that a "China Syndrome" meltdown is less likely to occur than experts had believed.

"Nobody wants to be a polyantha about this, but it seems as if the probability of a meltdown is more remote now," says laboratory director Herman Postma. "The reactor proved more resilient than we had dared hope."

Nonetheless, many of the scientists who had pooh-poohed the risks of a dangerous nuclear reactor accident "were shaken up," Postma says.

"I don't think we (the scientific community) had gotten lazy, but perhaps too many people took too much for granted."

Alvin Weinberg, a physicist who served for more than two decades as director of the labs, has mounted a campaign to "fix" the nuclear industry with a handful of reforms that would reduce the likelihood and the dangers of a reactor accident.

"My position in nuclear energy is a little bit anomalous," he says. "I've spent my whole life in the field, but I'm not what you'd call a red-hot pro-nuke. Let's say I'm a critical advocate."

"I am worried that the nuclear option might not survive," he says. "But the accident at Three Mile Island may be our salvation: it is finally forcing us to face the real problem: it's not proliferation, it's not waste disposal. It's reactor safety."

Thus, Weinberg over the years has developed a reactor reform program, and in the wake of TMI, interest in it is building.

The Tennessee Valley Authority, which runs what will soon be the biggest nuclear utility in the United States, reassessed its operations following the accident and is installing most of Weinberg's proposals.

TVA is demanding better qualifications, more training and higher pay for nuclear operators (an effort to professionalize the workforce); it is allowing safety experts to report directly to the TVA board, bypassing operating officials whose first priority is often to provide uninterrupted service. And TVA has created a nuclear generating division independent from other TVA operations.

Also, TVA is improving safety systems beyond federal requirements and following a study of electrical demand, the agency decided to mothball four reactors that were to have been built in the 1980s.

S. David Freeman, TVA's innovative chairman, says future nuclear plants will be built on existing sites. This is a key reform sought by Weinberg who says the grouping of reactors on a relatively few isolated sites is a key to earning public acceptance of nuclear power.

Don Trauger, like Weinberg, was a member of the team of scientists who cracked technological barriers during wartime atomic development. Now associate director for nuclear and engineering technologies at Oak Ridge, Trauger says there may be a silver lining to the near-disaster at Three Mile Island.

"Not to belittle the dangers involved, I'm quick to point out that no one was hurt. And we were able to reach one happy conclusion: reactors are less likely to go wrong than anyone thought."

Fred Mynatt, director of Nuclear Regulatory Commission projects at Oak Ridge, told the Oak Ridge newspaper, "It's difficult now to postulate mechanisms that would cause a core melt. The conditions at Three Mile Island were extremely severe. The core was uncovered without being surrounded by coolant water three times during the accident, once for hours, yet the core is still largely intact."

He said the Three Mile Island accident created "conditions we really had not dreamed of experimenting with."

Postma explained that steam created by the overheated reactor apparently provided unexpected coolant to prevent the meltdown.

Oak Ridge was built during World War II as part of the effort to manufacture a bomb. Today, Oak Ridge facilities are involved in uranium enrichment, the original task, as well as weapons development and research in a variety of energy areas ranging from coal liquefaction and solar collectors to fusion research.

The Oak Ridge lab is run by Union Carbide under contract with the U. S. Department of Energy.

The ridership figures posted by the Greenville operation ranked GREAT second only to Gastonia's 45.9 percent and 39 percent increases for March and April. The Gastonia transit system has been in operation for just over a year, it was mentioned.

Other publicly-owned transit systems in the state and their March and April increases or decreases included: Asheville, 5.4 percent increase for March, six percent decrease for April; Chapel Hill, 5.8 percent and one-tenth of a percent increases;

Charlotte, 2.9 percent and 3.6 percent increases; Fayetteville, 27.8 percent and 19.2 percent increases; High Point, 21.5 percent and 12.4 percent increases;

Raleigh, 14.5 percent and seven percent increases; Salisbury, 6.6 percent and 4.8 percent increases; Wilmington, 11.8 percent and 18.9 percent increases; and Winston-Salem, 5.4 percent increase and 1.5 percent decrease.

Overall, ridership in the North Carolina systems was up 7.9 percent during March and 4.2 percent during April.

Break-In Of Car Charged

Michael Hardy, 27, of 411 W. Third Street, Greenville, was arrested early this morning and charged by Greenville Police with breaking and entering of an automobile.
 Police, according to Chief Glenn Cannon, arrested Hardy at 2 a.m. and charged him with breaking into a car at the home of the Rev. Churchill Thomas at 403 Ford Street.
 Thomas told police that his wife spotted someone breaking into their car and the subject fled when Thomas opened the house door and yelled at the subject.
 Cannon said that Thomas, who was apprehended after investigation of the incident, was placed under $1,000 bond on the breaking and entering count.
 Damage to the Thomas vehicle's glove compartment and door were estimated at $50.

First Baby Born At Disneyland

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Teresa Salcedo doesn't know it yet, but she's the envy of millions of kids — and small wonder. She's the first baby ever born at Disneyland.
 Elias and Rosa Salcedo knew they were cutting things close, but they figured there was time for a Fourth of July visit to the world-famous amusement park. On the submarine ride, they knew they'd guessed wrong. Nurses were summoned but Teresa made her grand entrance on a park bench behind Main Street's Plaza Inn. Mother and daughter were doing fine Thursday and received guests — Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck, who presented Teresa with Disneyland birth certificate No. 1.

The government reported this morning that wholesale prices of finished goods rose by a relatively small 0.5 percent in June.

The latest weekly statistics from the American Petroleum Institute, meanwhile, showed that gasoline inventories had risen to above their levels of a year ago.

Although experts cautioned that no sweeping conclusions should be drawn from the weekly figures, they were taken as a signal that the outlook for gasoline supplies was improving.

CIT Financial led the active list, up 1 1/4 at 54 1/4 after a gain of 12 1/2 points in the past two sessions. The company is discussing a merger with RCA.

Polaroid fell 1 1/4 to 28 1/2. The company said it had sharply lower earnings in the second quarter.

Radioactive Water In Lake

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Investigators are seeking the source of a discharge of five gallons of radioactive water from Duke Power Co.'s Oconee Nuclear Plant.

The utility said Thursday the water was released into Lake Keowee the day before when a tube in the cooling system began leaking. The unit, shut for maintenance in June, was being returned to service when the leak occurred.

H.B. Tucker, of Duke's nuclear division, said samples taken from the lake showed no detectable radioactivity present. "The release was so small that it could not be measured above the normal background radiation at the point of discharge from the station," he said.

ACLU Sues Fla. Abortion Curbs

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union has filed a federal suit to have new restrictions on abortions in Florida declared unconstitutional.

The restrictions, which became law last Friday, require married women to get permission from their husbands and for minors to get consent from parents or guardians before having abortions.

Eleanor Ginsberg, head of the Florida ACLU, said the suit was filed Thursday on behalf of all doctors who perform abortions and all women affected by the law. Attorney General Jim Smith and state attorney Michael Satz, named as defendants, were not available for comment.

Blind Call For Equal Pay Rule

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The 3,000 delegates to the National Federation of the Blind's convention have called for an end to a federal exemption that allows some employers to pay unsighted workers less than the minimum wage.

The NFB said Thursday blind workers are sometimes paid as little as 58 cents per hour, while the current minimum wage is $2.90 an hour. Delegates also asked the National Labor Relations Board to uphold a decision affirming the right of blind workshop employees to unionize.

Study Chemical Fire's Environmental Damage

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — After more than 2,000 persons returned to homes they evacuated following a fire and several explosions at a chemical plant, officials shifted their concern to the damage done to the environment.

Drexel Chemical Co. officials say the accident was caused when a spark ignited a chemical that may have leaked from a storage drum at the plant in southwest Memphis.

More than 170 persons — including a dozen firefighters — were treated for burns and chemical and smoke inhalation, and released from hospitals Thursday.

Twenty-two persons — 10 firefighters, four chemical plant employees and eight other persons working in the area — were hospitalized. One worker was knocked from his forklift and his T-shirt was burned from his body after the initial explosion.

The explosions, which hurled 55-gallon barrels in the air, sent a highly toxic smoke cloud over parts of the city.

Most of the evacuated residents and workers were allowed to return to the area by late afternoon. By that time, city officials began to worry about water pollution.

Among the chemicals stored in the 60,000-square-foot room where the explosions occurred was methyl parathion, a poison used in the manufacture of agricultural pesticides.

Jack Stonebreaker, deputy director of the Environmental Protection Agency's Region IV environmental emergency branch in Atlanta, said water from fire hoses could carry the chemical into area streams.

He said if water contaminated with the poison gets into nearby Nonconah Creek or McKellar Lake, "it will kill everything in it."

The creek drains much of the southern half of Memphis, and the lake, which is the city's industrial harbor, empties into the Mississippi River.

Billy Ray Schilling, the city's Civil Defense director, said firefighters dumped sulphuric acid manufactured by Drexel into the river to prevent further explosions.

He said the city's Public Works Department had poured soda ash into Nonconah Creek Thursday afternoon to neutralize chemicals that had drained from the Drexel plant.

Haulers Are Moving, But Activity Still Slow

By The Associated Press
 "There's trucks. Not as many as I'd like to see, but they're moving," said a Pennsylvania truck stop owner as truckers in two more states voted to go back to work and the decline of the month-old strike continued.

Meanwhile, Mississippi Gov. Cliff Finch, who recently drove a big rig to California to learn about drivers' problems, promised Thursday he would press for reforms in trucking regulations this weekend at the National Governor's Conference.

A still-undetermined number of the nation's 100,000 independent haulers went on strike to protest fuel prices and shortages, the 55 mph speed limit and weight regulations that vary from state to state. The strike had prompted worries of widespread food shortages and dry gasoline pumps as the haulers parked their rigs and blocked highways.

The Carter administration last week proposed a plan for dealing with truckers' grievances, and the Independent Truckers Association estimates two-thirds of the protesters have gone back to work.

"We are looking at the whole situation today and we'll see what the locals want to do," said Mac Vernon, ITA national press spokesman. "A lot of guys couldn't afford to stay out any longer."

Bill Hill of the Independent Truckers Unity Coalition urged drivers to continue the shutdown. But Thursday, drivers in Utah voted to end their strike, retaining the option to walk out again if future conditions warrant.

Maryland haulers also voted to go back to work, unaware that Gov. Harry Hughes had ordered an increase in the state's road weight limits, a step the truckers had sought, as a fuel conservation measure allowing fewer trucks to haul more goods.

Finch told truckers in Dallas he would seek passage of uniform weight regulation and adoption of fairer fuel allocations at the weekend governor's conference.

"The governors have the power to solve a lot of these problems while the ICC (Interstate Commerce Commission) has dragged its feet for years," said Bill Scheffer, ITA national vice president.

As the strike continued to lose momentum, so did the violence that marked its early days. However, one driver was shot in the leg in Idaho on Wednesday.

GOSPEL SING

There will be a gospel sing Saturday night, July 7, at Oak Grove Holiness Church. The Gospel Lights of Robersonville and the Golden Tones of Greenville will be on the program, along with other groups. Bishop Chance, pastor, invites the public to attend.

She Waived Her Rights

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge, granting a divorce to actor Rod Steiger and his wife Sherry, ruled that Mrs. Steiger waived her rights to half the actor's money when she signed a pre-nuptial agreement.

Superior Court Judge Harry Shafer ruled that the pre-nuptial contract was valid despite Mrs. Steiger's claim that she did not understand the document when she signed it.

"I just can't buy her position," the judge said Thursday. "At the time she signed this agreement, she intended it to be effective."

The judge said Steiger was "ill advised" when he engaged his law firm to advise his bride-to-be on an agreement that gave up all her community property rights. But he said it was not a sufficient conflict of interest to invalidate the agreement.

Mrs. Steiger still has pending a Marvin vs. Marvin-type lawsuit claiming that she is entitled to half of Steiger's assets acquired during the two years they lived together before marriage.

In granting an interlocutory dissolution of the six-year marriage, Shafer ordered Steiger to pay his wife $12,500 in temporary support through September, when the divorce becomes final.

The couple will return to court then to discuss permanent support arrangements.

Surfers Raise Theater Funds

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — It's doubtful the immortal bard was ever so inclined. Certainly, Caesar never "hung ten." But a group of surfers found that some Shakespearean quotes kept them awake in their 24-hour marathon to raise money to rebuild San Diego's Old Globe Theater, which burned in February 1978.

The campaign's 22-year-old organizer, Eric Orloff, emerged from the water at La Jolla Shores wet and weary Wednesday afternoon, but said, "It was worth it." A final count of pledges and donations was still being made Thursday.

Wave size ranged from "waist-high to over our heads," he said. As night fell, a quote from MacBeth came to mind: "Light thickens and the crow makes wing to rooky wood." he recited. "Good things of day begin to droop and drowse." That's how I felt."

Still No Trace

KITTY HAWK, N.C. (AP) — A Coast Guard spokesman said early Friday that a private plane missing on a flight from Kitty Hawk to Elizabeth City still had not been found.

Planes and boats searched Thursday for the single-engine craft that carried five Elizabeth City residents.

The Civil Air Patrol, Coast Guard, and local pilots searched an area of 7,200 square miles for the plane, which left the First Flight Airport at Kitty Hawk at 6:33 p.m. Wednesday for the 20-minute flight.

Boats were sent to the area to aid in the search by the Coast Guard.

Lenyer M. Little, his wife Betty and his daughter Lynyer were returning from a July Fourth outing, the Coast Guard said. Other occupants of the craft included Little's brother George Little III, 37, and Adrian Thornton, 8.

Tanner Is Not Afraid

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Playing Bjorn Borg in the Wimbledon final holds no terrors for big Roscoe Tanner.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova fought back Chris Evert Lloyd 6-4, 6-4 today to win the Wimbledon tennis championship for the second year in a row.

Navratilova unleashed her overpowering serve-and-volley attack to crush a listless and error-prone Lloyd.

The victory strengthens Navratilova's claim to the No. 1 ranking in women's tennis, the position Lloyd had held nearly unchallenged for four years — until last year.

It was a disappointment for the seelout crowd of 17,000, some of whom paid up to $700 to scalpers for a pair of tickets.

These two top-ranking players have had a series of hard, spectacular duels. Two weeks ago Lloyd beat Navratilova on grass at Eastbourne 7-5, 5-7, 13-11 in a match widely held to be the best the two had ever played against each other.

Martina beat Chris in the 1978 Wimbledon final 6-4, 4-6, 9-7 to highlight a season in which she had a 44-2 match record and gained the top spot on the computer ranking list.

Chris, recognized as No. 1 by the International Tennis Federation, disputed the computer's analysis and said she believed she would prove her right to the throne in this Wimbledon final. It had been hers in 1974 and 1976.

But today Navratilova had her unpredictable nerves in check and her play at the net was deadly.

"If I didn't think I could win there would be no point in going on court," Tanner said Thursday after crushing Pat Dupre, 6-3, 7-6, 6-3 in the semifinals.

Borg beat Jimmy Connors 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 to advance to his fourth consecutive final. He has won the final every time he's entered it, which means he stands to make modern tennis history Saturday. He could become the first man to win four in a row since Anthony Wilding completed his streak in 1913.

Today, Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd will battle for the women's title.

Navratilova is the defending champion. Lloyd, who won Wimbledon in 1974 and 1976, beat Martina two weeks ago at Eastbourne.

On Wednesday, Navratilova defeated Tracy Austin and Lloyd downed Evonne Goolagong Cawley to reach the final.

Tanner is not rated with much of a chance against Borg, but that could work to his advantage.

"There may be a little pressure on him, going for his fourth win, and there is not much pressure on me," Tanner said. "I'll be coming in as underdog and I'll just see how I go. It doesn't worry me that I am not given a lot of chance. It is what I do on court that matters."

Borg has won most of their previous encounters, but Tanner did beat the Swede in the U.S. Pro Indoor in Philadelphia 18 months ago. He feels that result could be significant.

"I felt I could beat him then," said the man with the huge serve. "I had a game plan that I wanted to use and I stuck to it and it worked." But Tanner wasn't about to reveal any game plans.

Borg was in superlative form in destroying Connors. Tanner and his coach, Dennis Ralston, watched part of the match.

"Borg is playing awfully well," said Tanner. "Guys have tried all sorts of things against him, but nothing has really worked. Borg wins a lot of points with his service. It is deceptive. Even when getting it back, you have to think about his next shot."

Tanner said his own game has improved dramatically over the past 12 months. Previously thought of as a big server but little more, his game is much better rounded now.

"The key to my improvement is my better movement, concentration and confidence," he said. "I also have a better attitude. I don't let things worry me."

"They key for me to beat anyone is to move well. Borg does the same thing."

Despite being the outsider, Tanner believes in his own ability to win the final. "I'm not going to go out thinking I can't win," he said. "If that was the case I might as well take the plane home and send my regards on Saturday."

The 23-year-old champion thinks the match against Tan-

Connors Took His Racquets—And Ran

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — OK, Jimbo, take your armful of steel racquets and run.

Nobody can blame you much for wanting to put as much distance between Jimmy Connors and Bjorn Borg as possible — and as quickly as possible.

But it would have been a nice gesture, don't you think, Jimmy, if, after being clobbered by your longtime rival in the men's semifinal at Wimbledon, you had put a friendly arm around the young Swede's shoulder and said: "Nice match, Bjorn."

Even fighters who spend 15 rounds knocking each other's teeth out accord each other that little courtesy, win or lose. But you chose to remain in character and give Borg the same kiss-off you've handed the international press corps since you arrived here.

Who cares about the press? Millions will applaud your slight in that respect. But nobody will forgive you for cold-shouldering the great guy who has been trading racquet punches with you for six years.

No beef from Bjorn. When asked what you said after the 106-minute, straight-set match, the plegmatic Scandinavian shrugged and said:

"Nothing. We didn't speak."

Four minutes after the last shot was hit you made the fastest exit in Wimbledon's 102-year history.

You, Jimmy Connors, are now the property of Bjorn Borg. He owns you now, heart and soul, just as he owns Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

So we can say good-bye to those titanic Borg-Connors duels, just as we stored away memories of the once exciting Borg-Vilas rivalries.

They are not contests any longer. They are mere warm-ups. Pity the 17,000 who crammed into Wimbledon's center court — some paying as much as 150 British pounds (more than $300) — to see a contest.

It was like watching Muhammad Ali punching the small bag in the gym. It was John Wayne against the Apaches. It was a thundering freight train going head-on against a runaway rabbit.

great Bjorn Borg? Roscoe Tanner maybe in Saturday's final with his scorching 153-mile-an-hour service, but the bookies won't even put it on the boards. John McEnroe perhaps in the long run. But not you, Jimbo. Not you.

Bjorn may have been your patsy back in the early 1970s, but he's got your number now. His victory margin this year — 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 — was the same as that in the final here a year ago.

He now has beaten you in eight of the last 11 matches. This year he has beaten you in three tournaments, losing only 17 games in seven sets. It has been murderous.

As a court warrior, Jimbo, the world has admired you greatly. The game has never produced a fiercer fighter. You have scrambled for every point — diving, leaping, grunting, cursing yourself — fought back from unbelievable odds and established an enviable record.

Too bad you couldn't have been as admirable as Borg in your relations with the public.

Borg was stupendous. His service came off the racquet like a lightning bolt. He had 11 clean aces. His looping topspin forehand and two-fisted backhand were deadly guided missiles.

Jimbo, maybe you were just too stunned to talk.

Greenville And Pitt Advance

BAYBORO — The Pitt County and Greenville Babe Ruth League All-Stars both captured lopsided victories in the first round of the Area Tournament, which got underway last night in Bayboro.

Pitt County dumped Pamlico County, 15-0, while Greenville romped to a 22-2 win over Washington.

The two meet tonight for the winners' bracket semifinals, while Pamlico and Washington face off in the losers' bracket of the double elimination tournament.

In the opening game, Greenville had little trouble in romping past Washington, scoring 12 times in the first inning.

Mitch Brann led off with a single and stole second. He scored the first run when Billy Brannigan singled. Crowell Pope walked and Roger Williams singled to load the bases. Jeff Porter doubled in two runs, and Gordon Douglas doubled, scoring two more. Brian Dye singled and stole up, and Mont Carter reached on an error, scoring Douglas. Brannigan also reached on an error, bringing in Dye. Pope doubled to score two more, and Williams reached on another error. Paul MacMillan was hit by a pitch, loading the bases, and Porter cleared them with a double.

Greenville added one in the fourth, two in the fifth and seven more in the sixth for their 22-run total. Washington scored once each in the second and seventh.

Douglas pitched a one-hitter for Greenville, allowing the lone hit in the second inning. He struck out six and walked one.

Williams and Douglas led the Greenville hitting with four each, while Brannigan had three, and Dye, Porter, Pope and Brann had two each.

In the second game, Pitt County also jumped off to a big lead, scoring nine times in the first inning. Greg Hardison led off with a single and Dixon Page walked. Bobby Avery singled in Hardison and Billy Bunting reached on a two-base error, scoring two more.

Emory Vines singled and Jeff Cox walked, loading the bases. Doug McRoy singled, driving in two runs. Roy Lassiter singled and Greg Hardison reached on an error, allowing Cox to score.

Page also was safe on an error, scoring McRoy and Lassiter. Hardison then scored on a passed ball.

Pitt added two in the third, three in the fifth and one in the sixth.

McRoy had a no-hitter going for Pitt until two were out in the sixth inning before allowing the lone hit of the game. He struck out 15 and walked four.

Bunting led the Pitt hitting with three, while Hardison, Avery and McRoy each had two.

In the 13-year-old playoffs, Pitt County lost to Pamlico County, 5-3, and falls into the losers' bracket. No details of that game were available.

Greenville's 13's host the State Tournament later this month and have a bye into that event.

Snow Hill Grabs Lead In Legion Series, 6-4

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Snow Hill put together five hits in the fourth inning last night to score six runs and defeat Pitt County 6-4 in the first game of their best-of-three semifinal playoff series in the Area I American Legion baseball tournament.

Snow Hill, an historically tough opponent for Post 39, got eight hits off of Pitt hurling ace Mike Williams, but put five of them, plus two walks, together in the fourth for six runs and a lead Pitt County was unable to overcome.

Pitt had scored one in the second and two in the third for a 3-0 lead and added another run in the fifth for the final 6-4 score. Post 39 left runners on base in six of the game's nine innings.

Snow Hill, which has now won 10 of its last 11 games, will host Pitt tonight in the second game of the series. A third game, if necessary, will be played at Harrington Field Saturday night.

"Snow Hill swung the bats real well," Post 39 coach Gary Overton said, adding "Williams just had one bad inning. He pitched a real good ballgame. I was impressed with the way he came back after (the fourth)."

Overton said his team never let up in the game, but it just couldn't come up with the key hits. "Our guys played hard. I think the team will come back."

Post 94 coach Jim Fulghum started little-used Chico Walsh on the mound. He lasted six innings and got the win. "We got a good game out of Walsh," he said. Kevin Korpi who won both of Snow Hill's playoff games against Wilson, pitched the final three innings without allowing a hit.

"There won't be many times when you bunch (hits) together like that," Fulghum said of his team's fourth-inning performance.

Skip Topping scored Pitt County's first run in the second inning last night. He walked, was sacrificed to second by Curtis Spencer, went to third on Mark Douglas' infield out and scored on an error.

Pitt added two runs in the third. Williams led off with a base on balls and Mark Shank sacrificed. He moved to third on a wild pitch and Will Barrett unleashed a home run that hit the Harrington Field scoreboard in left. It was Barrett's fifth homer of the season and his fourth against Snow Hill.

Then came the top of the fourth. Jimbo Fulghum started things off by waiting out a walk and then Snow Hill got three straight singles by Al Murray, Philip Gordon and Walt Tyndall. Fulghum scored on Gordon's hit.

Allen Moore walked to force in Murray, and after a strikeout, Robin Bowen singled to right to plate Gordon and Tyndall. Bowen moved to second on Walsh's infield out and he and Moore scored on a base hit by Billy McLawhorn.

The game's final run was scored in the fifth. Shank walked for Pitt County and went to second on a base hit by Barrett. Ben Wilson sacrificed the two runners up and Topping hit a sacrifice fly.

Pitt County had two more runners in scoring position in the game, but was unable to get

Amateur Tied For First Round Lead

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Bob Clampett is more than a 19-year-old cut-up from California. He's a darn good golfer.

Although he begs off questions about his U.S. Open antics of last month by saying, "The chapter's over. Why prolong it?" he finds it tough to keep his sense of humor hidden.

"How am I looking for low amateur?" he kidded Thursday after tying Bruce Devlin and Jim Simons for the first-round lead in the $300,000 Western Open.

Earlier, responding to a question about the strongest part of his game, the shaggy-haired blond — the lone amateur in the tourney — said, "They're all weak. I'd say my strongest part is probably luck."

Clampett, who will enter his junior year at Brigham Young University in the fall, missed the cut in the U.S. Open but played in the third round to fill out a twosome.

On the first two holes, he drove while on his knees. Warned against further breaks with tradition, he cooled his act, then resumed it on the back nine and was disqualified.

He played it straight Thursday to tie Devlin and Simons with 3-under-par 69 over the 7,097-yard Butler National Golf Club course.

One stroke back were two-time Western champion Tom Watson, Calvin Peete, Allen Miller, John Lister, John Fought, Pat McGowan and Dale Douglass.

Chick Evans was the only amateur to win the Western Open. He did it in 1910. Clampett won both the Western Amateur and Western Junior events in 1978.

Clampett said he is playing pro tournaments "to get some experience so when I do turn professional (after he graduates) the tournaments won't be as hard as they might otherwise be."

Devlin's last tournament victory was in 1972, when he won $119,768, but after that, the 41-year-old Australian said, "I lost interest in playing. I started to spend a lot of time on my architectural business."

Simons, who finished his round with a bogey, said, "It wasn't a great driving round, but I hit a lot of good iron shots.

"I'm going to be going out there a little more enthused in the second round" because of his fine opening day, he said.

Jim Colbert, one of six players in a group at 71, could have had the lead all to himself but he blew up on the last two holes with a double-bogey six and a bogey-five after making birdies on four of the first five holes.

"I played it perfect on those five holes," he said. "I'm not really happy with my finish."

Defending champion Andy Bean was pleased with his 73 in the afternoon round when the wind kicked up. He had miscalculated and left himself without time to warm up.

"I just didn't know what time it was. I have a pretty decent watch," said the winner of $45,000 in last year's Western.

American Swimmers Continue Break Records, Collect Medals

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — United States swimmers continue their destruction of the competition and the record books at the VIII Pan American Games, but the ballooning U.S. medal count got some unexpected help from a 14-year-old gymnast.

Jeanine Creek, who enters high school this fall in Great Falls, Mont., surprised a confident Canadian squad with a silver medal individual performance in the free exercise Thursday.

Gymnastics is a sport the Americans almost have written off in these Games, sending only their second and third team athletes. The best U.S. gymnasts stayed home to prepare for more important international competitions that use Olympic rules, which the Pan Am Games do not.

In Creek's event, there weren't even enough other U.S. competitors to constitute a team for overall scoring purposes.

The swimmers are out to get all the gold medals.

At Mexico City four years ago, U.S. swimmers took the gold medal in all but two swimming races. So far, in 16 events they have 16 gold medals and 16 Pan Am Games records. They earned six golds Thursday.

The suspected weakest links in the chain came up tonight. Jesse Vassallo, upset Thursday night by teammate Peter Rocca in 200-meter backstroke, has to beat world record holder Graham Smith of Canada in the 200-meter individual medley to keep alive hopes of a U.S. sweep.

In the women's 200-meter breaststroke, the U.S. hopes ride on two little-known swimmers: Patty Spees, of Oakland, Calif., and Renee Laravie of Dayton, Ohio, while breast stroke specialists Tami Paumier and Tracy Caulkins sit out.

Caulkins, of Nashville, Tenn., makes her final Games appearance tonight in the 400-meter freestyle, in which she faces teammate Cynthia Woodhead of Riverside, Calif.

Caulkins' hopes for five gold medals here were dashed Tuesday night when Paumier edged her in the 100-meter breast stroke. She had three golds and a silver entering tonight's competition.

But Woodhead, with three events to go, still was hopeful of running her gold medal count from two to five.

Rowdy Gaines, Winter Park, Fla., and Linda Jezek, Los Altos, Calif., were also competing today for their third gold medals in swimming — he in the 800 freestyle relay, she in the 200 backstroke.

Tom Peterson of Tacoma, Wash., took the seventh U.S. gold Thursday with his second winning performance in the 10,000-meter roller skating final.

The biggest problems the Americans may encounter in some events is overconfidence, since their 34 gold medals through the Games' first four days is more than that of the other 33 countries combined.

Overconfidence may have been what took over the vaunted U.S. men's basketball team. The Americans blew three 14-point leads Thursday night against Brazil, and barely held on for an 82-78 victory behind 17 points by Kentucky's Kyle Macy.

U.S. archers appeared certain of victory today in their long-running competition. Rod Baston, of Bossier City, La., had a big lead in individual shooting.

Many events were scheduled today. Rain most of Thursday added to the schedule because a number of outdoor events were postponed.

Little League

Lions 9, First Federal 3

North State champion Lions gained a 9-3 victory over the Tar Heel representatives, First Federal, yesterday in the first round of the City Little League championship.

The best-of-three series between the two continues today, with the Lions having a chance to put it away with a win.

The Lions scored first, getting a run in the first. Patrick Rand walked and moved around on three straight wild pitches.

In the third, the Lions added four more to put it away. Mike Taylor singled and Rand cracked a two-run homer. Tony Taylor walked and moved up on a passed ball and a wild pitch. William Ward singled him in, and Kevin Pace walked. Two wild pitches brought Ward around.

The Lions added three more in the fourth, as Rand hit another homer, this one a solo shot, and the final run came in the fifth.

First Federal got on the board in the fourth. Rickey Outlaw walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Derek Dickens reached on a fielder's choice, and a passed ball scored Outlaw. The other two runs scored in the fifth.

Mike Taylor, Rand and Ward each had two hits to lead the Lions, while Ervin Best and Brian Joyner each had two for First Federal.

A third game, if needed, will be played Saturday.

Prep League

Cox Realty 9, Dr. Pepper 8

Cox Realty, fighting elimination, battled back to nip Dr. Pepper, 9-8, yesterday in the losers' bracket of the Prep League post-season tournament.

The win moved Cox into the finals of the double elimination tournament against unbeaten Greenville Hardware. Dr. Pepper was eliminated with the loss.

Dr. Pepper scored first, getting three in the second. Ken Waters walked and Calvin Bradley singled. A wild pitch moved both up, and another scored Waters. Marvin Barrett reached on an error, scoring Bradley, and Jeff Anthony singled in Barrett.

Cox came back with two in the third. Mike Iaboni walked and stole up. Ted Stanley singled him in, and also stole up. Eric Woodworth reached on a fielder's choice, and an out let Stanley score.

Dr. Pepper added two in the fourth, two in the fifth and one in the top of the seventh for an 8-3 lead.

But in the bottom of the seventh, after scoring once in the sixth, Cox came up with six runs to win it.

Stanley led off with a walk and stole second. Woodworth singled and also stole up. Mike Walsh walked, loading the bases. A walk to Jeff Stallings scored one, and Scott Garriss reached on a three-base error, allowing three runs to score. Chris Evans walked, and Bobby Casey singled in Garriss, tying it up. Walks to Ed Farley and Iaboni forced in Evans with the game-winning run.

Jeff Anthony, Marc Gatlin and Bradley each had two hits for Dr. Pepper. Casey had two to lead Cox.

Cox Realty 4,
Green. Hardware 2
Cox Realty handed Greenville Hardware its first loss in the double-elimination Prep League playoffs last night.

The 4-2 defeat brought on a final game, set for tonight, to decide the post-season champions.

Cox scored first, getting a run in the third. Chris Evans walked and Carlton Wilson singled. Ed Farley reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Evans.

Cox added a second run in the fourth, with Greenville Hardware getting its first in the fifth.

Ronnie Moore reached on a fielder's choice and stole second. He reached third on an out and scored when Billy Godley reached on an error.

Cox added what proved to be the difference in the top of the seventh. Farley singled and Mike Iaboni got a hit, scoring him. Iaboni moved up on an error, and two wild pitches brought him across for a 4-1 lead.

The other Hardware run came in the bottom of the frame.

No one on either team got more than one hit.

Jazz Is Sued For Leaving

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The state and the manager of the Louisiana Superdome are suing the National Basketball Association and each of the NBA teams for a total of $60 million in the wake of the move of the Jazz to Salt Lake City, Utah.

The suit also asks an order to prohibit the Jazz from playing anywhere but New Orleans.

However, Larry Hatfield, spokesman for Jazz majority owner Sam Battistone, called the suit a public relations ploy.

"It's a beautiful grandstand play," Hatfield said at his office in Santa Barbara, Calif.

He predicted the Jazz would play in Salt Lake City next year as planned.

The state owns the $163 million Superdome, contracting operations of the big arena to Hyatt Management Corp. Attorneys for the two filed the suit in state court Thursday.

"We are telling them to come back here and play basketball in the Superdome as they are committed to do for the next six years," said Gibson Tucker, the attorney representing both Louisiana and Hyatt Management Corp. in the suit.

In April, Battistone and Hatfield announced they were moving the team to Salt Lake City because of sagging attendance and difficulty in getting February home playing dates at the Superdome. The move has been approved by the league.

Hatfield has said repeatedly that the most the team could be found liable for would be a $246,000 "buyout" provision in the 10-year lease with the Superdome.

Tucker said the $246,000 figure is set in the lease as "liquidated damages."

The suit says the state and HMC stand to lose $10 million because of the Jazz move and $10 million in business that had to go elsewhere because of playing dates reserved for the Jazz through the 1982-83 season.

Tucker said the suit names all Jazz players as co-defendants in the antitrust action.

He said players who ignored a court order forbidding them from playing anywhere but New Orleans could be found in contempt of court and put in jail.

In Salt Lake City, Jazz assistant General Manager Jim Bindley said 3,000 season tickets have been sold for the Salt Palace, where the Jazz are scheduled to play beginning in October.

Three holes-in-one were recorded recently at the Robersonville Golf and Country Club, two of them by players in the same group on the same round.

John Martin picked up a hole-in-one on the 195-yard fifth hole, using a five-iron, while Nolan Respass followed with an ace on the 180-yard eighth hole, using a seven-iron. They were playing in the same group with Walter Keel, Roy Vanderford and Ray Keel.

The other ace, also came on the eighth hole, with Donnie White hitting a four-iron. He was playing with Larry Mills.

Brook Valley Golf and Country Club

The team of Evelyn and Gene Ward and Nancy and Billy Clark took first place in the Brook Valley Guest Spectacular Tournament. They finished with a net 60.

Second place went to Harriette and Alex White, and Gay and Howard Waldrop with a 61. Mary and John Dumbroski and Jane and Fred Sauve were third with a 62. Cindy and Jay Collie and Joann and Scrappy Proctor took fourth, while Betty and Percy Rucks and Sue and Lou Hallow were fifth. Both teams had 63, and a draw decided it.

Troy Riddle eagled the par-four ninth hole, hitting a driver and a five-iron. Maxine Hawley had her best round a 41-40-81.

The Men's Four-Ball Team Championship will be held July 14-15. Golfers may make up their own teams, and will play at three-quarters of handicap. Signup deadline is noon on Friday, July 13.

The Men's Interclub Championship will be held at Brook Valley on July 28-29. It is open to all male members, 18 and older, of Greenville and Brook Valley. Signups close on Wednesday, July 25.

Jack and Jill Twilight events are set for July 11 and 25 at 5:30 p.m. each time.

Atlanta Weaves Win

By HERSHEL NISSESON
AP Sports Writer

Atlanta's Barry Bonnell took a detour en route from second base to third Thursday night and kept a ninth-inning rally going that ended with a 5-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The Braves trailed 4-3 when Mike Lum led off the ninth with a single. He was sacrificed to second and scored on pinch hitter Biff Pocoroba's single.

Pocoroba took second on the throw to the plate and Bonnell was sent in as a pinch-runner. Giants reliever Greg Minton walked pinch-hitter Joe Nolon before getting Jerry Royster for the second out.

Gary Matthews hit a ground-er to third. Darrell Evans fielded the ball but missed an attempt to tag Bonnell and the bases were loaded. Evans said Bonnell left the basepath and should have been called out.

Evans later was thrown out of the game and Office delivered the game-winning hit.

In other National League action, the Chicago Cubs downed the Montreal Expos 3-1, the Cincinnati Reds edged the Houston Astros 5-4, the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0 and the New York Mets nipped the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2. Los Angeles and San Diego were not scheduled.

"It's true I left the basepath," Bonnell said, "but I had to keep from running over him (Evans)."

Cubs 3, Expos 1

Rick Reuschel scattered six hits over 7 1/3 innings for his fifth consecutive triumph and Bruce Sutter gained his 18th save for Chicago. The Cubs snapped a 1-1 tie in the fifth when loser Scott Sanderson walked Reuschel with one out. Scot Thompson's two-out single sent Reuschel to third and Bill Buckner then drilled a double down the right field line for the lead run. Sutter retired all five batters he faced over the final 12-3 innings.

Reds 5, Astros 4

Tom Seaver took his fifth victory since returning from a back injury as the Reds ended an Astros' six-game winning streak. Seaver allowed three hits in five innings before giving up three runs in the sixth.

Harry Spilman batted for Seaver in the sixth and singled as the Reds rallied for three runs against J.R. Richard. Ken Griffey and Cesar Geronimo followed Spilman's hit with consecutive bunt singles, with a run scoring when third baseman Enos Cabell threw wildly to first on Geronimo's bunt.

Cardinals 2, Pirates 0

Rookie John Fulgham, a St. Louis native, scattered nine hits for his first major league shutout, and right fielder George Hendrick made a game-saving catch to end the contest. The Cardinals scored both runs off Jim Rooker in the first inning on Lou Brock's single, Keith Hernandez' RBI double and an RBI single by Hendrick.

Mets 3, Phils 2

New York's Joel Youngblood

jolted Dickie Noles in the pitcher's first major league appearance with a game-opening home run. The Mets made it 3-0 in the fourth on a walk, a double by Richie Hebner, Willie Montanez' single and John Stearns' sacrifice fly. Winner Craig Swan blanked the Phillies until pinch-hitter Del Unser's two-run homer in the seventh.

Three More Try For No-Hitters

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Milwaukee's Larry Sorensen and Seattle's Rick Honeycutt flirted with no-hitters in day games, but Oakland's Rick Langford came closest.

Langford shut down the potent California attack on just one hit — an infield chopper — as the A's blanked the Angels 3-0.

The only hit was a high bouncer by California catcher Brian Downing in the fifth inning that almost went over the head of third baseman Wayne Gross. Still, Gross, who doubled in one Oakland run and scored the other two, was upset.

"If I could have gotten one step back quicker and thrown overhand, I would have gotten him," he said.

Langford, 4-9, saw it differently. "Wayne did all he could."

Sorensen and Honeycutt were almost as tough. The Milwaukee hurler pitched 7 1/3 innings of no-hit ball before giving up the first of two New York hits as the Brewers stopped the Yankees 3-0. Honeycutt lost his no-hit bid after 5 1/3 innings, settling for a three-hitter as the Mariners blanked the Minnesota Twins 4-0.

In other AL games Thursday, it was Detroit 3, Toronto 2; Chicago 5, Cleveland 4 and Boston 5, Kansas City 4.

Langford said his outing helped take some of the sting out of Wednesday's shellacking of the A's by California.

Gross doubled off Angels starter Nolan Ryan, 10-6, to score Jeff Newman, who had led off the seventh inning with a walk. He later scored on Jim Essian's single.

Brewers 3, Yankees 0
Sorensen said he almost expected a no-hitter to be thrown. Instead, the right-hander gave up only a solid eighth-inning single to Chris Chambliss and a ninth-inning single to Bucky Dent, retiring 20 batters in a row at one point.

Sal Bando provided the only run Sorensen, 10-8, needed with a solo homer in the fifth inning off Guidry, 6-5.

Mariners 4, Twins 0

Honeycutt, 5-5, retired 10 batters in a row before Bobby Randall lined a single up the middle to break up the no-hit bid in Seattle's victory over Minnesota. The other Minnesota hits came in the ninth on John Castino's leadoff double and another single by Randall.

Red Sox 5, Royals 4

Bob Watson's fourth single of the game drove in the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning as Boston rallied for a victory over Kansas City, completing a sweep of their three-game series.

Boston spotted Kansas City a 4-0 lead in the first two innings. Then Jim Rice drilled his 19th homer of the season.

White Sox 5, Indians 4

Speedy Claudell Washington scored the winning run in the top of the ninth inning without the benefit of a base hit in Chicago's win. Cleveland reliever Victor Cruz issued walks to Washington and Ralph Garr. When they attempted a double steal, Cleveland catcher Ron Hassey threw into center field, allowing Washington to score.

Tigers 3, Blue Jays 2

A solo home run by Champ Summers in the eighth inning gave Detroit a 3-1 lead and the Tigers held on for their victory. Joe Cannon's first major league home run leading off the third inning gave Toronto its first run.

Alcott Has Seen Golf Grow For Pro Women

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Women's golf has gone from a "sideshow to the men's tour" to a top attraction since Amy Alcott joined the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour in 1975, she said Thursday.

"Things are very different today," said the 23-year-old Alcott, who believes she's on the brink of breaking through to establish herself as one of the game's top stars. I'm playing very well. It's the most consistent I've ever played."

She goes into a $100,000, 54-hole tournament here today listed seventh in earnings this year. "I've won once this year, but I've been in the top three or four positions more often than in the past," she said.

Alcott, who finished third here last year, has earned $66,888 on the tour in 1979. That's within $9,000 of her career-high of $75,516 earned last year.

"Women's golf has really improved," she said. "The girls are more psyched up. The courses we're playing at are better, the money has climbed and the tournaments are more competitive.

"People say the tour is being dominated by Nancy Lopez, but the truth of the situation is that the top 12 or 15 women on the tour are capable of winning any tournament."

Most of them have come here for the Mayflower Classic — the final event before next week's U.S. Women's Open. "It's important that we play well here, so that our games are in shape for the Open," said Alcott.

The field of 79 pros and six amateurs playing the 6,044-yard, par-72 Harbour Trees Golf Club has six of the top 10 money-winners on this year's tour. Lopez is skipping the tournament, but the participants include Sandra Post, who has already won more than $112,000 in 1979, and defending champion Jane Blalock, currently No. 4 in earnings.

Jane Blalock, who finished second to Judy Rankin when the tour stopped here for the first time in 1977, is going after her fifth victory of the year.

Rankin comes into the tournament after finishing one stroke behind Vickie Fergon in the tour's previous stop, at Dearborn, Mich. Fergon rallied from seven strokes behind on the final day of the tournament to score her first pro victory.

Also in the field is Hollis Stacy, preparing to go after her third consecutive U.S. Women's Open crown next week.

Joyce Kazmierski, who finished second to Blalock's 7-under-par 209 with a 212 last year, is also playing, along with LPGA champion Donna Caponi Young.

'Kids Are People, Too' Show Is Good Enough To Earn Emmy

Steady Work Is Beth's Ambition

JUST WANTS STEADY WORK — Beth Howland, shown in her role as a waitress on the CBS series "Alice", says she doesn't want a series of her own. "I just want to work all the time". (AP Laserphoto)

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Beth Howland, who plays Vera on CBS' "Alice," may be one of the few actresses around who doesn't want her own series.

She shook her head when asked about that. "I just want to work all the time," she said. "I wouldn't want my own show. I really want to do a play. There's a certain freedom in the theater. Like doing the run-through for the special, 'You Can't Take It With You,' was so much fun."

"Alice," starring Linda Lavin in the lead, begins its fourth year on CBS Sunday. It was adapted from the Warner Bros. movie "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore," which won an Oscar for Ellen Burstyn.

Miss Howland's Vera is different from the Vera played in the film by Valerie Curtin. In the movie, she was a little tougher and had a biker boyfriend named "Daddy."

"I took what was written in the pilot, but since the show's started, Vera's changed a lot," says Miss Howland. "In the beginning my feeling was that Vera was real dumb and inept. She was a kind of a joke. It hurt my feelings."

"First of all, I didn't think she could keep the job if she didn't work hard. I always felt she was the hardest worker there. She's more naive and misplaced than dumb."

Miss Howland says she was delighted this past season when Vera finally got a boyfriend, played by Alan Hufnagel. She says she's had talks with the show's producers about changing Vera in other ways. "I'm not what you call a fighter," she says. "I'd like Vera to have a relative. I always thought she was brought up by a grandmother or a great aunt. I'd like to have her appear."

Vera finally got a last name this past season, but Miss Howland says she disagreed on that, too. The producers named her Vera Gorman, but she says, "I wanted to call her Vera Willard, after a friend of mine who kind of reminds me of Vera."

Miss Howland says she sees something of herself in Vera. "I'm shy. Very shy. I used to be really insecure. I'm not insecure any more. I'm a little naive sometimes, but not as much as Vera. I guess I'm really a cynic."

Beth Howland was born and raised in Boston, trained as a singer and dancer, and at 16 landed a role in the Broadway production of "Bye Bye Birdie."

Her big break came when she landed the role of Amy in "Company." It was while in "Company" she was spotted by someone from CBS, who brought her to Hollywood for a part in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — I was waiting for an early morning ballgame a couple of weeks ago, flipping the dial on my tube, when I was halted by a joyous sound I hadn't heard in years: "Yaaaaay!"

Hot dog, I thought, a kids' show with real kids in it. Even before I flipped back to it, I knew it was a kids show. Kids always "Yay" when they're supposed to.

Adults, cool, never "Yay." They mutter things like "Go for it" or "All right" or politely clap their hands.

I wanted to see this show that prompted the wonderful shriek. There aren't many shows like it anymore, just stiff, spacey animations that look like they're made in a computer. Shows with names like "Super Rock" and "Cement Man."

But by the time I flipped back to it, it was gone. Instead, there was Kathy Cronkite, Walter's daughter, being interviewed about a book she's written. Where's Bozo? This must be a repeat of "Dinah" or "Merv," I thought.

Before I could switch though, the nice-looking young interviewer walked out to the audience and, instead of a bunch of middle-aged tourists, the crowd was comprised totally of kids.

What is this, a talk show for kids?

Yes. A pretty good one, too. In fact, ABC's "Kids Are People, Too" is better than some grownup talk shows I've seen. The guests are generally the same sort of folks you'll find on other talk shows, except they seem to be more at ease, more honest, in front of kids.

The host is Michael Young, a 27-year-old Auburn University political science graduate who just a few years ago planned to become president of the United States. Lucky he changed his mind. Jimmy Carter hasn't been getting a lot of "Yaaaaaays" lately.

Young had worked at Warner's QUBE system station in Columbus, Ohio, doing a show for teen-agers, and has a knack with kids. He likes to hear "Yaaaay," too.

"It's terrific, it's like a fix," he says. "You go out there and hear that, it's energetic. I didn't even know that I like kids because I'd never paid any attention to them. I was the baby in the family."

"But I'm standing up in front of 300 kids who are there to like me. They do like me, and I like them, and it makes you feel terrific."

And these kids are hip. When Reggie Jackson was a guest, a lot of hands went up when question time came. The first question: "Reggie, would you describe your relationship with Billy Martin?"

Of course, that was a New York kid. For its second season, "Kids Are People, Too" moved to Los Angeles from New York because about 80 percent of the guests on the show were flown in from California.

The show won an Emmy last year, its ratings are great, and it is a fun show. As Young says, "It's done exactly like 'Mike Douglas,'" adding after a moment, "except we have a bathroom break. Maybe they don't have a bathroom break on Douglas."

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

Iraqi In UN Angered By Oil Squeeze

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraq's delegates to the United Nations are angry because the oil squeeze their government help put on the United States is forcing U.N. diplomats to wait in line at the gas station.

A U.S. delegate suggested that the diplomats take the subway or the bus.

Iraq called a meeting Thursday of the U.N. Committee on Relations with the Host Country — the United States — so that its chief deputy delegate to the world organization, Saib A. K. Bafi, could complain that he and his colleagues were waiting in line as much as four hours to buy gasoline when they should be carrying out their official duties.

He suggested that some New York filling stations be reserved for diplomats only. Or that they be allowed to fill up at the U.N. headquarters pump now reserved for the 20 Secretariat trucks.

U.S. delegate Herbert K. Reis said his office would support an application for the allocation of more gas to the U.N. pump. But Yoshio Tagaya of the Secretariat said that would mean "some lines here as you have outside."

Reis made no comment on Bafi's proposal for diplomats-only gas stations, an arrangement that would require heavy police guards to protect them from New Yorkers already burned up because diplomatic vehicles are exempt from parking regulations. But he pointed out that "New York is extremely fortunate in having a very good transportation system."

Reis also reminded the other delegates that life is not always easy in their hometowns. There are "many places in the world where the local diplomats experience difficulties because of local conditions — power shortages, water shortages and confusion due to civil disobedience," he said.

Nobody made specific mention of Iraq's membership in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which has increased the price of crude oil more than 40 percent in the past year and restricts production to keep the price up. But Fermin Zelada of Spain said perhaps U.N. diplomats "could count on the generosity of the petroleum-producing countries, who might provide the needs." The committee adjourned until Monday without taking any action. Afterward a member of the U.S. mission said arrangements had already been made for U.N. diplomats to get exemption from New York's odd-even system of gas purchase by applying to the state Department of Motor Vehicles.

Bafi told a reporter his delegation has about 10 official cars, its diplomats commute four times a day between U.N. headquarters and their embassy 55 blocks away, and they go to Kennedy Airport periodically to send or pick up diplomatic pouches.

"We are using a lot of gas," he said. "We have to stand in line, and this is all affecting our work."

Costly Fire Due To Two Children

HILDEBRAN, N.C. (AP) — Fire officials say no charges will be brought in a $1.5 million textile warehouse fire that was touched off by two children playing with sparklers.

The fire at the Neville-Mobil Sox warehouse apparently started after the boys, aged 8 and 9, accompanied their father to the plant which was closed for July Fourth, said Fire Marshal Marvin Sawyer.

The children played with sparklers and other fireworks in a loading dock area while their father was working in another part of the plant.

Sparks apparently caught some boxes on fire. Unable to put out the fire, the boys called their father. When he couldn't extinguish it, he called fire fighters.

The fire that destroyed the warehouse and 4 million pairs of socks was the largest in recent Burke County history.

Dozens of firefighters were treated for smoke inhalation. One, Larry Merrill, was reported in stable condition Thursday at Valdeze General Hospital.

Sawyer, who declined to identify the employee whose sons started the fire, said no charges would be brought.

"I don't see any way we could charge them," Sawyer said. "To do so we'd have to prove it was willful and malicious. It was just one of those things."

In 1978, U.S. residents returned six billion aluminum cans for recycling, one of every four aluminum cans manufactured.

Independent Grove City College Fighting Feds

By JOHN BRONSON

GROVE CITY, Pa. (AP) — Grove City College has not taken a penny in government money itself since it was founded 103 years ago. No matter. The Presbyterian-affiliated school has been showered with federal decrees and

Will Not Ignore Psychic's Fears

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has decided not to ignore a self-proclaimed psychic's prediction that a dam will give way and drown a boatful of tourists at this honeymoon resort. "Strange things sometimes happen," Col. George Johnson said of the corps' plans today to inspect all water-control structures at the falls, which draws hundreds of thousands of tourists a year. The move was ordered after Pat St. John, a Bridgewater, Conn., housewife who says she has never seen Niagara Falls, reported she had a vision of an impending catastrophe. Mrs. St. John, 33, who says she is a trained medium, said she was in a seance last month when an image came to her of the failure of a dam or retaining wall made of rocks above the falls. She said later images were more specific and showed an onrush of water swamping the Maid of the Mist boat that takes tourists to the base of the cataract. On board, she said, will be a group of deaf school children, all of whom will drown. The accident, she said, will happen July 22, at either four minutes before 5 p.m. or five minutes before 4 p.m. "I'm not a sensationalist," said the former elementary school teacher, who disclosed her prediction on a local television show in Waterbury, Conn. "This is a painful position."

"If I chose to do nothing and it did happen, I wouldn't be responsible," she said, "but I would have a terrific sense of guilt." Army Corps of Engineers officials say they have never heard of Mrs. St. John and doubt her prediction, but will conduct an inspection just to make sure. There were no reports the woman had successfully predicted the future. Officials also said they didn't see how she could be right since they knew of no retaining dam in the area that fit her description. James Glynn, president of the Maid of the Mist Corp., said there was no booking for a group of deaf children on July 22. Mrs. St. John said her vision showed her "an inspection was supposed to be done, but it was not done because the money was not there."

Fresh Views Of Jupiter

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Mysterious, colorful Jupiter is once again filling television screens at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory as the second spaceship in four months sails toward a rendezvous with the giant planet. The unmanned Voyager 2, repeating its sister ship's dramatic encounter last March, was pronounced in excellent shape as it closed on the planet despite earlier problems that had threatened the mission. Voyager 2, more than half a billion miles from Earth after a voyage that began in August 1977, on Monday will come within 400,000 miles of Jupiter's dense, churning clouds. The distance between the two planets is so great that radio signals traveling at light's speed of 186,000 miles per second won't reach Earth with the news until almost 52 minutes later. The cloudtops are about the only surface the planet has. Jupiter seems to be mostly a gigantic ball of hydrogen and helium 1,200 times the size of Earth. Deep within the spinning liquid and gas may be a small rocky core. Voyager 2's cameras and instruments already are returning data and pictures of Jupiter and the four largest of its 13 moons. The first Voyager startled scientists with its detailed pictures and discoveries. The ship revealed towering volcanoes erupting on the moon Io; a faint, thin ring of debris circling the planet; superbolts of lightning zipping through the sky; and immense auroras — like Earth's northern lights — dancing over the clouds.

directives, most of which it's ignored. One form from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare was not so easily tossed aside, however. HEW has been pressing Grove City since 1977 to sign a confirmation that it is complying with Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, which bans discrimination against women. Grove City officials say the college has no quarrel with women's rights. But because the college gets no direct government funds, it has refused as a matter of principle to sign the form. To college President Charles MacKenzie, the issue is academic freedom. "Once the nose of the camel gets in the tent, the whole camel moves in," he said in an interview at the school's pastoral campus in western Pennsylvania's rolling hills. "If we signed this, we'd be expected to sign compliance forms for everything under the sun."

FAULTY TESTS
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says a Miami firm is recalling nearly 40,000 faulty pregnancy test products distributed abroad because they tended to give negative readings. The agency said the test was not sensitive enough.

HEW spokesman Larry Velez dismissed that notion. "Title IX applies only to educational institutions, so I don't think we can talk about churches or any other non-educational institutions," he said. "The Title IX assurance form is simply a tool that we use to insure that recipients are complying with the law. We never felt that it was unreasonable," he added. Grove City's leaders feel the demand is so unreasonable that the college and four students threatened with a cutoff in aid have taken the issue to federal court in Pittsburgh. MacKenzie said the college is ready to take the battle to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary. Academic observers are watching the case closely. "This is an extremely important case because it tests the proposition that the federal government can regulate the activities of independent institutions solely on the basis of financial aid extended to those students," said former University of Chicago law professor Dallin H. Oakes, now president of Brigham Young University in Utah. "If regulation can be based on financial aid ... this erases a major distinction between public institutions and independent institutions and that would be very bad for higher education in America, which needs a competitive alternative," he said. According to MacKenzie, a decision against Grove City could spell trouble for the nation's 800 church-related colleges, which are trying to resist what he calls the "secularizing influences" that come with government regulation. "I believe very strongly, as many educators do, that the government's gross interference has diminished quality and innovation and promoted a homogeneous, state-controlled, higher-education system," he added. Grove City operates on a $7.5 million annual budget. Most of its operating expenses come from tuition, which will be $3,250 for students working for their bachelor of arts degrees next year. The national average tuition for independent colleges is $5,110, while that for subsidized public schools is $3,054, the College Scholarship Service reports. Grove City's solvency and ability to thumb its nose at government funding puts it in a rare position. "Most private schools taking government money are embarrassed by it. The only reason they do is purely for survival. They can't compete with the state universities," said Karen Johnson of the American Association of Presidents of Independent Colleges and Universities. Only one other school has refused to sign HEW's Title IX compliance form — Hillsdale College, a private school in Hillsdale, Mich. And while a HEW administrative law judge in Grove City's case said he was "powerless" to rule the regulations unconstitutional, another judge ruled the opposite for Hillsdale. "Our administrative law judge ruled that the HEW attempt to interfere on our campus was in excess of HEW authority and was arbitrary and capricious," said Hillsdale President George Roche. HEW has appealed the Hillsdale case to the next stage in the administrative procedure. But Grove City went to federal court, where attorneys are expected to seek a summary judgment. MacKenzie says Grove City has gotten support from other colleges. "One university president told me he wished his institution could take the same position, but that it couldn't because one-third of its budget comes from the government," he said. The publicity surrounding the case has even generated some donations to help defray the legal costs — estimated at $150,000 legal costs should the fight go to the Supreme Court. Nevertheless, MacKenzie knows he has a tough battle ahead. "We feel somewhat like Da-facing Goliath," he said.

Expense Accunts Are 'Justified'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Expense accounts submitted by Ken Brown, head of the consumer protection division of the Department of Insurance, were completely justified, the department's technical director said Thursday. Brown is under investigation by the State Bureau of Investigation because of allegations that he padded his expense accounts. In a prepared statement released Thursday, W. Byron Tatum of technical operations said, "At no time has Mr. Brown submitted a request for or received a reimbursement for improper expenses." Brown's request for reimbursement of expense money "was based on proper documentation, and the trips themselves were approved in advance," the statement said. The allegations were made by Brown's former secretary, Nancy Davis, who told the Wake County district attorney that she was told by Brown to add false expenditures to his account, according to the SBI.
