There was a regular meeting of the Poe Society in the Y.W.C.A. Hall on March 12, 1921. The meeting was turned over to the program committee, which rendered an interesting debate. While the judges were making their decisions, songs, the words of which were composed by Miss Blanche Cannon, were practised for the inter-society debate. The judges chose the final debators as follows: Misses Bell, Croom, Hayes, Hicks, O. O'Brian, Pittard, Strassburger with Boone and A.H. Felton as alternates. Miss Graham then suggested that more information be obtained for the debate. Also that some-one be appointed for the night of debate to sit near chairman and tell him the girls names as they rise to debate, in order to prevent confusion. It was suggested that Mr. Underwood be asked to be chairman.

The meeting adjourned.
