

Carter Decision By Friday On Firings

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With all of his Cabinet and high-level staff offering to resign, President Carter is expected to decide by Friday where the ax will fall as he works on a new lineup to revive his presidency.

Senior officials were shaken by the move — the latest surprise in Carter's self-declared turning point — which left the government in limbo.

The 34 top officials affected said little in public beyond confirming that they had been asked Tuesday to tender their resignations.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the offers, made orally and not in writing, would be considered "carefully and expeditiously" by the president.

Cabinet secretaries were led to believe they would hear whether Carter would keep them on "in two or three days," one source said. Another source said the president's decision would come sometime "this week."

Both sources asked not to be identified.

One White House official, reflecting the extremely secretive nature of the day's developments in this city that thrives on rumors, said, "Whatever the president's decisions may be, I can assure you he is keeping them to himself."

The number of resignations the president will accept remained unclear, but one White House official said "the president will accept some."

Members of Congress called Tuesday's announcement "strange" and "curious." Republican reaction was the harshest, but several Democrats also questioned the president's actions.

Powell's brief announcement that several high members of the administration had tendered their resignations left unanswered several questions:

What motivated the mass offer? Were the resignations solicited? And by whom, the president or his chief aides as they seek flexibility in restructuring the administration to bolster Carter's re-election odds?

Dodging such questions, one official who asked for anonymity, would say only that the resignations "were offered."

Asked why dozens of top people in government would be moved simultaneously to offer to quit without prodding, the official responded: "We felt it to be an appropriate step to take at this time."

Besides the 12 Cabinet officers, resignation offers came from all presidential assistants and special assistants, including Hamilton Jordan, Carter's de facto, but untitled, chief of staff. When the smoke clears, Jordan is likely to emerge with that title.

Powell, a Georgian like Jordan, could also be given expanded authority.

Speculation on those most likely to leave the Cabinet focused on embattled Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, who has said he would leave before Carter opens his anticipated re-election campaign.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, and Joseph A. Califano Jr., the secretary of health, education and welfare, both of whom have raised the ire of senior Carter aides, were also possible targets.

Reflecting the scope of the resignations, Warren Dunn, spokesman for Housing and Urban Development Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris, said, "my boss and everybody else's boss in Washington resigned today."

One Cabinet member was described by an aide, asking not to be identified by name or department, as "literally shaken" by the prospect that his resignation offer might be accepted.

Among those offering to resign were U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, Budget Director James McIntyre, Middle East peace negotiator Robert Strauss;

Slow Opening

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Tobacco markets on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt opened today with leaf bringing less than what officials had hoped for at auction houses.

However, state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham was optimistic and said he expected better prices by the end of the first day's sales.

"I think it will be all right," Graham said. "But right now stabilization is getting a lot, but I feel a lot better after the fourth row than I did at the beginning."

Midway through the opening sale at the Cooperative Tobacco Warehouse in Lumberton, leaf was bringing from $1.05 to $1.55 per pound.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. picked up a lot of tobacco at the beginning of the sale but Graham said it was too early to predict a trend. Stabilization establishes minimum tobacco prices, and if none of the buyers bid over the price-support level, the tobacco goes to stabilization warehouses.

The average federal price level this year is $1.29 per pound. John H. Cyrus, chief of the state Agriculture Department's Tobacco Affairs Section, said he was disappointed in the prices that the clean, good-quality tobacco was bringing.

He said type X4L, described as good-quality leaf, was bringing only one to two cents above the federal support price, or around $1.35 a pound. Last year's average price for X4L was about five cents above the support price.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Three members of the Sandinista rebel junta flew to Nicaragua today to establish a provisional government outside Managua. The guerrilla movement threatened a bloodbath unless dictator Anastasio Somoza's hand-picked successor, Francisco Urcuyo, abandoned his declared intention to hold on to the presidency.

Sources close to the junta said Violeta de Chamorro, Sergio Ramirez Mercado and Alfonso Robelo Callejas left San Jose, the Costa Rican capital, shortly after midnight for Leon, Nicaragua's second largest city 55 miles northwest of Managua.

Leon was the first city captured by the Sandinista National Liberation Front in the offensive that resulted in the resignation Tuesday of Somoza and the end of the 42-year-old Somoza family dictatorship.

The sources in San Jose said the three junta members planned to declare Leon the provisional capital of Nicaragua. They said one of the two other junta members, guerrilla leader Moises Hassan Morales, was in Masaya, in southern Nicaragua, and the other member, Daniel Ortega Saavedra, was in another Nicaraguan city held by the rebels. They said the three junta members would send for the two men as soon as the government was set up in Leon.

Urcuyo, a Somoza man elected president by members of Congress early Tuesday after the dictator resigned, had been expected to step down as soon as the provisional junta named by the Sandinista National Liberation Front flew from Costa Rica to Managua.

The Pitt County Board of Education voted to have member Jim Black work with a representative of the Greenville City Board of Education toward turning the wheels for another vote on the proposed $9 million school bond referendum as soon as legally possible.

Associate Superintendent Tom Craft was instructed to check the general statutes to see when a vote on the issue could be legally implemented. Pitt County voters defeated the issue, 6,861 to 6,075, in the polls on June 8.

Associate Superintendent Craft gave an overview of the approved current expense and capital outlay budgets for the county schools as endorsed by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners June 29.

The county school board had submitted a current expense budget totaling $5,984,574, with $5,451,894.44 of it approved by the county commissioners. Craft noted that cuts were made in the reduction of the number of clerical assistants in schools and the central office. Also, many repair items were deleted from the prepared budget.

The school board's capital outlay budget, totaling $1.2 million, was cut in the final approval by the county commissioners to $475,318, including $262,396 in "payback" to the county for special funds appropriated to the city system in 1975-76 when major renovations were needed.

Superintendent Ott Alford noted that schools in growing areas were becoming increasingly cramped for space, and addressed the problems of buying mobile units for classroom space.

"Approximately $20-24,000 is spent on each mobile unit," said Alford. "I hate to spend hard-fought dollars for non-permanent space."

School Finance Officer Dan Thomas gave a report on the status of the matching fund program for individual schools and the county board of education.

Thomas presented a list of the schools and the amount of funds raised by them in a three year period. He noted that in the matching fund program, individual ledgers would have to be kept on each school. The board had approved the use of surplus funds for a one-time match up to $7,500 for each school.

Assistant Superintendent Kathryn Lewis presented the annual report on strides made in the instructional aspects in the county schools. She also presented for the board's approval a set of new report cards for children in grades K-8.

"We've redesigned the cards so that parents can read and understand them better," she noted.

Mrs. Lewis reported on the recent Pitt County Gifted and Talented Summer Institute, noting that approximately 67 students took part in the effort, with good response.

The board voted to approve that the scope of the alcohol/drug program in the county schools be moved down one level to the fifth grade, following a statement given by Assistant Superintendent Lewis. An agreement was also adopted between the Pitt County Mental Health Center, the ad-

Hospital Budget Geared To Inflation Uncertainty

By CAROL TYER

A budget has been adopted by the Pitt Co. Memorial Hospital Board to allow for $30,071,394 in total operating revenue and $28,399,552 in total operating expenses during the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Hospital Board Chairman Henry Leslie pointed out that, "Like everyone else, we have no idea what the inflationary rate will be during the coming year." In addition to inflation in the general economy, he said the budget preparers have had to take into account rising fuel costs and, above all, the continuing growth of hospital services. Patient activity is forecast to increase approximately 18 percent and development of new services such as the regional neonatal center, the cardiac catheterization laboratory, the full body computerized axial tomography scanner, along with the continuing expansion of the house staff residency programs have been taken into account, he said.

Energy costs and general economy inflation have been figured at 10 percent. The increase in total expenditures is expected to be 28.4 percent, with the projected increase per patient day, 9.3 percent.

A 5.65 percent increase in total charges to patients has been called for: routine services up from $80 to $88 per day; rehab services up from $80 to $95 per day; critical care services up from $180 to $195 a day; emergency visits up from $15 to 16.50; elec-trocardiogram up from $20 to $22; delivery room up from $200 to $250 a day; radiology, nuclear medicine, respiratory therapy, physical

Bids On Hospital Bed Tower Slated Aug. 10

By CAROL TYER

Plans for the new bed tower have been approved all around and the architects are right on schedule and set to invite bids on the project August 10, County Commissioner Charles Gaskins reported to the Pitt Co. Memorial Hospital Board last night.

He said bids are being placed as to whether the project-bids will come in "over or under the money allotted."

Board Finance Committee Chairman Norfleet Sugg reported that the hospital experienced a net loss of $53,563 in June. He said a loss is to be expected this time of year and that overall for the fiscal year, the hospital is still $300,000 ahead of budget and in good fiscal condition.

Sugg reported the receipt of a check from the East Carolina University Medical School of $269,149.41 "to help defray costs of teaching" in the hospital. The Board voted for the whole amount to go into funded depreciation.

Board member, Dr. John L. Wooten pointed out that the public should not think that this money from the medical school is a gift or gratuity. It's to reimburse the hospital for this much and more spent running medical school programs, he indicated.

Approval was given for the purchase of x-ray equipment that previously has been rented. Savings to the hospital will be $13,000, Sugg said.

Every bed in the hospital is now open, as of Monday morning, Nursing Director Jean Owens reported. She said the nursing staff is growing in numbers and in expertise. Some 17 came on board Monday, she said.

Chief of Staff Dr. William Bost reiterated Miss Owens'

HOSTS NEEDED

The Greenville Babe Ruth League is hosting the State Prep (13-year-old) Tournament Thursday, July 26 through Tuesday, July 31. Eight teams from various sections of North Carolina will be participating, including the 13-year-old Greenville Area Team. Greenville people are responsible for finding appropriate housing for 90 young men — all 13 years of age. They've asked Hotline for an appeal.

Players will arrive in Greenville the afternoon of July 26 and will need to be picked up at Guy Smith Stadium. Games will begin Friday, July 27. Each team will leave town when it loses. Host families will be responsible for feeding the boys, transporting them to and from games, washing uniforms, and providing a place for them to sleep.

Last year about 75 Greenville area youth were accorded the same welcome in three western N. C. communities.

Persons willing to take two or more boys as guests during the tournament are asked to call Laurel Walsh at 752-6877 or Mike Baker after 5 p. m. at 756-4362.

Raising Thermostats Has General Local Support

By GINA WHICHARD
Reflector Staff Writer

"The public has got to bite that bullet and give up the comforts that are bankrupting our nation," was Utilities director Charles Horne's reaction to President Carter's order making it illegal to set thermostats below 78 degrees.

The order which went into effect Monday requires that all buildings except homes and other places of lodging, hospitals and other health-care facilities, elementary schools and day care centers limit cooling to 78 degrees and heating to 65 degrees. Businesses may seek exemptions if they would suffer hardship should they comply. Failure to comply will result in a maximum criminal penalty of up to $10,000 a day.

Reactions from local merchants varied, but all agreed that they would support the government order.

Roy Taylor, manager of Blount-Harvey's Dept. Store admits that the increase may hurt business, but will comply if that's what it takes. The thermostats were not set on 78 degrees Tuesday morning, but Taylor said they would be by the end of the day.

"Shoppers may have adverse reactions when they begin trying on clothes in early fall, but I feel they will realize why it's being done and will understand," remarked Doug Williams of Coffman's Men's Wear. The thermostat was sitting on 75 degrees Tuesday, but Williams said that by Wednesday the thermostat would be up to 78 degrees.

"We have been increasing the temperature gradually allowing the employees to adjust."

"We have a hard time keeping our cooling system at 78 degrees, but all are presently set as ordered," said Jerry Green, general merchandising manager of J.C. Penney. "Our compliance may inconvenience shoppers, but certainly they will understand."

Bob Sauter, owner and manager of the Pipeline, a local restaurant, feels that 78 degrees places a hardship on customers. "It's not logical for customers to sit in a stifling atmosphere and pay the prices they do to enjoy a meal." The thermostats there are set on 75, but Sauter said he would experiment with higher settings. "I'm striving for a tolerable setting and trying to live within the framework of the order. However at the same time I must be realistic."

Assistant city manager, Mrs. Gail Meeks, said as of Tuesday morning all thermostats in City Hall were set on 78 degrees. "It's a little hotter than usual, but not intolerable."

Horne sent out an order last summer and again this summer that all thermostats at the Utilities Co. should be set at 78 degrees.

"The temperature is suitable for office work, it just takes time to adjust. Seventy-two degrees was fine before, but the public can not afford the expense any longer; we have to get out of this oil import bind."

The temperature restriction plan requested by Carter was one of four energy-conservation proposals submitted to Congress last spring. It was the least controversial and only one approved by Congress.

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

A person without teeth cannot bite. Had South applied this truth to his play of three no trump, the contract would have sailed safely home.

East's one spade opening is the type of third-hand light opening bid that meets with our approval. The suit is good and East obviously has a strong preference for a spade lead. South showed a hand too strong for an overcall of one no trump by first doubling and then bidding no trump over his partner's response. Since South's sequence marked him with at least 19 points, North was fully entitled to raise to game.

West led a low spade, and declarer allowed East's queen of spades to win. The spade continuation was won by the jack. Declarer entered dummy with the king of diamonds and ran the nine of clubs. West won the king and returned a spade, forcing out declarer's last stopper.

With only eight tricks on top, declarer had to try for a trick in hearts. When East got in with the ace of hearts, he had two good spades to cash for a one-trick set.

Declarer played badly in presuming that East had to have the king of clubs for his opening bid. If he did have it, so much the better—he would still have it a minute or two later. The king of clubs was no menace no matter which defender held it, since it could not give East an entry to his spades.

East's only tooth was the ace of hearts, and if that were yanked, he couldn't bite declarer. Therefore, declarer's first play should have been the king of hearts. If it held, he could then cross to dummy for the club finesse and nine tricks would be assured. If East took the ace of hearts and cleared spades, the club finesse could be taken in comfort, for if it lost, West would either have no spade to return or the defenders were going to get only one more spade trick.

In plain words, the king of clubs was not the card to worry about. The ace of hearts was.

Chappaquiddick Tragedy
Still Haunting Kennedy

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says the tragedy of Chappaquiddick Island is still with him a decade later and will be as long as he lives.

Kennedy, whose personal life has been marked with tragedy, said the accident in which a young woman was killed "was different for me in that I was the one responsible."

"The other tragedies, the assassinations, the deaths of my brother and sister in World War II were imposed on me," he said. "They had enormous impact. But Chappaquiddick made me a much different person, a very different individual."

In an interview in The Boston Globe today — 10 years after Chappaquiddick — the Massachusetts Democrat said that after the accident he "went through a very considerable period of self-evaluation, re-examination of my own life, my own values, my own purpose and the direction of my life. I wondered whether it would be possible to continue in the area of public service."

"There have been a series of traumatic events that have impacted my life," said Kennedy, the last of the four Kennedy brothers. His eldest brother died during World War II, an era that also saw the death of a sister in a plane crash. Brothers John and Robert died at the hands of assassins in the 1960s.

"But this tragic accident, which I bore the complete responsibility for, and complete accountability for, had greater meaning. It made me re-evaluate my own direction and usefulness as a human being. After a period of time, I made up my mind that there was no turning back in life."

When the car driven by Kennedy plunged off a bridge on Chappaquiddick Island on July 18, 1969, drowning secretary and campaign worker Mary Jo Kopechne, 28, it was 10 hours before the senator reported the accident, an action he later called "indefensible."

and Mary Hoyt, first lady Rosalynn Carter's press secretary.

Alfred Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, was not asked for his resignation, a spokesman said. Nor were any changes said to be contemplated that involve key national security affairs positions, reportedly including the jobs of Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, Defense Secretary Harold Brown, and national security assistant Zbigniew Brzezinski.

The resignation offers pushed the dollar down at the close of Tuesday's currency trading in New York.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. Lowell Weiker, R-Conn., said, "I think the president is nuts." Referring to Carter's declaration that the nation is facing a "crisis of confidence," Weiker said the resignation offers were "just a continuation of the scapegoat operation. It is the president, not his Cabinet, that the American people have lost confidence in."

But Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., said the president was "trying to give the impression that ... policies are going to change, that personnel are going to change."

The announcement came on the heels of a new Associated Press-NBC News poll showing that Americans agree with Carter's assessment of a nationwide crisis of confidence but that most of the public is not yet ready to say Carter is a strong leader in the face of energy shortages, continued inflation and national malaise.

The offers to resign were engineered in a series of meetings and telephone calls on the president's first White House work day after 12 days of seclusion at Camp David, Md., and Monday's speaking trip to Kansas City, Mo., and Detroit.

The shock waves seemed to hit each department, with not only Cabinet members but their aides doubting their futures.

Deodorant To State Employees

PENNSBORO, W.Va. (AP) — State employees who are hot under the collar because of President Carter's policy on office temperatures are being offered some relief by Secretary of State A. James Manchin.

Manchin said Tuesday he will be passing out cans of deodorant to state employees and others "who have been sentenced to office ovens whose temperatures have been set by President Carter's indiscriminate energy policy."

The federal government recently ordered that thermostats in public buildings be set no lower than 78 degrees during hot weather.

CLAIRFIELD, Tenn. (AP) — Federal inspectors say they are baffled by a rock fall that killed one miner and injured two others a half mile inside the Double Q Coal Co.'s mine near the Tennessee-Kentucky border.

"It was just a massive roof fall, that's all we know now," said Kenneth Howard, a federal inspector. "There is no history of roof problems and no indication of a roof support failure. It just isn't natural." The accident occurred Tuesday.

therapy, psychological services, and speech pathology — all up 10 percent.

Assignments have been made. Director Jack Richardson said, to administrative staff to monitor specific cost centers and departments during the coming year to do all that is possible to contain costs.

The salary administration plan has been modified seven percent in keeping with national wage guidelines, he said. Some 148 new hospital positions are expected to be added gradually to meet changes in services as they develop. Salaries and wages are projected at $15,167,865, with employee benefits to cost $1,598,850.

Drugs and supplies are expected to be up to $6,151,312. Part of the increase can be accounted for because of new drug regimens being added to pharmacy demands all the time, Leslie said.

Patient charges are expected to be $33,147,301, with allowances and uncollectible accounts causing the net patient revenue to be about $28,136,000.

Hospital officials point out that the present fiscal year's revenues and costs are within five tenths of one percent of projected figures, but they do not claim that the the coming fiscal year's will be so nearly correct, given the general economy. Total budgeted expenses are expected to run about $21,300,000 and expected revenues about $22,500,000, Assistant Administrator Rick Gilstrap said.

Won't Discuss
Alleged Perjury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Columnist Jimmy Breslin is refusing to talk with investigators about perjury allegations against actor Lee Marvin, says Los Angeles prosecutor John Kildebeck.

The perjury investigation was launched after Breslin wrote a column quoting his old friend Marvin as saying that he "learned how to lie" during his property rights court battle with his former lover, Michelle Triola Marvin.

Trial Judge Arthur Marshall ordered the district attorney's office to find out whether perjury was committed during the proceedings.

Last month, Breslin gave the court an affidavit saying he didn't think Marvin's words should be interpreted as a confession to perjury. Since then, Kildebeck said, the New York Daily News columnist has been silent.

"I don't want to be critical of Breslin," said Kildebeck. "Maybe if I was a reporter, I would do the same thing."

Dear Abby

Lady Lawyers-- Legal Sheagles?

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I note that you frequently advise readers with legal problems to "consult a lawyer, and pay him for what he knows."

That's excellent advice. But today, when approximately 25 percent of the graduating classes of most law schools are women, your readers could wind up paying a lawyer for what she knows. And it would still be a good investment. MS. PERLMAN, ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR MS. Thanks for keeping me on my toes. Mandy Stellman, a lady lawyer and vocal feminist in Milwaukee, has been chastising me for years for referring to lawyers as "him." Sorry. Old habits die hard. But I'm learning.

DEAR ABBY: A reader asked why so many children from "better" homes have never known poverty or deprivation have turned to crime and violence.

By way of explanation you quoted PARENTS magazine: "A peek inside the middle-class home will reveal a child who lives with two adults—but has no real parents."

As a veterinarian, I have noted a similarity between the behavior of pet dogs left unattended all day long while the family is at work or at school, and the behavior of children who also, unfortunately, receive little attention or love because so-called parents are too preoccupied to spend time with their children.

Dogs become destructive and chew furniture, shoes, pillows and the like in an effort to get attention. You will find that children also become destructive, vandalizing property and injuring people in an effort to secure the attention that they, as individuals, desire and need. Thirty years of teaching experience has taught me that the child without love in the home is the problem individual in the classroom and on the street.

DAVID C. TUDOR, V.M.D.

DEAR DR. TUDOR: Well said.

DEAR ABBY: Now that vacation time is here, I have a word for those who take pictures and show them around:

Please, do not feel that you have to identify every person in every picture. For example:

"See the man on the right—the one with the red jacket? Well, his name is John Smith. He lives in Ferndale. His wife, Stella, is the one standing next to the woman in green who's holding the poodle whose name is Fifi who used to belong to the couple on the left who live in Podunk. Now the ones in the middle are Betty and Harry."

ABC IN PORTOLA VALLEY

DEAR ABC: You have a lot of company. And while we're on the subject of vacation pictures, readers, please be considerate and limit your show-and-tell snapshots only to those that came out well, and, have heart, not more than half a dozen!

Couple's Switch Is Workable

PAINESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Chris and Bonnie Coulton consider their marriage an experiment in living.

It's changed their way of living, some social customs and likely will influence the lives of their children.

As part of the experiment, they have switched traditional roles of the husband-wife relationship. She is the breadwinner; he is a house husband.

It came by evolution, in a way — starting four years ago when Coulton was furloughed from his job in Euclid. He and a friend began operating a bakery, but when a business building owned by Coulton's father burned they closed the bakery and began rebuilding it.

That work lasted about a year, and brought them face to face with a reality which Mrs. Coulton summarizes as: "If you're going to experiment with living, which I think is what Chris and I are doing, you have to be willing to live on spurts of income."

She was helping with work on the building and joined a relative in a part-time business they named The Country Store. This left Coulton at home with their 6-year-old twins, Andrew and Elizabeth.

"One of the good things is that Chris has gotten to know the children better," Mrs. Coulton continued. "They all communicate better and understand each other better."

She thinks the twins cope better with their father's anger and better understand his personality.

"I think every home should give a balance; Chris is more consistent with his discipline than I am, but I'm more fun," she added. "You need the father to give as much of his personality as he can."

The couple share household chores.

"We both do the grocery shopping; whoever has the time does it," she said. "Some of these things I just never relinquish."

They found it wasn't easy bucking the tide of social custom.

"You have to be able to deal with your feelings that you're doing something that isn't normal," Mrs. Coulton said.

Coulton said he lives by what he termed "an old New England saying":

"Eat it up, wear it out, make it do, do without."

An advocate of self-sufficiency, Coulton encourages their children to be self-reliant. He said present utility bills are the same as they were when the children were babies and he keeps bills down by keeping doors shut, the thermostat down, lights out and "we have gotten rid of a lot of the small electrical appliances we used to have."

The clothes dryer is seldom used and the dishwasher has become extra storage space in the kitchen. Coulton found he could wash dishes 2 1/2 half the water it used.

"I like sharing triumphs and troubles with my friends, and being home affords me that freedom," he said. "Good friends, good neighbors and a strong family are what's important to me."

PERK UP YOUR APPETITE AND YOUR MENU WITH PEACHES

Peaches are a popular fruit in North Carolina during the summer months. Our state grown peaches are usually in abundant supply during July and August.

Peaches are good anytime of the day for breakfast, lunch, dinner or snacks.

In the white-fleshed and yellow-fleshed classes of peaches, there are many varieties of clingstones and freestones. The freestone varieties are most popular for desserts, home canning or freezing and general culinary use. The clingstones are used to some extent for slicing and home pickling.

Fresh peaches are usually peeled, sliced and served with cream and sugar. With some varieties the skin may be removed easily, but with others it is necessary to plunge them into boiling water for a few seconds and then into cold water in order to loosen the skins.

One pound of peaches (four to six) yield two, to two and a half cups of slices, or three to four portions. A bushel of peaches averages 15 quarts when canned or frozen.

PEACHES TO FREEZE

Ripeness is the most important single factor to consider if you expect really good frozen peaches. If peaches are picked firm ripe they should be spread in a cool place until they are fully ripe.

We are seeing more of the non-browning type of peaches which are excellent for freezing and canning. Just omit dipping the fruit in the ascorbic acid mixtures.

Peaches may be frozen in Dry Sugar Pack, Syrup Pack, Unsweetened Pack and Puree.

A 40-50 percent syrup is generally recommended for freezing peaches. The 40 percent syrup is 3 cups sugar to 1 quart of water and will yield 5 1/2 cups of syrup. The 50 percent syrup is 4 3/4 cups of sugar to 1 quart of water and will yield 6 1/2 cups of syrup.

Write or call us for canning or freezing peach bulletins and the leaflet on "Peaches—Varieties and Recipes."

TO PREVENT FRUITS FROM DARKENING

Fruits, including apricots, pears, light figs, light cherries and some varieties of peaches and apples need special treatment to prevent them from turning dark or brown during storage. You will need to use ascorbic acid (Vitamin C). You can buy ascorbic acid as a part of a commercial mixture or in the pure form.

The commercial ascorbic acid mixture contains a combination of ascorbic acid and sugar and is sold under various brand names.

BELK TYLER HAPPENINGS

Energy Conservation . . .

For the purpose of controlling electrical energy, heating and air conditioning, our architects have designed an electronic computer system into the building. The system is built by Monitrol and is one of very few that have been installed in Eastern North Carolina. Its purpose will be to conserve energy at certain periods of the day and night when electrical needs are not as great. The architects have also installed double door foyers to the outside entrances of the store. These help keep the warm or cool air in the building. While at the same time, they provide a comfortable area protecting our customers against the elements while waiting for vehicles to pick them up.

Buying of Merchandise . . .

Constantly, for the past three months, our buyers have been in the Atlanta, Charlotte and New York markets buying merchandise for shipment to the new store. An extensive research program was conducted prior to these trips so as to bring back to Greenville only the best and most desired designer name merchandise as well as popular priced items. Mr. Greenville Banks, Manager of the New Belk Tyler Store, and Mr. John Friday, General Merchandise Manager, have already attended many designer showrooms in New York and have made purchases for the new store.

Installation of Belk Tyler Signs . . .

The installation of the Belk Tyler signs on the exterior walls and on the Mall facade have now been completed. Each letter will be separately installed with each having its own 227-volt transformer. The letters are made of fabricated aluminum with white plexiglass faces. The letters are lighted from behind with 2 to 4 neon tubing.

The Arrival of Merchandise . . .

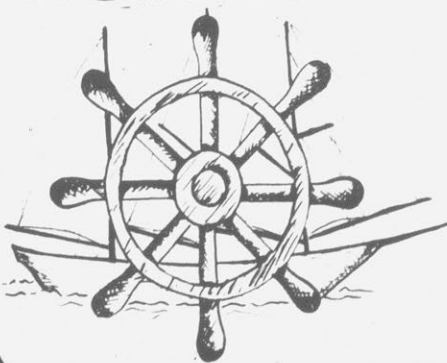

Starting June 25th, a steady flow of merchandise began arriving at the downtown store for the new and beautiful store. This merchandise is now being taken at the mall store. To expedite the marking process of this merchandise, marking teams, totaling 75 people, have been trained and marking machines have been installed at various locations throughout the store. After the grand opening of the new store, all merchandise marking will be done in the receiving and marking area.

Demonstration Booth in Housewares Department . . .

The Housewares Department will feature a demonstration booth where both factory-trained representatives and trained Belk Tyler personnel will show the customers the "how-to's" of the many different products represented in this department. The finishing touches are being made this week on the booth. The booth will feature all the necessary paraphernalia you need in the kitchen. . . . a sink with hot and cold running water, refrigerator and range.

Coming Population Changes

North Carolina's population will grow in the 1980s but not as rapidly as in the past. That is what state studies indicate.

A North Carolina population of 5.74 million is seen by April, 1980. In 1990 it is projected that the population will be 6.44 million for a decade increase of 12.2 percent.

(Pitt County is seen as growing from 81,300 in 1979 to 90,400 in 1990.)

State Demographer Francine J. Ewing also sees a trend to lower growth in urban counties with a somewhat increased growth rate in rural counties. Rapid growth is seen for Brunswick, Currituck and Dare Counties.

There will also be a general aging of the population with the median age reaching 30.34 in 1983.

All these projections will be studied carefully since they mean changes in everything from marketing to government services to the citizenry.

All things considered a moderate population growth rate might not be bad for North Carolina. Boom areas will, of course, develop for reasons unforeseen at present and that might be good for our economy overall, but large numbers of new people in the decade ahead wouldn't necessarily contribute to a better way of life.

Not Much Future For Nicaraguans

President Anastasio Somoza, president of Nicaragua, has resigned and fled to Florida.

Given the dictatorial nature of Somoza's reign, it is not really necessary to shed any tears over his departure.

Nor is there any reason to be especially hopeful about the future of Nicaragua since the communist tinged rebel group is almost sure to take over.

If that occurs there is no real hope for the cause of human rights in Nicaragua.

Solutions Miss The Mark

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The reactions of government to citizen complaints about taxes invariably miss the mark.

Concerned over rising local property taxes, North Carolinians are raising an increasingly loud protest which promises to spread and grow stronger in coming years.

The heart of the situation is property revaluation, required by state law every eight years. That process sets the market value of real estate against which the local property taxes — county and municipal — are levied.

Since the advent of double-digit inflation in the nation, those local revaluations have become a regularly recurring source of citizen anger.

So far, the anger has not developed into full-scale tax revolt for one particular reason: each county carries out its revaluation on its own schedule so that only a handful of counties are affected each year.

The ravages of inflation are readily apparent whenever those reports come in, however, with property values doubled and tripled.

Still Higher
Even where county commissioners have kept their vows to cut the tax rates to fit the higher property values, the final tax bite has invariably been increased.

Even county tax officials now concede that for widows, the elderly, others on fixed incomes, the property taxes are becoming confiscatory; taking food off family tables.

But typical of governmental reaction to citizen anger, there has been little consideration given to cutting taxes or to reducing government's size and programs to allow operating on less revenue. Rather, the best thinking local tax experts and leaders in the General Assembly has turned to methods of making the increases less noticeable and thus more palatable, and to ways of providing only temporary relief to the hard-pressed.

Two proposals are currently in vogue among the tax specialists to accomplish those ends, and both will likely become state law in coming years.

The first is a change in the method of property revaluation, now required every eight years. Such a long period allows inflation to push property values upward in a staggering way. Also, the revaluation process requires public hearings and protest periods and that allows citizen anger to receive public display and the anti-tax fever spreads throughout the community, and even beyond the borders of a given county.

Under study is a computerized system into which sales figures and other data affecting property values can be constantly fed and from which an instant revaluation can be gained. Simply put, your house would be upgraded for tax purposes quietly every year without fanfare. You would hardly notice, the tax experts reason.

Relief

The second proposal under study is popularly referred to as a "circuit-breaker" relief system. It is directed at the elderly and designed to mute the cries of the retired citizens' organizations against sharply escalating tax rates.

The nut of the change is this: either the tax increases resulting from revaluation, or the entire property tax itself, would be "forgiven" to a qualified low-income individual in an owner-occupied building. Instead, a tax lien would be taken against the property to be collected when the owner dies or otherwise leaves the property.

The elderly, then, would not lose bread and milk this year due to property taxes. But when another person either buys the property or inherits it, the back taxes would fall due.

Neither of the politically popular approaches comes to grips with the real issue of runaway inflation and government growth, but they do pull the stinger from the horns of taxpayer revolt.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Energy Czar Considered

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The White House is seriously considering retired New York business tycoon John deButts as its new energy mobilization czar even though he is backing Republican John B. Connally to replace Jimmy Carter as president.

DeButts retired Feb. 1 as chief executive officer of AT & T and the next day contributed the maximum $1,000 to Connally's campaign. While President Carter's aides are well aware of this, it does not make any difference. "John deButts is extremely well thought of around here, and we'd like to get him to work whether he is a Connally man or not," one White House insider told us.

He is on a list of possible successors to Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, expected to leave by autumn. But deButts' more likely role would begin sooner if the White House has its way: as head of the proposed Energy Mobilization Board, eclipsing the lame-duck Schlesinger as federal czar in charge of energy production.

Jody's Battle Fatigue
For the first time to anyone's knowledge, President Carter criticized press secretary Jody Powell in the presence of outsiders. But that mild criticism, during the Camp David meetings, does not suggest downgrading, much less removal, for Powell.

Powell was brought up during Carter's sessions with non-governmental wise men invited to the mountain. After the senior staff (including Powell) had left the room, one outsider commented that he thought Powell was shooting from the hip a little too much lately and might be suffering from battle fatigue. He added that he felt the normal adversary relationship between Powell and the press was degenerating into all-out war.

To the surprise of those present, the president did not spring to the quick defense of his long-time aide. Rather, he noted that Jody seemed a little overwrought, was smoking even more than usual and was putting on weight.

Nevertheless, nobody expects any diminution of Powell's position. Next to Rosalynn, Powell is Carter's most trusted adviser. What some White House insiders would like is for Powell to be removed from the press secretary's daily firing line and be given a counselor's role. But even this is not likely unless initiated by Powell himself.

A footnote: Even more than Powell's politically damaging crack about long gasoline lines being good for Washingtonians, his snap reaction to White House domestic policy chief Stuart Eizenstat's now-famous memorandum generated ill will within the White House. Several presidential aides grumbled that a crack at the hard-working, long-suffering Eizenstat was uncalled for and unfair.

Rosalynn's Diction
There was an audible gasp at Bardstown, Ky., when Rosalynn Carter seemed to tell a Democratic party fundraiser that "Jimmy is competent" — seemingly a public

Carter Public Crisis

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Whatever the state of America's self-confidence, public confidence in President Carter has ebbed to the point of political crisis for the White House.

And while Carter doesn't speak of it as a political problem, that is the backdrop as he vows to rally the nation to new faith and confidence, with his latest energy program as the starting point.

He talks of a national malaise, but also of a crisis that is his alone, assuming, as everyone does, that he wants another term in the White House.

"If you don't believe I've got confidence in you, then you are not going to have confidence in me," the president told the Communications Workers of America in Detroit on Monday.

In that appearance, third in the set that began with his solemn Sunday night address to the nation, Carter dealt directly with the personal side of the problem, as it affects his leadership and his future in office.

"There's only one clear voice in this country on a sustained basis," he said. "That is the voice of the president of the United States. If I can't speak to you so you understand me about the problems of our nation, then nobody can. If I don't tell you the truth, then my voice won't be meaningful."

"I've made some mistakes since I've been president," he said, recalling the visitors to Camp David who told him he had lost touch with the people and was too busy managing to lead. "I've listened to that, and I've learned my lesson."

Carter said that for the balance of his time in office, he will spend more time out in the country, listening to the people. "The best thing I can do is to put my faith in the American people. And God willing, I will act to the best of my human ability so that you will have confidence in me."

Unless he achieves that goal, Carter will have a hard time

The War Of The Chefs

SOOCHOW, CHINA — It may have been Marco Polo who said it, but the best way of summing up traveling in China is: "If you don't eat it, or buy it — you have to climb it." In our travels with our beloved Secretary of HEW, Emperor Joseph Califano, we managed to do all three.

The Chinese, whose intelligence service is not to be underrated, had heard about Califano's renowned chef, and went to great efforts to top the meals that Joe serves in his dining room in his office on the top of the Forbidden City in Washington, D.C.

I had mentioned to our Chinese guides that I had dined at Califano's table, and therefore they were most curious to know if their meals were as good as the ones prepared by the famous Califano cook.

Apparently it was important to them in their bridgebuilding with the United States.

At a lunch in Soochow the table was decorated with cold hors d'oeuvres — the centerpiece was in the form of a crane consisting of razor-thin slices of whitefish and pine. This course was followed by a bowl of egg whites and shark fins.

One of the Chinese officials asked me how the dish compared with Mr. Califano's table.

"Just about the same," I said. "Secretary Califano's chef prefers Campbell's bean soup, but if he can't find white beans, he will use shark fins."

The next dish was "Beggar's Chicken," which had been cooked with herbs in clay for four hours.

They looked at me expectantly as I tasted it with my chopsticks. I finally said, "It's very nice chicken, though Mr. Califano's chef can do the same thing with hamburger. At least it tastes as if it had been cooked for four hours in clay."

The "Beggar's Chicken" was whisked away, and in its place appeared a "Sweet and Sour Mandarin Fish" surrounded by bacon and bean sprouts. Once again our Chinese hosts were waiting for an opinion.

"Truthfully," I told them, "I have never had 'Sweet and Sour Mandarin Fish' at Mr. Califano's. He prefers his bacon decorated with lettuce and tomato on white bread. But I have had this delicacy in the HEW Government Cafeteria, and yours is definitely superior."

40 Years Ago Today

July 18, 1939
Miss Hilda Ogburn, director of the Greenville Federal Art Gallery, said today that a demonstration on block printing will be held at the gallery Thursday at 4 p.m. for a group from Sheppard Memorial Library, but added that others who desire to attend the demonstration are welcome.

Thursday's demonstration is an outgrowth of a display of block printing on textiles now being shown at the art gallery.

Blocks for the art work now at the gallery were made by craft experts, but actual printing on the textiles was done by unskilled women. However, the color combinations which blend with the designs resemble throughout the work of experts.

The display now at the gallery represents a skilled work of art, in that individual blocks have to be made for each color in a design.

Since the block printing plan can be perfected on curtains or any other kind of material, making striking home decorations, the project is expected to stimulate much interest among the ladies of Greenville.

To the editor:
This letter is in opposition to Mr. Lyle Barlow's letter in the paper of June 29.

The SALT II Treaty is common sense and is in the best interests of the United States. According to the Preamble to the Constitution, one of the six major purposes of the federal government as Mr. Barlow said, is to "provide for the common defense." We aren't giving up our defense just for world peace. The President is trying to make this world a safer place to live in without our thinking that Russia or some other nation is going to attack us.

Certainly, the Declaration of Independence states that a government derives its powers from the people and Russia governs by force — not consent. Mr. Barlow declares that Russia is an "illegitimate" and oppressive country. Just because the people of Russia overthrew the Czar, that doesn't mean that their government is illegal.

Also, Mr. Barlow's so-called illegitimate Russia or any other aggressive nation can start a nuclear war and that is what the world doesn't need to see.

We elected Jimmy Carter as president so he would make the decisions that affect this country.

The Constitution declares the president shall have the power to make treaties with the consent and advice of the Senate. Traditionally, since George Washington, all presidents would go on and make the treaty and the Senate would approve or disapprove it.

You may not support the treaty, but to have peace, we're going to have to abate our nuclear and conventional forces. Our reactions toward the passing of the treaty will show the world that we're striving for PEACE.

First Reaction: No Optimism

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar's value slid on world markets, while prices of gold rose. Stock market averages barely moved. Economists left shortrange forecasts unchanged.

Except for increases in shares of certain companies that might benefit immediately, investors weren't encouraged by President Carter's energy proposals. Nothing that wasn't anticipated, they said in unison.

The most pronounced changes, in bonds and commodity prices, were generally negative. Bond prices fell; traders feared the program was inflationary. Commodity traders felt the same way; they bid up prices.

In all, initial reactions from investment markets provided very little support for a Carter energy program, a program designed not only to resolve the energy crisis but to save his presidency as well.

First reactions, however, might not be the final judgment, especially since the program was so complex, and vague in some areas, that assessments might take several days, and perhaps weeks or months.

But an analysis of first-day results, plus interviews, shows clearly that:

—Investors weren't charged with confidence by the speech, despite the long buildup and the suggestions during the week that it would be hard-hitting, the President's most important address, a "turning point."

—Many apparently feel the proposals would prevent a balanced budget, might add to or prolong the life of existing inflation, and could involve the federal government more deeply in business decisions.

—Some feeling exists that the President's acknowledged problems of leadership might make it difficult for him to enact any package of long-range energy proposals.

—Comments were made that the program does little to change immediate conditions. While solutions to short-range problems weren't really expected, their scarcity removed a potential jolt to markets.

To business people, the Sunday night address and two subsequent speeches on Monday, contained a disturbing contradiction in that Washington was berated for limitations and looked for solutions.

rejoinder to scurrilous private rumors that the president had retired to Camp David for psychological reasons.

Actually, Kentucky ears were having trouble picking up the First Lady's soft Georgia accents. Careful listening to tape recordings of her remarks showed her saying that "Jimmy is confident."

Apart from the unfortunate misunderstanding, Mrs. Carter put in a masterful performance substituting for her husband at the Kentucky dinner. She has progressed as a campaigner and is obviously one of the president's top political assets.

A footnote: Haig still rejects any campaign for a U.S. Senate seat from Pennsylvania but is openly interested in a dark horse shot at the presidency. Old friends, fearing that his effectiveness as a voice on national security questions would be undercut by a humiliating presidential flop, want Haig to get immediate expert speech coaching.

winning a second term in the White House.

There is unquestionably a mood of pessimism in the United States, about the economy, about energy, about the ability of the nation's leaders to cope with those and other problems.

It bears most directly on Carter himself. He is, after all, the president who promised to rekindle faith and inspire confidence. By his own appraisal, the country has lost rather than gained ground toward those goals during his 2½ years in the White House.

Indeed, Carter says the gap between the people and their government is wider now than when he took office — after pledging to tear down the wall between the President and the rest of the nation.

Legionnaires Told Rhodesia Vote 'Fair'

By STUART MORGAN
Reflector Staff Writer

A member of the American Legion's Foreign Relations Division, J. Alvis Carver, saw Rhodesia's first popular election in May as a fair one.

Carver presented his observations on the Rhodesian election at Tuesday night's monthly meeting of American Legion Post 39.

"There couldn't have been a fairer election considering the terrorists' attacks," Carver said. He explained that terrorists often made attacks during Rhodesia's election attempting to discourage persons from voting.

Carver, a member of Dunn's Post 59 and former department commander of North Carolina's American Legion, was one of 24 persons from the U.S. (among a group of 72 representatives from various countries, including England) to observe the Rhodesian election.

"South Africa and Rhodesia are doing an outstanding job of bringing people back into the elections," he added. "Everyone was allowed to vote, and they were checked to prevent their voting twice." He pointed out that of the 72 observers, only one from England claimed that Rhodesia's election was unfair.

With the election center in Salisbury, the capital of Rhodesia, Carver said better than 62 percent of the blacks in Rhodesia voted during the five-day election period. As a result, he added that the black majority government received over 90 percent of the votes cast.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Rhodesia's first black leader in 88 years of white rule, was elected prime minister of the South African country during May's election.

Carver, paying his own transportation and visiting Rhodesia for 11 days as an official representative of the American Legion, presented a film on the Rhodesian election and a series of slides on the industrial, economic and military importance of South Africa to the U.S.

duced petroleum from coal, and by 1980 they expect to produce 50 percent of their petroleum from coal. They have offered us to accept their process," Carver gave as an example.

In addition, concerning the Panama Canal Treaty, Carver said "We've lost the battle, but we haven't lost the war yet." Adding that the U.S. should retain the canal, he urged local legionnaires to support the American Legion's lobbyists in Washington, D.C., who are attempting to dissuade Congress from implementing money needed for the treaty.

Sixteen Injured In Derailment

KEARNY, N.J. (AP) — Port Authority officials say at least 16 persons were injured, one seriously, in a commuter train derailment that tied up trains between New Jersey and Manhattan.

The most seriously injured passenger, Stefania Baron, 64, of Jersey City, was taken to nearby Jersey City Medical Center with possible broken ribs, cuts and bruises, said Luis Ramos, nursing supervisor.

Four cars of a seven-car subway-type train running above ground left the tracks just west of a Hackensack River bridge in the meadowlands about 2:15 p.m. Tuesday, said Mark Marchese, a Port Authority spokesman.

Ex-Politician Freed On Parole

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Herbert Fineman, considered the most powerful politician in Pennsylvania when he was speaker of the state House of Representatives, has been freed on parole after serving half of a two-year federal sentence for obstructing justice.

Fineman, released Tuesday, was convicted of obstructing an investigation into charges that he solicited bribes from parents seeking to get their children into medical and veterinarian schools.

City Council To Invest Savings

GAY, Ga. (AP) — Inspired by President Carter's energy speech, the City Council of this tiny west Georgia city has voted to invest half its savings in energy bonds.

In his address to the nation Sunday, Carter proposed the formation of an Energy Security Corporation that would issue up to $5 billion in energy bonds to develop alternatives to petroleum fuel.

The City Council voted unanimously Monday night to buy $10,000 worth of bonds as soon as they are ready to be sold provided they yield interest. That's half the $20,000 the city of 200 has saved over the past 30 years.

Counting On Shuttle Craft To Open New Frontier

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Science Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Rhea Seddon, M.D., 31, has dreamed since her teens of being a doctor on a space station and has tailored her life to that goal.

Rick Hauck, 38, commander, U.S. Navy, has done everything in aviation and aims for the next challenge: piloting a spaceship.

They are among the new breed of astronauts who represent this nation's space future a decade after man first set foot on the moon. They are preparing for the space shuttle, a revolutionary rocket ship that will change the way humans operate beyond their home planet. The first shuttle flight is planned for early next year, months behind schedule because of technical problems. But once it is operational in 1981, its stubby delta wings carry the promise of cheaper, far-easier access to space and eventually of orbiting colonies and factories.

Rhea Seddon and Rick Hauck are among 35 astronaut-candidates selected last year to be the basic cadre for a fleet of five shuttle ships. Fifteen are training as pilots to fly the reusable craft. The others, like Dr. Seddon and five other women, will be mission specialists — conducting and supervising experiments in orbit. "Most of these people were young when John Glenn orbited the earth, when Frank Borman flew around the moon and when Neil Armstrong walked on it 10 years ago," explains Dr. Christopher Kraft, director of the Johnson Space Center here. "It's refreshing to meet these kinds of people who don't have any limits on what they think can be done."

Dr. Seddon wanted to become an astronaut because "it's probably the most important thing that will happen in my lifetime." She says she knew the competition would be tough once the National Aeronautics and Space Administration decided to recruit women astronauts. To better her odds, she learned to fly a small plane. "I felt eventually they will need doctors on space stations and maybe that will be my chance," she said.

Hauck first applied to be an astronaut in 1964, in the Navy's post-graduate school. His application was based on a master's degree in nuclear engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Fourteen years later he made it, as a pilot. "I found flying was my true love, and ever since then I've been motivated towards doing the next logical progression in the challenges of aviation," he says. "That's why I became a test pilot. The next step is the shuttle."

NASA projects 50 shuttle flights a year by the mid-1980s. The shuttle is the size of a DC-9 jetliner and can carry up to seven persons and 65,000 pounds of cargo.

At first, the shuttle will perform tasks now assigned to expendable rockets: placing communications satellites in orbit, weather forecasting, scientific research and military reconnaissance. NASA has sold 32 flights through the first half of 1983, to the Defense Department, the International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium, the European space agency, industry and foreign nations.

More than 100 oil, gas and engineering firms have formed a committee to work with NASA to develop shuttle sensors to search for earth's natural resources. High technology firms hope to take advantage of weightlessness to simplify the manufacture of many items. Space factories and colonies to support them could evolve from this research and perhaps open up the next industrial revolution, according to some business analysts.

"Most of the things that might be done haven't even been thought of yet," says NASA's Kraft. "When you give the good application scientist and engineer the opportunity to do experiments in space easily, all those ideas on new ways of doing things and new products are just going to pop out."

Kraft predicts that once this happens, the program will be financed by private industry and will pay for itself. He foresees construction crews building a permanent station in orbit by the late 1980s. He believes earthlings eventually will establish a scientific base on the moon.

"Whatever we have — whether it is a permanent station, a moon base, a solar power satellite — it's the shuttle that will get us back and forth," says Dr. Seddon, who dreams of being a doctor out there.

"The idea of finding out how man can live and what adaptations he will have to make in a long-term space colony or moon colony fascinates me," she says. "The machinery of space is great, but the human aspects interest me more."

VEPCO Says Plight Desperate

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co. has threatened to suspend construction of its $1.3 billion Bath County pumped storage project if new rate relief isn't granted soon.

Slashing its construction budget is the only option left to the utility to maintain an adequate cash flow, Vepco President Stanley Ragone said in a petition filed with the State Corporation Commission Tuesday.

The company's financial condition is extremely precarious," he said.

Vepco's petition asks the SCC to reconsider its July 2 ruling allowing just $9.8 million of the $53.9 million the utility claimed it needed to cover increased fuel costs.

It also asks the commission for immediate action on a request for an $18 million rate surcharge.

Suspending construction of the Bath County project could save as much as $80 million this year, Ragone said, "but the impact would be enormous."

Several thousand workers would have to be laid off, he said, and the total cost of the project would increase at least $125 million dollars.

It would not be the first time the Bath County project has been held up. Faced with a similar cash squeeze in 1974, the company suspended work on the project until March 1977.

If the $18 million surcharge is allowed to go into effect Aug. 1, Ragone said, the increase for a 1,000-kilowatt customer would be $3.67 a month.

Another $13.95 a month would be added Oct. 1 if the company's fuel costs for the remainder of 1979 are granted, he said.

On the other hand, Ragone said, if the entire deficiency in fuel charges is not recovered until the fourth quarter of this year, the 1,000-kilowatt customer will face a sudden monthly increase of $20.41.

"To wait until after the next hearing to provide for the recovery of the deficiency will have an extraordinarily severe impact on customers," he told a news conference here Tuesday.

It will cost Vepco more than $300 million to finance ongoing construction during the remainder of 1979, Ragone said.

Doing this through short-term borrowing, he added, could pose to Vepco the "extraordinary risk of financial disaster."

Ragone upbraided the SCC for being seemingly unwilling to face the fact there is inflation, particularly in the area of fuel costs.

"They've simply put off the day of reckoning and we can't put it off any longer," he said.

He also blamed the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for "political decisions" that have kept some of Vepco's nuclear units out of operation longer than necessary.

"We're sure going to jeopardize the service in the future to avoid this company going down the drain," he said.

What this will amount to, he said, is simply turning away new customers.

"We're going to see industry coming into this state and asking if we can supply them power and we're going to say no."

Say Electrical Power Costs Underestimated

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two Duke University economists say the state is over-estimating the demand for electricity and under-estimating the long-range cost of electrical power.

The two, John O. Blackburn and E. Roy Weintraub made the remarks in testimony Tuesday before the state Utilities Commission.

The commission is conducting three weeks of hearings aimed at determining North Carolina's energy needs through the 1990s.

About 70 members of anti-nuclear groups held a demonstration outside the building where the hearings were held Tuesday. The protesters — carrying signs and chanting, "No nukes — solar power" — marched from the Raleigh Civic Center to the Dobbs Building.

The demonstrators included members of the Kudzuz Alliance and Citizens Against Nuclear Power.

The economists told the commission that higher rates could reduce projected demand for power by customers of Duke Power Co. by as much as 40 percent in the year 2000. They also pointed out that recently released population projections by the state Division of Management showed a slowing of the state's growth rate.

In further testimony during Tuesday's opening-day session, two farmers — Wilbur Earp of Brunswick County and James S. Melton of Onslow County — said the benefits of nuclear power outweigh its dangers.

Francis Chester of New Resources Group, a private research firm in Sanford, said his company is developing a battery-storage system that is superior to current lead-acid batteries. However, he said the system will not be on the market for two years.

Technical testimony is scheduled to begin on Thursday. The final two weeks of the hearings are expected to be reserved for testimony from Utilities Commission Public Staff and representatives of the state's three power companies.

Family Is Suing For $20 Million

By The Associated Press

The family of an East Carolina University professor who died Sunday of a disease generally linked to asbestos exposure has filed a $20 million lawsuit against 10 asbestos-producing companies.

The lawsuit, filed last month in U.S. District Court in New Bern, contends that Dr. Harvey J. Hewett Jr. developed mesothelioma, a rare type of cancer generally caused by asbestos, because of his exposure to asbestos during his work with the Navy.

Hewett, who was an associate professor in the ECU School of Business, died Sunday after several months of illness.

A spokesman for the Pitt County medical examiners' office said Tuesday that malignant mesothelioma was listed as the cause of death.

The suit charges that the companies were negligent for failing to warn Hewett of the hazards and failing to direct proper ways to handle the material.

The suit names as defendants Johns-Manville Sales Corp., Eagle-Pitch Industries, Owens-Corning Fiberglass, Raybestos-Manhattan Inc., Celotex Corp., Unarco Industries, Pittsburgh-Corning Corp., H.K. Porter Co., Amatec Corp. and Owens-Illinois Corp.

The suit claims that Hewett handled and breathed asbestos while doing engineering work with the Navy.

Fleming Named Ass'n Director

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — J.W. Byers of Asheville was elected president of the North Carolina Association of ABC Boards Tuesday at the concluding session of the association's convention.

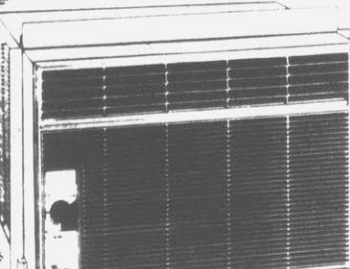

Other officers are Ray C. Shaw of Hamlet, vice president; Lokie Martin of Durham, secretary-treasurer; and Elijah Cannon of New Bern, supervisor.

New directors are Charles Knox of Charlotte, G.C. Daniel of Caswell County and Van Fleming of Pitt County.

GMC Recalling Cars, Trucks

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has recalled 1.8 million cars and light trucks from the 1978 model year to replace front outer wheel bearings that might fail and cause a vehicle to run out of control.

The car lines included in the Tuesday recall were Chevrolet Monte Carlo and Malibu, Pontiac LeMans and Grand Prix, Oldsmobile Cutlass, Buick Century and Regal, Chevrolet El Camino and GMC Caballero. Owners who have "noticeable front end noise or vibration" in their vehicles should not wait for the recall letter to visit their dealers for inspection, GM said.

Program To Help Rural, Elderly Poor

By DALE SINGER
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — It's hard to keep them down on the farm when they're old and poor — and lack the retirement benefits of their urban counterparts.

So, the federal government has started a $12.5 million project to provide housing and social services for poor rural residents in the 10 counties in the nation with the greatest concentration of such persons.

Jeanne M. Priestler of the U.S. Department of Agriculture says the congregational housing project will help prevent relocation of older persons out of their home areas into new and strange environments such as nursing homes.

"The psychological and other advantages are great for people who can live independently rather than be completely dependent on the government or other institutions," Miss Priestler said in an interview at the American Home Economics Association's annual meeting.

"People who have to move from their home area to institutions often become like parasites. They sometimes even find it hard just to get up in the morning, and their life span is often shortened."

The project, a joint effort of the USDA and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, begins this summer. It calls for construction of dormitory-type housing the following counties: Carroll and Chautauque, N.Y., Accomack, Va., Claiborne, Miss., Lake, Mich., Sierra, N.M., Decatur, Iowa, Charles Mix, S.D., Riverside, Calif., and Baker, Ore.

Miss Priestler said the reasoning behind the program can be found in a series of grim statistics:

Sixty percent of America's substandard housing is in rural areas. Of this, 44 percent is occupied by persons 60 years of age or older. Of these rural elderly, 33 percent have incomes below the poverty level.

Residents will receive not only shelter but services such as meals, housekeeping, transportation, personal care and access to essential services in the community.

Miss Priestler said the joint effort of housing experts and home economics professionals will give the recipients of the housing an experience that will be better than the existence in much of America's public housing.

"Older folks in rural America have little social interaction. It's difficult for them to get to health clinics because of a lack of transportation. These folks who live 10 or 15 miles apart can't take advantage of city facilities like a hot meal program or a walk to the corner library to check out books.

"The advantages can be great. If they stay in their home area, these people may be able to teach bible school or become 4-H leaders. They could help children learn skills they had when they were growing up or pass along the history of the area."

The effort on behalf of rural Americans is especially needed, Miss Priestler said, because farm workers often did not have the protection for the future that city workers were given.

"These people didn't work for a company with a planned retirement program. They were at the prime of their working careers at the peak of the Depression.

"We're not talking about big landowners. These people worked small acreage or were day laborers or sharecroppers. They didn't have the sophisticated retirement programs that factory workers have."

Funding For ECU Work

ECU News Bureau
East Carolina University's new undergraduate program in dietetics, offered through the School of Home Economics, has received funding for its final preparation phase from the U.S. Health Resources Administration.

An Allied Health Professions Special Improvement Grant totaling $5,572 was awarded ECU this month, bringing the total fundings of the program to more than $100,000.

Dr. Miriam Moore, dean of home economics at ECU, said the dietetics program has been approved and will enroll its first ten students this fall.

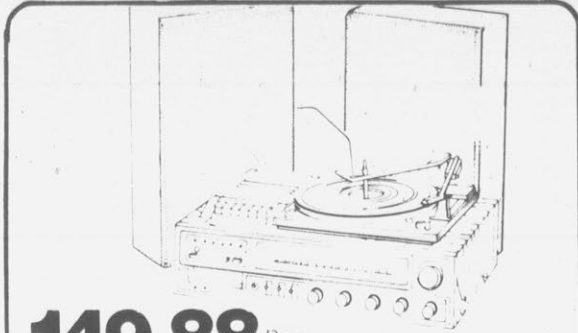

A five-year period of work toward implementing the program has included improvement and strengthening of available clinical facilities in eastern North Carolina, Dean Moore said.

GANG FIGHT

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — A dozen Chinese from rival gangs battled with knives, machetes, hatchets and meat cleavers in a Dublin street Tuesday night as horrified bystanders looked on. One of the brawlers was killed, one was in critical condition, and another had serious wounds.

Children Share In Science Camp

SCIENCE DAY CAMP... Patrick Kavanaugh of Greenville creates a plant to adapt to a certain set of environmental conditions. (ECU News Bureau Photo).

ECU News Bureau
Seventeen school children from Pitt and Edgecombe Counties were participants in East Carolina University's Science Day Camp for elementary students.

They were involved in outdoor learning activities in such familiar settings as schoolyards, vacant lots, city parks and local streams, as well as laboratory work, using microscopes, chemical reagents and other scientific equipment.

Dr. Carolyn and Dr. Carol

Hampton of the ECU science education faculty and their teaching staff directed the students in experiments, data analyses, simulation games and craft activities, and accompanied campers on a field trip to the Croatan National Forest to observe insectivorous plants in natural habitats.

Science day campers included Benjamin Berger, Blaine Lively and Ted Lively of Winterville; Patrick Kavanaugh, Rebecca Kirkland, Christopher Mills, Barry Padgett, Amanda Phillips, Chris Pittman, Debbie Seykora, Nicole Sparrow, Bert Threewitts, Margaret Wooten, Marshall Moore and Arleen Song of Greenville; and Barbara Tripp and Christopher Tripp of Tarboro.

Carter's Son On Candidate List

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission finally has a registered candidate on its rolls named Carter. But the first name is Jack — not Jimmy.

The president's son registered as a congressional candidate from Georgia's 7th District, papers filed with the commission showed Tuesday. President Carter has yet to announce his 1980 candidacy.

The younger Carter has said he doesn't expect to make a formal announcement regarding his candidacy until December. He said last week he wants to "see what the district thinks of me" before making a final decision. The 7th District has been represented since 1975 by Rep. Larry McDonald, a conservative Democrat.

Marijuana In The Cornfield

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Authorities Tuesday uprooted more than 1,000 more marijuana plants from cornfields in the Shepherd's Cross-road community.

Wilkes County sheriff's deputies, members of the state Bureau of Investigation and North Wilkesboro police have pulled up about 6,000 plants in a two-day search.

Wilkes County Sheriff Kyle Gentry said the plants ranged from two to six feet in height. He said estimated their street value at more than $650,000.

Hunt Takes Truckers' Case To Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt took the independent truckers' case to Washington Tuesday, urging North Carolina congressmen to work for uniform federal standards governing truck lengths and weights on the nation's highways.

"I come with an unusual message," Hunt told a delegation meeting at the nation's Capitol, "because I want to ask you today to pass a law to make uniform trucking regulations across the country — a law that supercede state laws."

Each state now sets its own trucking regulations, and Hunt said independent truckers with limited resources were overburdened by a "hodgepodge" of weight and length limits that vary from state to state.

Hunt called the mixture of length and weight limits ridiculous.

Weight limits for tractor-trailer trucks vary from 73,000 pounds to 148,000 pounds, with most states using the 80,000-pound limit North Carolina imposes.

Length limits for trucks vary from 55 feet to 85 feet, with most states using the 55-foot limit.

Truckers say they could drive longer, safer cabs with a 60-foot limit.

Since independent truckers went on strike in June, North Carolina has been issuing exemptions to its 55-foot limit.

Reaction to Hunt's request varied. Democratic congressmen Ike F. Andrews of the 4th District and L.H. Fountain of the 2nd District appeared hesitant at first, saying they were concerned that some states' roads would not bear the 80,000-pound limit Hunt advocates.

However, Hunt explained that he was referring to interstate highways and that they are uniform.

Democratic Sen. Robert Morgan said he was unable to commit himself on the plan. "I'm a little bit leery of pre-empting state law when a problem comes up," he said.

North Carolina members of the Independent Owner Operators Union of America say they will strike again Sept. 15 if solutions are not found to their problems.

Friendly To Quad Squad

CAPITOLA, Calif. (AP) — Drivers in this tiny beach town near Santa Cruz seldom fight back when their cars are ticketed by members of "The Capitola Electric Cavalry."

"It's hard work to quarrel with a man in a wheelchair," said Police Chief Bob Allen.

Allen says the hiring of six disabled men — paraplegics, quadriplegics and an amputee — who patrol their beats in wheelchairs has "effectively taken the sting out of getting a parking ticket."

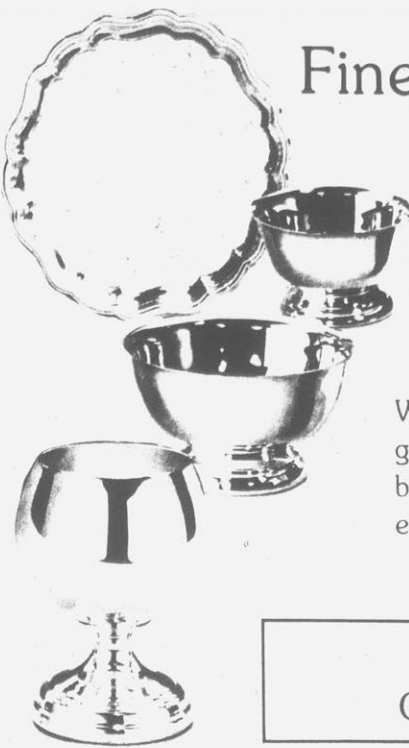

Wearing red windbreakers and carrying two-way radios, the six roll about town in electric and manually operated wheelchairs. They give tickets or man strategic corners to give visitors directions.

Residents of the beach community of 9,500, which attracts an equal number of visitors daily during the summer and on holidays, have affectionately dubbed the group the "Quad Squad."

One member — a victim of polio in his youth who admits he once "chewed out" a meter maid — said he is "surprised how friendly everyone is."

"I've never seen anyone even come close to giving me a hard time," said Gary Klein.

CAN A TRASH BAG BE STRONG, ECONOMICAL AND DEGRADABLE?

It can if it's BES-PAK®.

At BES-PAK we expect a lot from our trash bags. We expect them to be strong. Economical. And we expect them to help make a better environment. For you and for future generations.

You see, BES-PAK trash bags are specially treated. This treatment does not effect the strength of the plastic, until after the bags are used and placed outdoors.

Here's how it works:

Use the bags. Put them outdoors as usual.

When the plastic has been exposed to prolonged sunlight of sufficient intensity (in your yard or at the dump), a gradual chemical change will begin.

And a few weeks or months later, the plastic will break down and turn back into harmless natural elements. Even if it's buried in landfill.

Isn't it nice to know you can help save the environment for your children and at the same time, save some money for yourself?

A trash bag can be strong, economical and degradable.

No Soft Landing For Buzz Aldrin From Lunar Visit

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J.
(AP) — Buzz Aldrin's return from the moon was no soft landing.

Like some modern-day Icarus, Aldrin's "wings" of self-confidence, pride and ambition melted in the blaze of worldwide publicity. Mental depression, alcoholism, two divorces, a lot of heartache — those were his burdens in 10 years of personal hell.

Edwin E. Aldrin, who says he once felt he was a near perfect creature who could do no wrong, now is bouncing back.

At age 49, he is making a drastic change in his life — a switch from the science and technology he knows so well to dealing directly with people. He says the change is essential if he is to whip his last remaining adversary: alcoholism.

"I have to look at that bottle and say, 'Hey, that's my problem,'" he said. "If I don't mess around with that, I'm going to be OK."

Right now, he's very OK and studying to become a consultant on alcoholism.

He started with classes in June at the University of Utah's School on Alcoholism and Other Drug Dependencies, then came here to Rutgers University for a summer school course at the Center for Alcohol Studies.

The former astronaut was among several prominent Americans who gathered in Washington in 1976 to reveal themselves as recovering alcoholics.

Today, following several relapses he considers beneficial in helping him work with other alcoholics, he says he is "more comfortable now than I've ever been in my life."

Aldrin's troubles began when he and Neil Armstrong made man's first landing on the moon — July 20, 1969. Neither man liked the glare of publicity. But they were heroes and had to endure a madcap year of around-the-world appearances.

"That eventually took its toll emotionally," Aldrin said. "Many people thought my depression was brought on by the intensive training and carrying out the flight itself. But that was not it.

"It was being thrust into the uncomfortable area of public relations followed by a period of wondering where you fit in after being an astronaut on the moon."

An Air Force colonel, he decided to resume his career and requested duty as commandant of cadets at the Air Force Academy in Colorado.

But he said the Air Force chief of staff, Gen. John Ryan, "thought I should go into an operational unit and get back into competing with my contemporaries."

In 1971, Aldrin was named commander of the Aerospace Research Pilots School at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. — "a school I didn't know anything about." And, he said, his previous military training had not prepared him to be a leader.

Eight months later, he checked into a military hospital in San Antonio, Texas.

"I was on my way to having a good old American nervous breakdown," Aldrin said. "I realized it and asked for help." While hospitalized, he took time to "look inside."

"There were things I couldn't come to grips with, and that was a first in my life," Aldrin recalled. "I'm no longer a human; I'm no longer a superhuman. I'm no longer flawless, perfect. And then I came to the realization that this is not something I want to cover up. I wanted to talk about it."

He wrote a book about his experiences. He became a spokesman for the National Association for Mental Health, lecturing in an attempt to erase the stigma attached to mental illness.

But it wasn't until 1975 that he realized he was an alcoholic. Looking back now, he says he realizes that alcoholism had been creeping into his life for some time.

"A lot of my behavior shortly after the moon flight showed the very early signs of progression to alcoholism," Aldrin said. "I was soothing the uneasiness of the situation with alcohol."

"Nobody falls just pell-mell into alcoholism," he added, recalling that his mother was an alcoholic and his father drank to excess.

Aldrin retired from the Air Force and became an aerospace consultant. Under treatment, he overcame his depression, but alcoholism was taking hold.

"The person who is suffering from a degree of mental illness is usually aware that something is not quite right," Aldrin said. "But the alcoholic is usually the last one to come to the understanding and realization that, yeah, you got it. All those around him know it. But he's the last one."

His drinking broke up his 20-year marriage. He remarried — and divorced again.

"The space program is kindergarten in comparison with the culminating effects of alcoholism," Aldrin said.

Three months ago, he said, he made the decision that he feels will change his life and give him the happiness he's sought for a decade.

"It involves switching from dealing in technical areas to areas where I'll be relating to people and trying to help them because I have gone through — and am working my way into — being comfortable in many areas that may be bothering them now," he said.

Aldrin wants to specialize as an alcoholism consultant in occupational assistance programs, working on the existing problem in industry.

Would things have been different if he had not gone to the moon?

"I really have a feeling that when I look at my father's personality, my mother's personality and my evolving personality, I'm convinced that I would have been a strong candidate for alcoholism a good bit later than when it began to show up," he replied. "In many ways, it's a lot tougher when it comes at 55 or 60, rather than at 45."

"So, in a sense, I'm very thankful for that traumatic life and the challenges of coping that brought me to the point where I feel now I can say that I have more comfort, more peace of life, than I've ever had."

To Foreigners

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Residents of foreign countries now obtain approximately 37 percent of the U.S. patents issued for new inventions, according to IPO Inc., a public educational group dedicated to preserving the patent system as an incentive to innovation and creativity in the United States.

The group said that in 1978, foreigners obtained 26,000 U.S. patents, a 10 percent increase from 1973 when foreigners were issued 23,344 U.S. patents. Japanese led list in 1978 with 7,170 patents, more than triple their total of 10 years ago. West Germany was next with 6,005 and the United Kingdom third with 2,876.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices plummeted today in reaction to the resignations offered by President Carter's cabinet and chief aides.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was down 6.83 to 821.67 in the early going.

On the New York Stock Exchange, declines led advances by a more than 5-to-1 margin. Late Tuesday, the White House announced that members of the cabinet and Carter's key aides had tendered their resignations as part of an administration shakeup.

It is not known how many of the resignations Carter will accept, but speculation centered on Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal as likely casualties.

Among early prices, Trans World Corp. was off 1/2 to 18 3/4, Mobil fell 1/2 to 37 1/4, Xerox dropped 3/4 to 59 1/4 and Polaroid eased 1/4 to 27 1/4.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down by more than 8 points late in the session, closed off 6.40 at 828.50.

There were more than twice as many losing stocks as gainers in the closing tally of the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume came to 34.27 million shares against 26.62 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index dropped .55 to 57.88.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost 1.72 to close at 195.46.

Pet Swan Joins A Select List

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — If your pet swan is bagged by your neighbor's dog, you could collect $15 from the state under a bill signed into law by Gov. Hugh Carey.

The new law adds swans to the list of domestic animals, whose owners can be reimbursed by the state under the Agriculture and Markets Law for damages caused by raiding dogs. The money comes from dog license fees.

But if your pet dog is bagged by your neighbor's swan, you may be out of luck.

ministrator of the education program, and the county and city school systems.

Director of Testing and Research John McKnight reported on a study conducted on staff development among Pitt County teachers, noting that the county was offering some 30 renewal workshops for teacher credit, many offered through the auspices of Pitt Community College.

McKnight also commented on the use of the Coombs reading program implemented this year on the high school level, pointing out that students surveyed in the course indicated by a 72 percent margin that the program had helped them to read better. Seventy-six percent of the students involved also said they felt better about themselves after the course.

McKnight expressed his pleasure with the progress made by Pitt County students on scores from the California Achievement Tests.

"Back when I first came into this job, many of our students were 18, 27 and even 32 months behind the national norms," said McKnight. "Pitt County has grown in every area, every grade."

Pitt Community Schools Program Coordinator Alice Keene gave a status report on the CSP's Summer Activities Program, saying that she was very pleased with the program's progress, especially with the mobile program, which enables a four-person team to travel about the county, offering activities for Pitt County children.

She noted that the CSP had received an additional $1,000 from a Grass Roots Grants from the North Carolina Arts Council in aid for the proposed summer drama program.

Assistant Superintendent Leck Keeter presented an update on the tentative allotment of teaching positions for the 1979-80 school year, which was approved by the board. The adoption of a plan for personnel evaluation was tabled until the August meeting.

In other business, the board voted to maintain school insurance with Nationwide Insurance. Carolyn Gorham was approved as Title IX Coordinator for the county schools.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two representatives of the International Commission of Jurists will visit North Carolina next month to investigate claims that the Wilmington 10 and Charlotte 3 are political prisoners.

Commission members are scheduled to visit Charlotte Aug. 11 and Raleigh Aug. 13 to interview persons involved in the case, according to the National Conference of Black Lawyers. A spokesman for the group said Tuesday that he didn't know if the interviews would be include state officials or law-enforcement officers.

The conference is one of three American organizations that invited members of the international group of attorneys to probe claims of human-rights violations in the United States.

The lawyers, the National Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression and the United Church of Christ have compiled a list of more than 14 cases of what they call human-rights violations in this country.

The list of political prisoners includes both the Wilmington 10 and the Charlotte 3.

The 10 — nine black men and one white woman — were convicted on charges stemming from racial violence in Wilmington. The Charlotte 3 — three black men — were convicted of burning a stable.

When the two representatives conclude their visit to the state, they will join other commission members in reporting their findings to a meeting of the black lawyers conference later next month.

They will also present a report to the U.N. Commission on Human Rights during its meeting next month in Geneva, Switzerland.

Governor May Ride His Horse

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico's rancher-governor, Bruce King, says he may start riding his horse to work as part of his personal energy conservation program.

The governor said Tuesday he has set a goal of cutting his energy consumption between 5 percent and 10 percent. "If necessary, I'll bring up one of my saddle horses and ride to work."

He said the thermostat at the governor's mansion in Santa Fe has been turned up to 78 degrees, and said he probably will walk more and use fuel-efficient automobiles for his travels around the state.

Earlier this summer King directed state agencies to develop programs for a minimum 10 percent energy savings.

Handcuffed, Drove Off In Squad Car

DETROIT (AP) — "I was beginning to feel like we were the Keystone Cops or something." That's what State Police Trooper Doug Ballard said Tuesday after a suspect whose hands were handcuffed behind his back drove off with the trooper's squad car.

Ballard and his partner stopped a vehicle on Interstate 75 early Tuesday morning. When the driver began to struggle, he was handcuffed and placed in the back seat of the patrol car while the officers went to interview the passenger.

"All of a sudden we noticed our car was moving," Ballard said. "We went to see and I was able to get the door open, but then he accelerated and lost me. He hit a light post, too."

The trooper said the suspect apparently had climbed over to the front seat and had put the car into gear.

The squad car lumbered down the highway for about a quarter of mile, with the troopers in hot pursuit in the suspect's car.

That's when, according to Ballard, the troopers ran out of gasoline and were forced to watch their car speed out of sight.

It was found abandoned about a half hour later in an alley in Highland Park, a Detroit suburb.

Highland Park police say the story ended when a 23-year-old suspect was arrested after someone noted he was wearing handcuffs.

Town Ponders A Rent Subsidy

STANLEY, N.C. (AP) — The Stanley Board of Aldermen is pursuing a program that would make nearly every resident of the town eligible for a rent subsidy, but the town's mayor says he is opposed to the plan.

The funds would be available under a federal proposition offering community-development money in return for a subsidized-housing program.

Under the program, landlords would agree to meet federal housing codes in return for a guaranteed rent payment. The renter would be billed no more than a quarter of his adjusted income for rent. The federal government would pay the remainder.

For example, under the program, a family four would be eligible for a subsidy with an annual income of $13,280.

The program has been in operation in Gastonia for more than two years, and a total of 310 Gastonia privately owned or leased by the Gastonia Housing Authority, the agency which would contract with Stanley landlords should they decide to participate.

Because Stanley, like Gastonia, is part of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg metropolitan district, the rent payments and tenant incomes are based on averages including the higher Charlotte figures.

That brings the landlord's guaranteed payment up to $172

Sales Halted

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Low prices forced the closing of some Georgia-Florida fluecured tobacco markets shortly after the season's sales opened today, agriculture officials reported.

Owners of two warehouses in Blackshear, Ga., halted sales less than an hour after they began.

"I closed the sales after buyers offered prices ranging from 90 cents a pound to $1.25 a pound, when last year the same superior quality of tobacco sold for $1.30 a pound and more," said Joe Boyette, operator of one of the Blackshear warehouses.

Darrell Kirkland of the U.S. Agriculture Department's Market News Service said scattered closings were reported at other areas, including Live Oak, Fla.

"Probably, low prices is the reason," he said. Kirkland said similar closings were reported at some markets during the first few days of sales in 1978.

Prices for average grades on Valdosta markets ranged from $125 to $130 per hundred pounds, and some farmers complained that companies were buying very little tobacco on opening day.

Agriculture officials had predicted record prices for this year's tobacco crop, even though quality and quantity are expected to be lower than last year.

Some officials said the price on the Georgia-Florida belt may average $130 per hundredweight, up from last year's record of $142.36 and the 1977 average of $114.93.

Gas Prices Slated For Rise In N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Increased prices for imported oil and new federal pricing guidelines for service stations will boost gasoline prices in the state by 6 to 7 cents a gallon next month, industry spokesmen say.

Five cents of the hike will be because of crude oil price increases set July 1 by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, a spokesman for the Carolina Motor Club in Charlotte said Tuesday.

The spokesman, Quentin M. Anderson, said U.S. Department of Energy regulations passed Monday would 1 or 2 cents a gallon.

"When that OPEC increase reaches us, combined with the 1 or 2 cent increase coming on because of the guidelines, it should be the single largest monthly (price) increase we've had so far," Anderson said.

He said the average price of gasoline in North Carolina this week was 95 cents per gallon for premium, 93 cents for regular and 88 cents for regular.

The energy department announced Monday that it was allowing service-station operators to charge a maximum of 15.4 cents a gallon more than the wholesale price they pay for gasoline.

However, Avery Upchurch of Raleigh, a member of the national Gasoline Advisory Committee, said price per gallon would increase by about 3 cents.

"Presently, the national average of dealers' profits is about 12 cents," said Upchurch, who owns two Raleigh gas stations. "Since the dealers' profit margin is now allowed to be 15.4 cents, a dealer could go up a maximum of 3.4 cents."

Under the new regulations, which stations may put into effect immediately or wait until they become mandatory Aug. 1, dealers will be required to post both their maximum allowable price for each grade of gasoline and their maximum gross profit margin on each grade.

All-Star Game Full Of Surprises

Downed At Home Plate

Above All Else, Knight Is A Teacher

EDITOR'S NOTE — Bobby Knight, basketball coach, is a national figure. But he is a man who closely guards his privacy. The second part of a three part series looks at Bobby Knight the man.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Bobby Knight considers himself, above everything else, a teacher. When he left for Puerto Rico and the Pan American Games last month, the passport he gave the customs officials listed his occupation as "Teacher."

"I think my responsibility is to teach," said Knight, who once took a course at Ohio State given by former football coach Woody Hayes.

"I made up my mind that if I ever was in that position (coaching), I would make sure that I would teach like Woody, making the course a meaningful experience for everybody," he said.

So Knight gives a course in the methods of coaching basketball. He has several rules. Nobody wears hats and nobody can come in barefoot. He makes class attendance mandatory, deducting a grade for every class that a student misses. There are no exams, and Knight grades his students on the organization of their notebooks.

For his basketball players, Knight has fewer rules. There's no curfew, but players must wear jackets and ties on the road. The most important rule is no drugs. Early last season, the Indiana team was devastated when Knight threw three players off the team and placed five others on probation for smoking marijuana.

"I don't think too many coaches would have had the courage to do that," said Bob Kinney, Knight's former sports information director at West Point.

The other rule on Knight's teams are no moustaches or long hair during the season.

"I think that kids look neater that way," Knight says. "But the important thing is to teach them something. Unless you're the head of General Motors, you're going to have to learn to accept rules."

Knight feels that few people can motivate themselves. "It's human nature to sluff off," he said, explaining why he constantly pushes his players to reach new heights.

"Outside of my parents, he's been my greatest motivator," said Dave Bliss, a former Knight assistant and now head coach at Oklahoma. "He's a dynamic person, very driven. In a wartime situation, he would make a great general. He's totally dedicated to coaching, and he's the smartest person I know."

"I think Coach Knight has always gotten the most possible out of his teams," said Mike Krzyewski, now the head coach at Army who played and coached under Knight. "He impressed upon us how each individual couldn't do his own thing, that the team was all-important."

"At times I didn't like being pushed so hard. But I was thankful for it afterwards. If you just tell him what you think, he'll respect you. He cuts short people who are underhanded or devious. He's a perfectionist. All I can say is God bless the guy who helped me reach my potential."

Knight is fascinated by history, and is a big buff on the Civil War. Al McGuire, the former Marquette coach, calls him Gen. Patton. He has a photographic memory and is a speed reader. According to Kinney, Knight would read a thick history book on long road trips and paperback cowboy books on short trips.

He fishes and plays golf with his few close friends, but his passion is eating and sleeping basketball. And he shares that knowledge with almost anybody who expresses a sincere interest.

Knight studied basketball with the masters, and he is glad to impart his wisdom to other coaches. "Basketball is not a form of espionage," he says. "It's not like the CIA."

"If you look at the coaching clinics, you'll see Bobby Knight at many of them," said Wayne Martin, coach of Morehead State. "There are some highly recognized coaches who won't share their knowledge."

Knight's mentors were Clair Bee of Long Island University for tactics, the late Joe Lapchick of St. John's for handling personnel and Fred Taylor, who coached Knight at Ohio State, for organization. He acknowledges his debt to these coaching greats, often citing their contributions to his career.

After Indiana won this year's NIT basketball championship, he interrupted the public address announcer to call Lapchick's widow, Barbara, down for the awards ceremony. And the first phone call he made after winning the NIT was to coaching legend Bee.

Loyalty is obviously very important to Knight.

"Coach Knight would do anything for his players," said Krzyewski, who was the assistant coach of the Pan Am team. "He's very sensitive and loyal, but he just doesn't want a lot of publicity for it."

Johnny Orr of Michigan says Knight "helped me over some rough times."

In 1974, there was a 'Dump Orr' movement in Michigan. Indiana and Michigan had tied for the Big 10 championship and the NCAA berth, forcing a playoff. Michigan won 75-67 on a neutral court, even though the Hoosiers had won by 12 the last time the two teams met.

"At the post-game press conference," Orr said, "Bobby got up and told the media: 'Now all you guys who don't think Johnny Orr can coach, stand up.'"

Knight won't help every coach. He doesn't tolerate coaches who violate the recruiting rules. He believes in severe penalties for cheating — making the player permanently ineligible and disbaring the coach.

SEATTLE (AP) — Baseball's annual All-Star game can be counted on for surprises and the 1979 edition came up to that standard except the National League won again and that's routine.

But who would have thought the throwing arm of Pittsburgh's Dave Parker, the muscular giant, would win the Most Valuable Player Award for him? After all, it was his bat that won him MVP honors for the league last season.

And who would have thought the Mets' Lee Mazzilli would homer in his first All-Star at-bat and then outduel Ron Guidry of the Yankees in a confrontation 3,000 miles from New York?

Or that in the intimate confines of the enclosed Kingdome that four walks in the ninth inning would decide the 7-6 game for the eighth straight NL victory and their 16th of the past 17.

"When you're not hitting, you have to do something," said the 6-foot-5 Parker, who weighs 230 pounds.

What he did was throw out Jim Rice at third base after the Boston star hit a sky high fly that dropped for a double to open the seventh inning with the AL leading 6-5.

Then in the eighth, when the Angels' Brian Downing tried to score from second on a single by the Yankees' Graig Nettles, Parker threw him out at home. The ball reached catcher Gary Carter of Montreal on the fly and he blocked the sliding Downing from the plate.

"That play was perfect all the way," declared Manager Tommy Lasorda, who has to hope that some of the All-Star good fortune will rub off on his defending champion Dodgers, who languish in last place.

Mazzilli, a 24-year-old outfielder and All-Star reserve, evened the count with his home run in the eighth inning on a 0-2 pitch from Texas' Jim Kern.

Kern, who had given up only one home run this year, observed wryly, "He went with the pitch and hit it 317 feet fair."

The dimensions of the Kingdome are 316 feet down the foul lines and Mazzilli's shot landed at the top of the fence.

It was Mazzilli again in the ninth only this time he drew a bases loaded walk from Guidry who was called into the game by Manager Bob Lemon after Kern had walked the bases full.

"He didn't throw anything close to the plate," Mazzilli commented. "I really wanted to get a hit and I swung at one bad ball and missed it. Truthfully, I liked the home run better than the walk."

Guidry appeared angry with Lemon, the man fired earlier this season as manager of the Yankees. The Cy Young Award winning pitcher who helped the Yanks to the World Series title last season said:

"I'm not happy with the circumstances of going in there. When you come in with the bases loaded, you ain't got no room to play with."

Relief ace Bruce Sutter of the Chicago Cubs took credit for the victory, pitching shutout ball the final two innings. It

Watson Laughs Off Hex

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — Tom Watson, a two-time winner of the British Open golf title, laughs off suggestions that the Lytham St. Annes course holds a hex for American players.

No American has won an Open here since Bobby Jones, an amateur, in 1926. But Watson, whose two victories have come in the last four years, hopes to change all that.

"I don't think there is much significance in the fact that no American pro has ever won here," said Watson. "We have been close, but just haven't succeeded. Maybe this year will be different."

If the jinx is to be finally laid to rest, Watson is the man most likely to do it.

The 29-year-old Kansas City, Mo., resident is in the midst of a phenomenal season that has seen him win four tournaments and finish second in four others. He has collected close to $400,000 in prize money, confirming himself as the new world golfing power. He has had a few poor tour-

Trip Donated

OCOONTO, Wis. (AP) — A Milwaukee businessman who "didn't want the kids to be disappointed" will donate $27,500 so 1,700 low-income children can see a Green Bay Packers football game.

A plan to finance the trip with federal money was rejected in June.

Joseph Uihlein Jr., 71, president of Tamarack Petroleum Co., decided to make the donation after reading that the project was turned down as a poor use of federal funds, said Alva Null, executive director of the Northeast Wisconsin Community Action Project, which had asked for the grant.

Skier 2nd

William Leitch of Greenville took second place overall in the Midwest regional barefoot waterskiing competition in Defiance, Ohio last weekend.

Leitch was first in jumping and third in starts and tricks in the men's division. He will compete in the Eastern regionals July 28-29 in Pennsylvania.

Legion Plays

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team will begin its eastern semifinal playoff series with Johnston County tonight in Smithfield.

The game will begin at 8 p.m. at the American Legion field and is the first of a best-of-seven series. Pitt County has an 18-4 record, while Johnston County is 19-4.

The series will alternate sites and run through next Tuesday, if necessary. The winner advances to the eastern finals.

Hobgood Wins

Gary Hobgood grabbed an easy 10-stroke victory recently in the Eastern North Carolina Junior Invitational golf tournament.

Hobgood, the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Hobgood of Farmville, matched the tourney record in the 12-13-year-old division with a two-over 142 at Falling Creek Country Club in Kinston.

Brett Dye of Greenville was fourth in the event at 163.

Ace In The Hole

A delighted Jack Nicklaus peers down into the cup after scoring a hole-in-one on the par 3, 212-yard fifth hole in the first round of the British Open at the Royal Lytham and St. Annes Course in England earlier today. Nicklaus, the defending champion, used a five-iron for the 10th ace of his career. (AP Laserphoto)

Putt-Putt Results

The Top Ten defeated the Aces by 20 strokes last night to run their record to 8-1 at Putt-Putt. Danny Woods had a 60 and David Manning a 63 to lead the winners, while Larry Paul and Irving Bennett were low for the Aces with 66's.

The Aces are 5-4, while the Ace Machines are 3-5 and the King Putters 1-7.

All-Star Game

was the second straight All-Star win for the right-hander who throws what he calls a split-finger fast ball, something like a forkball.

Don Drysdale, in 1967 and 1968, was the last to achieve two consecutive All-Star triumphs.

A crowd of 58,905 jammed the Kingdome for Seattle's largest baseball crowd ever and in addition to the game saw striptease dancer Morganna make good her boast that she would run onto the field. She did, fully clothed and planted a kiss on George Brett of Kansas City, who was stepping into the batter's box.

The Angels' Nolan Ryan struck out for the AL, struck out the first two batters but then gave up a walk to the Dodgers' Steve Garvey, a triple Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt and a double to Cincinnati's George Foster.

Ryan gave up another run in the second that knotted the count at 3-3.

The AL jumped on two-time Cy Young Award winner Steve Carlton for three runs in the first, highlighted by Fred Lynn's two-run homer in his only time at bat. He had been bothered by a groin pull and had run into the fence trying to get Schmidt's hit.

The AL added two more off Joaquin Andujar of the Houston Astros on singles by the Angels' Don Baylor and Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, plus a hit batsman and an error.

In a bad night for Cy Young Award winners, Gaylord Perry of San Diego, gave up three hits and the final AL run while facing only three batters in the sixth.

The Nationals had chipped away in putting their overall record at 31-18-1. Singles by the Phillies' Bob Boone, the Cards' Lou Brock and the Dodgers' Davey Lopes brought a run in the second.

Another scored in the third thanks to a Schmidt double and one more was scored in the sixth when the Padres' Dave Winfield doubled and Carter singled him home.

Mazzilli's homer led off the eighth but then Kern put down the side.

With one out in the ninth, he walked Joe Morgan who reached second on a balk.

Parker was intentionally passed, thus finishing the evening with just one infield hit. Craig Reynolds of the Astros fouled out and Larry Parrish drew a walk.

That's when Lemon called on Guidry, who promptly walked Mazzilli forcing in the run. He then retired Winfield but the damage was irretrievable.

Although each manager played nearly all of their 28-man squads, Parker played the whole game and Lasorda declared, "If the game had gone 20 innings, he would have stayed in there."

Lemon, in conclusion and in probably his last game wearing a Yankee pinstripe uniform, commented, "We had opportunities, but we let them go by. We didn't get walks with the bases full."

neys recently, and missed the cut in the U.S. Open. But he remains optimistic about doing well.

"I am certainly hopeful," he says modestly. "You can never tell, but I hope to play well."

According to Watson, driving will be the key to success on this 6,822 yard, par 71 course.

The rough here is rough in the extreme — more than 2 feet deep in places — and Lytham is the sort of course that can severely punish errors from the tee.

Wednesday's first round was expected to claim some unwary victims.

"In any major tournament you have to drive the ball straight," said Watson. "That is what I will be working on this week."

"It is very difficult to hit second shots from the deep rough here and then get them on the green. I hope I hit the fairways more than I did in our own Open. But if I hit the ball straight there will be no problem."

Most experts pick defending champion Jack Nicklaus, hoping to shake off a recent lean spell, as Watson's major rival for the coveted crown.

Strangely, not one of Nicklaus's three Open triumphs has been on an English course, and that knowledge is one of the motivating factors this time.

"I'd like to win in England, all three of my wins have been in Scotland," said Nicklaus. "The key is probably how well I putt. If I do well on the greens, I will be in contention."

The other three-time champion, South African Gary Player, spent Tuesday practicing with his 17-year-old son Wayne, playing in his first Open. Gary's other son, Mark, was caddy for his father, while an uncle, Bobby Verwey, was also among the qualifiers.

Player and the promising young Spaniard Sevy Ballerteros are rated the only obvious contenders in the 152-man field capable of preventing a U.S. victory.

The American delegation is as strong as ever, with 13 of the top 20 U.S. money earners in the hunt for the $30,000 first prize.

Lawmakers See Standby Gas Rationing's Approval

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional energy leaders predict a changed mood on Capitol Hill will give President Carter the standby gasoline rationing authority he wants.

Late this week or early next, the full House will take up a bill, approved Tuesday night by its Commerce Committee, that would give the president a variety of energy-conservation powers, including standby gasoline rationing.

The committee's approval marked the first action on any of the measures Carter outlined in his energy-policy addresses earlier this week. Under the bill, the president could impose rationing during a 20 percent oil shortage — with either chamber of Congress given the right to veto it during a 15-day review period.

Commerce Committee approval came by voice vote. This is the same panel that deadlocked bitterly on the original Carter proposal and sent it to its floor death without a recommendation of support.

House leaders reintroduced the standby plan as gas lines lengthened and their constituents' tempers shortened. Carter renewed his appeal for rationing authority in his Sunday address to the nation and in a Monday speech in Kansas City, Mo.

On Tuesday, congressional leaders told Carter they would try to put the rationing bill — along with the president's proposed "windfall profits" tax — on his desk before the August recess.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and other key energy legislators predict the rationing plan has enough support to pass.

"No one in his right mind wants to impose rationing. But this is a plan that should be in the president's toolbox," said Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas.

"The momentum is now going for the president. It's just a matter of seeing if it can be maintained," said Rep. Phil

Receive Spoiled Tobacco July 23

Monday, July 23 has been set by the Stabilization Corporation as the date to receive growers' fertilizer-contaminated tobacco in North and South Carolina, according to Fred G. Bond, general manager.

Austin Carolina Tobacco Company, Kinston, located at the end of West South Street, has been designated as one of four delivery points for scheduling and receiving tobacco. Bond emphasized that producers who plan to deliver such tobacco should obtain a special marketing card from the county ASCS office prior to delivery.

Producers should call the Kinston warehouse, 523-8086, between the hours of 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. to schedule deliveries prior to the delivery date.

The tobacco should be delivered in standard tobacco sheets, with sheets to be exchanged at delivery time. Only tobacco graded in official U. S.

D. A. Standard Grades will be accepted, with all participating producers to be Stabilization members, noted Bond.

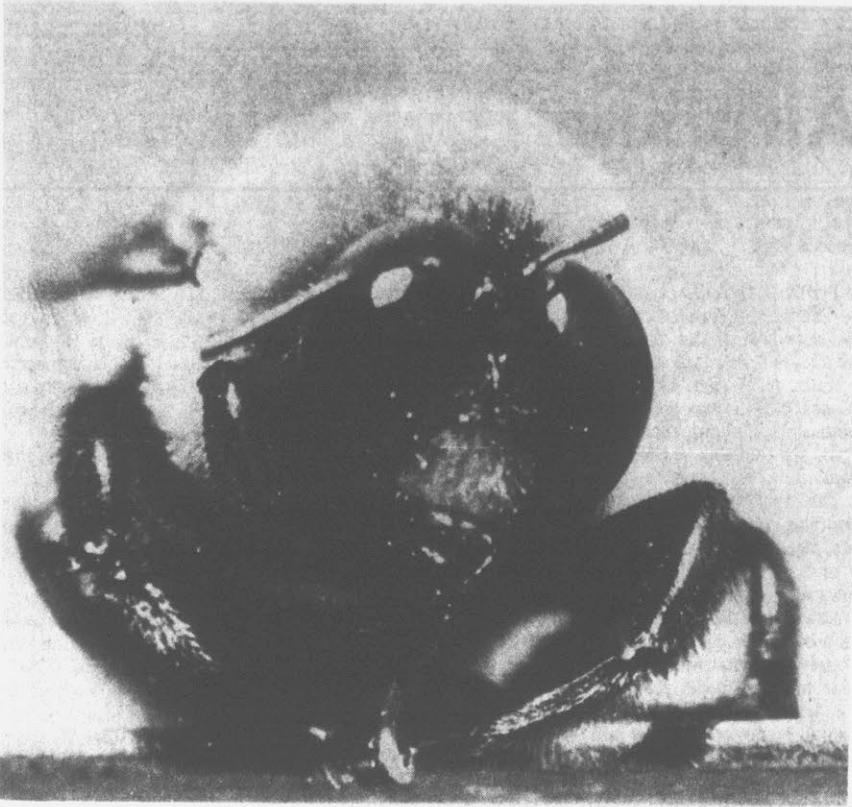

There will be an official government tobacco inspector to grade the tobacco. A regular tobacco sale bill will be given to each producer, listing the weight and grade of each delivered sheet.

At delivery time, growers will be advanced an amount based on the 1979 loan rate as determined by the grade applied to each tobacco sheet.

The tobacco will be received, processed and redried in the usual manner, but will be kept in a special pool separate and apart from any tobacco Stabilization may receive in the 1979 crop.

If the tobacco is later determined to be usable, it will be offered for sale and any net gains will be distributed to participating growers.

The special pool will be open from July 23 to August 3. Growers are urged to make arrangements for delivery during this period.

KILLER BEE? — What actually looks like a tremendous, menacing bee, is just a close-up view of your average, everyday bumble bee. Large, bulging eyes and nasty-looking legs akimbo, the bee was resting on a trash can when this photo was taken. With summer here, and so many bees about, it's a relief to know they really aren't this big. (AP Laserphoto)

Factors Affecting Gold Prices Are Discussed

ECU News Bureau

Factors which affect the price of gold were subjects of a presentation by Oscar Keeling Moore, professor of economics at East Carolina University, at a recent international conference in Austria.

Dr. Moore appeared at the first biennial International Atlantic Economic Conference in Salzburg and Vienna, along with economists and bankers from Switzerland, Canada, South Africa and West Germany. Moore's presentation on gold was part of a session on international investment.

Noting that gold as an investment was second only to Chinese ceramics in its rate of growth during the decade 1968-78, Moore detailed the intricate process by which gold is priced.

He specifically discussed gold production from mines in South Africa; the daily marketing activity in London, where most of the world's newly-mined gold is sold; and the role of Swiss banks in world gold trading. Moore's address was based on government statistics, United Nations documents and recent published research in economics as well as a personal interview with the director of N.M. Rothschild and Sons, Ltd., one of the five London banking and gold bullion brokerage firms comprising the London gold market.

A recognized expert in international economics and the author of numerous publications, Dr. Moore has special research interest in gold production and pricing.

Moore studied gold mining operations in the Yukon Territory during an extended visit to Alaska last summer.

Cooler Attire For Employees

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has given state employees permission to work in cool, comfortable but prudent attire in order to beat the heat in state offices.

Hunt also ordered the lone thermostat in the Capitol turned up to 80 degrees after finding out that it was set at 70 — way below the 78-degree minimum set by President Carter.

In a statement Tuesday, Hunt said, "In keeping with our state and federal policies of energy conservation, I am today urging state employees to wear cool, comfortable clothing to work."

"We have thermostats in state buildings set at 80 degrees, and in some cases temperatures may rise higher than that."

The governor shed his coat for the sake of coolness, but not his tie, and posted a thermometer in his office that showed the temperature to be 80 degrees.

"We want to maintain our high level of productivity and stay as comfortable as possible, so I would urge state employees to dress accordingly," he said.

However, some North Carolina merchants were less than happy with the new 78-degree mandate.

At Raleigh's North Hills Mall, the temperature in the concourse got up to 82 degrees, and mall manager Phil Pitney said merchants were complaining.

In the mall, manager Dominick Brugnolotti said, "If we raise our temperature to 78, nobody's going to eat here." He kept the restaurant's temperature at 75.

In Greensboro, one clothing-store manager said, "It's impossible to sell the new fall merchandise. Nobody wants to try on wool suits when they're sweating."

Air Pollution Is Man-Made

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Man-made air pollution and not sap evaporating from trees is the primary cause of the haze that has been over most of the state for the past few days, according to an environmental engineer for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

EPA engineer John Bachman said a National Weather Service meteorologist who blamed the haze on sap evaporation was in error.

The EPA has been monitoring visibility trends in the Triangle and in the Great Smoky Mountains, Bachman said. He said the haze, a regular feature of North Carolina, "has gotten much worse in the last 20 years."

He said the principal reason that the problem has gotten worse is because of man-made pollution from power plants. He said increased auto emissions also contributes to the problem.

Bond Issues In Bad Year

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Whether influenced by the tax-cutting effectiveness of California's Proposition 13, North Carolina voters thus far this year have given bond issues a hard time.

During the first six months of this year, only 29.71 percent of bonds in county referendums have won approval. This compares with an approval rate of 72.23 percent in all of 1978 and 67.71 percent for 1977.

The figures are contained in a report on bond elections for the first half of this year released by the office of state Treasurer Harlan E. Boyles.

During the period, bond issues were rejected in five of the eight counties where referendums were held. A total of $37.7 million in bonds was proposed, and $11.2 million won approval.

Referendums were held also in 17 municipalities and voters in 16 approved the proposed bonds. The proposed total issue was $45,318,000 and voters approved $39,518,000.

During 1978, bond issues totaling $118,460,000 were voted on in 19 counties, and issues amounting to $85,560,000 were approved in 15 counties.

Municipalities show a higher rate of approval. In 1978, 93.95 percent of the bond issues submitted to municipal voters was approved, and in 1977 the approval rate was 92.23 percent.

Choir Still Sings On Longest Network Show

By JIM BOARDMAN
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Fifty years ago, before Americans ever heard of the Lone Ranger, or listened to the radio crooning of Rudy Vallee and Bing Crosby, 380 voices rang out through the airwaves, singing "The Morning Breaks."

Today, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir is still singing on what has become the nation's longest running network radio show.

None of those who sang in the first broadcast on July 15, 1929, are still members, but 24 are still living and four recalled in interviews that Monday afternoon.

Ted Kimball climbed a 15-foot ladder in the egg-shaped Tabernacle so he could reach the microphone, suspended from a wire, to introduce the first song to 30 NBC-affiliated radio stations around the country.

Kimball remained standing on the ladder during the 30-minute live performance as his father, Edward P. Kimball, an organist with the choir, cautioned him, "Don't fall."

Worried about acoustics — a little-understood science back then — radio station KSL hung a huge, red, velvet curtain behind the choir and covered the first 10 rows of the cavernous Tabernacle with old carpeting to eliminate echoes.

With only one microphone, many were worried that some sections of the choir would be heard and others wouldn't.

"They were trying to get a good balance," said C.G. Van Os, who sang 48 years in the choir. "The sopranos sang too loud. These fellas (KSL) being across the street it was kind of hard to get together."

Ken Rogerson, who sang that day, recalls Kimball would aim the microphone in the direction of whichever section was singing at the moment.

"If the bass had a heavy part, he would turn it that way. That's the way they got the sound across. Now they have every description of recording device, all kinds of mixing boards. They can bring anything out they want to," said Rogerson, who sang with the choir 53 years.

Choir members must now retire after 20 years.

Delores Clark was 15 and

"very nervous" that day. "It was a very exciting thing because radio was very new," she said.

"It was very thrilling. I don't think any of us thought it would be as successful as it was," said Irene Lund Elggen, who was the 16-year-old daughter of the conductor, Anthony C. Lund.

In 1932, KSL switched to CBS and the programs became known as "Music and the Spoken Word." The choir's first television broadcast came in 1954, on Edward R. Murrow's "See it Now" show.

Now, after 2,604 broadcasts, the 330 voices of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir are heard each Sunday morning over 840 radio stations worldwide and on 50 television stations.

Help For Disaffected Cultists

By RICHARD M. HARNETT
BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — The Human Freedom Center, founded to cope with the Peoples Temple before the bloodshed in Guyana brought Jim Jones' cult notoriety, now helps young people break away from other cults.

"There is a parallel with what happened in the Peoples Temple," Holly Morton, spokeswoman for the center, told UPI. "One of the first signs of a problem in the Peoples Temple was the breakdown in family communications. A lot of parents had just the same problems getting their kids out."

The Human Freedom Center occupies a big yellow house near the University of California campus. It has four full-time staff members, and the house is occupied at any given time by three or four young people attempting to adjust back into the mainstream of society after spending a few months or years with a cult.

Director Dr. Lowell Streiker said the center is not in the business of trying to get people to give up their beliefs, but he said 80 percent of those who receive counseling there do not go back to the cult they came from.

"We are operating the only half-way house in the United States for rehabilitation of ex-cultists," Streiker said.

"I never use the word 'deprogramming' with my work. It's a very accurate word. We deal with so many people who have been programmed, who have been victims of mind control techniques which have robbed them of the ability to make their own decisions."

"The problem of failure to take responsibility for those decisions themselves, thinking for themselves, certainly can be called deprogramming. Unfortunately deprogramming has a connotation of coercion, force, kidnapping, sensationalized stuff, and because of the activities of a couple of people who call themselves deprogrammers, whose methods we don't approve of."

The average cult defector spends about two weeks at the center, undergoing group and individual counseling.

"We provide a positive, supportive, family-like atmosphere," said Streiker. "We encourage people to start developing career goals based on the future they want for themselves."

The program of the center is geared to getting the ex-cultist "from here to life in the mainstream," said Streiker. Each person receives several hours of group and individual counseling a day, "and everyone takes part in the routine of the house, meal preparation, housekeeping, those sorts of chores."

But the center does not impose a rigid structure like that which Streiker says is used by the cults. "We don't post schedules that everybody plays volleyball from 9 to 10, everybody prays from 10 to 11 and so on. "Our fundamental rule is that we are not the anti-cult cult," he said. "People are here for the purpose of becoming independent, even of us."

Streiker receives a half dozen or more calls each day. "They range from simple requests for information, to serious cries for help from persons caught in personal crises surrounding their involvement with non-traditional religious movements."

He said the persons involved in cults generally feel that traditional mental health professionals, physicians, ministers, police and others lack understanding of, or sympathy for, the idealism and sincerity which led them into non-traditional religious movements.

"They feel that the mental health professionals were simply not acquainted with the facts about cult indoctrination techniques, motives and lifestyles," Streiker said. "These people are afraid that the mental health system would label them as disturbed and react to them as examples of disordered people."

"Clearly the need is there and it is very strong. The services to fill that need have not been available. We hope to serve the community."

New Design In Tennis Racquets

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — A new tennis racquet has a radically different, oversized head that the manufacturer says provides strength and length for overheads and increased height for serving. The racquet is 28 inches from grip to tip. Many racquets are extra wide in the middle — compared with this one, which has a narrower profile. John Howe, the manufacturer's vice president of engineering, says the new design puts more power in the racquet where the player really needs it. It is designed for intermediate or better players — with money.

Engagement Ring Constant

NEW YORK (UPI) — Styles in weddings may change but the traditional diamond engagement ring does not. Leo Kaplan, a leading international diamond cutter and polisher, says the average size of an engagement diamond has been one-quarter to one-third carat for decades. More than 75 percent of first-time brides and 53 percent of repeat brides receive one, Kaplan says.

Better Hearing With Helmets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Motorcyclists wearing helmets actually hear better at high speeds than their bareheaded counterparts because the helmets screen out wind noise, according to the Motorcycle Safety Foundation.

The organization says that as far as other noises are concerned — a horn or an approaching vehicle, for example — a helmet screens them equally so that a cyclist hears all critical sounds at the same relative strength as a rider without helmet protection.

Airplane Lover Flies Big Ones, Little Ones

PORT CLINTON, Ohio (AP) — The interest Ralph Burnstine developed in model airplanes as a child grew along with him.

As he got bigger, so did the planes. Now he has the best of both worlds, flying planes for real and building models for real.

Burnstine said he started building model airplanes several decades ago when he was 8 or 9 years old in his home town of Springfield, Ill.

Now, when he isn't working as a corporate pilot for an Erie County industrial firm, he is either building model planes in the basement of his Catawba Island home or showing and flying his model planes in competition.

In 1955 he got a commercial pilot's license at the University of Illinois and has since worked at a variety of aviation jobs. When he isn't shuttling passengers in his company's turboprop craft, he usually is at home working on the models. His enthusiasm is put to the test when he considers that it might take 2,000 to 3,000 hours to build a model airplane. So far, he has constructed 15 such models.

"It takes a minimum of a year," he said. "There aren't enough spare hours to do it in less. And first you have to be attracted to a particular kind of airplane. If you're not, you could never spend the tremendous amount of time required to finish it."

He prefers wood models to the plastic variety now on the market.

"The biggest mistake—and it's been very detrimental to the hobby — has been the advent of the plastic 'ready-to-fly' airplane. All you have to do is fuel them and take them up, but they don't fly very well. And once they hit the ground, you're done."

He said this quickly discourages both youngsters and parents who may have invested $30-$40 in a model.

Wood models, he added, fly better and can be repaired if they crash.

Burnstine's models are the competition variety. "Anything that flies for real can be scaled down," he said.

"It will fly as well or as poorly as the original. But I really try to look for and select well-proportioned aircraft."

Plans and documentation are sent to an official of the Academy of Model Aeronautics for authentication. The agency is the official governing body of the sport in the United States.

One recent Burnstine project was repairing a model he flew in international competition in Sweden about three years ago.

"We had terrible weather in Sweden and consequently my plane sustained some damage on a couple of flights. I patched it temporarily, but I now have to repair it well enough to compete in this year's trials."

His model is a 1932 Boeing F-4 bi-plane fighter. It has a wingspan of about 5 feet, boasts a pilot with moveable arms, scaled .50 and .30 caliber machine guns and the ability to drop a parachute flare while in flight.

Audit Uncovers Jail Shortage

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An audit at the Mecklenburg County jail has disclosed that about $1,500 of inmates' money disappeared in recent months, and auditors have concluded the money was apparently stolen.

The State Bureau of Investigation has probed the disappearance of the money, which was being held for inmates. The SBI's findings have been turned over to the district attorney's office.

Sheriff John Kelly Wall said he called in the SBI because, "In our bookkeeping, we found a situation we couldn't figure out so we felt like we should have somebody give us an outside audit ... Nobody has been accused of anything."

The SBI was called in after county officials completed a separate audit in April. Buck Squires, county budget administrator, said the audit in April did not determine the cause of the disappearance of money, but auditors concluded the cash apparently was stolen.

TIRED ANGLER — Sammie Keyser of Pensacola, Fla., poses with a 725-pound, 12 and a half-foot long tiger shark boated during the Biggs Sharks Rodeo in Pensacola. Keyser, who weighs 125 pounds, caught the big shark after a 17 and a half-hour tug-of-war in the Gulf of Mexico, south of Pensacola. Keyser hooked the fish at 3:40 a.m. Sunday morning and brought it to gaff at 9:10 p.m. that same night. The shark hit a 20-pound stingray used for bait. (AP Laserphoto)

Advertisingest Lawyer Also Gives A Show

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Clients who hire Ken Hur don't get just an experienced trial lawyer. They also get a 300-pound ham.

Hur, 55, puts on top-notch performances in the courtroom by day and in television commercials by night.

Both day and night, however, Hur's claim as "the advertisingest lawyer" in the United States gives headaches to other lawyers who lament that he's tarnishing their profession.

Until two years ago, no lawyer could advertise, but the U.S. Supreme Court said such a ban violated the right of free speech. Now, any lawyer can advertise, but 31 states have rules limiting the scope.

Wisconsin's rules are among the most liberal, permitting any ad that isn't "false, misleading or deceptive," Hur's ads are legal, but that doesn't make it any less painful for lawyers who would like to keep the profession low-key.

He has nettled his peers and tickled the public by renting an airplane to fly a giant "Call Ken Hur" banner above a packed football stadium. He has put "Sideswiped? Call Ken Hur" signs on bashed-in cars. His son tools around town in an old hearse with the painted message: "No-Frill Wills $15."

In some 30 commercials on Madison area TV stations, Hur touts The Legal Clinic, a cut-rate legal service he founded. Hur, spouting the clinic's "Talk to a lawyer for just 10 bucks" slogan, has appeared in scuba gear, playing a banjo and joshing with his children.

Meanwhile, other lawyers seethe over what they see as the demise of professional dignity. State Bar Association officials proposed that the Wisconsin Supreme Court replace the two-paragraph guidelines with a much longer ruling, including a ban on "showmanship" or "self-laudatory" types of ads.

"There must be respect for the legal profession in order for it to carry out its duty to the public. Propriety has a place," says Truman McNulty of Milwaukee, president of the state bar.

"The hot-shot lawyers are just afraid they're going to lose some business," Hur counters, "but my ads for the clinic are mostly bringing in people who never would have seen a lawyer otherwise."

Hur, working on a new series of commercials where he will wear a Captain America suit and do motorcycle stunts, had some impressive support at a recent state Supreme Court hearing.

Attorney General Bronson La Follette said he had no complaints from the public. Gerald Thain, a law professor who once headed the advertising regulation division of the Federal Trade Commission, said an overwhelming danger must be shown to diminish constitutional free speech.

Hur, meanwhile, is enjoying the whole thing.

"I'm a talent now, a celebrity. You can't buy the kind of fun I'm having with this."

"It's funny. You can use showmanship in court to impress a jury, but not in ads. I'd get out there in a G-string if it'd help tell the public about me."

Matching Tourism Funds Available

RALEIGH — North Carolina Commerce Secretary D. M. (Launch) Faircloth announced recently that $94,000 in matching funds is available to non-profit organizations throughout the state to help promote travel and tourism.

Grants of up to $5,000 per project will be made to help initiate new and innovative promotional activities on a local and regional level, Faircloth said.

Applications for funds will be accepted by the Department of Commerce through September 30.

Faircloth said the program has provided $476,000 in assistance to 202 promotional projects across the state since it was initiated five years ago.

Application forms and information about the matching funds program are available by contacting: Matching Funds Program, Division of Travel and Tourism, Department of Commerce, 430 North Salisbury St., Raleigh, N. C. 27611, phone 733-4171.

Colony Of Ants Going Into Orbit

CAMDEN, N.J. (UPI) — A colony of ants will go into space aboard the space shuttle orbiter some time in 1981 in a project suggested by inner-city students in Camden.

Purpose of the test is to observe the effects of space on the ants through their full life cycle, monitored for seven days by periodic motion and still photography. The students are members of Orbit '81, an education project sponsored by RCA under the NASA program in which worthwhile space experiments are accepted for space shuttle rides.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Latin Americans in Central and South America, plus the Caribbean, will receive short, basic health messages via television and radio beginning later this year.

Fifty 60-second television health messages were filmed in Latin America and half of them will be adapted to 30-second public service notices for radio, covering maternal and child care, communicable disease, accident prevention, sanitation and illness care.

The messages were produced by The Children's Television Workshop and underwritten by Xerox Corp.

He finally discovered that his dog, Pride, was eating the cash.

Said Potter, "I know we all have a taste for money, but this is ridiculous."

Summer Is Also Time Of Learning

NEW YORK (AP) — "Summertime and the livin' is easy" — but parents shouldn't make it too easy for their children to forget everything they've learned up to vacation time, advises the chief of therapy at a child-care center here.

"During the long summer vacation many children lose much of what they learned in school and often may take two to three months in the fall to catch up," says Darrel G. Chapman, of the New York Institute for Child Development.

"After three months of fun and games, it is very common for children to forget their math and spelling," Chapman says. "And a child who has visual-perceptual or coordination problems may actually regress in his school performance after the summer. Motor and coordination skills need continual reinforcement if a child has trouble with reading or handwriting, for example."

The physical therapist, who has worked extensively with children with learning and coordination difficulties, encourages parents to play games with their children that involve math and spelling skills.

"Alphabet and word games reinforce spelling skills, while games in which a child has to count, add and subtract, such as card or dice games, are very good for practicing math skills in a fun way," he explains. "Maze games and tic-tac-toe help a child with the concepts of left and right, forward and backward. Bingo uses these concepts as well as number skills."

It is also important for children to keep up with reading, Chapman advises, even if it is only the Sunday comics or sports pages.

"Parents should subscribe to magazines their children are interested in or send for free literature in their child's name," he suggests. "There's one thing parents can always be sure a child will read — his mail! Encourage children to write letters to Grandma, friends at camp, penpals — they will get practice in spelling and writing as well as in reading."

For children who have problems with their physical abilities, such as with balance, motor skills or eye-hand coordination, Chapman stresses the value of the playground.

"A child's sense of balance is improved by climbing on and swinging from jungle gyms and overhead ladders. This also helps develop good eye-hand coordination which is needed for fine finger work such as buttoning, tying and coloring within lines."

"Jacks and hopscotch are excellent games for practicing motor skills, both fine and gross, as well as calling for strategy planning and number skills," he adds.

The New York Institute for Child Development is a non-profit center specializing in the diagnosis and treatment of learning-disabled and hyperactive children. It treats youngsters through therapy combining nutrition management and sensorimotor exercise techniques, according to Chapman.

CBS Extends Summer 'Re-Run' Domination

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS has extended its domination in the battle of the summer re-runs with seven of the top 10 shows in the latest national A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

The network's first-place finish in ratings released Tuesday marked the third time in the last four weeks that CBS has either topped or tied ABC.

CBS' overall rating average for the week that ended Sunday was 15.1. ABC and NBC trailed with averages of 14.2 and 11.0, respectively.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 15.1 percent of the homes in the country with televisions were tuned to CBS. Under the Nielsen system, each point represents about 750,000 TV homes.

Old episodes of two CBS shows, "M-A-S-H" and "WKRP in Cincinnati" topped the ratings list. ABC repeats of "Three's Company" and "Taxi" took third and fourth place.

NBC's only top 20 representative was "Prime Time Sunday," making its best showing to date in the No. 20 slot.

"Prime Time Sunday" and another newsmagazine show, ABC's "20/20" in the No. 16 position, were the only original offerings in the top 20.

But both were beat out by a rerun of CBS newsmagazine, "60 Minutes," in the No. 8 slot. Last week's top 20 and their ratings:

- 1, "M-A-S-H," 24.9 (CBS);
- 2, "WKRP in Cincinnati," 24.1 (ABC);
- 3, "Three's Company," 24.0 (ABC);
- 4, "Taxi," 22.7 (ABC);
- 5, "Lou Grant," 22.6 (CBS);
- 6, "The Jeffersons," 20.9 (CBS);
- 7, "Laverne & Shirley," 20.1 (ABC);
- 8, "60 Minutes," 20.0 (CBS);
- 9, "Alice," 19.2 (CBS);
- 10, "The Dukes of Hazzard," 19.1 (CBS);
- 11, "Dallas," 18.9 (CBS);
- 12, "Eight is Enough," 17.3 (ABC);
- 13, "Charlie's Angels," 17.3 (ABC);
- 14, "One Day at a Time," 17.2 (CBS);
- 15, "Barney Miller," 17.2 (ABC);
- 16, "20/20," 17.2 (ABC);
- 17, "Happy Days," 17.1 (ABC);
- 18, "All in the Family," 16.8 (CBS);
- 19, "Mork and Mindy," 16.7 (ABC);
- 20, "Prime Time Sunday," 16.7 (NBC).

The Nielsen ratings are used by the three major networks to set advertising rates.

At the bottom of the ratings barrel last week, in the No. 64 position, was the live "SALT II Debate" televised on NBC. It got a 5.9 rating with an 11 percent share of the viewing audience.

The remaining bottom 10:

- 55, "Sword of Justice," 8.6 (NBC);
- 56, "Stockard Channing in Just Friends," 8.3 (CBS);
- 57, "Project UFO," 8.1 (NBC);
- 58, "Carnival of the Animals," (a special) 7.9 (CBS);
- 59, "Supertrain," 7.4 (NBC);
- 60, "The Paper Chase," 7.4 (CBS);
- 61, "Gossip," (pilot) 7.1 (NBC);
- 62, "Battlestar Galactica," 6.9 (ABC);
- 63, "Hardy Boys," 6.2 (ABC).

Summer Show Debut Slated With Its Roots In 3 Sit-Coms

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a few weeks, CBS will debut a summer show that is really an old successful sitcom that became three other sitcoms, which were all done away with before ever getting on the air.

Young Musicians At Music Camp

ECU News Bureau
A total of 287 junior and senior high school band musicians have completed the first session of East Carolina University's 26th annual Summer Music Camp.

The camp, sponsored by the ECU School of Music, is directed by Harold Jones and Herbert Carter of the ECU music faculty, and provides a wide range of musical and recreational activities for campers of all ages and ability levels.

Students enrolled in the camp lived in campus dormitories while attending the camp. Each camper was involved in small ensemble classes, clinic sessions and music workshops as well as performance with a large camp band.

They also heard concerts featuring professional musicians and participated in classes in conducting, arranging and general music.

This year's first session music campers included school musicians from the Carolinas and Virginia.

Names, schools and instruments of area band campers follow:

MARTIN COUNTY — Rober-sonville Junior High School: Marvin Peele, drums, and Jennifer Nelson, clarinet.

Roanoke High School: Tammy Johnson, trumpet, and Anna Harris, flute.

PITT COUNTY — Aycock Junior High School: Belinda Haselrig, Gayle Castellow and Celeste Pickett, flute; Karen Green, clarinet; and David Welborn, trumpet.

Ayden-Gritton High School: Jennifer Mahoney, flute.

Rose High School: Jim Bearden, clarinet, and Bernestine Haselrig, flute.

Film Debut By Jose Feliciano

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jose Feliciano, the blind Puerto Rico-born guitarist, will make his film debut in "Airplane," a disaster movie spoof which Howard W. Koch will produce for Paramount.

Feliciano, a two-time Grammy Award winner, is famous for such hits as "Light My Fire," "California Dreamin'" and the theme from "Chico and The Man."

Guitarist-singer Feliciano has 32 gold records to his credit and has acted in such episodic TV shows as "Kung Fu," "MacMillan and Wife" and "Lucas Tanner."

Carol Burnett Stars In Drama

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Carol Burnett drops her comic talent to star in "The Tenth Month," a 90-minute CBS-TV movie off a pregnant, unmarried middle-aged woman who decides to keep and raise her child.

Costarring in the contemporary drama with Burnett are Keith Michell and Dina Merrill.

Burton Stars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — LeVar Burton, who made his acting debut as Junta Kinte in "Roots," will play a ghetto youth who strives to make a better life for himself in "Billy: Portrait of a Street Kid."

The two-hour NBC movie, to be televised July 24, costars Tina Andres, Michael Constantine and Ossie Davis.

CBS, intrepid, was still apparently interested in the idea, (though by this time it's hard to say what the idea was), and told TAT to go on with still another production.

Thus, "Hanging In."

"The reason we kept doing it is because everybody loves the relationship between Barbara Rhoades, Dennis Burkley and Nedra Volz." Some of us might not be familiar with that relationship, since it has only existed in shows that were never aired.

Ms. Brogliatti explained. In the Washington phase of the show, Miss Rhoades was to have been the congressman's legal assistant, Burkley the staff assistant and Miss Volz was to have been the house-keeper.

Now they're all doing similar things for Macy, except at a college instead of in Congress.

"It's been very difficult," Ms. Brogliatti says. "They'd done the show three times — with Bea, John Amos and Cleavon Little."

So, beginning Aug. 8, "Maude," "Onward and Upward," "Mr. Dooley," "Mr. Dugan" and "Hanging In" finally get to be on television.

Unions Are Merging To Build Bargaining Clout

By DREW VON BERGEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Organized labor, faced with growing industry conglomerates and declining legislative power, is merging its forces to shore up the battle against big business.

The recent merger of two of the largest unions in the food industry — the Meatcutters and Retail Clerks — into a 1.2 million United Food and Commercial Workers International Union highlights an atmosphere of unity prevailing in the union movement.

Since the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations merged in 1955, the AFL-CIO has promoted the concept of linking affiliates. Forty-one such mergers have occurred in the past quarter century, changing the face of many of labor's top organizations.

Prospects for more mergers appear likely.

The trend goes beyond the needs of individual unions to the heart of the 13.6 million-member AFL-CIO as the prime representative of organized labor.

AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Lane Kirkland, the heir-apparent to President George Meany, said he did not know of any mergers that did not benefit all concerned.

"All of the unions involved are stronger, more efficient and more effective in the workplace, at the bargaining table, in the legislative halls and in the community," Kirkland told the founding convention of the UFCW.

Kirkland said such mergers were necessary to ward off attacks on the union movement: "Right-wing, anti-democratic forces, aided and abetted and bankrolled by corporate America, are engaged in what amounts to a holy war to destroy our unions, undermine our nation's laws and roll back the gains that workers have made," Kirkland said.

Frank Pollara, a leading AFL-CIO official on mergers, said economics of collective bargaining and organizing non-union workers necessitates mergers. "A small union is at a tremendous disadvantage," Pollara said. "It costs money."

The largest union in the nation, with about 2 million members, is not in the AFL-CIO. The Teamsters union was ousted from the federation in 1957 because of corruption charges.

Two more non-AFL-CIO unions — the National Education Association and the United Auto Workers — follow as the second and third largest in membership.

William Wynn, head of the new UFCW, believes both the Teamsters and UAW should be welcomed back into the federation. In fact, he believes the Teamsters never should have been ousted.

While collecting "organized labor into one affiliated federation may boost its lobbying clout on Capitol Hill and at the White House on national and international issues, more attention is being focused on merging individual unions for day-to-day operations and collective bargaining.

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, with about 1 million members, has been successful in growing to the sixth largest union using merger as a major tool.

On the horizon are several more joint ventures, some in the final process of merger, and others just in the talking stage.

The most advanced involves the 13,000-member Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers International Union joining the 775,000-member Carpenters union.

A referendum of the Lathers membership will be held July 28, then the merger is scheduled for completion at a convention in Atlanta in August.

The Lathers are faced with modern day technology that many unions — particularly those in the construction trades — see cutting into their membership.

Lathers installed the wooden slats and later metal mesh on which plaster was applied to make the walls and ceilings of most old buildings. With the advent of drywall construction, the trade dwindled.

"We are proud of our craft, our skills, and the long history of accomplishment," said Lathers President Charles Proder in urging the merger. "But we have to face reality. Our basic trade, which was founded on the use of lath and plaster, has all but disappeared."

Another new merger involves the UAW and District 65, a 35,000-member independent union that includes such diverse workers as university employees, lawyers, editors, factory workers, and direct-mail companies. The Autoworkers executive board has approved accepting District 65 as an amalgamated local union. Leaders of both groups were among the early participants in civil rights demonstrations in the nation.

Several other unions are also contemplating merger:

—The Newspaper Guild, with a membership of 33,700 reporters and other newspaper industry white-collar workers, and the International Typographical Union, with 58,000 active members, had hoped to complete merger this year, but bogged down over who would control the new union. Talks continue, but no action is expected at the TNG convention July 2-6 in Boston.

—Merger talks are underway to bring together the 73,000-member Seafarers International Union and 30,000-member National Maritime Union to combat problems brought on by the decline in the U.S. merchant fleet.

—The Molders union, with 50,000 members, is exploring merger with the Allied and Industrial Workers, with 90,000 members.

—Initial discussions were held this spring between the 100,000-member Amalgamated Transit Union and the 85,000-member Transport Workers union. Optimism faded when longtime TWU president Matthew Guinan announced his retirement. A merger would join virtually all the major municipal transit operations in the nation.

—Discussions are underway for merging the 16,000-member Insurance Workers with the 100,000-member Office and Professional Employees union.

—Despite some merger sentiment between two major electrical unions — the United Electrical Union and the 250,000-member International Union of Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers — action is not imminent. The IUE broke off from the UE in 1949 over alleged Communist influence. They are in coordinated bargaining now with General Electric and Westinghouse.

Counter to the merger sentiment is a growing bitterness between two major education unions.

The 1.7 million-member NEA, which only last year was officially designated as a union by the Labor Department, is feuding with the 425,000-member American Federation of Teachers over bargaining in America's educational institutions. The AFT is an AFL-CIO affiliate. The NEA is not.

Their differences have escalated in recent months to name-calling by the AFT's Albert Shanker and NEA's John Ryor over an administration proposal to create a separate Department of Education.

Ryor charged the AFT with "betrayal of the entire labor movement" by backing the proposal, while Shanker responded that some of NEA's collective bargaining tactics were "as vitriolic as that of the Right-To-Work Committee."

The AFT and NEA talked merger in 1973, but broke off without agreement. Merger feeling was so high at that time that locals of the two organizations in New York state, Los Angeles and New Orleans joined together and were simultaneously affiliated with both organizations. Only the United Teachers of Los Angeles remains dual-affiliated.

Among the roadblocks to merger were the NEA's refusal to become affiliated with the AFL-CIO and its policy of electing officers and delegates on an anti-discrimination quota basis. The Landrum-Griffin law requires open elections for such positions.

No discussions have been held in six years, but NEA's designation last year as a union could narrow the differences.

"The idea is not dead," said an AFT official.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Hypo Husband Develops 'Symptoms'

My husband reads medical columns in magazines and newspapers, every one he can get his hands on. He invariably decides he has all of the symptoms he reads about. How can I break him of these fears? — Mrs. B.L., Texas.

Dear Mrs. L.: You have just placed your finger on an attitude that I have pursued in these columns. As far as possible, I try to avoid a listing of symptoms associated with illness, unless the symptoms are an inseparable part of the condition I am describing. For, in reality, there are remarkably few symptoms that can be limited to only one illness.

For example, the major symptoms of heartburn, belching, abdominal cramps and nausea may be caused by serious or by unimportant trouble in the esophagus, stomach, small intestine, large intestine, pancreas, liver, or gallbladder.

You see, therefore, that any homemade diagnosis made by your husband and based on the symptoms he reads about can only serve to increase his anxiety. It is obvious that your husband may be suffering a great deal because of his own health. Actually, the chronic complainer about non-existent illnesses suffers a great deal. The hypochondriac cannot be casually dismissed without giving him the sympathy and understanding he deserves. For his anxieties keep him from being the normal, functioning human being he should be.

Almost always, the hypochondriac has deep-seated psychological problems and can be helped by people trained in the art of listening. He may be seeking refuge in the excuse of illness to avoid coming face to face with daily activities and to cope with the problems of living. With psychological guidance, he can be given a greater insight into his emotional confusion and distress. Only then can the repetition of symptoms be alleviated.

The hypochondriac has been made the butt of poorly directed humor. Sure, some of the things that are said about the hypochondriac may be funny, but not to him. A man once said, "It's a good thing I'm a hypochondriac, otherwise I'd be awfully sick." Another, who had been complaining of "symptoms" all his life had this epitaph inscribed on his tombstone. It said, "I told you I was sick!" There are many others which reflect the torment of the hypochondriac and the impatience of those who surround him.

Doctors recognize that the hypochondriac does, indeed, suffer from his imaginary complaints. Consequently, they pay particular attention, in order to be sure that there is not actually some very real and underlying physical condition. For the hypochondriac can and does at times develop illnesses, just as anyone else does.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... A "lie" is the poorest way to prepare a child for a visit to the doctor or the dentist.

No Disruption In Restoration

FORT KNOX, Ky. (AP) — Military life continued as usual at Fort Knox, while the Baltimore District of the Corps of Engineers "slip lined" 13 miles of plastic pipe to restore the crumbling sewer system.

Polyethylene pipe was inserted, or slipped, through broken and root-infested clay and concrete sewer lines, passing under homes with a minimum of disruption. Without halting training, other lines went under the parade field of the Army post, where 21-inch plastic pipe was slipped through 24-inch clay pipe.

With a population of 43,000, Fort Knox is one of the most heavily populated Army posts in the United States.

How Tar Heel Senators, Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes following the July 4 recess.

HOUSE
SPY BUDGET — The House rejected, 79 for and 321 against, an amendment requiring public disclosure of the total amount spent on foreign intelligence in fiscal 1980. The one-time-only disclosure would have applied to the aggregate budget of the CIA and 10 other U.S. agencies that spy overseas. It was proposed to HR 3821, an authorization bill later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., the sponsor, said disclosure of the total figure would not weaken national security, and that "the intelligence agencies, like all arms of government, must be accountable to the Congress and to the public."

Rep. William Whitehurst, R-Va., an opponent, said publication of the aggregate amount "will lead to revelations of more and more detail about our intelligence programs and budget. This will damage intelligence and our security."

Members voting "yea" favored public disclosure of the total foreign intelligence budget for fiscal 1980.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.C. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "nay."

EDUCATION DEPT. — By a vote of 210 for and 206 against, the House passed a bill (S 210) creating a cabinet-level Department of Education. The new Department would absorb the U.S. Office of Education (now in HEW) and other education agencies and programs scattered throughout the government. The bill, weighted down with school-prayer and anti-abortion amendments, now goes to conference with the Senate.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., a supporter, said: "We will have done what we always talk about doing; that is, just to make the federal government a bit more efficient, a bit more responsive."

Rep. L.H. Fountain, D-N.C., an opponent, said: "Enactment of this bill will mean that state and local educators will soon be mere administrative agents of the Washington educational bureaucracy."

Members voting "yea" favored a separate education department.

Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Gudger voted "yea."

Fountain, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

SENATE
ELECTORAL COLLEGE — By a vote of 51 for and 48 against, the Senate failed to muster the two-thirds majority needed to approve a constitutional amendment abolishing the Electoral College and replacing it with direct, popular election of a president.

The amendment (SJR 28), seeks to remove the possibility of a candidate winning in the Electoral College while losing the popular vote. Its future is now bleak.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., a supporter of the constitutional amendment, complained that the Electoral College gives the least-populous states disproportionate power in the selection of a president. "Some voters are more important than others because of the state in which they reside," he said.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, an opponent, said the Electoral College is part of a mechanism to give representation to states as political entities, and was "deliberately designed to cushion the election of the president...from direct democracy."

Senators voting "yea" favor direct election of the president.

Sens. Robert Morgan, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

NEW AID AGENCY — The Senate refused, 45 for and 51 against, to prevent the creation of a new U.S. foreign aid agency. This and a similar House vote clear the way for the International Development Cooperation Agency (IDCA) to be established under an executive order issued by President Carter. The IDCA will absorb the Agency for International Development (AID), Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC); and most other non-military foreign assistance agencies. No longer the province of the State Department, foreign aid will be administered by an independent agency directly answerable to the White House.

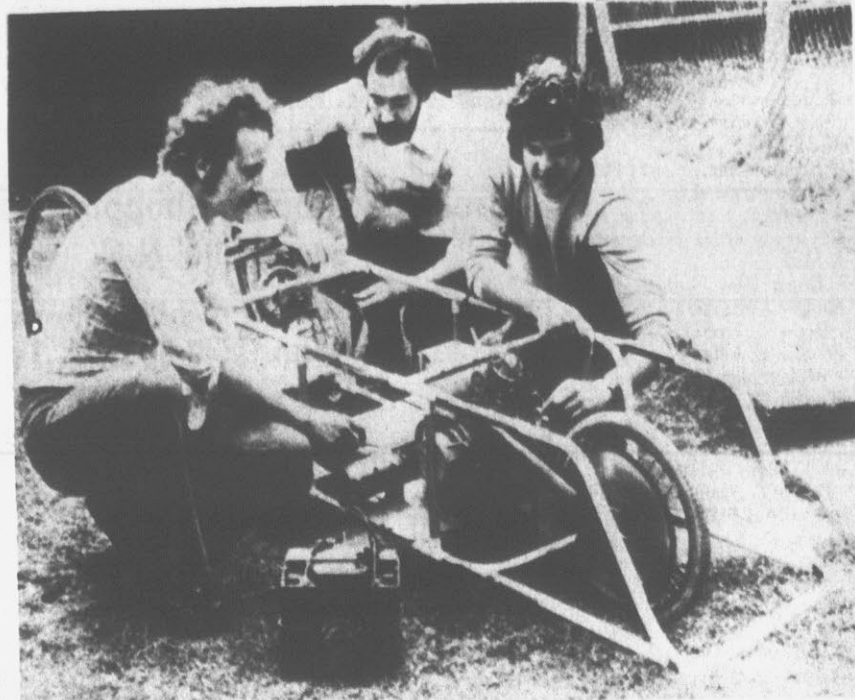

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., a supporter of the move to kill the proposed IDCA, called the reorganization "a half-hearted attempt to meet ill-defined goals," and said that it would only "mask a failure to solve basic problems behind a veil of illusory progress."

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., an opponent, said the reorganization will "make the current U.S. foreign aid program and other policies toward the developing world more effective, so that the American taxpayer gets more for the money (he) already spends."

Senators voting "nay" favored establishing the new foreign aid agency.

Helms voted "yea."

Morgan did not vote.

ECONOMY VEHICLE — Three telephone engineers from Ipswich, England, work on their economy vehicle. They are, left to right, Alan Smith, Chris Baldry and Philip Riches, and are working on the vehicle at Philip's home. The three-wheel car has a 50cc engine, a lawnmower starter and 20 meters of alloy tube. They hope to reach 26 miles per hour with it, and a return of around 1,000 miles to a gallon of gasoline. (AP Laserphoto)

Cheap Riding In A Van Pool

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Like most Tennessee Valley Authority employees, Kay Martin finds riding to work for a month with fellow workers in a van nearly as cheap as filling her car's gastank once.

Mrs. Martin, a secretary in TVA's community development office, has ridden a van to and from work for five years, leaving in her driveway the car her husband bought her as a Christmas present.

She says said her seat on the van for the 22 roundtrips to her office in Knoxville from her home 17 miles away in Strawberry Plains costs her $32.50 a month.

"If I drove to work and had to park my car, I probably would spend that much a week," she says. "I've got a Cougar and it costs me $27 just to fill it up."

She is among 5,000 TVA employees saving a total of 3½ million gallons of gasoline a year by riding to work on buses and in van pools instead of driving alone.

"We've got a tremendous demand for more but we've run out of vans," Stan Stokely, who administers the program, said Monday. "We've got 60 more ordered but the factories have a large backlog because everybody wants them now."

Stokely operates the largest van pool fleet in the nation: 440 vans and 60 special buses taking TVA employees to and from their jobs at 20 locations in the seven states the federal agency serves.

He said there was a recent swell of requests to join TVA's pool after the gasoline shortage developed and prices soared with the cutoff of oil from Iran.

But it was another shortage which launched TVA's program in 1973. Work had just begun on a headquarters building in Knoxville when employees raised the question: Where are we going to park when it's completed?

Not wanting to spend the millions needed to build parking spaces for its 4,200 workers here, TVA agreed to guarantee loans to their credit union for buying the 15-passenger vans. The Arab oil embargo several months later just happened to get the program the boost it needed.

TVA now estimates it saved at least $13 million in parking lots, garages and road improvements that would have been needed had the ride-sharing program not existed.

The number of TVA employees in Knoxville driving to work has dropped from 65 percent to 17 percent, Stokely said. And, nearly 28 percent of the 3,200 workers at TVA's power and purchasing headquarters are now in pools or on buses.

POSTAL SUPERVISORS — The House passed, 306 for and 94 against, a bill giving postal supervisors the right to arbitrate wages, fringes and other job issues with top Postal Service management. There are about 38,000 supervisors among 650,000 post office employees. The bill (HR 927) was sent to the Senate. Although the supervisors are classified as management personnel, organized labor is sympathetic toward the bill.

Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., a supporter, said the bill is

Lab Seeks Way To Use City Waste

By JOE MCKNIGHT
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The search is on in a laboratory here for a way to help the Chicagos and Tokyos of the world make economical use of their garbage.

If it succeeds, municipalities may burn waste matter to treat wastewater by boiling it. There is the added possibility of adapting the low-temperature steam for such purposes as heating municipal complexes.

Work is well along on a U. S. Department of Energy contract with Battelle Columbus Laboratories to use fluidized-bed combustion technology in developing an energy recovery system.

Research scientists William J. Huffman and Wayne E. Ballantyne say the process could provide a way for municipalities to dispose of wastes and sludge in an environmentally acceptable way while improving the quality of treated wastewater. Huffman hopes to have enough answers by next fall to determine the feasibility of the process.

"We can use garbage to heat wastewater to steam for treatment purposes," Ballantyne said. "The purpose is to generate low-temperature steam that doesn't kill all the microbe life."

The laboratory is using solid municipal waste that has been pressed into pellets. It burns the waste with sand suspended in a vertical stream of air. The hot sand is blown from a combustion chamber to be recirculated into an external boiler where it boils wastewater to produce steam at about 300 degrees.

The combustion chamber is being tested at temperatures of around 1,500 degrees with air currents of about 30 miles per hour to circulate the sand.

The fluidized-bed concept, developed in England 50 years or more ago, has become popular in recent years as a test facility to remove sulfur from coal and to convert coal to gases. This is the first time such a combustion system has been tried in waste disposal.

"Actually, the idea behind the process was first to find a market for recovered energy and then to identify a process that would fit the market's needs," Huffman said. "Many systems already exist for disposing of wastes and sludge while recovering energy, but marketing the recovered product can be difficult."

He said steam for wastewater treatment facilities appeared to be a possible market because cities have to dispose of wastes and sludge and have to run wastewater treatment plants.

Burning the waste reduces its volume by 20-fold, leaving a dark-red ash.

Huffman said little had been done to learn about disposing of the ash but noted it could be used for landfill and had been used successfully as bulk in the mix for making cinder blocks.

Huffman is beginning the second and final stage of the study, which will look at the economics of the system and its applications, the barriers to application and the environmental impact.

Spectators In Science Field

SPECTATOR SCIENCE
NEW YORK (AP) — "The only way anybody ever got to understand or like science was by experiencing it or watching somebody else do it," says film producer Denny Crimmins.

Crimmins has completed "Search for Solutions," a nine-part film series aimed at creating "a playing field for science, where people can sit on the sidelines and enjoy the game — practice science as a spectator sport."

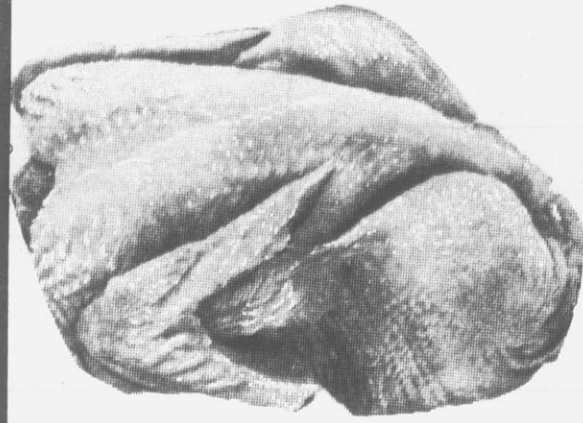

Laughing Mynah

Not For Thief

BEDFORDSHIRE, England (AP) — Rajah, a laughing mynah bird, was stolen recently from the local zoo but a few days later flew back.

Zookeeper Pippa Smith said the bird's loud laugh and whistles probably scared the bird-napper, noting "the thief must have either got fed up with him or realized he would be hard to sell."
