Consumer Prices Up Again During June

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Another big spurt in the cost of energy and housing pushed consumer prices up 1 percent in June as inflation continued to rage above a 13 percent annual rate, the government reported today.

Soaring price increases for gasoline and heating fuel and a slight rise in food prices kept the Labor Department's monthly inflation measure at 1 percent or higher for the fifth consecutive month.

Through the first half of the year, inflation has been running at a 13.2 percent annual rate. If it continues at that pace for the full year, 1979 will register the highest inflation since immediately after World War II.

Alfred E. Kahn, the president's chief anti-inflation adviser, told Congress that the monthly price increase, while slightly better than the May increase, "is obviously nothing to write home about."

Kahn, appearing before the Joint Economic Committee, noted that higher energy costs accounted for half of the 1 percent increase during June.

Were it not for the sharp energy increases, Kahn said, "We would be seeing clear deceleration of inflation. We would clearly be out of the double-digit range."

The inflation rate continued to take its toll on a typical worker's real spendable earnings, after deducting taxes and taking inflation into account, the Labor Department said.

Spendable earnings of a married worker with three dependents declined 0.8 percent in June, meaning that wages could not quite keep up with the rise in consumer prices during the month. For the 12 months ended in June, a worker's real spendable earnings declined 3.5 percent.

The Labor Department said gasoline prices continued to soar in June, jumping 5.6 percent after a 5 percent rise in May. Those prices have advanced at a 60.8 percent annual rate so far this year.

Similarly, fuel oil prices leaped 8.6 percent in June following a 5.3 percent rise in May. Through the first half of the year, fuel oil prices have been climbing at 70.6 percent annual rate.

The government's index of housing continued to rise steeply for a fifth straight month. Housing prices increased 1.5 percent during the month, home financing costs jumped 2.1 percent and maintenance and repairs rose 0.9 percent.

The good news for consumers was that food prices rose by a modest 0.2 percent during June, the smallest advance in 11 months. Clothing prices declined 0.1 percent and entertainment costs rose by just 0.1 percent, the smallest rise this year.

The overall 1 percent rise in consumer prices last month is down slightly from a 1.1 percent rise during each of the two preceding months.

The Consumer Price Index stood in June at 216.6, meaning that a marketbasket of goods and services that cost $100 in the base year of 1967 cost $216.60 last month.

The government said prices of grocery store foods declined 0.1 percent in June, primarily because of a 1.8 percent decline in the cost of meats, poultry, fish and eggs. Beef prices, which had shown sharp increases during the preceding eight months, fell 1.3 percent in June, as had been expected.

All of the price increases are adjusted to reflect seasonal variations in price patterns.

Carter Asks Public Back Profits Tax

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is telling the American people "your voice must be heard" if the Senate is to pass his windfall oil profits tax. Without it, he says, "we cannot reach our energy goals."

At a nationally broadcast prime-time news conference Wednesday night, Carter predicted "a massive struggle to gut the windfall profits tax bill" in the Senate. It already has passed the House.

It was Carter's first news conference in Washington since May 29 and he appeared forceful throughout. His upper lip twitched briefly, however, when he was asked if he had thought about taking himself out of the 1980 presidential race.

"I have considered all the options," he reported, "and my decision will be announced later on this year."

Carter had a snappier comeback when a reporter asked about a prediction by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., that the president's problems will force Carter out of the race and hand the Democratic nomination to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

"Three or four years ago I was running for president against Sen. Jackson," Carter recalled. "At that time he predicted he would be the next president, starting in 1977. His judgment was not very good then. And now I am ready for the next question."

During the half-hour session in the White House East Room, Carter defended last week's Cabinet shake-up, declaring, "I have no apology to make for it."

Saying that some have thought he acted too rapidly, he said he felt a need to "create a new team to work with me" and "I had the choice of dragging it out or getting it over, in effect, in 48 hours."

As for criticism of his decision to name longtime political aide Hamilton Jordan to be White House chief of staff, Carter said Jordan will do a "superb job" in an assignment he indicated will have strict limits.

"He will not be chief of the Cabinet," Carter said pointedly. "I will be chief of the Cabinet. He will not be the chief of the Congress. The Congress is an independent body.... Hamilton Jordan will be chief of the White House staff."

Carter's appeal for public support for the windfall profits tax came a few hours after a major setback in the House for part of his energy program.

The House abruptly halted debate on legislation giving him standby authority to ration gasoline after unexpected adoption of an amendment sharply limiting his flexibility.

Carter said the House action "illustrates the timidity of the Congress in dealing with a sensitive political issue."

"I need your help," he said. "I need the help of the people of America."

In an opening statement, the president pointed to proposed amendments that could slash revenues from his oil excise tax by $55 billion in the next decade, denying him the money to launch a $142 billion energy program centering on a search for alternatives to petroleum.

"This is a democracy," he said. "Your voice can be heard. Your voice must be heard.... Please speak to the Congress of the United States and especially to the United States Senate, which still has the responsibility to act."

Two Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee, which is now studying the windfall profits bill, were not impressed by Carter's plea.

"We want to work with the president, but we're not going to be intimidated," said Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas. And Sen. William Roth of Delaware, alluding to Carter's meeting Tuesday with the committee, said that then, "he was offering us the olive branch." But the news conference remarks, Roth said, made the president seem "more like a candidate."

$124.30 Day For Farmville

FARMVILLE — On the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday, sales consisted of mostly primings and lug grades. Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade Sales Supervisor Louis Williams said.

Volume of cutters showed an increase, he said. Nondescript grades accounted for a small portion of sales. Only a few sheets of leaf grades have appeared so far, he said. Grade for grade, prices continued about the same as Tuesday's, with the exception of less desirable grades, which showed a decline. The more desirable grades were stronger than on the previous day.

The market sold 389,502 pounds for $484,131, averaging $124.30. During the first two days of sales, the market has sold 777,912 pounds for $124.94. Daily averages continue slightly ahead of last year, Williams said.

Deadly Encounter

WRECK KILLS TWO — A 4:50 a.m. accident on NC 11 near Ayden claimed the lives of two Kinston men. Trooper Mark Johnson identified the men as J. E. Wood, of Rt. 4, Kinston, driver of the truck, and a passenger, William Ray King, of Greenmead Drive, Kinston. Johnson said the Wood truck plowed into the rear of a tractor-trailer truck parked along side N.C. 11. The driver of the tractor-trailer truck was identified as Thomas Earl Williams, who was asleep in the cab at the time of the accident. Johnson said Williams had pulled off the road, and had left his parking lights on. The force of the impact knocked the tractor-trailer truck about five feet, nearly cutting the top off the small truck. According to Pitt County Medical Examiner L. S. Harris, both men apparently died instantly. Investigation into the accident is continuing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Planning-Zoning Body Proposes Annexation

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission voted last night to recommend to the City Council that a petition be approved for the annexation of some 46 acres on the southern fringe of the city limits.

The commission gave its unanimous endorsement of the petition by J. H. Blount Jr. and F. L. Blount III to have Section II of Pinewood Forest development annexed into the city.

The property, staff planner Skip Browder pointed out, is located south of Lyndale Subdivision and east of Section I of Pinewood Forest. The acreage involved in the petition is contiguous to the city limits.

Browder reported that an annexation study has been completed and the city staff found very few concerns or objections regarding the property as a possible addition to the city land area.

Utilities have been installed, the planner said, and no problems were cited by the engineering or planning departments of the city.

Browder said that an area designated for recreational use in the development is needed and would involve some two acres or four lots. The Recreation Commission concurs in the need for the tract.

At full development, he noted that 77 single family homes are projected and the section would add an estimated $3,650,000 to the city's tax base.

He added that the area meets all of the annexation criteria.

In other business on the joint agenda, commissioners voted to defer action on the revised final plat of Section I of Oakgrove Estates, located on State Road 1417, until the Recreation Commission has been consulted on the possibility of purchasing two lots in the development for recreational use.

It was explained that initially it was proposed that two lots in the development be designated for possible recreational usage. Bobby Roberson, the city's director of planning, pointed out, however, that options on the two lots have expired.

Roberson recommended that the planning board approve the plat subject to the Recreation Commission deciding whether to purchase the lots.

Commissioner William Gibbs said that some five months ago the question of recreational areas in Greenfield Terrace came up and plans then called for Greenfield Terrace residents to use the Oakgrove Estates recreational site.

Gibbs said that he would like for the Recreation Commission to give some indication as to whether it has interest in the designated lots before any action is taken on the final plat. Gibbs said the decision will have an impact on the Greenfield Terrace section.

Browder recalled that the Oakgrove land designated for possible recreational use was one of five areas set aside by the recreation board several years ago as sections in need of playground or park developments. Options have not been exercised on the designated parcels in Oakgrove, he said.

A spokesman for the developers of Oakgrove noted that other lots in the subdivision have been sold and the owner is interested in marketing the two remaining lots, whether they be to the Recreation Commission or another purchaser.

The Recreation Commission will be consulted regarding the Oakgrove property.

Joint board commissioners also endorsed the long range maintenance schedule of

UNDERAGED ATTENDANCE

I am disturbed to know that some people who work at theaters are allowing underaged children to attend R- and X-rated movies. Parents have the right to expect others to at least uphold these already-too-low standards. Is there a police officer or juvenile officer who checks theaters? If so, how often? Mrs. M. H.

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said that checks of theaters to see if rating standards are being complied with are made at times. He suggested that anyone having complaints call the police department. It's the theater managers' duty to check ages, he said, so policing is not done routinely, but can be done upon request.

CONSUMER PROTECTION MEASURE

The N. C. General Assembly has enacted a consumer protection measure, effective, July 1, that makes it easier to prosecute automobile dealers who roll back odometers. In the past, technical rules have made district attorneys wary about bringing cases, N. C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said. Now, if the odometer has been changed, it is easier to prove who is responsible.

Leaf Prices Steady Here

Prices remained steady on the Greenville Tobacco Market yesterday as local warehouses completed the second day of the new season with another million dollar sales total.

While the overall market average dropped from Tuesday's record-breaking opening day figure of $125.73 per hundred pounds, Greenville still recorded a respectable $123.95 per hundred mark.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade here, said that the buying companies purchased some "good quality cutters" Wednesday for $1.53 per pound and "good clean lugs" for $1.48 per pound. Top practical price paid here on the second day was $1.45 per pound, he added.

Bryan pointed out that a few more non-descript offerings showed up on the warehouse floors yesterday and Stabilization receipts were up to 12.97 percent of total sales.

The market sold 877,371 pounds for $1,087,456 in recording the $123.95 average. The second day totals brought the season figures to 1,747,593 pounds sold for $2,181,546, an average of $124.83 per hundred pounds.

Greenville was one of 11 Eastern Belt markets holding sales on Wednesday.

averaged $127.89 per hundred pounds Wednesday. The belt average, which includes South Carolina markets, was $133.46, up $1.68 from Tuesday.

Warehouses opened for the first time Wednesday in the Eastern Belt markets of Ahoskie, Tarboro and Washington and the Sandhills markets of Sanford and Carthage.

Ahoskie warehouseman Herbert Jenkins Jr. said he was not pleased with prices.

"We're not happy with the way it opened, to tell you the truth," he said. "The farmers aren't, either."

Jenkins said the leaf did not bring the prices farmers had hoped for. He said some farmers refused to sell.

Eastern Belt's Price Average Slightly Higher

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Average flue-cured tobacco prices on North Carolina Eastern Belt markets rose slightly higher than opening-day levels Wednesday but dipped on the three Sandhills markets where sales were held.

An unofficial average price of $124.32 per hundred pounds, 83 cents above opening day, was reported on 11 Eastern Belt markets that held sales. Last year, the belt opened with an average of $119.91 per hundred pounds.

On Sandhills markets in the Middle Belt, an average price of $120.54 was reported Wednesday, $1.15 below the average recorded Tuesday after two markets opened.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Okay, Hollywood. Just try to scare me half to death.

And give it your best shot. For the last couple of years you've made nothing but promises. "You'll never go to the beach again!" "A nurse will be in attendance to revive you." "In outer space, no one can hear you scream."

Heaven knows you've tried! You've paraded across the screen giant spiders, frogs, snakes, and flies. Killer bees, rats, ants and sharks.

You've popped up monsters out of the deep, big footprints in the snow and sweet little English children with weird eyes.

When that didn't work, you tried to terrorize me with towering infernos of fire, airplane disasters and Shelley Winters in a wet suit.

Now you're onto space objects falling to the earth, cloning, nuclear waste turning humans into mutations, giant rabbits and vampires with a sense of humor.

I don't scare easily. What kind of a movie would it take to really throw me into shock? Maybe one of the following teasers:

Jaws III: A teenage boy comes home ravenous and terrorizes his mother who has a refrigerator full of food for her first dinner party in seven years.

Mother Moth: A spine-chilling tale of a woman who discovers a pregnant moth in her garment bag storing the only fur she will ever own.

Rosemary's Crazies: The story of a town that has a sadistic school board that decides to start school two weeks later in the fall than originally planned.

The Leftover That Refused to Die: A bizarre story of a leftover piece of liver that refuses to die after being bludgeoned, threatened and all life systems have been pulled.

Omen III: A child called Damian vacations with his parents and kicks the back of the seat for 262 miles while smiling.

The one that really would strike terror into the hearts of women everywhere is The Bleach Syndrome, where a hairdresser would be done in, taking the formula for all her "standings" color with her.

Doesn't that make your flesh crawl?

Author Probes Their Impact

By JOY STILLEY

AP Newsfeatures Writer NEW YORK (AP) — The steadily growing number of wives who work is changing life in America, affecting not just women but also men, the family, and the business world itself, says writer and lecturer Caroline Bird.

Not only are more than half of married women in the work force, but 45 percent of mothers of preschool children are working, "and that's an impressive statistic," adds Miss Bird, whose most recent book, "The Two-Paycheck Marriage," examines its impact on individuals and on society as a whole.

"These young mothers are apt to be college educated, and education is a better prediction of whether a wife will work than the presence of small children," the author explained in an interview.

It isn't that the women's movement has made wives discontented with being home, she says, but rather that the jobs are there — especially jobs in the area of health, education and welfare, which used to be performed by mothers at home and which have gradually become outside jobs.

"Women did at home what's now done by restaurants, hotels, hospitals, social agencies, the garment industry, laundries," Miss Bird enumerates. "The exodus from home to paid employment has been going on for 150 years, and there's no reason why it won't continue to go on."

"Today's volunteer work is always the paid employment of the future," says Miss Bird, who claims the women's movement is the consequence of the increase in the employment of women, not the cause of it.

"Women go to work earlier, stay longer, come back sooner after their children are born. An increasing number of women see the need for the goals of the women's rights movement — equality in the workplace — where they didn't before."

"The women's movement is important only because it articulates what women who now work and expect to work all their lives feel," she says.

Miss Bird, who has written such previous best sellers as "The Invisible Scar" about the Depression and "Born Female," researched her current book for several years, drawing on material that included matching questionnaires filled out by husbands and wives, interviews, and discussions following her college lectures.

College, she says, has sex equality built into it. With domestic life declining, men are learning to share chores in coed housekeeping situations.

"They get married and both get jobs and they more or less perpetuate this lifestyle," she says.

Miss Bird considers one of the major benefits of so many wives working is that it gives women options — to work or stay home.

"Sheer quantity makes it impossible for each wife who works to think of herself as an exception," she points out. "She has a practical choice. Some react with a whoop and a holler, think it's grand; some are afraid of choice."

"And it gives the husband and wife the opportunity to switch roles; people can change over the course of their marriage," she says.

It gives men options too, but it also confuses them, she adds. Though they may believe in equality, they're deprived of male pride in being the breadwinner.

"Women have been given through the women's movement a rhetoric, being told this is how you should feel, so they can support each other. Men don't have a male support group."

The impact on the family, Miss Bird says, means fewer and later children, children wanted for themselves rather than because having them is expected. And better marriages because independent women won't have to stay in disastrous ones.

As for children, "it's almost impossible to single out any impact of employment of the mother on the children."

Miss Bird sees changes ahead for the business world, which she thinks will have to contend with employees different than in the past: ones who can quit more easily.

"Business organizations have to rearrange work — more part-time, more flexitime, for men as well as women," she asserts.

Volunteer Cares And Is Sharing

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was raised to believe that charity begins at home, so I want to ask you what you think about a lady who spends three whole days a week as a volunteer in a nursing home for old people.

She says they need the love and attention she can give them. Well, they have a staff paid to care for those old people. And their families are supposed to give them love. So where does a volunteer who is a stranger fit in?

This lady has a retired husband and a 40-year-old handicapped daughter, and I'm sure they need her at home. What do you think?

T.B. FROM KY.

DEAR T.B.: I think anyone who works as a volunteer three days a week can't be all bad. Nursing homes need volunteers to keep the residents in touch with the outside world and make them feel that they are still a part of the community.

Staffs often are overburdened and some families aren't able to visit often. And, as for the retired husband and handicapped daughter, don't assume that they are being neglected. Chances are they manage nicely without her, and they all appreciate time away from each other.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married 23 years and have two sons, 20 and 18.

The problem in this: My husband and I were married (briefly) to others before we met each other. Both marriages ended in divorce. There were no children involved. We have never told our sons about our previous marriages, but now I have the feeling that we should tell them. My husband disagrees. He says, "It's all in the past and it's best to let sleeping dogs lie."

What do you say?

I'VE GOT A SECRET

DEAR SECRET: I say sleeping dogs have been known to awaken at the most unexpected time to set up a disturbing howl. Tell the boys.

CONFIDENTIAL TO S.B. IN B. H.: Heed the wise advice of Joseph Zabara, the 13th century Spanish Hebrew physician and poet who wrote:

New Crane?

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Only weeks after the State Ports Authority paid more than half a million dollars to move the Morehead City port's container crane to Wilmington, Gov. Jim Hunt says Morehead City soon may need another crane.

State officials say the new crane talk is not designed to heal political wounds in Carteret County. They contend that a new crane would be good business.

The crane issue has been a controversial one in Morehead City, and political observers have said it is a potential liability in Hunt's campaign for reelection next year.

Hunt, who addressed the ports authority board in Wilmington Tuesday, said afterward that he expected container operations at Morehead City to require another crane eventually.

"Obviously, when we get a sufficient volume of business there, we're going to put another crane in," Hunt said. "We're going to keep projecting and when the figures are right, we'll order it so we'll have it ready."

Other state officials said that if Trans Freight Lines, a container-shipping company at Morehead City, continues to expand a new crane could become a necessity in the early 1980s.

Thrill Of Oil Discovery Cooled

In the 20th Century nothing has been quite exciting to a given area than the cry of "oil". As the gushers were brought in there was an assurance of riches for property owners and jobs for those who didn't own land.

To this day North Carolina has never shared in the oil bonanza . . . but always there has been a belief by some that possibly vast oil supplies lay in our state's coastal areas.

The prospect is strong enough so that seven major oil exploration companies have picked sites off the coast for oil and gas searches.

Gov. Hunt's office says over 350 tracts are included on the outer continental shelf.

Unfortunately as oil exploration has moved into coastal waters, the thrill of oil discovery is not what it once was. In these times the prospects of off shore oil wells raises the spectre of oil spills and slicks floating in to the beach areas.

In an energy pinched nation, there is little hope that, if oil is discovered, it won't be pumped out to fuel our automobiles and power plants. But so far no one has found any significant quantities of oil and maybe there just isn't any out there.

Tyrants Fear The 'Left' More Today

During those months of fighting in the Nicaraguan revolution observers had reason to fear a communist regime would eventually take over the reins of government. It hasn't happened yet, but remains a factor nobody can rule out in the future.

Considering the kind of government Nicaraguans shared under Anastasio Somoza the people might well welcome anything as an improvement.

We find it vaguely disturbing that when revolutionaries of today unseat a tyrant it is elements of the "left" who are in the forefront of conspiracy and fighting. Republicanism, as distinguished from "democracy" is rarely a prime mover of violent revolt these days.

Republican philosophy is not as well-known now as it was, say 200 years ago. Even among Americans there is confusion as to the significant difference between the terms "republicanism" and "democracy."

Time was, kings, emperors and dukes dreaded emergence of republican thinking among their people. Somehow the revolutionary fervor, the idealism and hope engendered by republican philosophers and activists is largely somnolent today.

Rarely New To Censor

By NANCY KERCHEVAL
BALTIMORE (AP) — Just when Mary Avara thinks she's seen it all, some porno king comes up with an imaginative mingling of naked arms and legs and Maryland's "X-rated grandmother" gasps: "Oh my gosh, it's a new way."

For 19 years, Mrs. Avara, 69, has spent several hours a day, five days a week in a darkened room deciding the fate of all movies — from Disney to "Deep Throat" — shown in Maryland, the last state in the nation to have a movie censor board. Her "X-rated" nickname came courtesy of nine grandchildren.

In the past fiscal year, the three-member Maryland State Board of Censors viewed 454 movies, asking deletions in 25 and rejecting 20 others.

"We do have people who like this garbage, but I say let these sickies go down on The Block (Baltimore's adult sex-show area) and watch them," said Mrs. Avara, who normally watches four movies a day.

Some of the flicks are easy to censor. "There are some positions in which they have sex today that I don't know how to word it. I never saw positions like that," she said.

"These movies are degrading to women to no end. There is no respect and no morals. They're one big peep show."

One of the most celebrated cases in recent years was the board's rejection of "Snuff," a South American movie that was thought by some to show the actual mutilation of a young woman. Those who previewed the movie in 1976 had some problems convincing themselves it was simulated.

The distributor went to court to overturn the board's decision but ultimately failed. That's not always the case. Occasionally, the board is overruled by a judge who decides a movie doesn't fall within the U.S. Supreme Court's guidelines for obscenity.

The high court's vague "community standards" decision, in effect, says material is obscene if the average person finds it appeals to the prurient interest and is without serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value.

J.L. Taylor, law enforcement officer of the Pitt County ABC Board, today announced the capture of a 100-gallon illicit steam plant in Martin County by ABC officers of Pitt and the neighboring county.

Taylor said 600 gallons of beer were confiscated and that the still was destroyed with dynamite. Although not in operation, the plant was still warm, according to officers.

Assisting Taylor in the capture were J.M. Ward and Herbert Harris of Pitt County and officers Roebuck and Peele of Martin County.

J.T. Menzie, assistant major adjutant general of the headquarters of the Fourth Corps area of the U.S. Army at Atlanta, Ga., today said Corporal Stonewall Jackson, who has been in charge of the recruiting station here, has been made duty sergeant.

Remediation Help Seen

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — North Carolina's high school competency test, and similar tests in other states, continue to take their knocks.

Too easy, say some; too hard, say others. Culturally biased, some critics argue. Too expensive, especially the remedial program for those who fail, say some. A Florida court has found the test in that state an unacceptable barrier to high school graduation for minority youngsters.

Through it all, Gov. Jim Hunt stands firm: the competency test, and the all-student testing in lower grades, are the "greatest single thing to improve education in North Carolina in many decades."

Hunt is the chief author of the testing program, and fought hard to win legislative endorsement despite opposition from the professional educators and from minority organizations.

By testing the students, and responding in a positive way to information produced by the tests, North Carolina is getting a fair measure of how students are doing in the public schools, Hunt believes. This allows concrete goals for improvement to be set, and the program is demonstrating that problems can be remediated.

Remedies?

Remediation is one sore point just now. The failure rate for 81,322 high school juniors who took the competency test last fall was about 15 percent. In May, following intensive remedial work costing more than $8 million, about half those who failed were able to pass. That leaves some 6,688 students still to receive more remedial attention and to take the test twice more in hopes of passing so they can graduate.

The money, broken down, amounts to more per student for remedial work than the regular per capita spending in the schools, causing some to wonder if there is a point at which we should throw up our hands and admit defeat with some students.

"We can never throw up our hands," Hunt responds to that suggestion. "Our goal must be to have every student able to read . . . able to become a good citizen and a good employee."

Additionally, the remedial work is worthwhile whether the student passes or not. "The student may have gotten right to the point of passing . . . and may pass the test in the future. And the work helps them they pass or not," Hunt says.

BILL
NOBLITT

Remediation is expensive, the governor concedes, but so is failure to teach the students the basics. Besides, some critics look at the high school competency test in isolation, not taking into account the all-student testing in elementary and middle grades.

"These testing programs earlier in school will help to find specific strengths and weaknesses of the students and the schools and help correct them so that we have greater performance all the way through the system,"

Hunt feels.

Improved

There are signs, already, that this is happening. Lower grade test scores show students now performing above national average, while the older, middle grade students who did not benefit from intensive reading efforts and the kindergarten program continue to perform worse. The early-grade successes will track on up through the system in coming years.

As this occurs, the dollars spent for remediation can be redirected to assist younger students whose weaknesses are revealed by the testing program. Already documented is the fact that poor black children are not performing well, even in the lower grades. Remediation at an earlier age, say the specialists, holds more promise for improvement.

But the nagging question remains for some critics of whether the test for high school graduation is so easy that it really means little in terms of the student's ability to function in the real world.

Gas-Rationing Setback

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — After an unexpected setback, House leaders are planning another vote next week to give the president standby authority to ration gasoline.

Debate on the legislation was abruptly halted Wednesday after the House approved, 232 to 187, a Republican-sponsored amendment sharply limiting the president's flexibility to impose rationing.

It was the second blow the House has dealt President Carter's request for standby rationing authority this year. In May, the House turned down a similar rationing plan entirely.

The proposal before the House would allow either the House or the Senate to block rationing any time the president tried to impose it — a safeguard Carter says he can live with.

But the amendment adopted Wednesday would also give Congress "one-house veto" power to reject details of the plan in advance. The amendment was by Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman, R-N.Y.

Supporting the proposal were 79 Democrats and 153 Republicans.

Claiming this provision would make it extremely difficult for the president to ever order rationing, the bill's sponsors had it removed from the House floor while they tried to figure out what to do next.

And Carter, responding to the latest development, criticized Congress during his broadcast news conference Wednesday night for putting new "restraints" in the way of a standby rationing plan.

He renewed his appeal that Congress give him rationing authority before leaving town for its month-long August recess.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill tentatively scheduled debate to resume on the bill next Tuesday.

Wednesday's amendment vote clearly caught Democratic leaders by surprise. Sponsors of the bill immediately pronounced the outcome a fluke, blaming confusion on the floor, "lateness of the hour," and a general skittishness among members on the rationing issue.

But Republicans, buoyed by their unexpected victory, said they're not so sure the Democrats can reverse Wednesday's vote and denied that members misunderstood the nature of the amendment.

Gilman himself said he didn't know what all the excitement was about. He said his amendment was just

Strength For Today

STRIVING FOR THE ULTIMATE

The Biblical phrase, "Be ye perfect", has caused questioning and frustration on the part of many Christians. Many years ago the Spanish mystic Miguel de Unamuno offered an answer which may be helpful:

"Be ye perfect even as your Father in heaven is perfect is a terrible precept because for us the infinite perfection of the Father is unattainable. But unless a person aspires to the impossible, the possible that he achieves will be scarcely worth the trouble of achieving. It behooves us to aspire to the impossible, to the absolute and infinite perfection, and to say to the Father, "Father, I cannot — help Thou my impotence." And He, acting in us, will achieve it for us."

Our Lord loved to use the figure of the seed and the leaven — the little which becomes much because of its willingness to grow. Christ told us to be perfect, not because we ever can be, but because we shall never achieve anything unless we strive for the ultimate.

Goodbye To The Lollipop

WASHINGTON — Carol Tucker Foreman, the dragon lady of the Department of Agriculture, is once more hot on the gumdrop trail. She is breathing fire upon the jelly bean, the licorice stick, the cherry ball. Farewell the lollipop! Big Sister rides again.

Under authority foolishly delegated to her by the Congress, Mrs. Foreman is proposing anew to restrict the sale of foods of "minimal nutritional value" in the 92,000 public schools that participate in the federal school lunch and breakfast programs. Her pending regulation would prohibit the sale of these competitive items until after the last school lunch period.

Mrs. Foreman, for the record, is assistant secretary of Food and Consumer Services. A 100 percent certified, card-carrying, bottled-in-bond Democratic liberal, she formerly headed the Consumer Federation of America. Her role in life, as she perceives it, is to protect the children of America from the pleasures of childhood. She will lead her flock along the paths of nutritional righteousness, impressing upon them at every step of the way the positive glories of spinach.

Aaargh! How do we get this way? This is how we get this way: The federally subsidized school lunch program gets entrenched in the hand-out way of life to which our public schools have become accustomed. One day it is discovered that numerous little children, not altogether convinced of the glories of spinach, are buying an occasional Mooney-Gooney-Wooney bar from a vending machine. This discovery confounds and dismays the cafeteria managers, school principals and the League of Virtuous Mamas. They round up a gaggle of pressure groups, and behold!

An obliging Congress, having nothing better to do, adopts an amendment to the School Lunch Act proclaiming that Mrs. Foreman shall prescribe such regulations as she may deem necessary to regulate the service of food "in competition with this act." We may marvel, in passing, at the consistency of a government that whoops it up for competition in the private sector but demands a monopoly on its spinach. Let it go.

Mrs. Foreman, willing as always, trotted forth one proposed regulation in April of 1978. Subsequently this one was withdrawn, and a slightly modified rule was publicized instead. Upward of 4,000 comments came in, all but 20 percent of them favorable. Roughly 1,300 earnest followers of the Goody Two-Shoes School of Wet Blanket Bureaucracy urged restrictions even more sweeping than those Mrs. Foreman had proposed.

One thing led to another.

Other Reasons For No Saving

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — It was a lack of confidence, said President Carter after returning from Camp David July 15, that made Americans unwilling to save for the future.

That, of course, is an opinion. Other reasons, only peripherally related to confidence, can be found without much searching:

—With personal income declining, many people have nothing to save. Through June, real personal income rose in only one month of 1979. Since December, the real decline has been 1.5 percent.

—Increased unemployment compensation and insurance programs have removed some of the urgency to save. "Why save when we have Social Security and medical insurance?" is a typical refrain.

—It doesn't pay to save. A 5.5 percent return on savings accounts translates into a 5.5 percent loss if inflation averages 11 percent, as it might this year. In such circumstances it pays to spend, not save.

There is another reason too: The government that President Carter administers punishes those who save. It taxes every cent of interest credited to a passbook; it taxes as a gain what really is a loss.

All this has savings institutions in an uproar, and some members of Congress, too. About 200 senators and representatives have sponsored or cosponsored remedial bills.

At a minimum, members of the thrift industry expect they'll be given equality with the stock market, where investors, despite other tax problems, are granted a tax exemption on the first $100 of dividends.

But the saver's dispute with government goes far beyond obtaining a correction of what they perceive as injustices. If savings are desirable, say representatives of the savings industry, then show us.

"Showing us" means incentives similar to those in other nations. It is no accident, they say, that U.S. savings "have fallen below that of all other people in the Western world," as the president said. They say there is a reason: the absence of incentives.

In much of the Western world public policies are used to encourage savings, mainly in the interest of providing housing.

In the United States, total savings at savings and loan associations, whose role is to funnel money to housing, amount to more than $440 billion, an enormous figure except when matched against incomes.

U.S. savings as a percentage of disposable income averaged 5.2 percent in the first quarter of 1979, and the rate was falling. In Canada, Britain, West Germany, France and Japan the ratios range from 10 to 20.

Considering the differences in tax policies and incentives between the United States and other nations of the Western world, it hardly seems that the low U.S. savings rate is a result only of lost confidence.

To make that claim, even if you are the president of the United States, is to ignore some powerful evidence.

LIFT-OFF — New Secretary of the Air Force Hans M. Mark and new Under Secretary Antonia Handler Chayes describe the flight of some of the Air Force's new craft at the Pentagon Wednesday. Both will be sworn in today by Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

Hepatitis Outbreak Said Linked To Drug Usage

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Although investigators from the Center for Disease Control have linked the use of illicit drugs to the hepatitis outbreak that has claimed four lives, they are still trying to determine why the victims failed to survive.

The four-member team sent to New Bern from the CDC office in Atlanta has determined the victims "probably" contracted serum hepatitis, which commonly is spread through the use of dirty needles.

But they have been unable to find what they believe was a common agent, such as a toxic chemical that may be compounding the effect of the hepatitis. Serum hepatitis generally does not result in death, said Dr. Donald Francis, one of the investigators.

Francis said Wednesday the hepatitis probably was spread through the exchange of hypo-dermic needles. He said the persons who contracted the disease were in two separate groups of friends, one in New Bern and the other in the surrounding area.

He does not believe heroin was used by the victims, all of whom were 21 or younger. Investigators think the victims were shooting cocaine or MDA, a hallucinogen.

"It looks like that social, party-type drug scene is associated with this," said Francis. "This is a high-class drug community — snorting, shooting cocaine, uppers, downers."

The State Bureau of Investigation, which normally handles criminal matters, was brought into the case at the request of Craven County Sheriff C.W. Bland. But Francis said the CDC team has declined to accept the aid of law enforcement authorities in its medical investigation.

Kilpatrick Col. ...

Mrs. Foreman summoned nutritionists and nutrition experts. Scientists devised tests for nutrient density. Agriculture officials sat around for hours, for days, for weeks, contemplating sensible alternatives to the "nutrient analysis approach." One by one the sensible alternatives were discarded. On July 6 the new rule was proclaimed.

So here we are. On or about January 1, it will be outer darkness for the jelly bean. Until after the last lunch period, no competitive food may be sold in a public school unless it contains at least 5 percent of the Recommended Daily Allowance of each of eight vitamins and minerals.

The ban falls upon snow cones. Remember snow cones? The ban falls upon chewing gum, sour balls, fruit balls, candy sticks and lollipops. No more jelly beans, gumdrops, or fruit-flavored slices. It is Pearl Harbor for the Mooney-Gooey-Woody bar. Spun candy, candy-coated popcorn, licorice sticks — gone, all of them, condemned to lock and key until after 2 o'clock.

I do not question the good intentions of the sponsors of this preposterous regulation. I do challenge their abuse of the powers of government in a free society. Mrs. Foreman and her sisters are concerned about "the nutritional integrity" of the school lunch program. Well, what about the integrity of traditional parental authority?

It is no cotton-picking business of Mrs. Foreman what my grandchildren eat in the public schools of Rapahannock County, Va. It is purely the business of their parents. If my 6-year-old grandson wants to invest a nickel in the unadulterated joy of a licorice stick, damned if I will admonish him to eat his spinach instead. Leave us alone. Big Sister! Leave us alone!

Raum Col....

intended to give Congress greater say in the kind of rationing plan that would be developed.

The proposal before the House would have repealed part of a 1975 law that now gives Congress two votes on any rationing bill — when it's proposed and when it's invoked.

Administration and congressional leaders have called that two-step system troublesome and unwieldy and have said it contributed to May's defeat of Carter's first plan.

The Gilman amendment puts back into the law the same kind of two-step process the bill itself sought to remove. With the amendment, "the bill is worse than existing law," said White House lobbyist Bill Cable after Wednesday's vote.

President Planning To Diversify Interviews

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reporters who routinely cover Jimmy Carter have been hearing, second-and third-hand, that the president is critical of them in private conversations.

They also noticed that some out-of-town journalists were maneuvered into coveted up-front seats at the president's Wednesday night news conference.

So one reporter finally asked: "What bugs you about the Washington press corps?"

"I have nothing against the White House press corps, nor the Washington press," replied Carter at the news conference.

But the president went on to say he had decided that he will no longer hold two news conferences a month solely with White House reporters. Instead, he will hold more of the interviews in other parts of the country.

He said reporters based here will accompany him on his trips and he will respond to their questions.

"But I think it is better for me not to have all the questions focused on me by a group that is almost exclusively oriented within Washington as a prime place of their residence and interest," he said, "and I would like to let my voice be heard and felt and the questions be heard by me and felt from various places in the country."

Cities he mentioned as spots where he may hold news conferences are Louisville, Ky.; Miami; Bangor, Maine; San Francisco; and Des Moines, Iowa.

HOLDING REVIVAL

The Church of God of Prophecy will hold revival services nightly beginning July 29 through August 3. The Rev. Jack Kwett of Ramseur will preach the sermons.

Carter said his decision to hold press conferences outside the nation's capital was no "reflection on the White House press corps."

Fish Freed From Bucket

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Two fish, rescued after being adrift in the Atlantic Ocean in a small prison for perhaps a year, have found a home at the North Carolina Marine Resources Center.

Hilda Livingstone, education coordinator at the center near Manteo on Roanoke Island, said Wednesday the fish were found in a water-filled five-gallon bucket with the top sealed and only a 1½ inch opening.

The bucket was found washed up on the beach two weeks ago by Nellie Myrtle Pridgen of Nags Head.

"I guess they swam in when they were about 1 inch long," said Ms. Livingstone. "When they're that size they are seeking protection."

"They probably found it a pretty good home, and were able to feed on debris that washed in. But they just grew too big," she added.

The fish had grown in size to about 6 inches long.

They were identified as a pilot fish and a barrel fish, both trash fish that live in deep water in the Gulf Stream south of the North Carolina coast, she said.

The fish usually migrate to an area off the Outer Banks every August, and researchers say they may have been trapped since then.

named said about 30 "guests" from outside Washington were given special credentials for Wednesday's question-and-answer session.

Three of the visitors were placed in the front row of the East Room, which makes it easier for the president to call on them. But it was apparently for naught; none was called on by Carter.

One woman not normally associated with journalism did get a question in. She is Evelyn Y. Davies, best known for her appearances and probing questions at various corporate stockholders meetings.

Previous presidents have allowed outsiders to sit in on their news conferences but usually they were seated in the back where it is more difficult to catch the president's eye and be recognized.

Tulips Do Not Bloom In Space

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet cosmonauts orbiting the earth in the Salyut 6 space station are experimenting to find out why tulips won't flower in the weightlessness of space, Izvestia reported.

Tests have shown that when grown in orbit under zero-gravity conditions, "plants develop well only to a certain stage. Thus, tulips produced nearly 20-inch shoots, but the buds refused to open," the government newspaper said.

It said the cosmonauts are trying to compensate for weightlessness by growing the bulbs in a centrifuge designed to simulate the earth's gravity. Izvestia said the experiment was of "tremendous importance."

Solar Energy Applied To Pig-Raising Facility

CATCHING SOME RAYS — The 51 solar panel collectors on the roof of Don and Ann Wilcox's self-contained feeder pig operation will help provide approximately two-thirds of the building's heating needs during the year. Pork producers from across eastern North Carolina gathered Wednesday to view the facility and to hear about the benefits and costs of installing solar heating in an agricultural environment. (Reflector photo by Rebecca Buffaloe)

By REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer
GARDNERSVILLE — With the rising costs of energy, Don and Ann Wilcox decided to harness the sun's energy for heating purposes. However, the heating's not for their house, it's for their self-contained feeder pig production facility, located outside of Gardnersville on State Road 1725.

The solar heating will be used primarily in the farrowing and nursery areas, where warm temperatures are needed the most. Their new operation, dubbed the "Pig Palace" by Nutrena Feeds, is housing 42 sows, with hopefully 8.8 pigs to be marketed per litter.

Wednesday, Nutrena Feeds, a division of Cargill Company, Slade and Harrell Feed of New Bern, and Jensen Solar Inc. of Goldsboro hosted a dinner and demonstration tour of the Wilcox operation. Approximately 50 persons, many of them hog producers, came to a local restaurant to hear about the benefits of solar heating used in an agricultural environment.

Jack Jensen, the eastern

North Carolina representative for Nutrena Feeds, explained to the producers that the company was interested in promoting the new concept as part of keeping in the forefront of new developments in the swine industry. Slade and Harrell officials also wanted to give the producers a chance to talk with the Wilcoxes and see the operation.

Jack Jensen of Jensen Solar Inc. noted that Wilcox had approached him concerning the use of solar heating in his new feeder pig building. According to Jensen, the solar system will supply approximately two-thirds of the building's heating needs, and reduce the need for conventional gas heating.

"This is the first time our company has worked with an agricultural energy problem," said Jensen. "We have installed solar units in residential homes, but nothing like this before."

"Energy is expensive and it's going to get more so," continued Jensen. "Solar isn't the answer to every energy problem, but it doesn't pollute, and it doesn't get more expensive."

Jensen noted that there are several different methods of hog production, and asked interested hog producers to work with him on an individual solar heating system.

"Let us help you define your problem," he noted. "Don't try to copy a system. It has to be engineered to individual needs." "Some folks say that solar power is the energy of the future," Jensen continued. "Well, that's not so. The energy is here right now."

According to Jensen, the Wilcox's production building has 51 solar panels angled at 90 degrees on the roof top, providing 1,100 square feet of collection area. Heat collected from the sun warms the liquid in the 2,000 gallon storage tank. A backup gas heating system maintains the constant temperature in the storage tank.

Jensen explained that the panels were angled toward providing the best heat during the winter months, catching the longer rays.

Detailed explanations were given on "tuning," whereby the optimum heat is gained coming out of the storage tanks. Three valves and a thermometer regulate the flow, obtaining a heat of around 130-150 degrees Fahrenheit for maximum BTU's.

Jensen quoted a base figure of approximately $14,000 for installation of a solar unit, but cautioned pork producers that each unit would differ, depending methods of operation.

After the talk, producers proceeded in a caravan fashion to the Wilcox farm to see the new building and to hear more about the solar unit. As Don Wilcox walked through the building, he explained how he had decided on using solar heating:

"I just decided by myself that the idea would be a good one," he said. "I looked in the telephone directory for solar installers. It's got to work as long as the sun shines."

For the Wilcoxes, who've moved around the United States for approximately 15 years in the pork production business, the solar collectors will help keep down the costs of overhead and provide warmth for the first litter of pigs to born in the new facility, sometime in the middle of August.

Oil Market Tumult Shown In Oil Companies' Rising Profit

By MARK POTTS
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The effects of the tumult on oil markets in the second quarter are being reflected in oil company profits, with major oil companies saying they had substantial earnings increases at the same time Americans were waiting in line for gasoline.

On Wednesday, Mobil Corp., the nation's second-largest oil firm, reported a 38 percent rise in second-quarter profits; Standard Oil of California, the sixth-ranked oil company, announced a 61 percent rise; and several smaller companies said their profits had risen by similar magnitudes.

Gulf Corp. reported a 65 percent increase in profits. The reasons listed by the companies for their large increases included rising gasoline prices, improved earnings from chemical subsidiaries and more profitable foreign operations.

The large profits earned by oil companies during times of energy crisis have frequently come under criticism, although the companies say their profits are not out of line with other industries. But while companies in other industries have announced similar rises in second quarter profits — General Electric reported a 20 percent boost and United Technologies reported a 40 percent increase, for example — it is unusual for an entire industry to be as strong as the oil industry this quarter.

Oil companies announcing higher second-quarter profits Wednesday included: —Mobil, which said the quarter's profits rose to $404 million, or $1.91 per share, compared with $293 million, or $1.38 a share, a year ago, while sales rose to $10.6 billion from $8.8 billion.

—Standard Oil of California, which said second-quarter earnings were $412 million or $2.41 a share, compared with $256 million, or $1.51 a share, a year ago. Revenues were $7 billion, up from $6 billion in the second quarter a year ago. —No. 7-ranked Atlantic Richfield Co., whose second-quarter profit was $260 million, or $2.12 a share, up from $211 million, or $1.73 a share, last year. Sales rose to $3.7 billion from $3.1 billion a year ago. —Eighth-ranked Shell Oil Co.,

whose profits rose to $277 million, or $1.80 a share, in the quarter from $179 million, or $1.21 per share, a year ago. Shell's sales were $3.5 billion, up from $2.8 billion.

—Conoco Inc., which had quarterly earnings of $215.8 million, or $2.01 per share, up 40 percent from $153.8 million, or $1.43 a share, last year. The ninth-ranked oil company reported sales of $3 billion, compared with $2.5 billion in last year's second quarter.

—Phillips Petroleum, ranked 11th, which had profits of $214.6 million, or $1.39 a share, up 44 percent from $149 million, or 97 cents a share, last year. Revenues rose to $2.2 billion from $1.7 billion.

—Union Oil Co., the nation's 13th largest oil firm, which had second-quarter profits of $128.2 million, or $1.48 a share, up 48 percent from $86.6 million, or 99 cents a share, a year ago. The firm said revenues rose to $1.9 billion from $1.6 billion.

—Gulf Corp., the nation's fifth-largest oil company, earned $291 million in the second quarter, compared with $176 million in the same quarter in 1978. Revenues rose to $6.1 billion in the quarter, up from $4.7 billion.

Apparently Shot Wife And Self

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — A Kinston man died early today in a Craven County hospital of an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound after killing his wife, authorities said.

Police said Jessie Ray Bryant, about 30, died at 3 a.m. in Craven Memorial Hospital after undergoing surgery to remove a bullet from his brain. Police said he apparently shot and killed his wife, Georgia Lee Bryant, 34, shortly before 9:30 p.m. Wednesday at the couple's home in Kinston.

According to police, the Bryants were entertaining friends in their home Wednesday evening when the shooting occurred. Two people who were at the home at the time of the shooting told police the Bryants went into the bedroom and closed the door. A few minutes later, they heard shots and ran to the door, they said.

When they were unable to open the locked door, they told police they called the couple's 13-year-old son, Jessie Bryant Jr., who unlocked the door with a coat hanger.

Police said Mrs. Bryant was found lying on the bed with bullet wounds in the back and side. Bryant was on the floor with a gunshot wound in the head.

Bryant was taken to Lenoir Memorial Hospital and later transferred to the Craven County hospital.

The two people who were in the Bryants' home at the time of the shooting said there was no apparent argument between the couple before the incident.

Police said they had been unable to determine a motive for the shootings.

Fire Unchecked On Supertanker

By LEW WHEATON
Associated Press Writer
PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Salvage men stopped fighting the fire on the supertanker Atlantic Empress until the weekend when they will have more foam, chemicals and equipment to battle the blaze.

The fire covered the after part of the main deck Wednesday night and couldn't be contained despite two days of trying. Oil gushing from the Empress's side also was being ignited by flaming slicks in the water.

The ship was under tow about 130 miles northeast of the island of Tobago and was trailing burning oil for half a mile.

Officials said the spillage was breaking down into a barely noticeable sheen about 40 miles to the west.

The Empress and the supertanker Aegean Captain collided and caught fire late last Thursday about 20 miles off Tobago. An Indian crewman from the Captain and 26 Greeks from the Empress were lost, and 52 others survived.

Officials of the Mobil Oil Corp., owners of the Empress' cargo of crude oil, estimated more than 75 percent of the 70 million gallons was still aboard. But between 7,000 and 15,000 gallons an hour has been spilling out since the fifth of its 18 tanks ruptured Tuesday.

Planning To Construct 8 Hospital Heliports

Eight new emergency medical heliports will be constructed in the eastern part of the state soon, including one at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The Department of Human Resources' Office of Emergency Medical Services recently signed contracts with these eight hospitals to provide financial assistance for the heliports. The average cost of each heliport is approximately $11,400, according to Steve Acai, assistant chief in charge of transportation for OEMS. OEMS provides $7,000 as an incentive for the construction project.

The heliports being built will comply with recommendations set forth by the Federal Aviation Administration. They will safely accommodate the new UH-60A Black Hawk helicopter the U. S. Army is putting into service to transport critically ill or injured patients needing specialized care at these hospitals.

"We expect the Army to continue to be the major user of the facilities through their MAST (Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic) emergency transfer program, though there are other helicopter operators in the state transporting patients," Acai said.

The hospitals receiving the funding have routinely referred patients for air transport and have been major receiving hospitals since the MAST program was organized in late 1973.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital Plant Manager Ralph Hall said all approvals for the heliport have been received, except that of the Federal Aeronautical Administration. He said work will begin as soon as this approval is received.

Deliberately Dived From 7th Floor

By KATHY MARTIN
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — A 30-year-old man died early today when he jumped from the seventh floor of a campus building where he'd sat for nearly a day, police say.

Larry Crocker dived from a beam over the courtyard of a Miami-Dade Community College building around 2 a.m., police said. A huge air bag set up below apparently didn't work.

"He deliberately dove and missed the bag," Sgt. Anibal Ibrahim said. "I don't know if he said anything before he jumped."

Police had left the bag and a ladder for Crocker in case he decided to leave his perch, then pretended to ignore the thin, wiry man who'd climbed up to the same spot at Miami-Dade Community College's New World campus last year. Each time, authorities said they would wait him out.

"What is it this time, Larry?" a firefighter asked Crocker across the 7 feet between a stairway landing and the girders below a skylight.

"Once again, I am Jesus Christ," Crocker shouted back. "I am the one who knows about your fears, your terrors..."

When night came, two spotlights lit up the small man in white shirt and pants with a black scarf draped around his head. He talked animatedly with anyone who would listen.

A note addressed to someone named "Lorraine" fell to the sidewalk late Wednesday afternoon.

"My past is my past, God's plan is my future," Crocker had written. "Clean socks and decent drawers at all times. Good coffee is a must." He asked the woman to marry him.

Nine-Year-Old Evidence Shown Jurors

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Bundles of bloody bedclothing and the weapons suspected of killing Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald's family more than nine years ago were shown to the jury Wednesday hearing the triple-murder case against the former Green Beret doctor.

Prosecutors used the appearance of Richard Shaw, an Army investigator, to present the evidence. He was expected to undergo cross-examination by defense attorneys today.

Shaw opened up the light blue sheets and placed them on a table in front of the jury box, showing how he said he found the body of Kimberly, 5, on Feb. 17, 1970.

Blue pen marks outlined the position of the child, who was bludgeoned and stabbed to death at the family's Fort Bragg home.

MacDonald, 35, of Huntington Beach, Calif., is charged with bludgeoning and stabbing Kimberly; her sister Kristen, 2, and their pregnant mother, Colette, 26.

The Fayetteville Times in a copyrighted story today said it has been told by a man who lived in a trailer park near Fort Bragg at the time that of the murders that four persons fitting the descriptions of MacDonald's alleged assailants frequented a nearby trailer. The Times said the man, Bill Guin, also gave information to the Army.

Guin, who has been in prison for the last eight years, said a woman fitting the description given by MacDonald, visited three men in a trailer at that time. Fayetteville Police Department records bear this out, said The Times.

The newspaper said police confirmed the woman, Helena Stoeckley, supplied information that resulted in a successful drug raid at the trailer the night of the MacDonald murders. Arrested, records show, was Robert Sanders, 20, a Fort Bragg soldier.

Sanders later skipped bail, the newspaper reported, and was subsequently released by authorities in Tucson, Ariz. after authorities at Fort Bragg failed to follow up on his arrest. According to court records the case against Sanders was dropped on Jan. 5, 1971.

Much of Shaw's testimony duplicated that of Army investigator William Ivory, who earlier identified gruesome pictures of the victims and some clothing.

But the weapons weren't shown until Wednesday, and several jurors grimaced as a 31-inch board, still stained with blood, and two knives and an icepick were introduced. One of the small paring knives was found in the master bedroom near Mrs. MacDonald; the other weapons were found near a back door.

Shaw said that about 400 items, ranging from clothing to pieces of blood-stained flooring, were removed from the house for examination.

Shaw was the fourth government witness to take the stand in the trial, which started last week and is expected to last at least two months. U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. remarked as court ended Wednesday, "It's beginning to look like we'll be here 'til Christmas."

Bernard Segal, one of the defense attorneys, who has questioned the three other witnesses at length, admitted at one point that the cross-examination was "long, tedious and boring." Ivory spent more than 14 hours on the stand, much of it answering Segal's questions.

Segal appears to be trying to convince the jury that the crime scene was disturbed by the numerous military police officers and investigators who were at the house and that the Army bungled the investigation.

After Segal asked Ivory about whether a chaplain who came to the house touched anything and Ivory replied he hadn't, he asked, "Did he walk on water?"

The Army found the charges against MacDonald "not true" after a hearing. A federal grand jury indicted him in 1975 after persistent efforts by his father-in-law, Alfred Kassab of Cranbury, N.J., succeeded in getting the investigation reopened.

Loophole Permitting Sale Of Damaged Leaf

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some North Carolina tobacco farmers are offering for sale at least a portion of their herbicide-damaged leaves, which state officials say is permissible because of a loophole in regulations calling for destruction of the crop.

Plans called for crop inspection before the opening of tobacco markets with farmers to receive partial compensation from Smith-Douglass, the firm that sold the herbicide that damaged about 9,000 acres of tobacco.

But, because many crops were not inspected, some farmers decided to sell the leaves at higher 1979 prices and accept partial compensation from

Smith-Douglass. The alternative was to receive supports at the average price of tobacco in 1978.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture was to inspect all fields and make adjustments based on the weight of affected plants. At that time the crops were to be destroyed.

"I've still not seen an adjuster," one farmer, who asked not to be identified, told the News and Observer of Raleigh Wednesday. "I've got no choice but to go ahead and sell it. I've got my card now."

Jeff A. Wells, director of the production adjustment division of the USDA's Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, said the loophole could have a far-reaching effect on market sales.

He said neither the ASCS nor the state Agriculture Department has the authority to directly ban sales of the contaminated leaves.

William A. Wilder, a state agriculture official, agreed, saying the Department had not been aware of the loophole until a few days ago.

"I think this puts a whole new complexion on things," he said. "There's no way to tell what's going to happen, but if it does hurt the markets, unaffected farmers are going to be quite upset."

Wells said officials had hoped all farmers with contaminated tobacco would have participated in the destruction plan.

"We felt that destruction would remove much of the stigma and depressed market prices," he said. Wells said because of the visibility of the damaged tobacco buyers could "shy away from affected localities to the detriment of all growers."

Arson Suspect Free On Bond

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — One of the suspects in the May 25 fire that resulted in five deaths, 23 injuries and $5 million in damage is free on bond.

One of the conditions of that $100,000 bond is that defendant James Edward Jefferies, 32, remain in Cleveland County. Also, Jefferies must exhibit good behavior in the opinion of Superior Court Judge Forrest Ferrell.

Shelby resident Jefferies was released into the custody of his mother, Rose L. Jefferies, also of Shelby, after a $100,000 property bond was posted Tuesday afternoon with court clerk Ruth Dedmon. Mrs. Jefferies also posted $7,500 in cash toward her son's bond.

Jefferies, owner of Geoferies Menswear, one of the businesses destroyed in the blaze, had been in the jail since his arrest on June 19. Remaining in jail is Samuel Guest, 34, also of Shelby.

The men are charged with arson and murder in connection with the fire. Four Shelby city firemen and a gas department employee were killed when one burning building exploded and buried them under its debris.

The men were charged following a concentrated investigation of the cause of the fire by the State Bureau of Investigation and agents of the federal Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms, Department of the Treasury.

sections of the state reported rainfall. The Raleigh-Durham area with just over a half inch of rain had one of the heavier amounts.

It was mostly cloudy across the state Wednesday, with high temperatures ranging from 80 at Asheville to 89 at New Bern and Fayetteville and 92 at Laurinburg.

Overnight lows were in the 70s over most of the state and upper 60s in the mountains.

Today's forecast calls for more of the same — scattered showers and thunderstorms this afternoon and evening with some locally heavy rainfall. Temperatures will range from the upper 70s and lows 80s in the mountains to around 90 eastward. Overnight lows will be in the low to mid 70s.

Worm-Hunter Uses His Saw

PART OF HARVEST — Emmett Anderson holds part of his catch of worms. His favorite worms are not shipped out, they are used to bait his own fishing hook. (AP Laserphoto)

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — As Emmett Anderson toils up the slope, the earth is soft and fertile beneath his feet. In his hand he carries a carpenter's saw.

Anderson, 69, is a worm hunter.

He takes the saw and cuts into a stump, sending vibrations deep into the dense soil. The nearby bushes and saplings within a radius of six feet quiver. Underground, their roots are vibrating.

Slowly, the worms crawl to the surface of the ground. To them, the vibrations are maddening. As they slither over the leaves and twigs, there is a gentle rustle all around.

The sound resembles wind in the tree tops, only it comes from under foot.

Anderson gathers the worms, and dumps them into a big bucket. He packs them in boxes, 18 at a time, and sells them for fish bait.

His biggest haul for a day's work in the five years that he has been hunting worms was 500 boxes — 9,000 worms.

By FLOYD NORRIS AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved nervously today as the previous day's optimism was tempered by more bad news on the inflation and foreign exchange fronts.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 2.31 to 837.20 after two hours of trading. The average rose 9.73 to 839.51 Wednesday as it posted its best single-day gain in three weeks.

But gainers held a narrow lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange listed issues.

President Carter's Wednesday night comment that he planned no special measures to help the ailing dollar was greeted negatively on foreign exchange markets, where the dollar fell and gold prices rose.

The Labor Department announced consumer prices rose 1 percent in June, and said the annual rate of increase over the first six months was 13.2 percent.

Airlines were active in early trading. Pan American World Airways, which said it owns 49.9 percent of National Airlines, was off 1/4 at 7 1/2. Continental Airlines was up 1 1/2 at 13 1/2 and Western Airlines advanced 1 to 10 1/4. The Civil Aeronautics Board has turned down a Continental-Western merger proposal, leading to hopes one or both of the airlines may get another offer.

On the American Stock Exchange, Resorts International Class A was the most active stock, down 3/4 at 49 3/4, before trading was halted due to an order imbalance. Resorts said profits more than doubled in its second quarter, ended July 1, to $1.75 a share.

The NYSE's composite common stock index fell 11 to 58.51. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .88 to 197.79.

Volume on the big board tolated 14.02 million shares at noon, down from 14.26 million at the same point on Wednesday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved nervously today as the previous day's optimism was tempered by more bad news on the inflation and foreign exchange fronts.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 2.31 to 837.20 after two hours of trading. The average rose 9.73 to 839.51 Wednesday as it posted its best single-day gain in three weeks.

But gainers held a narrow lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange listed issues.

President Carter's Wednesday night comment that he planned no special measures to help the ailing dollar was greeted negatively on foreign exchange markets, where the dollar fell and gold prices rose.

The Labor Department announced consumer prices rose 1 percent in June, and said the annual rate of increase over the first six months was 13.2 percent.

Airlines were active in early trading. Pan American World Airways, which said it owns 49.9 percent of National Airlines, was off 1/4 at 7 1/2. Continental Airlines was up 1 1/2 at 13 1/2 and Western Airlines advanced 1 to 10 1/4. The Civil Aeronautics Board has turned down a Continental-Western merger proposal, leading to hopes one or both of the airlines may get another offer.

On the American Stock Exchange, Resorts International Class A was the most active stock, down 3/4 at 49 3/4, before trading was halted due to an order imbalance. Resorts said profits more than doubled in its second quarter, ended July 1, to $1.75 a share.

The NYSE's composite common stock index fell 11 to 58.51. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .88 to 197.79.

PCB Dump Sites OK'd

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials said Wednesday that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has approved eight of 10 county landfills that were tested for use as disposal sites for PCB-contaminated soil.

The EPA approval is subject to an application for formal approval from the state. Gov. Jim Hunt must decide whether to ask the eight county boards for permission to dump the contaminated soil in the landfills.

Herbert L. Hyde, state secretary of crime control and public safety, said landfills in Edgecombe, Granville, Halifax, Harnett, Johnston, Nash, Warren and Wilson counties received approval from the EPA and officials of the state Solid Waste Management Commission.

Sites in Franklin and Lee counties were found unacceptable, Hyde said.

Four counties, including Wake, Alamance, Chatham and Person, rejected the state's request for permission to test their landfills.

EPA and state officials visited each of the 10 landfills in June and took samples of soil and water for laboratory analysis.

The chairmen of the county boards were notified in letters last week that their landfills had been approved for disposal of the soil. Hyde or assistant secretary David E. Kelly will meet later with the commissioners to discuss the use of the landfills for PCB disposal.

Scholarship For Local Student

Thomas C. Bolt of Greenville has received a scholarship to the University of Delaware Freshman Honors Program for academic achievement.

The University will offer a unique honors program for selected freshman students. Many of these students have elected to begin their work as "early admission" candidates and they begin the honors program before completing high school. Qualified, regular age students who have completed high school and wish to be part of the program will also be participating.

Planning-Zoning...

streets and thoroughfares, based on the Thoroughfare Plan, including three recommendations made by the Engineering Department. The long range plan will be considered by the Council.

Roberson said the maintenance schedule is a joint agreement that will be adopted by the city and the N.C. Department of Transportation.

City Engineer Ron Sewell explained that the three areas recommended in the maintenance format include: the inclusion of 14th Street, from Dickinson Avenue out to the southern extension, on the state's maintenance schedule; the inclusion of the proposed Arlington Boulevard segment, from Memorial Drive out to the Highway 43 area, by the hospital, on the state schedule; and the assumption by the city for maintenance of Reade Street from Cotanche Street to First.

Commissioners also endorsed, with new member Bill Mitchum voting against, a proposal submitted by the Citizens Bikeway Committee for a bike loop around the city designed to connect the recreational and cultural centers of the city.

The proposed 9.4 mile route would utilize existing corridors, including the bike path on Arlington Boulevard between Evans Street and Hooker Road, and would be designated by signs. Eventually, it is hoped that a system of links would be added to connect all parts of the city.

The bike route would not be a separate facility, it was explained, and would utilize the present streets except for the Arlington segment. Several major corridors are being considered as part of the route.

Mitchum question the merits of using the major streets for designated bikeways, saying that he felt cycling was more recreational in nature.

The Greenville planning board gave its approval to the preliminary and final plats of Section I of the J. F. Arthur property, located north of Arlington Boulevard between Evans Street and Seaboard Coast Line Railroad.

It was pointed out that the matter was tabled at the last meeting in order to study the Pitt Street situation and it was decided by the city staff that Pitt should be recommended for stoppage at Deck Street.

Attorney Fred Mattox, representing adjoining property owners, said that his clients opposed the proposal to stop Pitt Street at Deck and said that his clients believe good planning dictates that Pitt be extended on through.

Mattox said that if a public right-of-way is not provided, an area will exist with no north-south access. He asked why Arlington Boulevard should be four-laned and improved if traffic was not going to be routed to it.

Attorney Mickey Herrin, representing the Arthur developers, said that since the plat meets the checklist he feels said that since the plat met the checklist, he felt it should be approved.

Roberson said that the city feels Pitt should not be extended and he noted that Pitt is not seen as a major corridor for traffic on long range plans. He said that if it is extended, it would serve as a collector street and would be contrary to the Thoroughfare Plan.

Roberson added that the extension of Pitt to Arlington Boulevard would require signalization at the intersection and that would not be favorable. He said that the city felt the traffic volume should utilize Evans Street which is designated for four-laning.

Other business on the agenda included:

— Approval of the final plat of Patrick Blount property located between McClellan Street and Seaboard Coast Line Railroad and north of Deck Street;

CLOSE CALL — An accident on the Belvoir highway last night came within inches of injuring a Tarboro man. According to Trooper A.G. Wright, Kenneth Roosevelt Lamn, of Tarboro, was traveling west on N.C. 33 when a large dog ran into the path of the vehicle. Wright said Lamn swerved to avoid the dog and struck a row of mail boxes. A number of mail boxes were completely ripped off the mount which crashed into the windshield and into the passenger side of the car, missing Lamn only by a few inches. Wright said no passengers were in the car. Lamn was not reported injured. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Downpour Hits Texas Coast

By The Associated Press
Wind-blown rain drenched the upper Texas coast early today and National Guard troops and police evacuated residents of low-lying areas as water poured into homes and businesses.

One death was reported Wednesday when a man drowned after his automobile went into deep water at an intersection in Beaumont.

The National Guard was mobilized Wednesday by

Gov. Bill Clements to help with the evacuations as more than 20 inches were reported in some areas.

Forecasters said radar indicated that the showers extended well into the Gulf of Mexico. The overall, slow movement of the system, remnants of Tropical Depression Claudette, was northward, meaning the rains would continue, they said.

Flooding was reported early today in Harris, Matagorda, Liberty and Brazoria counties as well as several counties in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area.

Hundreds were housed in temporary shelters along the upper coast. Exact figures were not available, officials said, since flooding appeared to be reaching new areas by the hour.

More than 20 inches of rain fell at Alvin, the National Weather Service said, adding that it was still raining "extremely heavy" there before dawn. Street flooding was said to be "severe."

Forecasters urged motorists to stay off roads and streets because many are flooded and closed because of high water and stalled vehicles.

Two persons have been arrested by the Pitt Sheriff's Department on charges stemming from a July 23 break-in at Jerry Morris' Store on the Stokes Highway.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that deputies arrested Bobby Dean Lloyd, 17, of Rt. 5, Greenville, and Edward Earl Lloyd, 19, of Rt. 4, Greenville and charged them with breaking, entering and larceny at the rural grocery store.

The sheriff noted that assorted merchandise, including five cases of beer, 12 cartons of cigarettes and 16 gallons of gasoline, was reported taken in the incident, with a total value of $224.20.

He added that officers recovered part of the merchandise allegedly taken in the break-in.

Bond for each man was set at $500 on the break-in charges. Sheriff Tyson said, and hearings will be scheduled in District Court here.

Post 39 Season Ends

SMITHFIELD — Pitt County's American Legion baseball season ended last night as the local team fell to Johnston County 14-5 to lose its best-of-seven eastern semifinal series 4-1.

Playing in a downpour for seven innings, Pitt County had trouble at the plate, on the mound and in the field. The team got only six hits, while giving up 10, and it committed four errors. In addition, the three Pitt pitchers walked a total of 14 batters.

Mike Williams was the starter and the loser for Pitt. He lasted only 3½ innings and was charged with eight runs, four earned. He walked eight and struck out three.

Ace reliever Mel Howard came in for Williams and stayed only 1½ frames. He gave up five more runs. Jeff Allen finished up, being responsible for the final Johnston County score.

Joe Stephenson was the winner for Johnston County. He started and lasted 6½ innings, giving up all five Pitt County runs. Clyde Boyette finished up on the mound.

Pitt County started off well, scoring two runs in the top of the first, but Johnston got a run in the bottom of the inning and Tim Barbour's three-run double in the second put the winners ahead for good.

Mark Shank led off the first with a walk for Pitt and Will Barrett reached on a fielder's choice. Williams singled in Shank, and after a walk by Curtis Spencer, Mark Douglas hit a sacrifice fly to score Barrett.

Richard Upton scored in the bottom of the inning for Johnston County. He walked and Barbour reached on an error. Walks to Roger Hudson and David Bass pushed Upton across.

In the bottom of the second, Stanley Adams, Upton and Norris all walked with none out. That brought up Barbour, who doubled in all three and scored on an error to make it 5-2.

The winning run came in the next inning when David Bass singled, was sacrificed to second by Stephenson, moved to third on a double by Greg Gibson and scored on Adams' sacrifice fly.

Pitt added a run in the fourth by Mike Campbell. He walked, moved up on J.R. Neal's infield out and scored on a single by Shank.

Johnston County added two more runs in the bottom of the fourth and five in the sixth, including a two-run homer by Gibson. Pitt's final two runs came in the seventh.

Williams and Curtis Spencer both walked. Williams scored on a single by Will Sanderson and Spencer was pushed across by walks to Allen and Shank.

Johnston County added a final run in the eighth.

Shank was 2-3 to pace Pitt County at the plate, while Gibson was 2-4 and Byrd and Bass both 2-5 for Johnston County.

Johnston County moves into the eastern finals, beginning Sunday.

MOSCOW (AP) — Two brief days in Moscow, one good throw out of six, and John Powell was on his way home to the United States today with the gold medal in the discus in the pre-Olympic Spartacade Games.

Powell helped the U.S. track and field team to a triple gold medal day in chilly Lenin Stadium Wednesday night, ending the United States' gold-medal shutout.

The former San Jose, Calif., Policeman descended on Moscow Monday night and had almost no time to get acclimated.

He was hopelessly off form with his first five throws, and the Americans wore glum faces. Then Powell suddenly clicked. He heaved the discus 206 feet, 9½ inches to win.

"I'm glad someone asked me to come," he said as he headed for the U.S. National Sports Festival in Colorado Springs. "I think I'll come again."

Powell was not the only American winner to procrastinate Wednesday. Henry Marsh of Eugene, Ore., ran last for most of the 3,000 meters, was at least four yards behind the leader entering the straightaway, and then produced a tremendous finishing kick to win the steeplechase in 8 minutes, 28.09 seconds.

The third gold medalist was Wardell Gilbreath of Houston, who led all the way to win the 200 meters in 20.84.

Don Coleman of Eugene, Ore., was second behind Gilbreath, and 18-year-old Carl Lewis of Willingboro, N.J., finished third in the long jump. So it was a night of glory for the depleted American squad, which had struggled against adversity and failed to win a single gold medal in the first three days of competition.

Powell, 32, was the United States' No. 1 discus thrower for three years from 1973 to 1975. After the 1977 season he retired.

"I didn't even know my gold was the first for the United States," Powell said. "That makes it a double pleasure. Now I'm on my way back, and maybe I will be America's No. 1 again."

Gilbreath failed to qualify for the AAU Nationals.

"Now the gold is starting to come," he said.

Meanwhile, the United States track team looked forward to Friday, when it had another excellent chance to resume its quest for gold.

Sub-four-minute miler Craig Mosbach of Princeton, now at school in Europe, and relay man Cliff Wiley of the University of Kansas were expected to run the 1,500 meters. The first round of heats is set for Friday and the final for Sunday.

Spartacade is the Soviet Union's big festival and teams from the 15 republics of the Soviet Union participate. Because of next year's Olympic Games, foreign athletes were invited this year, but there is little strength in most of the foreign teams.

The triple American success Wednesday was the first real challenge to Russian supremacy.

Tatyana Anisimova led a 1-2-3 Soviet sweep of the women's 100-meter hurdles, winning in 12.90. The top American was Deby LaPlante, who was fourth in 13.13, barely missing a bronze medal when she finished .03 behind Nina Morgulina.

In gymnastics, Teresa Schneider of Minneapolis, Minn., walked out of the competition in protest, and Nelli Kim, darling of the Russians, failed to shake her bridesmaid complex.

Schneider, an 18-year-old blonde, was upset because the judges refused to raise the uneven bars. She claimed they were not fixed properly and she might get injured.

U.S. gymnastics coach Barbara Calleher of New Haven, Conn., said: "We simply took her out because the bars were not fixed and she would have hurt her feet."

NS'ers In Win

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Greenville's North State Little League All-Stars advanced to the finals of the Area II tournament last night by rolling over Tarboro 15-2.

Greenville will take on Roanoke Rapids at 5 p.m. today for the right to meet the Area I champion in the District IV title game. Roanoke Rapids ousted the Greenville Tar Heel stars in a 4-2 decision on Tuesday.

The North Staters never trailed in yesterday's game and scored four runs in the second inning. Tony Taylor and Jordy Smith walked and Jay Wynne doubled in Taylor. Kevin Pace and Rocky Ziehr waited out bases on balls to push Smith across and Doyle Kirkland and Patrick Rand walked to score Wynne and Pace.

Greenville scored seven more runs in the third inning, including a three-run homer by Taylor. Both teams scored two runs in the fourth and Greenville added two in the fifth to round out its scoring.

Wynne was 3-3 and Taylor 2-3 for Greenville, while North State pitcher Rand hurled a three-hitter. Scott Getsinger was the losing pitcher.

Pitt Takes Two

CONCORD — Pitt County's Babe Ruth All-Stars advanced to the state finals today by winning two games yesterday. Pitt defeated Union County 3-1 and Cabarrus County 9-1 for the championship of the loser's bracket in the double elimination state tournament.

In the first game, Pitt County scored three runs in the seventh inning to overcome a 1-0 deficit and take the win. Billy Bunting led off the crucial frame, reaching on an error, and Doug McRoy singled. Jeff Cox reached on a fielder's choice with Bunting being thrown out at third.

Roy Lassiter walked to load things up and Greg Hardison walked to push McRoy across. Dixon Page singled in Cox and Lassiter.

No batter had more than two hits in the game. Lassiter was the winning pitcher, hurling a five-hitter.

In the second game, Pitt scored one in the second, two in the third, one in the fourth and five in the sixth. The lone Cabarrus run came in the sixth.

Bobby Avery scored the first Pitt County run. He reached base on a fielder's choice and scored on a single by Lewis Yelverton.

Lassiter walked and moved up on an out in the third and Page walked for Pitt. Battle singled

THE AMERICAN LEGION baseball season is too long.

Pitt County's Legion team began play in May. Here it is the end of July and the team, provided they won last night, is still at it. If they should win their current best-of-seven series, the Post 39's have two more best-of-seven series ahead of them in state play, not to mention regional and national competition.

Of course, it's unlikely Pitt County will advance that far. The team trailed 3-1 going into last night's game with Johnston County. The only Pitt victory in the eastern semifinal series came Monday night after Johnston County had taken a 3-0 lead.

Pitt County is not playing the same kind of ball in this series that it has played all season. The team's enthusiasm seems to have faded, along with its aggressiveness in the field and at the plate.

The players seem tired, and if that's the case, they can hardly be blamed. They have been playing baseball since March.

The high school baseball season began four months ago and the Post 39 players have been playing baseball with hardly a break since then. If they advance further, the 1979 season will have lasted almost half a year.

That's much too long to expect a high school-aged athlete to keep his mind on one sport. In addition, he is prevented from taking vacations with his family during that time, and if he holds down a summer job, almost all his summer free time is taken.

The problem is not in the regular season, but the playoff system. Pitt County is in Area I, and after a 14-game season, all eight teams, even Washington, which went 1-13, advanced to the Area playoffs.

It took two best-of-three series just for Pitt County to get to the Area finals. The championship series was a best-of-five affair.

It takes three best-of-seven series victories to win the state championship and then there is a double elimination regional tournament and a double elimination national tournament.

A better, more time-consuming system, would be to eliminate the bottom four teams in the Area tournament and play two best-of-three series to decide the Area championship. What's the point in playing the 14-game season if every team is going to the tournament anyway?

Then, teams could two play best-of-three series for the state playoffs, with possibly a best-of-seven championship series. The double elimination regional and national events could remain as they are.

This system would eliminate 13 of the possible 33 playoff games at the state level and shorten the season by at least two weeks. It would give the players some time off in the summer and help eliminate the weariness that Post 39 seems to be experiencing.

Festival Has Mushroomed

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — National Sports Festival II, dubbed the United States Olympics and aimed at stimulating the development of young talent, begins Thursday night with a tremendous sprinkling of the nation's outstanding competitors in 31 sports.

The festival, launched last year by Robert Kane, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, has caught on quickly. From less than 2,000 athletes in 26 sports in its inaugural, it has mushroomed into a 31-sport program with more than 2,300 competitors.

In his opening remarks to the athletes last year, Kane said, "I just hope all you athletes will some day look to this inaugural festival and think that only the Olympic games preceded it in enormity and prestige."

The festival not only is a conglomeration of sports held in the summer Olympics, but it includes such winter sports as ice hockey and figure skating and non-Olympic sports like softball, baseball, roller skating and tennis.

"This will help the smaller sports," Kane said. "It can be one of the most productive things the U.S. Olympic Committee has ever done."

The new sports added this year are yachting, roller skating, tennis, indoor speed skating and equestrian, but track and field, swimming, gymnastics and figure skating — the backbone of the summer and winter Olympics — are expected to attract the most attention.

In fact, seats for gymnastics and figure skating, two of the and both runners scored on an error.

Yelverton hit a solo home run in the fourth and was 3-4. Battle was 2-3 and Chris Strickland 2-2. Bobby Avery was the winning pitcher.

Pitt County played Wilmington today for the state title. Pitt needed two wins for the championship against Wilmington, the team that defeated Pitt 2-0 in the tournament opener.

Waits Regains Pitching Touch

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Rick Waits found some old-time religion and, finally, he's found his old-time pitching touch.

hander, who'd lost four straight games since he got married in June and five straight overall, pitched a two-hitter in blanking the Minnesota Twins 2-0 Wednesday. Through his non-productive streak, Waits never lost the faith.

"I had lost some confidence but never really lost the will to win," said Waits, Cleveland's top starter for three seasons. "I have a deep relationship with Jesus Christ and he never let me give up. Yet I struggled."

It was the Twins who struggled against Waits, going six innings without a hit before Bombo Rivera led off the seventh with a single. Glenn Borgmann singled in the ninth for the other Minnesota safety.

"It was about the fifth inning when I started thinking about it," said Waits, 10-9, who pitched his fourth shutout and second two-hitter the season. "I just said let's go out and enjoy it."

Jim Norris led off the game with a homer for Cleveland and Andre Thornton doubled in the other run in the seventh off Dave Goltz, 9-7, who threw a seven-hitter.

Elsewhere in the American League, Seattle won for the first time in Baltimore, edging the Orioles 5-4; Boston bombed Oakland 16-4; California outscored the Yankees 9-5; Detroit beat Milwaukee 8-2; Chicago stopped Kansas City 6-2, and Toronto defeated Texas 8-3.

Mariners 5, Orioles 4
Fourteen times in their three-year existence the Mariners took the field at Memorial Stadium. Fourteen times they lost.

This time, they found a new way to be beaten by red-hot Baltimore, with a seven-game win streak. Leading 5-3 after scoring three times in the seventh, two on Ruppert Jones' double, the skies opened and a deluge halted the game for about an hour. If it hadn't resumed, the score would have reverted to the last full inning, making it 3-2, Baltimore.

"The longer it rained," said Jones, "the more I thought it would really be something if they pulled another one out. I thought, 'Here we go again.'"

Red Sox 16, A's 4
Jim Rice slugged two mammoth home runs, Carlton Fisk also homered and Boston had 19 hits, its biggest offensive outburst this season. Rice had three hits and five RBI. Dave Revering had three hits and a homer for Oakland.

Angels 9, Yankees 5

Nolan Ryan lasted one inning — and still struck out two men to land fifth on the all-time list with 2,854 — and Tommy John departed in the third as rookie Ralph Botting was the pitching star. Botting, who entered the game with a 21.21 ERA and left with it at 10.80, pitched 51-3 innings of one-run relief for his first major league victory.

Ryan "felt something pop" in his arm while pitching to Reggie Jackson in the second and was sent back to California for X-rays.

Joe Rudi knocked in three runs and Dan Ford had three hits for California, which stretched its first-place lead in the AL West to three games over Minnesota.

Tigers 11, Brewers 2
Detroit erupted for four homers, three in its seven-run eighth, with Champ Summers, John Wockenfuss and Lance Parrish connecting. Parrish's and Wockenfuss' came in succession and Al Greene had his first major league homer in the fourth.

Jack Morris, 9-5, got relief from John Hiller for the triumph.

White Sox 6, Royals 2
Kansas City helped the White Sox' victory by committing five errors and getting just five hits off Rich Wortham, 11-9. Bill Nahorodny knocked in three runs with a bases-loaded double in the four-run eighth.

Blue Jays 8, Rangers 3
Otto Velez and Rick Bosetti homered and Dave Stieb — the only pitcher with a winning record on the Jays — won for the third time in four decisions. The victory snapped Toronto's seven-game losing streak.

Third Perez Double Spells Padres' Doom

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Tony Perez strode to the plate and surveyed the field. There were two out in the ninth inning, and he represented whatever hopes the Montreal Expos had of beating San Diego.

It wasn't enough that Perez had doubled twice already and helped the Expos pull within 5-4 after trailing 4-0. As Jerry White danced off second base and Rodney Scott stepped off first, Perez looked to the outfield while awaiting a pitch from the Padres' Eric Rasmussen.

"When I come up in these situations, I feel that the pitcher is the one in trouble," said Perez.

He was right. Rasmussen was in trouble because Perez noticed Padres center fielder Gene Richards had shifted way over to right-center, "and I thought if I could hit one into the gap it would score both runners."

Right again. Rasmussen's 3-2 pitch, which could have ended the contest, was decisive in a different way: Perez sent it to the gap in left-center for his third double of the contest, two runs, and a 6-5 Montreal triumph Wednesday night.

"They were looking to me to hit one and it was a big hit for us," said Perez, who has 87 hits this season — 29 for extra bases.

And that's below his average. Of his 2,193 lifetime hits, 885 have been doubles, triples or homers.

Reds 6, Pirates 5

A 10th-inning double by Heity Cruz drove in Dave Collins with the run that gave Cincinnati its rain-delayed victory over Pittsburgh.

Johnny Bench hit two homers and Joe Morgan one to aid the Reds' cause. Morgan's sixth homer of the year snapped a hitless streak of 26 at-bats.

Bench's second homer of the game tied it 5-5 in the eighth after Pittsburgh starter John Candelaria retired 16 consecutive batters.

Astros 6, Cubs 4

J.R. Richard, the major league strikeout leader, raised his total to 174 by striking out 12 Cubs in 71-3 innings of work. He was knocked out in Chicago's three-run eighth, but Joe Sambito relieved, recorded four more strikeouts, and completed the five-hitter for his 12th save.

Sambito, the phenomenal Houston fireman, lowered his earned run average to 1.16 over 612-3 innings of work in 39 appearances.

Craig Reynolds' sixth-inning single delivered the winning run.

Braves 13, Cardinals 4

Barry Bonnell's three-run triple keyed an eight-run Atlanta seventh inning and powered the Braves past the Cardinals.

Pepe Frias had three hits and three RBI in the 17-hit Atlanta attack.

Dodgers 16, Phillies 8

Joe Ferguson and Dusty Baker combined to drive in nine runs as Los Angeles overwhelmed Philadelphia and won its sixth game in seven.

Ferguson had five RBI with a two-run single and a three-run homer while Baker — who had a grand slam in the Dodgers' 15-3 victory Tuesday — had a two-run single and two RBI doubles.

Mets 3, Giants 0

Craig Swan's six-hitter, his second shutout of San Francisco this season, carried the Mets past the Giants.

The lowly Mets won the season series 8-4, and Swan observed: "The numbers show we don't play like this against too many teams."

Rec. Tennis

Aldridge and Southerland defeated Book Barn 42-43 in Junior Novice League Tennis at Evans Park Wednesday.

Summary:

Are Other Tour Players Jealous Of Lopez?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Is it true that those sweet ladies on the LPGA golf tour are getting catty over the attention being lavished on Nancy Lopez?

There have been locker room whispers ever since the dark-haired charmer out of Roswell, N. M., hit the scene like an exploding rocket in 1977, finishing second in the U. S. Women's Open at age 20 and going on to take the circuit by the throat in 1978.

Her accomplishments have been phenomenal — both Rookie of the Year and Player of the Year in her first season as a pro; first rookie, male or female, to win as much as $161,235; first woman to earn more than $200,000 in total money in one year; first woman ever to average less than 72 strokes a round; winner of five consecutive tournaments, nine in all; The Associated Press' Female Athlete of the Year.

As honor piled upon honor, as fans by the thousands flocked the courses just to walk in her wake, as the once humdrum female fairway show suddenly burst into a sparkle, reports of resentment among her contemporaries escalated.

Now comes an article in the August issue of Golf Digest by topflight golf journalist Dwayne Netland, who, after a tour of the tour, reports that Nancy is embroiled in a battle with the toughest foe of all — jealousy.

"Some of the women feel — really feel in their hearts," Netland writes, "that the LPGA's new star is getting too much star treatment."

He says there was cheering in the locker room April 1 when Nancy missed a putt that would have won her the Women's Kemper Open at Costa, Mesa, Calif., she finally lost in a play-off.

One unidentified rival is quoted as saying, "If Nancy broke a leg, I don't think any of us would care."

Hollis Stacy, two-time U.S. Open champion, says, "We have a lot of fine golfers who aren't given enough credit."

Generally, the beef is that the press has adopted Lopez as their "darling" and that, as a result, Nancy draws the bulk of the gallery while others play in semi-privacy. There are also complaints — denied by Nancy and the LPGA — that Nancy is accorded special VIP treatment from sponsors. Grunts of chagrin were reportedly heard when Lopez was featured on both covers of the 1979 LPGA Player Guide.

It seems petty, but LPGA commissioner Ray Volpe was concerned enough to call the lady golfers together and urge them to cool it.

"Nancy Lopez earned her dues on the leader board," he said. "She is a rare and gifted athlete with the charisma the galleries love." The bitterness is said to have subsided somewhat.

Let's hope so. Nancy Lopez, who suffered the indignities in silence, has been a rare nugget for the LPGA tour. Her skills and personality have raised women's golf to a status it never before enjoyed.

She has given women's golf the boost Arnold Palmer and his Army triggered in the men's game back in the late 1950s and 1960s. Palmer was never resented by his contemporaries, just as there's never been a gripe over the attention given Jack Nicklaus.

The ladies must adopt the attitude of the men pros, who say, "Resent Arnie? No, man. He's put money in our pockets. We all owe him a cut of every paycheck."

Sigel Playing For Fun

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — While the rest of the field shoots for shares of the $250,000 prize money in the Philadelphia Golf Classic today, Jay Sigel will be playing for fun.

Sigel, the British amateur champion from nearby Newtown Square, Pa., said he is satisfied to play the game for therapeutic rather than monetary benefits. As an amateur, the 34-year-old Sigel would get a watch or a trophy if he won the tournament at the Whitmarsh Valley Country Club.

PLO Says Israel Attempted Assassination; Doubts Aired

By GUY RIFFET
Associated Press Writer
CANNES, France (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization accused Israel of the attempted assassination of its military operations chief, but Western diplomats in Paris said the shooting on the Riviera may be the start of a new round of warfare between rival PLO factions or leaders.

There was no comment from Israel.
The condition of the victim, 43-year-old Zuhair Mohsen, was described as "hopeless." He was shot in the head and was reported in a coma in a Nice hospital following an operation to remove the bullet.
Mohsen, who also headed the Saika (Thunderbolt) guerrilla organization controlled by Syria, was shot Tuesday night as he approached the door to the fourth-floor apartment in Cannes he and his wife had been occupying since last weekend. His wife, who was opening the apartment door to admit him, told police the gunman fired from a service stairway six feet away.

A watchman reportedly saw two men, one possibly an Arab and the other a large man in a white suit, apparently European, fleeing in a red Fiat with a local license. But the police gave no information on the progress of their investigation.
In Beirut, Yasser Arafat, the chief of the PLO, charged that the shooting was the work of a hit squad trained by the Israeli secret service. A high-ranking Syrian official made the same charge in Damascus.

Saika and another PLO faction, the Marxist Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, blamed the "Camp David alliance" — Israel, Egypt and the United States. Saika vowed a "painful and decisive reply sooner than expected."

However, Western diplomats in Paris suggested that the shooting might be the start of another round in the endless struggle among Palestinian leaders for control of the PLO, a loose alliance of eight guerrilla organizations united largely by their opposition to Israel.
Mohsen had frequently criticized Arafat's leadership and had other strong enemies within the movement.

Other diplomats suggested the shooting might be connected with the seizure of the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara, Turkey, earlier this month by four members of the Red Eagles of the Revolution, which is believed to be a wing of Saika. Arafat's PLO command said it was not responsible for that attack and sent a delegation to Ankara to negotiate the surrender of the terrorists.

Three other PLO leaders have been assassinated in France in the past seven years. The PLO representative in Paris was killed last Aug. 3 by two Arabs who said they were working for a terrorist group supported by Iraq. The other two killings were blamed on Israel.

Mohsen's headquarters were in Beirut and Damascus, but he was a frequent visitor to France.

SKYLAB RETURNS HOME — U.S. Customs Inspector Oliver Seymour inspects the largest piece of the downed Skylab at the San Francisco International Airport Wednesday night after it was found in Australia two weeks ago. A private Australian firm plans to exhibit the one-ton piece of Skylab throughout the U.S. The chunk is eight feet long and four feet wide. The customs inspector said that since the Skylab hull was being returned to the U.S. there was no duty. (AP Laserphoto)

Admit Printing False Reports

PEKING (AP) — Admitting it has published false or exaggerated reports in the past, the Chinese Communist Party newspaper called on its readers, the press and the party to help insure truth in reporting.
In a front-page editorial, the Peking People's Daily gave six examples of false or misleading stories that it published. They included the fictitious account of the completion of a major water conservation project — in fact, it was smaller and temporary and was completed a year before it was reported — and a false report that a doctor had found an acupuncture cure for deaf mutes.

Nicaragua's 4 Private Banks Are Nationalized

By JUAN MALTES
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The revolutionary government has nationalized Nicaragua's four private banks and ordered three U.S. banks to stop accepting deposits from the public.

But the bank nationalization "does not mean that we are on the way to a Socialist government," junta member Alfonso Robelo told a news conference Wednesday. He said they were taken over "as a social responsibility" because their assets were $100 million less than their foreign obligations.

He said the American banks — Citibank, Bank of America and Wells Fargo — "can continue operating in the country but cannot take in deposits from the public. We will announce the new rules under which those banks can operate."

Moises Hassan, another member of the junta, said the new government decided to nationalize the domestic banks after it learned they have a total foreign debt of $180 million and assets of about $80 million.

"The new government will take over that foreign debt as a social responsibility," Robelo said.

A fifth private bank, Banco de Centroamericano, was owned by President Anastasio Somoza and was confiscated along with the rest of the dictator's property earlier this week.

Robelo said Nicaragua's post-Somoza economy would be a mixture of government and private enterprise. He said the government plans to nationalize the mining, forestry and fishing industries, but the takeover will be well in the future.

The decree nationalizing the banks became law as it was read at the news conference. Robelo said owners of stock in the nationalized banks will be compensated with government bonds that will pay 6½-percent interest and can be cashed at any time.

The Nicaraguan banks are the Banco de America, Banco Nicaraguense, Banco del Exterior and Calley Dagnal. An earlier account reported erroneously that there were seven domestic banks and that Calley Dagnal was a British concern.

Anatomy Prof Authors Paper

Dr. Evelyn McNeill, associate professor of anatomy at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, is the author of a paper appearing in a recent issue of the Journal of Neural Transmission.

"The Synaptic Ribbons of the Guinea Pig Pineal Gland in Sterile, Pregnant and Fertile by Non-Pregnant Females and in Reproductively Active Males" identifies the quantity of synaptic ribbons present in different reproductive states.

Dr. McNeill reports that the structures were numerous in the pregnant and sterile female animals studied but scarce in reproductively active males and fertile, non-pregnant females.

Med School Adds A Protein Chemist

Dr. Paul L. Fletcher, a specialist in protein chemistry, has been appointed associate professor of microbiology at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Dr. PAUL FLETCHER

Fletcher will be responsible for the establishment of a protein chemistry laboratory in the Department of Microbiology and Immunology. The lab will provide research service for various departments in the medical school.

Fletcher formerly was assistant professor of cell biology and head of the protein chemistry lab at Yale University School of Medicine. He also has been research associate at Rockefeller University.

He was awarded his undergraduate degree from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and his master's degree from the University of North Carolina-Greensboro. He received a PhD from Vanderbilt University.

The author of many publications, Fletcher's current research on neurotoxins from scorpion venom is funded by a $180,000 grant from the National Institutes of Health.

The embassy said the oiler Wabash rescued the refugees earlier this week west of Subic Bay, the big U.S. Navy base in the Philippines, as the U.S. 7th Fleet began a broadened effort to rescue refugees from Vietnam.

The embassy said the oiler Wabash rescued the refugees earlier this week west of Subic Bay, the big U.S. Navy base in the Philippines, as the U.S. 7th Fleet began a broadened effort to rescue refugees from Vietnam.

The embassy said the refugees were plucked from a 25-foot boat, and that 16 of them were members of the same family and the other three were friends of the family.

It said according to U.S. policy, refugees rescued by U.S. Navy ships are guaranteed resettlement by the U.S. government.

A spokesman for the Thai military said there was no objection to the refugees staying in Thailand for a temporary period while waiting for U.S. officials to process them for resettlement.

Some 400,000 refugees have fled Vietnam, mainly ethnic Chinese claiming persecution by the Hanoi government. Most of them are jammed in camps throughout Southeast Asia.

The Carter administration announced stepped-up aid to the refugees last week, including broadened rescue efforts by U.S. Navy planes and ships.

The U.N. coordinator for international assistance to Indochina, Victor Umbricht, returned to Zurich, Switzerland, today after a 10-day visit to Vietnam and Cambodia and said he believed the future will be "more humane" for refugees from Vietnam.

He told a Swiss television interviewer the Vietnamese authorities were readying an "orderly exodus" with lists opened for all those wanting to leave the country.

Umbricht, who was en route to New York, said the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh was still a "ghost town."

He said there were only 40 doctors left in Cambodia while some 560 had fled the country. Only two of the capital's five hospitals were still operating, Umbricht said.

The Vietnamese invaded Cambodia Christmas Day and toppled the pro-Chinese Pol Pot regime two weeks later. Pol Pot loyalists have been fighting a guerrilla war against the Vietnamese since, and tens of thousands of refugees who fled to neighboring Thailand have been forced back into Cambodia by the Thai government.

ACTRESS DIES AT 81

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Silent film actress Isabel K. Fowler who appeared with Laurel and Hardy as well as in the film "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" with Rudolph Valentino, is dead at age 81.

At Sundown, A Criminal

COLUMBIA (AP) — A Columbia psychiatrist has been charged with eight counts of burglary in what Solicitor Jim Anders termed "the most bizarre case on the South Carolina books."

Ian Sanford Gale, 38, was arrested, charged and transferred to the South Carolina State Hospital Wednesday evening. Anders told a news conference called to explain the case.

Officers who arrested Gale at his home found jewelry, $50,000 worth of rare coins and several weapons, including grenades and semi-automatic weapons, according to Richland County Sheriff Frank Powell.

Powell described Gale as a "brilliant individual, with a brilliant education. But when the lights go down, the sun goes down, he turns into another person."

"He's a modern Jekyll and Hyde, from what we know about him," the sheriff said.

County and local law enforcement agencies are continuing an investigation into some 150 other house-breaking cases, some four years old, and further charges may be filed against Gale, Powell said.

The sheriff added that as much as $500,000 worth of stolen goods is involved in the investigation.

Several of the burglaries under investigation were committed in the well-to-do Forest Acres area while there was no one at home, Powell said.

Indicted For Child-Murder

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — A Sanford man has been indicted by a Lee County grand jury on a charge of first-degree murder in the July 15 death of 4-year-old Carol Ann Hinson.

Robert Henry McDowell, 28, was also indicted on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in the attack on the child's 13-year-old aunt, Patsy Mason.

The indictments render unnecessary a probable cause hearing for McDowell that was scheduled for Aug. 7. His trial will be scheduled for the next session of criminal Superior Court, which begins in October, an official of the county clerk of court's office said Wednesday.

McDowell is being held without bond on charges stemming from a stabbing attack that left the Hinson girl dead and her aunt, who was in the same room, seriously injured.

The last thought that would have occurred to South when he picked up his hand was that he was going to be cast in the role of hero. Unless someone suddenly converted the game into gin, his prospects of contributing anything toward his side's effort seemed remote.

East's decision to bid two clubs over the takeout double is an atrocity. "I bid over the double to show weakness," he pointed out. Ideas such as this are prevalent in some corners of the bridge world, and are little short of absurd. Why anyone should want to enter the conversation with a hand such as East's is difficult to understand. A bid over a takeout double does not show weakness; it simply denies the strength for a redouble, which is not the same thing.

South was delighted to be relieved of the necessity of making a bid, and West passed since he had a minimum opening and his partner's bid was not forcing. North doubled again. That was still for takeout, since South had not yet bid (a pass is not considered a bid). South was up against it. His only four-card suit had been bid by the enemy, so he was forced to introduce one of his three-card suits. He chose to show hearts, not only because that was where his only picture card was, but because his partner certainly had at least four hearts, but not necessarily four diamonds. We don't blame North for jumping to game.

West cashed the king and queen of spades and, in response to partner's high-low signal, continued with a low spade, ruffed high in dummy. The problem was simple—declarer had to avoid losing two diamond tricks. To accomplish that, he would have to find West with the ace of diamonds and lead diamonds twice toward the king-queen. Also, the suit would have to break 3-3.

Unfortunately, there was only one sure entry to declarer's hand. However, he realized that the nine of hearts was a possible entry.

Since this was the only realistic chance for the contract, he led a low trump from dummy and boldly finessed the nine. When it held, he led a diamond to the queen. He then returned to his hand with the queen of trumps and led another diamond. That rendered the defense helpless.

ANOTHER YEAR — The contract of Entertainer Anita Bryant with the Florida Citrus Commission was extended another year Wednesday, ending speculation she would be dumped because of her anti-homosexual rights activities. The new $100,000 contract is very similar to her 10-year agreement that was to expire in August. (AP Laserphoto)

Abandon Search

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The navy has abandoned its search for an Indian freighter and 51 persons missing in the Arabian Sea since July 3, a spokesman said.

An intensive air and sea search for the 21,500-ton Kairali was futile, the navy said. The ship, with a cargo of iron ore, was due in South Yemen on July 8. There were 51 persons including a woman and a child, the spokesman said.

Televising Film On Wreck Of Monitor

By The Associated Press
A half-hour program on the wreck of the Monitor is scheduled to be aired on University of North Carolina television tonight at 9.

The program, entitled "Dive on the Monitor," is the project of North Carolina filmmaker Bill Lovin.

"As far as I know, it is the first attempt to really compile everything that's happened," Lovin said.

The wreck of the Civil War ironclad is located about 16 miles off Cape Hatteras in 220 feet of water.

The Monitor sank on Dec. 31, 1862, while being towed to Beaufort for an attack on Wilmington.

In 1973, a Duke University research team discovered the wreck. To protect the vessel, the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration declared the Monitor the nation's first marine sanctuary in 1975.

Lovin was given permission to go along on a 1977 Harbor Branch Foundation expedition to investigate the Monitor.

"I was lucky to get out on the vessel," he said. "There are Monitor buffs all over the country, and many of these people descended on Cape Hatteras in 1977 — scientists and lay people."

Lovin, an employee of the state Department of Public Instruction, said the department will use the program as an in-school program.

Underwater explorer Jacques Cousteau shot 14 minutes of film at the Monitor site in June and will be included in a "Cousteau Odyssey" on public television next season.

"There will be more about the Monitor in the future," Lovin said. "There's a lot of interest, and people with big budgets will be doing programs, I'm sure. But I'm pleased that we could get there first."

Eyewitness Newsmagazine To Focus On Laotian Rebel's War

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seems, at first, like a scene from a movie. A gritty, shabbily constructed movie.

Then you realize it is some kind of news report from Southeast Asia. The reporter tells us in grave tones that he is about to embark on a dark and dangerous mission. With a thick mustache and wearing a cute kerchief around his neck, our correspondent looks spiffy, and ready for the jungle.

He takes us on an "operation" with a small group of Laotian rebels, reminding us now and then how dangerous it all is. These are real heroes, he tells us. They are carrying on a war with weapons discarded from earlier wars. They will never give up.

There is much walking and running through the jungle, more reminders of the dangers that lurk therein, and a return trip. We never find out exactly what all of this is about, where the "mission" was headed or what were its aims.

No matter though. It looked just swell.

Welcome to Eyewitness

Newsmagazine, also known as "20-20." Your reporter this evening — Geraldo Rivera, natty dresser and fancy turner of the snappy phrase. On this particular night, Geraldo ends his segment in the studio, polishing it off with a neat little summation of the whole history of Indochina.

"20-20" is the working man's "60 Minutes." You might have thought that "60 Minutes" was the working man's "60 Minutes." But this is the newsmagazine format brought to the people — flashy, preferably visually exciting bits aimed beyond the heads of no one.

And it is working. Earlier this month, "20-20" was ABC's top-rated show of the week, finishing third, ahead of CBS' "60 Minutes," the prototype of current TV newsmagazines.

It wasn't always so. The first "20-20," last summer, was a fizzle, a kind of mish-mash of entertainment and news, but mostly neither.

Kelp Considered As Fuel Source For Americans

METHANE FROM KELP — Artist's rendering shows a bouy holding attached arms from which kelp grows beneath the surface of the sea as frogmen and fish swim nearby. Scientists are growing kelp, hoping to turn it into synthetic fuel. (AP Laser-photo)

By TOM HARRIGAN
Associated Press Writer
NEWPORT BEACH, Calif.
(AP) — The tangly, smelly seaweed that wraps itself around swimmers may some day help them get home from the beach and warm them up when they get there. So don't curse the stuff — it could be part of the answer to the nation's energy crisis.

Scientists are now seriously considering the development of seaweed farms for conversion of the plant into methane — a possible substitute for natural gas. If the idea proves realistic, there could be a giant seaweed gasification industry along U.S. coasts before the year 2000.

With current technology, the millions of years of natural biological processes needed to produce gas from organic matter can be reduced to just days. And scientists feel seaweed, because of its fast growth and hydrocarbon content, is ideal for this accelerated process.

But growing the large amounts of weed necessary to feed the gasification plants is a problem, and an ambitious project sponsored by General Electric off the Southern California coast is seeking the solution.

The $7 million-a-year effort has become especially significant in light of President Carter's call for energy independence.

The program involves a "test farm" about five miles off this coastal resort where GE researchers are learning to manage the growth of kelp near the ocean surface. Although this seawater spread is only a quarter-acre now, scientists think it could become part of a giant industry.

"There's no chance we can replace all of it, but kelp conversion may end up supplying a significant part of U.S. natural gas needs, perhaps 15 to 20 percent or higher," says project manager Armond J. Bryce.

"The basic process of kelp nonversion is trapping solar energy and storing it in the form of plant tissue, then fashioning a gaseous product and delivering it through the existing distribution system," says Bryce.

Some of the new money promised by Carter for alternative fuels could speed development of kelp conversion by a few years, Bryce says, moving it into the mid-1990s. Current GE research schedules call for a 500-1,000-acre demonstration farm in 1985 and a commercial-size demonstration project in 1992.

To supply all the nation's current natural gas needs, research indicates that kelp farms 25 to 100 miles off the nation's East, West and Gulf coasts would have to total 400,000 square miles — about two-thirds the size of Pennsylvania.

But such farms just below the waves would create none of the environmental unsightliness of strip-mining for coal.

For cost effectiveness, production facilities would have to be nearby, but they could be huge, floating factories that extract methane and some other useful byproducts.

"The methane in this process, unlike barnyard methane (from animal waste) has no odor. With the whole thing contained indoors, we're not going to be venting anything. There's really nothing to throw away," Bryce says.

The main problem with the controlled growth of kelp is the hostile environment of the sea and the limited depth range where the kelp can grow. Requiring sunlight, the plant can't grow more than 80 to 100 feet below the surface.

Anchored by wires to the seabed 1,850 feet below, the GE kelp farm is actually a submerged horizontal trellis to which 100 transplanted kelp sprouts were connected last December. Supported by the metal trellis, the plants grow up some 50 feet to near the surface.

Meanwhile, a long, red and white striped cylinder runs up from the core of the trellis to the surface, protruding above the water like a giant barber pole as a warning to navigation.

A pipe stretches 1,500 feet down from the core to near the ocean bottom, and nutrient-rich water from the dark depths is drawn up by a diesel pump to nourish the plants.

Early this year, just two months after the kelp transplants were affixed to the trellis, a curtain designed to protect the test farm from the pounding of the ocean was itself pounded to pieces by powerful storms and all 100 plants washed away.

But the storm clouds had silver linings.

"We've got new kelp growth on all the bouys from the adult plant's spores. There are plants growing on the metal supports, rubber hoses, everything down there," says George W. Phillips Jr., vice president of Global Marine Development Inc., a subcontractor on the project.

Still to be figured out, though, is how to keep the kelp from tearing against supports and wires, how to build stronger curtains to lessen storm damage, and whether new or old plants have the best rate of growth and yield of methane.

Half the funding for the project comes from the federal Department of Energy and the other half from the Gas Research Institute, which is supported by gas utilities and pipeline companies.

The institute has committed $26 million to the project over five years. Its director, Dr. Ab Flowers, told a House energy subcommittee this spring, "A virtually unlimited potential exists for growing a huge biomass resource in the ocean. No scientific breakthroughs are required to commercialize this concept. Preliminary studies indicate gas costs could be competitive with other SNG (substitute natural gas) sources."

Farmwife Has Manager Role

By CHARLES E. WIESER
LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — In nearly 10 years of marriage, Deanna Guhde has spent little time in the traditional roles of a Nebraska farmwife.

The 30-year-old Mrs. Guhde is a full-fledged partner with her husband, David, in Guhde Farms, a swine-breeding operation near Brock in southeast Nebraska.

As the farm's business manager, Mrs. Guhde doesn't have time for the traditional, daily household chores of most farmwives. Instead, she has a housekeeper — one of eight full-time and seasonal employees hired by the Guhdes.

Business manager may be too narrow a definition of her job at Guhde Farms, she said in a telephone interview, "because I must know how to do everything."

She was a few minutes late for the call and explained she was delayed because she had to help weigh hogs, "something we have to do every three weeks."

With the concurrence of her husband, whose pet peeve is women who "don't want to know about more than washing dishes," Mrs. Guhde participates on an equal basis in decision-making in running the family's business.

What if there is something on which the two are unable to agree?

"We have different areas of decision-making, and we would probably defer to each other," Mrs. Guhde said.

She doesn't consider herself a women's libber "because I believe the man is the head of the house... that we are equal in making decisions, but if something is to be decided by one or the other, I leave it to my husband."

Mrs. Guhde likes to think she's in the forefront of a trend in which farm wives are becoming much more directly involved in farm management.

She said farming has developed into a "conglomerate type of big business" and in a highly successful program the wife "almost has to be involved."

She is positive of one thing: The Guhde swine operations would not have realized the results they have without the dual-manager arrangement. "Two heads are better than one," she said.

The Guhdes' speciality is raising Hampshires and Durocs, which they sell as breeding stock to commercial pork producers.

As the farm's business manager, Mrs. Guhde said, she keeps records on the breeding registrations of the hogs, does the financial bookkeeping and the banking, which includes borrowing money.

This works out fine because it frees Guhde to concentrate on all facets of the farm's outside operations.

Mrs. Guhde said she formerly worked regularly in the farrowing house but the couple decided there were too many other things she should be doing.

When she was asked what would have happened if she had not been interested in the hog breeding business, Mrs. Guhde reiterated the farm would not have been as successful.

"If we had not both pushed, the farm operations would not have gotten as large," she said. "We really work hard for the same goals. If we both didn't, we wouldn't reach those goals."

"We work 15-16 hours a day from April to November and 12-13 hours a day during the winter."

The couple's ambition, Mrs. Guhde said, is to be "among the top seed stock producers in the Midwest and in the nation."

Could a farm wife combine the traditional role of housewife and farm business manager?

Not if she is to be as "totally involved as I am," she said.

WHITNEY SHOW

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition of paintings, sculptures, photographs and works on paper acquired by the Whitney Museum of American Art during the past nine years is on view through Sept. 2.

"The Decade in Review: Selections from the 1970s" consists of 79 works by 70 artists. The museum says this represents about 30 percent of its acquisitions during the period.

Deadline For Veterans On Pension Plan

WINSTON-SALEM — Veterans Administration Regional Director Kenneth E. McDonald reminds veterans who are eligible for the improved pension plan that October 1, 1979 is the deadline for qualification of retroactive benefits.

The improved plan offers substantially higher pension rates than the old program, but changes in some income counted under the new plan may make it advisable for certain veterans to remain under their current plan.

In establishing the improved plan, Congress stipulated that veterans may switch before Oct. 1 if they wish the higher rates it provides to take effect retroactively to Jan. 1, 1979.

Nearly 432,000 veterans nationwide have asked the VA to switch their pension to the new plan. For more information, contact the local VA office.

Singapore Finally Has Complex Go-Ahead

By KENNETH L. WHITING
SINGAPORE (AP) — Developers finally have approval for what is expected to be Singapore's largest commercial real estate project, 10 years after it was first proposed.

They say excavation is to start before the end of 1979 on a business and entertainment complex along the lines of New York's Rockefeller Center.

The first phase of Raffles International Center (RIC) is expected to take five years to finish and cost at least $500 million (about U.S. $230 million). The Development Bank of Singapore, a public company 49 percent owned by the government, is promoting RIC.

The original three-phase plan announced in 1969 included office buildings, hotels, theaters and other entertainment facilities on 24.7 acres in one of this island republic's oldest commercial and school districts.

The name comes from Sir Stamford Raffles, founder of Singapore. A school called Raffles Institution and the venerable Raffles Hotel are in the neighborhood.

The Urban Renewal Authority decided in 1971 to restudy the project. Construction was formally postponed in 1973 when the Development Bank cited a shortage of construction workers and soaring costs. The original estimate was $400 million (about $184 million at present exchange rates).

American architect I. M. Pei had been commissioned by the government in 1968 to draw up a master plan for all three phases.

Pei's first offering in 1969 was based on an A-frame design. It was rejected. A second plan produced the following year built on a series of interlocking triangles was also turned down.

The third unsuccessful design involved interlocking stacked buildings and towers and the fourth was based on a unique tear drop concept.

The successful fifth design, with a few modifications, includes four towers: 70-story and 40-story office buildings and two 30-story hotels along with a seven-story podium block and two levels of underground parking.

The fifth revision, approved in February, concentrates only on RIC, but allows for continuity of lines into second and third segments of the overall plan. No firm details have been announced for financing or construction of these two phases.

Some bankers questioned RIC's viability after the Urban Renewal Authority announced that Marina City, a similar complex, is planned for land already reclaimed on the edge of Singapore harbor.

"Development Bank of Singapore's decision to take on the project reflects in part its ability to sort out the funding problems involved in the project," said the Business Times.

The financial daily also reported that documents for bids were completed two years ago and "would have gone on the market but for funding."

"In part, too, the go-ahead for RIC has been motivated by the anticipated increased tourist flow and mild business recovery in the coming years."

Germany invaded Russia on a 3,500-kilometer front in 1941.

78° IS COOL.

For every degree cooler than 78°, your air conditioner uses about 5% more electricity. And in the summer, when the most electricity is used, that can make a big difference.

So please, set your home air conditioner at 78° or higher, or no more than 15° cooler than the temperature outside (whichever is the higher setting.)

You can also take these two important energy management steps. First, restrict your weekday use of major appliances during the "peak load" hours of 10 A.M. to 10 P.M. Second, don't overwork your water heater. Use the dishwasher and washing machine only for full loads, and wash clothes in cool water instead of hot.

By following these tips, you'll be keeping your electric bills down, and helping us all make it through the summer without power shortages.

Laetrile Assigned To A Legal And Medical Limbo

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Laetrile, the purported cancer cure that has had more proven success in the political arena than in medicine, remains in a scientific and legal limbo — legalized by a score of states but rebuffed by the Supreme Court.

A cancer patient still can legally import the drug extracted from the pits of apricots and other fruits, provided a doctor signs an affidavit that the patient is terminally ill. But Laetrile is not freely available even in the states that have legalized it.

The Supreme Court in June upheld the Food and Drug Administration's power to ban Laetrile from interstate commerce, even for the dying, but it did not disturb the legal mechanism for importation that U.S. District Judge Luther Bohanon in Oklahoma City set up in 1977.

The agency is still fighting to close off Bohanon's affidavit system, and the court fight is far from over.

"Apparently, it will be litigated forever and forever," said Michael Culbert, president of the Committee for Freedom of Choice in Cancer Therapy, a California-based Laetrile lobbying group.

And while the legal briefs pile up, the National Cancer Institute is still waiting for permission to start testing Laetrile on humans.

Last September, after prolonged soul-searching, the institute announced plans for a clinical trial of Laetrile on 300 advanced cancer patients for whom conventional therapy had failed.

But the FDA, which must approve any experimental use of unapproved drugs, has not yet decided whether to allow the $250,000 test.

The FDA wants to know more about the source of the institute's Laetrile, said spokesman Wayne Pines. He said it also is concerned about the ethics of "testing a substance on humans that has shown no safety and effectiveness in animals," particularly in light of a recent study that found Laetrile was poisonous in test animals.

Some cancer experts feel a clinical test is justified, given the scope of the Laetrile movement. "Certainly, we can't go chasing every quack drug," said Dr. Charles G. Moertel of the Mayo Clinic's Comprehensive Cancer Center. "But Laetrile has assumed proportions that no other quack medicine has assumed before."

Moertel said that a clinical trial could show whether Laetrile has any impact on tumor size, provides pain relief, or even imparts a sense of well-being, as its advocates claim.

No one knows how many Americans have used Laetrile. The most common estimates range from 50,000 to 75,000, but Moertel cautions, "These are all off-the-top-of-our-heads estimates primarily gleaned from Laetrile distributors."

Laetrile promoters estimate 4,500 Americans cross the Mexican border each year to spend $1,500 to $3,000 for three- or four-week Laetrile treatments.

Most Laetrile in this country is reportedly sold on the black market, and the FDA has warned Laetrile may be impure and toxic. At least two deaths by cyanide poisoning from Laetrile have been documented: a New York infant who took her father's tablets and a California woman who took massive amounts for breast cancer.

But Moertel and others say Laetrile is not usually toxic in its customary dose.

Laetrile, known generically as amygdalin, contains cyanide surrounded by glucose molecules. It is found not only in apricot pits and bitter almonds, but in lima beans, sweet potatoes and other foods whose "cyanogenic glucosides" usually are not harmful, experts say.

Amygdalin was first found in bitter almonds in the 1830s. In the 1920s, San Francisco physician Ernst T. Krebs Sr. developed a product from apricot kernels he called Sarcocarpine. He patented it a decade later as "an enzyme for treatment of malignant growths," but it was so toxic it killed rats.

Krebs refined it over the years, and in 1949 his son renamed it Laetrile and propounded the theory that the cyanide in amygdalin attacked cancer cells but not healthy ones.

Its backers currently view cancer as a type of vitamin-deficiency disease and recommend a regimen of vitamins, minerals, enzymes and a largely vegetarian "metabolic" diet as well as Laetrile.

"Laetrile should never be used by itself. Laetrile simply is not a magic bullet. We never claimed it was," said Robert W. Bradford, founder of the Committee for Freedom of Choice and owner of a firm that sells Laetrile products.

Laetrile backers see themselves as the successors to Copernicus, Galileo and other discoverers who were pilloried in their day.

The FDA notes that boosters of other "miracle" cancer cures made that claim, too. And Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall noted in the Laetrile decision that FDA annuals include such purported cures as "lineaments of turpentine, mustard, oil, eggs and ammonia ... and pastes made from glycerin and Limburger cheese."

Marshall said this explains why Congress decided to protect the public against "the vast range of self-styled panaceas that inventive minds can devise."

Some observers suspect that use of Laetrile is down or, at the very least, has leveled off.

Bradford thinks Laetrile use is just now growing back to the level of 1975, the year before states began to legalize it. "A lot of doctors stopped using it as soon as the government got involved. They just didn't want the harassment," he said.

FDA lawyer Eugene M. Pfeiffer said, "Things seem to go into vogue and out of vogue. I would suspect that Laetrile at one point or another will be supplanted by some other drug just now emerging on some Greek island or Tibetan hilltop. There's always a dozen or two vying for attention."

Busy Towers In Tourist Mecca

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Virginia Beach, a tourist Mecca, is also becoming a haven for tow truck operators who do a brisk and profitable business hauling away the illegally parked cars of all those visitors.

Wrecker drivers who answer police calls — there were 670 police calls for tows in June out of 1,397 total tows — are restricted to a $35 fee by city ordinance. But those who work on private property are unregulated, and some have signs for $75 fees.

One ambitious entrepreneur towed 26 cars on July 8 and grossed more than $1,000 that day.

Richard E. McCuiston, the new owner of Rich's Towing Service, says he has contracts with more than 150 beachfront merchants who want to keep their lots open for shoppers, not daytime bathers or nighttime party-goers.

City records show that McCuiston towed 199 cars between July 1 and July 18 — at an average of $40 to $50 per tow.

He's not making friends, McCuiston said, but he is making money.

Towers say they are providing a needed service in a heavily congested area, and even their severest critics admit that a healthy fleet of trucks is needed.

But City Council and the tourist industry are becoming increasingly concerned over where need stops and ripoff begins.

The city spends more than $1 million yearly on advertising designed to lure the 2.4 million tourists who keep the area congested and who drop an estimated $200 million annually into the area's economy, keeping taxes here some of the lowest in the state.

Mayor Patrick L. Standing fears that waves of bad publicity originating from irate victims could begin to crack the rising tourist market.

"Even if a person makes a mistake and gets towed, he or she should be assured of a reasonable charge," Standing told the council earlier this month.

But tow truck operators say they will not accept all the blame for the situation.

Tony Grant, owner of Beach Services, Inc. defended the tow charges by saying his $15,000 wreckers get 6 to 7 miles a gallon and he has to keep an attendant on duty until 2 or 3 a.m. when the bars close.

He also said the city has done nothing to alleviate a long-standing, acknowledged parking shortage at the oceanfront.

The council has rejected the idea for a highrise parking garage and this year removed another 17 spaces from Atlantic Avenue to install left-turn lanes.

"They could spend some money down here to make it easier and for visitors to park and reduce their own public relations problem," he said.

"This controversy resurfaces every year, and we're always the scapegoats."

Psychiatrist Joins School

Dr. L.J. BARNHILL

Dr. L. Jarrett Barnhill Jr., a child psychiatrist, has been appointed assistant professor of psychiatry at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Barnhill will be responsible for the development of a pediatric liaison program with the ECU Department of Pediatrics and the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

A native of Robersonville, Barnhill received his undergraduate degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and his MD from the Bowman Gray School of Medicine. He completed postgraduate medical training at North Carolina Memorial Hospital, Chapel Hill, and North Carolina Baptist Hospital, Winston-Salem.

Aliens Snubbing Their Airfield

LONGMIRE, Wash. (AP) — So far, alien beings have snubbed an airfield built for them near Mount Rainier.

Members of the New Age Foundation, which built the "spaceport" 13 months ago, are now building the signal tower. At the top will be a pyramid-shaped metal device to transmit thought energy provided by group members, says Wayne Aho, New Age Foundation leader.

The group will gather in a circle around the tower and clasp hands to form a giant "battery," Aho said. The friendly thoughts will soar skyward and can be received by the spaceships, Aho says.

The UFO landing field is located on the 14-acre headquarters of the New Age Foundation near the entrance to Mount Rainier National Park. It was above Mount Rainier in 1947 that an airline pilot reported the first flying saucer sightings on record.
