

Hunt Proposes CP&L Take Over VEPCO

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said today he has proposed that Carolina Power & Light Co. take over Virginia Electric & Power Co. service in northeastern North Carolina.

Hunt said at a morning news conference that such a takeover would result in lower electric rates and more reliable service in the 22 North Carolina counties served by Vepco.

He said high electric rates in those counties was stifling economic development.

Hunt praised the state Utilities Commission for ordering this week that Vepco reduce its rates by more than $4 million and refund $1.6 million to its North Carolina customers.

"Their (Vepco) management has not performed well," Hunt said. "It would just seem to me to make sense and that's why I proposed it."

Hunt said he was suggesting a commercial transaction in which CP&L would buy out Vepco in its North Carolina service areas. He said he had no idea of what the costs would be to CP&L, but he said CP&L could handle the additional electricity demand without raising its rates generally.

Hunt compared his suggestion to a situation 30 years ago when CP&L bought Tide Water Electric Co. in the Wilmington area.

Hunt said he was pleased that the Utilities Commission ordered lower rates for Vepco but said that would not be a long-term solution to reducing the cost of power and in encouraging industrial development.

"The real solution to it, and the quick solution, would be to change the companies serving and bring the same kinds of rates as the rest of the state," he said.

Hunt said CP&L officials "appeared to be receptive to the idea" when it was suggested by Hunt administrative assistant John A. Williams.

Hunt said Vepco's capacity has been strained in serving northeastern North Carolina and the utility has complained that it was more expensive to serve North Carolina.

The North Carolina counties make up about 5 percent of Vepco's service area.

Hunt produced figures comparing electric rates for Vepco, CP&L and Duke Power Co. The figures showed for small residential electric customers, Duke's rates are as much as 47 percent lower than Vepco's. For some industrial users, Vepco is as much as 50 percent more expensive than Duke Power and 30 percent more expensive than CP&L.

Hunt said he had no political motives in suggesting the switch.

"It's motivated to help bring about economic development in those northeastern counties," he said.

Residents in the Vepco service area have frequently complained about high electric rates. A petition protesting the high cost of electricity was presented at Hunt last year along with 45,000 signatures.

Hunt asked the Utilities Commission to begin an investigation of Vepco last September, and that probe resulted in this week's commission order.

Hunt said he did not believe the commission had the legal authority to order a takeover of Vepco by CP&L. But he said he would be willing to ask the Legislature to "do whatever is necessary to see that northeastern North Carolina has reasonable rates."

Hunt blamed the high Vepco rates on management decisions that have led to Vepco's heavy reliance on oil-fired generating and inefficient coal plants.

Greenville's Population Said 34,539

The City of Greenville has received notification from the North Carolina Department of Administration, Division of State Budget, that the results of the special population study conducted on April 18, 1979, has been accepted in full.

The population within the corporate limits is now estimated to be 34,539 as of April 18, and was accepted after a thorough check of the survey's accuracy.

This figure was somewhat surprising since the housing count indicated a 30 percent increase over 1970. However, the survey demonstrated that the average number of persons per dwelling unit has decreased 11 percent from 3.0 in 1970 to the current figure of 2.67.

This almost exactly matches the demonstrated nationwide decline in average household size of 10 to 11 percent.

Since the upcoming State estimate will be made as of July 1, 1978, the 34,539 figure will be prorated to that date. The city expects that figure to be just under 34,000.

The figure is significant in that it should reverse the trend of revising downward over the past two years (1976-1977) the state's estimate of local population. With the return of state-shared revenues averaging $20 to $30 per capita, it is very important to reflect accurate growth trends.

The estimate to be released for July 1, 1978, should be higher than the July 1, 1977 estimate. Likewise, the 1979 estimate will be higher than the survey figure of April 18, 1979. The same trend is likely to continue for the 1980 estimate since the 1980 census results will not likely be available until late 1981.

During that time any demonstrated additional growth, such as annexations, will also be taken into account.

Carter Told Recession's Gas-Ration Bill Action Faces Delay

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An internal Carter administration document predicts Americans will face a deeper recession with higher unemployment next year than the White House has forecast publicly, according to a source.

The internal assessment says the jobless rate will hit 8.2 percent in the fall of 1980, meaning a total of 8.2 million Americans could be out of work. In June, the unemployment rate stood at 5.6 percent.

A source, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday night the projections are contained in "an internal document" that probably was never intended to be made public.

The predictions were prepared by a joint task force that included senior staffers from the Treasury Department and Council of Economic Advisers, the source said.

The internal forecast differs sharply from the economy outlook the Carter administration released July 12.

At that time, the administration was projecting an unemployment rate next year of only 6.9 percent. The latest Labor Department figures, for June, show 5.6 million Americans were out of work. The internal projection means an additional 2.6 million Americans could be out of work next year.

The figures in the more pessimistic forecast closely parallel predictions being made by the Federal Reserve

Board. The board chairman, G. William Miller, will soon move into the administration as secretary of the treasury.

It was expected that the internal document would increase pressure on President Carter to propose a tax cut for 1980 to give the economy a boost.

The internal document made the following predictions:

—Economic output: A decline in the gross national product of 1.4 percent this year, rather than the milder 0.5 percent dip in real terms the administration predicted July 12. Also, recovery will be weaker in 1980 than that forecast predicted. The administration said three weeks ago output would grow by 2 percent in 1980, while the internal document predicts a 1.1 percent rise.

—Unemployment: The nation's jobless rate will rise in the remaining months of this year and hit 8.2 percent by the end of 1980, not the 6.9 percent forecast earlier.

—Inflation: The inflation rate for the economy as a whole will be 8.8 percent in 1980, compared with the July 12 figure of 8.1 percent. These figures include a variety of goods outside the Consumer Price Index, which has been climbing at a 13 percent annual rate this year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic congressional leaders are making one last bid to rush a standby gasoline-rationing bill to President Carter's desk, but they claim their chances are slim.

It was more likely that Congress would begin its monthlong recess at the close of business today without producing the rationing bill Carter seeks.

Today to formally reject the rationing bill the House passed late Wednesday and thus set off the search for a compromise version.

The House passed its bill by a 263-159 vote, but ladened it with so many amendments Senate leaders immediately pronounced it unacceptable.

Finding a compromise that can be enacted before the recess "would be very difficult," concluded Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., the main House sponsor of the rationing bill.

However, he said the attempt will be made. "It won't be easy," he said.

House leaders had hoped to give the president at least this piece of his new energy plan before beginning their recess.

Many of the amendments tacked on in the House did not concern rationing.

Bob Scott Not Yet Decided On Governor Bid

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Gov. Bob Scott has told political friends not to count him out of the 1980 governor's race yet, and to continue raising money while he makes up his mind.

Scott, who said last week he was leaning against entering the 1980 governor's race, met with political advisors early this week in Raleigh and told them he still was interested in running.

Scott, in an interview Wednesday, said he told supporters he was not as reluctant to run as his comments had indicated, and that he would begin traveling around the state in an effort to determine if there is sufficient support to warrant a challenge to Gov. Jim Hunt.

He also told supporters to continue with plans to authorize a public opinion survey on his chances.

"I'm trying to gauge that current, that attitude, of the voting citizen who is not in politics, the average citizen," Scott said in an interview with The Associated Press. "I don't feel I can rely totally. I know I can't, on what political activists tell me."

Scott said last month he was weighing a race for either governor or lieutenant governor. But Scott said this week he has narrowed his thinking now primarily to the governor's race.

Charles Bradshaw, a former cabinet member in the Scott administration and now chairman of the Friends of Bob Scott Committee, said after meeting with Scott that his group would raise money and take steps to authorize a survey. Bradshaw said he and other Scott allies are encouraging him to announce a decision soon.

The Scott committee filed organizational papers with the state Board of Elections last month, but has not reported the extent of its recent fund-raising.

Scott said he was confident he could raise enough money for a campaign if he announces his intentions. "I don't worry about money. The money will come," he said.

Scott sounded like a candidate in a speech in Durham Monday, making another strongly-worded attack on Hunt administration policies and saying Hunt was not providing progressive leadership.

But Scott said his recent criticisms of the Hunt administration are generating a response he will attempt to measure before deciding whether to run for governor.

Hunt has not formally announced as a candidate for reelection, but even his closest political aides say publicly that he will run. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, long Hunt's leading political rival, has shied away from a Hunt challenge and says he is leaning toward seeking reelection.

Subdivision's Final Plat Is Given Approval

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission gave its approval Wednesday to a revised final plat of Section 1 of Oakgrove Estates, located on State Road 1417.

The board, which had voted at last week's meeting to table the matter until the Recreation Commission could be consulted concerning the possible purchase of recreational acreage in the area, took action on the revised plat at an afternoon call session.

At last week's meeting, it was pointed out that a 1.26-acre tract had been designated initially in the development for possible recreational usage. The Recreation Commission, however, did not exercise its option on the property and the owners indicated that they now wanted to subdivide the tract into two lots for sale.

Commissioner William Gibbs, who resides in the Greenfield Terrace area near Oakgrove, expressed a desire at the last meeting to defer action on the plat until the recreation board could be contacted regarding its current position as to possible purchase of the acreage for development as park land.

Gibbs said yesterday that he was concerned about the situation in and around Greenfield Terrace from a recreational standpoint. He said he had hoped that additional acreage would be acquired by the city to expand the recreational opportunities in the area.

Boyd Lee, executive director of the Recreation and Parks Commission, noted that the long range plan of the board is to acquire more land in the Greenfield Terrace area but adequate funding is not available.

Lee assured Gibbs that the commission is not abandoning the area as a future site for recreational land purchase, noting that Greenfield Terrace is number two on the overall priority list for future site purchases.

Lee, it was mentioned, had earlier notified the developers of Oakgrove that the Recreation Commission had to give up its option to purchase the designated property and the developers were relieved of the obligation to provide recreational space in the subdivision.

VEPCO Plans Appeal Order By Commission

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Virginia Electric and Power Co., which serves an area of northeastern North Carolina, says it will appeal the state Utilities Commission order that the company refund $1.6 million and readjust its fuel-adjustment rate to customers in this state.

William W. Berry, Vepco executive vice president, said in a prepared statement Wednesday that the appeal to the North Carolina Court of Appeals would question commission findings that resulted in the order.

Berry said Vepco also would raise legal questions about the commission's authority to order the refund.

The commission on Tuesday ordered Vepco to make the refund for bills collected from February through July, and reduced the fuel-adjustment rate by about $4.1 million a year.

For a typical customer who used 1,000 kilowatt-hours a month, the refund would be $12.14.

The commission also told Vepco to convert five of its oil-fired plants to coal by the end of 1980.

The commission said that beginning in 1981, rates would be adjusted further to reflect savings that could result under the conversion.

Berry said in his statement, "The commission's findings are based on conditions that existed several years ago. Vepco studied those problems in 1977 and 1978, and made changes in its operating procedures to eliminate them. Therefore, the rate adjustments ordered were not supported by evidence in the case."

The order resulted from a nearly year-long investigation into why Vepco's rates were significantly higher than other electric companies serving the state.

PICNIC AREA UNSIGHTLY?

There is a small picnic area on Highway 33 about 10 miles outside Greenville that is grown up and littered. Yet it's an ideal place for canoers to put into the river and I know a lot of people would use it if it were better kept. I'd like to know why it hasn't been kept up.

Carl Boyd of the N. C. Department of Highways said there are no state-owned and -maintained picnic areas on Highway 33, so the one of which you're speaking must be privately owned. You did not make clear in which direction from Greenville on 33 the area is located. You may be trespassing when you use it at all, or the owners may freely allow its use. We don't know and won't know how to follow up further unless we hear from you or the owners.

CONSUMER PROTECTION MEASURE

The N. C. General Assembly has enacted a consumer protection measure, effective Sept. 1, that allows patrons of dance studios and health spas three days to cancel contracts and allows for pro rata refunds if the consumer is unable to use the facilities. Prior to the enactment of the law, N. C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said, customers who were prevented from continuing with their program by health problems such as heart attacks and strokes could be required to keep paying.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Recently on the Phil Donahue show, educator Dr. Raymond S. Moore discussed why he thought children would be more emotionally secure and better educated if kept out of school until they are nine or 10 years old.

It's not the sort of thing I'm capable of handling in August. This is the time of year when my "emotional security" is reduced to squatting in a corner macraméing my own hair.

I'm not saying the theory is without merit. I'm only saying it would certainly foul up the timetable as we know it.

If kids started to school at, say, 10 years old, they would go through puberty before they could spell it, drive a car only a couple of years after they're permitted to cross the street with the light, and get a checkmark under Personal Habits for "not shaving regularly."

Can you imagine your eighth-grader coming home one day and saying, "Mom, Debbie and I are going to get married Saturday," and your exclaiming, "What! And miss the Science Fair?"

The emotional development of a child is important, of course. But what happens to the emotions of a mother who is sentenced to a home with a child hanging around with nothing to do for the first 10 years of his or her life?

At age one, the child pulls himself up to the table.

At age two, the child pulls the tablecloth off the table.

At age three, the child crayons on the table.

At age four, the child climbs the middle of the table and takes off all his clothes.

At age five, the child pounds nails into the table.

At age six, the child pulls the table over to the cupboards and gets to the cookies.

At age seven, the child saws the leg off the table.

At age eight, the child shoves the table outside and leaves it to the rain.

At age nine, the child paints the table.

At age ten, he sells it.

The idea may work, but when these emotionally mature children graduate, prepare to see emotional 70-year-old mothers in the audience.

Readers Discuss Comprehensive Ballet Lessons Study Held At Duke

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I was outraged when I read the letter from UPTIGHT MOM whose son, 12 years old and an excellent skater, wanted to take ballet lessons. She feared if he did he might become a sissy or go the gay route.

Apparently UPTIGHT MOM doesn't realize how much masculinity and athletic ability are required in ballet.

I would like to see a sissy lift a 130-pound ballerina with one hand and hold her over his head. And all those leaps, turns and jumps require muscle control, coordination and strength that the finest athlete would envy.

Ballet does more for a young man's body than football. I'd much rather see my son in "Swan Lake" than at the Rose Bowl. At least I wouldn't worry that he might be carried off in the middle of his performance with a fractured jaw and a broken leg.

LONG BEACH MOM

DEAR MOM: Read on for more response to UPTIGHT MOM:

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for telling UPTIGHT MOM to let her son take ballet if that's what he wants.

I'm a ballet teacher and I've had college-age males come to my classes to learn grace and flexibility. I've had discus throwers, mountain climbers, gymnasts and tennis players in my classes.

If people realized how difficult and physically demanding ballet is, they wouldn't think it was for sissies. I know that many coaches of soccer, basketball and ice hockey have required their teams to study ballet.

K.M. IN SAN JOSE

DEAR ABBY: I'm surprised at UPTIGHT MOM. I happen to be a 13-year-old girl who goes to ballet classes three times a week, and I know for a fact that there is nothing wrong with the guys in MY class.

TEED OFF IN MY TUTU

DEAR ABBY: Please tell UPTIGHT MOM not to have any fears about her son becoming homosexual because he expressed a desire to take ballet lessons in order to improve his ice skating.

I am well acquainted with someone who worked with Baryshnikov, and she told me that Baryshnikov had to beat the women off with a club!

IN THE KNOW IN N.Y.C.

DEAR ABBY: Talk about ignorance! UPTIGHT MOM wins the prize. Before my son won the Golden Gloves championship he was advised to take ballet lessons to improve his footwork. He followed that advice and didn't feel the least bit embarrassed about it. He knew he was no sissy.

He has told other young boxers that ballet lessons teach a man to move with speed and rhythm in the ring.

POPLAR BLUFF, MO.

DURHAM — A Duke University Medical Center research team has started a comprehensive clinical study of Alzheimer's Disease, an early form of senility that affects an estimated half million Americans.

The three-year study of the disease, which usually appears between 50 and 65 years of age, is being supported by a $180,000 grant from the National Institute of Aging.

Dr. Albert Heyman, professor of neurology, said Alzheimer's Disease, or presenile dementia, is marked by severe memory loss, lack of judgment and inability to carry out routines of daily living and progressive confusion. It is a mysterious degeneration of nerve cells in the outer layers of the brain, which almost invariably gets worse.

Heyman said the collaborative study of about 100 patients is exploring three major clues linked to Alzheimer's Disease by previous research:

— Evidence that certain patients with a familiar form of the disease may harbor a rare kind of virus in the brain. Investigators will look for viral antibodies in spinal fluid.

— Abnormally high levels of aluminum found in patients. The study will try to learn if there has been excessive exposure to the metal through allergy shots, antacids, occupational factors or other sources. It could be, however, he said, that excessive aluminum is a result of the illness, rather than its cause.

— A genetic defect suspected by some researchers. While no defect has yet been identified, it is suspected because Alzheimer's Disease tends to run in families.

Heyman said a complete physical and psychological exam will be given to all patients involved in the study, along with an electroencephalogram (EEG), a computerized brain scan, spinal fluid analysis and blood tests.

"We want to make certain that the diagnosis is really Alzheimer's Disease and not some treatable illness such as hyperthyroidism or pernicious anemia," he said.

Every six months for three years, study subjects will be re-examined to monitor the progression of their illness, Heyman said.

At Duke, patients and their families will be given counseling at the OARS Clinic, a geriatric evaluation and treatment facility sponsored by the University's Center for the Study of Aging and Human Development.

Similar Aid To Wholesalers?

There was some good news for retail customers of Virginia Electric and Power Co. with an N. C. Utilities Commission order to the firm to refund certain fuel expenses, and also to reduce its retail rates.

In this area the order will affect VEPCO customers in Bethel, Williamston and the Martin County area.

Lest Greenville Utilities customers begin celebrating, it should be remembered that the local utilities is a wholesale customer of VEPCO's and thus not covered by the State Utilities Commission order. The wholesale rate settings are covered by the Federal Energy Regulation Commission.

But if the fuel and rate charges are too high by State Utilities Commission figures, there is reason to think that the wholesale rate figures are too high also.

Greenville Utilities and other North Carolina wholesale customers should immediately approach VEPCO for similar actions in regards to their rates. If the company won't act, then the wholesale customers should approach the Federal Energy Regulation Commission to request relief in line with that granted by the N. C. Utilities Commission.

Tobacco Market Prospects Brighten

The Greenville Tobacco Market recorded its highest average of the year Monday at $126.02, and $128.61 Tuesday.

It has been an apprehensive start for all tobacco markets this year, particularly as farmers view the awesome increases in cost of producing tobacco.

It is still a hopeful year for the tobacco farmer with prices holding up, and likely moving ahead.

Needs Are Computerized

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Computers are not necessarily cold-hearted business machines spewing out indecipherable demographic data and endless reams of statistics.

They can be quite concerned with human beings. Take, for example, the computer program worked up by the Center for Urban Affairs at North Carolina State University.

It can tell you who needs help, and what kind.

Local communities wrestling with the dilemma of how to help the truly needy — who they are, where they are, how many of them, how much a particular program would cost — can now plug into that computer for some answers.

More than half of the state's 100 counties are already involved in training programs and learning to make use of the sophisticated approach to welfare.

Other counties, particularly the smaller, rural ones, will find somebody soon at the various regional headquarters who can work with the computer system.

Interviews

Specialists at N.C. State have quietly gone about their homework of preparing the computer system so that local Social Services departments and state-level welfare officials can begin to answer some of the nettlesome questions.

A statewide survey was conducted with trained interviewers actually going into the homes and talking with people about their income levels, constraints to self-sufficiency, and their goals in life, the problems they encounter on a day-to-day basis, their basic needs, and a host of additional information.

Using census tract information and proven statistical techniques for applying samples to larger populations on a scientific basis, the data has been compiled for each county across the state.

At its simplest, the technique is like that used by the television network computers in determining election outcomes.

Given known population data on ages, income levels, and educational levels in given communities, the interview results can be matched to larger communities.

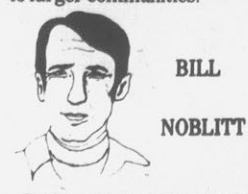

Specifics

Local social services people can study the information to help determine specifically what kinds of services are needed — day care, meals on wheels, home care for the sick or elderly, rehabilitation, etc. — and can plan the cost and size of the programs ahead of time. Essential services can be pinpointed, and unneeded efforts scratched.

Also, says Christian, "You can document your needs, and you can show local citizens and governing officials what those needs are and how the money will benefit people."

As this computer system comes on line, state and local officials are also entering into a more cooperative planning effort on how to divide up the $64 million in federal funds available under Title XX.

A statewide planning and coordinating council with members representing local governments, welfare clients, and state agencies will develop into a clearinghouse for information and programs.

Days Of Sound, Fury

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Ten days have passed since the Great Upheaval of 1979. The dust has settled; the president has reconstituted his Cabinet; it was all good fun while it lasted. But to look back upon July's headlines is to recall Macbeth's soliloquy. Life, said the doomed laird, is "a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

What we have experienced, and about all we have experienced, is a media event. This is a term of journalistic art. A planned demonstration, as distinguished from a spontaneous demonstration, is a media event. The staged dressing-room fracas of two boxers is a media event. If the media were not around, such events would not occur.

There is a nice irony in all this. Mr. Carter has developed a truly Nixonian animosity toward the press in recent months, but from the moment he canceled his scheduled July 5 address, he has manipulated the media, held us hostage and made us work for him. His unexplained cancellation set off shock waves, precisely as his advisers anticipated. What followed was pure hype, the gaudy stuff of press agency in the grand school — the helicoptered parade of advisers to Camp David, the sudden visits to Common People in Pittsburgh and Martinsburg, the descent from the mountain. The Sunday night address attracted double the audience Mr. Carter might have drawn otherwise.

Let us give credit where credit is due: This has been image making in the classic pattern. Repeating the Nixonian scenario, a "New Carter" has emerged, clenching his fists, growling and pawing. Was he criticized for being indecisive? Mr. Carter would make his critics grovel. Overnight he became the Man of Action, demanding resignations, firing members of his Cabinet, naming swift replacements, furiously sounding forth on the virtues of his reorganization. What, one

To the editor:

Boys need a father. It seems that the first responsibility of any father is to develop sons into upstanding, well-balanced, responsible citizens. Many fathers send their sons to strict boys' schools to expose them to strong male influences, but school nor good teachers' however conscientious, cannot substitute for a father. The society your child is destined to grow up in is both male and female. Your son needs a man around that he can respect and imitate. Daughters need a father, too. He sets the patterns for the daughter's future judgment in men. If she picks out a husband you consider not good enough, remember that she got her ideal of manhood from you! If a father is a godly and happy man, the daughter is likely to pick out that kind of man for a husband.

The ideal father is patient with his children and spends time with them. A boy 21 years old stood before the judge for sentencing. The judge shamed him for his behavior and reminded him of his father who had been a famous judge. The boy spoke, "My father never had time for me and when I came to him for help, he was always busy. He never helped me, never gave me advice. He is responsible for me being here!"

The ideal father is firm. Children want to know rules. They appreciate discipline, if it is firm and honest — and given in love.

In addition to patience and firmness, the ideal father has a sympathy for his children. This is love. It means he's interested in everything that interests them — a report card, a boyfriend, a party, what happened at the swimming pool or in Sunday School. To know that one is loved and appreciated, respected for what he is, is one of life's greatest blessings, whether we be 10 or 60.

Finally, the ideal father is Christian. He sets an example of godliness before his children.

Fathers, where do you come in?

Mrs. J. W. Maye Sr.

To the editor:

There is in this city a growing manufacturing complex, where every day, 24 hours a day, industrial zombies are turning out. It disguises itself with the promise of higher-than-average wages, a promotional ladder that has no end, and the assurance of an open and fair system. What the unsuspecting employee will soon learn is, it is all a matter of allowing your brain to be sent to the cleaners. We have one consolation — like all politically-powered industries, it will consume itself in a tide of greed, discrimination and total lack of concern for employee needs.

An Old Debt Is Repaid

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wally Cunneen III, who almost died his first day on earth, has spent the last six weeks as a volunteer at Children's Hospital here, paying back a 23-year-old emotional debt to the doctor who saved his life.

"A lot of people might have just said, 'Thank you very much Doc, shook hands, smiled, had a lollipop and been gone for good,'" Cunneen said Tuesday, his 23rd birthday and the last day of his tour.

"But I had to go beyond that because I believe that he really cared."

Cunneen was born with a blocked esophagus that caused food and liquids to enter his lungs, instead of his stomach. Dr. Harry C. Bishop successfully corrected the birth defect that in those days killed two out of every three babies afflicted.

When Wally was 1, his parents moved to California, but kept in touch with the doctor who had saved their oldest son. The boy grew up to major in marketing, and he will take a job this fall with Xerox Corp.

Last year, Bishop, now 58, visited the Cunneens on his way to a medical convention in Hawaii.

"I got a chance to talk to this man I felt a lot of loyalty to, but never had the opportunity to meet," Cunneen recalled.

"Just before graduation, I started getting together with all my friends, and started talking about where we were headed, where we were going, what we wanted to do with ourselves. It got me to thinking about who has been really good to me — my family, my grandparents."

"Then it dawned on me the reason I'm able to graduate from college, enjoy my family, be with my grandparents, my friends in school, was because of what Dr. Bishop did for me 23 years ago. Within a couple of

D.H. Conley, superintendent of Pitt County schools, said today that the Pactolus High School had been placed on the accredited list of North Carolina high schools.

It is the eleventh Pitt County high school to be placed on the list and Conley said the Arthur school, the only one not on the list, probably would be put on the list during the 1939-40 school year.

R.H. Forrest, principal of the Pactolus high school, was advised of the elevation by Dr. J. Henry Highsmith, director of the Division of Instructional Service.

Martin Swartz, superintendent of the Greenville Water and Light Commission, revealed today that a turbo-generator had just arrived and that the $375,545 WPA project started here last November was nearing completion.

The foundations have been laid and the turbo-generator will be transferred from the freight cars to its permanent location immediately.

Weather Warfare Looms

By EDITH KERMIT ROOSEVELT

History teaches us that a nation's future is often decided by a decisive breakthrough in weaponry — for example the development of the crossbow by the British in the middle ages and the atomic bomb by America in World War II. An example in our own time may well be the development of weather weapons.

The concept of weather modification is not a new one. Nikola Tesla, a Yugoslavian-born scientist, discovered that the earth could be used effectively as a transmitter of electricity. In his experiments, he successfully lit 200 electrical lamps from a distance of 25 miles without the use of wires. This ability to transmit electricity without the use of wires was important to his interest in weather modification because a great deal of controlled power is necessary to alter the jet stream in the upper atmosphere.

When Tesla died here in America in 1943, his papers were sent home to Belgrade, Yugoslavia where, reportedly, they were made available to Russian scientists.

The United States Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in 1974, held hearings on Proposed Weather Modification Treaties. In these hearings, the late Dr. Gordon MacDonald, former science advisor to President Johnson, outlined possible weather warfare methods such as: steering hurricanes, manipulating the polar ice caps, creating guided tidal waves and modifying earthquakes.

The C.I.A. in a report entitled "Potential Implications of Trends in World Population, Food Production and Climate" warned of the dangers that an altered climate would create for the United States. Pointing out that the U.S. now provides nearly three fourths of the world's net grain exports, the report states that if this should change substantially due to climate changes (massive migrations, sometimes backed by force, would become a live issue, and political and economic instability would be widespread.)

There have been widespread reports of active weather alteration research conducted by the Soviet Union, and some U.S. government scientists speculate that the purpose of an elaborate construction project in the USSR is for the use of particle-beam technology to make massive changes in the weather. What is now being whispered in the intelligence community is that weather modification techniques are being tested and a secret undeclared weather war is already underway.

For instance, one of those "freaks of nature" that took place off the east coast of New Foundland now seems to have been man-made. On April 2, 1978, a mysterious explosion damaged homes and cut off electrical power on Bell Island. The "freak of nature" was really an extremely low frequency (ELF) standing columnar wave of electricity which collapsed and caused this localized electrical and structural damage.

This ELF vertical wave had been observed via satellite as it travelled across the Atlantic Ocean, and its trajectory was carefully followed by scientists at the Los Alamos Observatory. The standing columnar wave appeared to originate from Gomel, USSR, and was probably destined for a station located just east of Havana, Cuba. Scientific investigators connected with the Planetary Association for Clean Energy headed by Andrew Michrowski (100 Bronson Ave., Ottawa, Canada) say this Gomel facility has been known to emit these ELF signals either alone or in conjunction with a facility in Riga, Latvia. These signals began on October 14, 1976 and

Strength For Today

FAITH OF OUR FATHERS

"Faith of our fathers, holy faith, we will be true to thee till death" — so run the words of the inspiring hymn which is probably sung in hundreds of American churches every Sunday.

It is hard for us, who live in a country where toleration is the rule, to realize that this faith of ours was dearly bought by our forefathers. The history of Christianity has been a history of martyrdoms extending back to Christ himself. Each one of these various sacrifices instilled new vitality into Christianity.

As today we enjoy the benefits of martyrdom without ever having been martyrs ourselves, we may well enquire whether we are keeping alive that faith of our fathers or whether we are merely paying lip service to it. Christian faith is safe while it is being persecuted; it is in danger of corruption when all men praise it and give it lip service. We have a duty to pass it on in its original purity to succeeding generations.

Productivity Lag Costs Jobs

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The big, 3.8 percent decline in second-quarter productivity, or output per hour of work, is an omen of more bad news to come. Of continued inflation, of layoffs, to name two likelihoods.

The inflation we have come to expect; the layoffs will be something new in the miserable sequence of events that attend an economy trying to regain some of its lost equilibrium.

Among the immediate signs of a downturn is a fall in productivity, said Courtenay Slater, Commerce Department chief economist last Monday. Then comes the slightly delayed reaction: the layoffs.

There is an explanation for this. When sales begin to slow, for example, many companies are caught with a full complement of workers.

Unwilling to believe the slowdown is permanent, they retain them.

A common reaction at this point is to disbelieve. The executive office lays plans to spur lagging sales through promotion and advertising campaigns. It's already happening with cars.

But at the same time, they must cut production. As a consequence, the ratio of manhours to production changes; less product is made in relation to the hours worked. Productivity measurements drop.

Industry reacts by cutting overtime. The downturn continues and marginal workers lose their jobs. In all industries, the unskilled and part-timers go first. Production line workers follow very quickly.

In the past, white collar workers were the last to get their pink slips, but that may have changed. Companies now recognize better than ever that administrative and executive staffs can hide lots of fat.

As the cutbacks continue, the productivity decline slows. By the time it is understood that business will be poor for a period of months, maybe many months, industry will have gone on a cost-cutting binge.

At the same time, prices and interest rates will have fallen or the rates of increase will have slowed. Customers become tempted again, and sales build. Workers trickle back to jobs. Recovery is under way.

At this early point in the recovery the rate of productivity builds quickly. Generally, many of the most skilled and efficient — the most highly productive — are rehired first. And they are in a working mood. As less productive workers are added, the strains on productivity reappear. Less efficient production puts upward pressure on prices that, if not contained, leads to a wage-price inflation spiral.

The message is there:

When productivity falls very sharply it usually means the economy's growth is slowing — or is right on the verge of doing so — and that industry will react with cutbacks, especially in the work force.

The White House expects the rate — 5.6 percent in June — to rise to 6.9 percent in the final quarter of 1980. The Congressional Budget office anticipates 7.2 percent by late 1980. And some private sector forecasters believe 8 percent by election time is probable.

Based on the relatively optimistic White House estimates, 7 million would be unemployed by the November 1980 election, or 1.3 million more than in this past June.

wonders, does he do for an encore?

It is an overstatement to remark that the Great Upheaval signifies nothing. Political accountants can enter some apparent gains on the president's ledger. He has elevated a black woman, Patricia Harris; he has appeased fretful Catholics with the nominations of Moon Landrieu to Housing and Urban Development and Benjamin Civiletti to be attorney general. He has wooed the business community with his nominees to Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board. He has made other gestures to the West and to the South. Several of his new people are in fact outstanding, but the effect, overall, is that the new faces came from Central Casting. This is tokenism gone bananas; it is the politics of Look What I've Done for You Later.

In political life, as in the theater, so much depends upon timing. The president waited either too long, or not long enough. By timing his Great Upheaval for late July, just as Congress was about to take its longest recess of the session, Mr. Carter guaranteed a fizzled reaction. He begged the people to write their congressmen, but the congressmen have scattered to the four winds. He wanted action on his proposals for windfall profits, standby rationing authority and an Energy Mobilization Board. But even if his specific proposals were the noblest works ever struck off by the hand and mind of man, he could not have rushed them through this wary, belligerent Congress.

From the very beginning of his administration, Mr. Carter's most formidable problems have stemmed from his own lack of experience in federal procedures. His three most intimate advisers — Rosalynn Carter, Hamilton Jordan and Jody Powell — came to town as innocent as he. The past 30 months have helped, but 30 months are not enough, not when the time is passed in resisting the capital instead of embracing it. Mr. Carter and his entourage, now the quintessential insiders, remain outsiders still.

My thought is that Mr. Carter has taken his earthquake capacity and blown it. Every president has such a capacity, but it has to be used sparingly. One cannot erupt in Great Upheavals every day — not if one wants to retain those other elements of presidential image: stability, dignity, steadfastness, unflappability. Great Upheavals demand greatness; Ham Jordan's puerile evaluation forms were the stuff of which farce is contrived. And once an upheaval has subsided, some change in the landscape must be perceived.

It all looks pretty much the same to me. Life in this sultry city has resumed its petty pace from day to day. For the time being at least, our leading player, strutting and fretting, has had his hour upon the stage.

their strength ranges up to 40 million watts, according to the PACE report. Communications Canada monitoring stations have determined that the pulse rate of the signals goes from 3.8 Hertz to 16 Hertz.

The PACE report which was issued late last year said that according to the U.S. Federal Communications Commission and Communications Canada, a radio station in Havana has been cooperating with the Soviet radio experiment since 1973. These PACE investigators point out that Bell Island is along the great circle route between a Tesla Magnifying Transmitter located at Gomel USSR and the station located just east of Havana, Cuba. The report also states, "It is well documented in articles, patents, lectures and notes of Nikola Tesla that the Tesla Magnifying Transmitter could, upon establishing terrestrial resonance, produce standing wave phenomena which could be manipulated to various ends, including weather control."

The question arises then of whether the Tesla technology is being used by the Soviets to create weather changes favorable to their strategic objectives. Part of the answer to that question might be found in the files of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner. In February 1977, Stephen M. Aug wrote an article in which he reported that Russian scientists had interviewed Arthur H. Mathews, Tesla's former assistant who now lives in Quebec.

Perhaps the old saying "everybody complains about the weather but nobody does anything about it" is no longer true!

hazardous wastes in North Carolina.

Hazardous wastes include the flammable, toxic and corrosive substances that are by-products of some of the state's leading industries, including textiles and furniture.

Most waste produced in North Carolina is being sent to South Carolina and Alabama.

The 12-member commission voted unanimously Wednesday to approve the rules proposed by the state Department of Human Resources' division of health services despite objections from a spokesman for the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association. The spokesman said the commission was acting prematurely.

The rules for disposal sites, drawn up at the instruction of the 1979 Legislature, give state officials a definition of suitable sites that could be operated by private businesses.

The rules will expire automatically in 1981. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is expected to adopt federal rules in 1980.

The new rules:

—Define the type of land on which a site could be located and the types of waste that could be handled there.

—Require artificial or natural barriers to prevent unknowing or unauthorized entry by persons or livestock.

—Provide for emergency procedures in case of an accident at the site.

—Establish rules for monitoring the sites.

—Require a perpetual-care fund for the site.

O.W. Strickland, head of the state's waste management, said approximately 4,000 industries in North Carolina produce approximately 100 million gallons of hazardous wastes annually with no legal place to dispose of them in the state. He said the new regulations will cut down on illegal dumping and storing of such wastes.

days, I got on the phone and called him and told him what I wanted to do."

Cunneen has spent the last six weeks playing cards and reading to the children. He also has run errands, stuffed envelopes and helped with filing.

"He's been a morale builder for the children," said Vera Wheeler, director of the hospital's volunteer services. "The nursing staff will miss him terribly."

Bishop says Cunneen's ailment can now be corrected in about 85 percent of the cases. He said it occurs in about one out of every 10,000 babies.

One of the last things Cunneen did Tuesday was to visit a 3-week-old baby who had undergone the same operation he did 23 years ago.

Her name was Angela and she lay on her mother's lap in a rocking chair in one of the baby wards.

"She's going to be fine," Cunneen assured the mother, Susan Winkler, of Marcus Hook. "I had the same operation when I was a baby and now I run, and I played athletics. I've had no problems at all, except when I was 5, I swallowed my gum."

Park Officials Says Gas Shortage Is Felt

ATLANTA (AP) — Park officials say that fears of gasoline shortages have triggered a 10 percent decline in visits to National Park Service areas in the Southeast — even though long gas lines have been uncommon to the region.

"Since the southeastern states generally haven't suffered gas shortages and long lines at the pumps, we think anxiety is keeping people home," said NPS regional director Joe Brown.

Brown said 31 of the 45 parks in the area reported a significant decrease in visits during June of this year compared with June 1978.

But he said that many parks, particularly those close to urban areas, are receiving more local visitors this year. He also noted that visitors spend more time at the parks.

Brown said all three NPS areas in Alabama reported decreases in June. Visits dropped by 45 percent at Tuskegee Institute Historic Site, 19 percent at Russell Cave Monument and 15 percent at Horseshoe Bend Military Park.

In Florida, Fort Caroline Memorial reported a 19 percent increase; De Soto Memorial stayed about even; and all other areas reported a decrease, ranging from 61 percent at Everglades Park to 4 percent at Canaveral Seashore.

Georgia reported increases at two urban park areas — Kennesaw Mountain Battlefield near Atlanta and Ocmulgee Monument near Macon. Decreases were noted at Andersonville Historic Site, Chickamauga and Chattanooga Military Park; Cumberland Island Seashore; and Fort Pulaski Monument. Fort Frederica Monument on St. Simons Island reported a slight increase.

Visits at all three NPS areas in Kentucky — Mammoth Cave Park, Cumberland Gap Park and the Abraham Lincoln birthplace — decreased.

In Mississippi, Natchez Trace Parkway showed only a slight decrease, but significant declines were noted at Gulf Islands Seashore and Vicksburg Military Park.

North Carolina reported declines at Blue Ridge Parkway, Great Smoky Mountains Park and Cape Hatteras Seashore.

Participants In Horse Show

Susanna Hudson of Greenville qualified for the Southern Regional 4-H Horse Show and Tammy Irwin of Bethel was the reserve champion of the Hunter Division at the North Carolina 4-H Horse Show held in Raleigh, according to Mike Regans, associate agricultural extension agent.

Miss Hudson was one of 35 4-H'ers from across the state to qualify for the Southern Regional Show to be held in Jackson, Miss., August 9-11. Misses Hudson and Irwin are members of the Pitt County 4-H Horse Fanciers Club.

A Pot-Smoking Car; No Driver

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP) — Port Huron police are looking for the driver of a pot-smoking car.

Police said an auto loaded with close to 50 pounds of marijuana caught fire Wednesday as it approached the Blue Water Bridge to Canada. They theorize the driver, who fled the scene, had stashed the weed under the hood of the car, and the vehicle's engine ignited the illegal vegetation.

EASTERN STAR NOTICE
Susanna Chapter No. 161, O. E. S., Pactolus, will hold a special business meeting tonight, August 2, 7:30 p.m. All members are urged to attend.
C. Morris, Assistant Matron
Joan Smith, Sec'y

Visitors at Cape Lookout Seashore increased because of a new ferry service. An increase also was reported by Guilford Courthouse Military Park.

All parks in South Carolina, except Cowpens Battlefield, reported a decrease in visitors.

Fort Sumter Monument in Charleston was down about 15 percent.

Shiloh Military Park in Tennessee registered a 9 percent increase in visitors over June of 1978, but all other areas had fewer visitors than last year.

Sinai Peacekeepers Going Home

By ELIAS ANTAR
Associated Press Writer
CAMP SINAI, Egypt (AP) — U.N. peacekeeping troops are packing their souvenirs of duty in the dusty Sinai wilderness — scorpions frozen in plastic, spent shell casings and pinup calendars — as they disband and head for home.

UNEF, the 4,015-man United Nations Emergency Force, ceased to exist on July 25, more than 5½ years after the U.N. Security Council sent it out to monitor the truce that ended the October 1973 Arab-Israeli war.

The death of the seven-nation peacekeeping force was an indirect result of the peace treaty signed by Israel and Egypt March 26 even though the treaty envisioned its continuance as a buffer force. The Soviet Union, opposed to the treaty, refused to agree to extension of UNEF's mandate from the Security Council.

The first to go were 140
Swedes who packed their gear
Tuesday and began moving out of this base camp nestled in the rolling sand dunes of the northern Sinai about 17 miles east of the Suez Canal. The military withdrawal is expected to take up to two months. A number of civilians will remain behind to wind up such chores as shipping home equipment, but UNEF officials say they, too, should be gone within six months.

"Our men were all hand-picked, the best in the Swedish army," said Maj. Sven Ullgren, a journalist from Goteborg, Sweden in civilian life. "To serve in UNEF is considered very prestigious."

This is the second time a UNEF peacekeeping army has been sent packing. Originally established by the Security Council on Nov. 5, 1956 after a previous Egyptian-Israeli war, it was ordered out by Egypt in 1967, an act that set the stage for the third Mideast conflict.

No one knows who will replace the UNEF troops, although discussions are under way to send in another international force, or a group of United Nations observers.

Israel wants President Carter to fulfill his pledge to set up a new international force, but while it argues its claim with the United States, U.N. observers have begun monitoring the Sinai buffer zone. The tiny, unarmed, observer force is drawn from the U.N. unit set up in 1948 to monitor the cease-fire that ended the first Arab-Israeli war.

UNEF's 600-man Swedish battalion replaced another unit in June, expecting to stay at least six months. Many of the men hope that somehow they will be able to complete their tours, Ullgren said.

"We were expecting to be here until Christmas at least," said Maj. Nils Forander, the battalion operations chief.

Newsprint Producers Are Boosting Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Major producers of newsprint are boosting prices by 9 percent and are moving to increase capacity in the wake of a supply squeeze that has affected many newspapers.

"It's just like gasoline," said

Nick Nocella, who monitors newsprint supplies for the American Newspaper Publishers Association. "It's there, but you can't always get all you want."

Abitibi Paper Co., the Canadian firm that is the world's largest producer of newsprint, joined in the price increase this week, saying its price in the fall will rise from $345 to $375 a ton.

Industry analysts say the Abitibi move makes it all but certain the boost will spread throughout the industry.

For many publishers, a price of $370 would be a relief. Many producers are not taking new customers and are often late in filling orders from current ones. Some newspapers say privately they have paid as much as $600 a ton to newspaper brokers.

The tight supply situation, which has existed for most of this year, has led newsprint producers to announce plans to increase production. Two major mills, one in Georgia and one in Washington state, are opening this summer.

More are planned for the next several years, and the annual capacity of newsprint production in the United States and Canada, which rose only 1.9 percent this year, is expected to climb 3.9 percent in 1980, 4.5 percent in 1981 and 5.6 percent in 1982.

Annual demand for newsprint is forecast by the American Paper Institute to rise only 2.5 percent a year during the period.

Newsprint supplies first became tight this year as a result of strikes that cut production at Western United States mills.
Producers in British Columbia avoided major strikes when their labor contracts expired

this summer, thus brightening the supply picture. Canadian paper mills provide about 65 percent of the newsprint used by United States newspapers.

A recession had been widely expected to ease the tight supply situation, but so far the economic slowdown has not done so. Part of the reason is that newsprint inventories are determined to rebuild inventories.

The ANPA says the average newsprint inventory of newsprint at the end of June, the most recent figure available, amounted to 27 days' supply, with another 7 days' supply in transit to the paper. That was down from 38 and 7 a year before, but about the same as during the previous few months.

Best Leaf Of Season

FARMVILLE — Offerings on the Farmville tobacco market were the best of the season
Wednesday, according to Louis
N. Williams, sales supervisor, Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

More cutters are on the floor each day, said Williams, with a few sheets of leaf grade on the floor for the first time yesterday.
Prmings and lugs continue to amount to 70 percent of total sales.

Less non-descript grades are being brought to market this year than past seasons, Williams noted, since a large volume of the grade is left in the fields.
Stabilization receipts are higher this year than last, he added.

The Farmville Tobacco
Market sold 404,144 pounds
Wednesday for $524,783, an average of $129.85 per 100 pounds. To date, the market has sold 3,059,013 pounds for $3,857,891, an average of $126.12.

Operators' Error Cited

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident last March might have been prevented if only the plant operators had allowed safety equipment to function as planned, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff said today.

The NRC Office of Inspection and Enforcement, in a report more than two inches thick, said it was still investigating some 35 possible violations of federal operating rules and radiation protection limits in connection with the accident last March 28 near Harrisburg, Pa.

But Victor Stello Jr., director of inspection and enforcement, wrote in a summary of the report, "Perhaps the most disturbing results of the...investigation is confirmation of earlier conclusions that the Three Mile Island Unit 2 accident could have been prevented, in spite of the inadequacies" that investigators found.

Stello said the plant's design, equipment, accident analyses and emergency procedures "were adequate to have prevented the serious consequences of the accident, if they had been permitted to function or be carried out as planned."

"For example, had the operators allowed the emergency core cooling system to perform its intended function, damage to the core would most likely have been prevented," he said.

Instead, the core of the reactor, containing its radioactive fuel rods, was severely damaged by overheating and released so much radiation inside the reactor building that the operators are still unable to enter it for inspection and clean-up operations and the building may remain sealed at least through this year.

Joggers Oppose

Horses' Return

CHICAGO (AP) — Mary Supera wants to open a riding academy and have horses return to Lincoln Park — wearing diapers if necessary.

She is trying to get a zoning change to open the Lincoln Park West Riding Academy in a vacant warehouse. Chicago has not had a private stable serving Lincoln Park for 10 years.

Opposing Ms. Supera are hundreds of joggers who have taken over the old horse trails and bridle paths in the park. The don't want to have to break stride to step around horse droppings — let alone accidentally jogging through them. They also feel they would be menaced sharing their routes with horses.

Ms. Supera, trying to convince the City Council's committee on buildings and zoning, said Tuesday she already has diapers that would prevent horses of her proposed riding academy from making hazardous jogging conditions.

Evangelist To Lead Services

Evangelist Iola Ruffin and her congregation will be in charge of services at Best Chapel, Saturday, August 4, 8 p.m.

Sunday School will be held at 9 a.m. Sunday, August 5, with a fund service at 11 a.m., the Rev. Matthew Best, pastor, in charge. A musical program and pig picking will be held at 2 p.m., with the Southern Jubilees and other groups on the program. The public is invited to attend.

Speedy Justice Effort By New Chief Justice

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Saying he was nervous and had mistakenly broken with protocol, Joseph Branch, the new chief justice of the state Supreme Court, promised Wednesday to exert every effort to continue the tradition of fair and speedy justice.

"I accept the responsibility of their (former chief justices) office with pride and humility," Branch said after replacing Susie Sharp, who retired.

Branch said he had broken the court's protocol by speaking before the other justices ceremoniously changed places to reflect their new standing in court seniority. He said later he did so because he was "a little nervous."

"Every person in this state seeks a court system that is fair, impartial, and with speedy justice," Branch added. "I today pledge to the people of this state that I will give all my strength to that end."

Branch, 64, who was sworn in by Associate Justice Frank Huskins, took the oath during a ceremony in the court chambers attended by other justices, lower court judges, Gov. Jim Hunt and other state officials.

Hunt, who appointed Branch chief justice, sat with other justices during the ceremony. But in keeping with court tradition the governor did not speak.

The governor had followed tradition by elevating Branch despite speculation he would turn it aside and appoint a younger chief justice. The associate justice with the most seniority on the high court generally has been appointed when there a vacancy exists.

Branch must seek re-election to a full term as chief justice next year if he is to keep the job.

He praised earlier chief justices, including Miss Sharp, and said he hoped to emulate their leadership on the bench.

Miss Sharp, who retired from the bench after reaching the mandatory retirement age of 72, was among the crowd of spectators who spilled out of the wood-paneled courtroom.

Also in the crowd was former governor and associate justice Dan K. Moore, who appointed Branch while governor in 1966. Branch had been Moore's state campaign manager during his 1964 election campaign.

Emotional Exchanges Mark MacDonald's Trail

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tense exchanges between witnesses and attorneys and highly emotional testimony marked the triple-murder trial of Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald Wednesday.

Defense attorney Bernard Segal continued his efforts to show that the Army botched its investigation into the bludgeoning and stabbing deaths of MacDonald's family at Fort Bragg in 1970.

Segal also tried to show MacDonald's in-laws harassed the former Green Beret for years after the killings.

MacDonald, 35, of Huntington Beach, Calif., is charged with killing his pregnant wife Colette, 26, and his daughters Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2. He was a Green Beret doctor.

He contends four intruders bludgeoned and stabbed his family to death and injured him. The government maintains that MacDonald made up the story as a cover up, basing it in part on stories about the Manson family cult murders in California in 1969.

Segal cross-examined Colette's mother, Mildred Kassab of Cranbury, N.J., at length. She said earlier she thought the relationship between the two had deteriorated. "Little by little, Colette ceased to be the bouncy, happy person she had been," Mrs. Kassab said under questioning by government attorneys.

She said MacDonald told her he had beaten and killed one of the assailants when he and a friend went looking for the intruders several months after the killing. MacDonald says he made up the story to pacify the the Kassabs. Mrs. Kassab and her husband Alfred lobbied to get the case reopened and succeeded in getting a federal grand jury convened in 1974. The grand jury indicted MacDonald in early 1975.

Mrs. Kassab said she and her husband supported MacDonald in the months following the killings. She said they changed their minds after reading the Army's record of its hearing on the case. The Army dropped its charges after the 1970 hearing.

Segal's voice cracked as he read a letter MacDonald wrote to Mrs. Kassab in 1973. In it, he said Alfred Kassab's efforts to get the case reopened "ruined any chance" he had for privacy.

"Do I now have to spend another year in purgatory?" Segal read. "What price do I have to pay to live to exist? Try to tell Fred (Kassab) I that I'm in agony also."

Craig Chamberlain, a former Army laboratory worker, testified about analyses he made of blood stains he found in the MacDonald house. He is one of several witnesses expected to testify on blood found in the house.

Blood matching Colette's type was found in all three bedrooms. Her body was found in the master bedroom. However, Chamberlain said the blood could have belonged to any person with that type blood.

Blood is typed, or classified, in four general groups. Each of the four members of the family had a different type.

Under cross-examination by Segal, Chamberlain said the MacDonald investigation was the first time he ever took blood samples from a crime scene. But he said he didn't know of any errors in the work he did.

The topic of errors brought one of the most heated exchanges of the day. Segal asked about error factors — what the probability was that the results of the tests were wrong. When the government objected and U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. upheld the objection, Segal said, "I don't know why the government is afraid of the truth, your honor."

Dupree told the jury to ignore the remark, saying "the court considers it highly improper."

Think school. Think JCPenney.

Courthouse Report Soon

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A report on the findings of an investigation involving illegal bail bond activities in Durham County is expected soon according to District Attorney Dan K. Edwards.

Edwards requested the probe about three months ago. He declined Wednesday to identify an employee under investigation by the state Insurance Department's Special Services Division.

Investigators from the Department of Insurance are looking into allegations that at least one Durham County court employee illegally acted as an agent for a bail bondsman, according to Edwards.

Edwards refused to give details on the investigation, but he said the department is trying to determine if there have been violations of regulations within its control. He said regulations in question may include accounting procedures for bonds, required security for bonds written and use of licensed or authorized agents for bonding operations.

Edwards said he requested the probe while Insurance Department investigators were conducting a routine spot check of the bondsmen's operating practices.

The state's Criminal Procedure Act prohibits employees of the criminal-justice system from writing bonds or acting as bonding agents. The act says that "no such person may have an interest, directly or indirectly, in the financial affairs of any firm or corporation whose principal business is acting as bondsman."

Conference Participant

Joe B. Griffin, president of the Federal Land Bank Association of Washington, has returned home after participating in a four-state conference of Federal Land Bank Association and Production Credit Association officials held at Myrtle Beach, S. C.

Griffin said that 1,400 farmer-directors, presidents and guests of the 46 Land Bank Associations and 58 Production Credit Associations in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida attended the business sessions.

Farmer-owned Land Bank Associations make and service long-term loans for the Federal Land Bank of Columbia to farmers, growers, ranchers and home owners in rural areas. PCA's provide short and intermediate term credit to this same group, as well as to commercial fishermen. The two banks and associations have agricultural loans outstanding to about 126,000 members in excess of $5.3 billion in the Carolinas, Georgia, and Florida.

The Federal Land Bank Association of Washington has 1,500 loans outstanding to members in Beaufort, Martin, Washington, Tyrell, Dare, Pitt and Hyde Counties, amounting to over $85 million.

Also attending the Myrtle Beach meetings were Douglas Davenport, B. G. Carowan, Leon Ballance, E. Crowell Pope and Sam Winchester.

CONTAMINATED GARDEN — Poultry farmer Merton Ward holds deformed leaves from his vegetable garden which was hit by windblown herbicides sprayed by helicopter over nearby St. Regis Paper Co. woodlands.

About 150 gardens in eastern Maine, some as far as six miles from the spray site, are believed contaminated. Ward and most of his neighbors say they don't plan to eat from their gardens this year. (AP Laserphoto)

Predict Blue Mold Can Wipe Out Burley Crop

By The Associated Press
North Carolina tobacco growers continue to experience more than the usual share of problems with state experts predicting blue mold could wipe out the entire burley tobacco crop.

Growers of flue-cured tobacco saw their leaves seriously damaged by herbicide contamination, and now the burley is in danger. State and industry officials say crops are in serious danger if the weather does not turn hot and dry immediately.

A North Carolina State University crop-science extension specialist said the disease has spread into all 29 counties where burley is grown and it is "bad in all of them."

The specialist, Robert Davis, said blue mold so rarely appears in tobacco fields that the state does have no control program for it. The last time the disease was reported in the state was in the early 1960s, he said.

Experts confirmed that as much as 50 percent to 60 percent of the burley crop already has been lost in several counties.

Among those counties hardest hit are Watauga, Ashe and Alleghany.

In Ashe County, Bob Edwards, an agriculture technician, said the crop is expected to be off 30 percent this year because the county "warmed up so late" this spring.

He expects the disease to reduce the poundage even further. "We probably won't have half as much as last year. At least 90 percent of our crop has got it to some extent," he said.

Losses of 60 percent are anticipated by Robert Breland, an extension agent in Ashe County. Watauga County Agent Gene Brewer said at least half the burley crop in that county and at least half the tobacco that would have been sold in the two Boone warehouses this fall have been lost.

Last year sales in the two Boone warehouses totaled $4,809,884. Brewer expects this year's total to be at least $2 million short of that, even if the weather improves.

Everyone is encouraged to attend and register at the rally. Free refreshments will be served.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today after the government reported the United States trade deficit widened in the second quarter, due largely to increased imports of oil and fuel-saving small cars.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 11.60 in the two previous days, slipped .60 to 849.74 in the first two hours of trading. But advanced led gains by a 7-5 margin in New York Stock Exchange trading.

The Commerce Department said the nation's merchandise trade deficit in the second quarter was $7.64 billion, up from $6.1 billion in the first quarter.

Another development was release of the Carter administration's internal economic forecast, concluding the recession will be deeper and unemployment and inflation will both be worse in 1980 than previously forecast.

Ramada Inn, which received approval from the New Jersey Casino Control Commission for an Atlantic City casino, led the NYSE active list and was up 3/4 to 12 3/4.

Resorts International A stock fell 3/4 to 46 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange. Resorts operates a casino in Atlantic City. Chrysler, which is seeking government aid after reporting massive losses, was down 1/4 to 8.

Banking issues were strong. Bankamerica rose 1/2 to 29 1/2 and Citicorp was up 1/2 to 24 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was up .07 at 59.43. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .57 to 199.11.

Volume in the first two hours of NYSE trading was 16.38 million shares, up from 15.88 million shares at the same time Wednesday.

Train Crash Injured Six

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Authorities said six men were slightly injured early today when two Southern Railway freight trains collided.

Burlington police said the accident, which occurred about 3:30 a.m., involved a southbound train with four engines and 50 cars and a northbound train with one engine and three cars. Both trains were moving slowly when the collision occurred.

Police said the injured men, all employees of Southern Railway, included Larry B. Adams, 31 of China Grove, engineer of the southbound train; Donnie A. Brown of Salisbury, engineer of the northbound train; Alfonso C. Dickey Jr. of Winston-Salem, a switcher; J.C. Freeman of Linwood; J.C. Shoaf of Salisbury; Floyd C. Smith of Winston-Salem, a switcher; and William S. Britton of Salisbury. All six were taken to Alamance County Hospital for treatment.

Southern Railway officials declined to comment on the accident. Authorities said the accident is under investigation by Southern Railway in Greensboro.

Police estimated damage from the wreck at $150,000.

Deep Sleep

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Burlington police say an elderly man who fell asleep on the railroad tracks Wednesday slept through being running over by a train — and lived to tell about it.

Police said Willie Lance Barnes, 76, apparently was asleep when a train operated by Harold Jones of Sedalia ran over him. Jones said Barnes was in the middle of the track, and the train did not make contact with him.

Jones said he couldn't stop the train but backed up and discovered Barnes.

Police said Barnes was unscathed in the incident.

Railway officials called the police department to report the incident, and police took Barnes home.

Arab Investor Active In N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Arab investor who bought the Crabtree Howard Johnson's in Raleigh earlier this summer is negotiating to buy the Raleigh Hilton Inn and Hiltons in Greensboro and Winston-Salem, according to a Hilton official.

Samuel M. Thomas, a property officer for Hilton Inns Inc. in Atlanta, said Wednesday that Jassem Albaker of Kuwait was negotiating to buy the three hotels from Wedgewood South

Corp., based in Youngstown, Ohio. Wedgewood is franchised by Hilton Inns Inc. to operate the hotels as Hiltons.

Thomas said he didn't know when the purchase was to be closed but that he understood completion of the deal was a matter of paperwork. He said he didn't know the purchase price.

Albaker lives in Hong Kong and is in the electronics business.

We're pointing out the inadequacy of most home insurance. Before a thief does.

The color TV in our picture cost $350 when new. Most homeowners policies would give only $150 for it today — enough for a black-and-white set. Aetna's new Homeowners Contents Replacement Cost Coverage would give the owner a brand new color TV — about $450. Because our new coverage replaces old contents for new up to 400% of their current cash value! The additional amount this new coverage pays can provide thousands of dollars in added protection. But it costs only a little more. Do you want the best home-owners coverage you can buy? Give us a call and ask about Contents Replacement Cost Coverage. We'll be glad to call on you. Before a thief does.

DO YOUR BIG ELECTRIC JOBS EARLY. OR LATE.

The weekday hours between 10 A.M. and 10 P.M. are the "peak load" hours for Vepco, when the most electricity is being used by our customers and the chance of shortages is greatest.

So try to restrict your use of major appliances and hot water during these hours. Do your baking and laundry before 10 A.M. Turn on the dishwasher just before you go to bed. Shower before 10 A.M.

or after 10 P.M. You won't be using less energy, but you'll be using it when Vepco has power to spare. And that will reduce the need to build costly power plants.

You can also take these two big energy-saving steps. First, set your home air conditioning at 78° or higher, or not more than 15° cooler than the temperature outside. Second, don't overwork your water heater. Use the dishwasher and washing machine only for full loads, and wash clothes in cool water instead of hot.

By following these tips, you'll be keeping your power bills down, and helping us all make it through the summer without power shortages.

Jury Acquits Bagley Of Stock Fraud

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A jubilant Smith Bagley, heir to the R. J. Reynolds fortune, rubbed tears from his eyes but kept a grin on his face as a federal court jury acquitted him of stock fraud charges.

The Washington socialite and friend of President Carter was acquitted along with four codefendants here Wednesday by a U. S. District Court jury.

He told reporters, "I am elated," and announced he would have a news conference at 2 p.m. today in Winston-Salem, N. C., his former home and headquarters of the Washington Group, a textile and food conglomerate he founded in 1972.

Bagley, 44, hugged his three lawyers when the jury's verdict was announced after eight hours of deliberations over two days.

Bagley and the other defendants were accused of conspiring to manipulate the stock of the now bankrupt conglomerate by inflating its price through inducing or coercing employees to buy the stock.

The government contended Bagley and James R. Gilley, co-founder of the conglomerate, personally backed six-figure bank loans for $6,000 to $10,000-a-year employees so they could buy the stock.

Bagley, also had been charged with misapplying bank funds as part of the conspiracy and of defrauding members of the pension fund of the conglomerate.

Had he been convicted, Bagley could have been sentenced to a total of 30 years in prison and fined $28,000.

The outcome of the trial was not entirely unexpected, for U.S. District Court Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. on several occasions admonished government attorneys that their efforts to prove their case left a lot to be desired.

The government attorneys took 10 days to elicit testimony from more than 40 witnesses and file volumes of documents to bolster their case.

Defense attorneys, believing the government's case was too weak to rebut, called none of the 70 witnesses they had subpoenaed.

Acquitted with Bagley and Gilley were Dewey C. Chapple Jr., former vice president of the Winston-Salem branch of the Northwestern Bank; stockbroker William Thomas, and Mrs. Shirley Grubb, Bagley's former secretary.

All had been named with Bagley in the conspiracy indictment, and all but Mrs. Grubb in at least one other count of the 11-count indictment returned earlier this year in Greensboro, N.C.

In addition to the two counts alleging conspiracy, each of which carried a possible 10-year prison term and $10,000 fine, Bagley was named in four other counts of the indictments.

Gilley and Thomas were named on the same six counts.

Chapple was charged on a separate count with making a false statement to obtain a $34,000 bank loan, which the government alleges he used to buy Washington Group stock. The maximum penalty for conviction was two years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Mrs. Grubb was charged only in the first two conspiracy counts.

Judge Merhige earlier this week dismissed two counts charging Bagley, Gilley and Chapple with manipulating funds of the Northwestern Bank and using them for inadequately secured loans.

The judge also dismissed two other counts charging Bagley, Gilley and Thomas with using the mails and telephone to illegally inflate the price of Washington Group stock.

Within two years after Bagley and Gilley founded the Washington Group it employed 6,000 people and had $100 million in sales.

Bagley sold his interest to Gilley in December 1975 and moved to Washington the next month. Gilley then moved up to president.

Bagley, grandson of the late R. J. Reynolds, who founded the world's largest tobacco company, has known President Carter since 1974, when Carter was governor of Georgia.

The president on four occasions has vacationed at Bagley's summer estate, Musgrove, on St. Simon's Island off the Georgia coast.

House-Numbering Task Nearly Done

The house numbering project underway in Greenville is some 75 percent complete and the numbering crews made up of Boys' Club members and Girl Scouts are expected to finish the project by the end of the week.

Chet Emerson, director of the Boys' Club, said that some 1,200 of the 1,500 requests for curb numbering have been filled and the cooperation of local residents and overall response to the project has been good.

The Boys' Club members and Girl Scouts, with assistance from members of the Greenville

Jaycees in providing transportation, are painting house numbers on the curbs of local residents who requested the free service.

The project, sponsored by Sears, is aimed at offering residents an added means of protection for their families and properties through proper house number identification. Fire, rescue and emergency vehicles will experience less trouble in locating a residence that is properly numbered.

"Some of the residents have invited the boys into their homes and treated them to refreshments," Emerson said in noting the overall good response of local citizens to the project.

Place First In Nation

East Carolina University's Beta Kappa chapter of Pi Omega Pi honor society in business education has been awarded first place in national competition for the society's National Chapter Award.

Dr. LaVerne Ryan of Murray State University in Kentucky presented the award, which is made on the basis of a chapter's contributions to the Pi Omega Pi newsletter, production of noteworthy chapter publications, and participation in service projects on local, community and national levels.

Last year the ECU chapter ranked third in the nation. It has consistently received recognition as one of the nation's top 10 chapters and has previously been a first-place winner.

The ECU chapter was selected by members of Beta Sigma chapter of Montclair State College, N.J., winner of last year's award.

Do experts make blunders? Here is an example from a world championship match between France and Italy. You be the judge.

Sitting North-South were

Pietro Forquet and Benito Garozzo, then regarded as the world's finest pair. They were using the Blue Team Club system. The opening bid showed at least 17 points and the first response denied 6 points. Therefore, the bidding was natural. Note that, despite his unbalanced hand, Garozzo chose three no trump as his final contract, not four spades, because it appeared he had eight top tricks in his own hand.

It would seem that the normal lead by West is a diamond—not only his long suit, but also the unbid suit. That would have led to automatic defeat, and this column would never have been written. For reasons best known to himself, West chose to lead his singleton club.

Dummy's king of clubs was played and East won the ace. A diamond shift would have been deadly, but East elected to shift to a heart. Declarer ducked, West won the jack and returned a heart to declarer's queen.

By now, Garozzo must have thought that both defenders were void in diamonds! So grateful was he for their munificence that he overlooked a play that would have assured the contract even against a 4-1 spade division. All he had to do was lead the nine of spades. If either defender won the jack, the ten in dummy would serve as an entry to the high clubs. If both defenders played low, declarer would come to six tricks in spades and at least three tricks in the red suits.

Unfortunately, it was Garozzo's time to err. He overlooked this line completely. Instead, he cashed his high spades, and now he could not come to more than eight tricks when West, after winning the jack of spades, at last found the diamond shift—probably only because, at that stage, he was out of every other suit!

Nice Respite From Season Doldrums

By PETER J. BOYER

AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A lovely respite from the summertime network doldrums, and just in time — "Oberndorf Revisited," is airing this month on independent stations around the country.

Airing on more than 100 stations, blanketing the major TV markets, "Oberndorf Revisited" is further proof that banded independents are a solid alternative to network viewing. And this particular alternative, distributed by Air Time, Inc., is a gem.

It is a story of love and retribution and forgiveness, based on Irwin Shaw's short-story, "The Inhabitants of Venus." Unlike the TV adaptation of Shaw's "Rich Man, Poor Man," this hour-long drama carries a quiet literary quality.

It's almost like reading a book on TV, much the same sort of feeling you might have gotten from watching PBS' "American Short Story" series a couple of seasons ago.

"Oberndorf" is about one Robert Rosenthal, a wealthy young American Jew who returns to the German winter resort where he spent much time before World War II. The war has just ended, and Rosenthal is drawn to Oberndorf by the warm memories of his youth.

But he is haunted by visions of Nazi horrors, and by the memory of an incident on an Oberndorf ski slope just before the war. He'd been left to die on a frozen ski slope by a hateful young Nazi, sentenced to death for being a Jew.

The drama turns on Rosenthal's attempt to reconcile his pleasant feelings about Oberndorf and its people and his urge for vengeance. Complicating things is a beautiful young German woman, Ulie, who has herself endured the pains of war.

She tells Rosenthal that she, too, lost a father to the war, that all Germans were not responsible for the Nazi insanity; she reminds him, finally, of the humanity of her people — "We are not inhabitants of Venus."

But Rosenthal is a man possessed; despite his feelings for Ulie, everything in Oberndorf brings visions of that frozen night on the slope, when, crippled by an accident, he was left to die.

Only after an encounter with the man who'd abandoned him does Rosenthal exorcise the demons that haunt him; purged of this hate, he is able to love.

"Oberndorf Revisited" was given fine direction by Patrick O'Neal (co-star of CBS' "Kaz"), making his directorial debut, and the cast is superb, if not well-known to TV viewers.

Peter Evans, primarily a stage actor, is suitably reflective as Rosenthal, and Astrid Heeren, in her American TV debut as Ulie, may be the most beautiful woman to appear on television this season. Hers is a classic sort of beauty, a nice change from the cram-it-down-your-throat appeal of say, the "Charlie's Angels" girls.

I recommend this, and I hope it works for the independents who bought it. If this is the sort of competition independent stations propose to offer to the networks, I say, carry on.

NEW YORK (AP) — Residents of an exclusive Manhattan apartment building say half of them don't want former President Richard Nixon to move into their building.

Jane Maynard, who lives in the resident-owned building, says she conducted a poll showing half of the 34 residents don't want Nixon and his wife, Pat, to move in because they fear commotion and security problems.

The status of Nixon's application to move in this fall is unclear. He is believed to have purchased an apartment for $750,000, and a majority of the co-op's nine-member board of directors is said to have held a telephone poll and approved the purchase.

But Leonard Henry, a board member, said he believed it was "not settled yet. We're familiar with the unhappiness, and I think that will be part of our discussion."

The board is scheduled to meet soon.

Filming School Leaders' Story

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A news team from NBC's weekly "Prime Time" program was in Raleigh recently to film a story on the growing activism of fundamentalist school leaders.

The six-member crew interviewed Craig A. Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, and the Rev. Edward Ulrich, executive director of the N.C. Association of Christian Schools.

The crew said North Carolina was one of several states they planned to visit in an examination of how fundamentalists have been gaining political power.

The program will be aired next month.

Dick Gregory Dropped Comedy

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Comedian Dick Gregory still appears on stages, but they are a far cry from smoke-filled nightclubs — and the things he talks about are not always funny.

Gregory, who branched out from nightclub performing in 1961 to celebrity benefit performances, left a promising career in show business to lead protests for racial equality, against the Vietnam War, and now against nuclear power.

"It has cost me so much money ... I couldn't even count it, but what it has done for me as a human being — I have come out ahead of the movement," says the soft-spoken, bone-thin comedian after speaking recently at an energy rally near the Seabrook nuclear plant construction site.

Oil Seizures Overshadow Conference

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) - The dispute between Britain and Nigeria over Nigeria's seizure of British oil holdings overshadowed the Commonwealth Conference as it turned today to world economic and political problems and Southeast Asia.

British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington confronted Nigerian Foreign Minister H.E.O. Adefope at an outdoor reception Wednesday and displayed his anger over the Nigerian government's seizure of British Petroleum's holdings in the West African country.

British officials were convinced that Nigeria's purpose was to warn Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher against recognizing the elected new biracial government in Zimbabwe Rhodesia, and Carrington told reporters:

"Nothing could be more counterproductive and less likely to succeed than an action of this kind to move the government's policy on southern Africa. This will have a serious affect on Anglo-Nigerian relations."

He strongly denied Nigeria's allegation that Britain was supplying oil to South Africa, which Nigeria said was the reason for the takeover.

Adefope told reporters the takeover was "not necessarily linked with Zimbabwe," but added, "We must get Britain to look at Zimbabwe in a different light ... No black African can consider himself free until southern Africa is free."

Zimbabwe Rhodesia has a new black-majority government led by Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa, but Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, co-leaders of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, and many members of the Commonwealth regard it as a facade for continued domination of the country by former Prime Minister Ian Smith and the white minority.

Nkomo, who has 15,000 fighters in camps in Zambia, was an invited guest at the opening of the conference Wednesday and sat about 12 feet behind Mrs. Thatcher. He listened impassively as she said her Conservative government was "wholly committed to genuine black majority rule in Rhodesia."

The guerrilla chief later told reporters: "Mrs. Thatcher has learned something in the past 24 hours if she really meant what she said about genuine black majority rule."

He also said he would meet Mrs. Thatcher only if she accepted the Patriotic Front as "the, not a, factor in Zimbabwe." But British sources said such a condition was unlikely to be met, and there was no indication Mrs. Thatcher wanted to meet him.

BP said the nationalization of its holdings in Nigeria would cut off about an eighth of the company's total supplies, roughly 9.6 million gallons daily. It predicted this would upset the world oil market and force up spot prices.

Condemned Duo Granted Stays

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Two Alabama death row inmates who were scheduled to die Friday have won temporary stays of execution from the state Supreme Court.

The high court on Wednesday postponed the executions of Clyde Cade and Bryan Keith Baldwin to allow them to seek hearings before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Cade's date with death was put off until at least Aug. 25, while Baldwin's execution was ordered postponed until at least Aug. 30.

The Supreme Court said new execution dates for Cade and Baldwin will be set if their attorneys fail to file appeals with the U.S. Supreme Court before those dates, or if the Supreme Court refuses before then to grant them further review.

The 50-year-old Cade was sentenced to death for the Aug. 3, 1977, slaying of Geneva County Sheriff L.D. "Red" Sizemore. His scheduled execution Friday would have taken place two years to the day after the slaying of Sizemore.

The sheriff was shot with his own pistol while attempting to arrest Cade for threatening a woman.

Baldwin is one of two Charlotte, N.C., men convicted in the 1977 robbery and slaying in Southeast Alabama of 16-year-old Naomi Rolon of Hudson, N.C.

Miss Rolon was abducted in Hudson, the site of a state prison from which Baldwin and Edward Horsley had escaped. Her mangled body was found in north Monroe County in March 1977.

The state Supreme Court has upheld the convictions and death sentences for both Baldwin and Horsley, but Horsley's execution has not been scheduled.

Merit Taste Key To Success!

'Enriched Flavor'™ cigarette sparks whole new taste era in low tar smoking.

A few years ago, most smokers agreed: low tar meant low taste.

Then along came MERIT and a whole new taste idea called 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And the "low tar, low taste" theory was exploded. Exploded with proven taste in a new low tar cigarette.

No other new cigarette in the last 20 years has attracted so many smokers as quickly as MERIT!

It's clear: MERIT taste is changing attitudes towards low tar smoking.
