Unemployment Claims Up

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Employment Security Commission reported Friday that new unemployment insurance claims were filed at the rate of 3,518 a week in the state during June, an increase of 6.9 percent from May and 15.2 percent higher than in June 1978.

ESC analysts said that "slack work orders coupled with efforts to maintain a balance in the sales-inventory ratio triggered most of the increases" during the month. Decreases in the apparel and textile industries "served to somewhat offset these upswings" while new claims "jumped notably in the food products industry due primarily to seasonal factors," the agency said.

Ordered To Avoid Charlotte

For the first time, the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission has ordered a nuclear-waste shipper to avoid a city.

The NRC Friday rejected Duke Power Co.'s proposal to carry highly radioactive nuclear waste through Charlotte. It ordered the utility to use highways no closer than 3 miles from the city limits.

The NRC said it would not let Duke haul 25-ton casks of the waste along I-85 and I-77 through Charlotte because of regulations adopted in May. The rules, aimed at diminishing the chance and consequences of sabatoge or accident, require shippers to avoid urban areas including cities of 100,000 people or more.

Moslem Clergymen In Vote Lead

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Initial returns indicated Moslem clergymen were headed for a decisive victory over secular opponents Saturday in Iran's first elections of office holders since the overthrow of the shah last February.

But Interior Minister Hashem Sabbaghian reported the turnout was low in voting for a 73-member constitutional assembly that will consider Iran's new draft constitution — the first step toward election of a president after nearly 2,500 years of monarchy.

Sabbaghian said millions of people had voted but the turnout was "not as great as it had been in the referendum which established the Islamic Republic."

Asks About Executions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than two dozen members of Congress Saturday asked Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the prime minister of Zimbabwe Rhodesia, about the truth of reports secret executions have taken place in Salisbury Central Prison.

Opening Medical Facility In Bethel

THE NEW BETHEL CLINIC . . . will be housed in this small modern building, which was formerly used a as local clinic, then closed and has now been renovated for the opening taking place this month.

By GEORGETTE HEDRICK
ECU Medical Writer

BETHEL — An unused medical facility in Bethel will again offer health care to local residents when the East Carolina University School of Medicine opens the facility this month as an outpatient family practice center, a satellite unit of the school's Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center located in Greenville.

The center will provide expanded patient care services to the Pitt County community and the surrounding area and will serve as a training facility for family practitioners.

"The people of Bethel have been very supportive and enthusiastic during the development of this project," said Dr. James G. Jones, chairman of the Department of Family Practice.

"This is a warm and friendly community, and we believe the center will provide an excellent opportunity to meet the needs of the citizens while presenting a realistic picture of the practice of family medicine to our residents and students.

"The ratio of population to primary care physicians is considerably higher in Bethel than in the state and nation," Dr. Jones added, "and we are pleased to be able to cooperate with the community in meeting their medical needs and our medical education goals."

According to Jones, the 11,210 residents in the area currently are served by only one physician.

Dr. Voss Director

Dr. John A. Voss, associate professor of family practice who joined the ECU Medical School in July, will serve as clinical director. He will be responsible for daily operation of the facility and supervision of medical residents rotating through the center during their first year of postgraduate training.

Voss received his undergraduate degree from Calvin College, Grand Rapids, Michigan, and his M.D. from the University of Michigan Medical School, Ann Arbor. He completed postgraduate medical training at St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Rapids.

For 20 years, Dr. Voss was in private and group practice in Grand Rapids, and more recently was medical director at Raytheon Middle East Systems Company, Jedda, Saudi Arabia, where he p vided comprehensive he care to employees dependents. He also ser as medical advisor to the U Embassy in Jedda.

Quality Service

"The Bethel Center wil dedicated to quality med care for those it serve Voss said. "This arra ment will ease access medical care and entry the health care system. It also provide us with the portunity to train our fam practice physicians in private practice setting t reflects a typical doctor's fice."

According to Voss, pati fees at the facility will "comparable" to those fo in private practice.

Twenty-four hour physic coverage will be coordina and provided by the Gre ville facility, Voss noted. nutritionist and patie educator, for example, be available to patients Bethel as a result of special support services to provided by the Family Pr tice Center in Greenville.

Voss said renovations being made to accommod new equipment purchased the center.

Private Research Group Claims 18.6 Percent Increase In Necessities In 3-Month Period

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prices for the neeessities of life — energy, housing, food and medical care — rose at an annual rate of 18.6 percent in April, May and June, the most inflationary period for necessities during the last four years, a private economic research group said Saturday.

The National Center for Economic Alternatives said prices for the four items rose three times as fast as prices for all other itmes in the government's consumer price index during the second quarter of 1979, while prices for all other goods rose at an adjusted annual rate of 5.3 percent.

Gar Alperovitz and Jeff Faux, co-directors of the center, said the four items comprise roughly 60 percent to 70 percent of the household budget of four out of five American families.

"This is the highest rate of inflation we have seen in more than four years of monitoring necessity sector prices — and a full 13.3 percentage point spread between the necessities and the rest of the economy," they wrote in the center's regular quarterly "Basic Necessity Inflation Index."

"The 62 percent escalation in necessity inflation between last year and the first six months of this year is proof positive that we are a long way from controlling the inflation problem," they said.

Energy prices contributed the most to price increases for necessities during the three-month period, the figures showed.

"Energy prices rose at an adjusted annual rate of 64.2 percent, a 157 percent increase over the rate of energy inflation in the preced three months, and a percent increase over rate of energy inflation for of 1978," the center said.

Alperovitz and Faux noted the index was comp before the latest price creases by the Organiza of Petroleum Export Countries and bef President Carter decided decontrol crude oil prices.

"Heating oil is going to b disaster area for inflation winter," they said, add that synthetic fuels going to be phenomena expensive."

Other findings:

—"Housing costs rose at adjusted annual rate of percent, up 11 percent fr the first quarter of the ye and 38 percent from 1978."

—"Food prices rose at adjusted annual rate of percent, down 58 perce from the previous quart and 36 percent from 1978."

—"Medical care costs r at an adjusted annual rate 7.7 percent, down 18 perce from the previous quart and 13 percent from 1978."

Many Loose Ends Left Behind

By DON PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress, which stubbornly insisted on a full month's August vacation, left so many loose ends it probably will cost the lawmakers part of their Christmas holiday.

When lawmakers return Sept. 5, they face more of the lengthy Senate debate over SALT II; almost all the yearly money bills; the Senate trial of Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga.; Panama Canal implementation legislation; draft registration; hospital cost containment; energy legislation; and a raft of other issues.

Hopes for an October adjournment "is already a fiction," said assistant House Democratic leader John Brademas of Indiana.

Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., says he thinks the four-month program of televising House sessions around the country has slowed the pace of Congress.

And, as a result, O'Neill is considering cutting back the amount of live television beamed to cable television subscribers when Congress returns.

Some important bills have become law, but they are in the foreign and trade areas such as the change in U.S. relations with Taiwan, approval of a major trade pact and a move toward the possible lifting of sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

In the domestic area, however, most energy legislation is moving slowly, as are hospital cost containment, Panama Canal implementation legislation, draft registration, a new Education Department and a new criminal code.

Welfare reform and national health insurance are all but dead for the year.

Perhaps the most critical problem facing Congress when it returns — besides energy — is the budget.

With a new fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, only three of the 12 necessary yearly appropriations bills have passed both houses, and two of them are bogged down in controversy.

The largest of them, the Labor-HEW appropriations bill, is stalled in a fight over abortion language. The Energy-Water appropriations bill is tied up by House insistence the Tellico Dam in Tennessee be built — threatening the tiny snail darter.

Energy, however, is the most important problem.

Despite long gas lines and the energy crisis, Congress stumbled through the first seven months of the year in fits and starts. Almost every major energy proposal is no more than half way through the legislative process.

The only major bill to be sent to President Carter was the power to restrict thermostat settings in major buildings. Once he used that power, however, the House amended the pending gas rationing bill to take it away from him.

A windfall profits tax has passed the House but is moving slowly in the Senate.

Gasoline rationing has passed both houses, but in such a differing forms that much trouble lies ahead before a compromise can be forged.

A program to develop synthetic fuels has passed the House but not the Senate.

Greenville 79-80 School Calender

VEPCO Not Interested In Selling Its N.C. Operation

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Randy McIver, vice-president of Virginia Electric Power Co.'s southern division, said in Greenville Friday that the Richmond-based utility, "is not interested in selling," its North Carolina operation.

Gov. Jim Hunt last week proposed that Carolina Power and Light Co. take over VEPCO's North Carolina operation, saying such a move would result in lower electric rates and more reliable service in the 22-county northeastern part of the state.

VEPCO serves some 70,000 retail customers and 80,000 through municipal and coop wholesale customers in the 22 counties.

Hunt's proposal came after the North Carolina Utilities commission ordered VEPCO to refund $1.6 million to its retail customers in the state and reduce its rates to customers by more than $4 million. The commission's action was based on its finding that VEPCO's management has performed inadequately in the areas of planning and maintenance of its generating facilities.

McIver said Friday that the utility has been, "serving North Carolina for 50 years," and has a $200 million investment in its North Carolina operation.

"We have no intention to negotiate with anyone to give up our operation. Northeastern North Carolina is a valued customer," he emphasized.

Carolina Power and Light is a smaller operation than VEPCO, McIver pointed out, and for the two utilities to sit down and negotiate, "doesn't make any economic sense," he said.

"I don't see where anyone will benefit," McIver said, pointing to the fact that the Utilities Commission's Public Staff has projected that VEPCO's retail rates will become comparable with those of CP&L in the 1983-1984 time frame.

McIver noted that over the past 50 years, VEPCO's rates have at times been lower and at other times, higher, than CP&L's

The VEPCO official took issue with Gov. Hunt's statement that economic development in the northeast has been hurt by the higher rates.

Between 1973 and 1978, 36 new industries have been added and 27 industries have been expanded, creating between 8,000 and 9,000 jobs, McIver pointed out.

Employment growth in the VEPCO service area between 1970 and 1977 increased 24.8 per cent in manufacturing jobs as compared with 8.3 per cent for the state, while total employment during the same period increased 20 per cent as compared with 17.9 per cent state-wide.

In addition to the 22 counties in North Carolina, VEPCO supplies electric power for the majority of the state of Virginia.

McIver indicated that VEPCO will appeal the commission's decision of last week.

"It's our job to do everything we can to keep rates down," McIver said.

Residents Of Texas Coast Worried About Big Oil Spill

By DAN CARMICHAEL
United Press International

For those living along the Texas Gulf Coast, the sea has no equal. It is the area's single most important economic and scenic feature, and residents have considerable respect for its power and influence on their lives.

But several weeks of news about the possibility of a massive oil spill covering the area's fishing spots, estuaries and beaches have taken a toll and many businessmen who depend on the ocean for survival admit they are frightened.

"They're dreading it," said John Dunkin, assistant manager at Captain Wiley's Marina on Padre Island — a sandy strip of land that extends for more than 150 miles off the Texas coastline. "They're going to try to string booms across the bay," said Dunkin, "but I'm pretty skeptical of that. It would have an unthinkable effect on the beaches. And if it gets into the bay, it will absolutely ruin it — it would wipe us out until the bay could recover.

"We have to be worried about it. Everything down here depends on fishing or tourists and it would wipe us out on both counts."

The Coast Guard has assembled tons of oil containment equipment in hopes of stopping the oil at the main inlet to Laguna Madre, the bay situated between Padre Island and the Texas coast itself.

The most recent computer projections by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration forecast the spill could wash onto U.S. shores near Brownsville by Tuesday. While oil had stained Mexican beaches as close as 30 miles away by Saturday, Coast Guard officials said they had sighted no oil atop the waters until they were 60 miles south of Brownsville.

Roger Meacham — spokesman for the host of federal agencies charged with fighting the slick, fed by a runaway oil well in Mexico's Bay of Campeche — says "Everything that's humanly possible has been done."

But Dunkin and others are unsatisfied and worried about being put out of business.

"What's so outrageous is that there's no accountability on this — they're not doing anything to stop it (the well that continues to spew oil)," said Dunkin. "The worst thing is that it continues to happen — where's the next one going to be and how bad is the next one going to be?"

Dunkin continued, "This is the worst insult this planet has ever sustained to date. Sometimes we get tar balls from big tankers pumping their bilges out and that's bad enough. But this is the worst oil spill in history."

Efforts have been under way to cap the runawy well since it blew out June 3, but experts predict it will take almost another 30 days to shut in the well.

Ernest Mobley, manager of the Tarpon Hole Fishing Pier in Port Isabel, said most people he knows would be put out of business if the oil stains Texas' beaches.

"We're just hoping it don't come in. But you can never tell... It would mess up the fishing, the marine life and everything.

"When they get oil on 'em, you can't eat 'em. If it gets on these beaches, no one will go swimming. It would hurt things bad. I hope somebody can do something," he said.

Joe Solis, a Brownsville wholesaler of sea foods who depends on commercial fishermen for his living, said those who work the sea "sure are worried about their livelihood" because of the oil spill.

"I think if it comes into the bay real heavy it would affect us for many years to come because it would kill many of the small fish and small shrimp that were spawning."

Solis said he was hopeful the oil could be contained at Santiago Pass, but added uneasily, "The Campeche area and Carmen (in Mexico) have already been ruined. Those were good shrimping grounds for Mexico and they may even be ruined for fish."

Leno Gonzales works at a state-owned, but privately run fishing pier on Padre Island that is open around the clock and used by 600 paying fishermen each shift.

"They say they can contain it," he said. "We get a lot of people down here so I hope so."

William Oglesby owns Fisherman's Lodge, a small fishing pier that attracts customers to his 21-room motel on South Padre Island.

"Our chief attraction is fishing," he said. "If the fishing gets bad, it's going to affect us a whole lot.

Oglesby said city officials have called a meeting Monday to brief businessmen on the situation.

Big Blow

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI) — The Mount Etna volcano unleashed its awesome power in a major eruption Saturday, covering eastern Sicily with a mantle of black ash and threatening a village on its slopes with a massive flow of molten lava.

The eruption, Etna's first in 17 months and its most spectacular in decades, showered ash, cinders and rocks over the eastern coastal city of Catania for the first time in 20 years.

Glowing red lava gushed from one of three craters down the rocky sides of the 10,707-foot high volcano and moved to within a mile of the village of Milo on the mountain's southeast slopes.

The village mayor immediately asked Milo's 2,000 residents to be ready for possible evacuation.

Etna eruptions have killed an estimated 1 million people during the volcano's 2,400 years of recorded history.

Importance In The Attitudes

The Pitt County Board of Education has approved the appointment of committee members to study the proposed merger of the city and county school systems.

Chairman Mark Owens appointed Bill McLawhorn, Beverly Congleton, Jim Black, William Earl House, Dr. J. O. Carson and Dr. Thomas Patterson to the committee.

Serving from the Greenville board are Terry Shank, Miles Frost and Donovan Phillips.

The county board insisted on six members on the committee to three for the city system, reflecting the numbers of students in each system.

The makeup of the committee is far less important to us than the attitudes of the individual members as they approach this very serious task.

This committee should get to work quickly. The members should throw out any any pre-conceived loyalties to their respective systems and think in terms of what is best for all the citizens of Pitt County, most particularly the taxpayers.

If there are economies to be realized by merging the two system — something we are inclined to believe is almost a certainty — then for all our sakes the committee should recognize them.

We hope none of these committee members go into this task feeling that all is well with the public image of the schools systems. A recent bond election disproved that.

If you as taxpayers are concerned that the question of resolving the merger question has dragged on far too long, then you would do well to express that opinion to members of this committee. The alternative could be endless duplicative expense.

Most Important: Be Prepared To Vote

If you think it is an off year for elections we have some enlightening information.

Municipal elections are set for this fall.

Farmville and Greenville voters will go to the polls on Tuesday, Oct. 9, with possible run-offs set for Nov. 6.

Farmville will be electing a mayor and deciding three seats on the Board of Commissioners. Greenville will elect a mayor and six council members.

Be prepared for filings by candidates and an upcoming campaign. Most important, be prepared to vote in October.

Maturity Comes Earlier

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Recent federal research which shows that use of marijuana is growing among the nation's adolescents underscores the earlier findings of a North Carolina researcher.

Dr. Joan Lipsitz did a two-year study on a Ford Foundation grant which gives some considerable insight into the problems which plague the junior-high set.

Her key finding, as reported in her book "Growing Up Forgotten" is that every 10 years, America's young people reach sexual maturity four months earlier. In short, the children are growing up faster. Better nutrition, better health care, better maternal care all add up to earlier maturity.

But adults — parents and educators alike — continue to treat today's adolescents as though they were the counterparts of youngsters in the 30s and 40s. In 40 years, following Dr. Lipsitz's conclusions, today's Tar Heel children have gained 16 months — that's nearly a year and a half.

A Myth

It is a "widely held myth" that "junior-high aged adolescents are children, or at most in a traditional stage between childhood and adolescence," Lipsitz writes.

In fact, the junior high schools today are the centers of problems once related more to high school: suicide is the fourth leading cause of death; drug abuse peaks during seventh and eighth grades; children under 15 are the only age group in which first-time admissions to mental hospitals is increasing.

The birth rate is increasing only in the 15-and-under age group, and arrests of juveniles for violent crimes has soared 216 percent in a decade.

Between 12 and 15 — at the accelerated maturity rate — modern youngsters experience rapid physical growth and the onset of puberty. They begin to rely on peer values for attitudes rather than families, and start the transition from concrete to abstract thought.

Yet schools, parents, state and federal policy makers, and most professionals, continue to treat them like children. Dr. Lipsitz feels that adjustments in how this age group is dealt with is essential.

Brief Sermon

Alice Medlin recently made her first public speech. She was chosen to make the graduation speech, representing the students in the vocational curriculums, at her graduation from a training program at Richmond Technical Institute.

She was a high school dropout who "felt it was going down the drain. I had gotten to the place where I felt inferior to other people ... although I knew I was as good as they were, I felt that people with high school diplomas were better than I was...."

With a family, she enrolled in the Vending Machine Maintenance Program at Richmond Tech, finished that; took her high school equivalency test after hard work to prepare, passed that; and is now enrolled in the technical institute's Licensed Practical Nursing Program.

Of all this, she now says: "It wasn't easy, but I have done harder things such as working in a mill eight hours a day, keeping my home together and taking care of three small children at the same time. I needed a lot of help along the way, But, thank God, if a person really wants something and is willing to work for it, people will be there to help."

Sunday Morning Notes

Some tobacco interested people were discussing the surprising developments in the Carter administration, which have seen several top level officials depart.

"Well, one thing," someone commented. "We won't have Joe Califano to kick around any more."

HEW Secretary Califano was a reformed smoker. He didn't originate the government's anti-smoking program, but we can say he pursued it with vigor.

It got so that Califano was discussed among tobacco producers as much as, say, blue mold or the rainfall.

Stuart Savage, a staff member of "The Daily Reflector" recently received some correspondence.

It was addressed to "Stewart & Savage, Editors". We must be upgrading our image in the newspaper business. Sounds like a prestigious law firm.

Opening of shopping malls is always a festive occasion, and that certainly was the case at Carolina East on Wednesday.

The mall is well decorated in itself, but it got some additional decorations during the day.

As with most openings there were plenty of helium filled balloons given out to children and adults.

With everything to see, it is relatively easy for the string of a balloon to slip through small hands. The balloons instantly float upward. Since the mall is fully enclosed the balloons snuggle against the ceiling to remain there until some maintenance worker gets them down.

The result was a multi-colored array of balloons high above the walkways above the mall.

The balloons have another function. Every now and then, one bursts as it is squeezed tightly or strikes a pointed object.

The loud report reverberates through the mall. It can be quite startling.

As hoards of people burst into the Carolina East Mall Wednesday, one store employee gloated, "I'm listening for the sweet music of the cash register ringing."

Well, the shoppers were there, but unfortunately most of these new computerized cash registers don't ring. They just whir-r-r . . . but there was a lot of that.

The Greenville Kiwanis Club is solidly behind the Greenville tobacco market as evidenced at the regular meeting of the club last night during which "tobacco night" was observed.

Kiwanian Ed Batchelor, who also is chairman of the Community Tobacco Market committee, was in had charge of the program. Among those appearing on the program were Sales Supervisor R.C. Raukin, Chamber of Commerce Secretary W.T. Kyzer, B.B. Sugg, D.H. Conley, Dr. S.M. Crisp, G.V. Smith and B.W. Moseley.

The meeting was held in the form of a round table discussion. Guests last night included Bruce Sugg Jr., Hicks Corey Jr. and Dr. George D. Wilson.

Persons coming into Greenville from the Washington highway no longer will have to stop and wonder which road to take at the intersection on the edge of the city in order to reach the business section.

At the request of the Merchants Association, the State Highway Commission has erected a sign at the intersection of the Washington Highway and Tenth Street extension which reads "To Greenville Business Section." The sign is expected to prove to be a convenience to persons not familiar with Greenville.

Other Editors Say Taxing Marriage

(The Raleigh Times)

If you're married and both working, there's one letter to your Congressman and Senators you should find it a positive joy to write — and soon.

Tell them to vote for the Mathias-Fenwick bill if they value your next-election vote.

What's Mathias-Fenwick? It's a bill to remove, by letting you file separately, the income-tax penalty you pay for being legally married.

Thousands of Wake Countians learn in bitterness each April 15 what a bundle the "marriage tax" can amount to. If two working spouses earn between them $20,000 a year, their "marriage tax" is $400. They pay that much more than if they weren't married and filed separately.

If together they earn $40,000 a year, Internal Revenue Code exacted for their marriage license $1,800 last year — the cost of a year and a half's fees and dorm rent for one of their children at a University of North Carolina system campus.

We're sure Congress never intended to penalize people for making it legal instead of just living together. We are sure they didn't intend to burden still further, through tax penalties often greater than the miserably skimpy dependent exemptions, those comparatively few still prepared to take up the heavy monetary load of assuring a new generation of Americans by raising families.

But that is what Congress has done, in its haphazard, blundering way; and added a new wrinkle in progressive taxation besides, by socking it harder to the best and brightest and more "successful" for being married.

Correcting the blunder by passing Mathias-Fenwick would cost Uncle Sam some revenue, but that could be corrected by adjusting rates — equitably — for everyone.

We hold no particular animus against those who live together out of wedlock. But they don't tend to be the people who perpetuate themselves by reproducing, and any nation that discourages its self-perpetuation through its tax laws is either sick or silly or both. Rep. Millicent Fenwick is dead right in saying the U.S. government "ought not to be pressing people away from marriage." Write those letters!

THE INSIDE REPORT

Central America Domino

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A few hours before President Carter declared over prime time television July 24 that "I do not attribute at all the change in Nicaragua to Cuba," teletype wires into the Pentagon clattered out another link in the chain of evidence to the contrary.

The pilot of a U.S. Air Force C-130 in Managua that day transmitted to Washington this most interesting travel note: Members of the Sandinista junta governing Nicaragua were seen piling into a Cubana Airlines plane enroute to Havana.

A few days earlier, a U.S. intelligence report teletyped into Washington reported an even more fascinating detail. A ranking official of DGI — the Cuban secret police — played a key role in masterminding the Sandinista takeover. Julian Lopez, DGI's chief of covert operations for Costa Rica, was present in the Sandinista command bunker (located over the border in Costa Rica) during the height of Nicaraguan fighting.

This buttressed a detailed CIA report of May 2 on Cuban military aid to the Sandinistas. It also fits another piece of intelligence that the Carter administration has not publicized: command clements of a Soviet brigade have been introduced into Cuba. In addition, some 2,000 Soviet military personnel — brigade-sized, though there is no information they are formed into an organic military unit — are in Cuba.

While intensification of Soviet-Cuban interests in the Caribbean is either ignored or overlooked by Jimmy Carter, its meaning is well understood by his own professional analysts in national security and intelligence: Central America is going red. Only the time, not the eventual outcome, is in question, unless there is a reversal of U.S. policy.

Specifically, the president's most sophisticated advisers do not doubt that, sooner or later, the Sandinista regime will be overtly communist. Present cordiality from Managua is, like Fidel Castro's smiles in 1959, an effort to shake down Uncle Sam before the true colors are shown.

Nor is there any doubt about what's next on the agenda: extension of the Soviet-Cuban thrust into El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras over an undefined but probably protracted period. However slowly, Central American dominos are falling.

Havana's aims were described July 20 by Ramon Sanchez, Cuba's top envoy to Washington in an exposition of chilling candor that has received too little attention. He told a breakfast sponsored by Foreign Policy magazine that Cuba will send aid "of all sorts" — including weapons — to guerrillas in El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras just as it had in Nicaragua.

Sanchez issued no denials about Soviet military reinforcements in Cuba. Ties between Moscow and Havana, Castro's man in Washington proclaimed, "will continue to increase in all fields, including military collaboration."

Tomas Borges, interior minister and Marxist strongman of the Nicaraguan junta, has been similarly candid. In leaflets that appeared in Honduras immediately after the Sandinista victory,

Strength For Today

EXCELLENCE AND EXCELLING

The English philosopher Francis Bacon in one of his essays draws a contrast between the love of excellence and the love of excelling.

The former is supported and impelled by a desire to do something well. The latter has behind it the selfish desire to get ahead of someone else. The person who aspires to excellence wants to produce a distinguished piece of work; the person who wants to excel wants only to draw attention to himself. The love of excellence centers in the things produced; the love of excelling centers in the person.

It makes very little difference what a person produces, provided he or she is impelled by the love of excellence. The person may make a piece of furniture or write a book, paint a picture or build up a business or farm bumper crops. God is lavish in this distribution of human capabilities. A person who has real health of soul desires to create something, and this desire is much more important than any impulse to display prowess.

In Defense Of Workaholics

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Although they really can't spare the time, workaholics are speaking up in their own defense. Their habits, they say, are not indicative of emotional weakness. Instead, they personify excellence.

The attitude quickly surfaces in conversations with workaholics, who resent the word as pejorative. They are tired of being considered psychological misfits, of being poor family people, of being drinkers.

And they have defenders. "What's wrong with this country," said Eugene Jennings, a counselor to many executives, "is that we have too few workaholics and too many part-time executives play acting a role."

Marilyn Machlowitz, who dealt with the subject in her doctoral dissertation at Yale, comments that "practicing psychologists do not so much define workaholism as they denigrate workaholics."

Jennings, a professor who not only instructs budding workaholics in his Michigan State management courses but who acts as a confidential adviser to corporation chiefs, maintains the word is loaded with myth.

"The large majority of chief executive officers of major industrial corporations who worked their way from the bottom are workaholics," he states flatly. He feels they might not have got there otherwise.

"In science and the arts we admire workaholics," he states. But in business — well, that's another story, one often associated with a variety of negotiations that highly successful, self-propelled executives do not have an unusually high divorce rate. He claims that on average they do not die prematurely. And he insists they are seldom alchoholics.

Some, he suspects, might have better marriages and better health, because they must tend to such matters or see their goals undermined. For the same reason they may be inclined to avoid heavy drinking.

Miss Machlowitz studies indicate they are not money-mad or power-crazy either. "The workaholic's ultimate goal is not money and not even power — it is simply to be No.1. Recognition by others is the greatest triumph."

They do, of course, recognize the value of money. In fact, she says, they crave it, but usually as a measure of success.

Jennings, a prolific author and a pioneer in the study of executive mobility, or the routes to success in the corporation, conducts regular studies of executive behavior and has access to executive profiles.

A question he always asks is: "Are you happy?" And, he says, "those most likely to answer 'yes' are those working 60 hours a week or more, which by his definition makes them workaholics.

These workaholics apparently don't apologize, as they once might have.

One message they deliver, said Jennings, is that with too few people showing singleminded dedication, and too many pursuing the "full" life, too many jobs are being done poorly today.

See Rising Tolerance

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — One of the most dramatic trends in the 44-year history of the Gallup Poll has been the growth in tolerance toward persons of different religions and races.

New evidence of this is found in a recent Gallup Poll in which questions first asked in 1952 — and in 1965 — were repeated. The findings show steady and marked declines in the proportions of persons of the major faiths who have feelings of animosity toward each other.

Specifically, the proportion of Protestants who say they have had unpleasant experiences that have made them dislike Catholics has declined from 9 percent in 1952 to 2 percent in the 1979 survey.

A similar downtrend is noted in the proportion of Catholics who have animosity toward Protestants.

And finally, the percentage of both Catholics and Protestants who say they have had unpleasant experiences that caused them to dislike Jews has been on a steady downtrend.

Perceptions Of Power Of Various Groups Show Change

Further evidence of a growth in tolerance is seen in the declining proportions of Protestants who feel Catholics are getting too much power in the U.S. and of Catholics who feel Protestants are becoming too powerful.

In addition, a dramatic decline is found in the percentage of both Catholics and Protestants who hold this view about Jews in the U.S.

Following are the questions, responses and trends. For each question, the percent saying "yes" is shown.

"Have you or your family ever had any unpleasant personal experience that might have made you dislike Protestants? Catholics? Jews?"

Growing Tolerance Found In Views On Interfaith Marriages

Further evidence that American society is becoming more tolerant can be seen in the trend in expressed attitudes on interracial and interfaith marriages during the last 10 years.

Between 1968 and 1978 the proportion of Americans who say they approve of marriages between whites and non-whites grew from 20 to 36 percent, while those approving of marriage between Catholics and Protestants increased from 63 to 73 percent. In the case of marriage between Jews and non-Jews, the percentage rose from 59 percent in 1968 to 69 percent in 1978.

Climate More Favorable For Women In High Office

Recent Gallup surveys have also shown that the climate for women, blacks, Jews and Catholics seeking political leadership roles has never been more favorable than it is at the present time.

*The most dramatic change has come about in terms of support for a woman for president. The percentage of Americans who say they would be willing to vote for a woman for president has increased from 31 percent in 1937 to 76 percent in 1978.

*Over this same 40-year period the proportion who express a willingness to vote for a Catholic for president climbed 27 points, from 64 percent in 1937 to 91 percent in 1978.

*The percentage saying they would vote for a Jew, 46 percent in the first survey, in 1937, was 82 percent in 1978.

*And the percentage of people favorable to a presidential candidacy by a black has doubled in just two decades. The first survey, in 1958, showed 38 percent willing to vote for a black for president; the 1978 figure is 77 percent.

As I Recall It

The Long Aftermath To Violence In Monroe

By NOEL YANCEY

Noel Yancey retired last year after covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press for 39 years. In this column he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

On the afternoon of August 28, 1961, racial violence erupted in Monroe. The disorder climaxed a week of picketing by blacks and some white "freedom riders" to protest what they termed "racial injustice" in the town near Charlotte which then had a population of 12,000.

Fist fighting broke out around 4:30 p.m. that Sunday afternoon between pickets and some whites. The outbreak came as the pickets, who had been marching around the courthouse, prepared to disband.

In short order, police arrested 24 blacks and eight whites, a police officer was shot in the leg, blacks had taken a white couple hostage. Mayor Fred Wilson held an emergency meeting of the City Council at which city firemen were deputized to help police maintain order and Gov. Terry Sanford sent in about 50 highway patrolmen to assist.

Mayor Wilson dispatched a telegram to U.S. Attorney General Robert Kennedy, saying that Monroe had been "picketed by a northern army of an estimated 75 freedom riders." The mayor asked Kennedy that "these carpetbaggers" be "restrained by your office."

Police Chief A.A. Mauney told reporters that during the evening he received a telephone call from a person who identified himself as Robert F. Williams, militant civil rights leader who had been temporarily suspended in 1959 as president of the Union County NAACP for advocating that blacks "meet violence with violence".

Mauney said Williams told him he was holding as hostages Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Stegall of nearby Marshville and that he would release them only after the "freedom riders" were released from jail.

This tense situation calmed down somewhat after the Stgalls were voluntarily released unharmed around 9 p.m. But still a crowd of nearly 1,000 whites was milling around the courthouse at 11 p.m. Many blacks had left the courthouse area after the fighting and assembled near Williams' house.

The following day, Stegall, then 52 and owner of a milling and trucking firm, told his harrowing story to the Union County Grand Jury which indicted Williams and four others on kidnapping charges.

Armed with the indictments, officers raided the Williams house. They found about 15 persons, both white and black, but Williams, an ardent supporter of Cuban President Fidel Castro, had fled. Officers found he had left behind some miniature Cuban flags, mementoes of two visits he had made to the island.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Stegall told reporters that she and her husband "got lost" trying to bypass the disorders at the courthouse and wandered near Williams' home. There, she said, a group of "more than 100 Negroes and some whites" surrounded their car and took them into the house at about 6:30 p.m.

"We were tied back to back with tape from the Venetian blinds", she related. She said she heard Williams telephone Mauney and say he would have to "sacrifice" them unless the demonstrators were released.

'Happy' McNicoll With Bands For Fifty Years

GLENMORA, La. — The next time a Saturday night rolls around when you don't have anything special planned, take a ride to St. Rita's church hall and look up R.C. "Happy" McNicoll. He'll be the one sitting behind the drums on stage with "Roy and the Royals." McNicoll, 71, has played with one band or another for more than 50 years and shows no signs of slowing down.

"There's too much to do," he explains. And, motioning to his wife, "Besides, she won't let me just sit and rock.

"I can't afford one of those airplanes or boats or cars, but I got my music. That's my interest in life," he says, bringing out a snapshot of the Royals on stage. McNecoll is almost hidden in the background between the bass player and the lead guitarist.

The group — a mail man, a body and fender man, an insurance agent and McNicoll — does mostly country and western tunes and a little rock and roll.

"We play for the young and the restless and the old and the worthless."

In his younger years McNicoll played for several different bands making the rounds of small town dance halls and night clubs. In 1940 his job with Central Louisiana Electric Co. took him to the town of Eunice, and he decided to start his own group there. He didn't know anyone in town, but after asking around for a few days he came up with "three fiddlers and a guitar player that was learning how."

With McNicoll on drums the group got its first job at a dance hall called Abe's Palace. Abe's charges 25 cents to get in and the band members picked up $3 a night. One weekend the band got a job in the small south Louisiana town of Manou, in a hall where no one could find a plug for the amplefiers, McNicoll recalls, settling back in his chair.

The band had to do what it could to be heard over the racket made by a gasoline motor running the big fan that cooled the place. "Well we took a break and when we came back the people were still dancing to the pop, pop, pop of that motor. It was keeping perfect time and they didn't miss us."

Until his retirement in 1972, McNicoll's music was a hobby he had to fit in after working hours at Central Louisiana Electric. He had 50 years on the job then and after that long, "they didn't want me working there anymore. And I'll tell you the truth, I didn't either."

"Happy" had gotten his first full time job at 15 at what was then called the Glenmora Power Company. The firm was sold twice, but McNicoll stayed around. "I was a fixture," he says. "They sold me along with the rest of the plant."

Even before he started working for Glenmora Power, McNicoll had held eight jobs, including delivering fresh meat for the local butcher. The butcher couldn't afford a delivery van, so McNicoll made his rounds on horseback with the meat slung in a sack arount the animal's neck.

He also helped out in a bakery and collected bones to sell to a fertilizer manufacturer to pick up some extra cash.

At 71 McNicoll can look back on life that might have worn out one who didn't share his view of the "pattern of life."

"Don't crowd yourself. Know your limits and don't push past them," he urges.

Still, there are times when he feels age "starting to eat away at me. You forget things," he says. "Maybe that's why people die — to forget some of the things they've done."

But he'll always have his music, "I can still play the drums as fast as anybody. When I get up on the bandstand, age doesn't matter," "Happy" declares. "Those other guys don't slack up for me."

Home Gardening Puts Other Fads To Shame

Jogging and tennis may have been the two biggest fads of the 70s, but home gardening has been the most enduring. In the past nine years people whose exercise program had never consisted of anything more than isometrics in the bathtub have suddenly donned straw hats and decided to plant a zucchini with a friend.

Like any other fad, it's difficult to account for the popularity of gardening. Perhaps it's a manifestation of a surburban impluse to return to the land. Perhaps it's merely a creative outlet. I recently heard a college professor say proudly after he'd picked his first ear of corn, "I feel as if I've just given birth."

But the one thing that home gardening is not is an economical alternative to the high cost of groceries. I hear this justification all the time, but it's rarely true. Home gardeners are more likely to end up like my friend, who rented a garden plot and a plow and bought a few minor necessities, like seed, fertilizer, and a freezer. At the end of the summer, he calculated that his squash had cost him $3.00 a piece.

Of course, most people don't go in for gardening in such a big way. Most are like my brother-in-law, who has spent every weekend since May in his garden. So far, it has yielded one vegetable dinner for two.

Now, until this year, I have never had the slightest inclination to plant a garden of my own. Who needed one with Phillip's grandfather supplying me with a hundred ears of corn every time I asked for "a few."

At least, in that situation I quickly found that I was not cut out for canning and freezing. After cutting 100 ears of corn off the cob and blanching the proceeds, I filled all the freezer containers too full and the lids popped off.

Then I tried making pickles from the cucumber crop. I got so enthusiastic that I put up 30 jars of sweet pickles. And Phillip and I don't even like sweet pickles.

But I do like fresh vegetables. So, since we are now a two hour drive from Phillip's grandfather's produce, I've had a few thoughts about planting an okra of my very own.

But if I do ever plant a garden, the one thing I will not include is a tomato plant.

Tomatoes multiply like rabbits. I've never understood why the first thing every gardener plants is tomatoes when five plants could supply the state of North Carolina.

Phillip and I haven't had to buy a tomato since we married. Instead, every year about this time, we start getting phone calls from friends and acquaintances desperate to place their tomatoes in good homes.

"I have two bushels here!" wailed one woman. "All ready to be eaten yesterday."

People even get competitive. When I tell them I have enough already, they say things like: "Mine are bigger." "Mine aren't as grainy." "Mine are hydroponic; they've been under water since the last big rain."

I especially like the tactics that a neighbor of mine used. After eating sliced tomatoes, stewed tomatoes, stuffed tomatoes, fried tomatoes, tomato soup and tomato aspic, all in one week, I just had to turn down his offer of fresh tomatoes.

"Then do you want some green beans?"

"Oh yes," I answered. "I'd love some."

"Well," he said, "you take the tomatoes, you get the beans."

Borges promises to join forces "with the revolutionary organizations of Latin America" and hails "development of the Central American revolution." On the leaflet's first page, a photo shows Borges in Havana with Castro.

Panicky leaders in the targeted Central American countries fix U.S. visitors with one question: will you help us? One indirect reply came from Carter July 24 when he said "we worked as closely as we could without intervening in the internal affairs of Nicaraguans" to let them decide "what form of government they should have."

In that, Carter administration policy was decidedly interventionist against Anastasio Somoza's regime and for the Sandinistas. U.S. pressure stopped military aid for Somoza's national guard (NL) from Israel and Guatemala. U.S. officials refused to supply weapons to the national guard even in return for Somoza's resignation. The national guard ultimately gave up, not for a lack of will but for a lack of arms.

The rationale for Carter's policy is the view, long cherished by revisionists, that Castro, Ho Chi Minh, Mao Tsetung and maybe even Lenin would have been fond friends of the U.S. had not Washington rebuffed them. The theory is now being put to the test in Nicaragua.

To a worried segment of U.S. officials, including some in senior positions, this is madness. They believe the U.S. should have braved the propaganda barrage from the left at home and abroad, held its nose and supported the unsavory Somoza. Nicaragua is gone, but there will be further demands for tough-mindedness in Washington as the Central American dominos slowly fall.

So Many Promises Simply Can't Be Fulfilled

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — So many promises. So many unfulfilled. Does it mean President Carter is not a man of his word?

No, but it does mean that what Carter says he will do frequently clashes with the limitations on what can be done, and more often than not he has come away the loser. Congress has not helped.

Nowhere is this more evident than in the field of economics.

During his campaign for president, Carter promised to balance the budget, to try to restore full employment and to sharply curtail inflation, all by the end of his term in 1981.

He has come reasonably close on unemployment, but the other goals remain elusive. Inflation has worsened considerably, while the prospect of a balanced budget, once thought possible, is receding as the nation enters a recession.

Carter has said several times there would be no recession. Lately, he has switched to giving assurances there will not be a serious recession.

He promised major tax reform. But there hasn't been any major reform because Congress wouldn't go along. He wanted to end some tax breaks for businesses and businessmen; not only were they not ended, but some were expanded by a Congress that felt business needed help, not a handslap.

He has promised tax rebates that didn't materialize, tax cuts bigger than were approved, a real wage insurance plan for workers that wasn't taken seriously. Some of them, such as the 1977 tax rebatee and this year's wage insurance plan, were proposed during major television addresses, but that didn't help.

Those setbacks haven't deterred him from making new promises. In his televised July 15 address, Carter said "this nation will never use more foreign oil than we did in 1977 — never."

Never is a long time, much longer than Carter will be in office. One high-ranking administration official said Carter could regret that promise when the economy begins to rebound from the impending recession.

Carter isn't the first president to make promises he couldn't fulfill, of course. Former President Richard M. Nixon promised in 1973 that the United States could be "energy self-sufficient" by 1980. He also promised there would not be a recession, just before the country sank into the deepest recession since World War II.

In part, what has happened to Carter, and to other presidents as well, is that the realities of the nation's economy make it exceedingly difficult for the chief executive to deliver on some promises.

For example, rising oil prices and severe inflation would push the country into a recession at some point, no matter how hard the administration tried to prevent it. The same thing happened to Nixon in 1974.

But Carter also hasn't been very adept at judging the mood of the country or the Congress on certain issues. His tax reform plan that counted on closing loopholes for business is a clear example of this.

A balanced budget in 1981 may not materialize because Congress likely will want to cut taxes during the recession, guaranteeing a deficit of spending over revenues.

But some other proposals haven't been well thought out, and his own advisers concede it was probably best that some weren't enacted. This was the case with the $50 tax rebate and the real wage insurance plan, which raised fears of a budget-busting fiasco.

Then, too, there have been cases of simple over-promising. Few economists ever believed it really would be possible for Carter to restore full employmnt, reduce inflation to 4 percent and balance the budget, all by 1981.

Carter may make such promises because he wants people to believe that everything is going to be all right, that better times are not far off. He probably believes it himself.

To Attend International Summer Special Olympic Games

TO COMPETE IN INTERNATIONAL GAMES . . . Two Pitt County Special Olympians, Bonnie Worthington (left) and Alice Quiggins, right, will compete in the Fourth International Summer Special Olympics Games to be held in Brockport, New York, August 9-13. Two Pitt County Special Olympians, Alice Quiggins of Greenville and Bonnie Worthington of Winterville, have been chosen to attend the Fourth International Summer Special Olympic Games to be held in Brockport, New York beginning Thursday, August 9 and continuing through Monday, August 13.

The meeting will be on the campus of the State University of New York at Brockport.

Alice and Bonnie will be among 58 Special Olympics athletes from North Carolina who will be representing the state at the International Games.

More than 3,500 Special Olympians from the 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and about 20 foreign nations will complete in the 12 sports which make up the International Games.

Alice, who has participated in the Greenville Special Olympics for six years, will compete in the bowling competition at the International Games. She is one of the original Greenville Special Olympians, and competed in the first Olympics here in 1974.

Since that date, she has won numerous ribbons at local and area games, and in 1975, 1977 and again in 1979 she competed in either the state's fall or spring games, winning two gold and three silver medals. Alice is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Quiggins.

Bonnie, a 12-year old, has taken part in the Greenville Special Olympics for the past three years and will compete in the softball throw and standing long jump at Brockport.

Bonnie has been successful in local, area, and state games and has competed in the North Carolina State Special Olympics Games for the past two years. At these events she won gold medals in the softball throw and bronze medals in the long jump.

She is a student at A. G. Cox School in Winterville and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Worthington.

Bill Twine, coordinator of special populations program of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, will accompany the two and will serve as a chaperone, along with 15 other chaperones from North Carolina.

Sponsors for the two local competitors to the International Games are: The Knights of Columbus, H. L. Hodges Co., McDonald's, The Civitans, The American Legion, WOOW Radio, the Pitt County Association for Retarded Citizens, and the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

Special Olympics is the world's largest program of sports training, athletic competition, and recreation for the mentally handicapped. It was created in 1968 by the Joseph Kennedy, Jr. Foundation. Special Olympics has grown from 1,000 participants to well over a million.

Cardinal Giovanni Battista Montini, the archbishop of Milan, was elected Pope Paul VI in 1963.

Handicapped Awards

The first annual awards ceremony of the Pitt County Commissioners' Committee on Employment of the Handicapped was held Thursday.

Patsy Kite, a radiology transcriber at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, was honored as the employee of the year. It was recognized that Mrs. Kite, who is confined to a wheelchair, has been self-supporting for many years. A single parent, she maintains a home and provides yearly vacations for herself and her daughter.

East Carolina University was recognized as the employer in the community, having more than 200 employees, that provides the greatest number of jobs for the handicapped. Of its 1,740 employees, 56 are handicapped. Of the 350 hired this year, 10 are handicapped. Richard Ferris of the ECU Personnel Department accepted the award.

George Lautares of Lautares Jewelers, Greenville, was recognized as the employer of fewer than 200 persons who hired the biggest proportion of handicapped persons. Of his eight employees, two are handicapped.

Dr. Jack Welch was honored as the physician in the community that does the most to benefit the handicapped.

Adopt-A-Pet

A good home for a seven-week-old black and grayish Mohammed (has M on his forehead) tabby is being sought by the Pitt Co. Humane Society.

Also being sought homes are nine six-week-old puppies of which the mother is a golden retriever and the father is a Labrador retriever.

Call 756-6579 to adopt the kitten and 752-7019 (home) or 752-1746 (work) to adopt any of the puppies.

To place an animal for adoption through the Humane Society, one may call Mrs. Jeanette Fiore, 756-8413.

Rose High Program Honored

The Executive Internship Program at J. H. Rose High School has been recognized by the National Science Teachers Association as one of the five most exemplary career education activities in science in thenation.

Wende Allen, Rose High teacher who developed and teaches Executive Internship, and who entered the program in the national competition, received an honorarium of $100. Ms. Allen also recently attended a meeting at the national headquarters of the National Science Teachers Association in Washington, D. C. to further explain the program she has devised.

Executive internship, an elective course for gifted seniors, was initiated three years ago by Ms. Allen to provide students educational opportunities beyond the confines of the classroom.

About 30 students have served in the one-year internships with various professional and executive community sponsors in the Greenville area.

The program is financed from a portion of the allocation for exceptional child education, funds appropriated by the North Carolina legislature to the local school system.

The Executive Internship program at Rose High will be featured in a monograph to be published this fall by the National Science Teachers Association.

As I Recall It ...

Mrs. Stegall said Williams told them "he wouldn't let us go because the mob outside 'would get you and I can't do a thing'." She said she heard people hollering " 'Let me kill them'."

"We were scared", she said in an obvious understatement. But they were relieved when Williams released them voluntarily around 9 p.m.

Although Mrs. Stegall described the Williams house an an "armed camp", Patrol Lt. C.L. Teague said officers found no arms or ammunition when they raided the place.

Joseph McDonald, a student at Nassau Community College in New York City, told reporters he and 17 other members of a national nonviolent movement had lived the previous week in a vacant "freedom house" two doors from Williams' house. McDonald said his group had joined Williams' group in picketing the courthouse, carrying signs denouncing "racial injustice."

Williams turned up in Cuba and later in Communist China after hotfooting it from Monroe. His flight marked the start of a 14-year battle by the state to send him to prison on kidnapping charges.

Williams' four codefendants were tried in 1964 and convicted of kidnapping. However, the state Supreme Court overturned their convictions the following year because blacks were barred from the Union County Grand Jury.

In 1969, Williams returned to the United States and settled in Michigan. He resisted being returned to North Carolina for six more years, but the Michigan Supreme Court in 1975 ordered him extradited.

By then it was too late to bring Williams to trial. Stegall had died several months before, and doctors said Mrs. Stegall, then 64, was physically unable to testify. The charges were dropped, and Williams was freed.

He had always maintained that he had nothing to do with the Stegalls' abduction and that, as a matter of fact, he had saved their lives.

N.C. Ports Eyed As Nuke Waste Receiving Points

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The practice of shipping foreign nuclear wastes through highly populated areas is causing concerned officials to consider sending them through smaller southern ports like Wilmington and Morehead City.

In the smaller cities, there would be fewer deaths in the event of an accident or sabatoge.

At this point, federal officials will only say that North Carolina ports have been evaluated and can handle the shipments. A decision is not due until the end of this month at the earliest.

The highly radioactive wastes, which come from European research reactors, have been shipped to the United States for years — mostly in an effort to keep them out of the hands of terrorist groups.

Currently, about 50 shipments a year enter the country through Portsmouth, Va. and are trucked about 400 miles to a reprocessing center in Aiken, S.C.

But several anti-nuclear groups in Virginia have gone to court to stop further shipments through their communities. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has agreed to stop the shipments temporarily while it looks for a new port of entry.

On June 15, the NRC issued regulations which said the shipments are considered too dangerous for highly populated areas, which the agency defined as those with more than 100,000 residents.

The NRC also released a list of specific urban areas which should be avoided. Portsmouth, with hundreds of thousands of residents in the Norfolk-Portsmouth-Newport News metropolitan area, was on the list. The regulations took effect June 16.

But on June 23, the NRC decided to allow Portsmouth shipments to continue because there were no alternatives.

Citing the NRC's regulations, the anti-nuclear groups won an agreement under which the shipments are to be halted temporarily. They will be back in court later this month to ask for a permanent injunction.

Fred Miller, a spokesman for the Potomac Alliance, one of the anti-nuclear organizations, said the agreement "alerted people up and down the East Coast," that their area may be considered for the shipments.

"I'm convinced that the focus will be on North Carolina in the next few months," he said.

The NRC confirmed that it is looking for alternative port of entry in a less populous area. Don Kasun, a spokesman for the NRC's division of safeguards, said the agency has already looked at a number of ports — including Wilmington, Morehead City and Savannah, Ga.

"Insofar as their physical facilities, yes, they could handle the shipments," he said. "That's as far as it's gone."

But there have been other developments which have tended to narrow the focus to North Carolina.

In Charleston, S.C., for example, the city council recently passed an ordinance limiting shipments of radioactive materials in general, and banning wastes like those coming into Portsmouth.

Similar ordinances have been passed in port cities to the north and south, including Miami and New York.

However, Savannah is on the NRC's list of areas that should be avoided. So if Portsmouth is ruled out, Savannah might be eliminated for the same reasons.

North Carolina law allows cities to enact similar ordinances to control the movement of hazardous materials.

Gov. Jim Hunt's press secretary, Gary Pearce, said the governor is aware of the situation and has suggested that nuclear wastes "ought to go through the port nearest to their destination" — in other words, a South Carolina or Georgia port.

"It's something we are aware of and we're going to want a lot of answers on," Pearce said.

Hewett Rose, an aide to U.S. Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., said he has been in touch with the NRC and believes it is "terribly unlikely" that Wilmington or Morehead City will be chosen.

"There are strong economic reasons why our ports would not be selected," he said.

The radioactive shipments are only a small part of a vessel's total cargo, Rose said, and it would cost a shipping firm a significant amount of money to make a special trip to a smaller port when most of its cargo was destined for a larger one. So it would be bad business to chose North Carolina, he said.

But Kasun said Transnuclear Inc. of White Plains, N.Y., the company handling the shipments, could contract with a shipping firm that already serves Wilmington or would be willing to.

Rose also said every port along the East Coast could enact an ordinance banning the shipments, but the federal government can ultimately send them anywhere it wants.

"We're talking about something that has international implications," Kasun said. The United States has promised foreign governments the shipments will be accepted.

Hostages Are Freed

TALLADEGA, Ala. (UPI) — Five hostages, caught in the midst of a drug store holdup, were freed unharmed Saturday by three men who overdosed on drugs while trying to hold police at bay.

Police said the successful effort to free the hostages was aided by a 6-year-old boy who managed to slip from the store to find help and a cool-headed younger hostage who served as mediator between the bandits and police.

Police Chief Joe Sparks said the two-hour ordeal began when three men, all from the Birmingham area, walked into the downtown drug store, pulled a pistol and a knife and demanded money and drugs.

Four store employees and one customer were taken hostage and forced to lie on the floor behind the drug counter, said Sparks.

Angry About Energy Agencies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two new agencies President Carter says will solve the energy crisis will wipe out environmental gains made since Earth Day 10 years ago, several environmental groups said Saturday.

Carter's goals, especially those for synthetic fuels, could lead to his loss of support from environmentalists in the 1980 election, group leaders warned.

Relaxing Disclosure Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is relaxing its strict financial disclosure rules, bringing them into line with those required for members of the House and other government bodies.

Despite some sharp protests, the Senate voted 50-29 Friday to ease the reporting requirements, saying it would save costly and unnecessary reports and audits.

Fifth Anniversary Review Of Nixon's Resignation

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — This is how Richard Nixon remembers the scene:

"The crowd, covering the lawn, spilling out onto the balconies leaning out of the windows. Silent, waving, crying. The elegant curve of the South Portico: balcony above balcony.

"Someone waving a white handkerchief from the window of the Lincoln bedroom. The flag on top of the house, hanging limp in the windless, cheerless morning. I raised my arms in a final salute. I smiled. I waved goodbye."

The place Nixon was describing in his memoirs was the White House. The date was Aug. 9, 1974. It was a Friday, the last day of his presidency and the first of Gerald Ford's.

It has been five years since Nixon gave that last wave from a helicopter door, his mouth twisted into a smile. When he quit, the first president to do so, it was because the Watergate scandal made it impossible for him to continue.

He voiced hope his leaving would speed the healing. Indeed, in five years, Watergate has changed from a festering national boil to a scar that has faded but by no means disappeared.

Watergate — like Richard Nixon — is only slowly sliding into history.

The break-in itself was more than seven years ago. Since then, 25 men went to prison for Watergate offenses, served their time and came out again. Nixon, pardoned for all crimes a month after leaving office, became a best-selling author. Judge John Sirica went into semi-retirement. The special prosecutors returned home. Even Watergate buffs have trouble remembering the roles of once-familiar names like Don Segretti and Jeb Magruder and Dwight Chapin and Bart Porter.

For Richard Nixon, Watergate meant the cover-up. A cover-up to save his presidency. It was the cover-up that brought his presidency to an end.

Nixon was in the Bahamas on Saturday, June 17, 1972, when five burglars were caught inside the sixth floor Democratic National Committee offices in the Watergate Office Building at 2 a.m.

The Watergate burglary was a bungled, almost comic, operation that featured faulty electronic equipment, blue surgical gloves, black tape over a door latch, and a bundle of sequentially numbered, easy-to-trace $100 bills. What made it more intriguing was the cast, which included three employees of Nixon's re-election committee — an ex-FBI man, two former CIA agents — and four veterans of the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Even after all this time no one knows what they hoped to gain.

Press secretary Ron Ziegler scoffed at Watergate as "a third rate burglary attempt." But inside the administration no one was taking it lightly. In the first two days there was a frenzy of telephone calls between John Ehrlichman at the White House, H.R. Haldeman at Key Biscayne and Jeb Magruder, No. 2 man at the re-election committee who was in California with his boss, former Attorney General John N. Mitchell.

Nixon remembers learning about the break-in on Sunday from "a small story" in the Miami Herald. "It sounded preposterous," Nixon wrote later in his memoirs. "I dismissed it as some sort of prank."

But Haldeman says Nixon did not let the matter rest that easily. "It wasn't until years later that I learned that the calm, Nixon had been frantically telephoning (aide) Chuck Colson himself about that 'unimportant' break-in," Haldeman wrote in his own book. "Calm? At one point he was so upset he threw an ashtray across the room, according to Colson."

According to Halderman, the president himself set the cover-up in motion on Aug. 19, two days after the break-in, shortly after their evening return to the White House from Florida. Haldeman recalls a telephone call where Nixon "indirectly suggested the idea of involving the CIA in the Watergate problem."

The following day, on the 20th, they discussed Watergate again. But that 18½ minute talk — and nothing else — was erased mysteriously from the tape. Nixon later wrote he knows people think his inability to explain the erasure "is the most unbelievable and insulting part of the whole of Watergate." But, he wrote, "I know I did not do it."

The blank tape was bad for Nixon, but a recording that survived was more important. On June 23, Haldeman suggested that the CIA be used to stop the FBI investigation of the source of the Watergate break-in funds. Nixon approved. That conversation, when revealed reluctantly by Nixon two years later, was the "smoking gun" investigators had sought. It proved that Nixon, despite his denials, was in on the cover-up from the start.

John W. Dean, the ambitious, young White House counsel, eagerly took on the task of keeping the lid on. He succeeded so well that the grand jury charged only the seven men involved in the actual burglary, but not Mitchell or or Magruder, the re-election committee officials who were in on the planning. They would go to prison later for their roles in the coverup.

On the day of the indictments, Nixon summoned Dean to his office, congratulating him for "the way you've handled it... putting your fingers in the dikes every time that leaks have sprung here and sprung there."

Herbert Kalmbach, Nixon's personal lawyer had been pressed into raising funds for the defendants. But eventually Kalmbach rebelled and funds were provided from $350,000 Haldeman had left over from the 1968 Nixon campaign.

Still, E. Howard Hunt, one of the burglary defendants, pressed for additional cash. He wanted clemency. He threatened to expose "seamy things" he had done for the White House.

In January, two months after Nixon was re-elected by the largest landslide in history, Hunt and four others pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy, burglary and illegal wiretapping. Two others, James McCord and G. Gordon Liddy, went through a three-week trial and were convicted.

A few days before his sentencing, Hunt demanded $120,000 and was paid $75,000. By now, Dean worried that Nixon didn't know the whole story, warned the president on March 21 there was a cancer growing on the presidency. He spelled out the involvements of Nixon's top aides in the coverup and of Hunt's blackmail. Nixon said there was "no choice" except to pay Hunt's blackmail demands and "you better damn well get that done but fast." Dean said it might take a million dollars to keep the defendants quiet and Nixon replied that the money be raised.

And on March 22, Nixon added fuel: "I don't give a s-- what happens," he told Dean and Mitchell. "I want you all to stonewall it...cover-up or anything else."

It was too late. At the federal courthouse less than a mile away, the cover-up had already begun to unravel.

U.S. District Judge John W. Sirica was working in his chambers on sentences for the seven burglars when McCord showed up with an envelope. In his book, Sirica recalls thinking "Suppose he has $10,000 worth of those famous hundred dollar bills in that envelope and is trying to make it look as though I were accepting a bribe?"

The contents turned out to be a letter which Sirica read to a stunned courtroom on March 23. McCord charged there had been political pressure to plead guilty and remain silent, that perjury was committed, that others were involved in Watergate.

Worried now about his own involvement in crimes, Dean went to the U.S. attorney's office to tell his story. On April 30th, Nixon announced the resignations of Haldeman and Ehrlichman and the firing of Dean. On May 17, the Senate Watergate Committee, chaired by Sam Ervin, began public hearings and McCord was the first major witness.

In May, Nixon issued a long statement that said "I had no prior knowledge" of the Watergate break-in, "took no part in, nor was I aware of, any subsequent efforts that may have been made to cover-up Watergate." He said "I will continue to do the job I was elected to do."

Then, for a week in June that had daytime television audiences in thrall, Dean testified about his and others' roles in Watergate. "It is my honest belief," he said, "that while the president was involved that he did not realize or appreciate any time the implications of his involvement."

There was skepticism about Dean's testimony — until a dramatic day, July 16, when the committee heard that for years Richard Nixon had secretly tape recorded every conversation in his offices.

Subpoenas for the tapes were issued by the committee and the special Watergate prosecutor's office. Nixon refused. The legal battles that followed set up the firing of special prosecutyor Archibald Cox, Attorney General Elliot Richardson and his deputy.

It quickly became known as the Saturday Night Massacre. Throughout the country, there was a mood of "enough is enough." The outpouring of letters and telephone calls to Congress exceeded anything ever seen before. The cries were overwhelmingly for Nixon's impeachment.

Congress responded by referring eight impeachment resolutions to the House Judiciary Committee three days later. And Nixon suddenly agreed to give up the nine tapes. "This president does not defy the law," his lawyer said in court.

But late in October the White House had to confess in the same court that two of the tapes did not exist. And in mid-November, Nixon's lawyer had to tell Sirica about the 18½ minutes of buzz which was all that was left of the June 20, 1973 conversation.

The pressure on Nixon accelerated. "People have got to know whether or not their president is a crook," he said in a Florida news conference. "Well, I'm not a crook."

By now, White House and re-election committee aides had begun pleading guilty to charges or had stood trial.

On March 1, 1974, a federal grand jury indicted seven former Nixon lieutenants — including Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Mitchell — for the cover-up, through perjury and payments of hush money to the burglary defendants. The grand jury also named Nixon as an unindicted co-conspirator in the coverup. The Nixon lieutenants eventually went to prison. Nixon was pardoned by his successor.

Nixon, in an interview, called Watergate "the broadest but thinnest scandal in American history." But then he suffered an all-but fatal blow when the Supreme Court ruled 8-0 that he must turn over 64 tapes subpoenaed by the special prosecutor. Nixon's right to executive privilege "cannot prevail over the fundamental demands of due process of law in the fair administration of justice."

Three days later, on July 27, by a vote of 27-11, the judiciary committee voted its first impeachment article, charging that Nixon engaged in a course of conduct designed to obstruct justice.

On July 29, the second impeachment article: abuse of power.

On July 30, the third: unconstitutionally defying House subpoenas.

For the beleagured Nixon, the situation now was critical. The House almost certainly was going to impeach him. And support was eroding in the Senate, which would hold the trial.

Nixon wrote later that his family and friends were urging him to fight it out. But he now had told his lawyers about the June 23 conversation of two years earlier, which would be uncovered when prosecutors received the 64 tapes. The Nixon advisors demanded he must make them public.

On Monday, Aug. 5, Nixon made the transcripts of three June 23 conversations public, conceding that portions of the tapes "are at variance with certain of my previous statements."

His support in Congress collapsd. NBC said 62 percent of the people favored impeachment and 50 percent favored removal from office.

Nixon sat down to write a resignation speech. "Well, I screwed it up good, real good, didn't I?" he said to aides.

Nixon told his family. He told Kissinger and the two men knelt in prayer.

On Aug. 8, Thursday, at two minutes before nine, the 37th President of the United States entered the Oval Office to make his 37th speech to the nation.

"I came to the most difficult sentence I shall ever have to speak," Nixon wrote in his memoirs. "Looking directly into the camera, I said, 'therefore, I shall resign the presidency effective at noon tomorrow.'"

And on Aug. 9, 1974, at 11:35 a.m. on his 2,027th day as president, Nixon's letter of resignation was delivered to the Secretary of State.

What The Key Men Are Doing Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a brief list of the major Watergate figures and what they have done since the scandal unfolded:

—Former President Richard M. Nixon received a full pardon from his successor, Gerald R. Ford, for any crimes he might have committed while in office. Nixon has written his memoirs, appeared on a paid series of television interviews about his career and is living in California. He is planning to move his residence to New York at the end of the year.

—Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., remains chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, which recommended three articles of impeachment against Nixon.

—Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee. He has retired from the Senate and is lecturing and practicing law in North Carolina.

—Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee. Baker is Senate Republican leader and has said he will run for the presidency in 1980.

—Archibald Cox, chief Watergate prosecutor who was fired by Nixon in the "Saturday Night Massacre," is teaching law at Harvard University.

—Leon Jaworski, a Houston lawyer who succeeded Cox as prosecutor. He has returned to Texas and recently completed his second book.

—U.S. District Judge John Sirica, who presided over the main Watergate cases. He is now in semi-retirement and wrote a book entitled "To Set the Record Straight."

—John N. Mitchell, former attorney general and head of the Committee for the Re-election of the President. Served 19 months of a 2½-to-8-year sentence in the Watergate coverup. Mitchell is retired and living in Washington. He is said to be writing a book.

—H.R. Haldeman, former White House chief of staff. Served 18 months of a 2½-to-8-year term in the cover-up. Wrote one book, 'The Ends of Power," and is working on a second.

—John Ehrlichman, former Nixon domestic counselor. Served 18 months of a 2½-to-8-year term in the cover-up. Has embarked on a career as an author of novels, including "The Company," which was made into the television miniseries, "Washington Behind Closed Doors." He also lectures and works as a radio commentator.

—G. Gordon Liddy, former White House aide and counsel for the financial arm of the Nixon re-election committee. Served 52 months of a 6-to-20-year sentence in the Watergate burglary, which was commuted by President Carter to eight years. He is writing books.

—E. Howard Hunt, former White House aide and official of the re-election committee. Served 32 months of a 2½-to-8-year sentence in the Watergate burlgary. Lectures and writes spy novels.

—Dwight L. Chapin, former presidential appointments secretary. Served 235 days of a 10-to-30 month sentence for lying to a grand jury. President and publisher of Success Unlimited magazine.

—Jeb Stuart Magruder, official of the re-election committee. Served 218 days of a 10-month to 4-year sentence in the cover-up. Wrote the book "From Power to Peace" and is now studying at Princeton Theological Seminary.

—Charles W. Colson, presidential counselor. Served 207 days of a 1-to-3-year term for obstruction of justice in the Ellsberg psychiatrist break-in case. Now works for he Christian Fellowship, offering counseling services to prison inmates. He wrote a book entitled "Born Again."

—Herbert W. Kalmbach, president's personal lawyer. Served 191 days of a 6-to-18-month sentence for campaign law violations. Returned to the practice of law.

—John Dean, presidential counsel. Served 127 days of a 1-to-4 year term in the cover-up. Wrote the best-selling book "Blind Ambition" and conducts a radio show.

—James W. McCord, security chief of the re-election committee. Served 69 days of a 1-to-5-year term for his role in the Watergate burglary. Living in Fort Collins, Colo.

—Eugenio Martinez, anti-Castro activist, served 15 months of a 1-to-4-year sentence in the Watergate burglary. Works in commercial automobile leasing in Miami.

—Bernard L. Barker, anti-Castro activist, served 13 months of an 18-month to 6-year sentence in the Watergate burglary. Works for the Miami santiation department.

—Virgilio Gonzalez, anti-Castro activist, served 13 months of a 1-to-4 year sentence in the Watergate burglary. Works as a locksmith in Miami.

—Frank Sturgis, anti-Castro activist, served 13 months of a 1-to-4-year sentence in the Watergate burlgary, living in Miami.

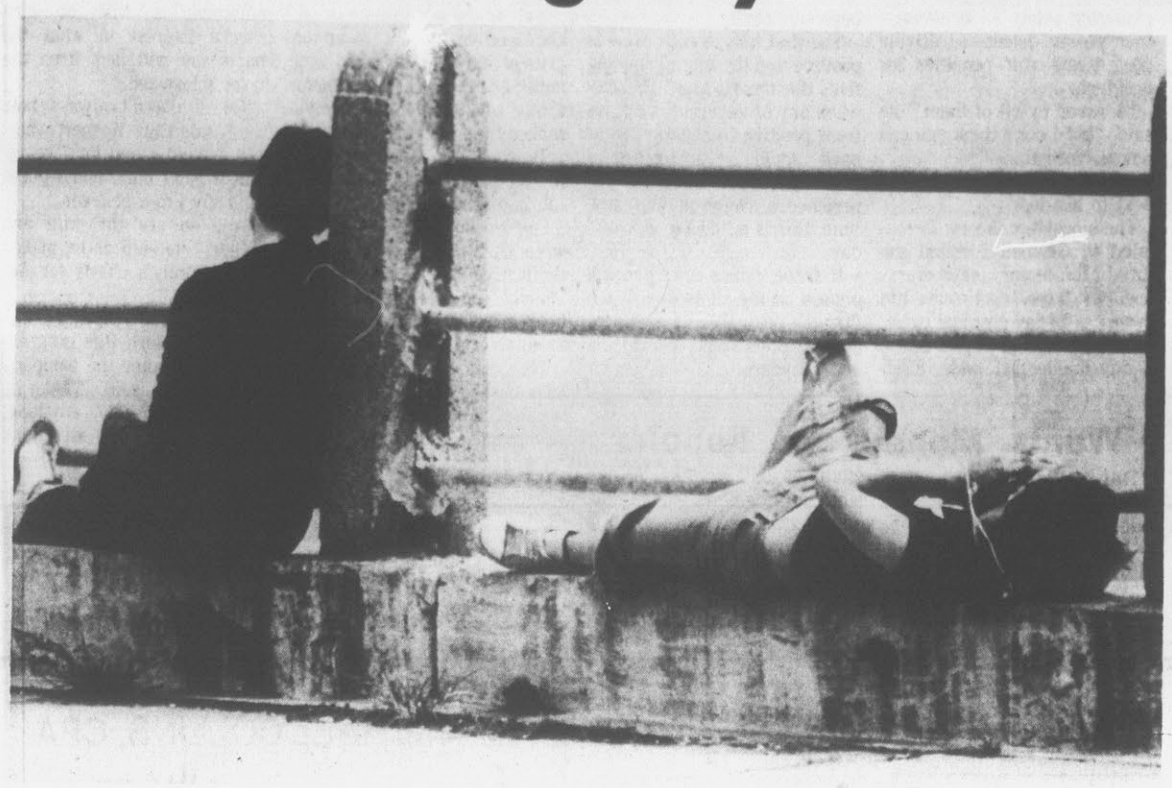
Border Burglary A Growing Problem In Arizona



LONG, HOT SUMMER — Dog days are here again, and when the temperature and humidity climb on a midsummer afternoon in the low country, there's only one thing to do — nothing. These two at The Battery in Charleston, South Carolina, were wise enough to do just that.

By JAMES E. WALTERS
Associated Press Writer

PALOMINAS, Ariz. (AP) — The scene was idyllic. Cows and horses nibbled at the seemingly endless range stretching under cloudless skies to shadow-etched mountains in the background.

But all was not peaceful, Ginny Bradshaw said, pointing to a line of trees a couple miles away.

"That's where the burglars come from," she said. "That's Mexico on the other side of the trees. They just walk over and rip us off all the time."

Police in Arizona, with its 400-plus miles of common border with Mexico, say their state has long been a target — motor vehicle thefts, narcotics smuggling, shoplifting, burglaries.

Now, Sheriff Jimmy Judd of Cochise County says residential burglaries by aliens have increased so much in recent years that they now are his No. 1 problem. The average loss, says Judd, is about $680.

Similar reports were found in a survey of Arizona border regions, but nothing approaches the problem in 68,000-square-mile Cochise County, which has 83 miles of border with Mexico.

And so far this year, the most-burglarized folks in Cochise County are the 2,000 or so who live in and around Palominas, which is about 15 miles from the county seat at Bisbee. Small ranches are common here. The nearest neighbor frequently is acres away.

"We had this neighborhood party the other weekend," said Mrs. Bradshaw. "People were wondering aloud if their home was being broken into while they were away. Others refused to leave home.

"Some people are even afraid to go to the store unless they have a house-sitter."

Judd feels that most burglaries by aliens are opportunistic — not organized. In an interview, he said he sees no long-range solution "until Mexico's economic opportunities are equal to ours."

"But mainly these burglars are uneducated, normally hard-working people who would not steal if they had a job to support themselves and their families."

But, he added, "People are fed up with the problem of working all their lives, to have some belongings and property, and being invaded by people from a foreign land who steal it."

To defuse the situation, Judd is pushing "neighborhood watch" programs, asking residents to call his department whenever they see anyone or anything suspicious.

At a meeting with Palominas area residents, the sheriff explained how it had worked successfully down the road at Bisbee Junction. He explained that he has only 65 deputies and promised to assign a second deputy to live in this area this month. The live-in deputy takes his well-marked patrol car home with him and, in Judd's view, is akin to the old "cop on the beat" who knew everyone in a city neighborhood.

"He made good sense," said John Barnes, who is chief of the volunteer fire department and is organizing the watch. "People are scattered out here. When the word gets out that neighbors are watching out for others, it will be a deterrent."

Some 40 miles east, Floyd Neitert's seven-room house in suburban Douglas has been broken into nine times. It's a quarter mile from the border. Manager of a consumer finance company, he agrees with Judd that the burglars generally are not criminal types, but forced by economic circumstances to steal on a one-time basis.

Neitert said in the first five or six burglaries he lost items such as blankets, liquor and food — "things I'd take myself if I was hungry and broke into a place." Then it began to be silverware and radios. When a gun was stolen, and later found on an armed robber, he said he decided that he either had to move or install bars on windows and doors, buy a barking dog and improve his security system. So far that has worked, he said.

In Douglas itself, Major Dale Lehman of the police department said residential burglaries have not been a big problem. A 12-foot chain-link fence divides Douglas from Agua Prieta, Mexico. He said the department tries to maintain a high visibility in border areas and the fence helps.

The fence becomes strands of barbed wire in more rural areas, and is easily penetrated. A handful of U.S. Border patrolmen are assigned to this area. Judd said in the first five months this year, there were 238 burglaries in Cochise County. He said investigation showed 40 percent were by aliens. For 1978, the figures were 260 alien-related out of 401. In 1977 it was 270 of 416.

"What irks me," said Judd, "is that this is a federal problem ... But since the U.S. government refuses to do its job, the problem becomes one for the citizens of this county. And that's not right."

Tragedy Of A Lost Dung Heap

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Paul Martin is on the lookout for a new old dung heap. If you come across one, let him know. The old one burned.

"It was a tragedy of the first order," he said, wincing.

Obviously, this was no ordinary dung heap.

It was a 40,000-year-old pile of droppings left in a Grand Canyon cave by curious, and curiously extinct, creatures: Shasta ground sloths. Paul Martin feels the loss of the dung personally. He is an authority on that forgotten beast.

"The dung revealed the diet of the ground sloth," he said. "Knowing it, we learn much about the ecology of this country, and probably as much about human culture as well."

It revealed, for instance, at least to Martin, that the very first human arrivals on this continent hunted the pony-sized ground sloth, and perhaps other creatures, into extinction.

If so, it means that not even primitive man lived in harmony with the environment but disturbed it from the beginning.

Paul Martin, 51, is head of the University of Arizona's geoscience department.

It came from Rampart Cave, a 40-by-50 foot chamber in Grand Wash Cliffs at the southern tip of Grand Canyon, one of only nine known sites of sloth deposits and, scientifically, the most valuable.

Three years ago somebody broke open the cave's iron gate, got inside, and, perhaps accidentally, set the dung on fire.

The smoldering pile resisted efforts to douse it for a year.

Its 200 cubic yards of dung, deposited in the course of about 30,000 years of prehistory, had already told him much.

It told him that the sloth fed on precisely the same plants that grow today at the Canyon: cat's claw, salt bush, globe mallow, mesquite, yucca, agave, more than 30 varieties in all.

"It was not a vanishing diet, some climactic change, that made the sloth extinct," he said.

What, then? One discovery nagged at Martin.

He found that the topmost layer of dung was laid down 11,000 to 13,000 years ago. By its quantity, sloths were plentiful. The species plainly did not die out gradually, but suddenly.

That was at the same time when, according to archeological evidence, the first big game hunters arrived in North America.

Martin has examined all other theories on why the sloth and certain other large, lumbering, vulnerable prey in America became suddenly extinct about that time.

He is left with his own theory: Man caused it. He had hoped to find more supporting evidence in Rampart Cave.

Instead, alas, he has put out the word:

"If you hear of any amateur cave explorers who discover a deposit of large balls of dung, tell them to give me a call. It could be terribly valuable stuff."

Biggest Shipping Loss

LONDON (AP) -The sinking of the supertanker Atlantic Empress and the 63 million gallons of crude oil it took with it could present the insurance industry with history's biggest shipping loss.

The Financial Times, Britain's respected business newspaper, said the bill could total between $85 million and $90 million.

It said claims for about $54 million will be made to London insurance brokers, including about $32 million to Lloyds of London. The remaining claims will be filed in other capitals.

The 128,000-ton Empress and its original cargo of 70 million gallons of crude were insured for $95 million. The supertanker, longer than three football fields, was believed to be the biggest commercial vessel ever lost at sea.

It sank Thursday night in the Atlantic about 350 miles east of Barbados after two new explosions rocked the blazing ship.

Munich was the scene of Hitler's political rise in the 1920s and his beer-hall putsch of 1923. It later became his party headquarters. Nearly half of Munich was destroyed during World War II.

Denver Taxicab Drivers Rely On Biorhythm Charts

DENVER (AP) — When Roy Collins set out to prove Denver's 800 Yellow Cab Co. drivers should tune in to their biorhythms, some scoffed. Others laughed.

But 2½ years after the cabbies began getting monthly charts telling them when their emotional, physical and mental resources would be best, the doubting Thomases are biting their tongues.

Now, if the green-and-white computer printouts don't show up by the first of every month, Collins said, "We hear about it."

Collins, the cab company's safety manager, credits biorhythm charts with helping Yellow Cab cut accidents by more than 50 percent.

He said his company doesn't release specific figures on accidents, and Collins is quick to point out that biorhythms were part of a larger program emphasizing safety — including a mandatory defensive driving course and stiff penalties for accidents.

"I swear by all of them," he said, "but I don't think you can ignore biorhythms."

His own is taped to the wall next to his desk.

The biorhythm theory, formulated in Germany around the turn of the century, says everyone has three, continuous life cycles: a 23-day physical cycle, a 28-day emotional cycle and a 33-day intellectual cycle. Each begins at birth.

The first half of each cycle is positive and the second is negative, the theory goes. The day when any of the cycles switches from positive to negative — or back again — is termed a "critical" day. If two cycles experience a switch at the same time, this is a "double critical" day.

If three cycles are changing phases on the same day, it's a "triple critical" day. Triple critical days come around every 7.2 years.

Yellow Cab's drivers are encouraged to work a swap on critical days, Collins said, but nothing is required. "Just being aware of the potential is what makes the difference," he said. "Someone who knows they're not at their peak is more careful, and that's the point."

One driver decided not to work on a double critical day, Collins recalls, and went skiing instead. He ended up with a broken leg and now pays more attention to his chart.

This year, the monthly charts have been available for drivers' families, too, and dozens take advantage of it, Collins said. "It's a plus for us, because sometimes a wife or girlfriend's interest in what the charts say will help keep the driver interested."

"Oh, it doesn't always hold true," said Curt Werner, who's been driving a taxi for 7 years. "But it can't hurt, and I guess you'd say I'm a believer.

"And so are my wife and brother," he said as he picked up the family's charts for August.

The biggest expense was writing the biorhythm program for the computer the company uses, Collins said. That, he said, "was hardly anything, compared to what we think we're getting out of it."

Wants Money For Repairs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With many of the state's 16,152 bridges beginning to crumble or operating under weight limitations, the North Carolina Department of Transportation wants some federal money to repair them.

The DOT has hired a consultant to make a comprehensive study of the condition of the state's bridge system by the end of next year. The study is necessary to make the state eligible for its share of $1.1 billion in federal bridge replacement funds.

Nearly half that amount would be necessary just to make essential repairs to about 5,000 bridges. The DOT revealed Friday that 400 bridges over primary roads and 4,600 more over secondary routes are in need of replacement or substantial renovation.

Many deteriorating bridges were built in the 1920s and 1930s when the state's initial major highway construction projects began. Those bridges already have outlived their usefulness, DOT researchers maintain.

Driftwood Annie Gives Aid To Escaped Felons

LAKE BAY, Wash. (AP) — At low tide, the McNeil Island Federal Penitentiary is a cold, 500-yard swim to freedom across Pitt Passage.

And at the other side is a cluttered sandspit and Driftwood Annie — an elderly woman who spends her time collecting driftwood and reviving an occasional felon who washes up on her waterfront property.

"There isn't hardly a thing on this sandspit that I haven't had something to do with getting it off or pulling it in," she says.

Driftwood Annie, whose real name is Annie Peyser, says she doesn't know how old she is — "to tell ya the truth, I'd have to figure it out" — but a friend says she will be 90 next month.

Blind in one eye and "goin' blind fast in the other," Annie says she doesn't know how many fleeing convicts have stumbled into her driftwood-filled house at all hours of the night over the years.

Prison officials don't know how many of the prison's inhabitants have made the swim across Pitt Passage either, but Lt. Larry Kleine says they send officers after the escapees "any time we can."

Annie lives alone. No one running from McNeil Island has ever laid a hand on her, and she says she is not afraid.

"Why should I be? They won't hurt you if you're decent to them," she says.

Several months ago she took in one drenched escapee — with little thanks, she says, from prison officials who frown on the warm soup offered to prisoners hungry for freedom.

"That poor fellow would've died if I hadn't poured hot coffee into him and given him some dry clothes," she says.

"The prison sent someone over who gave the devil to me for helping the fellow. But I told him I was doing the prison a favor — savin' people who would've died if I hadn't taken care of them.

"You know, that's an awful shock coming out of that cold water."

Prison officials declined comment.

The 112-year-old penitentiary, the nation's oldest federal prison, is scheduled to close in two years. But that won't mean an end to Driftwood Annie's unexpected visitors — she's become a kind of local legend and tourist attraction.

"They talk about me so much around here that folks have to come out and see what kinda freak I am," she says.

BOOK AWARDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Creation of The American Book Awards has been announced by the Association of American Publishers.

The awards will be presented in the spring of 1980 to books — both hardcover and paperback — written by U.S. authors and published by U.S. publishers during the calendar year 1979.

Outer Banks Tourism Up

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Because nearly every available room in the Outer Banks resort area is being filled these days officials no longer have a problem attracting the masses who stayed away during the dark days of the gasoline crunch.

But in losing business because of the gas crisis, five oil spills ans some less-than-favorable early-season weather, the businessmen paid to keep the resorts hopping have learned how better to gauge the potential of any situation involving tourists.

Tony McGowan, manager of the Outer Banks Chamber of Commerce, credits an aggressive advertising campaign with helping to restore business in the area. And he said coded responses to ads in the campaign have given officials a better idea of the source of inquiries.

Businessmen and tourism officials say the number of visitors to the Outer Banks has risen dramatically in the past three weeks.

McGowan said the campaign, aimed at persons within a tank-of-gas driving range, helped bring in a surge of visitors.

Military Museum In Cornwall Has George Washington's Bible

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A military museum down in Bodmin, Cornwall, has got George Washington's Bible, the curator says.

"Unfortunately," he lamented, "the flyleaf bearing Washington's signature was stolen by an American in 1909 and we've never seen it since."

The famous Bible was part of the booty British soldiers netted when they plundered a burning house in Bedford, Mass., village in 1778.

Now, a party of New Englanders from Barnstable County, Mass. — complete with Colonial-era dress — is preparing to invade Cornwall, England, for a mock skirmish with similarly clad British troops. And at least one American says he plans to try to get the Bible back.

When told of the American intention, museum curator Col. Philip Trelawney responded: "There are enough muskets for our defense, but I think we are short of ammunition."

Trelawney, 58, runs the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry Museum in Bodmin, headquarters of his old regiment. Before a British Army reorganization 100 years ago, the DCLI was the 46th Regiment of Foot, the one which burned down Bartholomew West's house in Bedford.

Trelawney knows all about the Bible. "It contains the West family tree and the story is in the regimental records," he said in a recent interview. But Trelawney said his museum is in the hands of trustees "who are most unlikely ever to part with the Bible."

He said the book is the regiment's only relic of its service in the American War of Independence.

The book was known to Americans before World War I, he said, and the regiment refused an offer of $10,000 from an American woman to buy it.

Records say West was unaware that the Bible, apparently given to him by Washington, survived the burning of his home. Trelawney said the regimental trophies later fell into American hands, but were returned under a flag of truce as a matter of honor.

"The Americans must have been unaware of the importance of the Bible," said Trelawney.

The Bible had more adventures when it was captured along with the mess silver by the French in Dominica in 1805, during the Napoleonic Wars. The French troops likewise returned the trophies to the British.

"In 1907-09 the regiment was stationed in Bermuda, where American visitors were shown the Bible in the officer's mess and allowed to thumb through it," Trelawney said. "One day when it was being returned to its case, it was found that the page with Washington's signature was missing."

The Bible is displayed in the Bodmin museum in a glass case which is inside a glass cabinet, with a notice of its history.

Claims Secret Investigation

KUWAIT (AP) — The U.S. National Security Council is conducting a secret investigation into the increasing European influence among the oilrich Arab states of the Persian Gulf, the Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Qabas reported today.

Quoting unidentified sources in Washington, the paper said the United States is deeply concerned about the European thrust and particularly about the mounting French involvement "that is being achieved at the expense of American political, strategic and oil interests.

"France has already reached an agreement with Saudi Arabia and Kuwait to provide them with a protective military umbrella," the paper added.

Officials Charged With Corruption

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP) — The police chief, fire chief and two other top-ranking city officials have been suspended without pay after being charged with corruption.

Meeting separately, the city's fire and police boards voted Friday night to remove Fire Chief Raymond Galati and Police Chief Thomas Ormsby from duty and to freeze their pay. Also suspended were Deputy Fire Chief Robert Hackett and police detective Sgt. George Sahadi.

Earlier in the day, another suspect, city Civil Service Commission Chairman Frederick Haddad, resigned as a result of the corruption case.

Hawaii's Water Energy

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaii is using a resource it has in plenty — water — as the main ingredient in a novel technique of producing electrical energy.

Fifty thousand watts of electricity are now being produced almost directly from sun-heated ocean water on a barge off Keahole Point on the island of Hawaii, Gov. George Ariyoshi announced Friday.

State officials say it is the first time electrical energy has been produced by this method outside laboratory conditions. The self-sustaining process was dubbed OTEC — ocean thermal energy conversion.

Ariyoshi sent a message to President Carter calling the development a "historic breakthrough" in the search for alternative energy sources.

The breakthrough came Thursday morning, when nine 500-watt floodlights and a television set went on, powered solely by heat generated from ocean water, said State Planning Director Hideto Kono.

Kono said 40,000 of the watts are needed now to power OTEC's machinery, leaving 10,000 watts for actual use.

The success of the mini-OTEC project proves that ocean thermal conversion is "a workable, renewable, essentially inexhaustable energy resource which can be brought on-line soon," Ariyoshi said.

The experimental project, which will cost in excess of $3 million, is a project of the state, Lockheed Missiles and Space Co., Inc., the Dillingham Corporation of Hawaii, Alfa-Laval Thermal, Inc. and other industrial firms. The barge was loaned by the U.S. Navy.

Kono said the second phase of the experiment, if federal funds come through, is construction of a seacoast testing facility on land.

Outer Banker Remembers Wright Brothers

By NATALIE CASE
Manager, Dare County Tourist Bureau

MANTEO — "Dignified" is the word for Leon B. Basnight and his wife, Sally, of Manteo. Basnight was 94 years old the week before being interviewed by Dr. William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina, about his experiences with Orville and Wilbur Wright.

The program, "North Carolina People," is hosted by Dr. Friday and the programs are broadcast on Sunday and Friday evenings.

In discussions between director-producer Maurice Talbot and Aycock Brown, News Director for the Dare County Tourist Bureau, story ideas for three programs evolved — an interview with State Senator Melvin Daniels at Wright Brothers Memorial in Kill Devil Hills; an interview with Basnight; and an interview with Dr. Les Picker, Director of the Marine Resources Center in Manteo.

On the ride to the interview, Basnight talked about the day he met the Wright Brothers. Although a frail man now, Basnight talked about being a strapping, husky youth who was called by the captain of the then-life saving station in Kitty Hawk to serve as a substitute for one of the men who was ill.

He agreed and together Basnight and the captain rode across the Roanoke Sound in a small powered boat to the other side of the shore, the slender barrier islands called the Outer Banks.

Once at the station, he was asked to go over to Kill Devil Hill, the large sand dune on which the Wright Brothers monument now stands, and to help these two men with their flying machine.

That was on December 18, 1903, the day after their unnoticed accomplishment.

Basnight explained that he and others helped pick up pieces of the plane and crate them for shipment back to Ohio.

"They were quite jovial and good-natured. It was a pleasure to work with them," Basnight said. "Little did we know what was in store for the future.

"I kept a couple of pieces of wood from that plane, jotted the date down and took it back to the life saving station with me, but, of course, those were lost many years ago," Basnight added.

Several people, over the years, have claimed to have known the Wright brothers and to have had some part in that extraordinary accomplishment.

In the case of Basnight, it has been documented in the Washington's Department of Archives that, indeed, Leon B. Basnight was a substitute at the life saving station in Kitty Hawk on December 18, 1903.

Over the years, Basnight worked in Norfolk as a bookkeeper, then treasurer for an ice cream company. He went into business for himself and retired to Manteo about 15 years ago.

At the Wright Museum, where the interview was being taped, visitors several times asked for his autograph when they learned he is the last known living survivor to be present at that historic event.

Dr. Friday said he was charmed with Basnight's alert, perceptive and interesting story of his experience with the remarkable Orville and Wilbur Wright.

The program with the interviews will be telecast on the following schedule:

— Sunday, August 19 at 6 p.m. and again on Friday, August 24 at 9 p.m. for the segment with Basnight;

— Sunday, August 12 at 6 p.m. and Friday, August 17 at 9 p.m., the interview with Senator Daniels; and — Sunday, August 26 at 6 p.m. and Friday, August 31 at 9 p.m. for the interview at the Marine Resources Center with Dr. Picker.

The UNC-TV telecasts can be seen locally over Channel 25, Greenville.

Festival Time, Europe

By RICHARD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Summer in Europe is a festival of festivals.

From Edinburgh to Spoleto, millions of locals and tourists descend on three dozen major festivals and hundreds of minor ones. The European Cultural Center in Geneva estimates total attendance at more than 10 million.

The festival feast has something for every taste: opera, cinema, pop, jazz. There's rock around the clock at Dortmund, Germany, or around the loch at Loch Lomond. Hamlet in English at Elsinore, Denmark, or in Serbo-Croat at Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia.

A tour of the tourist guides turns up festivals for painting, puppetry, gardening, Latvian folk singing, and chamber music. There's a Brass Band Festival at Kolin, Czechoslovakia, to honor Frantisek Kmoch, who wrote "Roll out the Barrel," and a Robert Burns Festival in Ayreshire, Scotland.

You can pay $128 for a good opera seat at Salzburg or $2 for a seat out of sight of the stage at Bayreuth. Or you can slip into an impromptu Edinburgh performance for free.

Most festivals lose money. The European Cultural Center estimates that ticket sales cover only 30 to 40 percent of the costs. But for local economies it's a symphony for cash registers.

The Edinburgh Festival, for instance, with 200 performances ranging from ballet to mime, will cost $2 million to stage this year. Ticket sales will total only $1 million, but local merchants stand to gain $8 million to $30 million in related business.

The danger is that as festivals expand, money becomes king, and artistic considerations take a back seat. "Festivals are not so much radiant manifestations of culture," said a columnist in Britain's Guardian newspaper, "as greatly glorified concert parties, commercial entertainments put on with the principal object of tempting us to pour money into the local hotels and shops."

For aficionados, the festivals are like a pro golf or tennis tour: If you miss Berlin Philharmonic conductor Herbert von Karajan at Salzburg you can catch him at Lucerne or Berlin. The summer itinerary of the Boston Symphony's Seiji Ozawa includes Paris, Salzburg, Lucerne, Montreux, Brussels, Ghent, Berlin and Edinburgh.

The Edinburgh extravaganza, with 16 opera performances, 21 of ballet and dance, 57 theatrical, 30 symphony and chamber music, has a Russian accent this year, commemorating the 50th anniversary of the death of the ballet impresario Sergei Diaghilev.

And Edinburgh's "Fringe Festival," an informal gathering of groups and troupes that come at their own invitation, has outgrown the original. This year, the Fringe expects 300 performing groups, ranging from jazz to mime, but accenting drama with a selection of playwrights from Woody Allen to Czech dissident Pavel Kohout.

"The Fringe is the biggest festival in the world. Last year we had 5,000 performances, and it will be at least as big this year," says a spokesman.

Two Young Chinese Dancers Studying At Houston Ballet

CHINESE DANCERS... Li Cunxin (left) and Zhang Weigiang, both 18, are in Houston on a six-week scholarship to study with the Houston Ballet. They will be dancing a Pas de Deux choreographed especially for them by Ben Stevenson, Houston Ballet's Artistic Director. (AP Laserphoto)

By STEVEN R. REED

HOUSTON (UPI) — Politics, more than custom, dictate that the first Chinese dance students to study in the United States will spend their lives and talent in China in a ballet considered drab by American standards.

But ever so briefly this summer Li Cunxin and Zhang Weiqiang, both 18, discovered ice cream, Star Wars, vacuum cleaners, James Bond movies, traffic, Houston heat and Texas hospitality.

Given traditional cowboy hats upon their arrival, they accepted them graciously before confessing they had no idea what a cowboy was.

Offered the companionship of Chinese-Americans to soften their culture shock, they politely refused.

"When they came, I tried to get hold of a lot of Chinese people — one must be careful about the Taiwanese situation — I tried to get Chinese people and they said, 'no, we don't want to go out with Chinese people,'" said Ben Stevenson, artistic director of the Houston Ballet.

"And I had some Chinese people who were going to be interpretors for them and they said, 'no, we want to try to speak English.' And, there's a Chinese family, very sweet, who have sons their age, a very nice house and they would like to host them for the weekend and they (Li and Zhang) said no. And they said, 'you would not like to come to China and go out with Americans.'"

Stevenson discovered the boys at the Peking Institute of Dance in March while traveling with the first U.S. cultural delegation to visit China.

"I was teaching in Peking," he said. "I liked those two boys very much. I said it would be marvelous if I could get some sort of scholarship for them to come here and the feeling was from the people involved that it was a very nice gesture but it would take perhaps two years to organize something like that."

The six-week trip and scholarships were arranged in less than three months, however, with the help of Columbia University's Center for U.S.-China Arts Exchange and for reasons Stevenson can only speculate upon.

"I'm going back to Peking for a month to teach, I think that helped a lot, the fact that I sort of think they need me," he said shortly before the boys' stay ended. At the time, he was waiting in his Ballet Academy office for the boys' return from English classes.

"It's very unusual for young people to come out (of China) like that. They're the youngest students out for anything and the first performing arts students... I don't think any of us really thought it would happen, that they'd come over here."

"I've learned a lot from them in their simplicity," Stevenson said. "It's like having ideal sons. They're very honest. Their emotions are very ready. They smile easily and it's not phony.

"Their evaluation of themselves is very good. Strangely enough in the West very few students have that."

Sex Alive And Well In China

By ROY ESSOYAN

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — The bright lights of Avenue Joffre have long been dimmed and there isn't a single beautiful White Russian bar-girl left in town, but sex appears to be alive and well in Communist China.

There never was any doubt about that, of course, otherwise they couldn't have doubled the population in 30 years, to the present 800 million.

But this is a sober and moral society that frowns on sexual display, in posters or parks or anywhere public.

All the night clubs, bars and cabarets of colonial Shanghai are gone. And gone with them is the promiscuity that made Shanghai the sin city of the Orient.

But these days the flowers are in full bloom in the public parks of Shanghai and Peking, and love is not far behind.

While the public address system delivers a lengthy report on the weather and the tides, couples stroll hand-in-hand and here and there, on a park bench, you see them locked in romantic embrace.

Under the rule of Chairman Mao Tse-tung's autocratic widow and the so-called "Gang of Four," such scandalous behavior was not permitted.

Guards patrolled the leafy paths and, after sunset, turned their flashlights on any couple that dared to sit too close to each other.

Avenue Joffre, one of the gay white ways of pre-Communist Shanghai which has been rechristened Huai Hai Road, looks like the main street of a Chinese country town today.

Sycamores in full leaf line the sidewalks crowded with shoppers in the daytime. But at night, when Avenue Joffre used to burst into bright neon-lit life, the whole boulevard is dark, deserted and slightly eerie, and you have to practically grope your way along.

The flashing signs of night spots with names such as "Casanova," "DD's," "Cafe Renaissance" and "Constantinople" went out 30 years ago.

All the great solid stone and brick buildings where colonial Shanghai's financial and political potentates ruled are still there.

The buildings facing the bund show 30 years of wear and tear, though they are still in fair shape. But a few steps in from the bund these once-proud edifices of colonial rule are coated with grime, their stonework blotched and chipped, their hallways dark and dank

Many of the windows are caked with dust. Some are broken or boarded up. You can tell people live there or work there by the washing hanging out. Shops have sprung up and street stalls peddle bowls of noodles, Chinese bread and cookies and cakes. And the streets are alive with pedestrians and bicycles jostling each other in the daytime.

By night, downtown Shanghai is a ghost town peopled only by a few passersby.

The dark, deserted length of Nanking Road, the once-glittering main artery leading up from the bund, is broken by one lighted store front, a proletarian-looking parlor dispensing warm, chicory-tasting coffee and Chinese cakes.

Couples sit at plain weathered tables, passing the early evening hours. At 10 p.m., when the parlor closes, some of them strolling out into the night, hand-in-hand, heading for the public gardens along the bund.

Photography Along The Seashore Offers Many Fascinating Subjects

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

For color or black and white photography, some of the most interesting and rewarding possibilities for picture making can be found along the coastal shores of North Carolina.

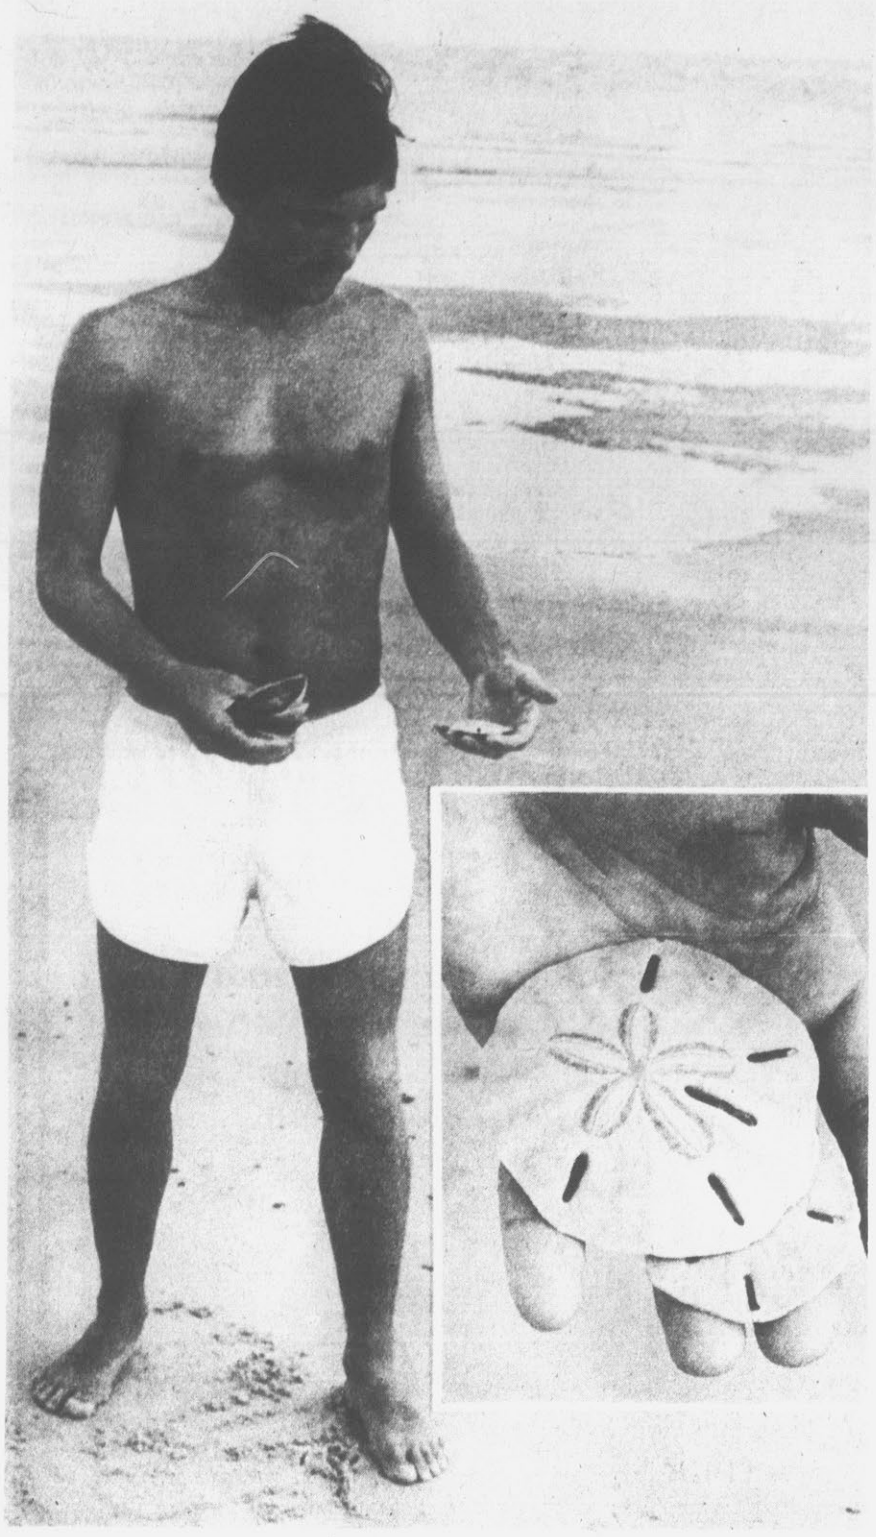
In summer months, numerous beaches and resort areas on both the Outer Banks and inland waterways are crowded with vacationers, offering good chances to shoot group scenes of people of all ages — almost without exception, people are quite willing to be photographed if asked, and more often than not, will gladly take time to be posed if that is desired.

People at play away from tensions of work and household duties are generally in a happy mood, relaxed and outgoing.

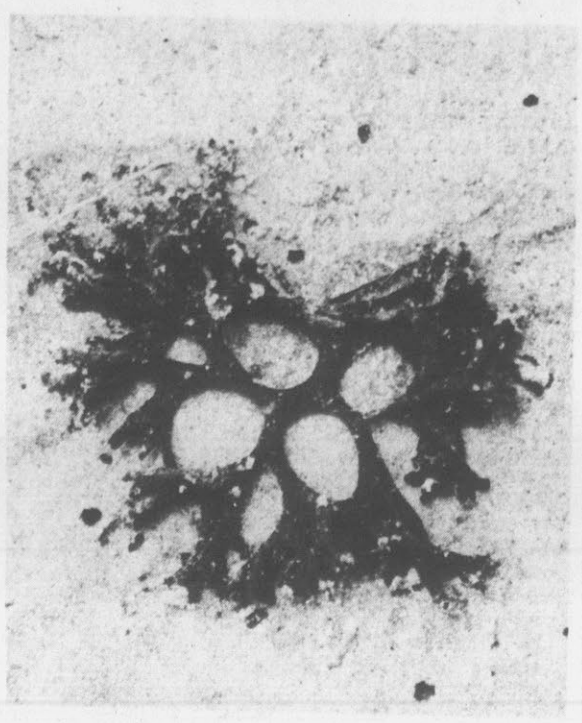
Photographs of individuals, — sitting, strolling, running, collecting souvenirs of the sea, building sand castles or simply day dreaming are also excellent subjects.

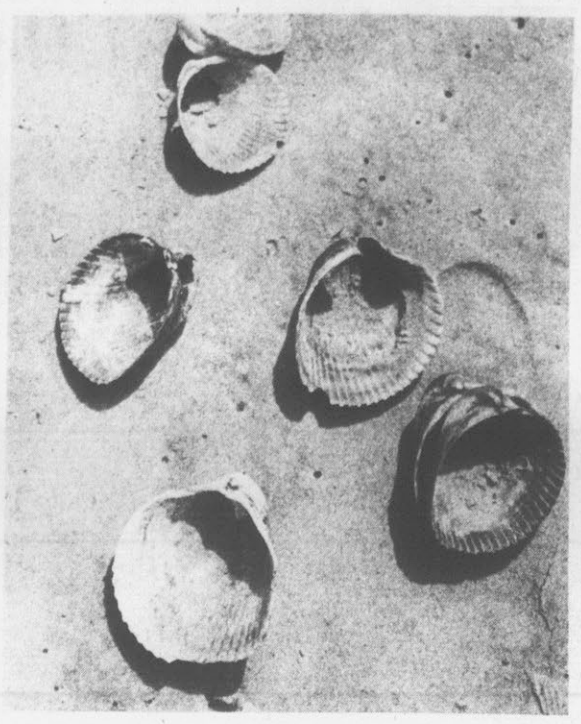
The natural scenery along North Carolina's coast provides an almost endless variation of fascinating subject matter. The eternal breaking of waves, soft curved mounds of dunes, shore birds reflected in water washed sands, the exotic shape of trees bent and gnarled by years of ocean breezes, and for color shots, the subtle shadings of green from dark to gold-green, all provide photographs to treasure.

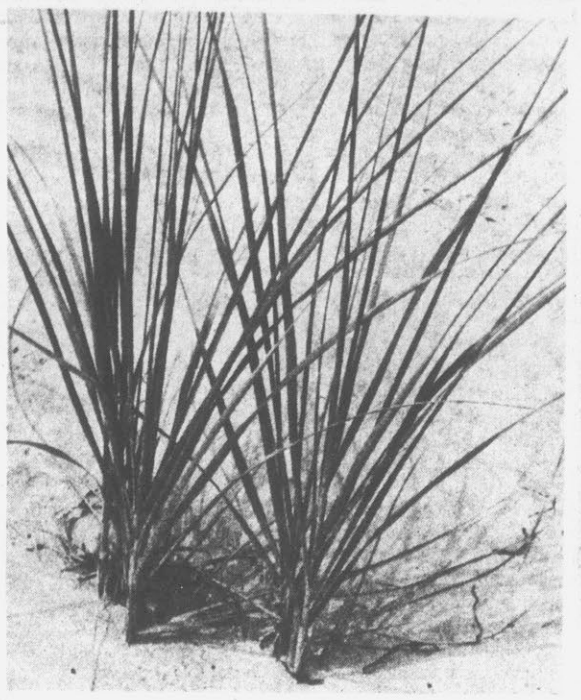
And for those who like close-up details — shells, grass textures, sea weed, the lacy pattern of a breaking wave, or the ripple of sand are subjects always near at hand.

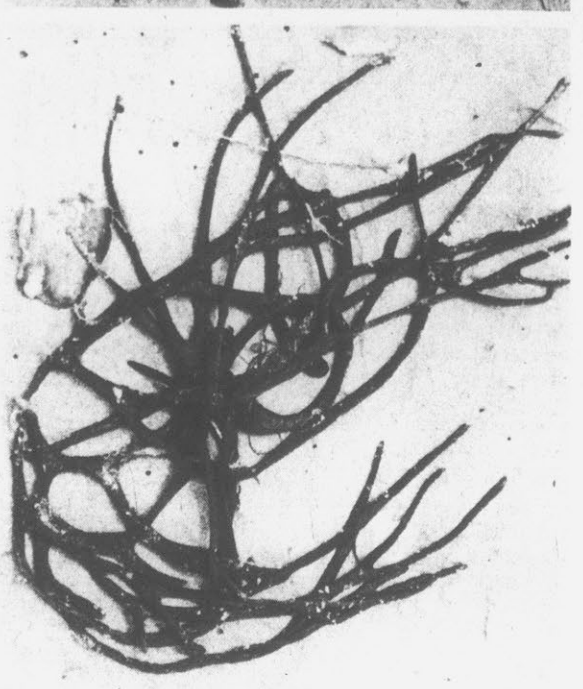


SOUVENIRS OF THE SEA — Greg Morris, a student at North Carolina State University, Raleigh, working at Camp Lejeune in a forestry program for the summer months, enjoys searching out sand dollars along the ocean shores of North Carolina. Here he displays part of a day's find at Hammocks Beach State Park near Swansboro. The thin, grayish wafer-like sea treasure is the internal skeleton of a cake urchin, a marine invertebrate. The long, narrow openings of the specimens shown by Morris indicate they are urchins commonly referred to as the keyhole urchin. Morris also holds sea shells in his right hand. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)









SMALLER OBJECTS . . . have their own special appeal in texture, shape and color. Examples of photographic possibilities common on North Carolina beaches are washed up fragments of seaweed, shells, and the blades of many varieties of coastal grasses.

MUSEUM COMMISSION

NEW YORK (AP) — A large work by contemporary sculptor Michael Heizer has been commissioned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Titled "Guennette," the 46-ton, pink granite sculpture is the first piece by Heizer to enter the museum's collection. It also is the first sculpture commissioned by the museum.

COASTAL SCENES . . . short distances inland from beaches provide excellent photographic subjects. Near the ocean, trees tend to become gnarled and show the result of being buffeted by years of ocean winds.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Julie Hicks

Following his graduation from college and an unsuccessful marriage, Peter Jenkins tries to pick up the pieces of his life but is discouraged and disillusioned with himself and with the future of this country. He plans to leave the country, but instead, he decides to observe it — by walking across it. Accompanied by his dog, Cooper, Jenkins starts on a journey which he thinks with take several months. He found he could not just walk through; he had to stop and live and work among the people. His endeavor took more than five years. A WALK ACROSS AMERICA is the story of the first half of his adventure. In October of 1973, Jenkins and Cooper leaves Connecticut and make their way south to New Orleans and the Gulf of Mexico. Along the way, they meet some fascinating people and Jenkins falls in love with a lovely girl named Barbara. He promises to disclose the second part of his journey west in another book which should be something to look forward to. Jenkins' attitude toward his country changes — he discovers the real America and himself as well. Beautiful photographs add to this delightful story.

THE SEARCHING SPIRIT is the autobiography of Joy Adamson, the world famous author who wrote BORN FREE, the story of Elsa the lion. The author reveals aspects of her life before the raising of Elsa from a cub. Joy tried her hand at several different careers including sculpture, medicine, acting, photography, and painting and went through two marriages before she met game warden George Adamson in Africa. Descriptive passages and illustrations dealing with the flora and fauna of the continent resulted from living in and traveling through the wild. Also included in this personal narrative is the author's life-long support of wild life preservation.

Consulting Designer For N.C. Museum Of Art

RALEIGH — Pat Sears, formerly communications director for the Department of Cultural Resources, has been reassigned to the position of consulting designer for the new N. C. Museum of Art building.

In this new job, Sears will serve as consultant to the director of the Museum of Art in planning, design and installation of the new building's interior.

His duties will include supervision of the entire collection's installation, preparation of various non-gallery areas of the museum, and coordination of other interior design needs such as signs, furnishings and lighting.

A native of Whiteville, Sears graduated with honors in 1973 from the School of Design, N.C. State University. He is the recipient of an Aluminum Company of America Award for Excellence in Design; and the Neiderman Foundation Scholarship for Innovation in Design.

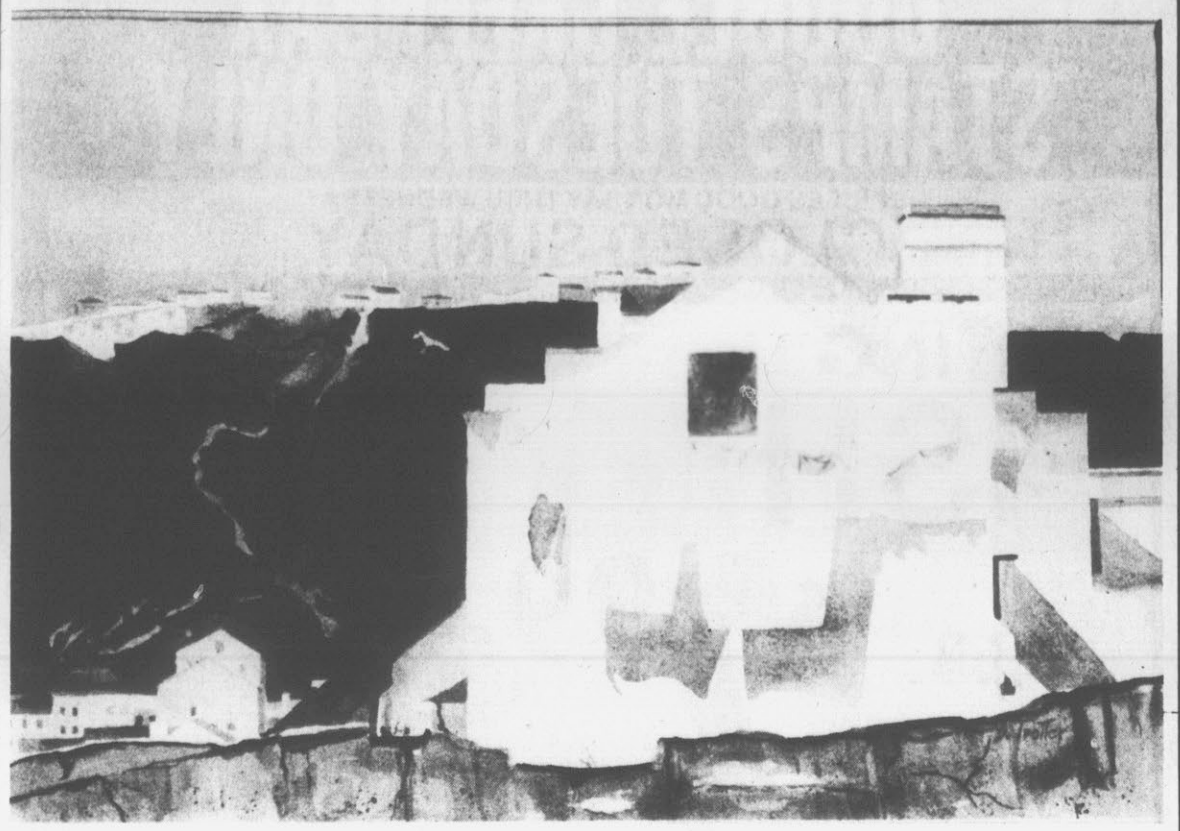
Reynolds Adds To Collection



PORTUGAL WASHDAY . . . a watercolor by Susan Trotter of Charlotte, is one of three art purchase awards made recently by R. J. Reynolds Industries. The three new acquisitions have been added to the corporate collection in the RJR World Headquarters in Winston-Salem.

WINSTON-SALEM — Three new works of art have been purchased by R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc. for its growing permanent collection.

The three works were chosen from works featured this past spring in several leading North Carolina art shows.

"Booth Scenes II," by Edward Rihacek of Winston-- Salem, is a colored pencil drawing that was shown in the Associated Artists of Winston-Salem show in March.

A fabric and porcelain quilt by Catherine Ryan of Hillsborough is another purchase. This piece was shown in the North Carolina Artists Exhibition held by the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh in April.

A third choice (illustrated here) is a watercolor entitled "Portuguese Washday" and is the work of Susan Trotter of Charlotte. It was in the Watercolor Society of North Carolina spring exhibition held in Charlotte during April.

These pieces will be added to the more than 750 pieces of art comprising the permanent collection in the RJR World Headquarters.

This collection was in part responsible for the company winning its second consecutive national "Business in the Arts" award in competition conducted by the Business Committee for the Arts and "Forbes" magazine.

"These recent art purchases are part of an ongoing program by Reynolds Industries to expand its World Headquarters art collection and to provide additional support to North Carolina artists," said C. F. Benbow, Reynolds senior vice president and a member of the Business Committee for the Arts.

Wants An Eye On Skyscraper

By BARNEY LERTEN

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — For every rejection his idea receives, Artist Eugene Kenney seems to try a little harder to get the big conglomerate to let him put an eye on their skyscraper.

Kenney, 33, a proud resident of the city that dares to be different, said he thought that San Francisco's greeting to the treasures of King Tutankhamun, currently on display at the city museum, also should be out of the ordinary.

WOULD ADD EYE . . . San Francisco artist Eugene Kenney holds a copy of the Egyptian eye he wants to paint in giant size at the top of San Francisco's pyramid-shaped Transamerica Corporation skyscraper in the background. Transamerica chairman John Beckett is against the idea. (AP Laserphoto)

So he wrote all the right people, went through all the proper channels for permission to paint a giant Egyptian eye on the famous pyramid-shaped skyscraper the Transamerica Corp. executives call home.

He said he considered the top of the skyscraper the ideal place to display a giant Eye of Horus, an important symbol in ancient Egyptian culture. The eye, traced to Horus, the falcon god of light, also stares out from the Great Seal of the United States on the back of every dollar bill.

While the idea of a 24-foot by 16-foot eye peering down from atop the city's newest landmark caught on fine in the city's art and society cliques, it failed to catch the fancy of Transamerica chairman John Beckett.

"This building is like our house," Beckett said. "It's where we work and live. And we just don't want an eye on it."

Kenney's eye idea got a good deal of support. A newspaper columnist took up his cause.

Jane Hall, Transamerica's vice president for corporate relations, held her ground.

"We made a definite negative decision last fall," she said. "The idea is certainly dead as far as we're concerned. Giving in to the kind of social pressure we're seeing isn't a proper way to run a business."

Kenney has been talking of taking his case to Transamerica stockholders. In fact, North Beach restaurateur Freddy Kuh, who earlier bought two shares of Transamerica so he could oppose the pyramid's construction in the first place, has expanded his holding to 40 shares and wrote a letter to the firm, asking if he could have access to a list of stockholders.

Mrs. Hall conceded the corporation is required to make that list available but only under certain conditions. Determining those conditions, she said, "becomes a fairly delicate matter."

Kenney, confronted with Transamerica's terms for who can and cannot see the stockholders list, said it's more of a "Catch-22" than just a "delicate matter."

Now Kenney has is on a new tack. He has asked the National Endowment of the Arts in Washington for its support. If that doesn't work, he says, "I'll try something else."

Still, Mrs. Hall, the Transamerica executive, takes Kenney's phone calls and hears his pleas. In that sense, she has yet to close the corporate door in his face, so to speak. Why?

"Because Gene still has a dream, and you've got to respect people who have dreams," she says.

Children Interested In Arts And Crafts

NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Dodge Lacy, an elementary school teacher in Ponca City, Okla., believes that children are more interested than ever in arts and crafts and that it is vitally important to encourage them.

Her encouragement has resulted in her students winning 11 top prizes in a national art contest that drew more than 60,000 entries.

Mrs. Lacy, who teachers 10 art classes a day in the second through sixth grades, says that her room is the messiest one in the school.

"If they don't make a mess, they can't produce," she explains to those who like tidy, if inhibited, children.

Mrs. Lacy teaches in Garfield School in Ponca City, a town of 40,000 midway between Tulsa and Oklahoma City. Because it is in a less affluent area of town, she decided three years ago that her students should enter all art contests that came along.

"It gives them something to work toward," she says. "I think this is important. In the past three years we have won $2,600 in prize money."

This year, that total has been more than doubled, with winners from her school bringing home $3,350 in the "Q-Tips Art Contest." Entries were judged on creativity, originality, technical skill and composition by a panel of authorities on children's art, including Elizabeth Flinn, head of the Junior Museum of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, where the awards were presented.

"I think that one of the most important results of these contests, besides encouraging the children, is that it keeps art in the schools," Mrs. Lacy said during a visit here in connection with the awarding of the prizes.

"We all know money is getting tighter, and there is a temptation to get rid of 'frills.' Some people think art is a frill. That's not true — and the kind of success we've been having totally disproves that, I believe."

The school uses the prize money to purchase paper, brushes, paint, glue, scissors, collage materials and other basics, which are given free to the children.

"I am glad not to have to settle for paper so thin that the children can never erase on it when they are blocking out a design," she says.

Mrs. Lacy, 47, a native Oklahoman, was born in Pawhuska, which had been Indian territory. She is "on the roll" as a member of the Delaware tribe on her father's side.

After graduating from Oklahoma State University as an education and art major, she did free lance architectural and photographic work in Houston, moving to her present post at Garfield about 15 years ago. She has two daughters, 16 and 20.

Mrs. Lacy sees art as very much a part of everyday life.

Plan To Join Conference

NEW YORK (AP) — Eight religious leaders from mainland China have confirmed they will participate in a World Conference on Religion and Peace Aug. 29-Sept. 7 at Princeton, N.J., planners disclosed.

They said the Chinese delegation would include three Buddhists, three Christians, two Moslems and two aides, the first religious group to come to an international meeting from China since it turned communist.

The conference of more than 350 religious leaders from about 50 nations representing the world's 10 major faiths is focused on the theme, "Religion in the Struggle for World Community."

The honorary chairman, Nikkyo Niwano of Japan, said in a statement from Tokyo thatn"it is not possible to discuss 'the true world' at an international conference without representation from China, with its 1 billion people.

"The first participation of these Chinese religious leaders in a world conference for a full generation is an event of historic proportions."

Caldwell In Surprising Two-Shot Lead

By RICHARD L. SHOOK
UPI Sports Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — Refreshing Rex Caldwell, a five-year tournament "Who?" on the verge of his biggest pro payday, birdied five of seven holes en route to a 4-under par 66 Saturday, giving him a two-shot lead entering the last round of the $350,000 PGA tournament.

Caldwell, who apparently takes care of the pressure with a free expression of his emotions on the course, was at 7-under 203 after three rounds on an Oakland Hills course that was supposed to yield sub-par rounds as grudgingly as a miser gives up gold.

"I came out today (Saturday) and said, 'Get out of the box good and don't let anything bother you.' he said.

"I consider that as good a round of golf as I have ever played," said Caldwell, about to become the first golfer ever to beat par over the famed course in a major championship. Four U.S. Opens and one PGA have been held on the course.

"I was really enjoying myself out there. I was really amazed. I wasn't nevous one bit," he said after completing a round that was delayed 45 minutes by rain while he was on the 18th tee. "Gimme the biggest lead I can find."

Closest competition to Caldwell is second-round leader Ben Crenshaw, who added a 69 to his 136 and is at 205, five strokes below par. Next, at 3-under 207, are David Graham, who shot a 70, first-round leader Tom Watson, who had a 69, and Jerry Pate, also at 69.

Crenshaw had a round of five birdies and four bogeys. Third-year pro Jay Haas, 5-under at one point after entering the round tied with Caldwell, took a triple-bogey seven on the 14th and bogeyed the next hole to lose his chances.

Still within striking range at 2-under 208 is Ron Streck with a 69.

Caldwell started his round innocuously enough with four straight pars over the 7,014-yard course, softened up by daily rain earlier in the week and not dried out by a relatively rain free first two rounds.

He began what started out as a hot, steamy day at 3-under 137, a stroke behind Crenshaw and deadlocked with Haas and Graham.

But the free-spirited Caldwell nicked the 442-yard par 4 fifth hole for a birdie that tied him for first and was on his way to a lead that threatens to make him shed his anonymity.

Caldwell parred the sixth but birdied the 409-yard par 4 seventh to wrest the lead from Crenshaw, Haas and Graham Marsh. He sank birdie putts on the 440-yard par 4 eighth and 225-yard par 3 ninth to drop seven below par with a front nine of 31.

Nickaus Can't Take His Golf

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — "I don't remember — not even when I was a kid — having a worse season," a dejected Jack Nicklaus said Saturday after skying to a 78 in the third round of the PGA Golf Championship.

"I can't stand playing golf like that."

At 223, 12-over par for three rounds, the game's greatest player found himself trailing a dozen par busters by from 13 to 20 shots as many mangled the Oakland Hills course.

He said this is his last competition of the year and he is undecided over how challenging a schedule he will tackle in 1980.

"I will play in the four majors (Masters, U.S. and British Opens and PGA) and Muirfield (his own memorial event in Columbus, Ohio) ad I don't know what I will do beyond that."

Nicklaus, winner of an unprecented 17 major championships and the only player to exceed $3 million in prize winnings, was bitterly disappointed over his failure in this 61st PGA, a tournament he has won four times.

"I have been hitting the ball well — I thought I would do better," he lamented. "I was atrocious around the greens."

This marks the first time since he turned pro in late 1961 that Nicklaus has not won at least one tour event.

Special Memories For Munson Friends

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Dempsey joined the Yankees as a hot-shot catching prospect in 1973. He was there to take Thurman Munson's job away. When Dempsey walked into the locker room for the first time, Munson was the first player to greet him.

"You're the kid who's gonna try to take my job, aren't you?" Munson said.

"I said, yeah, if I can," Dempsey responded.

"Well, nice to have you around," Munson said.

As he was recounting this story, Dempsey's eyes were pink. He was unsuccessfully choking back tears.

"From that day on, Thurman was my idol. He was always reassuring me, telling me that someday I would get my chance. He was never afraid to tell me how I could go about taking his job."

Demspey, now with Baltimore, was talking about Munson just before the Orioles-Yankees game Friday night. The day before, the 32-year-old Munson, the Yankee captain and inspiration, died when the plane he was piloting crashed near his home in Canton, Ohio.

Munson had a special wave he reserved for Dempsey, tucking in his three middle fingers and wiggling the thumb and pinky. "Last year, we were playing the Yankees here," Dempsey said. "I got a base hit, stole second and scored on a close play in the ninth. Thurman was really mad 'cause he thought I was out. But in the bottom of the inning, he smiled at me from the dugout and flashed our special sign — it meant 'nice going kid.'"

Dempsey looked around Yankee Stadium, where Munson had played with distinction for 10 seasons.

"Baseball will never be the same for me here. I'll miss talking to him and waving at him with our special sign. It's a tragedy because we have to stay here on earth and live without him."

Munson was revered by his fellow players, who got to know the real man. For his own reasons, he never let reporters crack the icy veneer he used as a shield between himself and the outside world. Reporters respected him as a gritty competitor who often played hurt, was one of the most feared clutch hitters in the game and was a catcher in total control of the game.

But they never knew the real man.

"He has always had a warm word for everybody," said Jim Palmer, ace Baltimore pitcher who cherished his countless duels with Munson over the years. "There aren't too many people who really care about other people, but he would always ask you how you felt and how your family was. I know that sounds like a cliche, but he knew my wife, and I felt he truly meant it.

"I can remember tense, critical games when I'd strike him out, and I'd see him give me a grin. I think that was his way of telling me that striking out wasn't the end of the world."

Baltimore reliever Tippy Martinez, another former Yankee, remembers Munson taking Martinez out to dinner when the pitcher was a rookie. Munson would never let Martinez pay for a thing.

"I'll always remember him saying, 'When you're making a lot of money, then you can take the rookies out to dinner,'" Martinez said.

Munson's teammates were family to him, and he enjoyed playing baseball. But, as he grew older, he insisted he wanted to be traded to Cleveland, not far from his home, so he could spend more time with his wife, Diana, and their three children.

"I saw him early in spring training and he said he couldn't wait 'til the season was over," Palmer said. "You knew Thurman was joking, but you also knew how much his family meant to him."

"Cleveland was an attractive place for me to play ball," Munson wrote in his 1978 autobiography. "I don't need to play in a glamour city. I don't seek the publicity and, in fact, haven't received it. I care about my family, I care about my business interests, which provide security for my family, and I care about getting a good contract from my baseball employer.

"Although I am best known to people as a baseball player, I have become fully conscious that baseball represents at best one-third of my interests. My family comes first — Diana, Tracy, Kelly and Mike mean more to me than a world championship ever could. Once I became a family man, baseball became the means toward securing their welfare, so that we could have a long and happy life together."

His youngest child, Michael, is hyperactive, and Munson wanted to be around him as much as possible.

"When Thurman is around, you wouldn't believe he is the same child," Diana Munson once said. "Usually Michael gets up 10 or 11 times a night and calls for me. But when Thurman is home, he says 'Michael, I don't want you getting up at night and calling mommy.'

"And he sleeps until morning. And then when he wakes up, he calls Thurman. When I see that, I know we need Thurman around. This little boy needs his dad."

To be home with his family as much as possible, Munson bought a plane, using it to commute between American League cities and Canton. He flew home so often that he did not even have a permanent residence for the season in New York.

After the Yankees finished their series in Chicago Wednesday, Munson went home. He was checking what he thought to be a problem with his $1.4 million Cessna Citation when the accident happened.

Munson said his devotion to his family probably was a reaction to his own upbringing. His father, a long-haul trucker, was away from home much of the time. "Our lives were a lot alike," Demspey said. "We had troubles with our fathers and our home lives."

But Munson couldn't get away from the fact that he loved to play baseball. And anyone who watched the AL's Most Valuable Player in 1976 dive after low pitches or race around the bases could see that.

"As long as baseball continued to be fun for me, and as long as I continued to play well, it was too important to give up," Munson wrote. "The problems with the front office and press aside. I still was in love with the two or three hours on the field each day."

He also enjoyed the camraderie of the Yankees locker room where he could carry on with his teammates. He teased them, and they

Mike Moye Fires 83

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Mike Moye of Greenville, playing in the 11th annual Insurance Youth Classic Golf Tournament, fired a first round 83 in play Saturday.

Moye, representing North Carolina in the tournament is one of 153 youths from 38 states participating in the tournament which winds up on Tuesday.

Moye had a 41-42—83 in his round, to tentatively tie for 88th place. At press time, six groups still had not completed play due to a rain delay.

Leading the field was 15-year-old Jerry Haas, brother of Wake Forest star Jay Haas. The Belleville, Ill., youth had an even par 72.

The top 66 following today's second round will qualify for the final two rounds, which will see 23 professionals join in to play with the youths.

Moye is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Bill Moye of Greenville, and is a recent graduate of Rose High School.

Candeleria Shakes Off Rumors, Woes, Hurls Pirates To Victory

By GARY MIHOCES
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John Candeleria had his usual post-game back pain, but he was happy to be a winner and happy to be alive after pitching the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday.

"I have lots to be thankful for," said Candeleria, who earned the pitching victory four days after he escaped injury in a minor, two-car accident near Meadville, Pa. There were initial, uncomfirmed reports after the accident that Candeleria had aggravated a chronic, lower back problem that has troubled him throughout his major league career. But those reports were dismissed after examinations by Pirates' physicians.

"The back hurts, like it always does," said Candeleria, who pitched five-hit ball for seven innings before being relieved by kent Tekulve. The reliever finished up the five-hitter.

"But it's a lot easier playing ball than working in a coal mine," said Candeleria.

Candeleria's fender-bender came two days before Thurman Munson of the New York Yankees was killed in a Ohio plane crash.

"A lot of people called me after Thurman was killed and told me how lucky I was. It could have been two of us within three days," Candeleria said between sips on a post-game beer.

"I just thank God nobody was hurt. That's all I can say. If I wasn't a ballplayer, it would be just another accident, and nobody would give a darn."

Candeleria, 10-7, was backed by a Pirate attack that included a two-run single by Ed Ott, as the Pirates handed the Phillies ther third straight loss here.

The Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the third when Dave Parker doubled off loser Nino Espinosa, 7-9, and scored on a single by Willie Stargell.

The Pirates chased Espinosa with a three-run fifth inning that began with a bunt single by Omar Moreno, who stole his 48th base of the season before Stargell was walked intentionally with two out.

John Milner then singled to right, where outfielder Mike Anderson misplayed the ball for an error. Moreno scored, Stargell took third and Milner reached second.

After Bill Madlock was walked intentionally to load the bases, Ott singled to score two more runs.

Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark used starting pitcher Randy Lerch in relief for the first time this season. Lerch got the final out in the sixth and pitched one more scoreless inning.

In the sixth inning, Philadelphia's Pete Rose singled to right, giving him 2,426 singles and tying him with former Pirate Honus Wagner for the all-time National League lead in singles.

The game was played before a paid crowd of 34,754, largest ever for a Saturday afternoon game at Three Rivers Staduim, where the Pirates drew a season-high crowd of 45,309 as they swept a Friday night doubleheader from the Phillies.

On his fifth-inning steal, Moreno was struck on the side of the head by the throw from catcher Bob Boone. Moreno, momentarily dazed, remained in the game and added another stolen base following a walk in the eighth to raise his season steal total to 49.

Mike Schmidt led off the Philadelphia fourth with a double off Moreno's glove against the wall in center. Two outs later, Schmidt took third on an infield single by Garry Maddox. But Anderson popped out to second base to end the Philadelphia threat.

In the Phillies' sixth, Boone singled with two out and took second on another single by Maddox before Anderson forced Maddox at second.

Tekulve, making his 60th appearance of the season, retired the side in order in the eighth, throwing called third strikes past Larry Bowa and Greg Luzinski.

In the Phillies' ninth, Maddox singled with one out. He was forced at second by pinch-hitter Tim McCarver, but Manny Trillo grounded out to end the game.

Defensive Ends Must Come Back Following Injuries To Help Bucs

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Cary Godette, East Carolina's defensive end coach, admits that the Pirates have been a little spoiled over the past few years by the play at that position.

Several years back, Godette himself played that position with a good deal of ability. He was succeeded by Zack Valentine, who became a second-round draft choice earlier this spring. Fred Chavis also wound up a fine career at the position this past fall.

Now, however, there are no Carys or Zacks on the horizon, and Godette admits that it's a little scarey going into fall practice.

Two players return who will probably fill the starting positions, and both have outstanding experience. They are John Morris (6-2, 212, Sr.) and Clifford Williams (6-1, 210, Jr.).

"Over the past two years, John has played a lot of defensive end for us," Godette said. "But he was injured in the spring, and we don't know how well he's going to be. Williams started the last three or four games last year, and did a good job for us.

"But we went through the spring without our top four ends, and that can't have helped us at all. How well they come back from their injuries is going to be very important. If they can be healthy enough to do the job, then we should be okay."

Backing up Morris and Williams will be Rocky Butler (6-3, 220, Jr.) and Brian McDaniel (6-3, 205, Fr.). "Rocky has improved a lot, but hasn't had much playing time. He should see a lot of action for us this fall. McDaniels is a red-shirted freshman who has great ability. He reminds me a lot of Zack, but he is bigger. He's just learning however, and has a long way to go."

Another prospect is George Crump (6-3, 215, So.), who was moved from the defensive tackle position in the spring. "He's the biggest we've ever had and we expect good things from him."

Dorian Wright, a walkon, could also be a prospect.

"We don't have any Valentines or Chavises on the horizon, but we do have a good group to work with," Godette said. "We don't have the ability we've had in the past, but we have people who can do a good job for us."

As far as recruitment goes, only one defensive end, Anthony Robbins (6-2, 220) was signed this fall, and Godette said that he could end up playing elsewhere.

"With Morris as our only senior, we're not in too bad a shape. But we'll need to bring in some freshmen next fall," the coach said.

The picture isn't bleak by any means. There are good people at the position. "Morris is as good as anyone, and Clifford probably has more ability than anyone around. We just don't have the standout like Zack we have had."

Nancy Lopez Races To Seven-Shot Lead

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — Defending champion Nancy Lopez of the United States held a commanding 7-stroke lead over fellow countrywoman Joyce Kazmierski after the third round of the European Women's Golf Championship Saturday.

Lopez tamed the 6,174-yard par 74 Sunningdale course for the third straight day. She shot a 4-under-par 70 for a 207 and was 15-under for the tournament.

"I have never led by 7 strokes after three rounds of a tournament before," Lopez said.

"But you are never too far ahead. Anything can happen. I shall just go out there and try to play a good last round."

Kazmierski was at 214. American Pat Bradley shot six birdies on the incoming nine and jumped into third place with 215. Mardell Wilkins of the United States was at 217.

Lopez needed a 1-under-par 73 Sunday to set a new low of 280 for the tournament. Judy Rankin set the record of 281 in winning the title two years ago.

Kazmierski, 32, who never has won a tournament in 10 years on the pro circuit, began the day 3 strokes behind Lopez and stayed in contention with the leader for the first seven holes.

Kazmierski bogeyed the eighth and struggled to hold her ground as Lopez came charging home on the inward nine.

The last three holes made all the difference. Lopez birdied the 16th and 17th and narrowly missed a 15-foot birdie putt at the 18th. Kazmierski bogeyed the last two holes.

"It was a kind of up-and-down round for me," Kazmierski said. "There are still 18 holes to play. I guess I have had my bad day and I'm all ready to get back to work tomorrow."

The sunny weather made a strong contrast to Friday's torrential rains, in which Lopez shot a 5-under-par 69.

"Considering the conditions, I played better in the second round," Lopez said. "I did not hit the ball so close to the pins today and I made one or two bad shots out of the bunkers."

In the three rounds, Lopez has driven off the fairways only twice.

"You have to hit straight on this course, otherwise you are in a lot of trouble." said the 22-year-old star, winner of six tournaments this year.

Three players shared fifth place at 219 — American Beth Daniel, South Africa's Sally Little and Britain's Mickey Walker.

Little played the first nine holes in 3-under par and then only was 5 strokes behind Lopez. But she wrecked her chances with a triple-bogey 8 at the 10th.

Firing Up

Chief mechanic Jake Elder, right, fumbles with his matches while lighting a cigarette Friday in the garage at Talladega, Ala., as his driver, David Pearson, left, and Leonard Wood, center, watch. Pearson, who drove for the Wood brothers last season, is starting second for the 500-mile race today. Neil Bonnett, also with the Wood Brothers, has the pole position. (AP Laserphoto)

Pearson Has Competetive Edge

TALLADEGA, Ala. (UPI) — David Pearson says going without a ride on the Grand National stock car circuit for four months has not reduced his competitive edge, and certainly has not hurt his confidence.

"I'm going to drive like I want to," said Pearson, who will be on the front row Sunday in the $231,000 Talladega 500 with pole sitter Neil Bonnett of Hueytown.

"I'm not going to go out there and bust my tail trying to prove anything to anybody. I'm going to drive like I've always driven and hope I can beat somebody on the last lap," said Pearson, known as the "Silver Fox" for his graying hair and crafty racetrack maneuvers.

The three-time NASCAR champion was replaced by Bonnett in the Wood Brothers Mercury last April. He had driven for the team seven years when he was fired.

Pearson, 44, was without a Grand National ride until last week, when he was asked to run Talladega in the Osterlund Oldsmobile driven by rookie Dale Earnhardt. Earnhardt was sidelined with injuries suffered in a race last Monday.

Pearson said his committment to driving the Oldsmobile was one-time only, and "I want to get this race over with before I make any committments on any other."

But the Spartanburg, S.C., driver, who has been racing on short tracks since losing his ride in the Mercury, is pleased to be back out on the super speedway.

"Right now, I feel good. I'm enjoying myself," said Pearson during qualifying Thursday. Pearson's second-best time was 192.731 miles per hour at the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway. Bonnett, who has won two races since taking over the Mercury, grabbed the pole with a time of 193.6 mph.

"It's going to be tough on equipment Sunday, it's so hot," said Bonnett. "But all I can see is everybody running wide open."

"It (the Mercury) doesn't seem to slow down a bit on race day," said Bonnett.

Kyle Petty, 19-year-old son of veteran driver Richard Petty, will be competing for the first time against his father in a Grand National race. Kyle failed in two prior attempts to qualify for a NASCAR event, but qualified 18th in a Dodge for the Talladega race. Richard Petty qualified in an Oldsmobile in the 13th slot.

Young Petty said he was cautious in qualifying because he was inexperienced on the high-banked tri-oval at Talladega, not because he was afraid of wrecking again.

"I took it cautious out there, but it wasn't because of the crashes," he said. "It was because I was still trying to learn the track. I'm getting off the corners pretty good, but I'm still having a little trouble going in. This track is like Daytona and then it's not like Daytona."

Other contenders in the 40-man field include Tighe Scott, who qualified third in a Buick, Buddy Baker, who came in fourth, and Cale Yarborough fifth, both in Oldsmobiles.

Veteran short track driver Jack Ingram, who replaced Talladega 500 defending champion Lennie Pond in the Oldsmobile owned by Ken Childers last week, qualified 16th at 186.937 mph. Also entered are Darrell Waltrip, Benny Parsons, Dave Marcis and Bobby Allison.

Harrah's Slam Paces Rangers

CLEVELAND (AP) — Toby Harrah belted a grand slam home run and Dan Spillner pitched 32-3 innings of scoreless relief as the Cleveland Indians outscored the Texas Rangers 12-8 Saturday.

Harrah's 11th homer, hit into the left field seats off Ranger starter John Johnson, 4-13, followed a walk to Mike Hargrove, Bobby Bonds' double and a walk to Andre Thornton. Gary Alexander then followed Harrah's bases-clearing blast with his 14th home run to give the Indians a quick 5-0 lead.

Bonds had three hits and scored two runs, and Thornton and Alexander scored three runs each for the Indians.

Rick Waits, 11-9, gave up three-run homers to Buddy Bell and Dave Roberts, and a solo shot to John Ellis. Jim Sundberg added two hits and two walks, and three runs scored to the Texas attack.

Spillner allowed only one hit in picking up his first save.

Angels Soar Over Twins, 7-1

By SCOTT PAPILLON
AP Sports Writer

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — American League batting leader Brian Downing drove in two runs with two singles and Carney Lansford drilled a two-run homer to pace the California Angels to a 7-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

Downing's two-run single in the first inning capped a three-run outburst against loser Dave Goltz, 10-8. Downing also singled in the eighth and scored the Angels' fifth run when Joe Rudi followed with a triple.

California starter Dave Frost, 10-7, had a three-hitter going until Mike Cubagge singled and Hosken Powell doubled with one out in the eighth.

Frost was relieved by Mark Clear, who struck out Rob Wilfong and got Ken Landreaux on a popout. Clear then set down the Twins in the ninth to earn his 10th save.

Lansford's homer came off reliever Mike Bacsik in the ninth and scored Rick Miller, who doubled. Miller also drove in a run in the seventh when he doubled home Bert Campaneris, who had tripled.

The Twins' only run came in the seventh when Landreaux and Danny Goodwin laced back to back singles and Glenn Adams hit a sacrifice fly one out later.

Kingman's 37th Leads Cubs Past Cards, 8-6

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Kingman walloped a three-run homer, tying his career high of 37 for one season, and added a sacrifice fly to power the Chicago Cubs to an 8-6 victory Saturday over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Kingman's fourth-inning shot after Mike Krukow singled and Bill Buckner walked gave the Cubs a 6-4 lead over Cardinal starter John Denny, 5-9.

Kingman hit 37 homers in 1976 with the New York Mets. His sacrifice fly came in a three-run third inning in which the Cubs tied the score 3-3.

Krukow, 9-6, had a horrible start, giving up singles to the first four Cardinal batters — Garry Templeton, Lou Brock, Keith Hernandez and Ted Simmons. Hernandez's single scored one run and bases-loaded walks to Jerry Mumphrey and Ken Oberkfell brought in two more.

But Krukow gave up only one more run and three more hits before being lifted with two out in the seventh after Brock's third single. The runs scored in the fourth when Denny walked and Templeton doubled, giving St. Louis a 4-3 edge.

The Cubs went ahead 7-4 on Krukow's RBI single in the fifth. St. Louis closed the gap with two runs in the seventh on RBI singles by Simmons and George Hendrick. The Nubs added an unearned run in the eighth.

Brock's three singles left him nine short of becoming the 14th major league player to get 3,000 hits.

Bruce Sutter recorded his 25th save for the Cubs.

Oiler Has Operation

HOUSTON (UPI) — Greg Sampson, one of the Houston Oilers' top players, was "doing superbly" despite an operation for a blood clot in his brain, an Oilers spokesman said Saturday.

Sampson reportedly collided with another player at training practice July 22 at the Oilers' training camp in San Angelo, Texas.

Sampson was moved from an intensive care ward into a private room Saturday and the Oilers' team physician, Dr. Thomas Cain, said "considering the seriousness of the operation, he's doing superbly."

Swann Testifies In Damage Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers wide receiver Lynn Swann has testified in his $2 million suit against the city's police that he suffered no broken bones, had no teeth knocked out and required no stitches following his arrest four years ago.

Swann has charged four police officers with making gutter references to his ethnic heritage and beating him, two of his brothers and a friend after the four were stopped for running a red light in their auto.

All four men are black.

Swann began testimony in San Francisco Superior Court on Friday by giving the jury a football clinic complete with blackboard diagrams. The point of Swann's presentation was to stress the dangers that professional football players face.

Judge Henry Rolph allowed the testimony because "it goes to the question of damages." Swann is expected to contend that his career was shortened by the injuries he says he received during the altercation at a police substation on Jan. 31, 1974.

"If policemen were compensated on the basis of susceptibility to danger, they would make three times as much as professional football players," Defense Attorney Jeremiah O'Shea argued at one point.

Another attorney for the city, cross-examining Swann, obtain his acknledgement that he had no broken bones or stitches following the beatings.

The trial resumes Monday.

Chris, Whitaker Spark Kansas City

DETROIT (AP) — Rookie Mike Chris held Kansas City hitless for the first six innings Saturday and Lou Whitaker broke an 0-for-17 slump with a pair of hits, including a run-scoring triple in the third inning, to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 5-2 victory over the Royals.

Chris, a 21-year old left-hander making his first major league start, didn't allow a hit until Hal McRae blooped a double down the right field line in the seventh inning. Al Cowens followed with a single, scoring McRae and Darrell Porter, who led off the inning with a walk.

John Hiller replaced Chris after Cowens' hit and gave up a single to Amos Otis before retiring the next three batters. Hiller finished the game to gain his eighth save.

Detroit scored twice in the third off Larry Gura, 7-8, on a single and stolen base by Ron LeFlore, a triple by Whitaker and Steve Kemp's double. The Tigers added a run in the sixth when John Wockenfuss doubled with two out and scored on Jason Thompson's single. Detroit completed the scoring in the seventh with a pair of unearned runs.

Chris, who was recalled from Evansville on July 25, pitched one inning of relief in Texas on July 31 and gave up three hits and three runs. He retired the first 10 Royals to face him before walking Frank White and Porter in the fourth inning. They advanced on a double steal, but Chris got McRae to tap into a fielder's choice at the plate and fanned Cowens.

Pensive Pete

Pete Rose of the Phillies watches his teammates bat from a corner of the dugout in Pittsburgh Friday night. The Phillies dropped both ends of a doubleheader to the Pirates, 6-3, and 5-1. Rose got one hit in four at-bats in the first game and went 0-4 in the second. (AP Laserphoto) kidded him back, calling him "Squatty Body" or "Tuna." Often, a newspaper picture of a fat man would appear on Munson's locker.

His teammates rallied around Munson when Reggie Jackson joined the club in 1977 and Jackson immediately crowned himself team leader. This did not sit well with Munson, and he and Jackson openly feuded.

"I have things in life," Munson wrote, "that Reggie can only hope to have — a stable family life with a wonderful wife and three great children; a secure private business life which has kept my head in the real world and provided lifetime security for my family."

On the field, Munson saw Jackson as a valued teammate.

"If only he would limit his act to brilliance on the field, I could really love the man. Anybody who could produce for my team that way can be teammate of mine anytime."

Munson also feuded with George Steinbrenner, once growing a beard in defiance of the Yankee owner's strict grooming code. He signed a four-year contract in 1976, receiving assurances from Steinbrenner, he said, that he would be the highest paid Yankee besides Catfish Hunter and he would get a bonus if New York won the pennant.

Steinbrenner said the deal required a World Series victory — the Yankees lost to Cincinnati in 1976 — and, the next year, he gave Jackson, a free agent, a bigger contract than Munson. The owner denied ever making the salary promise to Munson.

Munson's anger with Steinbrenner continued for more than a year. They finally signed a new contract in the spring of 1978. Included in it was a clause concerning Munson and his plane.

"Thurman wanted it to be upfront that he flew and that it was very important to him," said Dick Moss, the lawyer who negotiated Munson's contract. It did not contain a provision, common to many contracts, absolving the club of compliance with the agreement if the player dies while piloting a plane.

Munson's new contract, which had two more years to run at an average annual salary of $420,000, did not remove all his resentment.

"It was satisfactory the way it should have been before I was disgraced for two years," Munson said. "In the respect that it satisfies me financially, yes, but it doesn't help my attitude. Are material things supposed to help a guy who's had these things eating at him for two years?"

It was this burning pride that was his trademark. It carried beyond Munson's baseball world, touching everything he did, including real estate investments which made him a millionaire.

"If I can be remembered as a 'player of the 70s', I'll be proud," wrote Munson. "I'd like to think that today's players have left the ranks of the dumb jocks and become well respected individuals, able to fend for themselves in the free enterprise system."

Fisk, Yaz Lead Bosox Victory

By MIKE O'BRIEN
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Carlton Fisk and Carl Yastrzemski belted three-run homers in a six-run Boston second inning, and the Red Sox held on to defeat the Milwaukee Brewers 8-6 Saturday.

The Red Sox erupted in the second, after Dwight Evans, who had been behind 0-2 in the count, drew a two-out walk. Rick Burleson followed with a single and Fisk with his sixth homer.

A walk to Fred Lynn chased loser Reggie Cleveland, 1-5. Bob Galasso came on to walk Jim Rice and then served up Yastrzemski's 18th homer for an 8-2 Red Sox lead.

Sal Bando singled home a run in the Brewers' fourth off winner Allen Ripley, 2-0, and they closed to within 8-4 when Sixto Lezcano hit his 16th homer in the fifth. A single by Robin Yount and a triple by Paul Molitor chased Ripley in the eighth and Bando singled home Moltor for the Brewers' final run.

The Red Sox took a 2-0 lead in the first. Lynn singled with two out, raced to third on a double by Rice and scored on a balk by Cleveland. Rice then scored on a wild pitch.

The Brewers tied the game at 2-2 in their half of the first on Bando's ninth homer, a double by Cecil Cooper, a fielder's choice and an RBI infield single by Gorman Thomas.

Parker Silences Boos As Bucs Sweep Pair From Philadelphia

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Dave Parker knew it was the Pirates' night the first time he stepped up to the plate, struck out, was booed and didn't mind.

Instead of venting his anger at the reaction of the 45,309 fans in Three Rivers Stadium, the largest turnout at a Pirates game this season, Parker bore down. He went 3-for-4, including hitting a three-run homer that won the first game of Pittsburgh's twi-night double-header sweep of the Phillies, 6-3 and 5-1 Friday.

Jim Bibby pitched a five-hitter in the nightcap.

"I hear them all the time but that's the fans prerogative," said Parker, the 1978 National League most valuable player. "They pay their money to come here and they have the right to boo. I go out and do my job."

The fans certainly cheered Parker when he creamed a Tug McGraw screwball into the right field seats in the seventh inning following singles by Omar Moreno and Tim Foli. Willie Stargell also homered for Pittsburgh and Mike Schmidt had his 38th home run, tops in the majors, for the Phils.

Pittsburgh is 1½ games behind first-place Montreal this year while the Phillies are struggling in fourth place, 6½ games out.

Parker is hitting .301 while Dave Winfield of San Diego is tops in the league, 40 points ahead of the Pirates slugger.

Elsewhere in the National League, Houston beat Atlanta 4-1, Los Angeles rocked San Francisco 11-3, Montreal defeated the New York Mets 10-6, St. Louis topped Chicago 4-2 and San Diego bested Cincinnati 6-4.

Astros 4, Braves 1

J.R. Richard tied a career-high with 15 strikeouts and threw a six-hitter at Atlanta. Richard, 10-11, leads the majors with 197 strikeouts.

"He threw an awful lot of sliders tonight, including the final pitch of the game," noted Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox. "That shows yu he has confidence in that pitch."

Expos 10, Mets 6

A five-run first inning for the Mets only made the first-place Expos mad. They scored four runs in the bottom of the frame, then broke a 6-6 tie with four more in the eighth.

Warren Cromartie, who along with Tony Perez homered in the first, singled home Ellis Valentine with the winning run in the eighth.

Dodgers 11, Giants 3

Dusty Baker drove in six runs, three with a home run, and Burt Hooton threw an eight-hitter for Los Angeles. Ron Cey and Davey Lopes homered for the Dodgers and Darrell Evans connected for the Giants,

Cubs 4, Cardinals 2

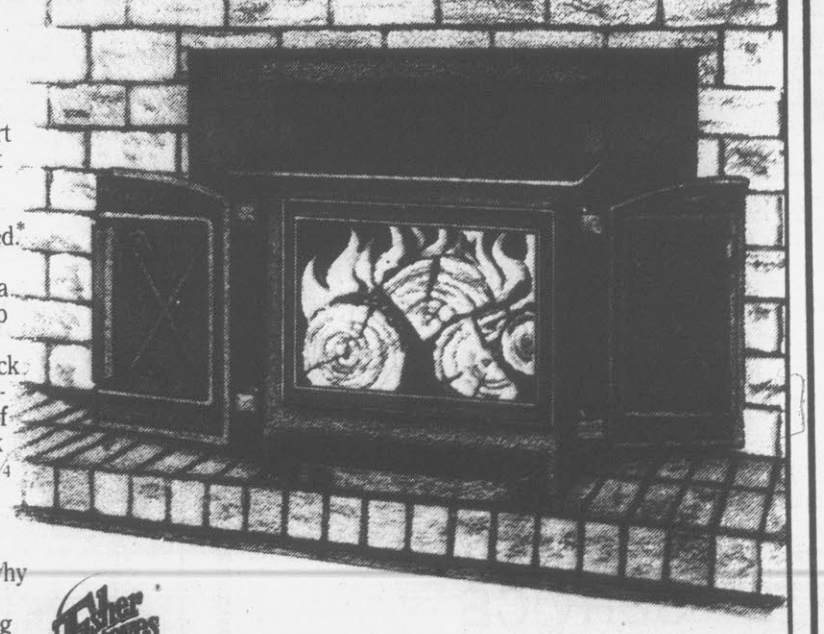
Steve Dillard's first NL home run, two doubles by both Larry Biittner and Bill Buckner and Bruce Sutter's 24th save helped the Cubs break a six-game losing streak. Lou Brock had a pair of singles to bring his career hit total to 2,988.

Padres 6, Reds 4

Rookie Jim Wilhelm singled in the decisive tally in the ninth and Rollie Fingers squeeze-bunted home an insurance run for the Padres. Heity Cruz had a two-run homer for Cincinnati.

THE FISHER FIREPLACE INSERT

Say goodbye to high gas, oil, or electric bills.



Fisher's new fireplace insert wood-burning stove is an efficient auxiliary heating unit that can cut your fuel cost by 50%, or maybe entirely. The Fisher insert stove is a fireplace and a stove. It needs no outside power source. There are no fans, motors, or blowers to burn out or be replaced.*

The Fisher insert stove heats 1500 to 2000 square feet, holds a fire over night, and burns logs up to 26 inches in length. It comes with either chrome plated or black doors, fireplace screen, and a 13-inch cooking surface. It is built of heavy plate steel, has a firebrick lining, and fits any fireplace 24¾ to 40 inches in width. Optional spacers are available for larger openings.

Streaks Continue As Seattle Wins

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Floyd Bannister pitches for the Seattle Mariners, who play half their games in an indoor stadium called the Kingdome. Bannister has six victories there and 13 consecutive losses everywhere else.

"The hitters just aren't hitting for me outdoors," he said after the Mariners eked out a 1-0 triumph over the Oakland A's.

Seattle managed only three hits in Bannister's support Friday night, but one of them was a seventh-inning homer by Leon Roberts.

The victim of that drive was right-hander Matt Keough, who knows all about losing streaks, since the defeat by Seattle was his 17th since his last victory — a 5-1 triumph over the Boston Red Sox last September 1.

Bannister's last outdoor triumph came in September, 1977, when he beat the Dodgers at Los Angeles while pitching for the Houston Astros. He has kept a positive approach. He knows he'll win in the sunshine someday; and Keough knows he'll win — somehwere.

"I would be accomplishing nothing if I got depressed and took it out on the media and the fans," said Keough, 0-13 this year. "I don't like it. I don't accept losing. But I'm not going to quit. I've got to try harder. That's all you can do."

There was something positive for the A's. Keough's complete game was Oakland's fifth in a row and sixth in seven games.

In the other American League contests, the Baltimore Orioles nipped the New York Yankees 1-0, the Milwaukee Brewers bested the Boston Red Sox 5-3, the Minnesota Twins toppled the California Angels 4-1, the Texas Rangers bested the Cleveland Indians 8-3, the Chicago White Sox upended the Toronto Blue Jays 8-5, and the Detroit Tigers beat the Kansas City Royals 4-3 after losing 5-3 in the opener of their twi-night double-header.

Orioles 1, Yankees 0

The Yankees, devastated by the loss of Thurman Munson, honored the memory of their captain in pre-game ceremonies.

Principal owner George Steinbrenner said the team played Friday night — only one day after Munson perished in a plane crash — because Munson's widow Diane, spoke by telephone with New York outfielder Bobby Murcer and, "She said Thurman would have wanted it that way."

The team will fly to Munson's funeral, scheduled for 9:30 a.m., Monday in Munson's home town of Canton, Ohio, then return for Monday night's scheduled game against Baltimore.

"Monday, we'll go to the funeral," said Steinbrenner. "If we don't get back (in time for the game), we'll forfeit."

Brewers 5, Red Sox 3

Gorman Thomas drove in three runs with a pair of homers and Cecil Cooper hit a solo homer as Milwaukee snapped a four-game losing streak by beating Boston.

Butch Hobson hit a two-run shot in the ninth for the Red Sox.

Twins 4, Angels 1

Danny Goodwin's RBI double capped the two-run first inning that helped Minnesota beat California and pull them within three games of the first-place Angels in the AL West.

Minnesota's Roy Smalley snapped a hitless streak of 19 at-bats with his 19th homer this year, tying his career big-league best.

Rangers 8, Indians 3

Richie Zisk had three hits, drove in three runs, and extended his hitting streak to 15 games as Texas beat Clevelanc and ended an eight-game winning streak by Indians pitcher Rick Wise.

Pat Putnam also had three RBI as the Rangers beat the Indians for the 11th time in 13 meetings this season.

"Our jinx over Cleveland is the same jinx Chicago has over Texas," says Manager Pat Corrales, whose Rangers have lost 11 of 13 against the White Sox.

White Sox 8, Blue Jays 5

Kevin Bell, Jim Morrison and Lamar Johnson hit homers as Chicago snapped a seven-game losing streak by beating Toronto in Tony LaRussa's major league debut as the White Sox' manager.

LaRussa took over Thursday after Don Kessinger resigned.

Royals 5-3, Tigers 3-4

An eighth-inning sacrifice fly by Jerry Morales gave Detroit its second-game victory over Kansas City after home runs by Darrell Porter and Hal McRae lifted the Royals to victory in the opener.

In the nightcap, the Royals' Jerry Terrell hit his first home run since 1977.

Fans, Teammates Pay Tribute To Munson In Stadium Friday

By HAL BOCK

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal transportation safety investigators continued to seek reasons today for the crash which killed New York Yankees star Thurman Munson near the AkronCanton airport in Ohio.

Meanwhile, his teammates, shaken by the sudden death of the club's captain, prepared to fly to his funeral Monday.

Yankees fans paid an emotional nine-minute tribute Friday night to the memory of the fallen catcher, one of the most popular players on the team, following a prayer offered by Terence Cardinal Cooke, archbishop of New York.

With eight Yankees starters standing motionless at their positions, heads bowed, cheers and applause thundered through Yankee Stadium following Cardinal Cooke's prayer and the singing of "America The Beautiful" by Metropolitan Opera star Robert Merrill.

Both the Yankees and Baltimore Orioles stood at the top steps of their respective dugouts. But instead of the traditional moment of silence, the fans responded with a long, loud tribute to Munson's memory.

It grew louder each time Munson's portrait was flashed on the Stadium scoreboard. Each time the portrait was removed, it was replaced by a short message of inspiration.

It read: "Our captain and leader has not left us — Today, tomorrow, this year, next ...our endeavors will reflect our love and admiration for him."

The Yankees also announced that Munson's uniform No. 15 would be retired — the eighth Yankee number to be so honored — and that his locker also would be retired. The locker will remain in the clubhouse, vacant, with Munson's identification, No. 15, in place above it. A plaque also will be placed on the center field wall at the Stadium in Munson's memory.

The Yankees clubhouse and dugout were off-limits to reporters before and after the game against the Orioles. George Steinbrenner, principal owner of the club, spent about an hour before the game attending a team meeting. When he met reporters in an adjacent corridor, he was ashen.

He said Munson's widow, Diane, had spoken with Yankees outfielder Bobby Murcer Thursday night and asked that the team's series against Baltimore go on as scheduled. "She said Thurman would have wanted it that way," Steinbrenner said. "We'll play tonight. Monday we'll go to the funeral (scheduled for 9:30 a.m. in Canton). If we don't get back (in time for Monday night's nationally televised game), we don't get back. We'll forfeit."

Neither team showed much enthusiasm for playing the game, which was won by Baltimore, 1-0.

"After something like this," said Lou Piniella of the Yankees, "I just don't feel like playing the game."

Rick Dempsey, an ex-Yankee who is now Baltimore's regular catcher, remembered his days as a teammate of Munson's. "He always encouraged me," Dempsey said. "He'd always say 'Nice going.'"

Finally, Dempsey broke down and cried bitterly, covering his face with a towel.

Yankees fans sent telegrams expressing sympathy for the loss.

Around the Stadium roof, all flags and pennants were lowered to half staff and the Yankees players wore black armbands on their left uniform sleeves.

There was speculation that the crash early Thursday evening was caused by a sudden power failure in the new $1.4 million twin-engine Cessna Citation jet which Munson had purchased only last month.

Ed McAvoy, coordinating the investigation for the National Transportation Safety Board, said Friday in Akron, Ohio, that the plane was slightly off center in its descent and that it was traveling at 93 knots, 11 knots above stall speed.

"So far, the investigation is only in a preliminary basis," McAvoy said. "We have determined that the plane was slightly off center in its descent and just missed a tree, all of which indicates to us that there was a sudden rate of descent."

Two passengers riding with Munson, David Hall, 32, and Jerry Anderson, 31, escaped the crash with burns. They were unable to rescue the Yankees star.

Public Waits For Gentle Ben

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — They call him "Gentle Ben." He has been golf's Rookie of the Year for six years.

He was destined for greatness from the moment his dad stuck a sawed-off club in his hands down in Austin, Texas, and pointed him toward the road of such Texas fairway immortals as Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson, Ralph Guldahl, Jimmy Demaret and others.

Young Ben Crenshaw has been tardy in keeping his date with destiny.

"Maybe I try too hard. I am so anxious to win a major tournament," said the 27-year-old former collegiate champion tabbed by Jack Nicklaus as the most formidable of the new breed.

"If I had picked the right club, I could have won the British Open this year. I have had my chances in at least four majors. I am a firm believer. You've got to knock on the door before you can get in there."

Ben is knocking on the door again, firing rounds of 69-67—136 at the halfway point of the 61st PGA Championship. Around the Oakland Hills course, they're saying: "Is this the one that's finally going to send Gentle Ben into orbit?"

The public has been waiting impatiently for him to emerge from his cocoon. Boyishly handsome, personable and modest, he brings the charismatic credentials that projected Arnold Palmer into stardom.

All he has needed was to win a couple of big ones and Ben's Battallions would storm all over Arnie's diminishing Army.

"If I had played a 3-iron instead of a 2 at St. Anne's this year on the 17th, I think I would have won — it was bad judgment," Crenshaw said. He double bogeyed and Spain's Seve Ballesteros sneaked in for the victory at the British Open.

He also was runnerup in the British Open last year at St. Andrews, apparently had the U.S. Open wrapped up at Chicago's Medinah Club in 1975 only to blow it with a double bogey on the next-to-last hole and was runnerup in the Masters in 1976.

Crenshaw is an exciting as well as an attractive player. He is wild off the tee, exploring most of the countryside's foliage before he gets to the green where contemporaries say he has the finest putting touch in the game.

"Other people practice 6-and 8-foot putts," Ben said. "I like to putt 20 and 30 footers just to get the distance."

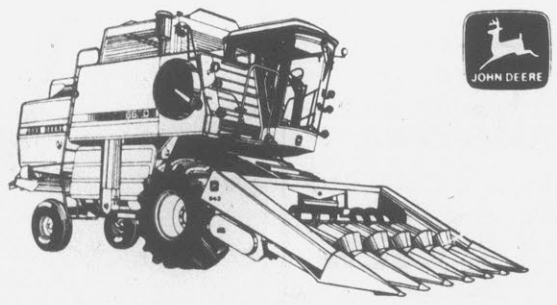
Should You Be Combine Hunting?



With an average 100 bushel yield of corn this year you will pay out over $30.00 per acre to have your crop picked. If your crop is better you pay even more. Why not save this money and build equity in a combine of your own as well as picking your crop when you are ready?

History will show that John Deere Combines are a wise investment. John Deere Combines hold their resale value better than competing makes. This gives you an added advantage if you decide to trade up or sell. Also, don't overlook the tax advantages of owning your own harvesting equipment.

We have a good selection of reconditioned, previously-owned combines delivery ready on our lot.

Miami, Baltimore Claim Friday Night NFL Exhibition Victories

By JOE RESNICK
AP Sports Writer

One way to keep from confusing the head coach of the Chicago Bears from the first man to walk on the moon is to remember that the astronaut has one "I" on the end of his first name and the coach has two.

Another way to remember is the fact that the National Football League coach's team hasn't left the launching pad since 1963.

But ever-optimistic Neill Armstrong and the Bears were excited about Saturday night's preseason game with the New York Jets, a young team who feels the sky's the limit.

"I feel pretty good about the passing so far." Armstrong said. "I think all three quarterbacks have improved this training camp."

The Bears were expected to start Mike Phipps at quarterback followed by Bob Avellini and possibly Vince Evans, but the strength of their attack is still in the running of Walter Payton and Roland Harper.

"Some people think our offense isn't exciting," said Armstrong. "I think it is. I get awfully excited seeing Walter Payton carry the ball and awfully excited when Roland Harper has it."

Jets Coach Walt Michaels, who in 1978 led his club to its first .500 season since 1974, this season has switched from a 3-4 defense to the 4-3.

In games played Friday night, Larry Csonka made his first Orange Bowl appearance since he left the Dolphins in 1974 and delighted the crowd of 44,708 by gaining 20 yards on four first-half carries as Miami beat the New Orleans Saints 14-7.

"I had a nice homecoming," said Csonka, the 32-year-old free agent who had gained over 1,000 yards for three consecutive years as a Dolphin. "That old offensive line is still a great offensive line."

Russell Erxleben, the Saints' first-round draft choice, had a brutal debut, missing field goal attempts from 35 and 32 yards and setting up a Miami score with a weak 19-yard punt that gave the Dolphins possession at the New Orleans 33.

"I never played this bad in college, I don't ever remember having a bad game in college," Erxleben said. "Sure, I was nervous a little, this being my first game, but that's no excuse to miss two field goals and shank a punt."

Baltimore took the lead on a seven-yard touchdown pass from newly-acquired Greg Landry to Reese McCall with 7:46 remaining as the Colts nipped the Philadelphia Eagles 17-14.

Colombian Army Makes Dent In Marijuana Trade

By MARTIN McREYNOLDS

RIOHACHA, Colombia (UPI) — The breeze that rustles the palm trees is hot and damp. Caribbean waters wash the sparkling beach.

But beyond the dreamy waterfront, things change fast.

In Riohacha's rutted, dusty streets, swaggering men in bluejeans and straw hats mingle with Indian women from the countryside, their faces smeared with ritual black paint, their bodies wrapped in bright flowing dresses.

Accommodations for visitors are minimal in this city of 70,000 but it doesn't matter. Strangers are advised to be well on their way to safer parts before sundown.

This is the capital of La Guajira State and the hub of Colombia's biggest illegal industry — growing and smuggling marijuana to the United States.

It is also a key outpost in the government's battle to chop down the drug traffic that threatens to overshadow all of the country's legitimate business.

Estimates of the total Colombian drug business vary, but it is generally guessed to be around $2 billion annually, a good part of which lands in the hands of international dealers based in the United States.

In addition to homegrown pot, Colombia is one of the countries where cocaine from Peru and Bolivia is processed for shipment to the U.S., mainly by gangs operating out of the cities of Medellin and Cali. The white powder accounts for less than half the dollar total, however, and involves a much smaller labor force than marijuana, which employs up to 150,000 Colombians.

At an army base outside Riohacha, soldiers in T-shirts and fatigue trousers stack scores of large bales wrapped in burlap bags. Tons of "Santa Marta Gold," prime marijuana from the slopes of the Santa Marta Mountains seized in the latest army operation, are being prepared for a bonfire of destruction.

A dozen trucks confiscated in the action are lined up in a row. A few yards away are the mangled remains of a small plane that crashed on the highway near the army base, presumably on a pot mission that went wrong.

A lot of similar flights have run into trouble since President Julio Cesar Turbay ordered the armed forces to clamp down on the drug traffic last October.

Through the end of June, the armed forces had seized 80 airplanes in Northern Colombia, nearly all U.S.-registered, including a DC-7, a DC-6, a Convair and three venerable DC-3's, along with a vast fleet of small twin-engine planes. Of that total, 23 planes had crashed while attempting dangerous landings on makeshift runways.

A total of 72 boats, 308 vehicles and 879 firearms were also confiscated.

During the same period, 1,169 suspects were arrested including 186 foreigners, all but a handful Americans.

The army says it destroyed nearly 38,000 tons of marijuana including 50,000 bales ready for shipment and the estimated yield of plants growing on 25,250 acres. It also grabbed 2.2 million amphetamine tablets ready for export and 74 pounds of cocaine apparently being handled by marijuana smugglers outside the main cocaine route.

"We figure we have got our hands on less than 10 percent of the total production," an army officer said grimly.

Marijuana, often masked as homesteaders' plots of corn and other crops, grows vigorously in secluded ravines of the Santa Marta mountains that rise abruptly from the flat La Guajira peninsula jutting into the Caribbean.

Some of the plantations are huge. The army announced it recently discovered a single area of more than 24,000 acres planted in marijuana that will take months to destroy.

"In the first two weeks, 100 soldiers pulling up the plants, stacking them to dry and then burning them were able to cover only 500 acres," the army officer said.

"At that rate, it will take us two years to finish the job in this one area alone. We're trying to get help from the agriculture department — it's not a soldier's job to dig up plants."

The root of the enforcement problem is money — bundles of dollars and pesos that convince farmers to run the risk of raising the illegal crop and tempt ill-paid police, soldiers and even judges to collaborate with the drug traffic.

La Guajira has long been known in Colombia as an economically depressed area where contraband was considered a normal way of life. The local populace welcomed outsiders with the same open-hearted warmth that Tennessee mountaineers reserve for internal revenue officers.

The level of violence has risen as rival gangs fight for marijuana profits. The economy has been transformed in an area stretching along the Caribbean coast from the historic port of Cartagena through Barranquilla, Santa Marta and Riohacha to the traditional smuggling town of Maicao near the Venezuelan border.

At Santa Marta, the country's third biggest port and one of its popular tourist resorts, whole neighborhoods of new houses are said to be occupied by the drug kingpins and their prosperous subordinates. Shootouts by rival gangs are common.

"This used to be the safest place on earth, but the drug mafia has changed all that," said a storekeeper in Santa Marta. "Now, when you walk out the door of your house, you never know if you're coming back. You walk out, but they might carry you back."

In Barranquilla, a newsman lowered his voice when talking about the "marimberos" — the marijuana dealers.

"The corruption is unbelievable," he said. "Nobody can resist the amounts of dollars the marimberos offer — nobody. But don't say I told you that. I don't want to turn up dead."

The marijuana, dried and wrapped in "bultos" (bales) or "pacas" (tightly compressed bricks made in portable presses), is taken by mule train and trucks to any of the 100 or so clandestine airstrips that dot the peninsula or to countless anchorages along 300 miles of coastline.

"It's easy to make a landing strip in a few hours almost anywhere in La Guajira," said an American source who follows the drug business in Barranquilla. "You bulldoze the brush out of the way, pack down the sandy soil and you're ready for business. Of course, there are no lights for night landings and it's very risky."

The trucks that bring the marijuana line up and shine their headlights to illuminate the airstrip.

"That's where the army patrols have helped foul up the shipments," the source said. "They hold up a truck convoy at a checkpoint and maybe it's only long enough for somebody to slip 200 pesos ($5) to some sergeant, but it's enough to throw the timing off. When the plane shows up, the lights aren't there. That's one reason there are so many crashes."

The U.S. government has provided several million dollars in the form of helicopters, communications equipment and training to help Colombian authorities in their uphill battle against the traffic.

Some Colombians think the effort is not worth the trouble, in the face of what they consider widespread tolerance in the United States for marijuana use.

"The powerful chains of traffickers in the United States continue to operate," said Ernesto Samper, president of a national federation of Colombian financial institutions.

"They take 80 percent of the profits, leaving us with 20 percent of the pie and 100 percent of the bad image," Samper said at a seminar devoted to a discussion of legalizing marijuana production.

Samper estimated 150,000 Colombians depend on marijuana for a living and said nearly all are small farmers and their families or low-level drug runners. If Colombia legalized production, he said, it could have collected nearly $146 million in taxes last year instead of spending a comparable amount on enforcement.

Samper is so convinced of the benefits of legalization that he took a leave of absence from heading the federation and currently is touring the United States to put across his point with Americans.

$235,211 NSF Grant To ECU

ECU News Bureau

A National Science Foundation grant of $235,211 has been awarded East Carolina University's Departments of Chemistry and Physics to support the development of a program in applied physical sciences at ECU and two other universities.

Dr. J. Williams Byrd, chairman of the Department of Physics, and Dr. Angelo A. Volpe, charmain of the Department of Chemistry, are the principal investigators who will administer the project which is funded through the National Science Foundation's Comprehensive Assistance to Undergraduate Science Education (CAUSE) program.

The primary objectives of the funded program are development of a strong undergraduate program in applied physical sciences that will prepare students for jobs in a technology-based society, development of stronger university-industry ties, and the identification and encouragement of minority (black, women, Indian, etc) and Caucasian students to pursue careers in applied chemistry and physics.

Achieving the objectives will involve a joint effort of a consortium consisting of East Carolina University, Elizabeth City State University and Pembroke State University, and industry in the region. Students in the program may take an introductory program at any one of the three participating universities and complete an advanced program in applied science at ECU.

Features of the program will include specialization in applied chemistry and physics, industrial workshops to students an opportunity to interact first-hand with industrial scientists in an industrial enviroment; a team approach to applied research in which students will work on industry-generated research problems along with faculty and industry scientists and engineers, and industrial internships whereby students will have the opportunity to work in industry during the course of their undergraduate programs, Byrd and Volpe said.

Because of industry's increasingly greater dependence on computers and related equipment, Drs. Byrd and Volpe said they are convinced that a thorough grounding in the use of computers and familiarization with computing systems and networks is "an essential feature" in the education of applied scientists for industry.

The consortium program evisions a distributed computing network among the cooperating universities.

This will involve placing microprocessor computing capabilities at Elizabeth City State University and Pembroke State University in the respective departments of physical sciences and the same capabilities in each of the departments of chemistry and physics at East Carolina University. These four computers will be capable of communicating with each other and with a host computer located at ECU.

Byrd and Volpe said the establishing of the computer network will make possible a variety of educational experiences for students such as analysis of experimental data, interfacing of experimental equipment, data storage on remote processors, and access to large computers. The task group that will set up the computing network consists of Drs. James Joyce, Department of Physics, ECU; Dr. Robert Morrison, Department of Chemistry, ECU, and Dr. James Wirth, Department of Mathematices, ECU.

The overall project will be managed by a team consisting of Drs. Byrd and Volpe; Joseph La Motte, industrial representative of the Du Pont Co., Kinston; Dr. James Townes, Elizabeth City State Uiversity; Dr. John Wallingford, Pembroke State University; Dr. Carl Adler, Department of Physics, ECU; Dr. David Lunney, Department of Chemistry, ECU.

The management team will be assisted by six task groups designated as Computer Installation and System Developement; Team Research; Industrial Workshops; Student Internships; Recruiting, and Project Evaluation.

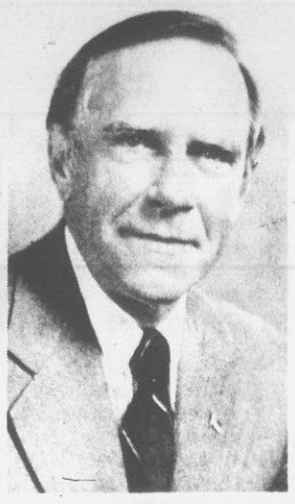
Lt. Gov. To Be Speaker



LT. GOV. JIMMY GREEN

WASHINGTON, N. C. — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green will be the featured speaker at a Pitt-Beaufort Conservative Union dinner Tuesday, Aug. 21, here, Conservative Union Chairman Steve Rader has announced.

"Jimmy Green has been one of the key conservative leaders in state government, as Speaker of the House and now as Lt. Governor," Rader commented. "He has been a needed conservative counterweight to the liberal Hunt administration."

The dinner will be held at 7 p. m. at the Holiday Inn on Bridge Street (U. S. 17) in Washington. Tickets are priced at $9 and all interested persons are invited. Bob Morey, 752-4491, is in charge of Pitt County ticket sales.

The speaker will be introduced by Frank Wooten of Greenville, executive vice chairman of the Conservative Union.

News Association Sets Summer Meeting Here

ECU News Bureau

The role of public information and publications in overall development programs of colleges and universities will be spotlighted Aug. 9-11 at the summer meeting of the College News Association of the Carolinas here.

The annual summer conference of CNAC is being hosted by East Carolina University and the ECU New Bureau-Department of Public Relations.

A highlight of the CNAC banquet session on Aug. 10 will be presentation of the annual Pete Ivey Award to a news media person in the Carolinas chosen for outstanding contributions to public understanding and informative reporting of higher education news and developments during the past year. The award is made in memory of the late A.G. (Pete) Ivey who as director of the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill News Bureau was a founder of CNAC.

CNAC has a membership of nearly 300 news and public information directors, public-relations and development officers, and publications editors for some 75 colleges and universities in the two states.

Maj. Richard R. Clarke, Director of Public Relations of The Citadel, is CNAC president.

Arthur V. Ciervo, trustee for Institutional Relations for the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) and public information director, Penn State University, will address the opening session Aug. 9 on "Professionalism in Public Relations."

On Friday, at sessions at the East Carolina Regional Development Institute, topics will include "Planning Priorities," with panelists Ken Sanford, UNC-Charlotte; Martha Roberts, Davidson; Bob Wilson, Duke and Donald L. Lemish, ECU Vice Chancellor for Institutional Advancement and Planning.

Another panel on "What Makes an Effective News Release" will include remarks and a critique by panelists Roy Hardee, vice president - news director, WITN-TV, Washington, N.C.; Mrs. Maryneal Jones, editor of the Methodist Advocate, Columbia, S.C.; Harold Warren, education reporter, the Charlotte Observer; and Henry M. Carter Jr., executive director, the Winston-Salem Foundation, Winston-Salem.

Officers of CNAC are to be elected at a business meeting on August 10.

Small Pets On A Biking Tour

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Angie, the deaf cat, leads the way; Taurus, the "worldly wise" dog, brings up the rear. In between, on the motorcycle are Bob and Chris Quackenbush.

When they roll into a town to grab a bite to eat or spend a night at a campground, they're instantly welcomed.

"People ... can relate to little animals. It's like people who like dogs and cats can't be all bad. We stop to look at the sites, and other people stop to look at us," Quackenbush said.

Angie rides in the bike's glove compartment. Taurus, a cocker spaniel-terrier mix, commands a box-like rumble seat.

Quackenbush, 33, and his wife, 23, are school teachers in Greenville, S.C. They are on a a 10,000-mile transcontinental tour. Still ahead is Yellowstone National Park, the Badlands of South Dakota and Ohio.

Judge Orders Reinstatement

CONWAY, S.C. (AP) — In an unusual action, County Court Judge O. A. Rankin has ruled that a Southern Baptist congregation, the Hickory Grove Church, must reinstate 16 former members who had been ousted following months of controversy.

The congregation's vote to exclude the group from fellowship is "null and void and of no effect," Rankin ruled.

The pastor, the Rev. B. C. Pigg, says the church will not heed the decision because it is contrary to separation of church and state. "We dont want to seem un-Christian in this matter but we believe the state has no right to say who can be members of our church," he says.

The Larmode

Contemporary In Style, Aim

By Jerry Bishop

From its sleek, low lines to its lifestyled interior, the Larmode is a unique design that revolves around relaxed contemporary living.

The three bedroom offer ample sleeping space, kitchen and dining nook are functional, and the activity center is the expansive family room, augmented by the gameroom. For entertaining, the dining room should suffice, but the main thrust of the design is toward informal use of space.

Exterior lines are privacy-protecting, with front wndows at a minimum. Hip roof and courtyard help soften the lines and add individuality to the design.

A small roofed porch leads to the closeted entry, with immediate access to the dining room at left or family room ahead. Dining room, kitchen, and breakfast nook form a functional complex that overlooks the courtyard and suits both everyday use as well as entertaining.

Between dining nook and gameroom, a half bath and utility room are well-located. The gameroom is a sizable area with built-in storage closet and access to the patio.

Central to the floor plan is the substantial family room. Beamed ceiling and wood-burning fireplace add atmosphere to the area, which overlooks and opens to the porch.

Bedrooms take over the right half of the plan, dominated by the master bedroom with its oversized bath, double vanities, and his and hers walk-in closets. Two front bedrooms also enjoy walk-in closets.

A side entry double garage is provided.

Housing Handicapped

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

For many disabled persons, daily life can be filled with danger and frustration.

The reason is sometimes less their disability than it is the failure of our transportation, housing design and home furnishings products to meet the needs of this population, estimated to number as many as 25 million Americans.

However, according to Dr. Robert Goldenson, a clinical psychologist and author in the field of rehabilitation, the growing field of barrier-free design is bringing real progress in the areas of housing and home furnishings product design.

Goldenson, part of a group which recently designed and hopes to build a barrier-free home in suburban New York, said recently that "the basic information and technology necessary to construct a barrier-free home is advanced, but society's will to produce the buildings is so far less advanced."

New products and technology are coming onto the market more readily now as a result of federal and state laws requiring that new industrial construction accommodate individuals confined to wheelchairs. Furthermore, housing built with Housing and Urban Development Department (HUD) subsidies is now required to have units set aside for disabled individuals, said Goldenson.

Removal of barriers will not only make it possible for partially disabled individuals to participate more fully in daily life, but will benefit able-bodied individuals as well.

Among some basic changes in home design which Goldenson sees on the horizon are replacing hard-to-turn door knobs and faucet handles with graspable levers.

Other modifications which provide access to the disabled include ramping and grading of steep entryways so that a wheelchair can negotiate them and the elimination of sunken or elevated spaces.

Among products already available, but likely to become more widely used, are amplified telephones for the deaf, phones with pushbuttons rather than dials, and phones that do not have to be picked up to work.

Public elevators with recorded announcements of floors and directions also are being specified with greater frequency.

In kitchen and bathroom design, manufacturers have begun developing products geared to the disabled market.

For example, General Electric has a kitchen for the handicapped, equipped with control switched the front of the counters, extensive countertop lighting, counters the proper height for use from a wheelchair and a recess beneath them so that a wheelchair can roll right up to the surface.

In bathrooms, grab bars mounted near the toilet and in the shower are available and are recommended as a general safety feature, regardless whether or not a disabled individual will be using them.

About 25 percent of the new houses sold in the United States this year are or will be covered by a warranty protecting the quality of the construction. That's twice as many as had such protection only one year ago.

The warranty, offered by many builders, is guaranteed by the National Association of Home Builders, the industry trade organization, which is a lot better than a guarantee from a single builder who may or may not be around when something goes wrong with the house.

Under the arrangement, builders enter into a contractual arrangement with the National Home Owners Warranty Corp. and are responsible in the first year for the repair of all defects in craftsmanship, in the home's mechanical systems (wiring, plumbing and ductwork), and any defects in structure, as specified in the guidelines.

In the second year, the builder is obligated to correct all defects in mechanical systems and major structural defects. For years three through 10, the program guarantees repairs on all major structural defects. An interesting part of the protection is that it applies even though there may be a change in house ownership.

How did such a program get started?

Obviously, it was inspired by the complaints of consumers regarding faulty construction. But some reputable builders took it upon themselves to get behind the idea because they saw the industry was suffering from the misdeeds of other builders.

So, as Robert Levenstein, president of Kaufman and Broad Inc., put it, "This is a chance for private industry to play an important role in consumer protection. The rise in consumer complaints over the years is injurious to the industry in the long run. Eventually, I believe that the majority of new houses in the country will be covered by a Home Owners Warranty program."

All such consumer guarantees (there are others) will do much to erase the bad image created by some fly-by-night builders over the years. Curiously, various forms of warranties have existed for many years on other costly items — among them television sets, refrigerators and automobiles — but the most expensive of them all offered the buyer little assurance of redress for grievances. Reputable builders usually cooperated with the new home owners, but others did not and, worst of all, some were out of the building business or had disappeared or both.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Dog Reminder

Newcomers to the Greenville area are reminded, Greenville Chief Building Inspector Alton E. Warren said, that dogs in Greenville need to be confined or restrained at all times.

The Animal Control Ordinance of the City of Greenville states, he said, that there is a 24-hour leash law. The law provides for a $15 fine for violation of this law. Tags, license and rabies vaccination tags must be worn at all times. There is a $5 fine for owning a dog not wearing a current city tag and a $5 fine for owning a dog not wearing a current rabies tag. There is also a section of the ordinance that deals with control of barking and vicious animals, he said.

For information, one may call 752-4137, Ext. 247, or, if no answer, Ext. 221.

Prison Role Is Winner

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Converting a bleak open courtyard into a colorful day-care facility for visiting children has earned the Kirkland Correctional Institution Jaycee chapter here a national award as "the most outstanding Jaycee project of the year."

In winning over some 3,600 other Jaycee projects submitted, the South Carolina prison Jaycees worked about 4,000 hours — after completing their assigned jobs — on building the center for the children. The room is staffed with inmates carefully screened and trained to help the youngsters learn, using techniques and videotapes from the Sesame Street educational TV series.

The group developed the project after reading a news story circulated by Kirkland's Warden James L. Harvey about a similar center at a federal prison in Lompoc, Calif. The program is one of many prison visiting center projects assisted by The Children's Television Workshop, producers of Sesame Street.

Bond Sales In Pitt Reported

Sales of Series E and H Savings Bonds in Pitt County during the second quarter of 1979 were $152,872, according to R. W. Howard, county volunteer chairman.

Howard said that total sales so far in 1979 have amounted to $333,071 or 38.7 percent of the county's overall goal of $860,430.

The county chairman noted that North Carolinians purchased $59,512,680 in savings bonds during the first six months of the year or 47.7 percent of the state's dollar goal of $124,700,000.

Series E sales were $59,320,680, it was noted, while H sales were $192,000. Second quarter bond sales were $31,603,922, slightly higher than the comparable period last year, Howard said.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q.—I have purchased some wood paneling to be installed in my attic. It hasn't been delivered yet and won't be for several months, but I made the deal ahead of time because the prices seem to keep going up. In talking with the dealer, he said I should keep the paneling in the attic for a week or two before installing it. His explanation of why this is necessary was somewhat vague, probably because I didn't question him enough. Anyway, what I would like to know is the reason for keeping the paneling in the attic, because I have a feeling that storing it for a week or two might cause some of the panels to warp before I put them in place.

A.—Paneling is kept in the room where it will be installed to prevent the very thing you fear — warpage — as well as shrinkage or other changes in the shape of the wood. By not installing the paneling immediately, it has time to accustom itself to the differences in temperature and humidity between your attic and the dealer's storage yard or wherever the panels had been stored. This minimizes changes in the wood after it is nailed or otherwise attached. You have some justification for your fear, however, so be sure to stack the panels properly — flat, with air spaces between them.

Q. — Is it necessary to put drain tiles around a house foundation if there is water seepage in the basement?

A. — Many details are required before an answer to that question can be given. Generally, however, digging up the area around the foundation to install drain tiles should be a last resort, since it is a major job. First, try packing dirt around the foundation at ground level, slanting it so water runs away from the house. Also, check the gutters around the house, cleaning out leaves or any other debris that may be blocking the passage of water and forcing it to run over the sides.

Q.—We recently moved into a house which has wooden shingles on the outside walls. They apparently never have been finished with anything. We would like to paint them, but aren't sure what kind of paint to use. Our neighbor has suggested a stain to avoid the problem of repainting every few years, but we want a definite color. Besides, in a few years we might want to change to a different color. Can we use a latex paint?

A. — Yes, but read the directions on the label. Most exterior latex paints require a primer when used on wood not previously finished.

Q. — Please settle an argument about how far the feet of a long ladder should be from the bottom of a house when using the ladder to paint the outside. I said one-third the height of the ladder.

A.—Sorry, you are wrong. It should be one-fourth the height of the ladder.

Q.—I am sure you have answered this question before, because I seem to remember having seen it, but right now I need to know whether I can apply paint over varnish. I have an old varnished desk that I want to paint for my son. Do I have to take off the varnish first?

A.—If the old surface is in fairly good condition, it does not have to be removed. However, paint does not adhere well over a glossy surface, so be sure to sand down or steel wool the varnish to dull the old finish. You will have to judge whether a second coat of paint is needed after you complete application of the first. A lot will depend n whether the color of the paint is light or dark.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Please advise me on how I can destroy dandelions and crepe myrtle sprouts. (L.H., Conover)

A. Dandelions and crepe myrtle sprouts can be controlled with 2, 4-D. Apply the 2, 4-D on the dandelions with a sprayer which fits on the end of a garden hose or with a pump-up sprayer. Instead of spraying the crepe myrtle sprouts, you might get better control by mixing one and a half tablespoons of 2, 4-D in a quart of water and then placing about one teaspoon of this mix on each sprout. A good way to apply the mix is with a squeeze-type plastic detergent bottle. Put on squirt on each sprout. Follow label directions in using 2, 4-D. (W.M. Lewis, extension agronomist)

Q. If I planted a Crimson King maple in my yard, would surface roots likely be a problem? (G.B., Wilson)

A. Yes. The Crimson King maple has a vigorous surface root system and this would certainly present a problem in maintaining a lawn beneath it. (William M. Stanton, extension forest resources specialist)

Q. I have found some pine borers in a large pine in my yard. How can I get rid of them? Will I have to cut down the tree? (C.F. Wendell)

A. Many kinds of insect borers attack pines. The southern pinecome borer is a caterpillar which attacks fusiform rust galls on the front of the pines. The southern pine beetle, the pine engraver beetles, and the black turpentine beetle are bark beetles which attack the trunk of weakened and dying pines. The southern pine sawyer and the flat-faced ambrosia beetle attack dying and dead pines. Take the "borers" from your pine to your county extension agent to get them edentified. If the borers are any of those mentioed above, with the exception of the black turpentine beetle, your tree is dying. The best remedy for a dying tree is the saw, not the sprayer. If the borer is the black turpentine beetle, you may be in luck. Lindane mixed with water (not diesel fuel) at the labeled rate and sprayed on the lower 12 feet of the trunk until runoff will control the black turpenting beetle. In order to avoid future problems with borers in your ornamental pines, ask your county extension agent for a copy of Home and Garden Bullentin No. 226 entitled "Southern Pine Beetles Can Kill Your Ornamental Pine." (James McGraw, extension forest resources specialist.)

Q. I spray my roses weekly with Benlate and feed them with 8-8-8 fertilizer, but each year more and more of the lower leaves turn yellow. What should I do? (S.C., Rocky Mount)

A. I think you are overfertilizing your roses. A weekly application of 8-8-8 is too much. A general fertilizer recommendation for established roses is two or three pounds of 8-8-8 per 100 square feet when buds first appear in spring. (Kim Powell,

Greatest Sea Diaster In Wartime

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — What was the greatest sea disaster in history?

The Titanic? Lusitania? Andrea Doria?

None of these, but rather a German cruise liner named Wilhelm Gustloff.

The death toll of more than 7,000 when the ship was torpedoed by the Soviet submarine S 13 near the end of World War II was five times greater than the number lost in the Titanic.

Perhaps it rates only a footnote in some war histories because its doom was just one small part of the chaos, as millions of panic-stricken refugees struggled westward to get away from the revenge-hungry Soviet soldiers of the Red Army.

Three British writers now have told the story in a new book, "The Cruellest Night" (Hodder and Stoughton).

They were helped, they say, by many Germans and by Soviet officials of the Leningrad Naval Museum, Central Naval Archives, War Vetrans' Committe and the Writers' Union.

The authors, Christopher Dobson, John Niller and Ronald Payne, relate how panic set in throughout East Prussia when the German authorities publicized what happened in the first German town overrun by the Red Army.

Nemmersdorf, just inside the wartime border with Poland, was taken by Gen. Galitsky's 11th Guards Army on Oct. 22, 1944. The Soviets were driven out by a counterattack five days later.

"Hardly a single inhabitant remained alive," say the authors, who detail "indiscriminate" killing.

When this became known, tens of thousands of people began fleeing from their homes. As the Red Army drove toward Berlin the refugees were forced northward, piling up in the Baltic ports where they hoped to find ships to carry them to safety.

A colossal rescue operation was begun. In four months from Jan. 23 to the end of the war on May 8, 1945, a total of 2,022,602 people were transported by the navy and merchant navy to the West, according to Admiral Karl Doenitz.

The 25,000-ton Wilhelm Gustloff, named by Hitler after the leader of the German Nazis in Switzerland, assassinated in 1936, was built for cheap cruising, carrying in normal times 1,465 passengers and 400 crew.

The liner spent the war tied up in captured Gydnia, Poland, as a floating navy barrack. It was finally ordered to evacuate more than 6,000 people, including 1,500 submariners and their families, wounded soldiers, women naval auxiliaries and civilian refugees.

As the liner pulled away on Jan. 30, 1945, hundreds more refugees, imploring a passage, were helped from small boats up gangways and scrambling nets.

That same night the liner was hit by three torpedoes fired by Soviet submariner Alexander Marinesko, commander of the S 13.

The Wilhelm Gustloff took just over 70 minutes to sink. As it listed at 25 degrees and with pandemonium raging around the packed decks, white-jacketed steward Max Bonnet appeared on the bridge with a tray of drinks.

"A final cognac, gentlemen," he said. The officers drank and threw down the glasses.

There weren't enough lifeboats. Many passengers were trapped below. Rescuers plucked 964 persons from the sea.

Lange Award To ECU Student

Thomas L. Beatty Jr., a third-year student at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, recently received the Lange Medical Publications Annual Award.

The award recognizes the scholastic achievement of two students from each class. It provides the recipients with a choice of two medical texts published by the California-based company.

Dr. Jack Lange, a California internist, founded Lange Medical Publications more than 25 years ago to facilitate publication of materials for current, concise medical resource libraries.

Beatty is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Beatty, 721 Aintree Rd., Charlotte.

Fuel Shortage And Inflation Chopping RV Sales

By ANDREA NEAL
United Press International

Those long lines at gasoline stations this summer are strangling the recreational vehicle industry.

Skyrocketing prices and the gasoline shortage, coupled with bankers' reluctance to loan money for RVs, have cut sales and driven some small companies to the wall.

The industry as a whole expects to sell 40 percent fewer vehicles than the nearly 400,000 shipped in 1978, said Gary LaBella, spokesman for the 500-member Recreation Vehicle Industry Association in Chantilly, Va.

The estimated six million people who already own the popular travel homes are using them less, said Don Lowe, senior vice-president of Kampgrounds of America.

"I think people are taking shorter vacations and delaying vacations until they feel better about the energy situation. A good deal more are coming in tents and small cars," he said.

Lowe said business at KOA's 851 camping locations has been down 10 to 12 percent since Memorial Day, although there was record attendance in the first five months of the year.

"I'd be surprised if any RV manufacturer can make a profit this year," said Randy Thrall, marketing vice-president of Cobra Industries, Elkhart, Ind., a company which made 3,100 vehicles in 1978.

"Our retail sales are off 20 to 25 percent," Thrall said. "Shipments by the manufacturers are down 40 to 60 percent."

Across the nation, the RV industry is hurting.

"The oil crisis has convinced people to wait to buy until they know what's going to happen," LaBella said. "Unfortunately, it's happening during our peak selling season. We haven't lost any buyers permanently, but right now people are scared to drive."

"Consumers are being overwhelmed with horror stories about gasoline availability," said John Agno of Thetford Corp. in Ann Arbor, Mich., chairman of the RVIA market analysis committee.

Another problem is the refusal of many financial institutions to lend money for motor homes until the market stabilizes.

"It's impossible right now to finance an RV purchase," said Dave Levy, vice president of sales for Higgins-Delta Corp., Elkhart, Ind.

Levy called it overreaction by the banks, "They're worried that if gas really becomes tight, owners are going to say, 'I can't use this any more. Take it back.' I know a dealer who is used to getting a half million dollars to stock his inventory. He's been cut back to one-third of that."

LaBella said about half the nation's RV plants have had to close temporarily, and others have laid off many employees.

Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc., co-leader in the RV field with Winnebago Industries, announced July 16 it was completely closing tow of its 66 plants, some of which make mobile homes and some RVs.

"We've laid off two-thirds of our employees and we don't expect to see a resurgence of business any time soon," Thrall said. "A number of small manufacturers have gone out of business."

Industry leaders hope the closing of less stable companies will help business.

"Of course we're going to lose a few but I think the industry will end up even stronger," LaBella said.

"By January or February we're going to rebound even stronger than before. The American public is committed to camping and leisure. There's not enough room or comfort in automobiles. Mini motor homes and vans will be in greater demand than ever before."

"The American public is not going to give up its lifestyle," said Frank Guilianelle, spokesman for Coachmen Industries, Middlebury, Ind. "After putting in five hard days at the office, people want to enjoy their weekends."

The industry is struggling to make campers, trailers and motor homes lighter and less fuel consuming, but some say Detroit isn't helping.

Winnebago suspended production of motorhomes in May. Company officials have made sure 1980 models will be smaller and more fuel efficient, but blame Detroit for the measly 6 to 8 miles per gallon average achieved by their motor homes in the past. Winnebago does not produce its own engines but must take what's available from the major auto manufacturers.

"We'll do anything to reduce a pound here or there. We're also developing dual fuel systems for motor homes so they can run on propane, a more plentiful fuel," LaBella said.

The industry isn't convinced the oil shortage is real, and feels, LaBella said, "the RV industry is asked to make cutbacks and no one else is."

It's availability of gasoline, not price, that worried Winnebago founder John Hanson. "The people who can afford a $20,000 motor home can afford a dollar a gallon for gas. But if you can't get the gas to run the thing, it's not going to do much good."

Crisis or not, Lowe said, campers and trailers still are a good investment for budget conscious Americans.

"Most RVs can travel up to 600 miles on one tank of gas, and a campground is still cheaper than a motel," he said.

Voter Power Exemplified

PHELPS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Seldom has the power of the ballot been better personified than in this tiny Missouri River town where voters next week will decide a $6.1 million bond issue — all 27 of them.

Phelps City has 65 souls, but only 27 are registered to vote. The MBPXL Co. meat packing plant wants the tax-free industrial revenue bonds to expand its operations.

SEGREGATED

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dining rooms aboard all five Holland America Cruises ships henceforth will be divided into smoking and non-smoking sections, the company has announced.

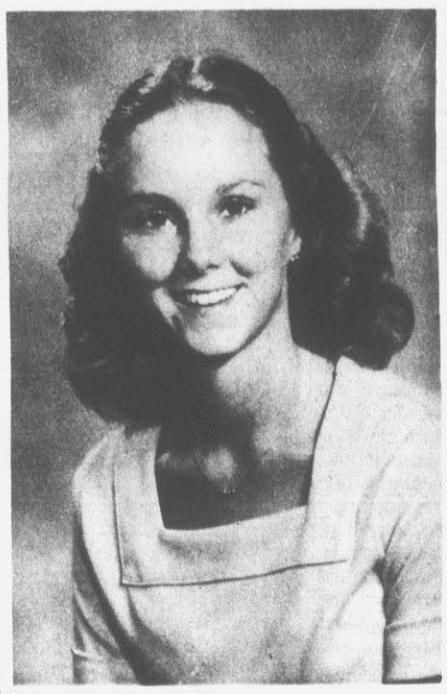
Debutante Ball Set For September



ELIZABETH MORRISON MOYE

ANNE MURRAY MIDDLETON

Text By Jill Allen

A rising senior at St. Mary's Junior College, Raleigh, Brenning Marie Cheatham, known as ReRe, is one of Greenville's 1979 debutantes.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Theodore Cheatham of Rt. 9, Greenville.

Busy at St. Mary's, ReRe is involved in the SGA. Next year she will be the chairman of dorm and hall counsel.

She attended St. Mary's as a high school senior. When she graduates next spring she'll probably transfer to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Although undecided in her major, ReRe likes working with children and considers teaching as a possibility.

She attended summer school classes at UNC this summer to get ahead. For the rest of the summer she plans to spend a lot of time relaxing at Atlantic Beach and sailing at Washington.

ReRe's sister, Sherrill, and her mother were debutantes.

ReRe's father will be her chief marshal while Richard Mallay of Henderson, a UNC-CH senior, is her assistant.

Clement

An outdoors girl, Tori Clement (Victoria Stedman) is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Edwin Clement of 102 Martinsborough Rd.

Whenever possible, she goes camping, mountain climbing, snow skiing and water skiing.

A UNC student, she is undecided about her major, but likes math and anthropology.

This summer the 18-year-old went to England with a group of 90 other students from UNC and their professors where they studied for four weeks. "I studied history and drama, then for two weeks some friends and I traveled around Europe," she said.

For the remainder of the summer she will spend some time at the family river cottage, at deb parties and in the mountains.

Tori graduated from Rose High School, where she was a cheerleader for four years, president of the Keywanettes Club and involved in the SGA.

Keeping it in the family, her mother made her debut also.

Tori's father will be her chief marshal. Taylor Pace of Greenville will be her assistant marshal. He is a rising sophomore at UNC.

Glover

Elizabeth Ann Glover is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Robert Glover Jr. of Williamston.

Ann, who attended St. Mary's College first semester, now spends most of her time working for her parents at the Town and Country Restaurant in Williamston.

Considering the future, She said, "I would like to go to ECU and major in protective services. I love children and I'd like to work with them, but I'm hesitant because I'm learning the business of the restaurant and I may stay with it."

She explained that if she did go in to protective services, she'd work with neglected and abused children.

A graduate of Williamston High School, Ann was in the Keywanettes Club, the band and was president of the Medical Careers Club.

She enjoys horseback riding and reading when not busy at the restaurant.

Her father will serve as her chief marshal and Tim Rogers of Williamston will be her assistant He is a rising freshman at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Joyner

Julia Smith Joyner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Ray Joyner of 1724 Circle Dr., Greenville, is majoring in merchandising at Southern Seminary Junior College, Buena Vista, Va.

The 19-year-old has always been interested in merchandising and hopes to own a clothing store some day.

With a two-year degree, Julia plans to work when she graduates in the spring.

During the summer she goes to Atlantic Beach frequently, where her family has a beach cottage. She also has been working one day a week as a sales clerk at Ariane Clark.

Other interests include cooking, sewing and needlepoint.

Julia's mother and her sister, Catherine, were debutantes.

Julia's father will be her chief marshal.

Lanier

Laura Bernice Lanier is an early childhood major at East Carolina University. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Conrad Lanier Jr. of 302 Country Club Dr. here.

"I want to teach K-three because I don't think I could handle older children," the 19-year-old said.

During the summer, Laura attended summer school at ECU where she took political science, history and swimming. She needed some extra credits and thought it would be easier in summer school.

She also worked at the Villa Roma Italian Restaurant here for awhile. "I liked it, but it was too much while I was going to school."

Now, she's spending most of her time at her family's cottage at Atlantic Beach and at deb parties.

For entertainment, Laura enjoys horseback riding, swimming, fishing and playing softball.

Having attended three different high schools, she spent her senior year at Parrott Academy in Kinston, where she liked it best because of her small class and the closeness of students.

Laura's father will be her chief marshal, and Kim Tippett of Raleigh will be her assistant marshal. He is a rising senior at ECU.

Mayo

Considering a history major, Rosetta Ann Mayo, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Sawyer Mayo of 223 Churchill Dr., Greenville.

Rose Ann is a rising senior at St. Mary's Junior College and is planning to attend the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill after graduation.

This summer she took a history course at East Carolina University to get extra credits. Other summer activities include frequent beach trips and lounging at the Brook Valley Pool here.

In her spare time, she enjoys reading, sailing, snow skiing, and drawing.

Next year at St. Mary's, she will serve as the secretary of her class and as a high school hall counselor. "I attended two workshops for girls interested in being a hall counselor, then the SGA made selections," she explained.

Rose Ann's father will be her chief marshal. Bobby Woronoff of Houston, Tx., a rising sophomore at UNC, will be her assistant marshal.

McGaughey

Margaret Williams McGaughey is a rising sophomore at Meredith College in Raleigh. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Trusell McGaughey of Farmville.

A business major, Margaret works every summer for her father at Mor Mac Printing Company. This summer besides working, she attended summer school at East Carolina University where she took physics and psychology. "Two sciences are required at Meredith. I decided to get it over with in the summer. It's easier that way."

In her free time she likes to play golf, tennis and to watch all sports.

She is a graduate of Farmville Central High School where she was on the tennis team, in the National Honor Society and a member of the Keywanettes Club.

Margaret's mother made her debut also.

Her father will be her chief marshal and David Ralph Morgan of Farmville will be her assistant. He is a rising sophomore at UNC and plans to major in business.

Middleton

Aiming toward law at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Anne Murray Middleton is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. David John Middleton Jr. of 103 Williamsburg Dr., Greenville.

At UNC, Anne spends most of her time involved in extracurricular activities. She is active in the SGA, president of the Fencing Club (which she started), a member of the Campus Y, and a representative to the Student Educational Broadcasting Board of Directors. She is also in the Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority there.

This summer she attended summer school at ECU and took life saving. Other activities have included scuba diving and beach trips. Some of Anne's hobbies are fencing, reading, playing the flute and sailing.

A graduate of Rose High School, the 19-year-old was president of the SGA, secretary of the band counsel and a member of the National Honor Society.

Her father will be her chief marshal. William Douglas McDowell of Hickory, a rising sophomore at UNC, will be her assistant marshal. He is an accounting major.

Moye

Tap and ballet dancing are major interests of Lisa Moye (Elizabeth Morrison), who has studied both for 14 years. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Alexander Moye Jr. of Maury.

A rising senior at St. Mary's Junior College, Lisa is the president of the Caperettes, a club for tap and jazz dancers. She is also a member of the Cold Cuts musical group.

Besides dancing, she enjoys music, needlework, working with children and creative writing.

She is undecided about her major, but hopes to continue her studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

This summer Lisa has been attending sewing classes, doing needlework, working on Cold Cuts musical routines, and enjoying deb festivities.

She is a graduate of Wayne County Day School in Goldsboro where she was head cheerleader for two years and secretary-treasurer of her class.

Lisa's father will be her chief marshal.

Ormond

Louise Holliday Ormond, known as Lou, is an accounting major at Peace Junior College, Raleigh.

A Rose High School graduate, Lou is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lyman Ormond Jr. of 104 Martinsborough Rd.

With drawing and making jewelry as hobbies, she was a member of the Art Club and Jewelry Club when she attended high school.

"This year I've been taking mostly business courses. Next year I'll start accounting courses," she said. When Lou graduates in the spring with a two-year degree in accounting, she plans on working. "If that doesn't work out, I'll continue at ECU in the accounting department."

Keeping busy this summer, Lou spends most of her time working for her father at Ormond Wholesale Co., Inc. in the sales office where she lays out ads.

Her father will be her chief marshal and Howard Hill of Greenville will be her assistant marshal. He is a 21-year-old business major at ECU.

Peel

Mimi Peel (Sara Margaret) is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Elbert Sidney Peel Jr. of Williamston.

A rising sophomore at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, she is double majoring in art history and radio, television, and motion pictures or RTVMP.

Her interest in public television began at St. Catherine's, Richmond, Va., where she completed her junior and senior years in high school. There she helped produce the school news show. Mimi was editor of the school newspaper, "The Arcadian."

Being a debutante is nothing new in the Peel family since her sister, Lucia, was also presented to North Carolina Society.

Although busy this summer taking typing lessons, voice lessons and life saving, she finds time to travel, a major interest she always anticipates.

At UNC, Mimi is a member of one of the university choruses, another interest that she plans to continue. She was also involved with the Fine Arts Festival this spring and plans to help again next year.

Her father will be her chief marshal. Her assistant marshal will be her cousin, Cooper Peel of Williamston. He is a recent graduate of Louisburg and plans to attend UNC in the fall.

Rogers

A rising sophomore at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Laura Carole Rogers is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Eugene Rogers of Williamston.

She is currently studying prepharmacy and hopes to attend pharmacy school there her junior year. She plans to apply for admission in the fall when she'll have to take an entrance exam. Describing pharmacy school, she said, "It's a five year program. I would start in the fall of my junior year and continue an extra year."

Laura said the field appealed to her because she liked chemistry and other sciences.

Making it easier for next year, she attended summer school classes at UNC, where she took chemistry and economics. "Economics is required for prepharmacy students and I have to take two chemistries, so I thought it would be easier to take them in summer school, "Laura said.

Other summer activities include beach trips and deb parties.

Her father will be her chief marshal and Doug Chesson of Williamston, a rising sophomore at UNC, will be her assistant marshal.

Whichard

Virginia Suther Whichard, known as Gina, is studying journalism at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. David Jordan Whichard II of Rt. 9, Greenville.

Her father, being the editor of The Daily Reflector, Gina said, "I've been interested in journalism since I was little. I can't help it. I've lived in it all my life."

Her interest in journalism has led to her ambition of working on a magazine staff some day.

A graduate of Rose High School, the 18-year-old was a

Miss Lee, Mr. Baro Wed

Father Anthony Simeoni of St. Gabriel's Parish, Greenville, performed the sacrement of marriage uniting Susan Jeffrey Lee and Jose Baro III, both of Greenville, Saturday at 6:30 p.m.. The ceremony was held in Memorial Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Westfall Lee Jr. of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Jose Baro Jr. of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown, with a candlelight chantilly lace bodice with sweetheart neckline. Long sleeves were featured, with a peplum in front forming a bustle in the back from which fell the cathedral length satin train. The bride wore a fingertip illusion veil attached to a handmade wreath of imported silk flowers. She wore an heirloom gold cross and chain and carried two white orchids on her grandmother's prayer-book.

The honor attendants and bridesmaids wore formal length dusty rose princess style qiana gowns, featuring off-shoulder bertha collars. They carried old-fashioned bouquets of pink miniature carnations, dusty rose straw flowers, cushion pom pons, listris and baby's breath tied with pink satin ribbon. Mrs. Larry Wade Hayes of Vanceboro was matron of honor, with Miss Edwina Gladden Lee of Fairfield as maid of honor, both sisters of the bride. Bridesmaids included Miss Gloria Baro, Miss Cristina Baro, and Miss Maria Baro of Greenville, sisters of the bridegroom, Miss Bonnie Lynn Lee of Greenville, cousin of the bride, and Miss Katherine Still of New York, N. Y.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Richard Dee Johnson, William Roy Hudson, Scott Douglas Wolcott and William Westfall Lee IV, all of Greenville, Larry Wade Hayes of Vanceboro, brother-in-law of the bride, and Jerry Wayne Griffin of Bennington, Vt. Joshua Webster Hayes, nephew of the bride, served as ring bearer.

The mother of the bride chose a formal gown of silesta styled with a high crushed neckline, blouson bodice and full skirt. An orchid corsage was pinned to her handbag. The mother of the bridegroom selected a coral print formal gown with A-line skirt and matching chiffon cape. She was remembered with an orchid corsage.

Joseph Goodwin, organist, presented a program of nuptial music. Mrs. James Webster Lee, aunt of the bride, sang "The Our Father." Miss Carolyn Greene, soloist, sang "Ave Maria" in Latin.

The church was decorated with a 15-branch candelabra in the choir loft, flanked by spiral candlabra entwined with greenery. Palms and 20 tiered candelabra with bouquets of white summer flowers formed a background.

A reception was held at the Greenville Country Club. The bridal couple cut the four-tier wedding cake with the bride's father's naval sword. Mrs. Julian White and Mrs. Jackson Edwards assisted in serving wedding cake, with Cora Lee and Caroline Lee, cousins of the bride, presiding at the register. The table was centered with an arrangement of summer flowers in a silver wine cooler flanked with five branch candelabra. Barry Shank provided the music.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in urban and regional planning. She is employed by Eastern Orthopeadic Group, Inc., Greenville. The bridegroom is a student at East Carolina University, majoring in mathematics and accounting. He is employed by Singer Furniture, Chocowinity.

Following a wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Mrs. David Branch of Valley Center, Calif. served as hostess for a dinner Wednesday, with a dance following at the Jolly Roger. Dr. and Mrs. Jose Baro Jr. and Mrs. James Moye gave an after-rehearsal party at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Baro. Mr. and Mrs. Luther Moore, Mr. and Mrs. James Webster Lee and Herbert White Lee, aunts and uncles of the bride, gave the wedding breakfast. Mrs. Charles Howard and Mrs. Harvey Turnage gave the bridesmaids' luncheon. A dessert was given by Mrs. Pollock Gladden, grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Larry Wade Hayes, sister of the bride, and Miss Maria Baro, sister of the bridegroom Monday.

Engagement Announced

MISS TINA RAYE STANCILL. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Herman Stancill Jr. of Wilmington, who announce her engagement to Frankie Ray Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Norman Smith of Kinston. The wedding will take place Sept. 30.

Couple Marries In Raleigh

RALEIGH — Trinity United Methodist Church was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony uniting Pamela Jean Smith of Raleigh and Robert Franklin Northrup of Greenville. The Rev. Harold Chrismon performed the double ring ceremony at 2 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of SFC and Mrs. Gary Smith of Raleigh, currently stationed in Cincinnati, Ohio. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Pollard of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white crepe formal gown, accented with empire waist and full chiffon sleeves, trimmed with seed pearls. She chose a fingertip veil trimmed with lace and seed pearls and carried a bouquet of daisies, baby's breath and white pom pons.

Miss Jennifer Smith of Cincinnati, Ohio, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She selected a lime green crepe formal gown with pastel chiffon sleeves. She carried a basket of daisies and baby's breath. Bridesmaids were Dawn Todd, cousin of the bride, Dawn Williams of Raleigh and Deborah Wrenn of Greenville. They chose formal gowns in pastel yellow, pink and blue and carried baskets of daisies and baby's breath.

Mike Northrup of Roanoke, Va., twin brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Dave, Ron and Steve Northrup of Greenville, brothers of the bridegroom, and Andy Odette, of Raleigh, uncle of the bride.

A program of nuptial music was provided by Roger Disbro of Cleveland, Ohio, organist, and Becky Parrish of Raleigh, soloist.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony. The four-tier wedding cake was served by Mrs. Bennie Williams and Ms. Betty Todd. Punch was poured by Mrs. Harriet Todd and Mrs. Franklin Hall. Other assistants included Mrs. Henry Dudek, Mrs. Bennie Goetz and Miss Cindy Matthews. Miss Donna Holt presided over the guest book. Mrs. James Odette and Mrs. Thomas Odette assisted the bride.

Following a trip to the Outer Banks, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Both the bride and bridegroom are juniors at East Carolina University, with the bride majoring in special education and the bridegroom majoring in business administration. The bridegroom is employed by the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce and the Radio Shack, Pitt Plaza.

Hunt-Glisson Vows Spoken

Susie Glisson and John Paul Hunt were married Saturday at 2:00 p.m. in St. Peter's Catholic Church here. Father Harry Webb performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Calvin Glisson of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Albert Hunt of Greenville.

The bride was escorted by her uncle, Mack Glisson of Greenville and given in marriage by her mother.

Janie Glisson of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridemaids included Pam Glisson, cousin of the bride, and Carol Vandiford, both of Greenville, and Terry Cobb of Winterville.

Karen Hunt of Ozark, Ala., niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl. John Ford of Greenville, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

Kenneth Braxton of Greenville served as best man. Ushers were Eddie Taylor of Greenville, Bob Hunt of Ozark, Ala., and Al Hunt of Birmingham, Ala., brothers of the bridegroom.

A program of nuptial music was provided by Hattie Pignani, organist and soloist Susie Sekella, both of Greenville.

The bride wore a formal length gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a portrait neckline outlined in floral silk Venise lace. The empire bodice was accented by a sheer panel of organza overlaid in star shaped motifs with each leaf beaded with rows of pearls. The bodice and double caplet sleeves were accentuated with clustered Venise lace with edging of miniature lace. The A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were bordered in the miniature lace. She wore an elbow length tiered illusion veil edged in the miniature floral Venise lace held in place by a bandeau cap overlaid in floral silk Venise lace.

She carried a full cascade showered bouquet of white pixie carnations, jappett orchids, pink sweetheart roses and baby's breath tied with white satin.

The honor attendant wore a formal gown of print chiffone in pink blossom on an ivory background designed with a portrait neckline edged in piping with miniature tie bows at the shoulders. Short split sleeves were featured on the blouson bodice and the waistline was encircled with a rope tie sash from which fell the flared skirt.

The bridesmaids wore gowns styled identically to the honor attendant's in a print chiffone of bluebell on ivory.

The honor attendant carried a nosegay of dusty rose and white flowers tied with a dusty rose bow. The bridesmaids carried blue and white flowers tied with romance blue bows.

The flower girl carried a basket filled with dusty rose, blue and white flowers tied with blue and dusty rose ribbon. The ring bearer carried a heart satin pillow with a spray of blue and dusty rose flowers.

The mother of the bride wore a formal length gown of cotillion blue magic knit designed with an open V-neckline and sheer organza long sleeves. She was remembered with a American Beauty rose corsage.

The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal length gown of rose pink knit designed with a V-neckline and empire bodice with long fitted sleeves. She wore a pink rose corsage.

The grandmothers of the bridal couple were remembered with white carnation corsages.

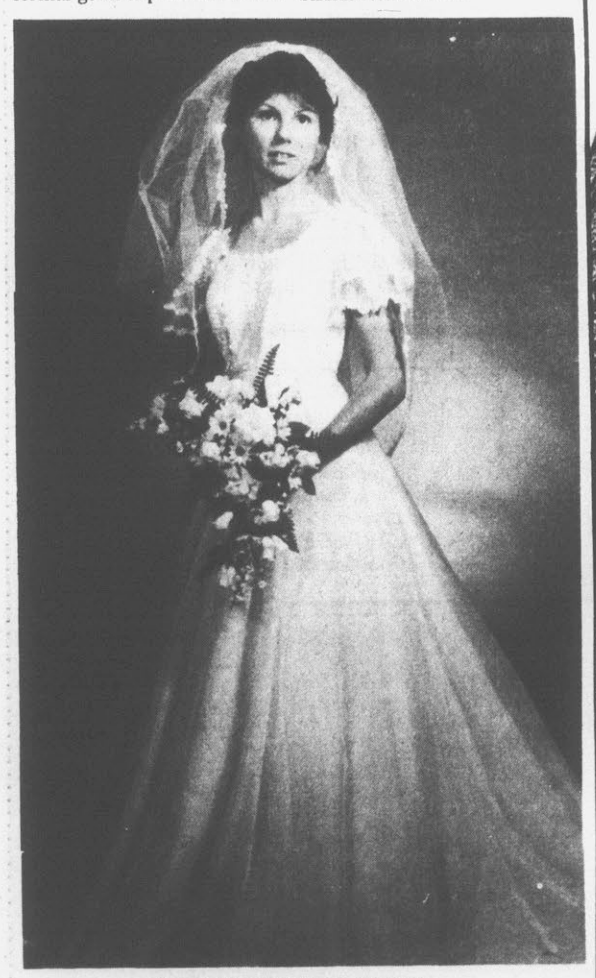
The church was decorated with altar vases filled with white summer flowers and the family pews were marked with white satin

Following the ceremony, a reception given by the bride's mother and aunt, Frances Glisson of Greenville was held in the parish hall of the church. The table was centered with an arrangement of pink and white flowers.

After a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla., the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High and is a student at ECU. The bridegroom graduated from North Pitt and is a student at ECU.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at a rehearsal dinner Friday night at Western Sizzlin Steak House.



MRS. JOHN PAUL HUNT

Vicki Grimes, Charles Tetterton Wed

BETHEL — Miss Vicki Elaine Grimes and Charles Edward Tetterton Jr. were married at 7:00 p.m. at the home of the bride's mother here.

The Rev. Clinton Tetterton performed the double ring ceremony.

Mrs. Rosslyn Crandell of Greensboro presented a program of wedding music.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Rosa Jones Grimes of Bethel. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Tetterton Sr. of Washington.

Given in marriage by her cousin, Quinton Jones, the bride wore a long creme formal length gown of polyster silk with a matching jacket. The dress had a low-fitted empire bodice with a V-shaped neckline. Her jacket featured eyelet embroiderey and tie string. She wore a circlet of baby's breath in her hair and carried a nosegay of white daisies accented with roses and baby's breath.

The maid of honor was Sylvia Grimes of Bethel, sister of the bride. She wore a formal gown of yellow featuring a peasant neckline. She carried two long-stemmed yellow and white carnations and wore flowers in her hair.

Bridesmaids were Miss Patricia Grimes of Fort Jackson, S.C., sister of the bride; Miss Deborah Tetterton of Washington, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Darlene Weaver of Washington, D.C., cousin of the bride. They wore blending pastel gowns and carried long-stemmed carnations.

'Alonza Price served as best man. Ushers included Timothy Tetterton of Washington, brother of the bridegroom; James Williams of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom; Gentris Bryant of Bethel, cousin of the bride, and Sherwin Jones of Bethel, cousin of the bride.

Mrs. Crandell directed the wedding.

Both mothers wore identical formal length gowns of mint green accented with ruffled capes and carried long-stemmed white carnations.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride. The table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with an arrangement of daisies.

Assisting with serving and receiving were Mrs. Dorothy Spearman of Washington, D.C., Mrs. Mildred Weaver of Washington, D.C., aunts of the bride; Mrs. Mildred Swindell of Lanham, Md., and Mrs. Ethel Warren of Durham, aunts of the bridegroom. Good-byes were said to by Mr. and Mrs. Quinton Jones of Parmele.

Following a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Winston-Salem.

The bride is a graduate of North Pitt High and North Carolina Central University. She is presently employed at Henry Wiseman Kendall Center, Greensboro. The bridegroom graduated from North Pitt High and is attending Winston-Salem State University.

A rehearsal dinner was given Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Knight, aunt and uncle of the bride.

Cherry Port Gell

CHERRY PORT GELL

Pantryshelf dessert with robust flavor, dark cherry color and no unwelcome additives.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
16½-ounce can pitted dark sweet cherries in heavy syrup
¼ cup sugar
¾ cup ruby port wine

In a medium bowl evenly sprinkle gelatin over water; let stand so gelatin swells — a matter of minutes. Drain cherries well — there should be 1 cup syrup and 1 cup cherries. Halve cherries. In a small saucepan heat syrup until it begins to boil; pour over gelatin and stir until dissolved. Stir in sugar until dissolved. Stir in port. Chill, stirring occasionally, until slightly thickened. Stir to distribute cherries evenly. Ladle into six ½-cup molds or custard cups. Delicious served with cream cheese whipped until fluffy with a little milk or cream and garnished with shredded orange rind. Makes 6 servings.

Hardened soap powder can be restored for use by grating it on your vegetable grater. Or you can strike the box of hardened powder with anything strong enough to crack the powder into pieces small enough to be fed through your food grinder. The powder will come out like new.

Miss Weaver Is Saturday Bride

MRS. LON SLONE FELKER

Susan Lee Weaver and Lon Slone Felker exchanged wedding vows Saturday at 5 p.m. at the St. Paul Episcopal Church here.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. William J. Hadden Jr.

A program of Baroque music was presented by Mrs. Sharon Irwin, organist.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William B. Weaver III of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Col. (USAF Ret.) and Mrs. Walter J. Felker Jr. of Fairborn, Ohio.

Sister of the bride, Carol A. Weaver of Alfred, N.Y., was the honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Mrs. Diane W. Loffredo of Glen Rock, N.Y., sister of the bride.

Dr. Andrew McNitt served as best man. Joseph M. Loffredo of Glen Rock, N.Y., was usher.

The bride wore a traditional white gown in Victorian style accented with Venise lace at the sheer yoke bodice and bishop sleeves. The skirt swept from the empire waist into a chapel train. Her elbow length veil of silk illusion edged with seed pearls fell from the lace covered Camelot cap. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses and baby's breath.

The attendants wore pale blue silesta full length gowns with accordian pleated skirts. Each carried nosegays of blue and purple flowers and wore picture hats in pale blue.

The mother of the bride wore a pale green silesta gown and a purple orchid.

The mother of the bridegroom wore a pale pumpkin colored gown and a gold orchid.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the parents of the bride at the Ramada Inn here.

The wedding party and out-of-town guests were entertained by the bridegroom and his parents at a rehearsal dinner Friday night.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., and Washington, D.C., the couple plans to live in Greenville. The bridegroom, a faculty member of the political science department at ECU, received his PhD. in political science at Michigan State University. The bride attended Adelphi University, Garden City, N.Y.

MRS. PAUL ARTHUR JAMES

James-Morris Vows Said

Patricia Lynn Morris and Paul Arthur James were married at 5:00 p.m. Saturday in the Gum Swamp Original Free Will Baptist Church here.

The Rev. Bobby R. Taylor performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Morris of Rt. 6, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene James of Rt. 4, Tarboro.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. E.R. Lewis of Bethel, organist, and Ralph A. Brown of Tulsa, Okla., soloist, who sang "It Seems I've Always Loved You," "One Hand, One Heart" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of candlelight maracaine jersey styled with an inserted empire waist with pearl flowerette motifs. The V-yoke and high Victorian neckline were appliqued with pearls. The fitted tapered sleeves were highlighted with embroidered pearl wristlets. The skirt fell into an attached chapel length train.

The bride's mantilla veil was of imported silk illusion bordered with re-embroidered alencon lace and fell from a Juliet cap of Venise flowerettes, sequins and pearls which was bordered to match the gown. She carried a formal cascade bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses, cattleya orchids, miniature carnations and baby's breath tied with white satin.

Miss Paula Morris of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her formal gown of yellow sheerganza featured a fitted waistline and an off-shoulder neckline with spaghetti straps tied with miniature bows at the shoulder. The full bouffant skirt was accented with scalloped sheerganza overskirts atop ruffled hemlines. She carried a colonial bouquet of pixie carnations, painted daisies and baby's breath tied with romance satin bows.

Mrs. Ralph A. Brown of Tulsa, Okla., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Kathy Small of Edenton and Cyndee Turner of Wilmington were bridesmaids. Their formal gowns of blue nylon were fashioned identical to that of the maid of honor. Each carried a colonial bouquet fashioned after the honor attendant's.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Mark and Eddie James of Tarboro, brothers of the bridegroom, Clyn Morris of Greenville, brother of the bride, Brent Mitchell of Goldsboro, and Quinn Morris of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of blue maracaine jersey with a high neckline and long fitted sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom selected a long sleeved formal dusty rose silesta knit gown featuring a fitted bodice and V-neckline. Both mothers wore corsages of white orchids.

Mrs. Nina Morris of Greenville, grandmother of the bride, wore a summer print of polyester and a white orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. The entrance to the reception room was outlined with hurricane lamps with white satin bows. The tables were covered with white satin cloths with garlands of greenery. The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of summer flowers flanked by five branched candelabra.

The bride's table held the wedding cake encircled with flowers and greenery. Throughout the room were arrangements of summer flowers and greenery.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Grover Morris and Mrs. Guilford Lewis of Greenville.. Miss Rudy Morris of Greenville presided at the guests' ledger.

Mrs. Richard Smith of Greenville poured punch and Mrs. Clayton Purvis of Bethel served cake. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Ashley Carraway, Mrs. Dempsey Holland, Mrs. Bruce Simpkins, Mrs. Sylvester Morris, Miss Charlene Spain, Miss Lisa Carraway and Miss Tina Holland of Greenville, Mrs. R.B. Mitchell of Goldsboro, Mrs. Donnie Moore of Washington, Mrs. Wallace Williams and Susan Williams of Bethel. Good-byes were said by Mrs. Gene Tucker of Tarboro and Miss Zelda Coor of Louisburg.

The bridegroom's parents and friends of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner Friday night at the Ramada Inn.

On Saturday morning Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Grover Morris of Greenville, Mrs. R.B. Mitchell of Goldsboro and Miss Zelda Coor of Louisburg honored the bridal party and other guests at a buffet brunch at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis.

The bride is a graduate of ECU where she was a member of Kappa Delta Pi. She is employed by the Chatham County Board of Education. The bridegroom is a senior at UNC, Chapel Hill.

After a wedding trip the couple will reside in Chapel Hill.

Couple Marries In Morning Ceremony

Barbara Elaine Goodson and Edward William Turcotte Jr. were married Saturday at 11:00 a.m. in St. Paul's Episcopal Church here.

The Rev. Lawrence P. Houston Jr. performed the private double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Bernard Goodson of Kinston. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward William Turcotte of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Brenda Carol Goodson of Kinston, sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

Edward William Turcotte III of Greenville, son of the bridegroom, served as best man.

A program of nuptial was provided by Rhem Bell, organist, and Ms. Cheryl Cotten, flutist, both of New Bern.

The bride wore a full length gown of Nottingham lace. The ecru shaded gown's basic design featured a V-neckline accentuated with an attached Nottingham lace shawl edged in Venise lace. The empire waistline was accentuated in center front with a self-tie shawl bow and fell to a deep hemline ruffle edged in Venise lace.

The bride's headpiece featured matching Nottingham lace bandeau edged in Venise lace. She carried a bouquet of bur gandy silk roses interspersed with ecru baby's breath and greenery.

The honor attendant wore a street length polyester silk dress of peacock blue. The slim silhouette was accented by an inset waistline with self-wrapping sashes, threequarter raglan sleeves and a mandarin collar. She carried a single long-stemmed burgandy silk rose.

Following the ceremony a reception given by the bride's parents was held at the church.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Kinston High School and ECU. She is presently employed as an adoptions specialist with the Lenoir Co. Dept. of Social Services, Kinston.

The bridegroom graduated from Rose High School and attended ECU. He is employed by Cherokee Brick Co., Raleigh, as sales representative for northeastern North Carolina.

The bridegroom's parents entertained the bridal couple at a pre-nuptial dinner in their home Friday.

Couple Weds Saturday Afternoon

BURLINGTON — Miss Sara Elizabeth Lockamy of Greenville and David Delton Perry of Bethel were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in the First United Methodist Church here. R. Dennis Ricks and Ellis Bedsworth performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Lockamy Jr. of Burlington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Delton E. Perry of Bethel.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of white silkened organza over white peau de soie designed with a short split neckline with a stand-up collar edged in scalloped silk Venise lace. The fitted empire bodice was embellished with panels of floral lace and scalloped motifs that extended down over the waistline on to the A-line skirt in front and back. Short caplet sleeves repeated the scalloped lace trim. Self-fabric covered buttons extended down the back closure from the neckline. The skirt flowed to an attached chapel length train. The bride wore a walking length veil of imported illusion edged in silk scalloped Venise lace held in place by a bandeau overlaid in matching lace. She carried her mother's Bible in a cascade bouquet of white and yellow roses mixed with stephanotis.

Mrs. Steve Williams of Burlington, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Kim Anders , cousin of the bridegroom, Miss Dell Smith and Mrs. Ed Batson, all of Greenville, Miss Blair Everett of Raleigh, Mrs. Steve Hatley of Ridgeway, Va., Mrs. Glenn Wood of Spring Hope, Ms. Freda Saunders of Rocky Mount, Miss Connie Moore of Jacksonville and Miss Cyndy Ward of Burlington.

The attendants chose two-piece buttercups gowns, featuring slip styling, spaghetti straps and gathered busts. The flared skirts were accented with a front inverted pleat, with separate sleeveless jackets edged with crochet over the gowns. They carried bamboo fans covered with white and yellow daisies.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Ken Perry, brother of the bridegroom, Lee Manning, cousin of the bridegroom, Bo Bunting, all of Bethel, Steve Williams of Burlington, brother-in-law of the bride, Eddie Lewis, Woody Andrews, Charles Young, Don Edwards, Ronnie Briley, all of Greenville, Tom Perkinson of Oxford, Charles Aynsley of Tarboro, and Charles Foxx of Charleston, S. C.

Mrs. Howard Higgs, organist, and Kim Farmer, soloist, performed a program of nuptial music.

A reception followed at the Burlington Shrine Club, given by the bride's parents.

Following a trip to the Virgin Islands, the couple will reside in Bethel.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University, with a degree in early childhood education and a master's in elementary education. She is employed by Pitt County Schools as a teacher. She was a member of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority. The bridegroom attended North Carolina State University, where he was a member of Sigma Nu fraternity. He is employed by Tri-County of Bethel.

Miss Cyndy Ward of Burlington honored the bride with an ice cream party Tuesday. Brenda Moser of Burlington entertained with a bridesmaids' luncheon at her home Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Manning and Mr. and Mrs. Mance Edmondson, aunt and uncle and grandperents of the bridegroom respectively, gave his parents gave a rehearsal dinner at the Ramada Inn, Burlington. A dance followed at the Ramada Inn, given by friends of the bridal couple.

SNACKTIME FARE

Empanadas Beverage

EMPANADAS

Turnovers in South American style.

Olive oil
Large onion, chopped medium-fine (1 cup)
Medium green pepper, seeded and chopped medium-fine (¾ cup)
1 clove garlic, minced
1 pound ground beef round
Small potato, cooked and pared and diced (¾ cup)
½ cup raisins
¾ teaspoon dried thyme
Salt and pepper to taste
Pastry, recipe follows
2 hard-cooked eggs

In a 10-inch skillet in a little of the oil, cook onion, green pepper and garlic until vegetables are wilted. Add beef and mash with fork until red color disappears. Stir in potato, raisins, thyme and salt and pepper. Roll out pastry and cut out 6-inch rounds using an empty 2-pound coffee can as a cutter. Spoon beef mixture into center of each round; top with a teaspoon of oil and a thick slice of egg. Fold pastry over filling so edged meet; crimp to seal. Bake in a preheated 450-degree oven until brown — about 15 minutes. Makes 7.

Pastry: Stir together 3 cups flour and 1½ teaspoons salt. Cut in ½ cup shortening until fine; cut in ½ cup shortening until the size of small peas. Sprinkle with 6 to 7 tablespoons water, 1 tablespoon at a time, mixing with a fork until a dough forms.

Cheese prices vary with choices to suit all tastes and needs. Aged natural chesses are the highest priced, the process varieties are medium priced and the "cheese food" is the thriftiest of all — often 25 cents a pound less than natural cheese.

Overloading a freezer with warm food slows freezing time and wastes energy. First chill cooked foods quickly by setting them in cool water — then freeze.

At Wit's End

It isn't one of those earthshaking problems. I mean, I don't stay up nights worrying about it, but every once in awhile, I sense that our civilization is near its end.

Its demise is not by fire, flood, or earthquake, but a slow, insidious extinction . . . death by over-communication.

I think about the billboards dotting the countryside, two papers at your doorstep each day, 13 magazines a month on your coffee table, radios that play as you sleep and travel, television that desensitizes you, piped-in music at work, CBs in your car, transistors in your pocket, letters stacked at your mailbox, telephones that follow you everywhere, Dial-a-Prayer, Dial-a-Joke, Dial-a-Ride, and Dial-a-Plumber. Intercoms throughout your house, singing telegrams, group therapy, talk shows and newsletters.

All we seem to be doing is communicating. No one listens anymore.

Well, I needn't have worried. The problem has solved itself. It is becoming so expensive to communicate it will only be a matter of time before we are back to runners and drums.

I used to call my sister on her birthday to tell her a letter was on the way. The letter revealed there was a box to follow and if the box didn't arrive on Wednesday to be sure and call me back.

That transaction today would cost enough to make us share a birthday. I'm not sorry to see all this communication go by the boards. Death by listening can be exhausting. Some days I get to the point where I know too much about too little.

The other night I dropped into a chair and was struck by something very strange. The silence. No radios, TV, phone conversations, stereos, nothing. I smiled and thought, "So this is the way it's going to be."

My daughter walked in and said, "If you don't want me in the room, just say so, but don't use that tone with me."

"What tone?" I asked. "I didn't say anything."

"You didn't have to," she said. "I read body English."

If I had known my body was going to be the last means of communication on earth, I'd have taken better care of it.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: L equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

HEAD-TO-TOE SWIMWEAR — An Iranian couple prepare to enter the Caspian Sea for a swim following the new Islamic code that allows only the man to wear a swimsuit. For mixed bathing the women have to keep hidden inside their chador — a long veil. Apparently the sight of a woman in a swimsuit or bikini is regarded as a temptation for Moslem men, even if the couple are married. (AP Laserphoto)

Iran's New Government Insists On Cover-Up For Bathing Belles

By ALEX EFTY

BANDAR ANZALI, Iran (AP) — The bathing belles of this Caspian Sea resort had to give up their bikinis to swim with the men.

They now go into the water fully clothed and swathed in chadors — head-to-toe veils — to conform with Iran's post-revolutionary mores.

"It was either this or complete separation, with men and boys on one beach and women and girls on another," fumed Jaleh Hashemi, a pretty young woman wading in the sea, as she struggled to keep the waves from sweeping her chador away.

"I want to stay with my husband, other friends or relatives, and to be able to do so I have to go through this nonsense," Hasehemi, who works in a laboratory, added.

The coverall beachwear was an unofficial compromise worked out with the authorities here, to win the battle for mixed bathing. A recent order segregating the sexes is being strictly enforced elsewhere along Iran's Caspian Riviera.

The authorities agreed to the local exemption following noisy protest demonstrations in the town recently, organized by local businessmen. The resort, the most popular on the coast, caters every weekend to 150,000-200,000 people who camp out or stay in the beach-huts lining the 7.5 mile-long, wide sandy beach.

The businessmen argued that the total absence of women, whether unveiled in bikinis or veiled in chadors, would ruin this lucrative tourist trade.

The authorities told the protesting tradesmen the ban was designed to end "feminine indecent exposure" in the skimpy swimsuits prevalent along the beach before the overthrow of the shah and the advent of the Islamic republic.

"So when we suggested the chador-as-a-swimsuit solution, they had no objection. They told us if decorum was maintained they would not enforce the segregation ban, if this was what the people wanted," said Mahmoud Minachi, one of the protesting beach-hut owners.

The usual massive turnout the following weekend, with thousands of cars, trucks, buses and scores of motorbikes carrying whole families of four or even five persons, congregating on the Anzali beach from all over the hinterland, demonstrated the people's choice.

But things were different from last year and the ones before that, complained many of the operators of the beach-side catering stalls.

"And it isn't simply because people are sober after the new government banned the sale and consumption of alcohol," one of the operators said.

It was evident the decorum desired by the authorities reigned the whole length of the beach. With thousands of women in the water and sunning themselves on the sandy beach, there was not a single modern feminine swimsuit in sight and little feminine bare flesh could be glimpsed beyond bare ankles and arms.

The scene was reminscent of the Victorian era, with the beach belles all covered up, except that the men, unlike their Victorian forebears, disported themselves unselfconsciously in the latest and briefest male swimming trunks. Strict Moslem tradition on undress applies only to women.

Matronly ladies and young but rather inactive girls, waded into the water up to their knees. Fully clothed, they clasped the long loose folds of their chadors tightly around them as the waves lapped at the billowing lower ends that kept floating off.

More lively girls determined to swim at least a few strokes — something almost impossible in a chador — dropped their veils briefly and struck out, still clad in slacks and shirts they wore as special swim-wear underneath.

The bolder girl swimmers mingled with the scores of male bathers crowding the water. But the noisy games and splashing about normal on most beach-side outings were noticeably lacking.

"This is unbelievable, compared to previous years when the whole beach was a mass of thousands of men and women in their beachwear noisily enjoying a day by the sea," mused Ali, a grizzled old man running a soft-drink stall.

Peaches, Plums And Nectarines

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Peaches, plums and nectarines are plentiful this summer, with crop increases over 1978 ranging from 15 percent for peaches to 17 percent for plums and 23 percent for nectarines. A crop report from the California Tree Fruit Agreement office in Sacramento says shipments of fresh California bartlett pears are expected to be 50 percent greater this year than last, and quality is expected to be superlative. The pears are in retail markets from late July through October and sometimes into November.

Young Farmer Works 80 Hour Week, But Happy

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

CROSS PLAINS, Wis. (AP) — He sits at the kitchen table, fingering the yellowing 1975 news clipping.

The story said he was 26 years old, worked 80 hours a week and that his clothes smelled of hard work in the barnyard.

"His wife is expecting their second child and he's $80,000 in debt," the article said. "But Duane Ketelboeter, budding young dairy farmer, says he's happy."

Duane Ketelboeter, four years older now, muses over how his life has changed. Still lean and brown, he shows the start of crinkles around the eyes from hours of squinting into the sun.

A little older and a little wiser, he's still happy.

He and his wife, Rita, 29, now have three small children and his brother Carl, 22, helps full-time on the farm. There's a new bulk tank in the barn, the price of milk is up, a new machine shed will be erected this summer.

Duane's success — so far — is doubly remarkable in that he is a young farmer on a family farm when both are becoming rare.

The Ketelboeter farm may not fit into America's corporate farm future, but Duane is not above adapting features of corporate America for his own farm's future.

From the single proprietorship Duane was purchasing from his mother on a land contract, the farm has become a family corporation, with he and his mother owning most of the shares.

This will make it easier for him to eventually acquire a controlling financial interest, yet will ensure that brothers and sisters who have left the homestead will get their share, Duane said.

He is earning his share, what with getting up every morning at 4:45 a.m. for the first of the two daily milkings for 70 cows.

With regular chores, machine repairs and routine field work to produce the corn fed to the cattle, he often works well into the evening with only three 15-minute meal breaks.

"One night this spring I was out in the field until 2 a.m.," he says. "Right now things are a little slack, though, so we're getting done around 6:30 or 7 at night."

Rita, who four years ago insisted she was more of a "business partner" than a "farm wife," no longer makes such a distinction.

Besides caring for the three children, she keeps the farm books and cares for the two dozen or so calves being raised on the farm at any one time.

She also goes into the fields to dig up and cart off stones which might otherwise slow Duane's tractor.

"I like to get out of the house and out into the fields," she says. "It's still work, but it's the only time I can be alone and think."

They have not had a vacation since 1971 or 1973 — they can't remember exactly — and they only go out on a rare Sunday night, skipping chores for a movie.

The number of farms in Wisconsin and the U.S. has fallen steadily over the past two decades, government figures show. Just since Duane started farming, 6,000 farms in Wisconsin and 150,000 nationwide have gone out of business or been absorbed, says Marvin Heiser of the Agriculture Reporting Service.

And, according to the federal government, U.S. farm land is disappearing at the rate of 3 million acres a year.

One of the main reasons older farmers are getting out and few younger ones getting into the business is the high cost, especially for land.

Farmland prices here are rising at 16 to 18 percent a year, he says, up to $2,600-$2,700 an acre for some farms. Few farmers can afford to continue when a large corporate farm or a developer is willing to pay that much for land.

"It's getting more and more away from the farmer being his own man," Duane says. "Eventually, things might get too far away from the family and too much like a business."

This feel for the land will be lost when the family farmer disappears, Duane says.

"This is the only life I've known. I'd like my boys, or my brother's boys if he has any, to take it over some day. I'd like to think there will always be Ketelboeters farming here."

Herbarium Plays Role In Variety Of Research

By EARL ARONSON

NEW YORK (AP) — The vast collection of 4 million dried plants at the New York Botanical Garden Herbarium not only identifies leaves, but pinpoints tribal arrow poisons, helps on narcotics hunts and aids in the search for anti-cancer and anti-tumor agents.

Police ask the herbarium to check pulverized plant parts under suspicion in murder or drug cases. Staff members work to improve the air pollution tolerance of trees, and to determine the relation of plants to such fossil fuels as coal and petroleum.

They also have joined the quest for uranium. And they study food and medicine plants.

Packed into 1,200 metal cabinets on all four floors of the herbarium — or dry garden — is information dating back to the 1768 exploration voyage of Capt. James Cook. And the staff of 20 makes expeditions to the far corners of the world to augment the collection.

Dr. Patricia K. Holmgren, head curator since 1968, says her herbarium is one of the nation's three largest. The other two are at the Smithsonian in Washington, D.C., and at Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass. There are about 100 herbariums in the United States.

"Because of its massive volume, the breadth of coverage of the plant kingdom, and the concentrated regional coverage in areas of research and interest," Dr. Holgren says, "the herbarium here has been called upon to serve as a primary source of research materials to support the toxonomic (leaf preparation) investigations of the world botanical community."

Dr. Holmgren, whose husband, Dr. Noel Holmgren, also has been a curator there since 1968, says that each year the herbarium serves more than 200 visiting botanists, some using the facilities for as long as a year. It serves others through loans, with more than a half million specimens having been lent in the last 20 years, 50,908 in the past year.

Founded in 1891, the Bronx herbarium immediately became the depository for large, highly significant collections, such as those acquired earlier by Princeton and Columbia Universities, and from the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

The Holmgrens and Dr. Howard S. Irwin, NYBG president since 1960, all are engaged in investigations into plant varieties.

About 900,000 specimens are added to the collection annually, about 70 percent from staff and student explorations, others by exchange with other herbariums. There are rooms full of unmounted specimens awaiting cataloging.

PLANT EXPERT—Dr. Patricia Holmgren, head curator of the New York Botanical Garden Herbarium, examines sheets of preserved plant specimens at the facility, which has a collection of 4 million dried plants.

"We try to cooperate also with laymen who need plants identified," says Dr. Holmgren.

All specimens brought to the herbarium for study or comparison first must be fumigated to reduce the possibility of introducing insect infestation in the specimen repositories.

Debutante...

cheerleader for four years, co-editor of the literary magazine, and a marshal for excellence in academics.

Continuing making good grades, she made Dean's List last semester at UNC. There she is a member of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority and writes some articles for "The Pan Herald," a newspaper the Governing Board of the sororities puts out. Three girls in each sorority work on the newspaper.

This summer Gina attended summer school at UNC to get the general college requirements behind her, and concentrated on journalism by working in "The Daily Reflector" newsroom.

In her free time, she enjoys traveling, beach trips, jogging and tennis.

Following in their footsteps, her sister, Kathy, and her mother also made their debuts.

Gina's father will be her chief marshal. Bill Collier of Greenville will be her assistant marshal. He is a rising sophomore at UNC.

White

Laura Cherry White is a rising sophomore at Furman University, Greenville, S.C., where she is considering a history major.

A graduate of St. Mary's High School, she is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Steven Merle White of 525 Longmeadow Rd., Greenville.

During the summer Laura has been working for her father at the Greenville Eye Clinic. She also plans to spend some time at her family's beach cottage near Wilmington.

Besides working, she has been entertaining an exchange student from Switzerland who will be staying at her home for a month. She visited him in Switzerland two summers ago.

In her spare time she likes horseback riding and playing the guitar and piano.

Not alone in the family, Laura's sister, Beth, was also a debutante and is now a rising senior at Davidson College.

Her father will be her chief marshal and her assistant marshal is David Watson Daniel of Greenville, who is a rising sophomore at Wake Forest University.

Shcharansky As A Pawn

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN
United Press International

For two years and three months, an appealing, balding little Jewish computer expert who was fascinated by chess tactics has served as a measure of the vast distance between the White House and the Kremlin.

Mention the name Anatoly Shcharansky in Washington human rights circles and the response will be "hero" or "prisoner of conscience." Mention it to patriotic Soviets and the response will be "dissident scum" or "traitor to the Motherland."

Shcharansky's imprisonment on a treason conviction drove Washington and Moscow into one of the coldest periods in recent Soviet-American relations. His release inevitably would gauge the warmth that would come from closer ties.

Shcharansky never had the stature of more prominent Soviet dissidents — the physicist and Nobel laureate Andrei Sakharov to name one. But his imprisonment rapidly moved him to the top of the list of Soviet prisoners of conscience.

Shcharansky was arrested by the KGB on March 15, 1977. He sat in a Soviet prison until he finally faced trial on July 10, 1978. After five days of testimony, he was convicted of treason.

He could have been shot, but the court decided to give him 13 years in prison because it was his first conviction.

Shcharansky didn't go quietly, even though it was apparent from the day of his arrest that the system would extact a ainful punishment for the oung scientist's activities.

"I am happy that I lived onestly and in peace with my onscience and never lied even hen I was threatened with leath. I am happy to have elped people," Shcharansky said in his closing statement to the court.

"I am proud that I have made friends with and worked together with honest and brave people like Andrei Sakharov, Yuri Orlov and Alexander Ginzburg — followers of the traditions of the Russian intelligentsia."

Shcharansky was held in Lefortovo prison in Moscow while awaiting trial. After conviction, he was first sent to the ancient Vladimir Prison near Moscow. He has since been transferred to Chistopol Prison in the Tatar Republic, about 500 miles east of the capital.

Shcharansky's path to prison was paved by his own initiative and abilities. His engaging personality attracted many Western reporters eager for contact with friendly Russians. He spoke English and often served as a translator for reporters.

A Jew, he became one of the leading spokesmen for Jews who have been refused permission to go to Israel, organizing their press conferences and contacting journalists.

In Moscow, that was like wearing a sign. And the KGB was quick to get Shcharansky's message. He was arrested four times and spent 15 days in jails on various minor charges.

A chess fanatic, Shcharansky, now 30, knew the importance of measuring the potential result before making a move. He knew he was headed for trouble and once quoted a Chinese proverb in explaining his possible fate to a friend.

"It's easy to jump on the back of a tiger for a ride, but you can get killed trying to get off," he said.

When the ride stopped on March 15, 1977, getting killed was one of the clear possibilities for the young computer scientist. The Soviet press called him a traitor and said he would face the full measure of the law, which provides for death by firing squad on conviction.

Shcharansky himself did not realize he would not be shot until after the trial started. The court allowed him to fire his attorney, Silva A. Dubrofskaya, a KGB-approved counsel who said she just couldn't understand why the Western press was so interested in the Shcharansky case. He viewed that as a sign he would face prison.

Specifically, Shcharansky was accused of working for a Western intelligence agency, although it was never quite clear which one allegedly was involved. President Carter himself denied Shcharansky was spying for the United States.

The Soviet court decided to take the word of a turncoat dissident, Dr. Sanya Lipavsky, over the word of President Carter. Using Lipavsky's testimony about the days when he served briefly as a walk-in spy for the CIA, the court convicted Shcharansky. All appeals failed.

But Shcharansky's story did not end there. There were immediate efforts to swap him for one of two Soviet spies held in the United States. The White House said no because such an exchange would only lend credence to the charge that sent Shcharansky to jail.

There were independent efforts too. An emissary for a member of the Israeli parliament arrived in Moscow, admitting perhaps too openly that she was in town to seek the release of Shcharansky.

For her efforts, she got a runaround, a visit to the posh dacha of a Soviet journalist, a slap on the back and an embarassing body search on her departure from the Soviet Union.

There have been other times in past months when Shcharansky's release appeared imminent. When five imprisoned dissidents were recently swapped for the two Soviet spies, there was widespread speculation that Shcharansky was part of the deal but that he would be released much later, for two important reasons.

The first was the White House insistence that Shcharansky not be connected in any way to the spies.

The second was the U.S. Senate. Some specialists believed the Soviets wanted to hold Shcharansky back so that he could be presented as a sign of good faith that would help the Senate decide to ratify a new strategic arms limitation agreement signed by Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in Vienna.

Loggerhead Turtles Nesting On Carolina's Coast

SWANSBORO — On moonlit nights and on dark nights, huge loggerhead female turtles emerge from the Atlantic to spend part of the night ashore on sandy stretches of islands ringing coastal southeastern North Carolina.

ON HER ROUNDS . . . Making a periodic protective check of loggerhead turtle nests during daylight hours, Hui Purdy is escorted by Parks Service ranger Bob Mills of Maysville. Mills plans to attend East Carolina University this fall and to major in parks and recreation studies.

These nocturnal visits are for the yearly ritual of depositing eggs in the dry sand just beyond the reach of the incoming tide.

One of the larger sea turtles, the loggerhead, reddish brown, sometimes plain brown in color, bears the official name Caretta caretta, and is common to the oceans of the world. It is a member of the Cheloniidae sea turtle family. While not highly prized, as are some other sea turtles, for its meat, the eggs of loggerheads are used extensively for food in many parts of the world.

Local Research

In a project to determine the location and population of loggerhead nests in representative areas of coastal North Carolina, a young woman, Hui Purdy, has been on site since early June surveying and recording nests. Her co-worker in this work is Christopher Ng, a biology student at Wake Forest University.

"In the ten weeks I've been here," Ms. Purdy said, "we've recorded a total of 55 nests and expect to find more before the project ends on August 10." .. . . Purdy and Ng are concentrating their research to one of several dune and forest islands just off the Swansboro coast.

Large Clutches

Ms. Purdy, a native of Hong Kong, is a petite woman with a radiant smile and a magnificant dark pigtail of hair that reaches nearly to her waist. "Each clutch, or nest," she commented, "usually averages an egg count of 140 to 150 eggs.

"That seems like an awful lot of eggs," she said, "but eventually only a small number, perhaps three or four, will survive to become adult turtles.

"As a rule, 60 to 80 percent of the eggs will hatch, but predators, sea birds and sharks particularly, will take a heavy toll of the young soon after they hatch."

The big females, which Purdy and Ng measure as part of their research, "average out to about three feet long and three feet wide. Occasionally, we will get a bigger one."

The weight of these pondrous feamles average from about 250 to about 275 pounds.

"Depending on the size and strength of their back flippers which they use to dig nests, the nest will be anywhere from 13 to 18 inches deep," Ms. Purdy explained. "Once they have finished laying a clutch, they cover the nest with three to five inches of sand."

The 55 recorded nests includes crawl figures, which total 82 crawls. "Some of the crawls are false crawls, made to confuse foes," Ms. Purdy noted.

Life Long Love

Now a rising senior at Warren-Wilson College in Swannonoa, majoring in biology, Ms. Purdy admits to "having a life long love affair with sea life, especially turtles. So I was very pleased when I got this job."

The research is sponsored and funded by the Youth Involvement Office of the N. C. Division of Parks and Recreation, Raleigh.

"We use the simplest equipment, a measuring tape, a flashlight and stakes to mark the nests," Ms. Purdy commented. "The females are sensitive and easily upset at this time, and we do everything possible not to disturb them.

"Not long ago," she noted, "people from the Wildlife Commission came one night with lots of lights and equipment to get some film, and that really disturbed the turtles. Of course," she added, "those people will be getting federal funds for a protective program and need data and pictures to support their request."

On this and other area islands, campers often spend the night, and they are intrigued by the search for nests and turtles conducted by Purdy and Ng.

Part of our work is to do everything possible to protect the turtles and their nests," Ms. Purdy stated, "and we find people are really understanding and interested when we explain the necessity of not upsetting them.

Awkward Experience

"Most times," Ms. Purdy said, "there's no obstacle in the path of the turtle as she searches for a suitable nesting place. They know exactly what they want, a place that's dry and past the high tide point. This means they will as a rule choose a spot at the base of a dune, but they instinctively avoid going further inland as they're not prepared to dig through roots of sea oats and other growths.

"One night, we heard an excited clamor from a family group camping out. It seems their tent was in the direct line of the path a loggerhead chose to follow to a nesting place. It had rained heavily the night before' and obviously this female was having problems finding the right kind of dry sand.

"So the determined turtle crawled right over the tent, and I think the family was a little frightened, but we got the turtle and the people both calmed down, and it turned out all right."

Northernmost Extent

From what she can determine, the coastal areas of southeastern North Carolina mark the northernmost boundary on the east coast for loggerhead breeding grounds.

"In fact, the number of nests Christopher and I have recorded exceed the number expected to be found," Ms. Purdy said.

"It has been great fun, and I hope another summer to have an opportunity to return and to do some research on some of the other islands nearby.

"So far," she smiled, "we've encountered only female turtles. It seems the males stay out at sea while the females do all the crawling and nesting alone. Maybe someday we'll discover a male who's liberated and decides to come ashore to help his female."

Shipwreck Led To Love Affair

Text By Vera Evans, Dare County Tourist Bureau

A stopover on the Outer Banks of North Carolina was not on Martin Pimlott's itinerary. His is a story repeated throughout the history of these stormy shores. An involuntary visit delivered by a northeast gale and a sailing vessel aground in the surf have been the beginning of many a love affair with the beaches and marshes of Dare County. The sailors who were lucky and lived to emerge from their wrecked boats stayed on to become the early settlers among the isolated islands.

The story starts some years ago in Great Britain, as many earlier stories have, when Martin Pimlott, an Ispswich general constructor, bought the 36 foot sloop, the Belanna. Built in 1953, the craft had a wooden hull finished in fiberglass. The cabin, said his wife Carol, was not much larger than a closet.

Pimlott had been in love with boats since reading "Wind in the Willows" by Kenneth Grahame when he was nine or ten.

"It was that line, "Oh Mole, said Rat, there's nothing so fine as a life on the open water," the tall, athletically built Englishman said with his easy smile. "I just wanted to sail after that."

For the first two or three years he owned the Belanna, Pimlott and Carol and their two sons, Christopher and David, now ten and eight, confined their trips to coastal runs. The sailing fever did not abate, but rather increased and Pimlott began thinking about a round-the-world cruise.

"You know, just a hop to the West Indies, then up to Maine where I planned to build a bigger boat, then probably across the States to California and the Pacific," he said.

"Carol likes to travel. I like to travel slowly. And the boys — well, they were willing."

In mid 1977, the family began the meticulously planned journey. They spent three months in Gibralter, then headed for the Canary Islands as the jumping off spot for the Atlantic crossing.

"We left the Canaries in early December and arrived in Barbados December 29—twenty-eight days to cross," Pimlott said casually.

The boys and Carol served as crew. "No passengers on the Belanna," he said.

"The boys had a fine time," their mother said. "It was we who had the hard time. Being together in that little cabin and they talk so much! We couldn't get away from each other."

School lessons, games, and fishing besides crew chores kept the boys busy. Then there were little dolphins and porpoises playing with the boat and whales to watch. The little stormy petrels followed the boat and "once we had a pigeon on board for a good bit," Carol said.

The boys and their mother flew back to England from Barbados. Pimlott headed north alone, his destination Cape Henry, Va.

The day after the Fourth of July, 1977, the Belanna was ashore on Carova Beach on the Currituck Outer Banks and Pimlott was destined to spend a year or more on the North Carolina coast.

"I wasn't particularly proud of what I'd done," Pimlott said. "It was embarrassing, the amount of attention I got from the press."

A northeast gale and overcast weather, confusing the Bodie Island light with the Currituck light, and taking "short tacks" instead of long ones were the British sailor's undoing.

The shipwreck wasn't frightening, he said. One minute he was afloat, the next minute in the surf. He had dropped off to sleep and was too close to shore.

"Nowhere near as frightening as being in the shipping lanes," he said. But the heavy damage to the Belanna was disheartening. "Especially since she wasn't insured," Pimlott sighed.

The boat had to be recovered and with great perseverance and resourcefulness, Pimlott managed to get the Belanna moved up on the beach, then to an unusual two-beam rig and finally taken to a marina in Virginia where Pimlott works on repairing the vessel.

Meanwhile, Ernie Bowden, a Currituck commissioner in front of whose Carova Beach home Pimlott wrecked, took in the sailor, then Carol and the boys flew over.

"I don't know what we'd have done without Bowden," Pimlott and Carol said. "He was marvelous to us."

After the Belanna had sailed away on highway U.S. 158 to Currituck, "blocking traffic for miles," the Pimlotts decided the boys had better get back to school. They rented a house in Southern Shores, high up on a sand dune overlooking the distant ocean. The boys went to Kitty Hawk School.

For a few months they were content. They liked the Outer Banks, the view of the sea, the people, the school. But the summer season approached and the rent soared.

Carol and the boys flew back to England at the end of last month. Pimlott is working hard to complete the boat repairs. Then he plans to sell the boat, "go home for awhile," and return to build a new boat, either in Maine or California, and to continue the interrupted journey.

"But some day, I'd like to come back here," the rangy sailor said.

"Yes," Carol echoed. "I'd like that. We feel at home here."

And so, the name of Pimlott may join that of Midgett and a dozen other Outer Banks names whose origins were across the sea.

The Pimlotts may repeat history once again a stormy night, a sailing craft in the surf, an enforced stay and an enduring feeling of being home.

Pinetops' Al Drake Was 1979's Top Naval Academy Graduate

PINETOPS — "I wanted to be independent and attend a school which emphasized moral and physical training as well as academic," said blond-haired, blue-eyed Al Drake who graduated from the Naval Academy in May at the top of his class with an untarnished 4.0 average.

Drake became interested in the academy in the ninth grade after receiving a catalog from an uncle who is a veteran of military service. Despite his impressive record, Drake had difficulty obtaining his appointment to the academy.

He began preparing academically and applied to Annapolis his junior year in high school. After receiving his application, the academy requested a physical examination which is required of all applicants. Much to his dismay, Drake could not pass the eye test and was deemed physically unqualified for appointment.

However, Drake was determined to try again. "I did eye exercises daily, had an operation and even wore a patch for a while. The second time I managed to pass," explained Drake. "I wrote the medical board in Colorado and was granted a waiver. The academy then informed me that I lacked a nomination from a Congressman. I called Congressman Fountain of the second district hoping he had a nomination available; fortunately he did. I finally received my appointment in May of 1975 and had to report to Annapolis in July."

The first weeks during Plebe summer were tough for Drake. "They issued gear and taught us manuevers in the first hour. We marched all the time — never walked. The report from my squad leader described me as disoriented and slow to make the adjustment," Drake added with a grin.

Drake claims his attitude enabled him to produce his clean record. "I decided my goal at the academy would be to make no less than an A. I was willing to work for it and took each day and class as it came."

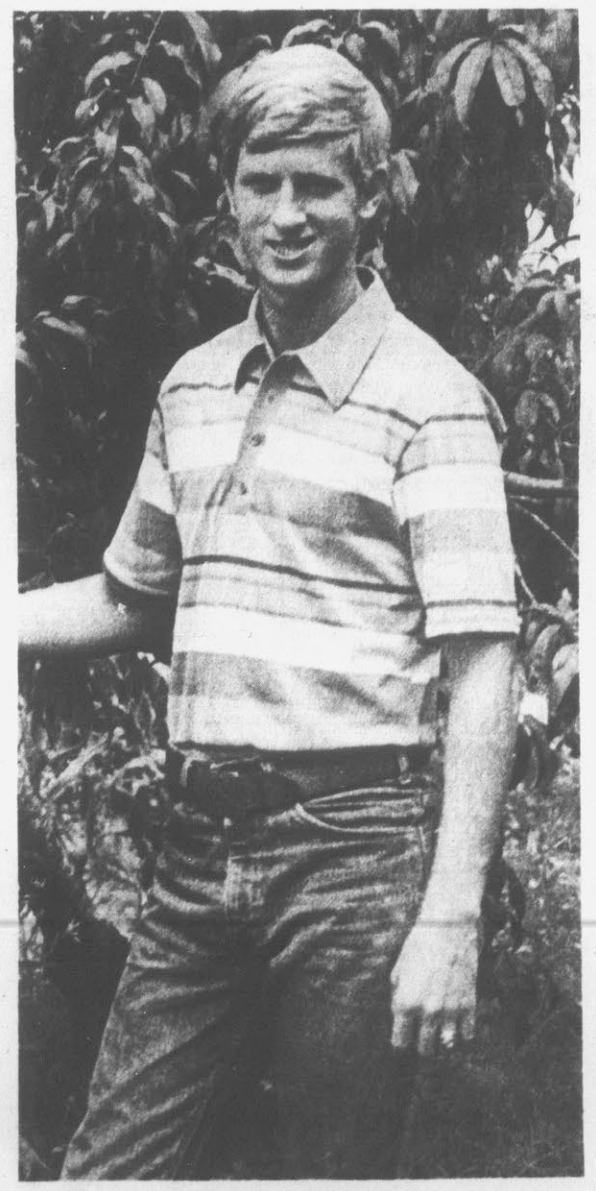
Drake's diligence produced not only the number one rank in a class of 925 members, but it also brought many academic and military awards including the Hendrix Award and Thompson Navigation Award.

The town of Pinetops recently honored Al by proclaiming "Al Drake Day." "I had a good time and think the town enjoyed doing it."

Drake, who graduated with a degree in oceanography, will enter medical school at Duke in August. "I decided I wanted to go into medicine my sophomore year, but knew that the medical program at the academy had been cut out. I talked with the advisor and decided to stay at Annapolis knowing that I might not be able to pursue medicine." His eye problem proved beneficial in this case. "I was determined not physically qualified for regular line duty and was granted a waiver to serve inactive duty for the next four years. After I finish med school, I will owe the Navy nine years of service. One day I hope to practice either family or internal medicine in a rural area."

Al has spent most of the summer working on his father's farm. In his spare time he enjoys hunting, fishing, sailing, playing tennis and scuba diving, a skill he learned at Annapolis.

"The academy gave me the opportunity to go so many places and see so many things I couldn't have otherwise," said Drake of his experiences. "I saw Europe, the Mediterranean and parts of the United States I might never have seen. I'm glad I made the decision to stay at the academy my sophomore year."



AL DRAKE . . . native of the Edgecombe County town of Pinetops, graduated at the top of the 1979 Naval Academy class.

Change In Attitudes

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Chastity is one of the least important criteria in selecting a mate in the eyes of both male and female college students, an Arizona State University study shows.

On a scale of 18 personal characteristics in mate selection, both men and women students ranked chastity 10th in 1939. But in a continuing study, it has fallen to 17th in the minds of male students and 18th in the minds of females.

Young men who believed that dependability in a mate was prime in three studies beginning in 1939, dropped dependability to third behind emotional stability and mutual attraction.

Women also dropped dependability to third, after mutual attraction and emotional stability in that order.

In the preceding studies, 1939, 1956, 1967, mutual attraction has been as low as sixth in female eyes, as low as fourth in male eyes.

Desire for home and children, never before below seventh among women and sixth among men, has fallen to 10th and 11th respectively.

On the rise in female esteem are education-intelligence, sociability, pleasing disposition. The same items are desired by men, with the addition of good looks.

Although the preferred age for marriage varies over the 40-year span, say sociologists John Hudson and Les Leanne Hoyt, until 1967 women preferred a greater age gap between spouses than did men. In the latest study that situation was reversed.

"In the first three time periods investigated, women preferred more children than did men. The 1977 results show for the first time a fewer number of children preferred by women than by men."

In real numbers, there is a sharp decline in the number of children wanted — slightly over two per marriage.

Specialist On Sunday Radio

Scott Luce, geriatric specialist at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, will be guest on "Mental Health Matters" Sunday at 1:06 p. m. on WNCT radio. He will discuss his role at the center and in the community working with the elderly of Greenville and Pitt County.

He will talk about needs of the aging and services offered to meet these needs. Consultation, education, counseling and coordination will be explained, as they relate to geriatric clients.

Luce recently was guest speaker at the quarterly meeting of the Pitt County board home admistrators. He discussed the present and future PCMHC geriatric services program and plans for future meetings with each Pitt County rest home administrator and resident.

TRUE OR FALSE!!

Does A Small Car Really Meet Your Family's Needs??

Basically the main and in cases the only reason for an individual's purchase of a small or compact car is for fuel economy. IN MOST CASES IF WE COMPARE A COMPARABLY EQUIPPED FOREIGN COMPACT CAR TO A LARGER CAR OF COMPARABLE EQUIPMENT the government estimated gas mileage will vary very little.

Let's consider some valid reasons for buying a larger car versus a smaller one:

1. Big cars generally are more durable and last longer.

2. In many instances foreign car repairs are more costly than domestic larger cars.

3. Parts for foreign small cars are sometimes very difficult to get.

4. Big cars are safer in case of an accident. One out of every five cars will be in an accident in any one year period.

5. Big cars are generally more comfortable.

6. The larger car meets a much wider range of total needs than a small car.

7. In many cases if we compare the price of a small luxury car to a larger luxury car the price of the small car will be higher with much less equipment.

8. By purchasing American made cars, the American dollars stay here and improve our economy.

The American public has been so used to bargain prices for fuel for so many years, they have taken low fuel prices for granted. To be realistic in this regard, we need to compare today's gas prices with those in the past. Gas is approximately 90 cents or $1.00 a gallon, as compared to 40 or 50 years ago when it was 25 or 30 cents per gallon. Today's prices for gas are about three times more than they were back then. During this same period of time, the costs of other items have gone up five to ten times, in some cases even more. Stop and think back to 1974 when there were gas lines and many people went out and purchased compact cars. Only to realize a few months later, when things seemed to return to mormal, that they has made a poor decision.

I am not saying that your decision would be wrong to purchase a small car. All I Am trying to do is to place the facts before you and you decide "Does A Small Car Really Meet Your Family's Needs"

WE'RE SOLD ON YOUR HOUSE BEFORE WE SELL IT.

Our theory is simple. We take the time to know your house, price it correctly, and discover its distinctive features. Because when we're sold on it, it's much easier to find the right buyers and close the sale.

Then, we even save you time after the sale by helping with the time-consuming paperwork.

It's all a matter of spending our time wisely so it doesn't waste yours. This is another reason why CENTURY 21® helps more people buy or sell their homes than any other real estate sales organization in the world.

"Our Service Doesn't Cost — It Pays"

DON'T PASS BY THIS SIGN WITHOUT STOPPING

A new home under construction seems to attract a lot of signs. Each sign tells a little something about the house and about the people helping build it.

If there's an E-300 sign out front, then it tells you something else: the home meets tough standards of performance because of the many energy-saving extras which the builder has elected to use. Things like extra insulation--extra caulking and sealing in places where expensive energy can leak out--double paned windows, and more.

When you see an E-300 sign in front of a house under construction, you'll know that it's not just another pretty sign. It's an assurance that the house has been carefully evaluated and inspected to certify that it meets high standards of energy efficiency, and in these energy-conscious times, it's reassuring to know that a home being built to outlive a 30-year mortgage is being built to save energy.

A nice closing thought: homes that save energy save money.

Aldridge & Southerland Realtors

Aldridge And Southerland Is A House SOLD Word! Aldridge And Southerland Is A House SOLD Word! Aldridge And Southerland Is A House SOLD Word! Aldridge And Southerland Is A House SOLD Word!

$3,000 - Zoned CDF. This lot on Myrtle Avenue might be the place for that new small office or business you've been thinking of. Dick Evans, REALTOR, knows all about it.

$5,500 - Ayden Country Club lots. Nice, roomy, and with restrictive covenants to protect that new home you're planning on building.

$7,500 - LAKE GLENWOOD. In a pleasant area of this subdivision, this lot is ready for construction. Has land-use permit and is on Eastern Pines water.

$8,500-$9,000 - Not one, not two, but FOUR pretty wooded lots here in the city, with all city conveniences and just a punt, pass, and kick away from Ficklen Stadium!

$13,300 - Ellsworth Drive - wooded lot, large, and ready for construction.

$16,000 - BROOK VALLEY. Ready for construction, this lot is surrounded by wooded homesites and will make someone a perfect site for that special new home.

$17,500 - SR 1725. You want acreage, eh? How does 5.1 acres sound...just about 5 minutes from town...quiet, yet on Eastern Pines water. Call us if you like it...we'd love to sell it to you!

$27,500 - GRIMESLAND - Nice houses in this price range are really scarce as the majority of you, our house-hunting public, know. Centrally located in town, this shingle-covered house contains 3 bedrooms (possibly 4 if you need them), den, entry hall, dining and living rooms, kitchen, ample closets, and a side porch. It has been well kept and has a modern kitchen. If you're looking for an INVESTMENT or a HOME, then this is the place for you!

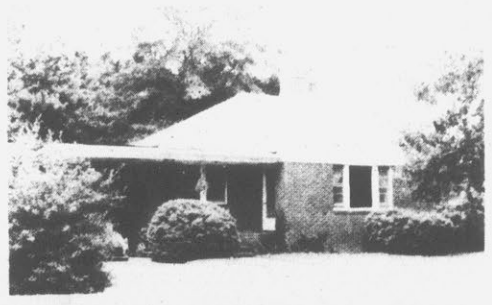
$40,000 - MEMORIAL DRIVE. Traditionally styled 2-bedroom home, Florida room, carpeted living and dining rooms, kitchen is nicely planned and has breakfast room; one bath. Ready to go. Jon Day, REALTOR.

$42,000 - ECU AREA. You'd think this house was small, but there are over 2,000 square feet tucked into its 2-story floor plan. With 4 bedrooms, 2 baths, large kitchen, formal dining and living rooms, family room, you'll be pleasantly surprised and eager to make this new listing yours.

SOLD

$43,900 - GRIFTON. Sitting on a lovely sloping and well-drained lot, this attractive home is presently undergoing reburbishing just for its new owner. New paint, new driveway to be installed, sewerage connection, and new interior paint job will make this 3 bedroom, 1½ bath home sing! Privacy! Quiet! A most comfortable floor plan! And only minutes from Greenville.

$45,000 - TWO LOTS FOR OFFICES, ZONED OI, 150 x 160 foot sizes; one on Commerce Street - the other, a couple of blocks away on Commerce and Clifton Streets. Excellent location for that new office you've been considering.



SOLD

$40,900 - BACK ON THE MARKET, in COLLEGE COURT, this handsome brick veneer ranch-style house will make someone a really pleasant and comfortable home. Living room has fireplace, separate dining room, sunny kitchen, 3 bedrooms, bath, utility area, and carport...pretty yard, too. Let us show you this home today for tomorrow may be too late.

$47,500 - MEMORIAL DRIVE. Have your business at home or make your home your business in this top-notch location. Over 2,000 feet of house already used as a business. Storage in carport/garage, too. Jon Day, REALTOR, has more information.

$51,900 - CAMBRIDGE. Maintained in excellent condition by its present owner, this most attractive "L"-shaped ranch must find another owner soon. You'll enjoy the convenient floorplan from its entry hall to its den with fireplace and deck; its 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, and the formal areas. Large deck to enjoy these lazy summer evenings, too. May we present this home to you for your inspection and delight?

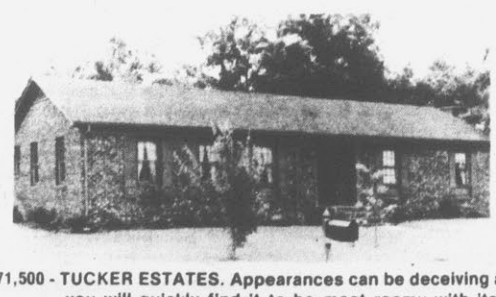
$52,500 - NEAR THE UNIVERSITY. Don't walk, RUN! To the nearest telephone, that is, to call us and let us know you want to see this cutie-pie. You'll be impresses with the decorator colors, its freshly painted interior, and the excellent location of this home. 3 bedrooms, 1½ baths, entry foyer, oak and pine flooring under ankle-deep cream-colored pile carpet; decorator shutters at most windows, and a pretty back yard with a spot for your pooch and a separate carport with storage.

$56,600 - FAIRLANE. The unusual appearance of this house will appeal to you for the house plan is neat, well planned, and has no wasted space. There's even a small basement, too, for that teen hideaway, hubby's hobbies, or that "never-never" catch-all space you've always dreamed of having. There are 4 bedrooms, 2 baths, double carport, roomy kitchen, and formal dining and living rooms. Pretty lot, too.

Aldridge and Southerland House SOLD Word! Aldridge and Southerland House SOLD Word!

$57,500 - 10TH STREET. Pooch-palace? Investors' consortium? Wheeler/Dealer Buggy Spot? Speculative Investment? Or just a really nice house to call your very own home? THIS IS YOUR PLACE. Zoning's HIGHWAY COMMERCIAL, though, so if you like the house, you might want to move it to another location and use the lot for something else. Think about it...then call us.

$69,500 - CAMELOT. Know that cute-looking farmhouse that is located on the corner that is so nicely landscaped and that has the split-rail fence around it? Well, its owners have reluctantly decided to sell. The house offers 3 pretty bedrooms, 2 baths, carpets and stained hardwood floors, a country kitchen, formal dining room, great room with cathedral and beamed ceilings and an arched fireplace, upstairs sun porch and a downstairs enclosed screened porch, too.



$71,500 - TUCKER ESTATES. Appearances can be deceiving as you will quickly find it to be most roomy with its 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, slate-covered entry hall, formal dining and living rooms, large breakfast room and kitchen, 20 x 14 den with fireplace and built-in desk and bookcases; utility area, and attic. There's a double carport, too, and a nicely landscpaed yard.

$59,900 - LAKE ELLSWORTH. Handsome, 2-story styling, most appealing interior which has been tastefully done in shades of creams, rusts, and burgundy. 3 bedrooms and 2 baths upstairs; entry foyer, formal living and dining rooms, nicely appointed kitchen with ample cabinetry and dishwasher and dinette nook, family room with fireplace and utility area downstairs. Covered walk to 2-car garage and extra storage.

$59,900 - GREENBRIAR. Four bedrooms, 2 baths, formal rooms, bricked patio, hardwood floors under wall-to-wall carpet; breakfast-kitchen with bar to family room; roomy family room; roomy family room; garage...large garden area. These are just a few of the items you'll like about this home. It a location that's close to almost everything and only a couple of minutes from the new shopping center.

$58,900 - JUST REDUCED. CHERRY OAKS. A "Summer Sales-Price Special" and just in time for you to take advantage of this lovely 3-bedroom home. Enclosed single garage, utility room, gracious-sized kitchen with "U"-shaped work area and dinette nook; family room with raised-hearth fireplace; dining-living room combined, formal entry hall. It's a lovely home and you'll find it ready just for you.

$59,900 - CHERRY OAKS. Located on a 115 x 175 lot, this attractive ranch-style home is sitting - patiently waiting for its new owners to fall in love with its 3 bedroom, 2-bath floorplan. Master bath is compartmented for privacy and has a large walk-in closet; there's a formal entry hall with formal dining and living rooms, family room with fireplace and cabinetry, large, airy kitchen with dinette nook, and a 2-car garage.

$64,900 - Contemporary-Traditional...blended into a meld that will spell Home, Sweet Home for your very own family. Living room has a traditional-styled bow-window; there's a really neat formal dining room that has a handsome contemporary light fixture to set the theme; the kitchen...OOOHHHHHH - the kitchen! It's a delight. Everything is just right for the man and/or woman who loves to cook! Counter-top stove and oven; beaucoups of cabinetry; disposal and dishwasher, pantry; breakfast nook overlooking the handsome wood deck. Step down into the sunken family room which offers a raised-hearth fireplace with a massive oak mantel. 3 bedrooms, upstairs, 2 full baths, private sun porch.

$68,500 - LAKE ELLSWORTH. Situated on a wooded lot, the trees offer shade to this handsome contemporary home. Heavily insulated, thermopane windows, wall-to-wall carpet, add up to $85 average monthly utility bills. 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, loft area, great room/dining room, entry hall; 2 attics in eaves for extra storage, and a handsome fireplace all combine to make this one enjoyable and most liveable home. Make it YOUR new home!

$69,900 - TUCKER ESTATES. An elegant home, just waiting for its first family to enjoy its bountiful pleasures. Entry hall to funnel traffic to the 3 main areas in the house - formal areas which contain living and diningrooms; family room which has fireplace and built-in bookshelves and the kitchen and breakfast room; and the bedrooms. There are 3 bedrooms - 2 of which have walk-in closets - and the washer-dryer facility, too. By appointment only.

$69,900 - WESTHAVEN III. Lovely to look at on the outside with its cedar siding and natural seeting; delightful interior will appeal to the designer in you with its 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths, formal entry hall, elegant living and dining rooms, family room with fireplace and built-ins, utility area, and a 14 x 14 wooden deck. For extra storage, there's a neat-looking building at the rear of the lot for the odds and ends that every family somehow collects. By appointment only.

$69,900 - TUCKER ESTATES. Presently under construction, this Williamsburg-styled home will offer your family 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, a keeping room with fireplace, formal dining room, kitchen with pantry and breakfast nook, sewing room or office which leads to back porch; and ample attic space.

$76,900 - GRIFTON. With a formal living and dining room, family room with full bath, walk-in closet, heatilator fireplace and built-in book cases, designer kitchen with custom cabinetry, study, quest bedroom and half bath and a gorgeous entry hall with angled stairway downstairs, you'll find a HUGE utility room upstairs which is big enough to encompass that pool table you've always wanted. 5 bedrooms, 2 large baths, and double closets in every bedroom, plus walk-upstairs to the floored, heavily-insulated attic. Nutone inter-com system throughout the house, zoned heating and cooling system; hardwood floors; double enclosed garage; deep-water well so you can water your yard at any time. A most handsome house that some lucky family will be ever so happy to call their home.

$83,500 - CLUB PINES. CONTEMPORARY. 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths, cedar siding, steel insulated doors, twin decks, 2-car garage, great room, formal dining room. Combination kitchen, on a wooded lot and waiting for a new owner. If you like contemporaries, you'll LOVE this one.

$92,500 - COUNTRY CLUB DRIVE. In one of Greenville's most prestigious locations, this home will offer much to the golfer, pool entrusiast, tennis fan, and Country Club member. There are four bedrooms, 2½ baths, carpeted entry, formal dining and living rooms, fireplace in living room, separate breakfast room, kitchen with eat-in area, carpeted den. This home has a new fiberglass roof and has newly painted trimwork, as well as a termite contract for extra protection to the dwelling. All in all, only a select few will find their requirements met in this particular home. Are you one of the few?

TV SHOWTIME

For Week Of August 5, - August 11, 1979

DOROTHY LOUDON stars as a lively music and drama teacher at an Eastern girls school, in the new summer comedy series, "Dorothy," to be broadcast on four consecutive Wednesdays, starting August 8 (8-8:30 p.m.) on CBS. Playing students are (l to r, background) Susan Brecht, Elissa Leeds and Michele Greene, and Linda Manz.

'Ducky' Nash Is Still Quacking!!

For 45 years Clarence "Ducky" Nash has been the widely recognized voice of Walt Disney's celebrated web-footed character, Donald Duck.

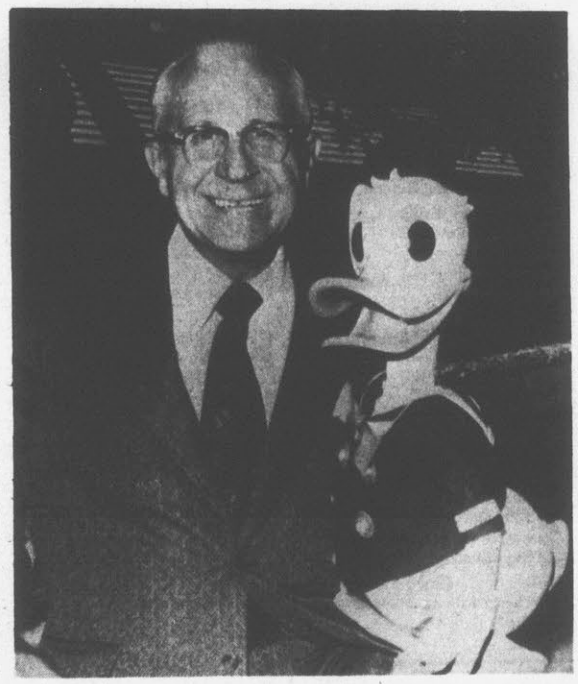
For those who haven't been introduced to the sailor-suited world famous bird, NBC-TV's "The Wonderful World of Disney" gladly does the honors when the irascible Donald and a gang of fun-loving bears drive Park Ranger J. Audubon Woodlore to distraction, in "The Ranger of Brownstone," Sunday, August 5 (7-8 p.m.).

How and when did the "Ducky" and Donald relationship hatch? It all began during Nash's young career as an entertainer filled with sounds of birds and beasts and scared urchins — entertaining grade school youngsters — when he heard that a movie cartoon maker named Walt Disney was in the market for some bird and animal recordings for his animations.

"I hustled over to Disney's studios and put on my repertoire of voices. I was winding up with an imitation of a frightened little girl reciting 'Mary Had a Little Lamb,' when Walt walked in," Nash recalls.

"That fellow sounds like a Duck. Let's keep him in mind if we ever create a duck character," he said.

"That was in 1934. Shortly thereafter Donald was created and he made his debut in Disney's Silly Symphony short, 'The Wise Little Hen.' Since then, he has appeared in numerous films and hundreds of cartoons with star billing."



"DUCKY" AND DONALD — For 45 years Clarence "Ducky" Nash has been the widely recognized voice of Walt Disney's irascible Donald Duck, the mischeivous bird who drives Park Ranger J. Audubon Woodlore to distraction, in "The Ranger of Brownstone" on NBC-TV's "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday, August 5 (7-8 p.m.).

It's obvious that Donald has been quite busy since he first stepped out, but in addition to his hectic film career, he has made and continues to make countless personal appearances — delighting the young and the young at heart — with Nash providing the introductions and comments in Donald's most identifiable characteristic — his loveable squawk.

Six classic Disney cartoons are included in "The Ranger of Brownstone," along with spectacular live-action wildlife footage. Park Ranger J. Audubon Woodlore serves as host tour guide in this hilarious animated romp through Brownstone National Park.

Woodlore warns the bears not to beg for food on the opening day of the park. Almost immediately, Humphrey the bear and visitor Donald Duck engage in a battle for possession of a picnic basket with which Donald taunts the exasperated bear.

Other sequences include Donald as an assistant ranger who must contend with a hibernating Humphrey in his bed; a group of bears cleaning up the park after the tourists leave; and Ranger Woodlore giving fishing tips.

Dorothy On 'Dorothy'

Singer-comedienne Dorothy Loudon brings a breath of Broadway magic to her starring role in "Dorothy," a summer comedy series premiering Wednesday, August 8 (8 to 8:30 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

"Although sometime I'm not so sure it's magic, but just hard work," says the red-haired, two-time Tony winner (for "Annie" and "Fig Leaves are Falling").

She plays a former showgirl, now divorced, who teaches music and drama at a prim Eastern school for girls. As might be expected, she takes a less-than-reverent approach toward her students and the staff.

"I built myself a whole background in addition to what the writers provided," says Miss Loudon. "It gives me a foundation so the audience won't wonder how come I can belt out a song, which I do in each show."

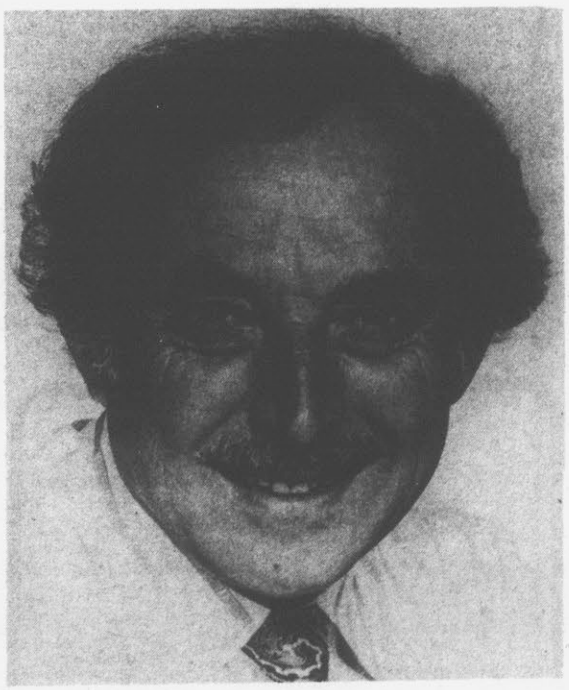
"I said I'm a former Rockette who also sings. I was married to a college professor who ran off with a student. When I couldn't get back into show business, I took the teaching job, and I'm understandably a bit shaky about it."

Loudon has done a lot of television, mostly game and variety shows, and she replaced Carol Burnett on "The Garry Moore Show." But she spent many years performing on stage and in nightclubs before being discovered again for television after her performance as the hard-hearted Miss Hannigan in "Annie."

"I like doing 'Dorothy' before an audience," she says. "It's like stage performances, except for having to do a whole new show every week. That's where the work comes in. There are so many choices to be made in performing, you always feel you need more time to make the right one."

A dedicated New Yorker, Dorothy Loudon says life in Hollywood can be lonely without a car. She misses her Central Park West apartment and handy public transportation ("I take the bus most of the time. You have to be interviewed by the driver if you want a cab").

She also admits to the unlikely pursuits, for a Broadway star, of loving to cook and sewing many of her own clothes. She says, "I'm never happier than rattling around with my pots and pans or running up a new dress on the sewing machine."



BILL MACY stars as the new president of a prestigious university, in "Hanging In," a new summer comedy to be presented on four Wednesdays, starting August 8 (8:30 to 9 p.m.) on CBS.

'Turned On' By Army

Actor Bill Macy admits to being 'turned on' to show business while he was serving in the United States Army Amphibious Engineers Corps. He was assigned to produce some PX shows and, from then on, he performed whenever and wherever possible.

When he was discharged from the Army in 1946, Bill says the next three years were spent "floundering, searching for myself." Finally he enrolled in a drama workshop. The first day, he asked his instructor, "What is acting?" and he was told that, after attending classes for six months, he would know. The instructor also told him that, after that same period of time, he would "either love it or hate it." Macy loved it, and has been actively involved in acting ever since.

Macy's latest venture into television is a starring role in a new half-hour summer comedy series "Hanging In," which will premiere Wednesday, August 8 (8:30 to 9 p.m.), on CBS-TV. Barbara Rhoades, Dennis Burkley and Nedra Volz also star.

Macy plays Louis Harper, a football hero-turned university president, who learns that the administrative obstacles in a college can be tougher than opposing tacklers on the gridiron. Maggie Gallager (Rhoades), Harper's Dean of Faculty, is an idealist whose high pressure style initially leads Harper to fire her from Braddock University. Sam Dickey (Burkely) is Director of Development and Braddock's slick-talking, fast-eating public relations man, and Nedra Volz is Pinky Nolan, Harper's wisecracking little dynamo housekeeper.

Noted for his community work helping the poor and underprivileged, Harper comes to Braddock University as the late president Hampton's successor with his own idea about running a university.

ORAL ROBERTS launches new television series "Teaching the Bible."

Roberts' New Thrust

Television evangelist Oral Roberts, who some have termed the "religious host with the most," has announced a new thrust for his ten-year-old weekly series. Roberts' program airs Sunday, and the 'new look' will be in evidence August 5.

"At the time we launched our new series in 1969," Roberts said, "we began utilizing all the show business appeal we could garner, and our production was as airworthy as any network program. At the time, this was an innovative move for a religious broadcaster, because most of us had a history of the conservative approach to media. There was sort of a general feeling that you couldn't appeal to the viewing public and be a Christian at the same time. But we felt it was the right time for us to make a move in that direction, because we felt if it worked for the networks, it could work for us, too.

"We realized that using entertainment techniques to present a religious message was a risky venture. But we realized, too, that if we succeeded, we had the potential of reaching millions of people with the message of God's love. Our growth these past ten years has shown us that it was the right move for the time. Since then many other television ministries have begun using our strategy, and there has been a great groundswell in religious broadcasting in this country.

"However, the Oral Roberts ministry has never been married to any method. Our message has never changed; only our methods have and will continue to, as we interpret God's direction for our work. At this time in our history, we feel a strong urging to lead people back to the teachings of the Bible, and we have a powerful vehicle available to us through our television ministry.

The Philippines' Plight

"Directions," the ABC News religious-cultural series, goes to the Philippines to tell the story of the impact of martial law on the poor and the struggle of the poor, together with church leaders, to fight for human rights.

The documentary report, "The Philippines: In the Matter of Human Rights," airs Sunday, August 5 (12:30 to 1 p.m.).

Correspondent John Martin talks with the Rev. James Reuter, S.J., an American who has worked in the Philippines for 40 years, and Trinidad Herrara, a woman from the slums of Manila who organized her neighbors to fight government efforts to oust them from their quarters in the port area. She is now underground after being imprisoned on subversion charges, tortured, released and charged again with subversion. Also interviewed is the wife of Benigno Aquino, a leader of the opposition to President Marcos. Aquino has been detained for more than five years at an Army base in Manila.

In his office, where he manages part of the Catholic communications network, Father Reuter comments: "Many people wonder about the Catholic Church in the Philippines, and they lift their eyebrows and say, 'Why are these churchmen dabbling in politics?'

Average Salary

"There are individual players who get more now than the total payroll when I started in the league in 1967," says Dick Wagner, President of the Cincinnati Reds. "Our player payroll is up four times what it was then," he continued. "I think you're talking an average salary this year of $125,000."

JAMES CAAN and Alan Arkin (r) have a frightened audience of one as they prepare for a spirited argument over the right way to pursue the bad guys in San Francisco in "Freebie and the Bean." to air as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" August 5 (9-11 p.m.)

'Freebie And The Bean'

Two San Francisco cops, played by James Caan and Alan Arkin, stake out a numbers racketeer and become involved in a relentless progression of violent shootouts, chases and pile-ups in "Freebie and the Bean." The film will be rebroadcast as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," August 5 (9 to 11 p.m.). Co-starring are Loretta Swit, Jack Kruschen, Mike Kellin, Alex Rocco and Valerie Harper.

Serving as the core of the slam-bang action is a storyline centering around our heroes' stakeout of a big numbers racketeer, played by Kruschen. When they sift some incriminating evidence out of his garbage (which was planted by his wife (Swit), so she could run away with a cop while her hubby went to jail), they're ready to nail him but can't until an eye-witness is found for the Grand Jury. Learning that a contract has been put on the racketeer's life and that the hit man is expected to arrive from Detroit, the pair of plainclothesmen suddenly find themselves playing bodyguard to protect their own investment.

Predictably, their enthusiasm knows no bounds. When they spot a Cadillac with Detroit license plates, they viciously attack the owners, who turn out to be an innocent Cadillac salesman and his wife. And everytime they have to give vehicular pursuit (inevitably through thick traffic or streets filled with scores of pedestrians), the results are innumerable smashed up cars, broken bones for innocent bystanders and stray bullets.

Caan, as the hip, social climbing cop and Arkin, as his more sensitive but no less violence-prone Mexican-American partner, work well off one another, spending as much time spatting between themselves as with the criminal population.

Valerie Harper is perfection as Arkin's sprightly Mexican-born wife and provides the film's funniest — and most human — moments as she patiently counters every bit of her husband's 'evidence' of her infidelity with the most incredible but logical explanations imaginable.

Just Like Old Times!!

The way gregarious Alan Hale, Jr. figures it, if "The Fugitive" finally found his elusive one-armed man, it only makes sense that, the hapless castaways of the popular — but unresolved — "Gilligan's Island" TV series find a way off their "unchartered desert isle" after waiting 14 years. Hale, who co-starred as the eternally-flabbergasted Skipper, finally returns to civilization with Bob Denver (Gilligan) and four other original cast members from the 1964-66 comedy series in "Rescue from Gilligan's Island." The feature will air on NBC-TV's "Big Event" Sunday, August 5 (8 to 10 p.m.). "Everywhere, we were asked the same question — 'When are you going to get off the island?'" said Hale. "It's nice to pick up where we left off. It's as though we worked last week and not 14 years ago.

'Razzmatazz' Rebroadcasts

A look at Direction Sports, an unusual athletic program that uses sports to turn on inner-city kids to learning — and so change the direction of their lives — is the lead story on "Razzmatazz," to be rebroadcast Tuesday, August 7 (4 to 4:30 p.m.).

Now in its tenth year, Direction Sports is flourishing in 14 cities. During the segment, basketball playoffs and the championship tournament in two of these — Chicago and Los Angeles — will be shown.

Host Brian Tochi learns about the program's unusual teaching methods: Before every practice, the players must study sports-oriented reading, math, and history lessons. Then, in pre-game quizzes and in questions from the referee during the game, each player — girl or boy — has a chance to add points to the team's score by answering an academic question correctly. With this system, even the youngster who isn't a good athlete can be extremely valuable to the team.

Teaching math with football, grammar with basketball, or history with baseball, has shown thousands of inner-city teenagers that learning can be fun and that it pays off — immediately.

In its next feature, "Razzmatazz" visits the Moffitt family, who live on Liberty Island, home of the Statue of Liberty. Robert Moffitt, a member of the National Park Service and Superintendent of this national monument, and his family moved to the island over a year ago.

Living next to the Statue of Liberty, with skyscrapers like the World Trade Center and the Empire State Building always in view, could be an overwhelming experience. But the Moffitt children, Michael, John and Andrea, have grown accustomed to their unusual surroundings — playing in the Statue after tourists leave and using the many walks for their skateboards.

On this month's science segment, Tochi helps "Mr. Wizard" (Don Herbert) demonstrate what optical illusions are. Using playing cards and other objects, he clarifies illusions and explains why they have fascinated and puzzled people since the days of the Greeks.

In the final story, Tochi attends a championship Moto-Cross race at Raceway Park, Englishtown, N. J. The Moto-Cross, designed for off-road use becaue of its oversized tires, is fast becoming one of America's favorite motorcycles.

During the segment, Jank Knabe, an 18-year-old in the "Expert Class," describes his feelings about Moto-Cross to Tochi as they "walk the course" before the "Forsgate" championship race.

BRIAN TOCHI, host of "Razzmatazz," learns about an unusual inner-city sports/study program on this month's edition of the CBS News Magazine series for young people, airing Tuesday, August 7 (4 to 4:30 p.m.).

Exciting New Characters Join Cast

A conniving widow named Lee Carmichael and a business tycoon, Alex Marshall, whose arrival on the scene creates considerable turmoil, are the newest characters in NBC-TV's daytime drama, "Days of Our Lives."

Actress-dancer-linguist Brenda Benet portrays Lee, who also happens to be the sister-in-law of Doug, played by Bill Hayes, and Quinn Redecker has been cast as Marshall.

Redecker is a native of Woodstock, Ill., but grew up in Seattle, Wash., where he attended high school. He was also a student at the University of Washington and Santa Monica (Calif.) City College. He served in the United States Air Force.

He has appeared in 15 feature films, including "The Candidate" and "The Electric Horseman," and has had more than 125 TV roles in such series as "The Rockford Files," "Starsky and Hutch," "Barnaby Jones" and "The Six Million Dollar Man." From January to June of this year, he was featured in another daytime drama, "The Young and the Restless."

Benet was born in Hollywood, Calif. While studying with the San Francisco Ballet Company, she learned enough Spanish, Italian, French and Greek to achieve fluency in those languages. She plays piano, flute and violin.

Like Redecker, Benet has guest-starred in several TV series — "The F.B.I.," "The Courtship of Eddie's Father," "Mannix," "It Takes a Thief," "Search," "Hogan's Heroes," "Fantasy Island," "I Dream of Jeannie," "The High Chapparal," "My Three Sons" and "Carter Country."

She has had roles in such movies as "Walking Tall," "Call Me Lee, Call Me Ellen," "A Track of Thunder," "A Global Affair" and "Harum Scarum."

Detective — Again

It was typecasting for James Gregory, starring as Nick Hannigan in the limited-run comedy series, "Detective School — One Flight Up." In "Barney Miller," Greg portrays Inspector Luger, and as Nick Hannigan, he is the proprietor of a detective school who is a private investigator and who teaches an odd assortment of student sleuths the tricks of the trade.

The Teen Scene

"ANGIE" co-star ROBERT HAYS has the series' producers biting their nails because he has just gotten his pilot's license. They are worried that something might happen to Bob, but so far their pleas have gone unheeded.

Talented GILDA RADNER has turned down ROBIN WILLIAMS' offer to play Olive Oyl to his Popeye in an upcoming film on the cartoon character, because she didn't want to leave "SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE." "The show's been too good to me, and I feel I should stay," she says. Not so for JOHN BELUSHI, who is reportedly leaving the show this fall.

The last person the FLORIDA SYMPHONY expected to attend their recent auction was pop star ANDY GIBB. But Andy attended — and wound up being their most generous supporter. He left with a lion cub he paid $5,000 for, a two-year-old racehorse that cost $20,000 and two tickets for a balloon ride ($500)!

Teen idol SHAUN CASSIDY and his long-time girl friend ANN PENNINGTON have finally called it quits and aren't even speaking anymore. It seems Shaun didn't want Ann to continue going to parties without him . . . but she went, anyway!

Recording star MICHAEL JACKSON bought himself a $3,000 sound system for his Rolls Royce, then turned around and gifted his Dad, JOE, with an identical stereo system and Rolls.

LARRY WILCOX and ERIK ESTRADA are filming a segment of "CHiPs" that's in line with the roller-mania that's sweeping the country. The episode deals with JON and PONCH pursuing roller-skating muggers in a seaside community. Former U.S. Roller Skating Champion, JERRY NISTA, has been retained to supervise all skating sequences and will choreograph an elaborate roller disco number which Erik will perform.

JOHN STRIDE and Claire Bloom portray King Henry VIII and his first wife Queen Katharine in Shakespeare's pageant play, HENRY VIII, one of the highlights of Season One of THE SHAKESPEARE PLAYS, returning to television Thursday, August 9 at 9 p.m. to 12 midnight as part of a special three-night "Shakespeare Festival" on PBS-TV.

A Shakespeare Festival

William Shakespeare's delightful comedy, "As You Like It," will be rebroadcast Tuesday, August 7 (9 p.m.), on PBS, as the first presentation in a three-play Summer-Mini-Shakespeare festival. "Measure for Measure" follows Wednesday, August 8, and "Henry VIII" is the final presentation Thursday, August 9.

Videotaped entirely on location in and around Glamis Castle, Scotland, this Shakespearean fairy-tale about love in the enchanted Forest of Arden stars Helen Mirren as Rosalind, Brian Stirner as the love-smitten Orlando, Richard Pasco as the world-weary Jaques, Angharad Rees as Rosalind's best friend Celia, and James Bolam as Touchstone the clown. The play is widely accepted as one of Shakespeare's most poetically perfect comedies, and Clifford A. Ridley of the Detroit News said of this production: "...it is a sun-dappled, impressionistic production, a feast for the eyes, the intellect and the heart. Especially the heart."

"Measure for Measure," Shakespeare's dark parable of lust and injustice, posing modern questions about governmental involvement in public mores, stars Kate Nelligan, Tim Pigott-Smith, John McEnery and Kenneth Colley.

The setting for the play is Vienna, a Renaissance Vienna, steeped in corruption. Its ruler, in an effort to re-enforce the laws governing morality — laws ignored by the citizenry at large — appoints an upright young man to rule temporarily in his place. The new administrator's first act is to sentence a young man to death under an old law forbidding premarital sex. The young man's sister, a novice in training for religious orders, goes to plead for her brother's life — but power has corrupted his judge. The cost of her brother's life, the young girl learns, is to yield her virginity to the man who has condemned her brother.

"Henry VIII," starring John Stride as King Henry, Claire Bloom as Queen Katharine, Timothy West as Cardinal Wolsey and Ronald Pickup as Cranmer, was taped on location at three of England's most beautiful castles. It is in all probability Shakespeare's last play and one of his most spectacular.

Cecil Smith of the Los Angeles Times said of the production: "Producer Messina has done splendidly by 'Henry VIII' . . . it's a fine, lusty production, directed by Kevin Billington with style"

Michele Will Tell

Q: What has happened to "B.J. and the Bear"? B.H., SPARTANBURG, S.C.

A: During the 're-run season,' series are frequently pre-empted, and such is the case with 'B.J.' It will be back on a regular basis in the Fall with new episodes depicting the hilarious wanderings of the delightful twosome.

Q: I would like some information about the actress Diane Keaton. Also, where do I write to her? P. EDWARDS, MOUNT AIRY, N.C.

A: The 33-year old native Californian won an Academy Award as Best Actress for her sterling performance in the 1977 film titled "Annie Hall." Although she has never been married, she's had three torrid affairs with dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov, Woody Allen, and Warren Beatty. Write to her c/o CMA, 8899 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90048.

Q: Who was the tallest — James Arness or the late John Wayne? J. MIDKIFF, MOUNT AIRY, N.C.

A: Arness, who is 6'6" tall.

Q: How old is Philip McKeon, who plays Tommy in "Alice," and where is he from? Also what is his address? R. STRANGE, SPARTANBURG, S.C.

A: Philip, who will be 15 years old Nov. 11, was born in New York, but now lives in Burbank (Calif.), where his father owns a travel agency. Among his many interests are playing the guitar and participating in a wide range of active sports, from judo — in which he holds a yellow belt — to swimming, hockey, baseball and tennis. Philip is also active in charitable organizations and volunteer work, frequently singing at hospitals and convalescent homes around Los Angeles. Write to him c/o CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90036.

Q: I know that Walter Brennan played the lead in "Guns of Will Sonnett," but who played his son and grandson in the series? R. GREGG, GREENVILLE, N.C.

A: Dack Rambo played Will's grandson, Jeff, and Jason Evers was seen fleetingly as James Sonnett in a few episodes. Will and Jeff never did catch up with James — although in the series' last episode they met the man who claimed to have killed him.

Teens' Drama

Valerie Bertinelli and Timothy Hutton star as teen-agers of disparate backgrounds who experience their first romance in "A Girl and a Boy: The First Time."

Fionnuala Flanagan, Leslie Ackerman and Arlen Dean Snyder also star.

In the drama, a girl from a permissive California background and a boy from a conservative midwestern family enter the bewildering world that looms as the threshhold of adulthood and attempt to understand how they and their families fit into it.

Bertinelli, popular star of "One Day at a Time," also had a starring role as Mamie Dickens, teen-age daughter of Charles Dickens, in "The Secret of Charles Dickens," presented on television, and guest-starred in segments of "Hardy Boys/Nancy Drew."

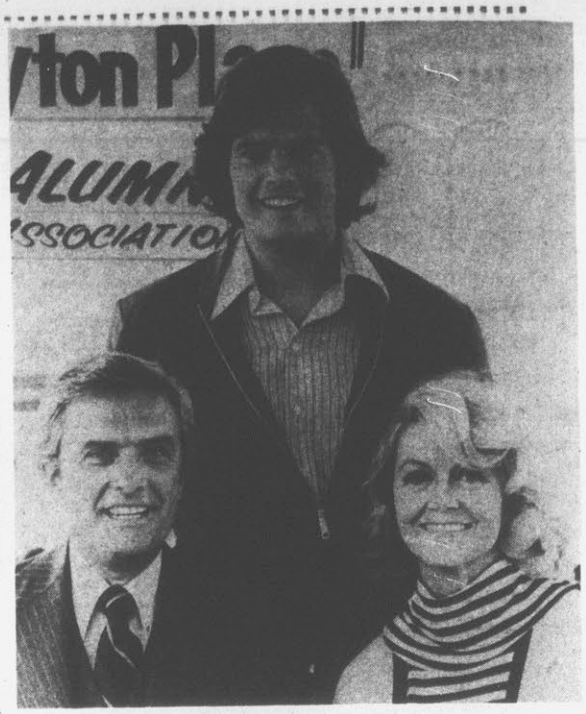
In an effort to establish television viewers' patterns before the upcoming season actually begins, ABC will present encore telecasts of "Mork & Mindy," "Laverne & Shirley" and "Fantasy Island" during the month of August. The prime time hit series will air in the time periods they will occupy during the 1979-80 season.

"Mork & Mindy," last year's smash new comedy success, will be seen Sundays (8 to 8:30 p.m.), beginning August 12. The series stars Robin Williams and Pam Dawber.

"Laverne & Shirley," which will be seen Thursdays (8 to 8:30 p.m.), beginning August 9, was the nation's number one program for the past two years.

Anson Has 'Heart'

Anson Williams of "Happy Days" and Ron Rose have written and recorded the theme song for the American Heart Association's 1980 campaign, and it is titled "Give a Little Bit of Yourself."



PEYTON PLACE HOMECOMING — Chris Nelson (c) is shown here with Dorothy Malone, and his father Ed Nelson, original members of the cast of the long-running primetime TV series "Peyton Place," who also star in "Murder In Peyton Place," to be rebroadcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" August 6 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Chris Returned As An Actor

As a youngster, Chris Nelson often visited the set of "Peyton Place." And he watched it faithfully on television once he was permitted to stay up late.

Then, 13 years later, he costarred with his father, Ed Nelson, in "Murder In Peyton Place," to be rebroadcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" August 6 (9 to 11 p.m.). Other original members of the cast of the long-running prime time TV serial who also star in the drama are Dorothy Malone, Christopher Connelly and Tim O'Connor.

Chris portrays Andy Considine, the 16-year-old slightly disturbed son of the new administrative director of the Peyton Place hospital, in the suspense drama which focuses on the slayings of Rodney Harrington and Allison MacKenzie as part of a diabolical plot to destroy the small community.

"This was just like a homecoming to me, even though I wasn't involved in the series," said Nelson. 'It really resembled old home week because I knew everyone well, and they always treated me well.

"Watching the series was more than just watching a show. It was like watching friends."

Nelson credits the series cast somewhat for the direction that his life has taken. He decided on an acting career as a result of the comradery he witnessed among them.

"Although I always loved films, I never had any desire to be in them," he explained, "but it was inspiring to see all these people getting together to do something so creative.

"So I started going on interviews for acting jobs, began to get serious about it and decided to study drama and make a career out of it.

"My father was mostly surprised about my decision," he added, "but he has been 100 percent supportive. He has been helpful, suggestive and understanding."

Cowboy Faces Challenge

Lee Marvin stars as a tough, brawling cowboy who finds that his greatest challenge in life is to adapt to the life style of a tamer West, in "Monte Walsh," NBC-TV's "Big Event," airing Tuesday, August 7 (9-11 p.m.). Jeanne Moreau and Jack Palance also star.

Marvin portrays the title character, Monte Walsh, who has been successful in surviving the early lawless era but in his own view, has outlived his time and can only survive further by a certain strength of style. The open prairies that he and his comrades have roamed for years are now being cordoned off by the barbed wire of absentee landlords.

As Walsh continues his friendship with a barroom girl, Martine (Moreau), he observes with interest how the New West affects his former associates. One friend, Chet (Palance), settles down with a widow who owns a hardware store; Fightin' Joe Hooker (Jack McLiam), a Civil War veteran, ultimately commits suicide by riding his horse down the wall of a canyon; several others refuse to give up the past and continue in their outlaw ways.

Determined to maintain his self-identify, Walsh enters a period of re-adjustment.

LIVING WITH CHANGE — An aging gunfighter (Lee Marvin) and a dance hall lady (Jeanne Moreau) try to adjust to tamer times after surviving the less civilized days in the old west in "Monte Walsh," on NBC-TV's "The Big Event," Tuesday, August 7 (9-11 p.m.).

Plight Of The Patients

The plight of mental patients who are fit for discharge but find themselves thrust into communities that are unprepared to treat and accept them, is examined on CBS Reports: "Any Place But Here," to be rebroadcast Tuesday, August 7 (8 to 9 p.m.).

The program examines the current dilemma of health treatment in this country: with the advent of stabilizing drugs, mental institutions across the country are emptying their wards, but unless the patients have homes to return they are being released into communities which do not have the facilities to help them return to useful lives.

The focus is on a group of patients at Creedmoor Psychiatric Center in Queens, N.Y. where the hospital's goal is to empty itself, and where the patient population has dropped from 8,000 to 1,800 in the past 20 years, and on Far Rockaway in the same borough, where some 2,000 former patients are housed in residential hotels with virtually no support, treatment or rehabilitation facilities.

Three patients, Harvey, Elaine and Eddie, are followed as they travel separate routes seeking their release from the hospital. And this intimate look at life inside Creedmoor reveals the dissatisfaction of patients, staff and relatives with myriad problems of budgets, paperwork and bureaucracy.

A recent study indicated that some 15 percent of the American public is in need of menal health care. On the other hand, during the Kennedy Administration it was established that long-term hospitalizatin often causes more harm than good. The end result was a two-thirds reduction in patient population nationwide. But because of a pattern of insufficient support and care in the community, there was a sharp rise in short-term admissions. Also, many alternative programs envisioned never materialized. Eddie is an example. "The fact is," he says, "I have no place to go."

Hartley In Special

Mariette Hartley will star in "The Halloween That Almost Wasn't," a half-hour comedy special slated to air on ABC-TV.

The program will be filmed in Tarrytown, N.Y.

Series Is Soaring

"Buck Rogers in the 25th Century," NBC-TV's new series starring Gil Gerard as the legendary space hero, has soared into production.

Also starring in the series are Jaunin Clay, as Col. Wilma Seering, commander of Earth defenses; and Tim O'Connor, as Dr. Huer, Earth's most brilliant scientist and friend and confidant of Buck Rogers.

SUSAN BLAKELY stars as Al Capone's girlfriend, in "Capone," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," August 7 (9-11 p.m.).

Capone's Rise And Fall

The rise of Al Capone from a street punk to gang king and his fall through betrayal is recounted in "Capone," a stylized crime drama, to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies" August 7 (9-11 p.m.).

Capone, played by Ben Gazzara, is one of many tough Brooklyn street kids when a local New York hood (John Cassavetes) first notes his potential. He soon shows he has the necessary ruthlessness, but his big chance comes when he recognizes that a gangland big shot, Johnny Torrio (Harry Guardino) is ripe for elimination. Capone betrays Torrio and finds himself on the top of the heap.

Heading the crime operations in Chicago, however, means watching out for deadly rivals. Yet, there is time for fun with a spoiled flapper (Susan Blakely) who comes his way. But outsiders are not Capone's only worry. Within his organization are ambitious underlings, like Frank Nitti (Sylvester Stallone), eager to take over control.

Gazzara impersonates Capone with a breezy, believable performance, harshly spewing out the script's heavy dosage of crude epithets, while chomping on a cigar. Susan Blakely's hip-swiveling portrayal of Iris seems almost second nature, and Harry Guardino makes an effective contribution as his overly-cautious partner.

'Topper' Is Retold

Kate Jackson and Andrew Stevens have begun production on their "Topper" movie, a contemporary retelling of the 1937 film classic, for airing on ABC-TV during the upcoming season.

Jackson and Stevens star as Marion and George Kerby, rich sophisticates who are killed in a car accident and, at the pearly gates, discover they just haven't performed enough good deeds to get in. As a result, the Kerbys have to return to earth as ghosts.

An American TV Debut

Academy Award-winning actress Vanessa Redgrave will make her American television debut in "Playing for Time," a three-hour dramatic special written by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Arthur Miller about the experiences of an all-woman orchestra in a Nazi concentration camp. The true-life drama, to be directed by Tony Richardson, is scheduled to go into production this fall for broadcast on CBS during the 1979-80 season.

Redgrave will star as Fania Fenelon, whose memoir, "Playing for Time," was the basis for Miller's screenplay. The special tells the story of Fenelon, who was a member of a unique orchestra comprised of inmates in the Auschwitz complex during World War II. One of the few survivors of the orchestra, Fenelon went on to chronicle her experiences with unnerving clarity and an astonishing ability to find humor where only despair should prevail.

The members of the orchestra had musical ability ranging from the professional to the barely proficient. But they clung together in their insecure, but nonetheless special, status, creating beautiful, heartfelt music to suit the whims of the leaders of the camp. They performed in the midst of the concentration camp horrors, death and human degradation, thereby providing for the world a compelling testimony to survival and life.

Redgrave won an Academy Award for her role in the motion picture "Julia." Among her other motion picture credits are "Camelot," "A Man for All Seasons," "Murder on the Orient Express," "The Seven-Percent Solution" and the title role in "Agatha." She is an accomplished stage actress as well, having starred in "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie," "The Twelfth Night," "As You Like It," "The Seagull," "Design for Living" and "Anthony and Cleopatra."

Playwright Arthur Miller won a Pulitzer Prize for "Death of a Salesman."

Western Adventures On ABC

A lonely young woman in the Old West — sold to her aged husband for $100 — takes flight with a gentle half-breed Indian outlaw and his partner in "The lady and the Outlaw," a western adventure airing as ABC-TV's "Tuesday Movie of the Week" August 7 (11:30 p.m.).

Desi Arnaz, Jr., Gregory Peck and Sian Barbara Allen star in the drama of a young half-breed who turns to bank robbery after he is rejected by both Indians and settlers alike. "The Lady and the Outlaw" (released theatrically as "Billy Two Hats") was the first American western to be filmed entirely on location in Israel.

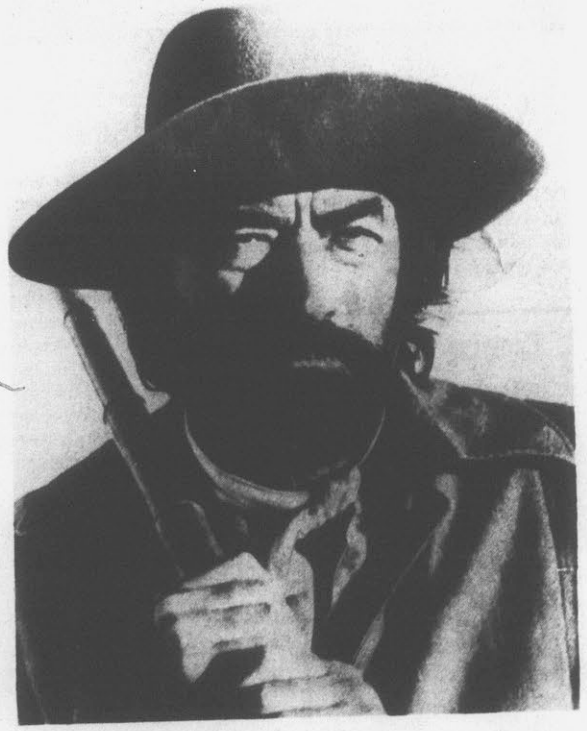
Alone in a friendless world because of his mixed parentage, Billy Two Hats (Arnaz) joins forces with Deans (Peck), a grizzled outlaw who dreams of returning to his native Scotland. After robbing a bank, they are pursued by a racist sheriff (Jack Warden), who takes Billy prisoner. Deans rescues his young partner — breaking his own leg in the process — and the two take refuge with a homesteader (John Pearce) and his slavelike young wife, Esther(Sian Barbara Allen).

The homesteader — for a price — takes Deans to a doctor, leaving the two young people — both outcasts in a hostile world — alone to discover each other.

The relentless sheriff, infuriated by Esther's love for the half-breed, takes the two of them prisoner, forcing them to ride with him as he goes in pursuit of Deans with murder in his mind.

The focus of the film is really on the characters and interaction of the two main protagonists — portrayed by Peck and Arnaz. This turns out to be somewhere between big-brotherly and paternal, with Peck dispensing vibrant quotes from Ecclasiastes along with twinkling-eyed wisdom on the ways of wily men. Their mutual warmth and steadfast respect is contrasted by Warden's obdurate bigotry.

Brian West's photography makes beautiful use of the Israeli locations which, despite a lack of sagebrush, provide an effective backdrop for the events at hand. Particularly stunning are a series of breath-taking sunrises and sunsets which lend the film considerable color and atmosphere.



GREGORY PECK is an aging Scottish outlaw on the run, weighed down by the company of a young half-breed Indian and his woman, in "The Lady and the Outlaw" to air as the "Tuesday Movie of the Week," Aug. 7 at 11:30 p.m.

James Caan Stars As Killer

James Caan stars as a secret agent who becomes the victim of underhanded tricks and deceits from within his own organization in "The Killer Elite." Also starring in the drama, which will encore as "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie" August 8 (9-11 p.m.), are Robert Duvall, Arthur Hill and Gig Young.

The film is an action-thriller and, after a few scenes, the focus is on several men at work planting bombs and explosives at an unspecified site, while on the soundtrack the voices and sounds of children at play are heard. One man, played by Caan, is the number one agent of a private intelligence organization that protects very important clients. Suddenly, for no apparent reason, Caan's buddy and fellow agent (Duvall) puts him out of commission by plugging his arm and leg with bullets.

For a while, Caan is out of work, rejected unsympathetically by organization heads Gig Young and Arthur Hill who dismiss him as a cripple, while Duvall reappears, secretly employed by Hill and assigned to assassinate an anti-communist activist. At this point, Caan's former employers make him an offer he can't refuse: a chance to work again, protecting the Asian leader, and to confront Duvall. He succeeds against seemingly insurmountable odds, including a veritable army of deadly martial artists, in doing both.

In the film's portrayal of a world inhabited by ruthless, power-hungry individuals, there are several outstanding action scenes. A shootout between Caan and his men on a crowded Chinatown street while Duvall and his back-up men are positioned on a rooftop is particularly well handled. Surpassing the fireplay in intensity is the concentration on various forms of martial arts in a string of sequences which should have special appeal to staunch karate fans.

"The Killer Elite" is an extremely handsome film, with the cinematography keeping everything razor sharp and providing some attractive San Francisco backgrounds.

JAMES CAAN stars as a paid assassin and Tiana plays the daughter of a Taiwanese client whose skill in the martial arts helps him ward off a band of international terrorists, in "The Killer Elite," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies." August 8 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Anyone Named Nielsen?

When "Real People," NBC-TV's fun-filled paean to American eccentricities, returns for the fall season, it will include four new regular segments.

One will be a search for television viewers named Nielsen. "We're going to do our own 'Nielsen' TV survey," says the show's producer, George Schlatter. "We'll find out what they like and don't like about television. These are not any of the people who might be involved in the authentic Nielsen survey, just average folks. And we'll have some fun with it, too. We already have one Nielsen family in Arkansas. They have no TV set."

Another new feature will be a search for guest hosts for "The Tonight Show." We're looking for people who think they could be guest hosts, who think they're funny and who really think they could do the job. But this is our search, not 'The Tonight Show's.'"

Other new segments will be on people who have been cheated and people who have unusual pets, like the one who has a pet pelican.

VICTIM OF TERROR — Lauren Hutton stars as a television news director, who becomes the target of a terror campaign in "Someone Is Watching Me" on "NBC Movie of the Week," Wednesday, Aug. 8 (9-11 p.m.).

Terror Campaign

"Someone Is Watching Me," a suspense thriller, stars top fashion model and motion picture actress Lauren Hutton as a television news director who becomes the target of a terror campaign by an unknown man in a neighboring apartment. The drama will be rebroadcast as the "NBC Movie of the Week" Wednesday, August 8 (9-11 p.m.).

David Birney and Adrienne Barbeau also star.

Career woman Leigh Michaels (Hutton) is paralyzed with terror soon after moving into a high-rise apartment building when she begins receiving unusual phone calls, letters and gifts from a mysterious tormentor who knows her every move.

Unable to get any protection from the police, Michaels turns to her college professor boyfriend, Paul (Birney), and a television production assistant, Sophie (Barbeau), for help in establishing the identity of her tormentor.

NEWSCASTER CLETE ROBERTS (l), playing himself, interviews William Christopher, as Father Mulcahy, in "M*A*S*H," the "CBS Late Movie," Thursday, August 9 at 11:30 p.m.

Bette Davis Stars

Bette Davis has been signed to star in "White Mama," a television movie about the relationship between a penniless widow and a black youngster.

Davis will portray a woman whose happy and sheltered life has been shattered by the death of her husband. In order to earn money to survive, she takes in a street-wise 15-year-old as a foster child.

One of the most respected and enduring stars in motion picture history, Davis has received 10 Academy Award nominations for Best Actress, and has won the Award twice, for "Dangerous," in 1936, and "Jezebel," in 1938.

Newscaster In A Time Warp

"I had the strangest feeling," said newscaster Clete Roberts. "It was like a time warp. There I was, interviewing men in uniform, and suddenly 25 years rolled back and I was in Korea covering the war again."

Veteran reporter Roberts, who saw combat news action during World War II and in Korea, had that flashback experience while interviewing members of the 4077th Hospital unit for a special one-hour, retrospective episode of "M*A*S*H," which will be rebroadcast as "The CBS Late Movie" Thursday, August 9 (11:30 p.m.).

The documentary-type show, in which Roberts talks to Hawkeye (Alan Alda) and his fellow medics about their reactions to the insanity raging around them, repeats the interview techniques used three years ago in another "M*A*S*H" episode to update the progress of the war.

Again, the interviews are filmed in black-and-white, with the addition of film clips of especially dramatic or humorous moments involving the departed Col. Henry Blake (McLean Stevenson), Trapper John (Wayne Rogers) and Frank Burns (Larry Linville) and of topical news clips of General MacArthur and President Truman, among others.

Roberts, who was a war correspondent assigned to MacArthur's World War II Southwest Pacific area headquarters, has reached the far corners of the world in 50 years of news reporting. He said the deja vu experience doing "M*A*S*H" was positively eerie.

"As I was doing the interviews, it all became very real to me, and I slipped into the environment. The questions I asked on the show are remarkably similar to ones I asked during my assignment in Korea."

His coverage of the Korean War spanned virually the entire conflagration, from his initial wintry visit to the front in November, 1950, to the Panmunjon peace talks concluded successfully on July 27, 1953, with the signing of the "Terms of Reference of Prisoner of War Agreement."

Roberts has some vivid recollections of those times — the severe winter chill that penetrated even the heaviest clothing, the rancid smell of Korean pickled cabbage called "kim chee" that permeated every hut, and the unpleasant memory of the bitter battle of Heartbreak Ridge in the Kumwhat Valley, which was eventually won by U.S. forces.

Cat-And-Mouse Game

Kate Columbo thinks she overhears a prominent attorney plotting to kill his wife in "Word Games," a special two-hour episode of NBC-TV's "Mrs. Columbo," to be rebroadcast Thursday, August 9 (9 p.m.). Kate Mulgrew stars in the title role and Robert Culp, Edie Adams, Frederic Forrest and Rene Auberjonois guest-star. Henry Jones and Lili Haydn co-star.

The installation of an intercom system in the Columbo household leads to terrifying complications when a wiring mix-up allows Mrs. Columbo to sometimes overhear conversatons from another intercom somewhere in the neighborhood. What she hears is attorney Charles Huston (Culp) and contract killer Martin Bader (Forrest) conspiring to do away with Huston's overweight wife, Joanne (Adams).

When the woman is found electrocuted in her bathtub, the police quickly dismiss it as an accident. Mrs. Columbo, however, knows differently. But the police reject her far-fetched murder theory when no evidence can be found that the Huston home ever had an intercom.

In the chilling conclusion, Mrs. Columbo — fearing her daughter has been kidnapped by the cold-blooded Martin — plays the final hand in what has become a deadly game of cat and mouse between her and the killer.

Exciting Opening

The opening scene of "The Last Raid of the Dalton Gang," a three-hour movie for NBC-TV now in production, is being filmed in front of the Brown Derby — in 1937 — with "CHiPs" Larry Wilcox made up to play a 62-year-old Emmet Dalton.

Faces A Weighty Decisions

Twenty-year-old Steve Guttenberg, who starred in last season's "Billy" series on CBS-TV and also had starring roles in two movies, is facing a weighty decision.

Should he continue acting? Should he become a producer — something he can do by merely picking up his option with 20th Century-Fox — or should he attend U.C.L.A. Medical School, which has already accepted him?

Steve was a student at Cornell when he was offered the role in "Billy," and he immediately wrote to U.C.L.A., asking to be accepted as a transfer student.

"They were reluctant at first, but my grades were good, although later I discovered my grades were the only consideration," he says.

While attending U.C.L.A., Steve appeared in "Players," the film starring Ali MacGraw, but when he started filming "The Boys From Brazil" in London, he was assigned a tutor from Cambridge.

"Here I was, working on a film, and I had to study for exams," he recalled. "These are finals, and it was arranged for me to take the exams by teletype. Then the questions came in over the wire and I wired back the answers with the tutor monitoring the whole procedure."

How did Steve Guttenberg become an actor? Very simple.

"I was working as a messenger boy in New York one summer. I was supposed to deliver some pictures of actors to a casting agent. I opened the envelope, saw what the material looked like and had a photo taken of myself. The next time I delivered an envelope, I slipped mine in as well."

STEVE GUTTENBERG

Today Steve has no problem getting photos to casting agents, or producers for that matter. Studio gates are wide open to the talented young man, and he has already submitted eight ideas for 20th Century-Fox's consideration.

But there's still that weighty decision to be made. And it's not an easy one. As Steve explains, "It would be really difficult to take an anatomy exam on a teletype machine."

RAQUEL WELCH and Harvey Keitel star in "Mother, Jugs & Speed," a modern comedy to air as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," August 10 (9-11 p.m.).

Wacky Wheeler-Dealers

Bill Cosby is "Mother," who just loves to drive, Raquel Welch is "Jugs," who loves to live and longs to drive and Harvey Keitel is "Speed," ready to drive and love at the same time — swiftly and with great skill — in the wildest comedy on wheels, "Mother, Jugs & Speed." It will air as "The ABC Friday Night Movie" August 10 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Mother and Speed are ambulance drivers who work for a private firm that has to hustle its tailpipes in the fierce competition for the fees the city pays for picking up the sick, the wounded and the dead. Jugs — who hates that nickaname a lot — is the receptionist for the ambulance company, totally unreceptive to the sexist advances of her cruder co-workers, but more than ready to fall in love with the right man. She is also ready to trade her switchboard for a dashboard and prove herself as an ambulance driver, even if she has to steal the ambulance do it.

Life in the big city ambulance is never dull, as the drivers — mercenaries on a cynical mission of mercy — rescue a woman wrestler who is being attacked by fans, bargain with the police over the proper bribe for permission to remove a corpse (at city expense) and pick up a woman who has pulled the ceiling down on herself and friends by swinging on a chandelier.

Mother is the seasoned pro of the disaster business, driving an ambulance which is his rolling home, fully equipped with a beer cooler and a cassette player to keep himself calm as he routinely breaks any law that might prevent him from doing his job faster and better than the competition. Speed, a cop who has been suspended for allegedly peddling cocaine, is not so skilled at the body biz, but he adapts quickly, masquerading as a patient to provide Jugs with an alibi when she is stopped for speeding.

UP IN THE AIR — Many of the nation's top young athletes ages 12-18, such as this young pole vaulter, will be featured in competition during the two-day 1979 National AAU Junior Olympic Multi-Sport Championships, to be colorcast on NBC Saturday, Aug. 11 (5-6:30 p.m.), and Sunday, Aug. 12 (4:30-6 p.m.).

Mobley Hosts

Mary Ann Mobley returns to the stage on which she was crowned Miss America of 1959 when she joins Bert Parks as co-host of the 1979 Miss America Pageant, to be telecast by NBC-TV from Convention Hall in Atlantic City, N.J., Sept. 8.

While Mobley will be observing the 20th anniversary of her reign as Miss America, Parks will mark his record-setting 25th year as master of ceremonies of the Pageant.

Mobley will be sharing the festivities with two other former Miss Americas: Dorothy Benham, Miss America of 1977, and Susan Perkins, Miss America 1978, who will be featured principals in this year's gala event.

Also on stage will be Kylene Barker, Miss America of 1979, who will perform in addition to crowning her successor. The theme for the excitement leading to the crowning of the new Miss America will be "Lookin' Good."

The Mississippi-born Mobley sang and danced on the 50th anniversary Miss America Pageant in 1970 and was co-host (with husband Gary Collins) for the 1971 Pageant. Her long list of motion picture and television credits include an appearance on a TV special, "Nashville Remembers Elvis on His Birthday," that aired last winter. She appeared in the Disney film "My Dog the Thief" that aired recently and has also been a guest on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

Pleshette Returns

Suzanne Pleshette, who played Emily Hartley for six seasons on "The Bob Newhart Show," will star in "If Things Were Different," a motion picture-for-television for CBS.

Don Murray, Tony Roberts, Arte Johnson, Charles Haid and Dan Shor also star in the drama about the struggle of a woman to support herself and her two children after her husband is confined to a hospital with a severe nervous condition.

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE
PFA Staff Writer

Comedian JERRY VAN DYKE is candidly telling everyone that his brother, DICK, saved his nightclub in Encino (Calif.) from financial ruin. "Dick loaned me the money to get the club back on its feet — and if he hadn't, I would have had to declare bankruptcy," Jerry explains.

BRIAN KEITH's nasty fall from a horse during the filming of the TV mini-seekers "THE SEEKERS" sent him to the hospital. X-rays revealed no broken bones, however. Brian, aching and badly bruised, was back on the set the following day.

Remember ALAN YOUNG? TV's "MR. ED"? Young left show business after that series to devote all of his time to church work. Now he's returning to the small screen in a pilot named "RIP," taken from a hit British TV series.

SHELLEY HACK, the newest of "CHARLIE'S ANGELS," says all of the regular members of the cast and crew have made her feel extremely welcome. She was also happy to meet Farrah Fawcett-Majors, who was back on the set recently for a guest stint.

'ANGEL' CHERYL, whose second record album was just released, says much of her musical interest and abilities are because of encouragement from her father, a railroad engineer. "We had some terrific jams with the old railroaders," recalls Cheryl. "Real country stuff, steel guitar, fiddle, harp. It was incredible!"

Perky DONNA PESCOW, title star of "ANGIE," says there's a big difference between her and the waitress character she plays. "You never see me waiting tables in the show," Donna confesses, "because I can't do it. When I got this part, I used to hang around the coffee shops near my home, watching the waitresses and how they worked. But, when I try to do what they do, I drop plates all over the place."

LOU SANDERS has left the role as FRITZ in "CHiPs" to star in a new series, "240 ROBERT." Lou feels he'll have a better chance at fame if he's not having to compete for top billing with superstars like ERIK ESTRADA and LARRY WILCOX.

Two of Hollywood's newest newlyweds are actress EVE PLUMB and lighting technician RICK MANSFIELD. The two met on the "LITTLE WOMEN" set last winter.

The AAU Jr. Olympics

NBC Sports will present three hours of coverage of the AAU Junior Olympics live, from Lincoln, Neb., Saturday, August 11 (5 to 6:30 p.m.), and Sunday, August 12 (4 to 5:30 p.m.). Featured will be track and field, boxing, gymnastics and diving. Other events such a synchronized swimming and wrestling will be covered in part.

The two-day National Championships will be held at various facilities at the University of Nebraska and will mark the culmination of months of preliminary association and regional-level AAU Meets involving over 2,000 youngsters between the ages of 12 to 18.

Now in its 12th year, the AAU Junior Olympics offers competition in 17 sports. Its stature as a broadly-based sports development activity is enhanced by the fact that no less than 83 members of the U.S. Olympic Team in Montreal competed at one time in the Junior Olympics.

Lynde Recovered

Paul Lynde, who has just recovered from a bout with viral hepatitis, has resumed his role in "Don't Drink the Water," which opened recently in Columbus, Ohio.

The show is also slated to play in Atlanta, Ga., Indianapolis, Ind., and Dallas, Texas.

HEADING the returnees for the Chicago Bears is running back Walter Payton who, along with Roland Harper, became the NFL's top rushing tandem last season. The Bears play the New Orleans Saints in a pre-season game Saturday, August 11. CBS Sports will televise the action (2 to 5 p.m.).

Bears Hope For A Better Season

An enthusiastic cast of 75 players, including 25 rookie hopefuls, reported to head coach Neill Armstrong last month as the Chicago Bears opened their training camp at Lake Forest College.

NFL teams will field 45-man rosters this fall when the regular season opens, and the Bears will be showing off their roster in a pre-season game with the New Orleans Saints Saturday, August 11. CBS Sports will televise the game, played in New Orleans (2 to 5 p.m.).

The 1979 Bears team is coming from a mix of 44 veterans from the team that finished '78 with wins in four of their last five games, five veterans injured last year, 10 draft picks, 15 other rookies, and newly acquired tight end Paul Seymour.

Heading the returnees are running backs Walter Payton and Roland Harper — the NFL's top rushing tandem last season when they combined for 2,387 yards on the ground.

Entering their fifth NFL season, Payton needs a mere 343 yards to become the Club's all-time leading rusher while Harper needs 459 to scamper past Bronko Nagurski, Ron Bull and Willie Gallimore and rest in fourth place on the all-time charts.

A young but veteran offensive line returns intact to do the blocking. Veteran quarterbacks Mike Phipps, Bob Avellini, and Vince Evans have as their targets the best set of wide receivers in recent Club history.

Bolstered by the expected return of injured starters Waymond Bryant, Allan Ellis and Tom Hicks, and the 4th and 9th best players in the college draft, Bear fans can look forward to an improved defense this season. Considering the Bears finished 12th in the NFL in defense last season, improvement will be noteworthy.

Mini-Olympics On NBC-TV

NBC Sports will continue its coverage of the "National Sports Festival — U.S. Mini-Olympics Sunday, August 5 (2:30 to 5:30), with selected broadcasts of gymnastics, water skiing, track and field, figure skating, boxing and diving. The event is being held in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Athletes participating in what is considered to be an Olympic-type 'tune-up' are from national teams and are broken down into four regional teams — South, East, West and Midwest.

Carrying the banner for the East Team will be gymnast Leslie Pyfer, a 16-year-old who was all-round champion for 1979 at the U.S. Gymnastics Federation Championships and the leading American qualifier for the '79 World Meet. Joining Pyfer on the team will be another 16-year-old, Marsha Frederick, who last year became the first American to win the gold medal in the World Championships. She captured 1st place in the uneven bars although she had an injured ankle which hampered her performance in the '79 tryouts. Nevertheless, Marsha moved from 19th place to 7th which qualified her as the alternate to compete in the '79 World Championships, to be held in Fort Worth, Texas, later this year.

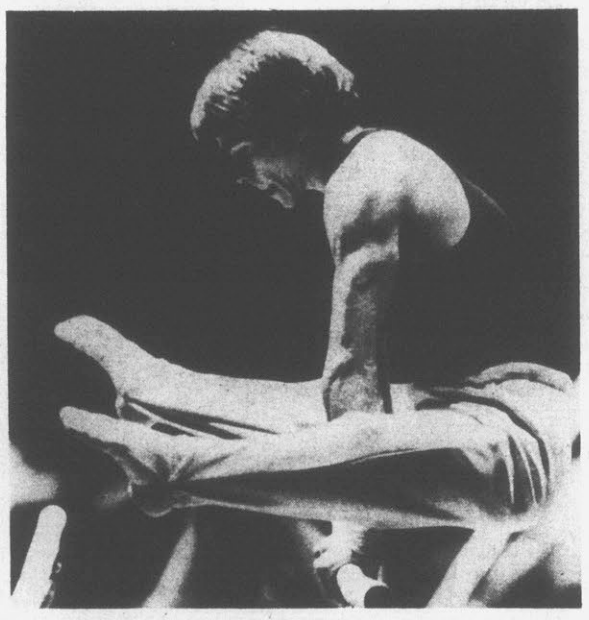
Leading the South Team will be Cathy Johnson, bronze medal winner in the 1978 World Championships.

The Midwest Team will be led by 16-year-old Christa Canary, who made the American team as the 4th qualifier.

A strong West Team will feature a pair of young acrobatics, 16-year-old Rhonda Schwandt, who has 5 years of international competition, and 12-year-old Tracey Talavera. Tracey stands 4-feet 9-inches tall and weight 79 lbs. She captured the No. 3 position in the World Championships tryouts.

The teams, obviously, will be made up of the cream of our country's athletic crop.

Kurt Thomas, America's best hope for a gold medal in Moscow in 1980, will also be displaying his talents. He is a 1976 Olympian and a student at Indiana State University. Thomas will meet stiff competition from Bart Conner of the University of Okla., and Iowa State College's Ron Galimore, both outstanding gymnasts.



KURT THOMAS, America's best hope for the gold medal in Moscow in 1980, will be among the nation's top athletes competing in the National Sports Festival — U.S. Mini-Olympics. NBC Sports will present selected broadcasts of the event Sunday, August 5 (2:30 to 5:30 p.m.).

Dibbs Among Competitors

CBS Sports will present "International Grand Prix Tennis," featuring finals of this men's tournament being held in North Conway, N.H., Sunday, August 5 (2 to 4 p.m.). Among the top tennis superstars in the competition will be Guillermo Vilas, Roscoe Tanner, Harold Solomon and Eddie Dibbs.

When Dibbs is about to lash into that fuzzy tennis ball, it's almost like a cobra primed for an attack, hissing and waiting for the opening to strike.

Dibbs seldom falls prey to his own carelessness during a match. On clay, he's been known on several occasions to carry on a rally from dusk till dawn. He's still basically a baseliner, but he started sneaking up to the net about two years ago, to the surprise of many a bewildered opponent.

Fast Eddie was born in Brooklyn but grew up in Miami, where he hustled tennis on the sandlot courts all over town.

He enrolled at the University of Miami but was just killing time before embarking on a full-time professional career.

Dibbs began to come into his own about three years ago. In 1967, he finished fourth in WCT points winning Monterey, Barcelona, and the WCT Washington Doubles with Harold Solomon. After losing the quarters to Bjorn Borg in WCT finals, Eddie returned to Europe and won the German Open for the third time. He made it to the top ten in the world and collected $230,000 in the process. In 1977, Dibbs was again winning consistently. He won his hometown championship over Raul Tamirez and took the prestigious WCT London crown over Vitas Gerulaitis.

Dibbs' most recent win was at the WCT Forest Hills Invitational. When the field narrowed down to four finalists, it was between Victor Pecci, Wojtek Fibak, Harold Solomon and Dibbs.

Dibbs whipped Pecci and Solomon stopped Fibak and the other two were united once again — this time across the net instead of on the same side. It was also best friend against best friend.

The first set was one of long rallies and exceptional clay court expertise. But Solomon succumbed to leg cramps in the second set, and that was the kiss of defeat.

Dibbs was visibly exhausted after the match, which was played in 90-degree heat and 90 percent humidity. "I'm as tired as I've ever been," he said. But not too tired to defeat Solomon in straight sets, 7-6, 6-1.

EDDIE DIBBS, recent winner of the Forest Hills Invitational, will be among the field competing in the "International Grand Prix Tennis," being played in North Conway, N.H. CBS Sports will present coverage of the finals Sunday, August 5 (2 to 4 p.m.).

Hartford Open

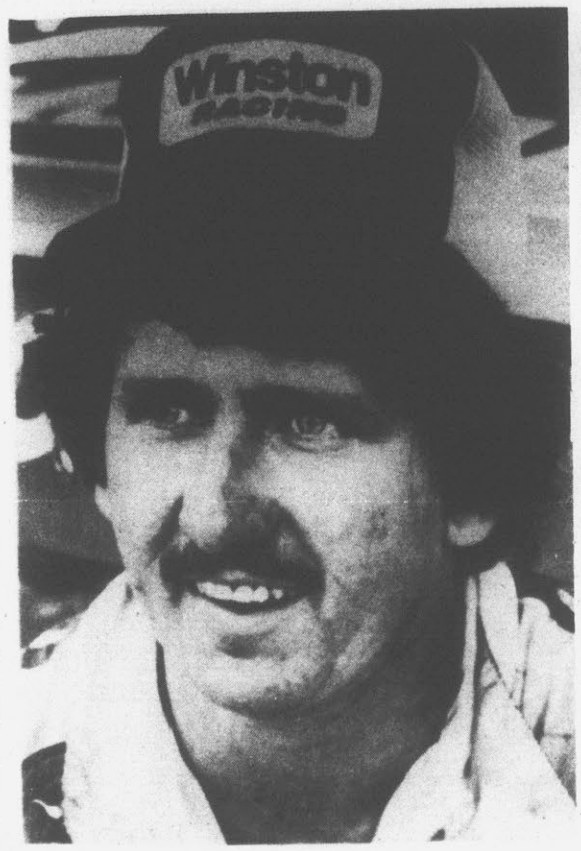
A host of top professional golfers from the PGA Tour, led by defending champion Rod Funseth, are expected to tee it up in the 72-hole, $300,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, the final two rounds of which will be broadcast by CBS Sports August 11 and 12, Saturday (5 to 6 p.m.), and Sunday (4 to 6 p.m.).

Coverage is expected to include play at the par 5, 501-yard 14th hole; the par 4, 386-yard 15th hole; the par 5, 547-yard 16th hole; the par 3, 213-yard 17th hole; and the par 4, 424-yard 18th hole.

Funseth had opening rounds of 65-67 last year, four shots out of the lead. However, a Saturday round of 67, three under par, brought him within one shot of the lead, and in the final round, a brilliantly fashioned seven under-par-64 over the par 71, 6,568 yard Wethersfield course easily won the championship. Funseth's 264 total was 20 under par for the event, which this year offers $54,000 to the winner.

Invested A Lot

New York Yankees' owner George Steinbrenner says that if Reggie Jackson is traded, he'll "have to get something in return." Steinbrenner continued: "I've invested a lot in Reggie and I'd be the dumbest guy in the world to take some donkey for him."



NEIL BONNETT looks up to NASCAR's superstars, but he's hoping to be "looking back at 'em" during the running of the Talladega 500. The race will be presented as a "CBS Sports Special" Sunday, August 5 (4 to 6 p.m.).

'I'd Rather Be Looking Back!!!'

Stock car driver Neil Bonnett says he still looks up to the superstars of NASCAR's Winston Cup circuit, but adds with a grin, "I'd much rather be looking back at 'em."

The popular, 33-year-old Hueytown, Ala., native hopes he'll be looking back all the way in the running of the Talladega 500, to be presented as a "CBS Sports Special" Sunday, August 5 (4 to 6 p.m.).

"I've always looked up to drivers like Richard Petty and Bobby Allison, and all the others," said the enthusiastic driver of the Wood Brothers-Purolator Mercury that recently won the Daytona Firecracker 400. "I still look up to them — but it sure is enjoyable looking back at 'em every once in awhile. Of course there hasn't been a driver in history who sat in the Wood Brothers' car who didn't have the opportunity to look back and find a bunch of cars behind 'em."

Bonnett laughed and added, "If you don't win in the Wood Brothers car, you're not gonna be in it very long because every driver who's sat in the car has been a winner." Former drivers for the famed Virginians include David Pearson, Cale Yarborough, A.J. Foyt, Curtis Turner, Donnie Allison, Parnelli Jones and Dan Gurney, to name a few.

"All you got to do is aim it," said Bonnett. "The Purolator team is a great team and I think we can win the Talladega 500. Actually, I felt like we won the Winston 500 earlier this year. We just didn't make it to the finish line. We led 120-something (121) laps and had the lead before something broke in the motor just before the finish.

"I can't tell you how good it feels to be cruising through a corner at Talladega at 200 miles an hour with everybody else behind. I hope to do it again this time because this is my backyard track and my favorite track.

"I know you're probably thinking that when I'm in Pocono — Pocono is my favorite track — and when I'm in Daytona — Daytona is my favorite track — that kind of thing — but that's not the case. I don't care where I am or what track I'm running. Talladega is still my favorite race track.

Malden Returns To TV

Academy Award winner Karl Malden will return to series television as the star of Oscar and Emmy-winning writer Abby Mann's "Skag," a realisitic family drama currently in pre-production, according to Mike Weinblatt, President, NBC Entertainment.

"Needless to say we are thrilled to have two such giants in their respective fields joining NBC," Weinblatt said. "Karl Malden and Abby Mann are a very distinguished team, and the combination of their talents will surely bring to television one of its most stylish and distinctive series."

Malden will star in the title role of Peter Skagza, a tough, veteran steelworker from Pittsburgh, Pa., trying to hold together his once tight-knit family in today's tumultuous, changing times. Mann will write the first four episodes, including the three-hour premiere. Additional casting and production staff will be announced.

Malden, born in Chicago and raised in Gary, Ind., is best known to television audiences as Det. Lt. Mike Stone on "The Streets of San Francisco." His many film credits include "One-Eyed Jacks," "Patton," "Meteor" and "Beyond the Poseidon Adventure."

We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

No hatred in his heart.

GEORGE C. WALLACE, former Governor of Alabama

Were you being completely truthful when you said you had no ill feelings towards Arthur Bremer, whose assassination attempt left you crippled? —I.W., Pocatello, Idaho

● I was honest. I do not believe that one can continue to live with unforgiveness or hatred in one's heart. If we ourselves do not forgive others, how can we expect to find forgiveness for our own mistakes? Some of the most productive people in our society are handicapped. Incidentally, I served longer as Governor of Alabama as a paraplegic than I did before my injury. God will help any of us use that which we have in order to overcome our hardships or setbacks. I am glad I can use my experience to improve care, treatment and research for the handicapped in my new position with the University of Alabama in Birmingham.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

I'm puzzled as to why Eddie Albert has been named chairman of the Boy Scouts of America's 1980-81 Conservation Awareness campaign. What are his qualifications? —W.M., Jefferson City, Mo.

● You may be puzzled, but Eddie feels he's a natural! We asked him to clear up the mystery, and Eddie, who became a Boy Scout as soon as he could, said: "They made me what I am today. Through the Boy Scouts I won my first spelling contest, which may have been the greatest moment of my life, as I did not know I knew how to spell." The Boy Scouts introduced Eddie to running ("my lifetime joy") and also to nature. He has long been active in conservation and environmental problems. He says, "The Boy Scouts of America's program is in line with my concerns; they have the structure to implement many new projects."

Scouting made him what he is.

FOR KAREN BLACK, star of In Praise of Older Women

Why can't you stand the sight of fish-net stockings? —E.N., Rome, Ga.

● Because it reminds me of one of the horrible odd jobs I had in the 60's before I became an actress. I was a waitress in an ice-cream parlor, and all day long, I was up and down the stairs carrying heavily loaded trays. Until you've carried such a tray in high spiked heels and fish-net stockings, you don't know what discomfort is. After a while, the fish net cuts into your feet like barbed wire.

FOR SALLY FIELD, star of Norma Rae

What was the embarrassing encounter you once had with John Wayne? —H.M., Bangor, Maine

● About 12 years ago, I agreed to present the Best Actor Award at the Golden Globe Awards — without realizing what was involved. It wasn't the conventional kind of presenting — standing demurely on the stage. I had to fly to the stage, from the back, hovering over the audience on wires. When I landed, I clumsily flopped and fell into the arms of John Wayne, who was there to catch me.

FOR FRED LYNN, center fielder for Boston Red Sox

When you come to bat, do you try to hit a long ball, or do you try and meet the ball, hoping it will carry out of the ball park? And who do you see as the team to beat the N.Y. Yankees this year? —E.V., Kankakee, Ill.

● I don't consider myself a power hitter, so I try to hit the ball where it's pitched. I'm a better hitter when I'm hitting the ball to all fields. Sometimes I might try to hit the ball out of the park in certain situations, such as a close game in the late innings. I consider Baltimore the team to beat in our division.

FOR JOSEPH A. CALIFANO, Jr., Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare

How much government money is spent each year teaching grownups how to read and write? —Mrs. L. Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● The Federal Government spends more than $50 million each year on adult education programs. State and local governments spend another $20 million a year. We do not know how much of that $70 million total goes for reading and writing instruction.

FOR MELANIE, recording star

Were you really a rebel at school? —W.P., Salina, Kan.

● I think nonconformist is a better word. I wore thongs when they weren't accepted, not because I wanted to be different, but because I like the style. Anyone who didn't come to class in mohair and pleated skirts in those days (me) stuck out like a sore thumb. I wore boots long before they were fashionable. That's because I visited an Indian reservation where I got a pair of long, black-suede boots and wanted to put them on right away, not stuff them in the closet.

FOR JOHN WILCOX, producer of ABC-TV's The American Sportsman

Your many successes are obvious, but what about your failures? —G.A., Fort Myers, Fla.

● One time we wanted to concentrate on the extremely elusive kudu (African antelope), as they come down from the thick mountain ranges into the Zambesi Valley. It was a question of timing — to get them before they move back into the hills when the rain comes. Our timing was bad. We were a week too late — and we were out $20,000.

PRO AND CON

Should Registration of Hand Guns Be Federally Mandated?

PRO Senator Edward Kennedy (D.-Mass.)

Every day 63 Americans are killed by handguns. There are now 50 million privately owned handguns in America, most of which are useful only for killing people. They are not accurate enough for sports or target practice. Most handgun murders take place as a result of arguments — often between friends or family members. The availability of a handgun too often transforms a momentary dispute that otherwise might soon be forgotten into a tragedy that can never be undone. Thousands of lives could be saved each year if we could only enact responsible legislation to control handguns. How many more Americans must die before we act?

CON Senator Jake Garn (R.-Utah)

Any effective Federal gun-control law would raise serious Constitutional questions. While the meaning of the Second Amendment is disputed by some, I believe it was clearly designed to protect the rights of our armed citizenry. Gun control would prevent people from defending themselves and remove from the criminal mind the deterrent effect of knowing that a victim may be armed. It also causes politicians to think about guns instead of the complex reasons crimes are committed. Any effective Federal gun-control law would be expensive, infringe upon privacy and produce resentment among most law-abiding citizens.

FIGHTING DIRTY: WHEN HUSBANDS AND WIVES BEAT EACH OTHER UP

By Richard Louv

The American family is under assault, not so much by the critics of that institution but by the enemies within: the husbands and wives who consider the marriage license a license for violence.

During the last few years, wife battery has become a subject of considerable public debate; but in the no-win war between the sexes, men, too, are victims. "Surprisingly, women are just as violent toward their spouses as are men," according to Dr. Murray Straus, director of the University of New Hampshire's Family Violence Research Program. "Of course, more women end up in the hospital," he adds.

Applying what he calls the Overall Violence Index, Straus, along with Suzanne Steinmetz of the University of Delaware and Richard Gelles of the University of Rhode Island, found that nearly a third of 2,000 American families surveyed had experienced some sort of violence between husband and wife. Included in these "acts of violence" were pushing, shoving, slapping and other minor aggressions, as well as beating, stabbing and shooting. The survey revealed that four women out of every hundred had been severely beaten by their husbands during the past year. Straus estimates that could translate to nearly two million beaten wives per year. "And that's a low estimate," he says.

Straus and his associates are releasing a book in August, tentatively titled Behind Closed Doors: Violence in the American Family. Published by Doubleday, the book will be the first to contain any solid data on the violence of the sexes toward each other.

Straus maintains that men and women commit different sorts of violence against each other, and that wives are, in fact, slightly more frequently violent.

Some feminists are extremely critical of this survey, insisting that it is inflammatory toward women and of little help in the battle against wife-beating. But Straus points out that just because wives may be as violent as their husbands, it does not mean they win. "On an average, men are three inches taller, 20 pounds heavier and have better developed muscles. These facts have a lot to do with who ends up the battered spouse."

Wives who are violent toward their husbands are often defending themselves. "While husbands and wives murder each other in equal frequency, wives are more likely to kill in self-defense. A typical situation is a woman being beaten by her husband, realizing what an unequal match it is and grabbing a gun or a knife. Since half of the homes in America contain guns, the wife usually has an available weapon. A lot of fights take place in the kitchen where there are knives," according to Straus. The phrase "self-defense" does not always apply to violent acts that a wife conducts against a husband. Often, the violence takes place as revenge or retaliation for a previous beating, even though the wife is not in immediate danger.

Michelle Horwitz

Some women do, however, repetitively batter their husbands. And not in self-defense. "We found men who were severely attacked by their wives two to three times a year. But this is misleading because the violence often does not end with the wife's attack on her husband," says Straus. "One guy I interviewed told me his wife threw a coffeepot at him. He felt he 'deserved it' because he had been running around with another woman. What happened? The coffeepot missed and the wife got beat up."

There are men who are virtual prisoners in their own homes, but this group is only a tiny fraction of the number of women who find themselves in the same predicament. Theirs is a different type of problem.

"Men are even more hesitant to report that they have been battered by a spouse than are women, not only because they don't want to be seen as a browbeaten husband but also because of the generally accepted rule that what goes on in a family is private business," Straus explains.

Indeed, the first book to describe the breadth and seriousness of spouse battery was Scream Quietly or the Neighbors Will Hear, by Erin Prizzy, who founded the first shelter for battered wives in 1971, in London. The "Women's Aid" center was originally intended as a house where women could seek advice and support. But women soon began to stay at the house, seeking shelter from the men who were beating them at home. In three years, almost five thousand women and children passed through the center. The shelter concept spread throughout England and the U.S. Today there are similar shelters in most major American cities and hotlines in some. To date, there is still no national hotline.

The shelters only rarely assist battered husbands. According to Straus, the need is not the same. "The woman is not only more vulnerable physically but also economically. If a man is in physical danger, he has the money to go to a hotel and stay there. If a woman is in danger, she often doesn't have the economic resources to support herself, especially if she has responsibility for children. You can only stay with a mother so long."

Those American women who are able to find full-time work earn only 57 percent as much as men. Women usually receive custody of children after a divorce, and, according to Straus, "almost all men default on child support in the first year."

Women are psychologically victimized, also. "The feeling of most Americans is that it's up to the wife to keep a marriage going. People tend to blame her, and the woman blames herself," says Straus. "The shelters are crucial for psychological and economic support as well as physical protection of women."

While the shelters have focused primarily on the woman, there is a growing movement to treat both partners in the marriage as well as the children. This effort recognizes that most battered wives return to their husbands, and, within a month, are battered again. Straus insists that violence is the result, usually, of a family climate not necessarily produced by only one spouse.

As one counselor in a San Diego shelter states, "We consider men as victimized as women. The women are sex objects, but the men are success objects. There is an incredible similarity in the psychology of the batterer and the batteree." Indeed, participants in family violence were almost always the victims of child abuse. "The most frequent comment I hear from women is, 'I thought this is the way marriage was supposed to be.'"

Straus agrees. "The hidden tragedy of

PORCELAIN BELL COLLECTION

Twelve beautiful collector's bells in fine bone china. Each portraying a different favorite flower, and its own delicate little flower fairy... and each one hand-decorated in 24 karat gold.

Limited edition
Available only until September 30, 1979

For centuries, collectors in many countries have cherished fine porcelain adorned with beautiful, delicate flowers. And for centuries, too, bells have been among the most sought-after of all collector's items in fine porcelain.

Now, as a collector herself, the internationally-known artist Carol Lawson has been inspired by these traditions to create a new collection which is as charming as it is original. The Enchanted Flowers Bell Collection.

Original art by Carol Lawson

The design of each bell is a unique original work of art by Carol Lawson, who has specialized in portraying the wonderful world of magic and fantasy. And so, she has brought her own highly personal approach to each floral design by portraying each bloom with its own pretty little flower fairy. There's the Violet, sweetly smiling, delicate as a petal in her ballet dress of mauve and green—and the very soul of modesty. The Lily-of-the-Valley, with her very own little china-white bells. The Primrose, Snowdrop and the Poppy—and a veritable posy of other elusive and lovely companions.

Bells shown smaller than actual 5⅛" height.

© 1979 FP

In the beauty of fine bone china

Each bell in this charming collection is elegance itself. A pleasure to look at, a delight to hold by its slender curved handle. The china exquisitely, translucently white—providing the perfect setting for a delectable profusion of color. The high glaze, reflecting the light from the gracefully curved body of each bell. Incorporated in each design, the artist's monogram. And the finishing touches of 24 karat gold, including the hand-painted gold rim around the mouth of each bell, ensuring that it looks as lovely as it sounds, when rung—ever so gently.

The making of a porcelain bell is a work of true craftsmanship. And the collector who holds one of these lovely bells in his or her hand will recognize the skill and judgment that went into its making. But the strongest impression of the collection will be of its beauty, its refinement, its charm—and the engaging aura of fantasy and romance which surrounds the twelve flower bells.

These beautiful bells will be a constant joy to own, and a captivating adornment to any room—gathered together as an eye-catching centerpiece, or arranged as a striking wall display. For this is a collection to be enjoyed here and now—and to be handed down from mother to daughter for generations. Thus, it will bring its entrancing beauty into your home and into the homes of those you love—for many years to come.

Deadline for subscriptions: September 30th

The collection will be issued at the rate of one bell every other month. The price is $19.50 for each bell. In accordance with the established traditions of porcelain collecting, these fine bone china bells will be issued in limited edition, available for a limited period only. A Certificate of Authenticity will attest to this fact, and to the status of the bells as original works of art by Carol Lawson.

The final closing date for subscriptions in the United States is September 30, 1979, after which date the collection will never be made available here again. To be valid, therefore, the application below must be mailed no later than September 30th, to Franklin Porcelain, Franklin Center, Pennsylvania.

FIGHTING DIRTY

spouse abuse is that the more violent a husband and wife are to each other, the more violent they will be to their children. The kids will learn to transfer violence to their brothers, sisters, friends. And when these children grow up, they will likely batter their spouses. The cycle continues."

Short of seeking help from a shelter, battered spouses — or battering spouses — are counseled by Straus to ask a minister or professional counselor to serve as a third party in their family disputes. "It's essential that a family with a tendency toward violence learn new ways of settling arguments," Straus suggests.

Legally, the issue of spouse battery is only now beginning to emerge from the 19th century.

In California, for instance, an advisory group to the State Senate Judiciary Committee reported that current laws to protect the victims of family violence are for the most part ineffectual and unenforced. This is in a state where violence among family members accounts for up to a third of all homicides. The report maintained that men and women seeking police assistance are often subjected to the "restraining order runaround." The victim is told by the police officer that nothing can be done until he or she gets a court restraining order against the attacker. The police then refuse to enforce the orders, claiming they are "civil" in nature and consequently not within their authority to enforce.

The report did show some sympathy toward the reluctance of police to enforce the laws; domestic fights are especially difficult to break up, accounting for 20 percent of all police homicides. Nevertheless, the report insisted that the police officers, by their action or inaction, "subtly condone the batterer's behavior," and that "innumerable battered women have completely lost faith in the legal system's ability to prevent further harm to themselves and their children."

Across the nation, according to Straus, many judges assume that wives are the property of the husband and that the woman must somehow be at fault. "Few judges do more than caution the man or give him a suspended sentence," he says. These legal and societal pressures discourage the woman from reporting assaults or subsequently pressing charges. "Now, though, many states have adopted or are considering legislation to make explicit that an assault by one's spouse should be treated as seriously as an assault by a stranger."

No accurate figures are available to chart the rise or fall of instances of spouse battery, but Straus contends, "My hunch is that the rate is falling." He credits this to the rising consciousness regarding spouse abuse; to the widening job market for women; and to the availability of shelters.

"One of the ironies of the war between the sexes," he says, "is that things have to get worse before they get better. In the short run, the Feminist Movement has increased some tensions between men and women — though not necessarily violence. But in the long run, the Movement will calm the battle, both physically and emotionally." The first step to reducing family violence, he contends, is to admit that it exists. "The Feminist Movement has helped all of us, men and women, in that regard."

THE COURTSHIP OF DEAN-PAUL MARTIN

Paramount Pictures

Dean-Paul Martin with Players co-star, Ali MacGraw

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

The new movie Players that makes a love match between Ali MacGraw and a younger tennis pro hasn't exactly played to rave reviews from critics around the country. But the public likes the movie, and women viewers, especially, are warming up to one of its bright spots: newcomer Dean-Paul Martin.

"He could be the next Robert Redford," says Players producer Bob Evans. "Women love him five minutes after he's been on the screen." For Evans, Dean-Paul was a natural to play the tennis pro, since "in this movie he's himself — a tennis player good enough to compete at Wimbledon."

In fact, Dean-Paul had been on the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship squad with Jimmy Connors at UCLA, turned pro three-and-a-half years ago and had become one of the Phoenix Racquets' aces. A year later he reached world-class status.

Certainly the 27-year-old son of actor-singer Dean Martin and his second wife, Jeanne, looks the part: a half-inch shy of six feet, he's tanned and muscular, with deep-set blue eyes and hair bleached almost white by five grueling hours of daily practice on the courts.

Evans is convinced that Dean-Paul has what it takes. He's already signed him to a nonexclusive picture-a-year contract for the next six years.

Yet to Evans' surprise, young Martin didn't want the Players part at first. His first love was — and still is — tennis. He regretted taking out two years in the 1960's to be part of the pop music group Dino, Desi and Billy with buddies Desi Arnaz Jr., and Billy Hinshe. He didn't want to lose precious time again. "I worked too hard to get where I am," Dean-Paul said. "In tennis you are limited as to how long you can play. I'm 27 now — been playing since I was eight — and 35 is just about the limit."

In Players, Dean-Paul looks at ease in the part of the tennis pro. Most of all, the film shows off the kind of charisma that earned him, even in his teens, the reputation of being a successful ladies' man.

At 19 he married Olivia Hussey, the lovely young actress who made such a hit as the sensitive heroine in Romeo and Juliet. Their marriage lasted four years. "But to this day we have a tremendous rapport," Dean-Paul says. "She's a fantastic person. We were just too young at the time. Gradually we went our separate ways. No arguments. No uneasiness. I'm particularly glad of that because of our son, Alexander, who is six."

Now that he's single again, Dean-Paul says his taste in companions is influenced by his father's heritage: "I certainly have an Italian taste for the ladies. I just love the vivacious Sophia Loren type — womanly, with rounded curves. The tall, slim model types never did anything to me."

Dean-Paul (he prefers the hyphenated name that distinguishes him from his famous dad) insists he never dated like "a lot of guys who go out with a new girl each night. I never had a serious relationship with anyone prior to Olivia. She was totally different from the women I had known."

The current — and serious — woman in his life is ice-skating champion Dorothy Hamill. "We have a lot in common. We are both under tension most of the time and deeply involved in what we are doing. She travels with the Ice Capades and I with my tennis. But she's doing something she likes, and I am, too."

Is he ready for another marriage? "Eventually, but not for quite a while. A lot of craziness could happen after this movie comes out, but I told Bob [Evans] right from the start that if he thinks I am going to hang up my rackets, he has another guess coming."

The two biggest problems for Dean-Paul in making his first film were a bout with hepatitis — which he contracted in Mexico during the filming — and the nude scenes with Ali MacGraw. "It had nothing to do with Ali's being the ex-wife of the producer," he said. "I'd never done a picture, never done any acting and certainly had never done a nude scene before. Then, suddenly, I'm doing it all! I think I did O.K., but it sure felt awkward. Ali was terrific. She was very understanding during the whole thing."

And Dean-Paul seems to have acquired some new understanding of himself. With Players, it's a whole new racket for Dean-Paul Martin. And he's game to give it a try. FW

SALLY STRUTHERS' LOVE LETTER.

"Four years ago, I would not have been able to write this letter.

"Because Marites was an eight-year-old girl with little hope. Working to help support her poverty-stricken family, she had no dream of a better tomorrow.

"But today Marites has hope. She has nourishing meals and warm clothing.

"And she's going to school.

"I was able to sponsor her, thanks to Christian Children's Fund.

"To help give her the basic needs of life.

"Without taking her away from the family she dearly loves.

"For just $15 a month, you too can help a child like Marites.

Dearest Marites ...

It's really nice to come home after a long day at work and find one of your letters waiting for me. Thank you. I enjoy hearing about your school and I'm glad you like it and are doing well. I agree ... some subjects are harder than others. You know what? I hated math, too. But if you keep up with your studying, it will seem a little easier. I've been well and very busy. But not too busy to think about you every day. I hope your mother is feeling better. Having you home must be a great comfort to her. Please give her my love.

Say 'hi' to your sisters from me. Take care of yourself and please write again soon. Your letters are precious to me.

I love you,
Sally

"You can become a sponsor through Christian Children's Fund.

"You needn't send any money right away. Just send the coupon.

"We'll send you a child's picture and background information.

"We'll tell you the child's age, how the child lives, what the child wears, and how your 50¢ a day can help make a world of difference in a poor child's life.

"We'll also tell you how the child will be helped, and explain how you can write to the child and receive very special letters in return.

"Please send in the coupon today to learn more about a child you can help.

"Somewhere there is a child who is waiting to share letters of love with you."

For the love of a hungry child.

A word to smokers
(about working together)

Whether you're a billboard painter or just, as you obviously are, a reader of magazines, you've discovered that there's a difference between *non*smokers and anti-smokers.

We all work with nonsmokers — and they work with us. Roughly 60% of the people around us are nonsmokers, and 40% of them are smokers — so we have to work together. And, like our sign painters, we do.

Anti-smokers are a breed apart. They don't want us to work together with nonsmokers. And they go to some extreme lengths to see that we don't.

Two examples:

1. A nationally known TV and film star was prevented from performing by a band of anti-smokers threatening violence because the star frequently smoked on stage. The occasion was a benefit to raise funds for handicapped children.

2. The executive director of one anti-smoking group announced plans to build an "army" of 2,000,000 anti-smoking militants who would go about "zapping" smokers in the face with spray from aerosol cans.

"You don't know what a rewarding feeling it is," he is quoted as saying, "the first time you spray a smoker in the face. It's hard to work yourself up to the first spray. It takes guts. But once you've broken the ice, it's easy. And you feel exhilarated."

Such people clearly do not represent the nonsmokers we all know and work with. They would not last long in any working environment where people must cooperate to get the job done. And we doubt very much that the "zappers" will find 2,000,000 others to go along with them. Americans just don't think that way.

Such anti-smokers are not only anti-smoking. They're giving themselves the reputation of being anti-individualism, anti-freedom of choice, anti-everything that does not agree with their special prejudices. And in that they're as much a threat to nonsmokers as they are to smokers.

A word to nonsmokers
(about working together)

Wherever you work — even if you're a billboard painter — you work with smokers.and always have.

There's nothing remarkable about that. Forty percent of the people around you are smokers, and 60% are nonsmokers. Still, we work, live, and enjoy ourselves together.

Lately, however, we've all become super-sensitive to each other and to each other's privileges and obligations. And that's not a bad thing.

We agree on many things. There are places (crowded elevators, to take the simplest example) where smoking is not appropriate. In closed and private places, the ancient courtesy of "Do you mind if I smoke?" is still the best rule. Smokers, we believe, have become more generally conscious of that courtesy. The occasional careless smoker, waving a lighted cigarette or cigar, should, in our opinion, be as quickly reminded of others' preferences by a thoughtful smoker as by a nonsmoker.

Nevertheless there are some people— anti-smokers rather than nonsmokers — who will never be satisfied with our sensible accommodations to each other. They don't want us to work together at all. Instead they want to segregate us by law — literally to build walls between us — at considerable expense to both smokers and nonsmokers — in places where we work, shop, eat or just go to amuse ourselves.

We know that such anti-smokers do not represent the great majority of nonsmokers. And the anti-smokers know it, too. But there is a danger that others will think they do.

"When I went to the legislature," says one anti-smoking lobbyist, "they thought I had about 10,000 people behind me. That was a laugh. It was just me. I had the law passed by myself."

If it is a "laugh" for the anti-smoker, it is no joke for the rest of us for we must all, smokers and nonsmokers alike, pay the cost of such foolish laws. All of us are losers when any one of us is denied freedom of choice.

We don't think that, over the long run, that's going to happen. We think that, like our billboard painters, we'll go on working together until we get the job done.

HE'S A TAILOR TO THE STARS—AND IT SUITS HIM FINE

By Isobel Silden

Jana Taylor-Perretta

Jack Taylor is very clothes-minded, as well he should be. He's tailored suits for just about every man in Hollywood, from Clark Gable to Elvis Presley, as well as hundreds of less riot-raising heart-throbs. And, although he knows many of the stars of the stage and screen intimately, he is as close-mouthed about them as Nixon was about Watergate. Revealing information about the men he sees in his Beverly Hills fitting rooms would be the easiest way of losing them to one of his many competitors.

However, he graciously volunteers the fact that Charles Bronson has tremendous shoulders in contrast to his small waist. And, pointing to a photo of Elvis Presley, he notes, "Elvis didn't autograph many pictures. I turned down a $500 offer to sell this last week."

It prices out to $250 a word, for all the singer penned was "Thanks, Elvis."

Although his show-business clients are the most well known, Taylor has dressed many prominent men. Among them is Henry Salvatore, known in political circles as "Mr. Republican," because of his friendships with Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan. Alec Roen, president of La Costa resort in southern California, is a satisfied customer. So is New Orleans restaurateur Jimmy Moran, recently named the best-dressed man in New Orleans — thanks to Taylor, of course.

Jack Taylor has been custom-making clothes for 41 years, and all his creations are handmade. "Even our pants seams are handmade. No one but us does that anymore. Some of those cheap clothes made in other countries are actually glued together!" he snorts disdainfully.

Such stars as Hal Linden, Steve Allen, Danny Thomas and Jimmy Connors are willing to pay Taylor's price: around $700 per suit. Taylor even makes Connors' tennis shorts.

"Our suits are made exclusively of fabrics imported from England. Many are cashmere or worsted cashmere which cost $150 a yard," Taylor says. It also takes his 16 employees four to five weeks to complete a suit. When given loving care, the suits will last almost forever because of their careful construction. "I've never heard of one wearing out," says Taylor.

Taylor has put together more than suits in his career. He once introduced a very oil-rich Far Eastern customer to a banker friend. A few weeks later, the banker called to order four suits, rather than his usual one at a time. The banker explained that "the oil man opened a two-million dollar account in my bank. This is my way of saying thanks to you."

Taylor's customers are constantly in the limelight, so he must stay on top of what's fashionable in men's wear. For this fall, he's enthusiastic about iridescent colors. He also anticipates a return to laced shoes instead of loafers.

Taylor recognizes that not everyone can pay $700 for a suit, and he's also aware that a young man leaving college for his first job will have limited funds to spend on clothes. He offers the following suggestions for a wardrobe that will be wearable for years to come:

- Start with a basic dark suit, in either black or navy, and add a white shirt and a printed or striped tie. Your next investment should be a classic gray-flannel suit, to be worn with a blue or oxblood-red shirt and striped tie.
- As paychecks mount up, consider buying a navy or gray blazer and a pair of gray slacks. Don't wear the gray suit pants with the blazer, however: the two grays will not match or look well together.
- You are then ready to venture into browns. A brown plaid or subtly striped suit and brown suede shoes could be the next choices.

You are not a well-dressed man, however, unless you pay close attention to Taylor's warnings:

- Never, but never, go without a tie in business situations.
- Make sure your jacket collar is flat and fits correctly, hugging the neck.
- Jacket sleeves should not be too long. Your shirt fabric should show above the collar and below the sleeve.
- Pants length should allow for a 3/8-inch break in front and be 1/4-inch off the floor in the back.
- The colors you select should complement your complexion, rather than your hair color. If you have a red face, don't select a brown that has too much red in it. Pale men look best in blues and grays. Suntanned men are most flattered by beiges and light blues.

"Avoid anything extreme. Don't buy anything jazzy," Taylor warns. And when he speaks, some of the world's best-dressed men listen. FW

HOBO MEATBALL STEW

½ cup tomato ketchup
1 tablespoon vinegar
1½ teaspoons seasoned salt
½ teaspoon basil
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 lb. lean ground beef, formed into 12 balls
4 medium potatoes, unpeeled, cut in 1-inch cubes
4 medium carrots, thinly sliced
1 large onion, sliced

1. In small bowl, combine ketchup, vinegar, salt, basil and pepper; set aside.
2. Cut heavy-duty aluminum foil in 4 pieces about 12 × 16 inches. Place meatballs and vegetables, equally divided, on foil pieces.
3. Pour ketchup mixture, equally divided, over meatballs and vegetables. Fold sides of foil over and seal ends tightly to make 4 packages.
4. Grill in hot barbecue coals or place on cookie sheet and bake in 425°F. oven about 40 minutes, until done.

Makes 4 servings

Approximate Cost: $2.50
Approximate Cost per Serving: $.65
Suggest serving with iceberg lettuce wedges and homemade Russian dressing.

PASTA WITH BROCCOLI

1 qt. water
2 tablespoons salt
1 lb. spaghetti
1 lb. broccoli
¼ cup vegetable oil
2 cloves garlic, slivered
5 twists freshly ground black pepper
½ cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

1. In large kettle, bring water and salt to a full boil. Add spaghetti, stirring so that water continues to boil.
2. Boil spaghetti rapidly, for about 15 or 20 minutes or until just tender. Drain, reserving 3 cups of the cooking water.
3. Prepare broccoli for cooking, and boil in a small amount of salted water, about 8 minutes or until just tender. Drain and keep warm.
4. In large kettle, heat oil and garlic, until garlic is a light-golden brown. Add drained spaghetti, 3 cups cooking water and broccoli. Season with freshly ground black pepper. Over medium heat, toss all well until heated throughout.
5. Serve on heated plates. Top each serving with 2 tablespoons grated cheese.

Makes 4 servings

Approximate Cost: $1.65
Approximate Cost per Serving: $.40
Suggest serving with a crusty loaf of bread, margarine and a salad of sliced tomatoes, black olives, onion rings and mozzarella strips.

CHICK PEA SOUP ITALIAN STYLE

1 can (1 lb.) chick peas
1 qt. water
4 bouillon cubes
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 can (8 ozs.) tomato sauce
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
2 cups shredded cabbage
¼ cup small size pasta: elbows, ditalini, etc.
½ cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

1. In large saucepan, combine chick peas, water, bouillon cubes, garlic, tomato sauce, salt and pepper. Heat to boiling, cover, simmer 10 minutes.
2. Add cabbage and cook 5 minutes or until just wilted.
3. Heat mixture to boiling; add pasta, return to boiling, stirring. Reduce heat slightly and continue to boil 10 to 12 minutes or until just tender.
4. Taste; add additional salt and pepper if desired; serve in large soup bowls with cheese.

Makes 4 servings

Approximate Cost: $2.05
Approximate Cost per Serving: $.50
Suggest serving with Italian bread and sautéed zucchini and peppers.

LENTIL HEALTH SALAD PLATE

1 cup dried lentils
2 cups water
1 medium onion, sliced
1 bay leaf
1 whole garlic clove
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon Tabasco
¼ cup vegetable oil
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
¼ cup chopped parsley
1 cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped onion
1 can (6½ or 7 oz.-size) tuna in vegetable oil, chunked
1 cup creamed cottage cheese
1 tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped
Crisp salad greens

1. In a medium saucepan, combine lentils, water, sliced onion, bay leaf, garlic, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon Tabasco. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer, covered, 30 to 40 minutes, until lentils are tender.
2. Drain lentils; remove and discard onion, bay leaf and garlic. Add oil, vinegar, parsley and ½ teaspoon salt. Mix well and cool.
3. Add celery, onion and tuna. Chill.
4. Mix cottage cheese with tomatoes. Place lentil salad on greens with cottage cheese.

Makes 4 servings

Approximate Cost: $2.90
Approximate Cost per Serving: $.75

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

WHAT ARE YOU SAYING IN YOUR SLEEP?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If you talk in your sleep you are probably one of those frustrated people whose spouses "don't let them get a word in edgeways," and who compensate for this by talking a blue streak in their sleep.

2. Your sleeping habits provide an important clue to how long you're likely to live.

3. There are interesting personality differences between good sleepers and poor sleepers.

4. Some people fall asleep unintentionally in a variety of circumstances. They may doze off suddenly and unexpectedly at work, during social gatherings, when they're slightly bored or when their spouse is awaiting an answer to a question. And they are usually completely in the dark as to what causes this, and why.

5. Women don't sleep as well as men do.

6. The most frightening thing that ever happens to most of us takes place while we are sound asleep.

ANSWERS

1. False. Studies sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health show that talking in your sleep indicates that you are thinking in your sleep — engaging in what psychologists term sleep mentation. And though sleep-talking may sometimes sound garbled or make little sense to an observer, research is cited characterizing sleep speech as an expression of our innermost feelings — "the mind freed of restraints stemming from reality, conscience, education and consciousness, reveals itself in the nude." Investigators conclude from the results of their studies that "it is evident that somniloquy (talking in one's sleep) is a widespread phenomenon among the normal population."

2. True. This was indicated by data from a six-year University of California study. Findings were drawn from a statistical project in which more than one million adults over the age of 30 (representing the range of geographic, economic and ethnic groups in the United States) responded to questionnaire-interviews. The data showed that men who sleep less than four hours a night are 2.80 times more likely to die at an earlier age than those who sleep seven to eight hours. (The ratio for women is 1.48.) Both men and women who sleep 10 hours or more a night have 1.8 times the mortality of the seven-to-eight-hour sleepers, who have the lowest mortality rate. The findings suggest that sleep problems may be a more important factor than previously suspected in determining life span.

3. True. In a University of Tennessee study, a poor sleep group and a good sleep group were selected from a sample of undergraduates. All were subjected to standard personality tests, followed by clinical interviews. Findings: "People in the good sleep group were more forceful and direct and expressed anger and resentment more easily. People in the poor sleep group maintained a façade of very flexible, adaptive behavior, while that of the good sleep group was more inflexible and rigid." It is noted that this façade of adaptive, flexible behavior was maintained in the poor sleep group at the cost of extra effort to control emotions and thoughts. Thus the obsessive ruminations discovered in the poor sleep group were found to be the mechanism used to ward off sleep and prevent the loss of ego control inherent in sleep.

4. True. This is called narcolepsy. A Harvard University study of this phenomenon terms it a disorder of the sleep mechanisms, typically characterized by the inability to stay awake on occasions where sleep is unexpected. Research findings cited indicate that persons who are so affected, "as well as their relatives, friends and employers frequently misconstrue [this] as indicative of laziness, irresponsibility or emotional instability." Rarely understood by the individual or others, it can be embarrassing and humiliating. As to the why of this, a complexity of causative and related factors are cited, including various unresolved life conflicts involving unacceptable feelings of anger, aggression or guilt.

5. True. Analysis of the results of 4,000 interviews of men and women from various walks of life, conducted by specialists from Berlin's Wilheim Greisinger Clinic, showed that women in all socio-economic levels reported higher rates of sleeping disorders (insomnia, fitful sleeping, needing soporifics to get to sleep, etc.). And members of both sexes in the more intellectual occupations reported more sleep disturbances than those engaged in physical work.

6. True. Harvard University's professor of psychiatry, Dr. John E. Mack, sums up the findings of his own and other leading studies in his definitive monograph Nightmares & Human Conflict. He concludes that "of all the experiences that terrify mankind, nightmares are perhaps the most widespread and characteristic, for human beings are the only creatures so fully aware of the precariousness of their existence." He notes that it is precisely this sense of vulnerability that is the most essential feature of this type of dream, in which we are confronted with forces over which we have little or no control that cause us to feel gravely imperiled. It is also pointed out that nightmares may serve to compartmentalize and provide expression for deep personality conflicts, "the disruptive potential of which might become evident only in sleep. For example, it is possible that were it not for the nightmares, the individual might be even more burdened with anxiety during the daytime, perhaps even unable to function effectively." So, the big, black-hearted bogie that the nightmare seems to most of us may be a benefactor after all. FW

JOG JOB

I jog, and as the years go by
You'd think I'd jog less often.
But no, I jog a dozen times
A day, and still I soften.

I jog when I am in the house.
I jog when I am out.
Yet no one sees me while I jog.
And this no doubt you doubt.

But I don't jog along a path.
Avoiding bike and dog.
It's not my legs, you see, it's now
My memory I jog.

—Richard Armour

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Computers In Schools

What's the newest in visual aids for the classroom? Well, they're not exactly a common item yet, but Voice Oriented Computer Assisted Lectures, or VOCAL, as their inventor, Dr. Jacob Goldstein, calls them, may soon be a part of school lecture halls.

VOCAL allows a person to request information from a computer verbally. The data can be flashed onto a large-scale video screen and used to illustrate a professor's lecture. For instance, a chemistry teacher who wanted to show a class a series of chemical reactions could speak to a specially programmed VOCAL computer through a lapel microphone. The computer would instantly produce a display of the reactions under discussion.

Dr. Goldstein, an Emory University chemistry professor, feels that a system such as VOCAL will make computers more available both to students and teachers. Up to this point, anyone wanting access to data stored in a computer has had to use a keyboard and learn special programming languages. Now your spoken wish is a computer's command.

Farm Life

Good ole Yankee ingenuity is still running strong, at least in this country's farming communities. Farmers, who are suffering from the gas shortage just like the rest of us, have found another fuel source that sprouts from the ground: corn.

Corn can be made into alcohol, and alcohol can be used to run tractors, which in turn plow fields in which more corn is planted. That's called a "renewable resource." And there's no waste: the left-over distilled corn is fed to the cattle.

There is one hitch, however. Federal law demands that you have a license to run a still, and last year only 18 alcohol-fuel plants were licensed. This year, the number's soared to nearly 800, but that brings up another question: Can you trust a tractor that tipples?

Pedal Power

Most of us think of bicycling as a leisurely activity, something we might do on a Sunday with the family. For John Marino, however, bicycling "is a way of life." Next Saturday, Marino will set out to break his speed record; "I hope to make it coast-to-coast in 12 days this time," he says. Last year, he rode the 2,960 miles from Santa Monica, Calif., to New York City's City Hall in 13 days 1 hour 20 minutes.

What's a typical day on the road like? "Well, I'm going to be doing at least 250 miles per day, so I'll be riding most of the time," says Marino. "A motor home, with a crew of five including a massage therapist, stays within a couple of miles and a motorcylce follows me.

"I originally started riding as physical therapy for a back injury I'd gotten while lifting weights," Marino explains. "I've been cycling religiously for three years, and I've found that on a trip like this I don't sleep much. I ride for four hours, then rest for 20 minutes, then ride for four more hours. I do my longest sleeping stint, about three hours, from 3:00 A.M. to 6:00 A.M.

On Sept. 3, just a few weeks after his cross-country trek, Marino plans to go to France as one of the contestants in the 750-mile Paris-Brest race. And, in the tradition of France's famous race, the Tour de France, Marino hopes to start a Great American Bike Race in 1980. "I think this country's ready for it," he says enthusiastically. Well, for starters, you might make that Sunday jaunt an all-day affair.

Bowling Championships

Baseball sluggers cringe at the word "strike," but when the contenders in the All America Youth Bowling Championship meet in Washington, D.C., this week, they'll be striving for strikes.

Bowling is the fourth most popular sport among this country's teen-agers, and contestants for the AAYBC have been chosen in a series of local, state and regional meets held during the past few months. Boys and girls have separate competitions, although 18-year-old Debra Kay McMullen, one of this year's contestants, emphasizes that "women have just as good a chance of winning as guys. Strength is not a factor, although a lot of girls think it is. My grandmother laughs at me because I'm often one of the only girls at the meets. But I don't care; I'll bowl against anybody."

Camerique

What does it take to be a good bowler? "Good timing, good concentration and knowing when to go slow," says Debra. "Sometime I get nervous and then I rush. It's a problem I have to overcome."

Debra is one of 200 players rivaling for the $1,000 scholarship offered to the high school-age winner. "I've been bowling since I was eight, and I've been waiting for this scholarship since I was in the fifth grade," she says determinedly. Now that's perseverance.

Lifestyles

Children. More than half a million children are currently living outside their natural homes or in institutions, and many of these children are child-abuse victims who have been taken from their parents or given up by them. A recent HEW report noted that many children are being left to drift from one agency to another, with little attempt being made to rehabilitate the abusive parents.

Accidents. Of the 8,000 Americans who drowned last year, almost 60 percent never expected to be in the water, reports the American National Red Cross in a study done for the Encyclopaedia Britannica Educational Corporation. According to the report, many drowning victims fall off boats, stumble into streams or rush into the water to save someone and are then weighed down by their wet clothes. The study points out that clothing can be used as flotation devices, if the victim doesn't panic and can get them off.

Attitudes. Public attitudes about abortion have not changed much since 1975, reports a Gallup survey. The new breakdown, which closely matched the 1975 numbers, showed that 54 percent of those polled believe that abortions should be legal "only under certain circumstances." About 22 percent felt that abortion should be legal "under all circumstances," and 19 percent favored making it "illegal under all circumstances."
