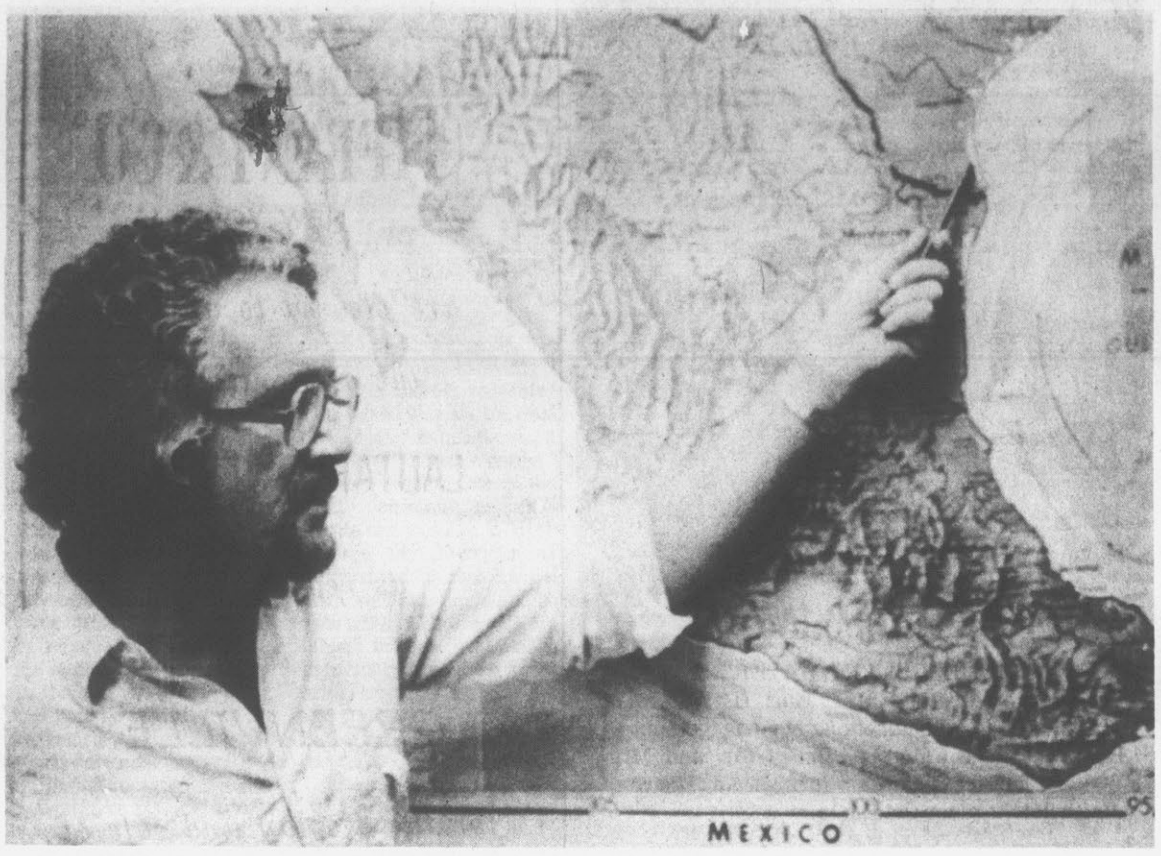
Coast Guard Fights Gulf Oil Drift



CLEANUP HELPER — Dr. Miles O. Hayes, a University of South Carolina geology professor aiding in the cleanup of the Gulf of Mexico oil spill, points to an area on the Texas coast where oil has begun to coat beaches. SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Vacationers surfed, swam and basked in the warm South Texas sunshine, apparently undisturbed by a Coast Guard counterattack against an invading oil spill.

Coast Guardsmen assembled a sophisticated array of equipment to scour southern Texas beaches soiled by tarry globs of crude from the world's worst oil spill, and to block oil now in the Gulf of Mexico from coming ashore.

Gift shops reported a run on nail polish and other solvents used to remove the tar from the feet of beachcombers. But hotels were filled and Ralph Thompson, executive vice president of the island's tourist bureau, said: "We don't have a serious problem here."

Stiff winds that pushed the slick toward Texas diminished Tuesday, stalling the advance of the crude from a runaway Mexican well.

Reconnaissance flights over the Gulf detected several oil patches south and east of Corpus Christi, said Carl Posey of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

It was not known whether those sheens came from a 2-mile-wide, 6-mile-long slick that was seen bobbing in warm waters southeast of Corpus Christi.

Earlier in the day, Environmental Protection Agency spokesman Roger Meacham said there was a "distinct possibility" the oil in the Gulf could damage the sensitive coastal ecology from Texas to Florida.

But he cautioned that there is "no way in the world anybody could say that for sure. ... It would be like predicting the weather three months from now. There are too many unknowns."

Oil from the Mexican well is spewing at a rate of about 20,000 barrels a day into the Bay of Campeche, hundreds of miles southeast of South Padre Island. Texas Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Tuesday he was told it would take six more weeks to drill relief wells in the Mexican seabed to help bring an end to the gushing.

After touring a section of the coastal area where tar balls washed ashore on Tuesday, Hobby said he believes Gov. Bill Clements will consider declaring it a disaster area.

"Chances are very good that long-term ecological damage can be avoided," Hobby said, "but we are going to see some very dirty beaches. It will look terrible, but they can be cleaned up without lasting damage ... it will take a lot of effort and a lot of money."

But neither the oil nor cleanup operations appeared to worry vacationers who packed the island's resort hotels.

GUCO Bills 'Sky High'

August electric bills can be expected to be "sky high," according to George Reel, customer service representative for Greenville Utilities Commission.

Reel said today that because the consumption of electric energy beginning around the middle of July has increased drastically, and due to the "extremely high" fuel adjustment charge for August, this month's bills will be costly.

Reel explained that daily high temperatures for June were running in the order of 70 to 75 degrees. Around the tenth of July, he said, the maximum daily temperature started to climb to 85 and 95 degrees. The peak day of electric usage during July occurred on July 17 and the first of August it climbed even higher, he noted.

"Most of the electric bills being rendered in August will reflect the hot weather during the latter part of July, plus the extreme hot weather we are currently experiencing," the spokesman pointed out. "This combination will simply mean higher kilowatthours of usage for most residential, and commercial, customers."

Reel mentioned that the fuel adjustment charge for August has been set at $12 per 1,000 kilowatthours. This charge is based on past and current estimates received from GUC's supplier, Virginia Electric Power Co., and reflects the cost of energy with two nuclear generating units being out of service, he added.

"With only one nuclear unit on line," Reel explained, "the oil-fired and coal-fired units have been used extensively to meet system demands. Not until the weather cools off, and usage drops, or until Surry One and Two come back in service will the fuel adjustment charge drop."

He urged consumers to "take every practical step to minimize use of electric energy during the summer months."

Suggestions on energy conservation practices can be obtained from the Customer Service Section of GUC's main office at 200 W. Fifth Street, Reel reminded local citizens.

Hepatitis Has Sixth Victim

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The worst outbreak of a serum hepatitis since 1961 has claimed the life of a sixth victim in an already shocked Craven County.

County health officials identified the latest victim as Jerry Whitford, 21, of Bridgeton. The fifth victim of the outbreak died Sunday.

So far, there have been 11 confirmed cases of the disease. Investigators from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta believe the outbreak was spread through the use of dirty needles by persons involved drugs, though some of the survivors of the outbreak have been quoted as saying they were not involved with drugs.

None of the cases has involved residents from any area other than the Craven County-New Bern area. Investigators say all the victims have had some contact with one of more of the other victims.

A study team from the CDC has not been able to determine through autopsies the exact reason for the severity of the outbreak. Serum hepatitis generally kills only 1 to 10 percent of those who contract that particular strain of the disease.

Dr. Verna Barefoot, director of the Craven County Health Department, has predicted still more cases, adding that they will be less severe than those earlier cases. The incubation period for serum hepatitis is 40 to 180 days.

The six deaths in Craven County have exceeded the rate of death in the most recent severe outbreak, that occurring in 1960-61 when 15 of 41 persons affected in New Jersey and Pennsylvania failed to survive the disease.

Key Government Witness Back On Stand In MacDonald Trial

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — One of the government's key witnesses in its triple-murder case against Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald was to resume his testimony today, and defense attorneys are expected to again voice objections.

Former FBI agent Paul Stombaugh may be asked today how he thinks puncture holes were made in the pajama top the former Green Beret says he was wearing when attacked by intruders he claims killed his family and injured him.

Stombaugh is expected to testify the holes match puncture wounds in MacDonald's wife's body, according to sources close to the prosecution. The shirt was found lying over Mrs. MacDonald.

MacDonald, 35, of Huntington Beach, Calif., is charged with stabbing and bludgeoning to death his wife, Colette, 26, and daughters Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2, while stationed at Fort Bragg in February 1970.

Stombaugh testified Tuesday the pajama top had 48 puncture holes in it. That's at least four times as many holes as MacDonald had puncture wounds, according to previous testimony.

And whoever was wearing the top wasn't moving when the holes were made, Stombaugh said. He said the holes showed no tearing, meaning they were made while the top was stationary.

Most of the blood found on the top matched Colette's, not MacDonald's, blood type, witnesses have said.

Market Steady

Warehouses sold 1,189,931 pounds Tuesday for $1,621,377, an average of $136.26 per hundred pounds. The market had a record average Monday of $136.98 per hundred pounds.

The sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade here, J. N. Bryan, reported that $1.50 per pound represented the top practical price paid yesterday, although some top quality leaf was purchased by the buying companies for as much as $1.55 per pound.

Offerings consisted of leaf, cutters' primings and lugs, he said, with a slight increase noted in the amount of non-descript tobacco on the warehouse floors.

Stabilization receipts accounted for 14.27 percent of total sales.

To date, the market has sold 8,596,919 pounds for $11,156,565, an average of $129.77 per hundred pounds.

Pope To Hold Mass On Mall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pope John Paul II is expected to end his U.S. visit this fall by celebrating a Mass before what could be largest gathering in the history of the nation's capitol, says the National Park Service.

The Mass, which would be held on the grassy mall that extends from the Capitol to the Washington Monument, could attract as many as 1 million worshipers and observers, George J. Berklacy, assistant to the director of the National Capital Parks, said Tuesday.

Such a crowd would easily surpass the civil rights and anti-war demonstrations of the 1960s, he said.

The Archdiocese of Washington applied Aug. 1 for a permit to hold the outdoor Mass and the request was granted immediately, Berklacy said.

The permit lists three possible dates — Oct. 5, 6 or 7. A final decision is expected to be made within a few weeks, Berklacy said.

ICE ON MARS AGAIN — This high-resolution picture of the surface of Mars was taken by Viking Lander 2 at its Utopia Planitia landing site on May 18, and relayed to Earth by Orbiter 1, June 7. It shows a thin coating of water ice on the rocks and soil. The time the frost appeared corresponds almost exactly with the buildup of frost one Martian year ago, which is 23 Earth months. At the time it remained on the surface for about 100 days. The ice seen in this picture is extremely thin, perhaps no more than one-thousandth of an inch. (AP Laserphoto)

Hunt Says Insurance Industry Planning Unjustified Increases

By WILLIAM M. WELCH

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The insurance industry is planning two rate increases on automobile coverage that are unjustified and in violation of a law enacted by the General Assembly this year, Gov. Jim Hunt said today.

Hunt said he had been informed by the Board of Governors of the Reinsurance Facility that it plans to implement an 18.6 percent increase in premiums charged to motorists whose policies have been placed in the Reinsurance Facility.

"The board describes this as a one-time surcharge to recoup losses suffered by the facility," Hunt said during a news conference. "I believe it is prohibited by legislation passed by the 1979 General Assembly."

Hunt said he had asked Attorney General Rufus Edmisten to "take whatever action is needed" to block the rate increase.

In addition, Hunt said, the facility board also has proposed a 1 percent surcharge on policies of all North Carolina drivers. He called the increase "clearly unjustified" and charged that it violated a cap the Legislature tried to put on insurance rate increases.

The governor said the increases were planned as onetime charges and that the Reinsurance Facility's board did not plan to seek approval from state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

He said the plans would violate a 6 percent yearly limit on auto-liability insurance rate increases included in a new state law. He said it also prohibits surcharges against drivers whose policies are in the facility although they have clean driving records.

The facility is a pool of policies handled jointly different insurance companies doing business in the state. It is designed to handle policies of drivers who are considered to be bad risks, but officials say at least 25 percent of all North Carolina drivers have policies through it and about half of those have clean driving records.

Hunt said he has not discussed the situation with Ingram. He said the commissioner may not have authority to block the surcharges.

Hunt said he considered the action by the Reinsurance Facility board as possibly designed to "bust" the facility. He said it could be aimed at generating opposition to the facility system and persuading legislators to abolish it.

"I think it's clear the Legislature intended to put a 6 percent cap on insurance rates. This is contrary to that," Hunt said.

Dear Abby

Where There's Smoke, There's Also Ire

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You were asked what you would do if you were on an airplane and were forced to sit in the smoking section because there were no more seats in no-smoking. You said, "I'd speak to the flight attendant."

Well, thanks a lot! I'm a flight attendant and, if the flight is full, the most I can do is try to get someone in the no-smoking section to voluntarily give up his seat to sit with the smokers. You can imagine how many people go for a deal like that.

Tell your readers that the best way to circumvent that problem is to reserve seats well in advance. When flying standby, take the same attitude you would have at the gaming tables: you pays your money and you takes your chances.

IN THE MIDDLE IN TEXAS

DEAR IN: You are not only in the middle, you are in error. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Here's a hot flash to ALLERGIC TO SMOKE, and to all others annoyed by smokers on airplanes.

All domestic airlines are now required by law to provide a no-smoking seat for every passenger who wants one, even if the entire plane has to be given over to non-smokers.

In other words, if only one person in the whole planeload is a non-smoker, that person's comfort and well-being must be considered above the whims of those who willfully pollute the air with the stench and irritants of tobacco smoke.

Since you are more widely read than government regulations, you can render another great public service by disseminating this information:

Fines up to $1,000 can be levied by Civil Aeronauts Board on the basis of a single, legitimate, well-documented complaint.

Readers with such complaints should write to:

WASHINGTON, D.C. 20428

SMOKEY JOE

DEAR ABBY: With so many irate readers voicing their "right" to breathe air unpolluted by the stench and irritants of tobacco smoke while traveling by plane, may I have equal time?

I must travel over 100,000 miles a year on business, and I think I'm entitled to be protected against screaming infants, pesky toddlers and talkative seat partners who interfere with my concentration when I'm trying to read or get some deadline paperwork done.

I also deserve protection from fellow travelers who drink too much and become boisterous and downright disgusting.

And, when flying coach, I pray that I won't be seated three across with a fat person who invariably crowds me, breathes heavily and perspires a lot.

Wouldn't life be beautiful if we could all insulate ourselves from those things that bug us? But since we can't how about a little patience, flexibility and tolerance?

ANOTHER OPINION

DEAR ABBY: We read with interest the letter regarding kids who love loud music, much to the dismay of their parents.

There is another group of offenders. I refer to church organists who pull out all the stops and play at a volume that actually makes your ears ache!

Our hearing is normal. We don't need to have that kind of volume to hear.

Sometimes we can hardly wait to get out of church. In fact, we have actually quit going to one church for this reason.

When we mentioned this to one organist, she took it as a personal criticism of her playing and was quite miffed. Perhaps a word in your column would be more effective. I hope so.

C.E. IN ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA.

DEAR C.E.: I hear you loud and clear. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: We also had the problem of loud music at our house. My parents used to complain that my stereo was too loud. They were of another generation and didn't understand that rock and disco have to be played loud or they're not effective.

My grandmother solved the problem last Christmas when she bought me a stereo headset! Now I can turn up my stereo at high volumes without disturbing anybody. Pass this along.

MICKY

DEAR MICKY: Wearing a headset may protect other eardrums from being assaulted, but what about your own? Audiologists (specialists who test hearing) inform me that they are now seeing an alarming number of people with serious hearing impairment due to constant exposure to loud music.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I finally figured out what motivates a little boy to become a big league baseball player.

One day he gets sick of his mother nagging, "Don't wipe your hands off on your pants" . . "Don't play in the dirt" . . . "Don't muss your hair up with that hat" . . . "Tuck your shirttail in" . . . "And for crying out loud don't spit in public. It's disgusting!"

He stops. But he makes a promise to himself. "One of these days I'm going to grow up and do all those things. I'm going to play professional baseball."

If all the spitting by ballplayers was cut out, a nine inning baseball game could be played in 32 minutes — give or take a few seconds.

As I was watching a major league game a few weeks ago, a relief pitcher approached the mound in a critical situation. He eyed his objective, scooped up a handful of dirt in his hands, tipped his hat brim a few times, checked to see if everyone was in position, became very intense, wound up and burnt it in.

Who knows what he did with the ball, but his spitting was impressive. Good, clean, no dribbling down the chin like a lot of rookies.

Other sports have a certain amount of grossness, but none to equal baseball.

Boxers wallow their mouthpieces in and out of their mouths.

Tennis players spit on their hands.

Basketball and football players gargle water which they never swallow.

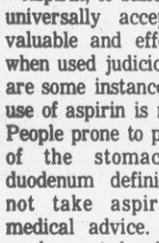
Runners slobber a lot.

But the Gross Olympics has to be baseball.

Not everyone who spits is in the big leagues. Some are just beginning. There's the "Closet Spitter," who puckers up his lips and puts out a short spray so fast it is barely seen by the naked eye.

There's the Picket Fence Spitter, who has the advantage of a space between his teeth. These spritzes sometimes go 1520 feet in the air. There are the ones who don't trust themselves and put their body at a 90-degree angle.

But the big leaguers are the ones who walk out in front of a crowd of 30,000 in the stands and a few million more watching on television, put their hands on their hips, face INTO the wind, get about three quarts of tobacco juice going for them and remember when their mothers used to nag, "Don't play with your gum, Howard!"



Speaking of Your Health...

Aspirin Is Aspirin

The headaches for which I occasionally take aspirin are made worse by the bombardment of television commercials about special kinds of aspirin. "Super strength, double strength, extra strength!" That's all we hear. My head bounces from side to side like a Ping-Pong ball. What's this all about? — Mrs. R.R., Ohio.

Dear Mrs. R.:

Aspirin is aspirin is aspirin (apologies to the poet, Gertrude Stein). All aspirin made by reliable manufacturers is the same. The wide disparity in the cost of aspirin must therefore be attributed to the packaging, advertising and overhead costs, not to the quality of the aspirin.

Aspirin, or salicylic acid, is universally accepted as a valuable and effective drug when used judiciously. There are some instances when the use of aspirin is not advised. People prone to peptic ulcers of the stomach or the duodenum definitely should not take aspirin without medical advice. Those who are known to be allergic to the drug must avoid it. Aspirin is not commonly used postoperatively because it tends to increase the possibility of bleeding.

There is no such thing as "extra-strength" or "super-strength" aspirin, in the sense that most people think of these expressions. Five grains of aspirin is the size of the average tablet of aspirin that we are all familiar with. Now, it stands to reason that if the manufacturer is going to increase the amount of aspirin in each tablet it will, of course, in that sense be "stronger." Ten grains of aspirin in each tablet is "stronger" than five grains of aspirin.

But there is no intrinsic difference in the aspirin itself. In other words, you can take two ordinary five-grain aspirin tablets and get the same effect as taking a "super-strength" 10-grain tablet.

While on the subject of aspirin, I'd like to call attention to parents who sometimes tend to suggest to their children that good-tasting aspirin is "candy," in order to get them to willingly take it. Children implanted with such an idea are the ones who are later tempted to help themselves to such "candy," with dire results. One of the great contributions that parents can make is to teach children that medicine is medicine and the choice is not theirs whether it should be taken or not. Children who are trained in this way make surprisingly little fuss about taking medicine and do not need the special inducement of the taste of "candy."

Can the size and shape of blood vessels be seen by X-ray? — Miss K.R., N.C.

Dear Miss R.:

Routine X-rays normally do not reveal the blood vessels unless there is marked arteriosclerosis in the arteries. There are now many remarkable techniques (angiograms and arteriograms) by which the blood vessels of the heart, lungs, brain and the general circulation can be clearly visualized by means of special dyes and X-rays.

Progress, But With Some Puzzling Signals

By WILLIAM E. CLAYTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At summer recess time, Congress has made progress on several parts of President Carter's energy self-sufficiency policy, but also sent him some puzzling signals.

Last spring the House and Senate rejected Carter plans for curbing use of electricity for advertising and closing gasoline stations on weekends. But they limited air-conditioning in nonresidential buildings.

But then the House voted a big loophole to the thermostat control law: any business operator may escape the regulations if he can show how to save the same amount of energy another way.

The Senate approved — for use in emergencies — Carter's coupon gasoline plan, which is similar to what was used in World War II. But the House killed it.

Then the House approved a new approach to rationing, making it easier for Carter to draw up a new plan. That bill supports the idea Carter should be able to have something ready if Middle East oil is cut off, but it contained so many amendments the White House called it unacceptable.

The rationing authority and thermostat control amendments are in a House-Senate conference committee.

Carter asked for an Energy Mobilization Board to cut red tape for high-priority energy projects. Variations of that idea are in both House and Senate committees and it is likely such a bill will pass, probably with enough restrictions to prevent the rush to energy from ignoring clean-air laws.

One reason for that bill is to speed widespread use of synthetic fuels — liquids and gases from coal, oil from shale, energy from waste, and the like. Carter proposed $88 billion in government subsidies by 1990 for synthetics.

The House has approved a first step: $3 billion in price support authority for the coming fiscal year. That bill is in House-Senate conference.

More ambitious bills for synthetics are in committees or are awaiting floor action in both houses.

Carter's proposed windfall profits tax for domestic oil cleared the House and is in the Senate Finance Committee.

There, support is increasing for forgiving part of the tax for producers who "plow back" their profits into energy development or new production.

The House and Senate have passed mandatory energy conservation bills. Under them, the states must write their own energy plans. Those that fell short would have to accept a federal program.

The two versions differ over the posible exemptions added to the House bill. They are in the same conference committee as rationing, and some leaders want the conferees to find a compromise before October.

Never Again Should We Use The Bomb

Monday was an anniversary — even though a somber one — for our culture.

It was the 34th observance of the first nuclear attack. The A-bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, Japan Aug. 6, 1945.

A second atomic bomb dropped on Nagasaki ended the war, and, so far, the use of such weapons in warfare.

Nuclear powers are still armed to the teeth with even more sophisticated nuclear weapons, however. The more we learn about radiation the more we recognize that such bombs must never be used again. They could destroy mankind.

Failure Rate Variance

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Whether a child fails a grade in one of North Carolina's public schools appears to have a great deal to do with where the student is enrolled.

Figures compiled by the State Department of Public Instruction show severe peaks and valleys from one school systems to the next among the state's 145 local units.

The reasons for this wild variation are several; having to do with student abilities which are influenced by parental income and educational levels, and with promotion policies which are established by the local schools.

It is obvious from a study of the figures that:

1. More local schools are cracking down on promotions, and fewer children are being passed from one grade to another without achieving.

2. The first grade, and occasionally even kindergarten, prove most troublesome to pupils. But those schools which do not promote the children at that low grade level show a better promotion rate in later years.

Stumbling

3. Getting out of junior high school and into high school is the next big stumbling block for students, and the non-promotion rate soars in most schools at that grade level.

4. While non-promotion is increasing as the public and educators reject the philosophy of social promotions which have largely been the rule in recent year, the pattern shows wide variations from one local school system to another.

For example, more pupils fail in Jones County by far than any other in the state. The overall failure rate there is more than 15 per 100 pupils. But other school systems in eastern regions of the state have the highest failure rates: Kinston, Durham, Martin County, Greene County, Fairmont in Robeson County, and Warren County all have more than 10 failures per 100 children.

Educators point to low family income and educational levels — and that usually means large numbers of minority children — as being critical factors in school failure or success; and the schools with higher failure rates have large black enrollments.

The figures also demonstrate that other eastern school systems with equally large black enrollments, but much lower final failure rates, have weeded out more pupils through nonpromotion at earlier grades. In Maxton schools, for example, nearly half the ninth graders fail to get promotions.

BILL NOBLITT

After that the failure rate drops sharply until only 2.9 percent fail to graduate. Dropouts obviously account for the sharp turnaround. A similar pattern can be seen in many schools with large black enrollments.

Low Rates

The lowest failure rates occur in mountain counties. Ashe has only one per 100 overall, and a couple of grades in which no non-promotions took place. Alleghany has fewer than one failure per 100, while several counties have between two and three: Yancey, Yadkin, Wilkes, Watauga, Clinton, Mitchell, Greensboro, and Haywood among those.

Disregarding the sharp differences between local school systems, a statewide computation graphically shows the pattern of student progress through the grades:

One or two per 100 fail kindergarten, then the first grade gets tough so that eight or nine per 100 aren't promoted. Things improve in the rest of the lower grades, with the failure rate falling from about five at second grade to less than two in fifth and sixth. Then junior high toughens up and the failure rate jumps to more than 10 at ninth and nearly 13 at 10th grades. Juniors and seniors (largely because dropouts have weeded the classroom) show a declining failure rate till less than four per 100 fail the 12th grade.

The Social Whirl

NOTE TO EDITOR: Art Buchwald is being reevaluated by the White House to see if he is worthy of staying in Washington. While waiting for a decision, he left behind some of his favorite columns.)

Of all the communities in the United States there is probably none as social as Palm Beach, Fla. This sun-drenched, diamond-studded, Rolls Royce-clogged stretch of real estate has more cocktail and dinner parties per capita than any other town in the Free World.

There is a society editor for every five families in the colony, as opposed to the national average of one for every hundred families. But Palm Beach is not social just for the sake of being social. All the social activity down here has to do with raising money for some charity. It is very gauche to have a party for the sake of a party and, therefore, everyone is in the business of giving a party for a cause.

It's gotten so that two people can't have breakfast together without making a donation to an orphanage.

As a matter of fact, while there is no shortage of parties and balls in Palm Beach, there is a shortage of diseases to give them for. The old-timers in Palm Beach have all the good diseases tied up. The first families of the city have a monopoly on heart, cancer, cerebral palsy and mental health, and a newcomer who is trying to crash society down here has very few illnesses left to choose from.

The other day I asked four friends to have lunch with me and one of them, Mrs. Paul Ames, asked, "What's it for?"

"Nothing," I said. "We just want to have lunch."

"You can't just have lunch without a reason," she said. "If you can come up with a good disease, we'll accept."

I called the local Palm Beach hospital and asked them if there were any diseases for which there hadn't been benefits held this season.

ART BUCHWALD

"You're calling awfully late," the woman said. "The only thing we still have open is malaria and yellow fever."

"Is arthritis taken?" I asked.

"It was one of the first to go. We can't give you diabetes or hay fever, either."

"Well, is there some hospital I could raise money for?"

"We have an animal shelter in Cheyenne, Wyo., that hasn't been spoken for."

"Okay, I'll give a luncheon for that. What do I do now?"

"You have to form a committee."

"What for?"

"To get your wife's picture in the newspaper. Why else would you want to give a benefit?"

"That's true," I said.

"Just call the local newspaper and they'll send a photographer over in 10 minutes."

I formed a committee consisting of my wife as honorary chairman, Mrs.

To the editor:

I must reply to the recent Hotline and Public Forum items published in your paper on behalf of the Pitt Co. Assn. for Retarded Citizens pertaining to solicitations for ARC.

Although the Exchange Club of Greenville was not mentioned by name, I am sure that those who read the above-mentioned articles related them to our club as each year, as one of our projects to raise money to support the different groups and organizations that we do, we sponsor a magic show for the benefit of the handicapped, retarded and underprivileged children and adults of the county.

These tickets are NOT sold in the name of any organization. They are sold by the representatives of the booking agent who state that they represent the Exchange Club and that the tickets bought by the donator or donations made would be distributed to any one of their choice or would be donated to organizations such as the retarded, handicapped or underprivileged. By stating that these tickets would be distributed to such groups could be misconstrued by some over the phone as soliciting for one particular group. This is not true.

Our Magic Show is attended and enjoyed by hundreds of retarded, handicapped and underprivileged children and adults each year. The Exchange Club is proud to be able to provide this entertainment to these who would not otherwise have this opportunity.

The Exchange Club is also proud to use the monies raised by this project to help other organizations. For example, we recently gave two mannequins to the local Red Cross to be used in teaching cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

The Exchange Club has many outstanding Greenville citizens among its members. We have several prominent attorneys who check all our projects. We are proud of the work of our club. Again, may I stress that we do NOT solicit in the name of any organization except our own?

Energy In A Nutshell

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
Associated Press Writer

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — President Carter, who favors development of alternate fuels, might find one very close to home — in the Carter family peanut warehouse.

Scientists at the Army's Construction Engineering Research Laboratory are preparing to test peanut hulls to find out how they burn as fuel.

Eventually, they may be used with coal, or instead of coal, to fire boilers at military installations and perhaps at small civilian power plants.

It all began when a Georgia firm contacted Steve Hathaway at the Champaign lab.

"Are you interested in pelletized peanut hulls?" a company official asked Hathaway.

Hathaway, who has tested refuse-derived fuel and wood pellets as alternate fuels, agreed it was an interesting idea to test peanut hulls pressed into pellets, but said he had not previously thought about nut shells as an energy source.

"Not in my wildest dreams," said Hathaway.

Bill Lehmberg of the Gold Kist farmer cooperative in Atlanta was anxious for Hathaway to test the shells as an energy source.

"He sent me a little box of the pellets," said Hathaway. "Then we got 300 pounds."

Lehmburg said peanut hulls can present a problem since many peanuts are consumed out of the shell — in bags or cans, in candy, in peanut butter — and the processors have to find a way to dispose of them.

"For years, we've been looking for ways to use peanut shells," said Lehmberg. "At times of the year, you can't get rid of them."

Gold Kist turns some into pellets as a fiber source for livestock, and makes others into cat litter and artificial fireplace logs.

The Dothan Oil Mill in Dothan, Ala., which shells peanuts and produces peanut oil, has found another way to use the shells. The firm's operation re-

THE INSIDE REPORT

Ham-Handed Policy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Hamilton Jordan's first attempt to become a Haldemanesque chief of staff by seizing energy policy has failed, undercut by President Carter himself in a way that beclouds the answer to this question: Who's in charge here?

On July 24, Jordan exercised his new powers to designate a young budget official named Eliot Cutler as energy policy czar, eclipsing Secretary of Energy-designate Charles Duncan. Unexpectedly, Duncan raised the roof. So, on Aug. 1, Carter wrote Duncan that he really was in charge, but in language less precise than the new secretary desired.

This imprecision proves again that Jimmy Carter is no Richard Nixon and Hamilton Jordan is no H.R. Haldeman. Carter and Jordan excercised less than iron resolve in fulfilling a major purpose of their cabinet shakeup: to prevent any cabinet member from "going in business for himself," the alleged sin of the deposed Joseph A. Califano at HEW and W. Michael Blumenthal at Treasury.

Dr. James Schlesinger at Energy was not so accused, but the president's aides grumbled over his efforts to achieve a production-oriented energy policy against environmentalists at the White House and Office of Management and Budget (OMB). It was thought that Duncan would offer no such problems. The Texas multi-millionaire and ex-Coca Cola magnate, deputy secretary of defense since 1977, has been a clean-desk administrator uninterested in issues.

Consequently, trouble was the last thing expected July 24 when a confidential memo from Jordan named Cutler, an OMB associate director, to oversee energy policy for the federal government. Cutler, a protege and former environmental staffer of Sen. Edmund Muskie, has clashed repeatedly with Schlesinger over environmental questions.

Now he was in the driver's seat, according to Jordan's memo: "I've asked Eliot Cutler to coordinate all staff and agency activities (relating to energy)...It will be Eliot's responsibility to coordinate the activities of all staff and agency units relating to the enactment of the president's proposals...I am sure that Eliot can count on your cooperation as he undertakes these responsibilities"

"I'm afraid," one Carter aide confided to us, "that the memo was a little Ham-handed — I mean heavy handed " Whatever the merits of Haldeman-style prose, Jordan clearly reflected what was intended at the White House: Cutler would have policy control, while good ole' Charley Duncan — no abrasive Ph.D. to be sure — would keep the desks clean in the Forrestal Building.

That grossly misread Duncan, who pronounced its unacceptability so forcefully that a week later Jordan was overrulled. On Aug. 1, the president personally signed this memo to Duncan: "It is vitally important that the administration speak and act with a single voice on energy policy matters. I expect you to exercise lead responsibility for...energy policy. This includes development of the necessary strategies and programs to present our policies to the congress and the public." So much for Eliot Cutler, who had celebrated his 33rd birthday two days earlier and was not mentioned in Carter's memo.

This was exactly what Duncan wanted. But Carter then went on to befog matters a little, adding that he had asked the White House and OMB staffs "to coordinate their energy policy-related activities with you." This could be interpreted by a hungry bureaucrat to undercut Duncan's policymaking role.

40 Years Ago Today

August 8, 1939

Two weeks from today the Greenville tobacco market will be in full sway and farmers throughout that section already are grading their leaf and otherwise preparing to place it on the warehouse floors.

The Eastern Carolina markets will begin auction sales on Tuesday. Although the crop was considered unusually large, much of the crop ripened at the same time and farmers lost a large quantity because they were unable to house it at the proper time. Also, many farmers reported that worms were getting some of the late tobacco.

Keeping The Faith In The Market

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — For 15 years the patience and confidence of stock market optimists has been tested — by war, trading reforms, recessions, political uncertainty, social change, energy shortages and inflation.

When hope arose it was dashed. When the Dow Jones industrial average exceeded 1,000 points, a hook reached out and pulled it back. While other investments soared, stockholders watched and suffered silently.

The consequences have been profound: A decline of millions in the number of inividual investors, and the demise of scores of brokerage firms. And an investment return that has failed to equal inflation.

Now, with the onset of recession, a low point seems to have been reached. "Business Week" proclaims "The Death of Equities." Gold bugs forecast a $400-an-ounce price. Surveys shows confidence is down.

For some, that is. John Wright of Wright Brokers' Service, which handles about $750 million dollars, has never given up. And this week he again states his faith in the eventual resurgence of stocks.

"Stock market values have always lagged behind other prices during periods when inflation has been rising," he writes. "But once inflation starts to moderate and then reduce, stock prices have always caught up in due course and then reached new highs."

Wright's analysis includes a long section on the causes of inflation which are now behind us, such as the Vietnam War, and causes that are now diminishing, such as the decline in value of the U.S. dollar.

As inflation diminishes, he believes, stocks will regain strength. "They caught up after the Civil War, after two World Wars and, in our opinion, they will unquestionably catch up again after the current extended post-Vietnam War period of inflation and recession," he says.

Officials at the National Association of Investment Clubs tell a similar story. Stocks, they say, are for the long term. They claim that over an extended period the odds are still with investors.

Their results seem to document that claim. In spite of a flat market, as measured by the popular averages, members have averaged a return of 10.46 percent a year over the past decade, an official said.

Value Line, the largest investment advisory firm, sticks to its forecast of a big advance early in the decade of the 80s, an advance it believes will put the Dow Jones average far over 1,000 points.

And Laidlaw Adams & Peck, which raises capital for relatively smaller, innovative companies, reports a sharply improved climate for investments and suggests it means an expansive economy in the 80s.

All this isn't to say that investors haven't had reason to question the future of stocks. It is served up merely as a reminder that some investors of knowledge and intelligence are still keeping the faith.

Side By Side By Sondheim

A Gem Of Celebration In Song

In this year of the return of Summer Theater to East Carolina University, the entertainment comes in small productions — and here the old adage that precious things comes in small packages holds true.

In "Side by Side By Sondheim," this week's musical at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus (playing nightly at 8:15 p.m. through Saturday, August 15), director Edgar R. Loessin has perfected a second miniature entertainment jewel, a little brighter than last week's "Starting Here, Starting Now," basically because the material is richer.

Again, the fine talents of Michelle Reilley, Carolyn Greene and Del Lewis are on hand — plus the added attraction of Amanda Muir and Rodney Freeze.

Ms. Muir's narration is a joy to hear. She is radiant and makes no bones about her love of the lyrics (and the music) of a gifted man of the theater, Stephen Sondheim, who helped create such modern classics as "West Side Story," "Do I Hear A Waltz?," and "Gypsy" among a long list of memorable musicals.

It would be nice to know who penned the excellent narration — perhaps Ned Sherrin, responsible for the show's continuity — or maybe Ms. Muir or Edgar Loessin?

Rodney Freeze, a familiar figure in numerous campus productions, is an admirable addition to the Lewis, Greene, Reilley trio. His "Buddy's Blues" is a delightful rendition, in song and dance, and he is equally effective in the sad-sweet delivery of "Anyone Can Whistle."

Incidentally, Ms. Muir has her time in song, and she splendidly evokes the pensiveness of "Send In The Clowns."

There's such a wealth of rememberable highlights in the two dozen plus songs that naming a few poses the agony of choice. One the audience emphatically reacted to is "You Could Drive A Person Crazy," with Del Lewis, Carolyn Greene, and Michelle Reilley giving a socco parody of all the boppy-da-boop-boop songs ever sung by the Andrew Sisters — with Lewis as "the pretty one, Maxine."

These three were also in top shape in the physical as well as the musical demands of "You Gotta Get A Gimmick."

Carolyn Greene and Michelle Reilley are altogether appealing in their solo stints — "Ah Paree" and "I'm Still Here," and Ms. Reilley's pitter-patter part in "Getting Married Today" is a miracle of untwisting a veritable tongue-twister.

"Conversation Piece," the finale touching briefly on such favorites as "Tonight," "Do I Hear A Waltz," and "I Feel Pretty" leaves the listener wishing there'd been time for much more from the five singers in this second Summer Theater production.

At one point, Ms. Muir notes "we are a celebration," and this is indeed a celebration in song that shouldn't be missed even if it's necessary to play hookey from a commission meeting or some other routine summer obligation.

quires steam, and it had burned coal, natural gas and oil to fire its boilers.

But, now the firm grinds up the peanut shells and blows them into the boiler, where they are burned.

"One-hundred percent of our steam energy comes from peanut hulls," said Rhett Bryson, executive vice president. "They burn well because they're dry. There is very little moisture in the hulls."

The peanut-shell pellets will be the first alternate fuel burned in the Champaign lab's new test furnace.

"I sent them to Steve because of this sophisticated machine he has that is supposed to tell us everything we need to know about burning peanut hulls," Lehmberg said, referring to Hathaway.

The tests will reveal the burning characteristics of the peanut-shell pellets. They also will tell scientists whether existing coal-fired boilers and fuel-handling equipment must be modified before the pellets are substituted as the energy source.

Lehmberg said the peanut-shell pellets cost about $25 a ton at the plant, and could be competitive with other fuels, depending on transportation costs.

"It isn't a real inexpensive thing to produce," he said. "It hasn't been economical until the past year, but since the energy crisis, it became feasible to approach the market."

If Hathaway's tests do indicate it would be practical to switch from coal to peanut hulls at power plants, about 350,000 tons would be available each year from the peanut industry, said Lehmberg. The answer to how much energy that would produce depends on the tests.

Since transportation costs are high, the location of the hulls is important. About 70 percent of the nation's peanuts are produced in the southeast — Georgia, Alabama and Florida. Another 20 percent come from Virginia and North Carolina and 10 percent from Texas and Oklahoma.

There are, of course, lots of power plants in the Southwest and the other states.

Evans-Novak . . .

"I'm afraid the White House staff managed to muddy up the waters on the president's memo," said one energy department official.

Furthermore, when industry officials entered the White House the next day, Aug. 2, to be briefed on the energy program, they were told that Cutler was the man in charge for them to deal with. So much for Secretary-designate Duncan. At least some White House aides present at the Aug. 2 meeting were not aware the president's Aug. 1 memo existed.

White House aides pooh-pooh this battle of the memos as inside Washington politics unrelated to the real world. In truth, it involves basic issues. Schlesinger, while ever the good soldier as Carter's only Republican cabinet member, has been in unceasing conflict with the White House and OMB over decontrol and the environment.

To the consternation of the White House, Duncan — reputedly no less conservative on energy than Schlesinger — is not content to be a desk-cleaner. Thus, there arises the possibility of duplicating the Alice-in-Wonderland scene of July 16: Schlesinger telling newsmen how the president's energy program would ease environmental constraints; Cutler standing nearby explaining how it would not do that at all.

To kill this two-headed policy monster, Carter's Aug. 1 memo to Duncan concluded on a slightly menacing note: "Please advise me of any breach of these instructions." But the "instructions" are susceptible to varied interpretation; they have not yet been distributed through the bureaucracy; and they may or may not countermand Jordan's July 24 memo. The Carter administration is far from being Nixonized.

Lake Might Try Republican Race

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — State Sen. I. Beverly Lake Jr. says he is seriously considering a request that he switch parties and run as a Republican for governor next year.

He said the request came from former Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser and state GOP Chairman Jack Lee, but he added he will not make a final decision before late September.

"I'm taking it seriously. They asked me to consider it, to think hard about it, and that's what I'm doing," said Lake Tuesday.

Lake's father was an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor in 1960 and 1964. The younger Lake, 45, is a Raleigh lawyer.

He said he has not ruled out running as a Democrat for the U. S. Senate or for state attorney general next year. But the offer to switch parties, he said, was appealing because of the expectancy of organizational and financial support from both the state Republican Party and from the N. C. Congressional Club, an organization of supporters of Republican Sen. Jesse Helms who also are dedicated to conservative causes and candidates.

Lake said that help from the club, which was instrumental in helping to raise more than $7 million Helms spent in his 1978 re-election campaign, would be "a vital consideration."

Never Again Should We Use The Bomb

Monday was an anniversary — even though a somber one — for our culture.

It was the 34th observance of the first nuclear attack. The A-bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, Japan Aug. 6, 1945.

A second atomic bomb dropped on Nagasaki ended the war, and, so far, the use of such weapons in warfare.

Nuclear powers are still armed to the teeth with even more sophisticated nuclear weapons, however. The more we learn about radiation the more we recognize that such bombs must never be used again. They could destroy mankind.

Failure Rate Variance

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Whether a child fails a grade in one of North Carolina's public schools appears to have a great deal to do with where the student is enrolled.

Figures compiled by the State Department of Public Instruction show severe peaks and valleys from one school systems to the next among the state's 145 local units.

The reasons for this wild variation are several; having to do with student abilities which are influenced by parental income and educational levels, and with promotion policies which are established by the local schools.

It is obvious from a study of the figures that:

1. More local schools are cracking down on promotions, and fewer children are being passed from one grade to another without achieving.

2. The first grade, and occasionally even kindergarten, prove most troublesome to pupils. But those schools which do not promote the children at that low grade level show a better promotion rate in later years.

Stumbling

3. Getting out of junior high school and into high school is the next big stumbling block for students, and the non-promotion rate soars in most schools at that grade level.

4. While non-promotion is increasing as the public and educators reject the philosophy of social promotions which have largely been the rule in recent year, the pattern shows wide variations from one local school system to another.

For example, more pupils fail in Jones County by far than any other in the state. The overall failure rate there is more than 15 per 100 pupils. But other school systems in eastern regions of the state have the highest failure rates: Kinston, Durham, Martin County, Greene County, Fairmont in Robeson County, and Warren County all have more than 10 failures per 100 children.

Educators point to low family income and educational levels — and that usually means large numbers of minority children — as being critical factors in school failure or success; and the schools with higher failure rates have large black enrollments.

The figures also demonstrate that other eastern school systems with equally large black enrollments, but much lower final failure rates, have weeded out more pupils through nonpromotion at earlier grades. In Maxton schools, for example, nearly half the ninth graders fail to get promotions.

BILL NOBLITT

After that the failure rate drops sharply until only 2.9 percent fail to graduate. Dropouts obviously account for the sharp turnaround. A similar pattern can be seen in many schools with large black enrollments.

Low Rates

The lowest failure rates occur in mountain counties. Ashe has only one per 100 overall, and a couple of grades in which no non-promotions took place. Alleghany has fewer than one failure per 100, while several counties have between two and three: Yancey, Yadkin, Wilkes, Watauga, Clinton, Mitchell, Greensboro, and Haywood among those.

Disregarding the sharp differences between local school systems, a statewide computation graphically shows the pattern of student progress through the grades:

One or two per 100 fail kindergarten, then the first grade gets tough so that eight or nine per 100 aren't promoted. Things improve in the rest of the lower grades, with the failure rate falling from about five at second grade to less than two in fifth and sixth. Then junior high toughens up and the failure rate jumps to more than 10 at ninth and nearly 13 at 10th grades. Juniors and seniors (largely because dropouts have weeded the classroom) show a declining failure rate till less than four per 100 fail the 12th grade.

The Social Whirl

NOTE TO EDITOR: Art Buchwald is being reevaluated by the White House to see if he is worthy of staying in Washington. While waiting for a decision, he left behind some of his favorite columns.)

Of all the communities in the United States there is probably none as social as Palm Beach, Fla. This sun-drenched, diamond-studded, Rolls Royce-clogged stretch of real estate has more cocktail and dinner parties per capita than any other town in the Free World.

There is a society editor for every five families in the colony, as opposed to the national average of one for every hundred families. But Palm Beach is not social just for the sake of being social. All the social activity down here has to do with raising money for some charity. It is very gauche to have a party for the sake of a party and, therefore, everyone is in the business of giving a party for a cause.

It's gotten so that two people can't have breakfast together without making a donation to an orphanage.

As a matter of fact, while there is no shortage of parties and balls in Palm Beach, there is a shortage of diseases to give them for. The old-timers in Palm Beach have all the good diseases tied up. The first families of the city have a monopoly on heart, cancer, cerebral palsy and mental health, and a newcomer who is trying to crash society down here has very few illnesses left to choose from.

The other day I asked four friends to have lunch with me and one of them, Mrs. Paul Ames, asked, "What's it for?"

"Nothing," I said. "We just want to have lunch."

"You can't just have lunch without a reason," she said. "If you can come up with a good disease, we'll accept."

I called the local Palm Beach hospital and asked them if there were any diseases for which there hadn't been benefits held this season.

"You're calling awfully late," the woman said. "The only thing we still have open is malaria and yellow fever."

"Is arthritis taken?" I asked.

"It was one of the first to go. We can't give you diabetes or hay fever, either."

"Well, is there some hospital I could raise money for?"

"We have an animal shelter in Cheyenne, Wyo., that hasn't been spoken for."

"Okay, I'll give a luncheon for that. What do I do now?"

"You have to form a committee."

"What for?"

"To get your wife's picture in the newspaper. Why else would you want to give a benefit?"

"That's true," I said.

"Just call the local newspaper and they'll send a photographer over in 10 minutes."

I formed a committee consisting of my wife as honorary chairman, Mrs.

To the editor:

I must reply to the recent Hotline and Public Forum items published in your paper on behalf of the Pitt Co. Assn. for Retarded Citizens pertaining to solicitations for ARC.

Although the Exchange Club of Greenville was not mentioned by name, I am sure that those who read the abovementioned articles related them to our club as each year, as one of our projects to raise money to support the different groups and organizations that we do, we sponsor a magic show for the benefit of the handicapped, retarded and underprivileged children and adults of the county.

These tickets are NOT sold in the name of any organization. They are sold by the representatives of the booking agent who state that they represent the Exchange Club and that the tickets bought by the donator or donations made would be distributed to any one of their choice or would be donated to organizations such as the retarded, handicapped or underprivileged. By stating that these tickets would be distributed to such groups could be misconstrued by some over the phone as soliciting for one particular group. This is not true.

Our Magic Show is attended and enjoyed by hundreds of retarded, handicapped and underprivileged children and adults each year. The Exchange Club is proud to be able to provide this entertainment to these who would not otherwise have this opportunity.

The Exchange Club is also proud to use the monies raised by this project to help other organizations. For example, we recently gave two mannequins to the local Red Cross to be used in teaching cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

The Exchange Club has many outstanding Greenville citizens among its members. We have several prominent attorneys who check all our projects. We are proud of the work of our club. Again, may I stress that we do NOT solicit in the name of any organization except our own?

Energy In A Nutshell

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
Associated Press Writer

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — President Carter, who favors development of alternate fuels, might find one very close to home — in the Carter family peanut warehouse.

Scientists at the Army's Construction Engineering Research Laboratory are preparing to test peanut hulls to find out how they burn as fuel.

Eventually, they may be used with coal, or instead of coal, to fire boilers at military installations and perhaps at small civilian power plants.

It all began when a Georgia firm contacted Steve Hathaway at the Champaign lab.

"Are you interested in pelletized peanut hulls?" a company official asked Hathaway.

Hathaway, who has tested refuse-derived fuel and wood pellets as alternate fuels, agreed it was an interesting idea to test peanut hulls pressed into pellets, but said he had not previously thought about nut shells as an energy source.

"Not in my wildest dreams," said Hathaway.

Bill Lehmberg of the Gold Kist farmer cooperative in Atlanta was anxious for Hathaway to test the shells as an energy source.

"He sent me a little box of the pellets," said Hathaway. "Then we got 300 pounds."

Lehmburg said peanut hulls can present a problem since many peanuts are consumed out of the shell — in bags or cans, in candy, in peanut butter — and the processors have to find a way to dispose of them.

"For years, we've been looking for ways to use peanut shells," said Lehmberg. "At times of the year, you can't get rid of them."

Gold Kist turns some into pellets as a fiber source for livestock, and makes others into cat litter and artificial fireplace logs.

The Dothan Oil Mill in Dothan, Ala., which shells peanuts and produces peanut oil, has found another way to use the shells. The firm's operation re-

THE INSIDE REPORT

Ham-Handed Policy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Hamilton Jordan's first attempt to become a Haldemanesque chief of staff by seizing energy policy has failed, undercut by President Carter himself in a way that beclouds the answer to this question: Who's in charge here?

On July 24, Jordan exercised his new powers to designate a young budget official named Eliot Cutler as energy policy czar, eclipsing Secretary of Energy-designate Charles Duncan. Unexpectedly, Duncan raised the roof. So, on Aug. 1, Carter wrote Duncan that he really was in charge, but in language less precise than the new secretary desired.

This imprecision proves again that Jimmy Carter is no Richard Nixon and Hamilton Jordan is no H.R. Haldeman. Carter and Jordan excercised less than iron resolve in fulfilling a major purpose of their cabinet shakeup: to prevent any cabinet member from "going in business for himself," the alleged sin of the deposed Joseph A. Califano at HEW and W. Michael Blumenthal at Treasury.

Dr. James Schlesinger at Energy was not so accused, but the president's aides grumbled over his efforts to achieve a production-oriented energy policy against environmentalists at the White House and Office of Management and Budget (OMB). It was thought that Duncan would offer no such problems. The Texas multi-millionaire and ex-Coca Cola magnate, deputy secretary of defense since 1977, has been a clean-desk administrator uninterested in issues.

Consequently, trouble was the last thing expected July 24 when a confidential memo from Jordan named Cutler, an OMB associate director, to oversee energy policy for the federal government. Cutler, a protege and former environmental staffer of Sen. Edmund Muskie, has clashed repeatedly with Schlesinger over environmental questions.

Now he was in the driver's seat, according to Jordan's memo: "I've asked Eliot Cutler to coordinate all staff and agency activities (relating to energy)...It will be Eliot's responsibility to coordinate the activities of all staff and agency units relating to the enactment of the president's proposals...I am sure that Eliot can count on your cooperation as he undertakes these responsibilities"

"I'm afraid," one Carter aide confided to us, "that the memo was a little Ham-handed — I mean heavy handed " Whatever the merits of Haldeman-style prose, Jordan clearly reflected what was intended at the White House: Cutler would have policy control, while good ole' Charley Duncan — no abrasive Ph.D. to be sure — would keep the desks clean in the Forrestal Building.

That grossly misread Duncan, who pronounced its unacceptability so forcefully that a week later Jordan was overrulled. On Aug. 1, the president personally signed this memo to Duncan: "It is vitally important that the administration speak and act with a single voice on energy policy matters. I expect you to exercise lead responsibility for...energy policy. This includes development of the necessary strategies and programs to present our policies to the congress and the public." So much for Eliot Cutler, who had celebrated his 33rd birthday two days earlier and was not mentioned in Carter's memo.

This was exactly what Duncan wanted. But Carter then went on to befog matters a little, adding that he had asked the White House and OMB staffs "to coordinate their energy policy-related activities with you." This could be interpreted by a hungry bureaucrat to undercut Duncan's policymaking role.

40 Years Ago Today

August 8, 1939

Two weeks from today the Greenville tobacco market will be in full sway and farmers throughout that section already are grading their leaf and otherwise preparing to place it on the warehouse floors.

The Eastern Carolina markets will begin auction sales on Tuesday. Although the crop was considered unusually large, much of the crop ripened at the same time and farmers lost a large quantity because they were unable to house it at the proper time. Also, many farmers reported that worms were getting some of the late tobacco.

Keeping The Faith In The Market

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — For 15 years the patience and confidence of stock market optimists has been tested — by war, trading reforms, recessions, political uncertainty, social change, energy shortages and inflation.

When hope arose it was dashed. When the Dow Jones industrial average exceeded 1,000 points, a hook reached out and pulled it back. While other investments soared, stockholders watched and suffered silently.

The consequences have been profound: A decline of millions in the number of inividual investors, and the demise of scores of brokerage firms. And an investment return that has failed to equal inflation.

Now, with the onset of recession, a low point seems to have been reached. "Business Week" proclaims "The Death of Equities." Gold bugs forecast a $400-an-ounce price. Surveys shows confidence is down.

For some, that is. John Wright of Wright Brokers' Service, which handles about $750 million dollars, has never given up. And this week he again states his faith in the eventual resurgence of stocks.

"Stock market values have always lagged behind other prices during periods when inflation has been rising," he writes. "But once inflation starts to moderate and then reduce, stock prices have always caught up in due course and then reached new highs."

Wright's analysis includes a long section on the causes of inflation which are now behind us, such as the Vietnam War, and causes that are now diminishing, such as the decline in value of the U.S. dollar.

As inflation diminishes, he believes, stocks will regain strength. "They caught up after the Civil War, after two World Wars and, in our opinion, they will unquestionably catch up again after the current extended post-Vietnam War period of inflation and recession," he says.

Officials at the National Association of Investment Clubs tell a similar story. Stocks, they say, are for the long term. They claim that over an extended period the odds are still with investors.

Their results seem to document that claim. In spite of a flat market, as measured by the popular averages, members have averaged a return of 10.46 percent a year over the past decade, an official said.

Value Line, the largest investment advisory firm, sticks to its forecast of a big advance early in the decade of the 80s, an advance it believes will put the Dow Jones average far over 1,000 points.

And Laidlaw Adams & Peck, which raises capital for relatively smaller, innovative companies, reports a sharply improved climate for investments and suggests it means an expansive economy in the 80s.

All this isn't to say that investors haven't had reason to question the future of stocks. It is served up merely as a reminder that some investors of knowledge and intelligence are still keeping the faith.

Side By Side By Sondheim

A Gem Of Celebration In Song

In this year of the return of Summer Theater to East Carolina University, the entertainment comes in small productions — and here the old adage that precious things comes in small packages holds true.

In "Side by Side By Sondheim," this week's musical at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus (playing nightly at 8:15 p.m. through Saturday, August 15), director Edgar R. Loessin has perfected a second miniature entertainment jewel, a little brighter than last week's "Starting Here, Starting Now," basically because the material is richer.

Again, the fine talents of Michelle Reilley, Carolyn Greene and Del Lewis are on hand — plus the added attraction of Amanda Muir and Rodney Freeze.

Ms. Muir's narration is a joy to hear. She is radiant and makes no bones about her love of the lyrics (and the music) of a gifted man of the theater, Stephen Sondheim, who helped create such modern classics as "West Side Story," "Do I Hear A Waltz?," and "Gypsy" among a long list of memorable musicals.

It would be nice to know who penned the excellent narration — perhaps Ned Sherrin, responsible for the show's continuity — or maybe Ms. Muir or Edgar Loessin?

Rodney Freeze, a familiar figure in numerous campus productions, is an admirable addition to the Lewis, Greene, Reilley trio. His "Buddy's Blues" is a delightful rendition, in song and dance, and he is equally effective in the sad-sweet delivery of "Anyone Can Whistle."

Incidentally, Ms. Muir has her time in song, and she splendidly evokes the pensiveness of "Send In The Clowns."

There's such a wealth of rememberable highlights in the two dozen plus songs that naming a few poses the agony of choice. One the audience emphatically reacted to is "You Could Drive A Person Crazy," with Del Lewis, Carolyn Greene, and Michelle Reilley giving a socco parody of all the boppy-da-boop-boop songs ever sung by the Andrew Sisters — with Lewis as "the pretty one, Maxine."

These three were also in top shape in the physical as well as the musical demands of "You Gotta Get A Gimmick."

Carolyn Greene and Michelle Reilley are altogether appealing in their solo stints — "Ah Paree" and "I'm Still Here," and Ms. Reilley's pitter-patter part in "Getting Married Today" is a miracle of untwisting a veritable tongue-twister.

"Conversation Piece," the finale touching briefly on such favorites as "Tonight," "Do I Hear A Waltz," and "I Feel Pretty" leaves the listener wishing there'd been time for much more from the five singers in this second Summer Theater production.

At one point, Ms. Muir notes "we are a celebration," and this is indeed a celebration in song that shouldn't be missed even if it's necessary to play hookey from a commission meeting or some other routine summer obligation.

quires steam, and it had burned coal, natural gas and oil to fire its boilers.

But, now the firm grinds up the peanut shells and blows them into the boiler, where they are burned.

"One-hundred percent of our steam energy comes from peanut hulls," said Rhett Bryson, executive vice president. "They burn well because they're dry. There is very little moisture in the hulls."

The peanut-shell pellets will be the first alternate fuel burned in the Champaign lab's new test furnace.

"I sent them to Steve because of this sophisticated machine he has that is supposed to tell us everything we need to know about burning peanut hulls," Lehmberg said, referring to Hathaway.

The tests will reveal the burning characteristics of the peanut-shell pellets. They also will tell scientists whether existing coal-fired boilers and fuel-handling equipment must be modified before the pellets are substituted as the energy source.

Lehmberg said the peanut-shell pellets cost about $25 a ton at the plant, and could be competitive with other fuels, depending on transportation costs.

"It isn't a real inexpensive thing to produce," he said. "It hasn't been economical until the past year, but since the energy crisis, it became feasible to approach the market."

If Hathaway's tests do indicate it would be practical to switch from coal to peanut hulls at power plants, about 350,000 tons would be available each year from the peanut industry, said Lehmberg. The answer to how much energy that would produce depends on the tests.

Since transportation costs are high, the location of the hulls is important. About 70 percent of the nation's peanuts are produced in the southeast — Georgia, Alabama and Florida. Another 20 percent come from Virginia and North Carolina and 10 percent from Texas and Oklahoma.

There are, of course, lots of power plants in the Southwest and the other states.

Evans-Novak . . .

"I'm afraid the White House staff managed to muddy up the waters on the president's memo," said one energy department official.

Furthermore, when industry officials entered the White House the next day, Aug. 2, to be briefed on the energy program, they were told that Cutler was the man in charge for them to deal with. So much for Secretary-designate Duncan. At least some White House aides present at the Aug. 2 meeting were not aware the president's Aug. 1 memo existed.

White House aides poohpooh this battle of the memos as inside Washington politics unrelated to the real world. In truth, it involves basic issues. Schlesinger, while ever the good soldier as Carter's only Republican cabinet member, has been in unceasing conflict with the White House and OMB over decontrol and the environment.

To the consternation of the White House, Duncan — reputedly no less conservative on energy than Schlesinger — is not content to be a desk-cleaner. Thus, there arises the possibility of duplicating the Alice-in-Wonderland scene of July 16: Schlesinger telling newsmen how the president's energy program would ease environmental constraints; Cutler standing nearby explaining how it would not do that at all.

To kill this two-headed policy monster, Carter's Aug. 1 memo to Duncan concluded on a slightly menacing note: "Please advise me of any breach of these instructions." But the "instructions" are susceptible to varied interpretation; they have not yet been distributed through the bureaucracy; and they may or may not countermand Jordan's July 24 memo. The Carter administration is far from being Nixonized.

Lake Might Try Republican Race

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — State Sen. I. Beverly Lake Jr. says he is seriously considering a request that he switch parties and run as a Republican for governor next year.

He said the request came from former Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser and state GOP Chairman Jack Lee, but he added he will not make a final decision before late September.

"I'm taking it seriously. They asked me to consider it, to think hard about it, and that's what I'm doing," said Lake Tuesday.

Lake's father was an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor in 1960 and 1964. The younger Lake, 45, is a Raleigh lawyer.

He said he has not ruled out running as a Democrat for the U. S. Senate or for state attorney general next year. But the offer to switch parties, he said, was appealing because of the expectancy of organizational and financial support from both the state Republican Party and from the N. C. Congressional Club, an organization of supporters of Republican Sen. Jesse Helms who also are dedicated to conservative causes and candidates.

Lake said that help from the club, which was instrumental in helping to raise more than $7 million Helms spent in his 1978 re-election campaign, would be "a vital consideration."

Daredevil Era For Actors Is Over

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When a big-name star takes a tumble, his production company can end up hurting. Though there are still a few holdouts, the era of the daredevil actor is over.

James Garner does handle many of the chase scenes in "The Rockford Files." And last year, Robert Conrad, 44, went eight rounds with an 18-year-old Golden Gloves champion for "Duke," a miniseries in which Conrad portrayed an aging fighter.

But the days when Douglas Fairbanks Sr. and Errol Flynn risked life and limb to perpetuate their swashbuckling images have vanished in the face of the prohibitive losses faced by production companies forced to halt shooting because of a disabled star.

"When this sort of thing happens the whole company goes down," says Brett Garwood, spokesman for Aaron Spelling Productions, which makes such action TV series as "Charlie's Angels" and "Starsky and Hutch."

Insurance companies do a multi-million dollar business providing policies to protect against a star's absence, whether through accident or illness, industry officials say.

"Many of them (actors) say they do their own stunts, but in reality the stunts they do are very simple or they don't do any stunts," says one insurance company official who declined to be identified.

Yet even activities not considered stunts can lead to accidents. Such was the case with Erik Estrada, who was critically injured during Monday's filming of the NBC series, "CHiPs".

The 30-year-old actor, who plays officer Frank "Ponch" Poncherello of the California Highway Patrol, was riding a motorcycle on a studio lot at speeds described by MGM spokeswoman Gail Cottman as relatively slow.

"He just slipped on an oil slick in an alley," she said. Estrada's motorcycle hit a car cavrying a camera crew to film the scene, and the popular teen idol broke his sternum, several ribs, his right wrist and suffered two slightly collapsed lungs.

Doctors said Tuesday he was "out of danger," but it wasn't known how long Estrada would be away from the "CHiPs" set. Long absences of key stars can be costly.

Al Newman, vice president of MGM, which produces the TV series, said filming would resume today without Estrada. The accident is to be incorporated into a segment of the "'CHiPs" series, he said.

William Vanden Bossche, director of insurance for the entertainment conglomerate MCA, which owns Universal Studios and MCA Records, estimates that when a star is absent and the company is forced to cancel a day's shooting, costs run between $25,000 and $30,000.

Most of the expense is pay for the idled cast and crew. When only contract personnel are getting paid, costs mount at the rate of $10,000 to $15,000 daily, he said.

PLANS JOHN WAYNE'S BIOGRAPHY — Michael Wayne, John Wayne's oldest son, speaks at a press conference Tuesday in Hollywood announcing plans for the family's own film biography of John Wayne which will be a three-hour dramatic film for ABC-TV. Speaking about the family's objectivity in assessing the film, Wayne said, "I think there is no one better than the family who knew him well to give a true picture of what he was like." Durham Police Indict Four DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Seven persons, including four former Durham police officers, were indicted Tuesday on charges of conspiring to sell drugs.

The indictments, returned in Durham Superior Court, followed a three-month probe by the State Bureau of Investigation into alleged illegal activities among some vice squad officers.

The Durham County Grand Jury handed down indictments for three former drug officers on the Durham Police Department's vice squad, a former Durham public safety officer and three private citizens.

Earlier, Durham Superior Court deputy clerk Barbara Jane Hankel was arrested and charged with misdemeanor possession of Preludin, a diet drug. One of the vice squad officers indicted is charged with supplying her with the drug.

Indicted were Ronnie Dexter Jarmon, who was suspended from the vice squad earlier this summer, and Robert Earl Yates and Lonnie Hammond, both of whom resigned from the vice squad earlier this month.

Jarmon was charged with possession with intent to sell and distribute drugs, delivering drugs, conspiracy and embezzlement. Yates was charged with possession with intent to deliver drugs, delivering drugs and conspiracy. Hammond was also charged with conspiracy.

Also indicted was former public safety officer Michael Richard Rubish Jr., a former public safety officer who resigned from the force last summer. He was indicted on charges of possession with intent to deliver drugs, delivering drugs and conspiracy.

The indictments alleged the officers sold drugs prior to and after Dec. 10, 1978 while they were members of the vice squad.

Yates and Rubish allegedly conspired to sell drugs to two private citizens, Rocky Edward Kelly and Randy Williams Lloyd, both of whom were also indicted on charges of conspiracy.

Hammond, accused of being involved in a separate conspiracy, was charged with selling drugs with another private citizen, Lucious Wayne Day. Day was third private citizen charged wih conspiracy.

District Attorney Dan K. Edwards Jr. has said investigations will continue and could result in more indictments by future grand juries.

Seek Hess' Release

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Lawyers for Rudolf Hess, the Nazi convicted of helping Adolf Hitler launch World War II, contends that his client is being deprived of his human rights.

Hess, now 85, was sentenced to life imprisonment by the Nuremburg tribunal at the end of the war. He is the only Nazi war criminal still held in Berlin's Spandau Prison, maintained jointly by Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union.

A spokesman says attorney Alfred Seidl has filed a formal complaint with the European Human Rights Commission, saying that the former Nazi deputy's continued imprisonment is a violation of his rights.

20/20 Continues To Climb

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's "20-20" newsmagazine continues to build an audience during the summer rerun season, while NBC struggles to build an audience for its entry, "Prime Time Sunday."

The ABC series, which began a weekly schedule in the spring after nearly a year as a monthly serving, was 14th in the ratings from the A.C. Nielsen Co. for the week ending Aug. 5.

The show was, in fact, one of 13 ABC programs in the week's Top 20, and contributed to a first place finish for ABC in the networks' ratings race.

CBS' "60 Minutes," with a program consisting of episodes broadcast previously, was 25th in the ratings, while NBC's fledgling "Prime Time Sunday" was a disheartening No. 40.

ABC's overall rating for the week was 14.6, with CBS second at 13 and NBC third at 12.5. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 14.6 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to ABC.

For the second week in a row, it was ABC's "Three's Company" in first place, with a rating of 24.2. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 24.2 percent saw at least part of the show.

ABC's "Taxi," was No. 2, with two shows from CBS, "WKRP in Cincinnati" and "M-A-S-H," next. NBC's top-rated program was a repeat of a made-for-TV film, "Return to Gilligan's Island," 18th in the ratings.

Best among the programs being broadcast for the first time was "Detective School-One Flight Up," an ABC pilot, which was No. 7.

ABC had three of the week's five lowest-rated programs, including No. 61 "Operation Petticoat," No. 62 "Salvage I" and No. 63 "Battlestar Galactica." CBS' "The Waltons" was 60th, and "Project U.F.O." on NBC 64th.

Here are the week's Top 10 programs:

"Three's Company," with a rating of 24.2 representing 18 million homes, and "Taxi," 22.4 or 16.9 million, both ABC; "WKRP in Cincinnati," 22.3 or 16.6 million, "M-A-S-H," 21.3 or 15.9 million, and "Lou Grant," 20.9 or 15.6 million, all CBS, and "Vegas," 20.5 or 15.2 million, "Detective School-One Flight Up," 20.4 or 15.2 million, "Laverne and Shirley," 20.2 or 15 million, "Mork and Mindy," 19.6 or 14.6 million, and "Barney Miller" and "Charlie's Angels, both 19 or 14.2 million, all ABC.

The rest of the Top 20:

"Barbara Walters Summer Special," "Happy Days," and "20-20," all ABC; "Barnaby Jones" and "The Jeffersons," both CBS; "Carter Country," ABC; Big Event-"Rescue from Gilligan's Island," NBC; "Eight is Enough," ABC, and "The Rockford Files," NBC.

Vietnamese Lift Ban On U.S. Congressmen

By HARI MANIAM
Associated Press Writer

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Nine U.S. congressmen investigating the plight of Indochinese refugees in Southeast Asia are flying to Hanoi today after the Vietnamese government lifted a ban on the visit.

The Vietnamese on Monday withdrew their invitation to the group because one of its members, Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., accused the Hanoi regime of human rights violations on a colossal scale. Then the Vietnamese Embassy in Bangkok announced on Tuesday that the entire group including Drinan would be welcome after all.

A Vietnamese spokesman said the ban was lifted after a "proposal" from Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. Details of Vance's proposal were not available.

Drinan, a Roman Catholic priest who was one of the leading early opponents of U.S. participation in the Vietnam War, said last weekend that "Vietnam is engaged in one of the most fundamental violations of human rights that we have seen in this century."

He did no soften his criticism after Hanoi accused him of slander and withdrew the invitation.

"The whole word knows there are 400,000 Vietnamese people who are in detention camps, who are refugees, who are boat people. The conscience of the world has been shocked," he said on Tuesday.

The congressional group, which is headed by Rep. Benjamin S. Rsenthal, D-N.Y., was going to Vietnam after visits to refugee camps and meetings with officials in Hong Kong, Thailand, Indonesia and Malaysia.

Their last day in Malaysia was spent at the refugee camp on Bidong Island, off the northeast coast, where about 37,000 Vietnamese are crammed into an area of 1.2 square miles.

The four countries they have visited are giving refuge they hope is temporary to an estimated 400,000 Vietnamese, ethnic CHINESE, Cambodians and Laotians who have fled from communist rule in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. The four governments that are their unwilling hosts say they cannot keep them, either because their economies cannot absorb them or because they would disturb ethnic balances in their populations. They also say they can take no more because their meager and inadequate facilities to care for them are overtaxed.

Vietnam at an international conference on refugees in Geneva last month said it would do all it could to halt the exodus. This greatly pleased the other Southeast Asian governments whose concern for their own situations outweighs any concern they might have for other Asians subjected to the repression and persecution of the communist Indochinese governments. But some Westerners are beginning to have guilty feelings about their governments' acquiescence in a Vietnamese ban on emigration.

Carter Cheered In Baltimore

WASHINGTON (AP) — Standing on the balcony of Chiapparelli's restaurant, just over a red, white and green awning, President Carter drew a wave of cheers from a crowd gathered in Baltimore's Little Italy.

Two hours earlier, an informal speech and stroll down East Biddle Street drew cheers from a crowd of blacks clamoring to shake his hands.

The president, spending 4½ hours in one of the East's older cities, managed to split his visit Tuesday between two ethnic groups that can have a significant impact on his election chances.

In so doing, he turned a day of presidential travel, designed to demonstrate his support for energy conservation and solar power, into a stop on his undeclared re-election campaign.

Carter, who suggested in a speech to the convention of the Order of the Sons of Italy in America that Americans spend more time walking, took a few strolls himself around an old neighborhood advertising its ethnic makeup.

From Chiapparelli's, down the street from the Colombo Savings and Loan Association, he walked to the home of Nancy D'Alesandro, wife and mother of former mayors.

That was just one tip of the presidential hat to simpler modes of travel.

Entertains New Envoy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, declaring there has been no change in his policy toward the Palestinian Liberation Organization, is meeting with the new Israeli ambassador at a difficult juncture in U.S.-Israeli relations.

Carter scheduled a lunch today in the Oval Office with Ambassador Ephraim Evron. It will be his first conference with the envoy since reports appeared suggesting the United States may be moving toward a friendlier view of the Palestinian group.

The question of a possible change in U.S. policy came up while Carter was visiting Baltimore Tuesday.

Asked by a reporter whether such a change has taken place, the president responded with a flat "no."

Last week, the president was reported to have likened the Palestinian cause to the U.S. civil rights movement. This report, based on a dinner conversation with a group of reporters, raised questions in Israel and among its supporters in the United States about the strength of the U.S. commitment to Israel.

Rain Seen As Only Way To End Fires

By CHRISTOPHER B. DALY
Associated Press Writer

Weary but dogged, firefighters are looking to the skies for a break from strong winds and high temperatures as fires burn out of control in five dry Western states, roaring across thousands of acres of timber and range land.

"There's no force on Earth powerful enough to cope with what we've seen," said Gordon Stevens, fire boss on one of the biggest blazes, the Mortar Creek fire in Idaho. "Nature will just have to do her thing first."

Smoke from that blaze, which Stevens said "will rank with the greatest fires in recent memory," darkened the sky more than 100 miles away at Yellowstone Park on Tuesday, and state officials said the huge firefighting effort was taxing Idaho's diesel fuel supply.

From a bustling headquarters in Boise, Idaho, fire bosses were calling reserves from as far away as New England to battle 15 fires out of control in Idaho, Oregon, Montana and Wyoming.

At least 135,000 acres of forest and rangeland have been destroyed, and National Weather Service forecasts for the next few days held little hope for rains to help douse the flames.

The Interagency Fire Center, a federal agency that coordinates and supplies firefighting manpower and equipment around the country, has mobilized a force of 4,500 — including 2,500 Forest Service firefighters, hundreds of Indians from reservations across the West and the Idaho National Guard.

"Some of them have been out there since July 26th. They can't go on much longer and we've got to pull them out," fire information officer Barry Wirth said Tuesday.

Despite the effort, the fires, sometimes whipped by 30-to 35-mph winds, raged on.

The Mortar Creek fire along the Middle Fork of Idaho's Salmon River covered at least 50,000 acres by midday Tuesday. The fire was burning along a 62-mile perimeter and crews had cut fire lines through only four miles of the roadless wilderness, Stevens said.

In eastern Idaho, the month-old Gallagher Peak fire reached 57,000 acres, although its advance was stopped on the northern end.

In Oregon, reinforcements were called Tuesday night to help extinguish a 920-acre blaze in remote terrain of the Umatilla National Forest. Officials hoped to have 500 firefighters on the lines today and contain the blaze Thursday morning.

In Montana, a crew of more than 300 began to gain control over a 2,500-acre blaze west of Anaconda on Tuesday, and officials said there was some hope of putting it out soon — despite dry weather, rough terrain, and high altitude.

Another fire had consumed 1,250 acres in the Lincoln-Scapegoat Wildnerness area in west-central Montana by early today. But heavy equipment has been unable to reach the fire because of rugged terrain.

Five helicopters and some converted bombers were helping the firefighters, said Vic Standa of the U.S. Forest Service. And, an additional 140 firefighters were en route to the area, to help the 450 already there. But they had to walk nine miles to reach the blaze.

A rapidly growing fire which consumed an estimated 1,000 acres of brush was burning out of control early today in Sequoia National Forest about 11 miles east of Porterville, Calif., authorities said.

About 300 forest service firefighters battled the blaze in rocky terrain late Tuesday as flames lapped through thick brush, grass and oak trees up the northeast slope of Cow Mountain on the Tule Indian reservation, said forest service spokesman Art Cowle, who added that the fire began about 3 p.m. Tuesday.

In Wyoming, a blaze in the Laramie Range had destroyed an estimated 5,110 acres

Five Die In Wreck

LUMBERTON, N. C. (AP) — A car racing to a hospital with a woman in labor ran out of control and crashed into a parked truck, killing the woman and four other persons and injuring three, police said today.

Officer Randy Canady of the Lumberton Police Department said efforts to save the unborn child failed.

Canady, who investigated the accident just before midnight Tuesday, said the car carried four adults and four children and was bound for Lumberton's Southeastern General Hospital.

The officer estimated that the car was traveling 90 mph when it ran out of control, left the roadway and crashed into a parked tree-trimming truck.

Canady identified the dead as Carrie Mae Oxendine, 25, the expectant mother; her sister, Diane Locklear, 23; her mother, Marrinda Jane Locklear, 47; and her children, Ricky Oxendine, 8, and Steven Ray Oxendine, 2. All were from Lumberton.

Canady said the car apparently was driven by Henry Lee Callihan, 25, of Bladenboro, who with 4-year-old Terry Wayne Oxendine was removed to Cape Fear Valley Hospital in Fayetteville. The other survivor, Linda Locklear, 4, was hospitalized in Lumberton.

Quality Improved

FARMVILLE — Quality of tobacco being sold on the Farmville Tobacco Market continues to improve, according to Louis Williams, Sales Supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

The marketing of more quality lugs and cutters for the past two days has caused the average to increase by several dollars per hundred pounds. Monday and Tuesday sales were the best of the season. Growers are still concerned about the prices paid for some grades of primings, however. Volume of sales yesterday was the heaviest of the season. Lugs and cutter grades accounted for most of volume.

The market sold 792,367 pounds for $1,117,056, for an average of $140.98 per hundred pounds. To date, the Farmville market has sold 4,983,528 pounds for $6,486,712, for a season's average of $130.16 per hundred, compared with $123.74 last year for the the same number of selling days. Yesterday's average was $13-per-hundred higher than that of the same sales day last year, Williams indicated.

Charged In Break-In

Greenville Police have arrested Gregory Paul Manning, 17 of 207 North Sylvan Dr. on breaking, entering and larceny charged, Chief Glenn Cannon reported this morning.

Cannon said Manning was taken into custody yesterday in connection with a break-in of Stuffy's at 521 Cotanche St. in which a stereo, $72.72 in change and $12 worth of ham was reported taken.

Group Will Meet Tonight

The Pitt County Sediment Control Commission will meet August 20 at 8 p.m. in the County Manager's office at the Pitt County Court House.

The only item on the agenda is the consideration of the Edwards Acres Sediment and Erosion Control Plan.

Quietly Setting Up Early Primaries

By DAVID POWELL
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Three Southern states, encouraged by President Carter's campaign strategists, are quietly but diligently piecing together a regional presidential primary.

Two of the states — Florida and Alabama — already have set their presidential primaries for March 11, 1980. Carter's homestate of Georgia, led by Democratic Gov. George Busbee, is expected to follow suit.

Officials in the three states cite various reasons for setting the primaries on March 11. But Carter's southeastern campaign director, Russ Marane of Atlanta, says a major factor is that the president's campaigners want it that way.

"It's not any particular master plan or strategy," Marane says. "Georgia and Alabama and Florida are in close proximity. In terms of having a concerted campaign, we'd rather have it wind up at the same time. It just makes sense."

The changes, however, have prompted speculation that Carter wants to give his campaign a smashing kickoff by positioning the three primaries in his homeland at the start of the 1980 presidential season. He won the Florida and Georgia primaries in 1976 and carried all three states in the general election against former President Gerald Ford.

However, a poll in late June in the South shows Carter's popularity is slipping. Atlanta pollster Claibourne Darden says his poll puts Carter behind U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and even Republican Ronald Reagan.

"The last stronghold of President Carter's support in the country has been broken," Darden says.

In Darden's poll of 750 voters in 10 southern states, Kennedy drew support from 51 percent of the Democrats compared to 40 percent for Carter. That was a change from Darden's April poll showing Carter at 45 percent and Kennedy at 38.

Moreover, Darden says, his latest poll shows 46 percent of the southerners who voted for Carter in 1976 favor Kennedy in 1980 while 43 percent are staying with the president. Carter trailed Republican Ronald Reagan in the poll but led all other GOP candidates.

The three southern primaries could come immediately after delegate selection in several northern states where Carter may have difficulty. Or they might be the first balloting of the season. Caucuses have been set the same day in Hawaii, Oklahoma and Washington state.

The importance of timing was underscored last Sunday when U.S. Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said the beleaguered president would not be a viable 1980 candidate and should consider withdrawing if he loses the early presidential primaries next year.

Regional primaries have been discussed ever since the presidential selection process became cluttered with primaries. But the major impetus for the southern change lies in a Democratic National Committee rule requiring primaries be held between March 11 and June 10. Unless the DNC grants a waiver, state parties are required to take the key steps in selecting delegates to the 1980 Democratic National Convention in New York during that period.

Elaine Kamarck, director of the DNC's Compliance Review Commission, says the national committee has not yet exempted any states. But several states want to hold pre-March 11 balloting, including Iowa's precinct caucuses on Jan. 21, New Hampshire's primary on Feb. 26 and Massachusetts' primary on March 4.

"We'll just have to see if they get waivers," she says.

Altogether, Florida, Georgia and Alabama will choose 208 delegates.

Florida's primary was set by state law for March 11, and Carter already has two organizers in Orlando and Miami. They have high hopes of winning Florida's 100 delegates because the state was the scene of a watershed event in Carter's rise to power when he beat former Alabama Gov. George Wallace in Florida's 1976 primary.

However, some Democrats who helped engineer Carter's 1976 victory have abandoned him and are trying to draft U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. Democratic National Committeeman Sergio Bendixen of Miami is organizing Kennedy backers for the presidential straw ballot at the Democratic State Convention in St. Petersburg on Nov. 18.

Alabama's first-ever presidential primary had been set for March 4. State Rep. A.L. Harrison, D-Birmingham, says legislators decided on an early primary because Alabamans, who will chose 45 delegates, wanted to upstage Florida.

"We thought it would give a positive reflection of Alabama," says Harrison. "And we thought Alabama was truly representative of the South. I don't think Florida is representative of southern attitudes. You have so many retirees from all over the country down there."

But Harrison says the March 4 date went afoul of Democratic rules, so the Democratic-controlled legislature voted late last month to move the primary to March 11.

In Georgia where 63 Democratic delegates are chosen, Busbee and other top Democrats seem receptive to a proposal by White House Chief of Staff Hamilton Jordan to hold the Georgia primary March 11. Georgia law requires that a seven-member committee set the primary date at least six months before the election.

Dangerous To Be Young

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It is becoming increasingly dangerous to be an American youth, a government report shows.

The report said 15-to 24-year-old Americans have a higher death rate now than 20 years ago.

Many die violently.

"Young men are at particular risk, their death rate being almost three times that of young women," the report said. "Homicide is the leading cause of death for young blacks, ranking slightly ahead of total accidents."

The report said accidents, homicides and suicides "account for about three-fourths of all deaths in this age group. Responsibility has been attributed to behavior patterns characterized by judgmental errors, aggressiveness, and, in some cases, ambivalence about wanting to live or die. Certainly greater risk-taking occurs in this period of life."

These stark findings make up a little-publicized portion of "Healthy People: the Surgeon General's Report on Health Promotion and Disease Prevention," issued in late July.

The section on adolescents and young adults showed in 1960, 15-to 24-year-olds had a death rate of 106 per 100,000. By 1970, the rate was up to 128. By 1976, it had dropped to 113, but the next year it climbed to 117, representing nearly 48,000 deaths in 1977.

Suicide ranked behind accidents and homicides as the third-highest cause of death among youths, accounting for 5,600 persons. Murders accounted for more than 10 percent of the total youth deaths.

It said motor vehicle deaths are more likely to involve white youths than others, but that young blacks of either sex are five times as likely to be murdered.

The report gives an insight into why auto insurance rates are so high for young drivers. It said 37 percent of all deaths in the 15-to-24 age group in 1977 were caused by motor vehicle accidents, the highest single cause. The same year, motorcycle accidents killed 4,000 Americans, 30 percent of them under 20.

Alcohol use and drug abuse are noted as contributory risk factors, as is teen-age pregnancy. The report notes one-fourth of all teen-age girls have had at least one pregnancy by age 19, and thereby undergo "a high-risk experience."

An overall American rate of 10.2 homicides per 100,000 was much higher than other industrial nations such as France, 0.9; Britain 1.0; and Japan, 1.3, the report said.

Soviet Scientists Working On Human Reanimation Process

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet authority on reanimation — the science of bringing the dying back to life — says the normal life span of humans should be about 150 years, and medical life-saving techniques are bringing that goal nearer.

Dr. Vladimir Negovsky, who for 40 years has been reversing the process of death, said in an interview that most people die before they should because of human "mechanical breakdowns" that can be repaired.

Death, he says, "is not a moment but a process, a natural process."

He and his staff at the Laboratory of Reanimatology have been pioneers in the search for ways to prolong the period of "clinical death," when a patient whose heart has stopped can be revived. During this period they use such measures as artificial respiration, heart massage, electric shock, drugs and treatment against hypothermia (subnormal body temperature) and hypoxia (oxygen starvation) to reverse the death process.

Negovsky said he has learned to prolong this critical period from an average of five or six minutes to 10 or 15 minutes. He said he expects to lengthen this to two or three hours by lowering body temperatures.

Negovsky, one of the world's leading authorities in the field, has persuaded the Soviet medical establishment to set up some 200 reanimation wards around the country, to equip its large cities with emergency-care "reanimobiles" and to train doctors everywhere in his techniques. He said because of this, thousands of people are alive today who would not have survived accidents or hospital complications.

Soviet scientists "recognize that a new medical specialty has been created," he wrote last year in the journal Problems of Philosophy.

"It has been established through numerous investigations that the organism's vital functions do not fade out simultaneously: the first to cease is the functioning of the cerebral cortex, then the functions of the stem portions fade out, then respiration, cardiac activity, and other vital functions."

The more the process is understood, and the more doctors learn to battle it, the less excuse there is for many of the deaths that occur every day, Negovsky said.

"People say a person died of loss of blood," he continued. "In the eyes of reanimators this is a crime. A person cannot die of loss of blood. To save such a person is not complicated.

"Our studies show that death is not so mysterious as we had thought. Death is a biological phenomenon just like many other biological phenomena. You can study it in detail and learn how to reverse the process."

Net Corporate Income Rising

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

Various surveys of second quarter profits show that net income of U.S. corporations continued to rise at double-digit rates, although the rate of gain was below that of the first quarter's 37 percent. Year-to-year gains in the third quarter are expected to be even smaller and nearly all economists predict declining profits in the fourth quarter.

Several factors are contributing to higher earnings. Smaller-than-expected wage increases have been important, with average hourly earnings rising only 0.1 percent in May. Cautious hiring policies have also restricted growth in labor costs.

Inflation has been, and will continue to be, an important part of earnings gains. Illusory "inventory profits" are produced when goods bought at a low price level are sold later at a higher price level.

For the next 12 months, profits will vary widely from industry to industry. Consumer goods companies are expected to be hit the hardest as real disposable incomes decline. Capital goods companies could do relatively well, as their backlogs are high. Second quarter earnings and the second half outlook for some major U.S. industries bears this out.

Auto makers had a poor second quarter, with General Motors reporting a seven percent gain, Ford a five percent decline, and Chrysler continues losses. The companies can't meet demand for smaller, more fuel efficient cars, and lower overall unit sales pinched profit margins. This is expected to continue in the second half.

Steel company earnings rose due to higher operating rates and price increases. Lower auto and appliance sales will affect the second half negatively, but higher capital goods spending will benefit some companies.

Airlines reported mixed second quarter earnings, and the UAL strike complicated comparisons. Second half results will reflect settlement of the strike and fare increases, in addition to still buoyant air travel.

Despite softer single family housing starts, building supplies companies had a good second quarter as multifamily housing and non-residential construction continued strong. A continued decline in housing starts would depress second half earnings.

Machine tool producers are experiencing strong demand, and they have been able to pass along higher costs. Shortages of skilled labor and capacity have so limited shipments that order backlogs now exceed one year's production. A good second half appears in store.

Wake Forest, Baptist Group Said Ready To Adopt New Plans

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The Baptist State Convention and Wake Forest University are apparently ready to adopt plans that would retain the school's right to choose trustees, while allowing the convention to have a say in the selection process.

Committees representing Wake Forest the convention agreed Tuesday to a plan which would grant the university more autonomy while maintaining its Baptist connections.

Actual enactment would come if Baptists approve the plan by a two-thirds majority at their meeting in November. As many as 13,000 Baptists are expected to vote on the plan.

Under the plan, one of four options proposed by the convention's Council on Christian Higher Education, the convention would retain final discretion in the selection of trustees. But the convention would make its choice from a list of candidates submitted by trustees.

In addition, 12 of the 36 trustees could be Christians from outside the state.

The university trustees had originally sought the right to elect their own successors and to end the requirement that all trustees be North Carolina Baptists. The convention's General Board has chosen all trustees since 1833.

The trustees amended their charter last December to delete any reference to the method of trustee selection. The convention countered the move by placing its contribution of $926,937 to the university in escrow. The convention eventually released $86,000 of the money in May.

Another change proposed as part of the plan could reduce the amount of money Baptists contribute to the university. Presently the convention designates 6.04 percent of its annual Cooperative Program budget for Wake Forest, which comprises about 6 percent of the university's budget for undergraduate programs.

The Cooperative Program consists of contributions made from each of the state's 3,400 Baptist churches. Under the plan each church would decide whether to make an individual contribution to the university.

Scales said the change would undoubtedly mean a reduction in financial support for Wake Forest. He called the change a "trade-off.

Dollhouses Are Growing Hobby

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Dollhouse miniatures are the fastest growing hobby in the United States, industry sources say.

Two years ago, an estimated 200,000 consumers were involved, says Walter Caddell. Today he puts the figure at about 500,000.

Six years ago retail outlets for dollhouse building materials and products totalled about 100, Caddell estimated in a telephone interview. Today he says the figure is nearer 4,200.

Caddell is executive director of the Hobby Industry Association of America, a trade organization in Elmwood Park, N.J.

How-to books and even art needlework kits for rugs, furniture upholstery and other accessories are part of the trend.

Dollhouse miniatures are not just children's playthings.

Nor is the hobby necessarily inexpensive. The price of houses alone ranges upwards from $15 to $10,000, says Charlene Anne Wrobel, a collector herself and managing editor of Toy & Hobby World, a trade publication.

In a recent article, Ms. Wrobel said industry sources expect retail sales of dollhouse miniature products to reach $150-$200 million this year, reflecting an increase of 50-100 percent in manufacturing.

Who's buying?

"There's the grandparent market," says Dick Bennett, HIA's director of services. "They remember houses they had as children and will build houses for their grandchildren."

While nostalgia attracts older people, Bennett said in a telephone interview, miniatures are also part of the do-it-yourself movement.

"There's a certain magic about working with wood," he said.

"A good many younger people get into it as an artistic thing," he added. He said people "burned out with other hobbies are turning to miniatures instead."

It is spilling over into the needlework field, among others. "Crewel is still very strong, but how many pieces of crewel can you have in the house? Now people are doing it in miniature (rugs, pillows, furniture upholstery) because they want to stay involved with the hobby."

Ms. Wrobel thinks it also reflects a desire to recapture the past.

In an interview, she said miniature collecting is part of the antiques market.

She recalled seeing a dollhouse with a $35 price tag at an antiques show in 1970.

"It was beautiful, but it needed work," she said. "Two years later at the same show, it had been restored and it sold for $250."

Today you can buy or build houses with an antique look. Models available include a three-story Victorian dollhouse with 10 large rooms and a cupola, an eight-room country manor, a 2-story clapboard house with upstairs and downstairs porches and even a New York City brownstone.

Although some big companies are entering the field, Ms. Wrobel said most manufacturers today still are people selling one or two products. "Some people who produce miniatures do it only as a hobby. They couldn't afford it otherwise," she said, because they couldn't charge enough to make it worth their time.

She agreed the do-it-yourself element is a strong appeal to consumers:

"The men get involved with building and doing electrical work. The women do the decorating and the furniture. It gives them an opportunity to decorate a house the way they always wanted to do it."

People may start collecting dollhouse miniatures for a child and end up hooked on the hobby themselves, she added.

Some begin with inexpensive shadow boxes or trays that were used for newspaper type in the days before computerized typesetting, she said.

She said some manufacturers make corrugated shadow boxes that retail for $3-$10, and can be stacked or connected into houses.

At least one makes precut cardboard dollhouses to be punched out and glued together.

Furniture prices range from under $5 per item up to $1,000.

Ms. Wrobel said Victorian, Queen Anne and Chippendale are favorite architectural periods currently and general stores are also very popular.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — TINY TOMBOYS BOLDLY ROMPED IN TREETOPS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Y equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

What Does He Do For Encore?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walter Egan's first hit, "Magnet and Steel," had a mellow, easy sound and backup work by Fleetwood Mac stars Stevie Nicks and Lindsey Buckingham.

So what does he do for an encore? Drop Miss Nicks and switch to a gutsier, less polished rock beat, that's what. It's not what most people would call building on success.

"You get crazy if you sit and try to do what other people think you should be doing," shrugs Egan during a break at a North Hollywood rehearsal studio where he is preparing for an upcoming tour. "You have to do what you feel and hopefully that will jive with what they want."

It's probably to this quiet-voiced 31-year-old's credit that he's kept up that kind of idealism over a decade of dues-paying in a succession of what he describes as "garage bands."

As a teenager in Queens, N.Y. during the 60s, Egan started honing his singing, songwriting and guitar-playing talents in a surf music band which quickly began emulating the new British sound as Beatlemania gathered steam.

In Washington, D.C., while studying sculpture at Georgetown University, he turned to psychedelic rock.

But by the time he moved to Southern California in 1974 he was into country music. In fact, his first big break was when country rocker Gram Parsons recorded "Hearts on Fire," which Egan co-authored with Tom Guidera.

The song appeared on an album released shortly after Parsons' death of a drug overdose. But "Hearts On Fire" didn't serve as much of a calling card for Egan's new passion: Good, old fashioned rock.

No matter. A local club date landed Egan a record contract in 1976; an engineer friend gave one of his tapes to Miss Nicks and Buckingham, who agreed to produce him.

Many Will Never Be Counted As Members Of Unemployed Group

By DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many of those who will suffer most from rising unemployment as the United States heads farther into recession will never be counted as unemployed.

Typically they will live in depressed areas of America's big cities. A large number will be black and many will be teenagers.

They will become "discouraged workers," economists believe — people who are unable to find jobs and have stopped looking for work.

Such persons are not counted as part of the nation's unemployment rate. The official definition of "unemployed" is someone out of a job but who is available for work and has looked for work in the previous four weeks.

The Labor Department estimates there are 825,000 discouraged workers now. They swell welfare roles and some support themselves by crime. Economists believe their number will rise as the recession deepens.

On July 12, the Carter administration publicly estimated that the unemployment rate will rise from its current 5.7 percent to 6.9 percent at the end of 1980, which would be an increase of about 1 million in the number of persons officially listed as unemployed.

Since that public estimate, a task force of government economists has filed a confidential report within the administration, saying the jobless rate toward the end of 1980 will be 8.2 percent, or about 8 million persons.

The Council of Economic Advisers said that was only "one staff view," not yet reviewed at the Cabinet level, and that the official administration projection remains the one of July 12.

Whichever the case, the unemployment figures will not fully convey what is happening to people as a result of the recession.

According to James Annable of the Congressional Budget Office, jobs and earnings will be affected in three main ways:

—Skilled workers will be laid off from their present jobs, particularly in factories that manufacture durable goods and in the construction industry. Statistically, the rise in unemployment will be concentrated in these industries.

Brian Keith Returns To Broadway After Absence Of 28 Years

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Brian Keith, clad in Levis and cowboy boots, asks if the visitor desires refreshment, perhaps a snort of brandy. No? He seems mildly surprised, then grins and sits down.

And starts talking in his easy, old-shoe way of various matters, like natural disasters, acting, his Marine days and his return — after 28 years — to Broadway in "Da."

He replaced Barnard Hughes last week as the star in this Irish comedy about the puckish, deceased father of a dramatist. Hughes is scheduled to star in the play's national touring company next September.

Keith is a veteran of five Broadway shows, nearly 60 films, five TV series and World War II. His longest job on Broadway, as a sailor in the World War II comedy, "Mr. Roberts," lasted from 1947 to 1950.

He first saw the play he's in now last February, when he and his wife, Victoria, were visiting here from their home in Hawaii.

"The snow was about eight feet deep, but we had a good time, saw 15 shows," he says. "But 'Da' was the only one I walked out of the theater saying, 'Oh, Lord, I'd like to do that one.'"

His agent, he adds, unexpectedly called a week later, asking if he'd do "Da." He started brushing up his Irish brogue.

Keith, when interviewed last month, had just arrived with a sunburned face from Wyoming. He'd been making a Western there, "Wind River," with Charlton Heston.

He likes Westerns. Particularly the first one he did as a TV series in 1960. It had the unique title of "The Westerner." He still grumbles that NBC aired the series early at night, in 'kid time," because "people always wrote in complaining about him getting the dog drunk and always going to whorehouses."

While he talks approvingly of such goings-on, he wouldn't have gotten complaints had he carried out his youthful goal — which was not to become an actor.

"Both my parents were actors, but I didn't really like it," says Keith, born 57 years ago in Bayonne, N.J., while his folks were working there. "I know how hard acting is. Besides, everybody wants to do something different."

He did just that. He joined the Marines in late 1941 and during World War II flew in four campaigns in the South Pacific.

Mustered out in 1945 and suffering from a mild case of no cash, he changed his mind about acting after a friend of his mother offered him money to appear in a summer stock version of "Junior Miss."

"He was directing it, offered $57 a week. I said, 'Jesus, I'll take it!' Later, he said, 'Why don't you go to acting school a while?' Well, I had about five years of GI Bill coming then.

"I looked around, came here and wound up at Alvini's Academy." His blue eyes twinkled. "It was so old Laurette Taylor had gone there. Fred Astaire, too. I went, oh, maybe six weeks or so.

"But it was good. Had fencing, all that jazz. But I don't think you can teach anybody acting. Either you can act or you can't. But there are certain basic things you've got to learn so you know what the hell they're talking about when they direct you.

"You should learn everything — singing, dancing, the whole shot. And how not to fall on your toga when you get sent on."

He got sent on in various plays here and elsewhere in the East until 1951, then left New York for Hollywood. In time, he made his first Hollywood movie, "Arrowhead," with Charlton Heston. And later, he settled in Hollywood, living in the rustic hill country near Malibu.

In 1971, though, he, his wife and their three kids moved to Hawaii for three reasons: (a) A flood that ravaged Malibu one year; (b) a fire that ravaged Malibu the next, and (c) an earthquake that severely shook up Malibu, indeed all of Los Angeles, in early 1971.

Hawaii is just fine for him now: "When a job comes up, we just pack up and go. There's no reason to live in California unless you're doing television, because they don't make pictures at studios anymore. They just go where they have to shoot. So we bring the kids and have a good time."

His idea of a good time is being with his family. Or stuntmen and cowboys. He avoids the Hollywood ramble.

Attorney To Aid Garwood

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A New York City lawyer says he plans to fight the U.S. Marines in court on behalf of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who faces allegations of desertion and misconduct as a prisoner in Vietnam.

Dermot Foley, who is Garwood's civilian attorney, said in a telephone interview Tuesday that he is drafting legal action which would seek:

—The overturning of a military law which Foley said prevents Garwood from seeking medical or psychiatric treatment. Any doctor, military or civilian, who treated Garwood could be subpoenaed by the Marines and forced to reveal anything Garwood said, according to Foley.

—The release of about $147,000 in pay which accrued during 14 years that Garwood was listed as a prisoner of war in Vietnam. Garwood, now 33, disappeared near Danang in 1965 and was not heard from again until he slipped a note to a foreign traveler in Vietnam earlier this year.

—Promotion of Garwood in rank. Most POWs received regular promotions while they were held captive but the commandant of the Marine Corps froze Garwood's rank at private in 1967 because of allegations which raised questions about Garwood's actions as a prisoner.

Garwood returned to the United States in March. He is on active duty at Camp Lejeune, near Jacksonville, and he spends his days working as a mail clerk while the military investigates allegations against him.

Maj. John Woggon, base public affairs officer at Lejeune, said Tuesday that the investigation is not yet finished. After any evidence against Garwood is compiled, military authorities will decide whether to carry the case further and perhaps prosecute Garwood on capital charges ranging from desertion to collaboration with the enemy.

Garwood contends he was captured and held prisoner for nearly 14 years.

Foley said since Garwood must remain in the Marine Corps until his case is closed, he should be able to be treated by doctors without worrying about the physician being subpoenaed.

"He's walking around with bomb fragments in him," Foley said. "Not many people know that."

Foley emphasized that he is not worried that Garwood might incriminate himself. But the attorney said if Garwood discussed his wounds or wanted to talk with a psychiatrist, he would probably reveal dates and places that might help the military piece together a case against him.

"We don't want to do anything to help them with their lousy case," Foley said.

Foley said he planned to file legal action in federal court in Washington, probably with a week.

Woggon said the Marines would have no response to Foley's statement until some action is filed.

But, regarding military law on doctor-patient confidentiality, Woggon said, "There would be differences from a civilian doctor patient relationship, but it all depends on the specifics of a particular case."

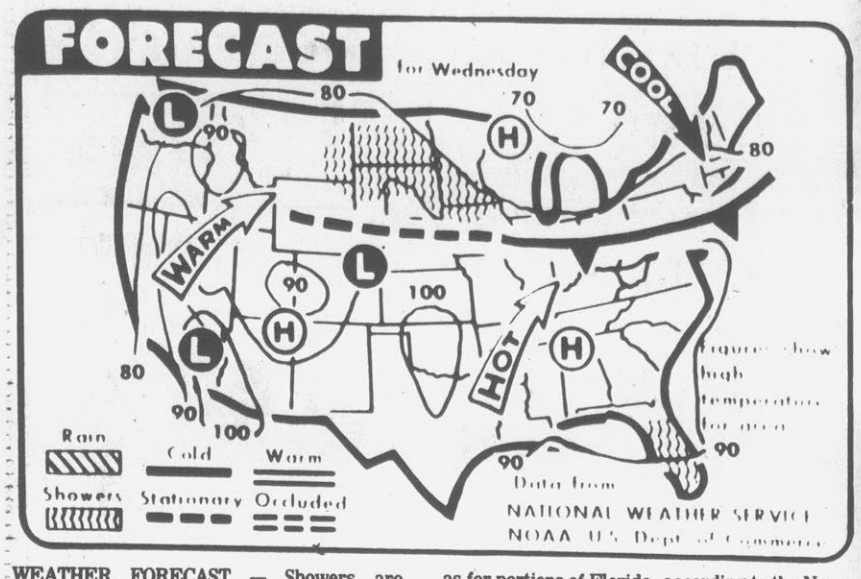
How's The Weather?



WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are predicted for Wednesday for portions of the North Central and Great Plains states, as well as for portions of Florida, according to the National Weather Service. (AP Laserphoto)

Thunderstorms rumbled through northeastern Wyoming and western South Dakota early today after a night in which tornadoes were seen in Osage and Newcastle, Wyo., near the South Dakota border.

The Weston County, Wyo., sheriff's office and the National Weather Service said there were reports of rain damage, downed limbs and power lines and broken windows because of the storms Tuesday night, but there were no reports of injuries or major damage.

Elsewhere in the nation, thunderstorms reached across the Gulf Coast and Florida early today. Widely scattered showers extended from portions of the southern and central Plateau across the central Rockies into the northern Plains, across parts of the Ohio Valley, New York State and southern New England.

Temperatures today were forecast to be in the 100s across parts of Kansas, north-central Texas and the Southwest deserts. Readings in the 70s and 80s were in store for the Pacific Coast, northern Maine and the Upper Great Lakes. Temperatures in most of the rest of the nation were to be in the 90s.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 50 in Arcata, Calif., to 95 in Blythe, Calif.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose sharply again today, adding to Tuesday's strong gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 5.97 to 865.78 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts say the influx of buyers has been fueled partly by expectations of a decline in interest rates and a possible easing of inflation as the economy slows.

They said demand for stocks seemed to be coming in particular from investing institutions, which have built up massive reserves of funds in short-term interest-bearing investments.

Once the advance got going, brokers noted, it fed on itself as the Dow Jones industrial average broke through the 850 level, a point at which it had turned downward on several previous occasions.

Today's early volume leaders included Sears Roebuck, up ⅛ at 19; Kennecott, up ⅛ at 24, and A.H. Robins, ahead ⅛ at 10¾.

On Tuesday the Dow climbed 11.26 to 859.81 for its largest gain since it rose 14.47 points last May 17.

Advances outnumbered declines by close to a 3-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume reached an eight-week high of 45.41 million shares, against 27.19 million the day before.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .73 to 60.18.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .24 at 199.43.

Guerrilas Set Zimbabwe Terms

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Guerrilla leaders set conditions for their acceptance of the Commonwealth peace proposals for Zimbabwe Rhodesia, but two of their most important backers are expected to put strong pressure on them to accept.

Robert Mugabe's faction of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance said before it would join in negotiations, Zimbabwe Rhodesia's white-controlled army had to be dismantled and replaced by "the army of the liberation forces."

Mugabe also said Ian Smith, the former prime minister whose bloc of whites hold 28 of the 100 seats in the Zimbabwe Rhodesia parliament, and Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the moderate black prime minister who succeeded him in June, "have got to go."

But Zambia, home base for Joshua Nkomo's 15,000 guerrillas, and Tanzania, leader of the five front-line African states that are Mugabe's and Nkomo's chief support, are expected to do a lot of arm-twisting to get the two guerrilla leaders to at least join in the all-party negotiations proposed by the plan.

Zambia, the host at the Commonwealth conference that ended Tuesday, a day earlier than planned, and Tanzania were on the committee that drafted the peace plan. This appeared to insure that Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda and Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere would make every effort to get Nkomo and Mugabe to the table.

Segal objected to Stombaugh's testimony Tuesday, after Stombaugh said a tear down the front of the shirt appeared to be made by someone standing in front and pulling down. Segal objected, saying the testimony wasn't based on fact.

Segal also questioned Stombaugh closely on his credentials when the government first offered him as an expert witness.

In an interview with The Associated Press last week, MacDonald refered to Stombaugh's theories as a "harebrained conceptualization of what occured."

Stombaugh, now of Greenville, S.C., worked at the FBI's Washington crime lab about 16 years.

In other testimony Tuesday, a transcript of an interview Army investigators had with MacDonald showed he started crying and said it was ludicrous when the ihvestigators said they thought the murder scene was staged.

The government is expected to use the interviews and MacDonald's grand jury testimony in an attempt to show that MacDonald's story is inconsistent with evidence found in the house, including the pajama top and blood stains.

"As far as I'm concerned it's not staged ... Step one: you lose your family. Step two: you get blamed for it," MacDonald said in the April 6, 1970 interview.

The Army dropped its charges against MacDonald in 1970, but he was indicted by a federal grand jury in 1975. The trial, delayed by pre-trial appeals, is in its fourth week.

Recession In North Carolina: ESC Officials Say Economy Up

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Economists who fear the worst for the economy have apparently not looked inside the unemployment offices in North Carolina.

Officials of the Employment Security Commission officials said Tuesday they've seen no signs that the economy has turned sour. They add some indicators suggest the state's economy is better off than in 1978.

"The drop in the GNP (Gross National Product) means somebody is hurting somewhere," said Dave Garrison, assistant research director of the N.C. Employment Security Division. "But they're not (hurting) here. There is no evidence of a recession at this point."

Federal officials said recently the adjusted GNP from April through June was below that of the previous quarter, and some observers said it will be down again this quarter. But the percentage of people working — one measure of a recession — is up from last year in North Carolina, and the average employee is working a longer week, Garrison said.

For May, the latest available monthly figures, the North Carolina jobless rate was 5 percent, down from 5.7 percent last May. Also, the number of North Carolina workers filing a first claim for unemployment benefits dropped 17 percent in July.

"I don't think the numbers will reflect a recession." said one researcher. But he warned that unemployment statistics aren't the earliest indicators of a recession.

The definition of a recession is a drop in the GNP for two consecutive quarters. The GNP measures the value of goods and services produced in the nation and is considered the leading indicator of the nation's economic health.

ECU's Defensive Secondary Has A 'Solid Look'

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Over the past few years, East Carolina has been blessed with a defensive backfield that has harrassed pass receivers and been stingy about giving up yardage.

This year's version should be no different.

Although Gerald Hall has graduated, the three returning members of the backfield are joined by several other veterans, giving the secondary a solid look for the fall season.

"We have six people back who have a lot of experience," Coach Bobby Wallace said. "Three of them are starters from last year, and the other three saw a lot of action. Five of them will also be playing in their fourth year."

Returning are Charlie Carter (5-9, 175, Sr.), Ruffin McNeill (6-1, 190 Sr.) and Willie Holley (5-9, 180, Jr.). Joining them are backup veterans Thomas McLaurin (5-10, 165, Sr.), Wayne Perry (6-0, 185, Jr.), and James Freer (5-8, 170, Jr.). Holley and Freer were both redshirted, and while having been with the team four years, still have a year left, while Perry is a legitimate junior.

"Experience is no problem for us," Wallace said. "And ability is just great. We have everything we had last year. That's not to say that we won't miss Gerald. We'll miss him more in punt returns, however.'" Hall was one of the top punt returners in the nation last season. "We'll probably use Holley, or maybe Anthony Collins, back there this year. Marvin Elliott is also a prospect for kick return."

Besides the initial six, Wallace also points to less-experienced players Bill Pinkney (5-10, 168, Jr.) and Elliott (5-10, 185, So.). "Both of them should see a lot of action, and that gives us two-deep everywhere."

Tommy Peacock (5-10, 171, So.) has earned a grant as a walkone, as Smokey Norris (5-10, 170, Fr.) had a good spring as a red-shirt.

"We'll have about four freshmen trying out. They include Freddie Jones (5-10, 175), Moe Bennett (5-11, 205), Mike McNeil (6-0, 190) and Randy Turner (6-1, 190), and we're very high on all of them. But they could be moved to other positions."

With only one new starter, probably McLaurin, the secondary looks good. "They all go to the ball well, and they are physical. Perry, if he stays healthy, could also work his way into the starting lineup.

"But we can't sit on what we did last year. We have to keep going," Wallace said.

Zoeller Tops Golf Earnings

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
AP Sports Writer

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Eight golfers who have won more than $100,000 this season on the pro tour head the field of 156 contestants for this year's Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller is the top money-winner among the players in the $300,000 tournament, which gets under way Thursday.

Zoeller, who also won the Andy Williams-San Diego Open in January, ranks seventh on the PGA money list with $185,967. The top money-winner, Tom Watson, is not competing at the 6,534-yard, par-71 Wethersfield Country Club course.

The other golfers who have topped the $100,000 mark on the PGA circuit this year who are competing at the GHO are Hubert Green, Wayne Levi, Mark Hayes, Ray Floyd, Calvin Peete, Grier Jones and Dr. Gil Morgan.

Green and Larry Nelson are the other two-time winners on the PGA tour this year in the tournament, which carries a record $54,000 first prize.

Green, who lost a playoff to Don Bies for the 1975 GHO title, has recorded victories at the Hawaiian Open and the New Orleans Open. Nelson, who was the co-leader in the first round of last year's GHO, won the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic and then the Western Open five weeks ago.

Defending champion Rod Funseth heads a list of 10 past winners at the tournament. The California rancher posted his first PGA triumph in five years with a four-stroke victory last year.

Other former winners of the tournament, which began 28 years ago as the Insurance City Open, who are entered are include: Bill Kratzert, 1977; Rik Massengale, 1976; Bies; Dave Stockton, 1974; George Archer, 1971; Bob Murphy, 1970; Charles Sifford, 1967; Art Wall, 1966; and Gene Littler, 1959.

South Carolina Delays Decision On Metro-7

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — University of South Carolina trustees will not decide for at least a month whether to apply for membership in the Metro 7 Conference, according to trustees chairman R. Markley Dennis.

Dennis said "nothing is on the agenda" concerning Metro 7 affiliation for Thursday's monthly meeting of the trustees board.

"It's not there, and I'd be rather surprised if anything came up. I don't think we're ready for it," he said Tuesday.

Conference Commissioner Larry Albus, in a letter last week, formally requested the university to consider joining the league.

Dennis said the trustees can take no action on the request until USC President James R. Holderman completes a study of the proposal.

"I don't think there will be a report Thursday, and I'd be guessing to say there would be one in September," said Dennis.

Holderman and the university's vice president for athletics, William F. Putnam, will meet with Albus on Monday to consider possible affiliation.

Lakers' Attorneys Build Defense In Damage Suit

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for the Los Angeles Lakers, defendants in a multimillion dollar damage suit, are attempting to prove that the punch suffered by Houston Rocket star Rudy Tomjanovich came after another Rocket player touched off the dispute.

A federal court jury viewed a film of the Laker-Rocket game of Dec. 9, 1977 in which Tomjanovich was hit in the face by the Lakers' Kermit Washington.

But defense uttorney Robert Dunn told the jury that before Tomjanovich was hit, Rocket center Kelvin Kunnert had given Washington an elbow in the face.

A fight erupted, with the film showing Kunnert hit by Washington. Tomjanovich is viewed trotting toward the scuffle and receiving a swinging right fist flush in the face.

Kunnert, now a teammate of Washington on the San Diego Clippers, said, "I never threw an elbow. Washington was holding onto my trunks during a fast break and I was just trying to knock his hands away."

Dunn insisted Kunnert look at the film closely and Kunnert answered, "That wasn't an elbow."

The film was shown in both black-and-white and in color, in normal and slow motion.

Earlier, Robert Reid, a Houston forward, viewed the film and said it appeared to him that Kunnert had swung an elbow at Washington.

A Houston surgeon testified the face of Tomjanovich had to be rebuilt like "a jigsaw puzzle ... like putting a cracked eggshell back together with scotch tape."

Dr. Daniel C. Walker, an oral and face surgeon, said he had "never seen such damage made by a bare human fist. I have seen people with less severe injuries and not make it."

The Rockets are seeking $1.4 million from the Lakers for the loss of Tomjanovich during most of the 1977-1978 season.

Tomjanovich is asking an unspecified amount, but more than $1 million, for the injuries he suffered.

Dr. Walker also testified that Tomjanovich will be troubled throughout his life with pressure on his sinuses, possibly loss of his teeth at an early age, and a susceptibility to meningitis.

He added, "many of the smaller bones broken will never heal in his lifetime. His facial structure will never be as strong as before. He could receive an injury of a much lesser degree and suffer severe injuries. For example, if he had a bad fall on the tennis court or struck his head on the dashboard of a car."

Braves Edge Reds, 3-2

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The Cincinnati Reds came around Rowland Office's way just once too often.

"I'm more or less a first-ball hitter. If I see a fast ball coming, I'm going to swing at it," Office said.

It was a fast ball and Office swung. His hit in the 11th inning was his first in six at-bats and drove home the winning run Tuesday night as the Atlanta Braves edged Cincinnati 3-2.

The setback dropped the second-place Reds five games behind Houston in the National League West.

Cards 9-2, Mets 2-1

Garry Templeton scored the first run in the fourth inning and homered in the sixth to lead St. Louis to its victory in the nightcap and a sweep of their twi-night double-header with New York. Home runs by George Hendrick and Tony Scott paced the Cards to their first-game victory.

Lou Brock played only the nightcap and singled, moving to within eight hits of the 3,000-hit plateau.

Phillies 4, Expos 2

Home runs by Manny Trillo and Garry Maddox backed the six-hit pitching of Larry Christenson as Philadelphia toppled Montreal.

Montreal took the lead when Warren Cromartie tripled to open the game and scored on Tony Perez' single. Perez' sacrifice fly drove in Monteal's final run in the ninth.

Jimmy Connors Feels He Is Out Of Rut

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors, buoyed with renewed enthusiasm by the birth of his first child, feels he's ready to climb out of a rut that has cost him the world's No.1 tennis ranking.

Connors, playing in his first tournament since the arrival of his son, Brett, last week, opened defense of his U.S. Clay Court championship Tuesday night with a 6-4, 7-5 victory over Mark Edmondson of Australia.

"I have a much clearer mind than in the last couple of months," Connors said afterwards. "This is my first child, and if I wasn't thinking about that I wouldn't be much of a father."

"I've got to support three mouths now, so I'd better win," he joked.

Connors, who has won the Clay Court championship every even-numbered year since 1974, dropped to second in the world standings behind Bjorn Borg, who passed up this tournament this year.

Connors, top-seeded here, said his son has provided "a new incentive for me. He gives me something to play for again."

"It got to where I thought I was too good. Maybe I was too good. I thought all I had to do was walk on the court and I would win. Now, I've gone back to the routine that got me where I was in the first place, the No.1 player in the world."

"I'm not out here just to horse around. If I'm gonna be in it, I'm gonna be in it to be the best."

Connors' victory put him into a second-round match today against Pavel Slozil of Czechoslovakia, a 6-2, 6-0 winner against Argentina's Fernando Dalla-Fontana Tuesday.

Connors trailed Edmondson 4-3 in the first set and 5-4 in the second set before rallying to his victory.

"I was pleased with the way I played," Edmondson said. "The last time I played Jimmy I only won four games. He was too good then and he got past me tonight. I was serving well, but he returns so well."

Chris Evert Lloyd, winner of four straight Clay Court championships from 1972 through 1975, continued her dominance Tuesday with victories over Paula Smith and Wendy White.

Lloyd opened Tuesday's play with a 6-1, 6-0 triumph over Smith, then moved into the third round with a 6-2, 7-5 victory over White. She was paired today against unseeded Renata Tomanova, who advanced with a tough 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 victory over Barbara Jordan.

Judy Rankin Still Lacks A Victory

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Judy Rankin opened the 1979 Ladies Professional Golf Association tour with 25 victories to her credit over an 11-year span. Her career earnings were a hefty $652,618.

With the current schedule past the halfway mark, the 34-year-old veteran finds herself without a victory, despite the fact that she ranks ninth in total earnings with $72,287 after 17 stops on the circuit.

"I have been a three-round player all season." smiled the 5-foot-3, 110-pound blonde from Midland, Texas, following a practice session Tuesday at the Meadow Brook Country Club, where she is the defender in a $100,000 Long Island LPGA event, which ktarts Thursday over the par-73, 6,460-yard layout.

"Thus far I haven't been able to put it together," she said. "In Detroit earlier this year I had a 72, 71, 65 and then a 77. And, really, I didn't play that badly."

Rankin, who in 1976 became the first woman ever to win more than $100,000 in a year, tied for eighth last week in the European LPGA championship, which was won by Nancy Lopez, the leading money winner this year with $156,200.

"It was all my fault," Rankin remarked candidly. "It was not bad luck or anything like that. There are no excuses.

"Actually, I had been playing quite well before going over there (England). In Montreal (the previous week), I had tied for fifth after coming from nowhere.

Briton Winner Of Track Event

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — World Cup and European champion Steve Ovett of Britain pulled away midway through the race and captured the 1,500 meters event at an international track and field meet.

In other events, Houston McTear captured the 100 meters in 10.56 seconds and Bill Green captured the 400 in 46.27. James Robinson took the 800 meters in 1:46.79. Double AAU champ Henry Marsh clocked a disappointing 8:43.26 in winning the 3,000-meter steeplechase.

Trophies Given At Brook Valley

Receiving trophies in the junior tennis tournament completed Thursday at Brook Valley Golf and Country Club were: Girls' Singles — 13 and over: winner, Barbara Little; runnerup, Kristi Logue.

Hand Sewns by Dexter® — There is a Difference

The difference is in the way they're made and in the way they feel! Long before Columbus arrived, the American Indians devised practical and comfortable hand sewn moccasins. And Dexter adopted their traditions. As you wear hand sewns, you'll find they mold to your foot, like the original Indian moccasins. They give your feet individual comfort! No other shoe is quite so comfortable, quite so easy going, quite so in keeping with today's lifestyle! Dexter's tradition is carefully sewn into their new fall editions. 'Rugby' is made of full-grain 'Nature Hide®' leather of a coppery brown. 'Bearcats' in tan waxhide will mold to your foot like only Dexters can. 'Suburbans' prove Dexter's ability to update the traditional moccasin. Baltimore Manager Protests Pitcher Change

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

It is one of a manager's simpler duties. He comes to the ballpark, sees who is pitching for the other team, and makes out his lineup card accordingly.

If the opposing pitcher is left-handed — Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell, for example — the manager is likely to stack his attack with right-handed batters.

That's just what Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver did Tuesday night when informed Caldwell would be facing his Orioles.

Caldwell warmed up, but after the Brewers had batted in the first, it was right-hander Jim Slaton who took the mound for Milwaukee. Caldwell, tackled by New York's Reggie Jackson during a game 11 days before, claimed a rib cage injury.

Needless to say, Weaver's protest was announced long before the Brewers beat his Orioles 7-5 Tuesday night.

Sixto Lezcano, Gorman Thomas and Dick Davis each hit two-run shots for the Brewers, who had lost seven of their last eight games. Lee May and Pat Kelly hit homers for the Orioles, with Kelly's blast marking his third of the year as a pinch-hitter.

In the other American League games Tuesday night, the Boston Red Sox bombed the Cleveland Indians 12-3, the Oakland A's upended the California Angels 9-5, the Minnesota Twins trimmed the Seattle Mariners 5-2, the Chicago White Sox downed the New York Yankees 9-5, the Toronto Blue Jays edged the Kansas City Royals 3-2, and the Detroit Tigers swept the Texas Rangers 3-1 and 8-2.

Red Sox 12, Indians 3

Carlton Fisk drove in three runs with a two-run single and a solo home run, and Butch Hobson added a three-run triple in Boston's six-run sixth as the Red Sox ripped Cleveland.

A's 9, Angels 5

Pinch-hitter Mike Heath hit a bases-loaded single in the seventh inning, driving in two runs and sending Oakland past California.

The Angels went ahead 4-3 in the top of the seventh on Don Baylor's broken-bat single, which delivered Rick Miller and raised Baylor's RBI total to 98.

Twins 5, Mariners 2

Glenn Borgmann hit two doubles and a single and drove in three runs, giving the Twins their victory over Seattle and moving Minnesota into second place in the West Division.

White Sox 9, Yankees 5

Alan Bannister hit a two-run single while Chet Lemon and Rusty Torres added two-run homers to help Chicago beat New York.

Reggie Jackson drove in two runs with two hits — one of them the 360th homer of his career.

Blue Jays 3, Royals 2

Rick Cerone's single in the bottom of the ninth scored pinch-runner J.J. Cannon and gave Toronto its victory over Kansas City.

Otto Velez opened the ninth with a walk and was replaced at first base by Cannon, who took second on Rick Bosetti's single, third on a force play, and scored on Cerone's hit.

Tigers 3-8, Rangers 1-2

A pair of two-run homers by Jerry Morales powered Detroit to victory in the nightcap after Steve Kemp's two-run homer in the ninth inning gave the Tigers the opener.

Varied Uniforms For Tryouts

By ALAN ROBINSON
AP Sports Writer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Some wore uniforms that looked like they had been custom designed for a major league team. Others wore more casual attire, modified softball jerseys or cut-off football pants. One wore a too-small T-shirt that was fighting a losing battle against a belly swollen by countless post-softball game beers.

Some wore beards, others blue jeans.

Their hometowns read like a Rand McNally road atlas: Sod, W.Va., Charlotte, N.C., Seminole, Fla., Calhoun County, W.Va., Kansas City, Mo.

Some ran with the swift, sleek cadence of the professional athlete. Others would have had trouble making it to first base in a Little League game. Yet all were united by the same goal — to play major league baseball.

They came from near and far in a scene repeated hundreds of times on a hundred-fold diamonds each summer from California to Cincinnati. To most, if not all, it will be the closest any will come to what they like to call the "bigs" — the big leagues.

That's why 76 athletes and would-be athletes recently showed up at Watt Powell Park, the home of the Charleston Charlies of the Class AAA International League, for a tryout camp sponsored by the Major League Scouting Bureau. The bureau receives its funding from 17 major league teams.

"We get them all," said Dick Coury of Wheeling, W.Va., a scout for the service. "Anybody who gets a few hits in a softball league thinks he can play professional baseball."

Most camps, like the one in Charleston, boast little professional baseball talent. The players labor under a burning sun, running and hitting and pitching, mainly for their own egos. But, once in a while, a talent somehow emerges from the rough diamonds of semi-pro or amateur baseball.

"I signed (relief pitcher) Kent Tekulve for the Pittsburgh Pirates at a tryout camp right here a couple of years ago," said Joe Consoli, a former Pirate scout who is now the eastern regional director for the scouting bureau. "I've had Joe Namath and Ken Stabler and a lot of major leaguers in other camps."

The bureau itself does not sign players for its clients, but simply furnishes various information on the skills of the thousands of players it sees each year. The teams themselves make the decision of who to sign.

Consoli, a tall, rotund man in his 50s, sees thousands of players each year in West Virginia, Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and Washington, D.C. from his home base of Baltimore. He spends his springs seeing countless high school and college games, then holds tryout camps — dozens of them — each summer in hopes of uncovering just one player who has previously missed catching his eye.

"The secret to scouting is not how smart you are, but how many you see," said Consoli. "At the most, five percent of the players you see have a chance."

Consoli said he always looks for the same assets in a prospect: running speed, throwing ability, bat speed.

"Baseball demands speed. Speed is the key word," said Consoli. "You've got to have speed to play."

At a tryout camp, each player — whether he's a bona fide prospect or a slow-pitch softballer looking for a few kicks — is rated in several different skill areas on a scale from 2 to 8. An outfielder who can throw the ball from deep right field to third base on the par of the average major leaguer earns a rating of 6 to 8. Others get less.

Prospective infielders are rated on how well they throw and field. Pitchers are judged on ther speed and control. Everyone is given three batting practice pitches to hit, with the scouts looking for quick bats which can make contact.

"Most of the players we sign are thoroughbreds — the players who are natural athletes," said Consoli, who at one time had 17 players he had signed playing in the majors. "Strength is almost as important as speed, because stamina plays a big part in a sport where you play as many as 200 games a year."

Consoli said that while few athletes are ever signed out of the tryout camps, they do serve a purpose.

"In just a couple of minutes, we can tell a player what his weaknesses are ... in what areas he has to improve," said Consoli.

Farmville Thoroughfare Plan Discussed By Commissioners

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville citizens last night discussed and heard discussed the revised thoroughfare plan for the town of Farmville.

Following the public hearing, the Board of Commissioners approved the plan, with the recommendation that Dept. of Transportation engineers give as much consideration as possible to the routing of thoroughfares through woods rather than good farmland and that the eastern bypass be moved further east from town if possible. The plan, now being developed by DOT and previously approved by the town Planning Board, calls for a loop around the town to connect with the U. S. 264 Bypass that will run north of town.

Town Administrator Patrick Thomas reported on a ElectriCities conference attended by him, Utilities Director J. A. Wooten, and Town Attorney Jack Lewis. He said load management program of cutting off residential air conditioners and water heaters at peak load times are looking more promising for small municipalities like Farmville. CP&L is expected to file for a 10 percent increase late this year, he said it was reported. The refunds previously awarded in the older of two rate cases are being held up because the rural co-ops contend they are due a larger share of the total refund. At his request, Thomas said, the Washington attorneys plan to file a motion requesting release of the 85 percent of the refund not in dispute.

He said costs to the town for power went up 10 percent in 10 days because of increased usage. Nevertheless, he said, use is down from last year. He thanked the public for conserving and asked that they continue to do so in every way possible.

Thomas also reported on Farmville's participation in the Pitt County towns' proposal that the Mid-East executive board form a task force to actively explore a transition to a council of governments organizational structure. Pitt County towns pay one-third of the dues paid the Commission, yet are adversely affected by decisions made by the Commission and not adequately represented the town and county leaders who met July 31 have reported they feel.

Thomas sought guidance from the board concerning continuing negotiations with North Carolina Natural Gas for a renewed franchise here. The Commissioners said they want NCNG to realize that, in order to have a franchise here, service must be forthcoming to all who request it, if at all possible.

Thomas said appearance handbooks and renderings for the downtown buildings are available.

Representatives of the older adult nutrition program were on hand to express delight that the site is being moved to the Farmville Housing Authority building out of the Armory. The Commissioners indicated the intention of withdrawing its donation to the armory and giving it to the Housing Authority for use in cleaning, etc. — amount, $250.

An ordinance was adopted to make carnival owners responsible for cleaning up afterwards and for any damage incurred to town property when a carnival is here.

Commissioner Jack Farrior said he believes the town should consider a sidewalk protection ordinance that would make anyone known to damage a town sidewalk financially responsible for its repair.

A resolution of intent to annex the A. C. Monk Plant property on the 264 Bypass was passed and a public hearing on the question was set for the board's October meeting.

A master-meter water rate was set, with plans to offer this service to mobile home parks and apartment complexes in the area, based on $1 per unit for each 3,000 gallons of water. This rate, it was indicated, will increase the price now charged Pinewood Apartments here and will decrease the price now charged Forest Village Apartments.

The Commissioners made it clear that they feel any non-profit group in Farmville should have use of the town commons, obeying the rules set up for the use of town parks.

A bid from Prestige Vehicles Southeast of Raleigh for the providing of a rescue ambulance at a cost of $22,300 was accepted. The Rescue Squad will pay half and the town will pay half.

Following the receipt of the ambulance, the 1973 ambulance now in use will be sold, "by whatever means the town administrator sees fit" and the money will be placed in the town treasury. A request had been made that the money go to the rescue squad itself, but the Commissioners indicated that, while they appreciate the good work of the squad, they do not feel they can set a precedent of letting proceeds from sale of town property go to a particular fund or department. The town paid in full for the 1973 ambulance, $12,000.

An ordinance was drafted directing the repair or demolition of structures at 209 Wallace Street and 526 S. George Street. Both houses are vacant, it was pointed out, and previous housing code enforcement procedures have been completed.

The Commissioners complied with a petition from residents of W. Jones Street for the addition of speed control humps on W. Jones and Ryon Drive to check speed in their neighborhood.

Tourism Has Rebounded In State Following Early Summer Slump

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — For the first time this summer, park rangers at some National Park Service campgrounds along the Blue Ridge Parkway had to turn tourists away last weekend. The campgrounds were full.

The state's lucrative tourist industry has begun rebound in recent days from a severe slump that stretched through the early part of the summer. Business was off anywhere from 10 to 40 percent by various estimates.

Motel operators and shopkeepers saw their business wither in a deluge of rainy weather and a drought of tourists, many of whom were scared by spectre of gasoline shortages.

"There was a 20 to 30 percent loss here in June and early July," said James Ellis, executive vice president of the Asheville Chamber of Commerce. "That's significant when you realize that Asheville and Buncombe County normally take in half a million dollars a day during those months."

But the rainy weekends have given way to sunshine, and the gasoline shortage never materialized.

So the tourists are back in the mountains.

"It looks like business is about back to normal for us, and the concessioners are happier these past few days than they've been in a long time," said Howard Parr, chief ranger for the National Park Service in North Carolina.

The question that no one can answer is whether businesses that are dependent upon the tourist dollar have time to recoup their losses.

Gov. Jim Hunt, in Asheville this week to speak to a meeting of sheriffs from North Carolina's counties, told a reporter that the "whole state is going to feel the effects" of the early summer slump, which hit both the mountains and the coast.

"I can't put an exact estimate (on the amount of money lost)," Hunt said. "But it's in the millions of dollars, I'm sure. The only thing to do now is to pour it on and try to recover."

Both the state and various municipalities, such as Asheville and Blowing Rock, have mounted advertising campaigns in efforts to lure touirsts.

Gasoline distributors and the weather have cooperated lately.

"Usually we think of the weather as having a role only in the winter skiing season," said Charlie Brown, president of the Blowing Rock Chamber of Commerce. But this summer, which some mountaineers say has been the wettest in 15 or 20 years, has brought weather into the picture.

"The past two or three weeks has really been a boom time for us and the weather is part of it," Brown said.

And although the price of gasoline has gone up everywhere, including the mountains, there appears to be no shortage.

"The price doesn't seem to bother the people we see," said Joe Patelidas, who manages a craft shop near Blowing Rock. "Most of our customers are the kind who can afford to pay the price for gasoline, anyway."

Redden In Hospital

Farmville Town Commissioner LeRoy Redden is reported recuperating from a heart attack in a Columbus, Ohio hospital.

Redden, who is vice principal of Farmville Central High School, reportedly suffered the heart attack while he and his wife were visiting their daughter in Ohio.

Detonate Two Bombs

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Police detonated two bombs found within 24 hours, and no one was hurt, Radio Israel reported. It said one bomb was found today in a paper bag by the owner of a grocery store in Kfar Yonah, 20 miles north of Tel Aviv, and a bus driver found the other one aboard his bus in the Negev Desert town of Dimona.

Newport News' Airport Still Poor Relative To Busier Field At Norfolk

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Newport New's Patrick Henry International Airport regularly sees travelers the ilk of Queen Elizabeth or the Emperor of Japan, but it's still a poor relation to Norfolk International in tourist-class passengers.

The lifting of federal government controls that guaranteed at least minimal airline service to small cities is hurting airports like Patrick Henry.

The airport has only 20 flights a day, about a third as many as Norfolk gets.

In the early 70s, airport planners predicted Patrick Henry would be the dominant airport in the area because of its long runways and 2,000 acres for expansion to accomodate the even the largest commerical jets. Norfolk, by contrast, is landlocked.

Norfolk's airport would be used only for short flights along the East Coast, the planners said.

They were wrong. More and more Peninsula travelers are coming to Norfolk for flights and Patrick Henry is being reduced to a commuter stop.

There are at least 200 cars on any day bearing Hampton or Newport News licenses in the Norfolk airport parking lot, according to Peter R. Daikos, assistant executive director of the Norfolk Port and Industrial Authority, operator of the field here.

Peninsula officials haven't accepted the idea easily.

"As far as we're concerned, there always will be two airports because there are two distinct markets," said Timothy L. Campbell, executive director of the Peninsula Airport Commission and manager of Patrick Henry.

Until recently, almost every flight that stopped at either Patrick Henry or Norfolk also stopped at the other field. No more.

National Airlines withdrew all service to Patrick Henry in 1977. Allegeheny Airlines replaced its regular service with commuter flights in March. Piedmont Airlines left in May.

And United Airlines announced last month it was ending all Atlanta flights in October, cutting the Peninsula's ties to the Southwest.

Piedmont quickly announced it would step up its Atlanta service in Norfolk but did not offer to replace Patrick Henry's flights.

By contrast, Norfolk has a growing service — by United, Allegeheny, Piedmont, National and in October Eastern Airlines — to 65 major markets.

Daikos believes that with a little prodding, the airlines soon will supply 100 daily flights to and from Norfolk, putting it on a level with Memphis and Cincinnati.

A spokesman for one airline said the companies consider Norfolk the region's one airport. A third of the Peninsula population lives east of Patrick Henry, making it as easy to travel to Norfolk, the airline spokesman said.

Campbell insists there is a parochial feeling among Peninsula citizens about Patrick Henry and that businessmen resent having to go to Norfolk for flights, he said.

Peggy One Of Them

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer

VENICE, Italy (AP) — A gleaming gondola glides down the Grand Canal with a lone passenger — a white-haired lady in bright-colored dress. "There goes Peggy," somebody shouts.

Aboard the elegant black boat — the last private gondola in Venice — is Peggy Guggenheim, the American millionaire art collector and once the darling of the American and European avant-garde.

Now 81 and frail, Mrs. Guggenheim lives alone in an 18th century palazzo with her only full-time companion, Cellida, a 15-year-old blind and deaf spaniel.

Her house is a white stone structure standing downsteam and across the Grand Canal from St. Mark's Square. It is also a museum, containing one of the world's most impressive collections of modern art. The 266 pieces, reportedly worth over $35 million, include works by nearly 100 artists — among them Picasso, Chagall, Dali, Ernst, Pollock, Braque and De Chirico.

Her collection embraces all the nonrealistic movements of 20th century art. "She has done what many museums have tried to do," one critic said, "And done it better."

She was the "enfant terrible" of the Guggenheim family. Solomon Guggenheim, founder of New York's Guggenheim Museum, was her uncle. She now smiles at her Venetian nickname, "Peggy La Pazza" — Crazy Peggy. But it's a sign that the Venetians regard Mrs. Guggenheim — whom they made an honorary citizen in 1962 — as one of them. By Venetian thinking, you can hardly take life in stride unless you have a streak of madness.

As intensely as she loves Venice and its people, Mrs. Guggenheim hates her native America which, she says, gave her an unhappy childhood and a distressing adolescence. Her father, Benjamin, drowned on the Titanic in 1912 when she was 14.

After a visit to New York City in 1969, she vowed she would never return to the United States, where she assured her place in art history by launching the abstract expressionist movement.

"I don't think they need me," she says. "I don't need them. America is too big and frightening. Too much pushing and everything is so hectic, and everything is the same, all those towns in the Middle West all exactly alike. It's inhumane and impersonal."

Mrs. Guggenheim says she fell into collecting art almost by accident.

"It was after a divorce, and someone said I should start either a publishing company or an art gallery," she recalled. "I figured I'd lose too much money in publishing, so I started a gallery."

Marcel Duchamps and other friends in art taught her the basics about abstract art and introduced her to the artists who were creating it.

"I didn't know anything when I began. I was very innocent and very ignorant."

She began discovering and launching young artists. Her most sensational find was Jackson Pollock, who was working as a carpenter at the Guggenheim Museum while trying to sell his pictures.

"To console the artist for not having sold anything, I used to buy one painting from every exhibition I sponsored," she says.

"Then I went to Paris before the war and bought the pictures, one a day, from those Parisians who wanted to sell and get out of the city being threatened by the Germans."

Two days before the Germans invaded Paris, she took her collection to the United States. After World War II, she ended her "exile" in New York and came to Venice for good.

Even before her collection became famous, Mrs. Guggenheim was making news with her romantic escapades. She has been married four times and involved in two celebrated romances — with playwright Samuel Beckett and painter Yves Tanguy.

Her collection will remain "as is" in Venice after her death, under the control of the Guggenheim Museum, or as she calls the Frank Lloyd Wright construction in Manhattan, "Uncle Solomon's garage."

$80 MILLION

WASHINGTON (AP) — An estimated $80 million a day was paid by life-insurance companies to American families in 1978, up from $72 million daily the previous year.

Williamston Set To Advertise For Bids For New Sewer Line

WILLIAMSTON — A motion to advertise for bids for an interceptor sewer line to an industrial site on N. C. 125 was approved by the Williamston Board of Commissioners at the August meeting on Monday.

Administrative assistant John Boykin reported that the legal portion of a proposed site purchase by a local industry of the site on N.C. 125 had nearly been completed, and as a result, the board could now authorize the advertising for bids. He noted too that the federal grant received for the sewer line was contingent on the line running to an industry.

Another motion approved was that of a request for the town to help in funding being sought for a number of improvements to the water supply system in the western area of Williamston.

Jim McBrayer, president of the Williamston Chamber of Commerce, noted that applications for state and federal funds are being made, and that funds are also available from the Federal Home Administration.

A three-year project for work in the North Central Community Development Project was approved. Henry Leggett, executive director of the Williamston Housing Authority, noted that annual increments of expenditures call for $700,000, $600,000, and $800,000 respectively.

At the request of the Williamston Recreation Advisory Commission, the town board rescinded its vote of June 4 and voted to allow the group to return to an advisory committee status.

A motion was approved authorizing development of the Williamston Youth Park (Police Club). Approval is part of requirements for grants being applied for by the town.

Commissioners are to look into the question of why the town pool has not been operated in two years, and why lights on the playground at Martin Street Playground have not been turned on. Eddie Beach, town recreation director, noted that Martin County Community Action had not turned the pool over to the town, but had instead vacated it. He added that funds given to the agency for repairs on the pool had not been used for such repairs.

A report on building permits shows that for the first half of 1979 the figures exceed those of 1978, with 97 permits issued to date for new construction totaling $1.65 million.

Stewart Says Pay Too High

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Though House Speaker Carl Stewart hasn't formally announced his intention to run for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, he thinks the job isn't worth the $40,000-a-year salary.

Stewart said in an interview Monday that he would like to have the job returned to a part-time status, such as it was up until 1972, unless additional duties can be assigned to the lieutenant governor.

The only job the lieutenant governor now has is to preside over the state Senate when the General Assembly is in session.

"When the lieutenant governor was made a full-time member of the executive branch of government, it was expected that he would be assigned additional duties by the Governor or the General Assembly," Stewart said.

"But because of the bitterness between the governor and the lieutenant governor, no additional duties were assigned," he said in a reference to differences between Gov. Jim Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

"In some states, the lieutenant governor is in charge of indsutrial development. That's a big job that requires a lot of time." Stewart also suggested that, in light of the creation of a new board to govern the state's community college system, the lieutenant governor should serve as chairman of the board.

PIN-UP PUPS — Anthony Henry, 13, had a problem rounding up the dozen offspring of his Irish setter Molly for their first official family portrait. So he finally socked it to the nine males and three females, born July 11. Their mom took it in stride, as did the pup beside her right ear. He promptly fell asleep. (AP Laserphoto)

Martin County Buying Four New Sheriff Cars

WILLIAMSTON — A low bid of $25,362 submitted by Roanoke Chevrolet Company for four new cars for the Martin County's Sheriff's Department was approved by Martin County Commissioners at their August meeting on Monday.

The bid included a cost tab of $6,108 for each car, plus $234.06 for shock absor rs and alternators.

The board also accepted a low bid of $4,940 from the same firm for a one-half ton pick-up truck. No other bids were submitted for the truck.

In a request from Laurie Joyner, clerk for the town of Oak City, to use funds collected for rental of a former school gym there, the board tabled action, asking Joyner to return with more detailed cost estimates of renovations being considered on other buildings from the $300 collected each month.

Board members agreed to take a look at ordinances of nearby counties in an effort to solve the problem of stumps being dumped in containers and container sites instead of being taken to the landfill.

A discussion on the status of the Roanoke River Project (Moratoc Park) resulted in statements that all concerned did not want to see the project "let go," but that it was also desirable that industrial development not be hindered by stress on the river project.

Another item tabled was that of a revised operating agreement for the Robersonville Community Hospital, following some concern about vague wording in some parts of the proposed agreement.

Tabled too was a recommendation from Sue Singleton, director of Region Q Food Services, that the organization be changed to a regional agency so that five employees of the corporation could qualify for retirement benefits. Commissioners raised some questions about applicable benefits for employees in similar fields and agencies.

In a report to commissioners, Earl Moore, district engineer with the Dept. of Transportation, reported that a total of $282,295 in secondary road funds was available to the county. Of this amount, $107,795 is money from bond funds.

Pitt One Of Three In Grant

Pitt County will be one of three counties in North Carolina to receive funding to establish a Displaced Homemakers Center this fall.

According to Helen Simpson, Region Q Coordinator of the Council on the Status of Women, Pitt County will receive an estimated $200,000 to establish the center from the North Carolina Council on the Status of Women through a CETA grant.

Ms. Simpson said that the center will serve homemakers who have been out of the work force for five years or more, but who because of loss of their major financial support must reenter the working world.

The Displaced Homemaker Center will provide intensive self-assessment, career counseling and job placement for more than 75 women. In addition, the center will sponsor workshops and referral services which will be open to the public.

The criteria for homemakers receiving the full services of the center that they must be unemployed, low income or economically disadvantaged.

A Project Coordinator, Job Developer, Recruiter/-Counselor, and Secretary will work with the homemakers at the center.

According to Ms. Simpson, a site should be chosen for the center this month, with the staff at work in September. The center should be open in October, said Ms. Simpson.

Jean Darden, chairperson of the Pitt County Council on the Status of Women, said that the Pitt County Council is pleased that the state is making this needed service available to county homemakers. The Council will coordinate programs and seminars with the Center.

Robert Guy

Guy New Officer

Robert Guy, a 24-year-old Fayetteville native, will assume duties as a state probation and parole officer as of August 6, according to the Pitt County Department of Corrections.

Guy will be assigned to work through the Greenville office to supervise all adult probationers and parolees the court deems necessary. He will also conduct investigations and place clients on probation from the courts.

He has been employed as a probation parole officer in Fayetteville since January, 1978.

A graduate of East Carolina University, Guy is a history major.

Was The Long Wait Worth It?

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The next time someone tells you that anticipation heightens the pleasure of an awaited event, tell the misinformant to catch an episode of "Hanging In" on CBS.

In this case, the waiting's better than the getting. Much better.

It was fun, in a perverse way, to watch the many difficulties and almost-airings that "Hanging In" endured. You may remember that the show was once "Maude" until Bea Arthur dropped out, then "Mr. Dooley" until legal complications arose over the title, then "Mr. Dugan" until John Amos dropped out, then "Mr. Dugan" again, with Cleavon Little, until the Congressional Black Caucus disapproved, and finally, "Hanging In."

This was a show trying very hard to not get on the tube. CBS should have obliged.

Instead, "Hanging In" is here for a four-week run, starting tonight, with the possibility of becoming a midseason replacement for a fall schedule drop-out. That's a threat, not a promise.

The situation that Norman Lear's TAT Productions finally settled on for this show is essentially the same one it had in previous incarnations, except our hero (Bill Macy) is a brand-new college president instead of a freshman congressman.

There is a fat good ol' boy named Sam Dickey, the college's Director of Development. He is a crass wheeler and dealer who seems to have gotten lost on his way to the "Carter Country" set. He fakes a Southern accent and tells Macy what to do.

Then there is Maggie Gallager (Barbara Rhoades), a too-efficient aide who also bosses her boss a lot. "I'm good," she tells Macy, "I'm damn good." Okay.

Finally, there is Nedra Volz, who plays Macy's housemaid. Yes, she too is brimming with disrespect. She is a cute little old lady who tells her new employer, "Sit on it, Louie!" Heehee. How naughty.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	3 ◇	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ◇.

In both bridge and music, the term "he plays by ear" often has a derogatory connotation—it suggests a person who has had no formal instruction and simply follows his instincts. In bridge, however, playing by ear should have a second meaning. What might be right on one hand could be wrong on another if you have listened to the bidding. Taking the factors of the auction into account is also playing by ear, and this hand is a splendid example.

North's opening bid, despite its three defensive tricks, was a trifle aggressive, and it was inevitable that his side would reach four spades once he supported South. East would have done better to take no further action after he heard that his opponents had located a fit in the master suit, for it was unlikely that he would be able to buy the contract.

West led his fourth-best diamond, declarer won and played a heart. The defenders took two heart tricks and then reverted to diamonds. Declarer ruffed, ruffed his last heart in dummy and dummy's remaining diamond in hand, and then drew trumps in two rounds with the king and queen. Now declarer stopped to count.

East's bidding had indicated two five-card suits, and this was corroborated by the fall of the cards. He had also shown up with two trumps. Therefore, he could have no more than one club. So declarer led a low club, and when West followed with the six, declarer inserted dummy's seven! When it held, the contract was safe.

Had East been able to win this trick, it would have done him no good. He would have been forced to return a red card, allowing declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding the club loser from the other. And it would not have gained if West played the nine of clubs on the first lead of the suit, for declarer would simply win the king and lead a low club off the table to his ten, end playing West.

Thus a game was made—all because declarer had a finely tuned audio antenna.

Suddenly New Hair

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A Toms River man's adversity has turned to his advantage.

James Naso, 54, had been bald for about 30 years. But this week, fuzz has appeared on the top of his head, showing the start of a full head of black hair.

Naso was severely burned over 50 percent of his body, including his scalp, on when his boat exploded July 1. He has been recuperating at St. Francis Medical Center Burn Facility, said a spokesman for the National Burn Victim Foundation in Orange.

Dr. John Flood, Naso's physician, says there isn't any medical explanation for Naso's new hair.

LEGAL NOTICE

Jack W. Richardson, Director at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, Greenville, N.C., filed notice on July 30, 1979 of intent to incur a capital expenditure for the purpose of acquiring a mobile gamma scintillation camera to be located within Pitt Memorial Hospital. The project is scheduled to become operational in October, 1979 and is estimated to cost $125,000.

Under provisions of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 and Chapter 131, Article 18 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the proposal was submitted to the Certificate of Need Section, Division of Facility Services, North Carolina Department of Human Resources, for review by planning agencies, including the Office of Administration, Division of Facility Services, and to the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency in Greenville, N.C.

These agencies, in examining the proposal, will seek to determine whether the project is needed, if it can be adequately staffed and operated, whether it is economically feasible within prevailing rate structures, and if it proposes specific cost-containment features.

Busy Day For Today's Geisha Girl

By CHIKAKO YATABE

TOKYO (AP) — Rieko Mochida's day begins at 10 o'clock each morning when she sets out from her Tokyo home for a music lesson. It ends after midnight when the last customers have left the traditional, Japanese-style restaurant to which she was assigned for the evening.

At 33 years of age, Rieko is at the top of her profession as a Japanese geisha. She began the role at 16, after deciding a year earlier that she wanted to become a geisha "to sweep away the twisted notions against us."

These notions include the idea that geishas are women of the night whose physical favors are readily available to the affluent customer along with their music, dancing and conversation.

The word geisha itself comes from "gei," meaning arts, and "sha," meaning a person. Thus, the geisha considers herself a person of the arts with a private life and a lifestyle of her own choice.

"My life is a very busy one," the jeans-clad Rieko said in an interview. "It has to be if I am to keep up my art skills."

The skills include the daily music lesson on the samisen, a three-stringed Japanese instrument that is one of the trademarks of the geisha. She began learning to play it when she was little more than 3 years old.

She also practices singing — the songs in strange tones called tokiwazu out of a distant past. In the afternoon, she goes through her dance routines, also highly stylized in forms compatible with the close-fitting kimono.

Back home by 3 p.m., she begins the long, tedious task of bathing, making up and dressing for her night's work. At nightfall, she is on her way to the restaurant where she will spend the evening providing entertainment for the pleasure of male customers, often well-connected business executives or successful politicians.

The entertainment will consist of music and dance, lighthearted banter and the Japanese version of what used to be called parlor games in the West.

While kneeling beside the men — the meal is always served on low tables with guests seated on tatami straw mat floors — she may not eat, but probably will be invited to exchange many toasts of sake, the traditional Japanese rice wine.

The geisha is booked by the hour, but Rieko, like most of the popular ones usually is engaged for the entire evening. At a rate of 2,850 yen (about $13) for each hour, she may make as much as $2,000 a month. That is far more than the average office girl could hope to earn, but for a geisha there are heavy expenses.

Her wardrobe must include many kimonos, the least expensive of which may cost $1,000 or more. The extremely intricate Japanese hairstyles now are required only on special occasions, but there still is a daily visit to a hairdresser at a cost of seven or eight dollars.

Then there are other specialized items of clothing and money for the music and dancing lessons.

"If we don't get help from a parent or patron, we're likely to be in debt to our kimono shop," Rieko said.

"There also is the problem of job security," she went on. "Although we are lucky in that, if we're good, we can continue as long as we like. I have a colleague who is still working happily in her 70s.

"But I certainly don't feel very secure thinking what will happen when I am not in good shape. Many geishas save up to buy a bar or small restaurant to have something to fall back on."

The daughter of a geisha mother, Rieko is a member of the Kagurazaka Geigi (geisha) guild and looks often to her links with the past.

Centuries ago, when Tokyo was known as Edo, the first geishas accompanied courtesans to the city's fabled Yoshiwara gay quarter. There they provided music and song, but were forbidden by government decree to engage in prostitution.

They are diminishing now and there are no official statistics on the total number of true geishas in Japan. One authority said he would guess there are about 2,000, while another said there are "no more than 400 or 500 real geishas" in the entire country.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — After leaving Hillsborough late in 1829, the acid-tongued traveler, Mrs. Anne Newport Royall, rode by stage to Chapel Hill and checked into David B. Alesbrook's tavern for a rest while the mail was sorted at the post office.

She was outraged by Mrs. Alesbrook's question, "Have you no man with you?" The Virginian took great pride in her independence and felt that a woman of her standing could travel alone without insult.

The question probably accounts for her bitter denunciation of the University of North Carolina in her journal. Not only was it run by "Blue-skins" (her name for Presbyterians); it had a president (Joseph Caldwell) who allowed his wife to run the institution, she charged.

"She is ruled by Priests, and Priests are ruled by money, and she rules the University," wrote the angry traveler.

In Raleigh, a number of leading citizens called on her, and her journal records her partiality to those who did and her scorn for those who did not cater to her ego.

Of State Treasurer William Robards, she wrote, "He is a gentleman of settled age, a tall, spare figure, with a thin wan face, mild blue eyes, and keen intelligent countenance"

Newspaper editor Weston Gales, brother of her friend Joseph Gales, was "generous as a prince and poor as Lazarus." She noted that he had become "fat and bloated" since she had previously seen him. His father, she suspected, "goes for the tracts."

Commenting that the Gales were supporters of Henry Clay, she wrote that "if Mr. Clay has not three sheets to the gale, he has three Gales to the sheet; he will be unlucky if he cannot reach port."

Contemptuously, Mrs. Royall wrote "of a strange infatuation of the females in Raleigh, from the oldest to the youngest." Her reference was to dipping snuff.

Mrs. Royall was one of the first visitors to comment on the recently published book of poetry by the Chatham County slave, George Moses Horton. "He is the only writer I have heard of in this country, or age, of his color," she wrote.

Her most glowing account was reserved for the State House (which burned two years later). It was, she said, "a very handsome building, of brick, and the exterior painted with a cream color . . . the whole exterior representing one of the most finished pictures of taste and beauty."

The interior was even more beautiful, she said. "The stucco is much superior to that of the domes on the Capitol in Washington, in color and smoothness, and the seats are painted of a bright blue."

She admired Canova's statue of Washington and Sully's famous portrait of the father of our country.

She continued, ". . . the Legislative Halls are hung round with the richest damask silk — this is a brilliant red, of the most costly texture, with gold fringe and tassels, and hangs round the windows and chairs of both Houses, in thick folds from the ceiling to the floor."

Except for the national capitol, she characterized the State House as "by far the most splendidly furnished of any public building I ever met with in the United States."

Mrs. Royall's stay at G. P. Guion's tavern in Raleigh was followed by her miserable visit to Fayetteville, "the poorest hole I ever was in."

Her host, Col. Robert Cochran, got off with a reasonably good rating; but, she added, "I did not find more than a dozen liberal minded men in the whole, a population of 3 to 4,000 inhabitants."

Her complaint, of course, was that the town was full of "Blueskins" — Presbyterians — from whom only a total of one dollar was collected to help her on her journey.

After a frightening stage ride across "corduroy" roads in the swamps, Mrs. Royall finally reached Wilmington, "the garden spot of North Carolina, and size considered, of the United States."

She praised the village of 1,800 inhabitants, four churches, two banks, three rice mills, four sawmills, a market house, courthouse, custom house, and the "best finished Masonic hall" that she had seen.

The vessel on which she sailed from Wilmington ran aground in the Cape Fear, and Mrs. Royall was forced to stop at Smithville (Southport) for a while. Finally, though, she found her way to Charleston. Later, she published a three-volume work on her Southern travels.

Settling in Washington, Anne Royall became noted for her exposure of graft in the federal government. She published successively two magazines, "Paul Pry" and "The Huntress," both of which were terrors to to anyone who provoked her wrath.

TREE LIMB FALLS — City workers were called to a house along Twelfth St., between Cotanche and Charles Streets yesterday, when a tree limb fell. The trees along the street according to Public Works Director Mayo Allen are very old and appear to be alright. While parked at the curb, another tree limb fell on the city owned vehicle causing about $150 damage. Allen said street superintendent Genrty Mills was not in the car when the limb fell and was not injured. The limb also contained a bee's nest. Allen said a horticulturist had been consulted and the disposition of the trees was awaiting the outcome of his report. (Photo by Alan Bowling)

These Knots Matter Of Life And Death

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tying knots in string is not a pastime for N.C. State textile professor Bhupender S. "Bob" Gupta. Quite literally, the knots are a matter of life and death.

At present, Gupta is researching how the installation of surgical sutures can be refined. His concern stems from the fact that most surgical sutures are made of textile materials.

"The security of the knot has not been experimented with to any great degree in the past," Gupta said. "The surgeon is quite concerned with slippage of the knot."

Previously, research into sutures from the textile aspect has been done largely in medical laboratories. "But because these materials are textile materials, why shouldn't we be involved?" Gupta asked.

Helping Gupta in the project is Dr. R.W. Postlethwait, professor of surgery at Duke University and chief of surgery at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Durham.

Simply defined, a suture is a material or stitch used in surgery to close an incision. Gupta and Postlewait have obtained grants to study how sutures can be made more effective.

Since the breakage of a knot can also cause difficulties, Gupta said the ideal suture material should have great strength when the knot is made.

He pointed out that a surgeon often makes the knot more secure by making additional "throws" or loops in the knot. However, the method takes time and could prolong the period when a patient is under anesthestics. It also increases the possibility of infectious objects getting into a wound.

In the past, either silk or cat gut were the principal materials used for sutures. Silk was preferred when a "non-absorbable" material was needed; cat gut was used when a material that the body would absorb was necessary.

Gupta said the research already has found that "mersilene" is superior to silk. He said that another textile material, polyglycolic acid, which is absorbable, is now used generally instead of cat gut.

Machines are used by the research team to test the materials. Continually, they subject the material and the knots to stress and then examine their tests under a microscope.

Gupta says his experiments confirm surgical experience that no knot he has tried is as satisfactory as the square knot. Ironically, the knot called the "surgeon's knot" is rarely used.

This Camp Not Quite Like Most Other Camps

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — In most ways, it looked like any other summer camp — kids munching hot dogs and playing volleyball. But the guard at the gate was dressed in white robes and packed a pistol, and the kids took time from their games for rifle practice.

A counselor at the camp told the youngsters they were being taught how to fire a rifle because, "Some day you'll be Klansmen in robes and you'll be fighting beside us."

The camp, somewhere north of Birmingham, is run by the Invisible Empire of the Ku Klux Klan. The 47-acre site is owned by Roger Handley, Alabama grand dragon of this particular Klan faction.

Reporters who visited the camp Sunday, at the Klan's invitation, were taken to it convoy-style, over a roundabout route of country roads that made its exact location hard to pinpoint.

Reporter Bob Bray of the Birmingham News was among those who visited the camp. His story appeared in Monday's editions.

Bill Wilkinson of Denham Springs, La., imperial wizard of the faction, said in addition to usual summer-camp activities, target practice and karate lessons, campers attend weekly classes on "what it means to be white. We want to make what the liberal media would call racists out of them."

Tony Anderson, state director for the Klan's Youth Corps program, said after Life magazine printed several pictures of camp activities in its August issue, it was decided that the camp should be opened to other media.

So on Sunday, NBC News showed up. So did a crew from CBS' "60 Minutes," the American correspondent for the Danish national television network and a reporter from a New York newspaper.

They waited for hours under a blistering sun to see youngsters heft a rifle and take two shots apiece at paper plates lined up in a ravine.

"There are people, particularly communists, who would stoop to anything, even attacking kids," Wilkinson said.

Some of the youngsters told reporters that they joined the corps because of harassment and physical attacks from blacks in schools.

"Let's face it," Anderson told the group. "You're Youth Corps. You stand together and you fight together. ..."

Wilkinson said members of the youth group, which is open to 12-to 18-year-olds, are not Klan members. He added that he expected most would join the Klan when they are grown.

Wilkinson said his Klan group, one of several in the nation, operates 12 such camps in six states. Also, he said, plans are under way to construct a family recreation club for Klan members, with a lake and artificial beach, roller rink, game room and bowling alley.

"We want to interest the big cities in the Klan and we feel this will draw people who want segregated recreation facilities," Wilkinson said.

"We make no bones about it. We're not an equal opportunity employer."

OLD TREES

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — One of the oldest trees in Czechoslovakia is an oak in south Moravia which experts say is over 1,000 years old.

They say another oak in Oslavicka is over 600 years old and that four men have difficulty clasping hands around its trunk.

Sit-Ins Will Stay

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Some 30 persons occupying the Swiss Embassy since Friday say they will remain until the Mexican government releases 153 persons they say are political prisoners and informs them of the whereabouts of 553 others.

Led by Felipe Martinez Soriano, former rector of the University of Oaxaca, the demonstrators talked Monday night with Interior Undersecretary Rodolfo Gonzalez Guevara. He said the government would not discuss their demands with them until they left the embassy, which is on the fifth and six floors of an office building downtown, Martinez Soriano said.

The demonstrators took no hostages and said they were not interfering with the embassy staff.

The Greeks — under Admiral Kanaris — destroyed the Turkish fleet in 1822.

Yankees Did Come

By JACK ADAMS
Durham Morning Herald
Member Exchange Feature

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Twenty years ago, they sounded the warning: "The Yankees are coming, the Yankees are coming."

And they did.

We thought the joke was on them. We gave up some scrabble land in the midst of Durham and Raleigh and Chapel Hill, and they turned stone into a wonderland of research. It's called the Research Triangle Park.

Coaxing the Yankees down South wasn't easy, recalls Ned Huffman, executive director of the Research Triangle Foundation, the non-profit organization that promotes the park.

To lure Borroughs Wellcome to the buckle of the Sun Belt, Huffman got groups of executives to fly down to North Carolina, 40 at a trip, and got local people to fly up there, so the two groups could do some socializing.

After each side found out the other wasn't so different, (the Westchester crowd thought North Carolina was one big swamp, Huffman recalls), Borroughs Wellcome moved its research operations into the park.

It even built the park's showplace, a modernistic set of cubicles stacked, it would seem, contrary to the very laws of gravity. Perhaps to placate the skeptical Southerner unused to such architectural extravagance, the designer said it was a purely Southern building — just a bunch of porches.

That's just one tale. There are 31 others that contribute to the remarkable phenomenom that has become the nation's largest planned research park. The word planned is important because there are bigger parks that incorporate the theme of research, but they also produce widgets and that sort of thing.

Research Triangle Park, on the other thing, is a think tank for 14,000 people, some 3,000 of whom are Ph.Ds, M.D.s, Sc.Ds. They're people who've been learned and lettered to dig deep below the common lore into the mysteries of medicine, electronics, environment, chemicals, etc. to create new products for tomorrow and to the problems we created yesterday.

Research Triangle Park currently has a payroll in the neighborhood of $250 million, and there are are 15 building projects that will increase employment by 2,000 people by 1981.

In 20 more years, Huffman figures, Research Triangle Park will be full up. Yet it won't look that way. Because of restrictive covenants that permit no more than 15 percent of the land to be developed and require 150-foot setbacks on all sides, the Research Triangle Park of 1999 will continue to look like a carefully manicured, sprawling college campus nestled among the pine forests.

That's the reason Huffman believes Research Triangle Park, in spite of its worldwide reputation, has relatively little local visibility. A driver on the park's main roads can catch only a glimpse of a building here and there.

Some of the most significant research in the world is going on in the park, but it's not a place to dawdle and gawk.

Research Triangle Park has helped North Carolina reverse the trend of the 1940s, '50s and '60s when most of the state's bright young people went north for work because of limited opportunities nearer home.

In the 1960s, North Carolina State sent three-quarters of its science and engineering graduates out of state. More than half remain now.

The idea for Research Triangle Park goes back to the 1940s, but it lay dormant for a while. Under former Gov. Luther Hodges' leadership it was resurrected in the early 1950s, and through contributions from individuals and industries, enough money was raised to buy the first 4,000 acres.

It began as a private enterprise venture, but that changed in the early days. The Research Triangle Foundation was formed in 1959 as the land trustee, and profits from land were poured into research.

The primary sponsor's of the park are the Triangle's three major universities: Duke in Durham, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and N.C. State in Raleigh. Their libraries, their faculties and their facilities make up the stuff of which research-minded corporations dream.

The three universities have done much to pull in the whizzes. They have one of the world's largest computer systems, one of the world's largest spectograms, and Duke and UNC have hyperbaric chambers capable of producing unique climatic conditions important for much research.

What If Chrysler Does Fail?

By JAMES V. HIGGINS
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — At first glance, it doesn't appear to be a difficult tradeoff — $1 billion for 500,000 jobs.

But when the pressure mounts on the government this summer to rescue Chrysler Corp., the issues will be as complex and deep as the stakes are high.

Officials of Chrysler, the nation's 10th largest corporation, assume the government will help the firm weather its time of heavy losses — allowing it to tool up for a new, 1981 car line seen as the firm's salvation.

Company officials refuse even to discuss one basic question: what would happen if the nation's No. 3 automaker failed?

The United Auto Workers union also is seeking federal help, and it portrays the alternative in terms of a disaster.

Both the company and UAW attribute many of Chrysler's troubles to government safety, fuel economy and exhaust emission standards. The company reported losses of $207.1 million in the second quarter and there are fears of a $500 million deficit this year.

"It clearly makes more sense to use government funds to avoid a disaster, rather than to repair the damage afterwards," the union said.

"While we firmly believe that present government standards are socially necessary, we do not think Chrysler workers should be expected to shoulder the burden of programs that benefit all Americans."

Chrysler is small only in comparison with its bigger brothers, General Motors Corp. and the Ford Motor Co.

It has facilities, dealers or suppliers in all 50 states. It directly employs 130,000 people and suppliers account for 370,000 more.

In the six states where it concentrates its business — Michigan, Indiana, Missouri, New York, Ohio and Texas — it paid $3.5 billion in wages, salaries and fringe benefits last year.

In those same states, it contributed nearly $124 million in taxes.

It is the No. 1 employer in the Detroit area, where it has a payroll of nearly $2.5 billion.

Chrysler estimates it has 16,752,202 vehicles in use in the 50 states — many of them under warranty and demanding dealer service and parts.

Although automotive sales account for 95 percent of its business, it has sizable marine sales and is just beginning to produce a new line of combat tanks for the government.

To safeguard that massive economic contribution, Chrysler is asking the government advance it $1 billion against future tax credits over two years — a figure the company equates with the cost of meeting regulations.

The firm has mounted a large-scale lobbying effort, including hiring prominent lobbyist Thomas Hale Boggs, Jr., and numerous direct contacts between lawmakers and Chrysler officials.

"They are fully aware of the contributions of our company, our dealers, our suppliers and the 500,000 employees that are involved in the national economy," said Chrysler Chairman John J. Riccardo. "They understand the importance of maintaining three full line competitors in the automobile industry."

Precedent for government intervention exists in the 1974 federal loan guarantee of $250 million to the Lockheed Corp., and in changes in tax laws enacted in 1967 to aid then-stuggling American Motors Corp.

The UAW is asking for a government purchase of $1 billion in Chrysler stock — a solution that would entail participation by the government and the union in the company's management decisions.

Ranking federal officials already have said they will seek assurances Chrysler has done everything possible to help itself before they consider that help.

"We have moved to restructure Chrysler so it will be as lean and effective as possible," Riccardo said. "We have taken over $500 million in costs out of the company in the past year without sacrificing our long-term goals.

"In other words, we have taken all of the prudent steps that could be taken to make our own way and to pay the costs of government regulations."

GARDEN PLATTER SALAD with DUTCH ONION RINGS

Another all-time FAVORITE RECIPE from Better Homes and Gardens

2 or 3 large tomatoes, sliced
1 small cucumber, sliced
Italian salad dressing
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon coarsely ground pepper
½ teaspoon dill seed
1 teaspoon snipped parsley
Dutch Onion Rings:
2 medium onions, sliced ¼-inch thick
¼ cup dairy sour cream
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon celery seed
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Prepare Dutch Onion Rings in advance: separate onion slices in rings; place in bowl and cover with boiling water. Let stand 2 minutes; drain. Chill. Before serving, combine sour cream, salt, celery seed and lemon juice; toss with onions. At serving time, pile onions in center of platter; border with overlapping tomato and cucumber slices. Drizzle dressing over tomatoes and cucumbers; sprinkle with salt, pepper, dill seed and parsley. Garnish with ripe olives and leaf lettuce. Makes 4 to 6 servings.
