Oil Spill 'Goo' Is Washing Ashore

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas
(AP) — Thick swaths of runaway Mexican crude oil coated nearly three miles of glistening resort beaches on South Padre Island early today, and officials say tourism is down 30 percent. Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Jim Paskewich said late Wednesday night that the brownish-black goo was washing up on the white sand beaches just north of a plush strip of hotels and condominiums. The three-foot-wide ribbon stretched about 2½ miles up a drive-on beach used for camping, swimming and fishing.

"It appears right now that it will be north of the hotel beaches, but it will be close to them. It will be very noticeable, that is for sure," said Paskewich, a leader of the government task force trying to defend against history's worst oil spill.

Paskewich said clean-up crews would begin removing the oil shortly after daybreak.

Almost 10 miles of tourist beaches along the northern end of the scenic 100-mile-long island were hit Tuesday and Wednesday by the sticky mess from 500 miles south in the Bay of Campeche, where the Mexican offshore oil well Ixtoc 1 blew out June 3.

South Padre Island, the highlight of the South Texas coast for tourists, had escaped most of the oil before Wednesday night, receiving only scattered small tar balls and two larger globs.

South Padre hotel owners were meeting Wednesday night in nearby Harlingen to discuss the 30 percent decrease in business they said is due largely to the oil threat and subsequent national publicity.

Meanwhile, mammoth patches of oil continued to loom only a few miles off shore. Reconnaissance flights late Wednesday showed the ribbon of oil stretched 60 miles north of the southern tip of Padre Island.

Scientist John Robinson said thousands of square miles of the Gulf of Mexico south of Texas are covered by the oil and warned that the situation in Texas could get much worse.

For The Birds

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Asheville post office patrons wish the pigeons that roost there would hot foot it elsewhere.

With the help of an electric fence that will be installed soon, the birds may do just that.

The pigeons have been roosting over the post office's front door and leaving signs of their presence. The General Services Administration has awarded a contract to install a type of electric fence along the roosting areas.

The fence won't kill the birds, it will just give them hot feet and hopefully, officials say, make them fly away.

The electric fence is the last of a series of measures to move the birds. Officials first tried covering the area with chicken wire. No luck. Then they played a recorded bird distress call. Pigeons were attracted in record numbers.

Officials believe it will be fall before they know whether the latest method keeps the birds from dropping by.

Khomeini Says U.S. And Israel 'Enemies'

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Branding Israel and the United States "enemies of Islam," Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader of Iran's Islamic revolution, today asked his nation to mark Friday as a day of solidarity with the Palestinian people.

Speaking in a national radio broadcast, the 79-year-old Shiite Moslem leader described Israel as "the enemy of humanity throughout the world." He said "Israel should know their masters have no power in the world and that they have no alternative but to become isolated."

He said the countries which do not participate in the day of solidarity with the Palestinians "are in camp with the enemies of Islam who are headed by the United States and Israel."

Turning to the subject of domestic unrest, Khomeini warned Iranian leftists "unless you stop your follies, I shall give the final word."

Observers interpreted this remark as a threat to unleash Islamic militants against leftists protesting Khomeini's restrictions on the press and pushing for a government based on democratic principles.

Khomeini supporters attacked leftist groups in Tehran three times this week because of weekend marches against Khomeini's restrictive press decrees. "No one should think that

Andy Young Said He'd Do It Again

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Andrew Young, out as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations for unauthorized discussions with the Palestine Liberation Organization, may still be at his post when the explosive Palestinian issue comes to a head at the U.N. later this month.

White House officials said President Carter intends to move with "due care and deliberate consultation" in choosing a successor. And, these officials said, he will consult Young in making a selection.

That process could still be going on next Thursday, when the Security Council is scheduled to resume its debate over the Palestinians and resolutions to support their drive for statehood.

His resignation was announced Wednesday after he met separately with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance for 45 minutes and with Carter for an hour and a half.

Young said he wrote his letter of resignation in New York on Tuesday night. But there was speculation — unconfirmed by administration sources — that Young's status was not settled until well along in his talk with Carter.

In any event, Carter wrote out his acceptance in longhand shortly after Young left the White House living quarters.

Young stressed in his farewell press conference a conviction that the United States should deal with the PLO — a conviction flatly against U.S. policy.

He defended his July 26 meeting with Zehdi Labib Terzi, the PLO's U.N. observer, and said: "I'd do it again and keep doing it."

But in the Security Council deliberations, Young presumably will remain bound by U.S. policy and commitments to Israel and veto any resolution supporting Palestinian statehood.

It is not clear, though, whether Young will also be under instruction to block any changes in standing U.N. resolutions. These refer to the Palestinians entirely as a refugee problem.

Robert Strauss, chief U.S. mediator for the Middle East, gave assurances to Israel earlier this week that the administration would oppose any modification of the resolutions.

But Yehuda Blum, the Israeli ambassador to the United Nations, said after a meeting with Young Monday night that the ambassador could give no such promise.

Strauss leaves late this afternoon for Israel to confer with Prime Minister Menachem Begin. This weekend Strauss will fly on to Egypt to see President Anwar Sadat.

Young's resignation, meanwhile, stirred outrage and disappointment among black leaders.

One, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, said it could force blacks to break with the Carter administration and with Jews.

Redevelopment Agency Approves Revised Pay Plan And Travel Policy

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Redevelopment Commission met yesterday morning at the Commission's offices on Broad Street after failing to have quorum present for its regularly scheduled session Monday night.

Commissioners approved a revised pay plan under which the pay scale for employees would be comparable to that of city employees, and amended the travel policy to bring it in line with the city's travel policy.

Redevelopment director Joe Lamey reported that staff members completed acquisition of a half-dozen parcels during July in various project areas.

Included was one parcel on Pitt Street in the Southside project area, one in West Meadowbrook, one parcel on Railroad Street in the South Evans area, two in the West Greenville thoroughfare project — one at the intersection of 14th Street and Myrtle Avenue, and the other at the intersection of Chestnut Street and 14th Street, and one on 14th Street between Spruce Street and Farmville Boulevard.

Lamey reported the demolition of one structure during the month, a building at 205 West 14th St., and the disposal (sale) of two parcels, one on McClellan Street to Tipton Builders and one at the intersection of Pitt and Elks Street to Garriss-Evans.

Fireworks A Weapon To Jury

NEW YORK (AP) — The pail of fireworks atop the Brooklyn Bridge may have been art to John Halpern, but to a grand jury it was enough for an indictment on a third-degree charge of criminal possession of a weapon.

Police said Halpern told them the fireworks were a "sculpture," and his statement about the county's economy. Officials said the device could have killed people near it.

Halpern, 25, was free on $10,000 bail pending arraignment next week on the indictment handed up Wednesday.

The director also reported seven relocations from project areas during July.

They included three from property at the intersection of Ninth and Evans Streets in the Central Business District area, one from South Pitt Street in the Southside area, one from the West Meadowbrook area, and two families from the South Evans area.

According to Lamey, three rehabilitation projects were completed in July, one on Fairfax Avenue, one on West Fifth Street, and one at 1407 Broad Street.

Loans were approved for rehabilitation of dwellings on Ford Street and Colonial Avenue, during July, while grants were approved for rehabilitation of property on Nash, Hudson and Ford Streets.

The commission amended appraisal contracts yesterday in connection with the West Greenville Thoroughfare area to include some 341 square feet on the Northwest corner of the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and 14th Street, and 329 square feet on the Southeast corner of the same intersection. The property will be used to provide improved turning radius at the intersection.

The commission also approved an additional payment of $540 to Calvin Reynolds for appraisal work in the South Evans project area. Reynolds had been paid $90 per parcel for 99 parcels in the area while actually he had appraised 105 parcels.

A revised plan for developing a parcel at the intersection of Third and Washington Streets was given approval by the commission yesterday.

T and C Company requested the change, which would permit construction of a 4,000 square foot building to house a maximum of four office suits, with construction of the building to begin no later than October 1.

Dr. Ferguson To Again Serve UF

Dr. Alfred Ferguson has chosen to serve a second year as Professional I Division Chairman for the Pitt County United Fund.

ECU Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer, 1979 United Fund Chairman, thanked Dr. Ferguson, a Greenville physician, for his interest in the 1979 campaign.

"I'm glad to say that Dr. Ferguson will be heading the Professional I division this year. He did an outstanding job for the 1978 campaign," said Brewer.

Ferguson, director and co-owner of the Greenville Hemodialysis Center, received his bachelor's and doctorate degrees from the University of Tennessee. He is a Kingston, Tenn. native.

Dr. Ferguson did his rotating internship at the University of Tennessee Memorial Research Center and Hospital, as well as his resident practice. He entered private practice with the Internal Medicine and Nephrology. Physicians Quadrangle, Greenville in 1969, after having served as staff physician in Anchorage, Alaska, and fellow in CRANK UP?

Why couldn't we crank that electrical generating station on the Tar River back up? I know these things are being revived all through New England. VEPCO, having the highest rates in the state, should be sufficient inspiration to give that project some thought. M. Y.

Smokestacks and the building shell are about all that's left of the generating station on the Tar, according to Greenville Utilities Director Charles O'H. Horne. The turbines and generators and the coal-handling equipment were scrapped and sold long ago. And, at its maximum, it could only be generating a tenth of what Greenville now needs in electrical power and at three times the cost, even if standards could be brought up enough to allow it to be operated. The last time that plant was used at all was in 1968, Horne said, and then only a couple of days. Use of it began being cut down as early as 1954 when GUCO signed on with VEPCO.

The long-range plan, Horne said, is for that building to be torn down, along with others in that area once they're no longer in use and for the land to be reclaimed for other purposes.

OCTUPLETS

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — A 29-year-old Naples woman on fertility treatment gave birth to eight babies today, it was reported.

If all survive, it would be a world record for multiple births. The previous record listed by the Guinness Book of World Records is six babies, born in Cape Town, South Africa, in 1974.

The report said the babies' weight ranged from 14 ounces to 2.2 pounds. The births took several hours at Naples' Hospital of the Incurable, with a doctor and three nurses attending.

The mother was identified as Pasqualina Chianese Anatrella. She reportedly delivered six children three years ago, all of whom died a few hours after birth.

Engagement Announced

MISS RENEE LOUISE JOHNSON, . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Charles Johnson of Mequon, Wis., who announce her engagement to Joseph Benjamin Tyson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tyson Sr. of Henderson. The wedding will take place Sept. 8.

Couple Unites In Ceremony

WASHINGTON — Riverview Baptist Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony Friday evening of Ann Briley Riddick and Delmus Ray Ayres. The double ring ceremony was performed at eight o'clock by the Rev. L. D. Creech.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Briley of Bethel. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ayres of Robersonville are parents of the bridegroom.

The bride was given in marriage by her son-in-law, Jim Singleton Jr.

The flower girl was Krista Ayres of Robersonville, daughter of the bridegroom, and the ring bearer was Shane Riddick of Rt. 3, Washington, son of the bride.

Ushers included Elwood and Chris Ayres of Bethel, nephews of the bridegroom. James Singleton Sr. served as best man.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Stella Singleton, organist, and vocalist, Mrs. Cecilia Singleton, daughter of the bride, both of Rt. 3, Washington.

The couple will live at Rt. 3, Washington, after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

The bride is a medical

Bridal Policy

"The Daily Reflector" policies relating to engagement announcements and wedding write-ups are as follows:

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Pictures of the bride only will be published. Engagement and wedding forms are available upon request.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

For further information, telephone the newspaper office.

MR. AND MRS. MANCE M. EDMONDSON — of Bethel celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary recently and were honored at a reception at the Bethel United Methodist Church. The reception was given by the couple's children, Mrs. Charlie Manning Jr. and Mrs. Delton E. Perry, both of Bethel.

Wedding Invitation

Mrs. Edna Snead Hubbard requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter, Sylvia Ann, to Lyman L. Teale on Saturday, Aug. 18, at York Memorial A.M.E. Zion Church at 3 p.m. A reception will be held at the South Greenville Recreation Center following the wedding.

The borrowers who are going to quit cutting grass someday, but until they do will borrow your mower, lawn sweeper, hose, and fertilizer.

Tell Daughter You Need Tranquility

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: This is the first time I've ever written to anybody about a problem, but I have had it!

Our daughter brings her family over here three and four times a week for supper — plus all day on Sunday. It has gotten so that lately she spends more time at our place than she does at home. When she's here with the kids, the place is one big howl with high chair and fussing kids.

I'd feel like a heel saying anything about it because my wife seems to enjoy looking after the kids, but lately I've taken to going out a couple of nights a week just to get away from the noise and confusion.

What can I do to discourage this situation?

FED UP IN LAWRENCE, MASS.

DEAR FED UP: Why should you feel like a heel in demanding a little domestic tranquility? It's your house, too. It's also YOUR daughter and grandchildren. So speak up, Dad, and ask for a more equitable compromise. (Twice a week maybe?)

DEAR ABBY: I can't figure out why my 61-year-old husband who is totally impotent has suddenly taken an interest in another woman. He had a very serious prostate operation last year which left him incapable of having sex relations, so I know he can't "do" anything, but he's seeing someone just the same. I know this for a fact because I had him followed by a private detective.

I don't understand what a woman would want with a man who is incapable of sex. He's good-looking, a spiffy dresser, a big spender and likes to dance.

I'm 57, and it may not be too late for me to find somebody else, so I want to know if I can divorce him because of what he is doing even though technically he isn't capable of committing adultery?

DEAR WONDERING: Divorce laws vary in different states, so ask a lawyer what the grounds are in your state. And as for what a woman would want with an impotent, good-looking, spiffy dresser, big spender who likes to dance, well, obviously, your husband has found someone who likes him just the way he is.

DEAR ABBY: When you first started writing your column you explained why a man will pick up some tramp and treat her like a lady, then turn around and treat his wife like a tramp. I saved it for the longest time, and now can't find it. Will you please run it again? Thank you.

MARGARET IN MAINE

DEAR MARGARET: I've found it. And here it is:

A man picks up a tramp because he wants a female companion who is no better than he is. In her company, he doesn't feel inferior. He rewards her by treating her like a lady.

He treats his wife (who IS a lady) like a tramp because he feels that by degrading her he will bring her down to his level. This makes him feel guilty. So in order to get even with his wife for making him feel guilty, he keeps right on punishing her.

DEAR ABBY: A TV announcer talking about an "elderly person," later said he was 55 years old. I was startled.

When I remarked to some of the others in the room that 55 was certainly not elderly, the argument began.

Would you please tell me what years you consider middle age and elderly? Thank you.

C.F.M. IN DENVER

DEAR C.F.M.: My dictionary (Webster's New World) defines middle age as "the period of life from about 40 to 60." And I wouldn't label a person "elderly" unless they've seen no fewer than 80 summers.

PARMESAN RICE Adapted from the 1940s and sometimes called Green Rice.

3 large eggs
3 cups freshly cooked, warm, long-grain rice
1 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup minced parsley
1 small onion, very finely chopped
1-3rd cup olive oil
Beat eggs slightly and stir in remaining ingredients. Turn into an oiled 1½-quart baking dish (10 by 6 by 1¼ inches). Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a knife inserted in center comes out clean — 20 minutes. Remove and let stand about 5 minutes before serving. Makes 6 portions.

This country's next war will not be fought between nations on a foreign battleground. It'll be a civil war fought in a yard between neighbors.

For some reason we can have compassion for a cat caught in a tree, or a lost dog, or a bird that has fallen from a nest. But we have none for the man trying to sleep in on a Sunday morning.

Take the case of poor Mrs. Holmes from York, England. She lived next door to a "menace" who was doing repairs and renovations on his home from 7:30 to 11:30 every single evening. When he began to build a closet on the other side of the wall, she and her husband had to move out of their bedroom.

When they returned, he started doing the same thing in another bedroom.

Mrs. Holmes appealed to the police, the local government and a citizens' advice bureau. Finally, she did what she had to do. She threw a brick through his window.

All of us have had a "brick wish" at one time or another. How about one for the teenager who has insomnia and deaf parents and who works on his car in the wee hours of the morning, stopping every 15 seconds or so to race the motor?

Or the travelers who have made a trench in your yard by How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected in the forecast period (until Friday morning) for the Southwest. Rain and showers are forecast from the eastern Plains to the upper Great Lakes. Cool weather is due for the northern Plains, but most areas will be warm. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Cold Canadian air has settled over North Carolina and it probably will be around through the weekend.

Early morning cloudiness kept temperatures from dropping as low as they did earlier in the week, but some places had readings in the low 50s. Greensboro dropped to 52 degrees, Winston-Salem had a reading of 54 and Raleigh had a 58.

Rainfall associated with the cold front Wednesday was restricted to a few brief and light showers which developed over the extreme southeastern tip of the state.

It was expected to be mostly sunny today and again Friday, and cool. Today's high readings were expected to range from the upper 60s in the northern mountains to the low 80s in the southeast.

Some moderation is forecast Friday with 70s in the mountains and low to mid 80s elsewhere. Tonight's low readings again will be in the cool 50s.

Small craft advisories were put into effect at 6 a.m. today along the coast from Hatteras northward for northeast winds of 15 to 25 knots. Advisories also were in effect for Albemarle and Pamlico sounds for similar winds.

Want Angel For Mother

NEW YORK (AP) — Most teen-aged boys say they would like a mother who's an angel — namely TV's Cheryl Ladd or Jaclyn Smith, a magazine survey concludes.

According to the September issue of Ladies Home Journal, 75 percent of 850 American high school juniors and seniors surveyed said they were dissatisfied with their parents and would replace them if they could.

The top parental choices among girls were Miss Smith and actor Burt Reynolds. Boys chose Reynolds and Mrs. Ladd, the magazine says.

Most of the teens from across the country named film or television stars like Carol Burnett, Lee Majors, Farrah Fawcett, Raquel Welch, and Robert Redford. President Carter broke in as the only non-entertainer.

Despite unhappiness with their parents, more than half said "being married" was their No. 1 goal in life. Ninety-five percent said they wanted to have children, the magazine said.

The students were surveyed in Escondido, Calif.; Brigham City, Utah; Vicksburg, Miss.; Hanover, N.H., and Avoca, N.Y.

Delivery Has Begun On 1979 Phone Directory

Delivery of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company's new telephone directory for Greenville, Bethel, Ayden, Farmville, Fountain and Snow Hill (effective August 27) has begun, according to R.I. Flye, district commercial and marketing manager of the company.

Customers who do not receive their new directories by August 27 should call the telephone company business office at 758-9111.

The cover of the new directory features a grandfather, a child and a dog. It is adapted from "The Invisible Bridge," a 1978 corporate advertisement of United Telecommunications, Inc., operator of the United Telephone System of which Carolina Telephone is a member.

The cover's philosophical message about the nature of communications reads, "The invisible bridge: We have an absolute need to know and understand each other's knowledge and ideas. Happily there is a bridge that spans the chasms between us. It's called Communications." telephone system.

The theme of communication is further developed on the back cover of "The Phone Book" with a photo montage featuring people of all ages. A calendar, a popular feature since its introduction a few years ago, also appears on the back cover.

"Upon receipt of the new directories, subscribers should discard their old directories to eliminate the possibility of using numbers that have been changed," Flye said, last year's contains more listings for business and professional people.

On the inside of the back cover, space is provided for subscribers to list new numbers and numbers that are called frequently. Information about local calling procedures, such as emergency numbers, are inside the front cover.

Instructions concerning Direct Distance Dialing and information relating to services available from Carolina Telephone, are also included.

Kinston Quartet Giving Program

Heaven Bound, a quartet of male singers from Kinston, will be the featured guests for the evening service on Sunday, August 19 at Saint Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church, located on the Chocowinity highway.

The service begins at 7:15 p.m. and the church's pastor, Maurice Phelps, extends a welcome from the membership of Saint Pauls for all wish to attend.

Seeking Overcharge By Oil Firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy says 16 major oil companies may have overcharged customers by as much as $6 billion since 1973. But it won't know until it finishes the audits later this year and, even then, the companies may successfully contest the findings.

Spokesman Jack Vandenberg said Wednesday almost all of the suspected $4.9 billion in overcharges announced previously are being contested and that only $127 million in restitution has been ordered. The disputes usually concern interpretation of complex rules drafted quickly to cope with foreign oil price increases accompanying the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74.

Everything Up But Deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — Births, marriages and divorces are up, but deaths are down.

The National Center for Health Statistics reported Wednesday that 285,000 babies were born in May, up 5 percent over May 1978. For the first five months of the year, births numbered 1,368,000, a 3 percent gain over the same period in 1978. There were 218,000 weddings in May, an increase of 8,000; 102,000 divorces, up 6,000; and 157,000 deaths, down 1,000, from May 1978.

AGREE TO LOANS

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The United States has agreed to make five loans to Indonesia providing a total of $33 million. The accords include $12 million for immunization programs and the remainder for development.

Want Another Fine On VEPco

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission wants to levy another fine against Virginia Electric and Power Co., which it identifies as already the nation's most heavily fined utility for alleged nuclear safety violations.

NRC spokeswoman Sue Gagner said Wednesday Vepco has previously been fined a total of some $112,400 for various violations. The company has 20 days to challenge the latest action or pay a $15,000 fine for allowing the overexposure of an employee to radiation. Vepco had no immediate response. A separate letter was sent to the unnamed reactor operator, criticizing him for exposing himself to excessive radiation and warning that future NRC actions may be aimed directly at operators who violate safety rules, not just management officials.

Violence From Frustrations?

An Appalachian State University sociologist, Dr. Jane Reinherth, sees a potential for increased violence and crime, extending to the middle class groups if gasoline and other shortages continue.

She sees shortages brought on by truckers strikes and the oil pinch as a frustration.

What the effect will be is presently unknown. "They (the public) might drink a lot more, or we could see more suicides; we don't really know, but the longer these frustrations continue the greater their effect will be," she said.

The middle class may be most affected because shortages and higher prices are "restricting the lifestyles" of these groups.

It is easy to recognize that the possibilities are there. People don't change their living habits easily and it is virtually certain that more restrictive lifestyles are ahead for most of us.

Already there have been fights and other violence in gas lines and, terrible as it is to contemplate, such scenes could become more frequent.

During Depression years, even God-fearing people, didn't feel it was criminal to take food for their starving families when economic frustration brought them to that level.

In this era, we have become conditioned to believe that gasoline is essential to life. If it becomes in short enough supply, who knows what otherwise law abiding people will resort to?

There are alternatives, of course, the prime one being to work our way out of the energy crisis through the ingenuity which has made this country what it is today. If our forefathers could build and progress, so can this generation.

Resignation Completely Justified

Andrew J. Young, our now-resigned UN ambassador, once again fell into a controversy by meeting without authorization with a Palestine Liberation Organization representative.

Then Ambassador Young put the State Department and the Carter administration in an embarrassing position with his misleading attempts to explain the situation.

It must be clear to anyone with an understanding of international relations that the administration could not be tolerant of Young's mishandling of this situation.

His resignation — and the president's acceptance of it — was completely justified.

What To Do With No. 2? Primarily A Preacher

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The lieutenant governor of North Carolina seems to present a never-ending dilemma: now that we got him, what do we do with him?

Recent years have presented political and personal differences between the governor and the lieutenant governor to the extent that efforts to resolve that running controversy never bear fruit.

A marathon study committee of the General Assembly has produced nothing. Before the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt, there were a Republican governor (James Holshouser), and a Democrat for number two (Hunt).

Needless to say, there was little cooperation or communication in that arrangement.

Along come two Democrats — Hunt as governor, and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

Poles apart in matters political, in personal style, and in personalities — that the two don't get along is one of the worst-kept secrets in state politics.

No Contest
It is now well established that Green will not tackle Hunt for the governorship in 1980, but run again for lieutenant governor; biding his time another four years before making a race for governor. At age 57, he figures time still remains.

Green's main opposition will be House Speaker Carl Stewart who also has his eye on the governor's mansion four years hence.

Looking back, and ahead, it would appear that the number two position is little more than a launching pad for the governor's race. Despite this, the post has been elevated from part-time to full-time status, and the salary hiked to $40,000 with staff provided.

Now comes Stewart wondering if the job ought to be full time, and Gov. Hunt thinking aloud that it really ought to be full time, if the occupant met all the obligations of membership on various state boards and commissions; satisfied public requests for counsel, aid, appearances; and served as

Problems
By law, the lieutenant governor could be given administrative duties, and by law the governor and the number two person could run as a team. But that approach, Hunt cautions, also raises the spectre of the individual presiding over the Senate being too closely connected to the governor, thereby clouding the desired separation between executive and legislative branches.

Better, perhaps, that the matter be settled in the primary election through campaign pledges, Hunt suggests. Is that a hint that Stewart will commit himself to "serving" Hunt, and Hunt will in turn endorse Stewart? Many observers see it happening that way.

This eventuality will not, however, resolve the matter for future years. In fact, it would only aggravate the situation should Green be re-elected to the post.

Hunt does not plan to propose a legislative solution, but agrees that a forum for public debate and decision is needed.

BILL NOBLITT

Those personal and political differences in the past have kept that from happening. Is there a way it could be required by law, or secured in practice?

Hunt thinks so, and says the people of North Carolina need to debate that prospect and decide a way to accomplish the goal.

REV. ANDREW YOUNG

Primarily A Preacher

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Andrew Young stood up to Bull Connor's fire hoses in Birmingham.

He was a protege of Martin Luther King.

He was the first black elected to Congress from Georgia since Reconstruction.

He helped elect a white southerner to the presidency.

None of this prepared him for the cautious, understated world of diplomacy. Young was not much for cautious understatement.

He is a preacher. He values words over violence. But he has learned that words, too, can cause trouble.

Young has resigned as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations after admitting he had been untruthful about a meeting last month with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In the beginning, Young's candor was accepted with cheerful tolerance.

But, as officials found themselves explaining that Young's words did not necessarily reflect U.S. policy, patience wore thin.

President Carter called Young on the carpet several times. Last month, he was reported to have rebuked Young in front of the Cabinet.

But even then, it was reported, Carter said Young's contribution to American foreign policy — particularly in Africa and the under-developed world — far outweighed the trouble he caused.

The same day Young presented his credentials to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, he paid a courtesy call at the U.N. office of the Organization of African Unity. That began a close association with the powerful 49-nation group that continues. He often took trips to Africa and entertained African and Caribbean leaders on their visits to New York.

Young's wife, Jean, once told an interviewer that Young was a preacher no matter what his job title.

He took the U.N. post because it offered an "international congregation," she said.

Young was born in New Orleans, the son of a prosperous dentist and a schoolteacher mother. He grew up in a neighborhood predominantly Irish and Italian.

"I was taught to fight when people called me 'nigger,'" he once said. "That's when I learned that negotiation was better than fighting."

At the Hartford Theological Seminary in Connecticut, studying the teachings of Mohandas Gandhi, he became convinced he could "change this country without violence."

He was ordained in the largely white United Church of Christ. He served black congregations in Marion, Ala., and Thomasville and Beaufort, Ga.

When the civil rights movement dawned, he led a voter registration drive. Then he worked with white youths in New York City for the National Council of Churches for four years. Later a registration project in the South put him in contact with King.

He became King's aide in 1964. He was in charge of the demonstration on May 3, 1963, when Police Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor used fire hoses to repulse marchers in Birmingham, Ala.

After King's death and the Poor People's march in Washington, Young entered politics. He put together a Raleigh's new unit of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, although only tentatively organized, has stopped the city police from making shooting galleries of the city's streets with dogs as their targets.

Dr. David S. Weaver, professor of Agricultural Engineering at State college and a moving spirit in the SPCA, is hopeful that formation of the Raleigh unit will be but the first of many more to be organized throughout the state.

"Our aim is to see that the problem of dealing with animals, particularly during the periodic rabies' scares is handled without hysteria and in such fashion that the animals, as well as human beings, are properly protected," Dr. Weaver said.

Organization of the unit followed issue by Police Chief Bailey of an order to his force to "shoot on sight" all dogs found on the streets unmuzzled or unaccompanied by some person.

Upon representation made by the unit, police have been instructed not to be "light-fingered" on the trigger.

RECESSION RIPPLES

Jobless Increase Is Next

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A recession is like a wave in a pond, rippling slowly and inevitably across the economy, affecting different sectors at different times in different ways.

Many administration economists, including newly confirmed Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, say the United States is in a recession. Statistics show retail sales down, inventories up, the gross national product slipping.

But a downturn's most dramatic sign — unemployment — has yet to rear up nationally. The current jobless rate, 5.7 percent, is virtually unchanged from recent months.

Economists say, however, that unemployment lags behind other indicators in signaling a recession.

"The 5.7 percent rate is a last gasp before everything on the employment front gets pretty rotten," says Jeffrey Green, an economist at Wharton's Econometrics Forecasting Associates.

His Philadelphia firm predicts a 7.5 percent jobless rate by next year. A memo prepared by administration economists suggests unemployment could exceed 8 percent by the end of 1980. Each percentage point represents 1 million people out of work.

Historically, businessmen who sell consumer goods — particularly easily delayed purchases like cars, appliances and furniture — are the first to suffer from recession. In this year's second quarter, retail sales declined 4.5 percent, adjusted for inflation.

But it takes months before depressed sales create inventories large enough to force businesses to cancel old orders or delay new ones.

Only then will producers have to cut back production to avoid their own swelling inventories. When this happens, workers are laid off.

Then the recessionary ripple begins all over again. Laid off workers lose the income needed to purchase a new car, a refrigerator, clothes, dinner out. Retailers face more reduced sales. Many must cut back their orders even further.

Parts of the country will feel the downturn differently. Economists say the Midwest and Northeast will be hit first and hardest because manufacturers of durable goods are concentrated there.

The more service-oriented South and far West will feel the recession later — and probably less severely.

Detroit already is in a recession, says auto industry analyst Arvid Jouppe. The city's jobless rate, at 10 percent, is nearly double the national average. Car sales started dropping off back in March, following 50 consecutive upbeat months.

At times this year, car sales have fallen 30 percent below last year's levels, Jouppe says. Last year, Americans bought 9.2 million new domestic cars. This year, they will buy 8.6 million, he predicts.

To the editor:
The Family Weekly recently pictured a couple having at each other with boxing gloves. The accompanying article emphasized the amount of family violence today, not just between husband and wife, but also between parents and children — and then between brothers and sisters and friends.

The article reported that as many as one-third of the homicides in one large state were between family members. How many of the other two-thirds were friends to whom the family pattern of dealing with inter-personal frictions had been transferred was not reported, but it would be naive to suppose that the pattern of violence would be limited to the family.

And, in fact, we can see it in our expectations for international relations. The American taxpayers support three academies to train young men and women to respond with military force or with the threat of military force to international friction. But the parallel academy to train for peaceful conflict-resolution remains a dream — though one as old as the republic.

Now, at last, Congress is preparing to study the feasibility of such an academy. The Greenville Peace Committee hopes it will get on with its study and get that academy going. Even though many individuals are never guilty of violence in their interpersonal relations (well, hardly ever), collectively people get into wars much too often.

Clearly, methods of resolving conflict short of war can be learned — and with the excellence of present tools of destruction, we had better be learning them. The next Hiroshima could be Goldsboro.

Job Plan For Minority Youth

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Vernon Jordan was frustrated. The executive director of the National Urban League was describing a corporate plan that would put black youngsters to work. It got no official support, he said.

"I'm absolutely mystified," he told a meeting of the American Assembly. "I'm at a loss to understand why mayors and other public officials haven't said this is something we should encourage."

The plan, he said, was brought to Camp David by him and David Mahoney, chairman of Norton Simon Inc. There was no response, he said sadly. A White House aide in the audience stood up. It would come, he said.

Jordan smiled. "But after two months," he said slowly.

Mahoney first described the plan in April and again in early July at Camp David. And now, with Jordan, Prof. Eli Ginzberg of Columbia University and Alan Kistler, AFL-CIO field director, he did so again for the American Assembly this past weekend.

The assembly brings together experts on various subjects at Arden House, Harriman, N.Y. Its decisions often become public policy.

The plan was simple, said Mahoney.

He ordered his officials to add 250 unemployed minority youngsters to the Norton Simon payroll. They would be brought into the mysterious world of the corporation and trained in permanent jobs.

"What incentive do your executives have for carrying out the order?" one of the 60 authorities in the audience asked. "If their bonuses depend on it they'll respond," he snapped.

"Won't the program cut into your productivity?" he was asked. He confessed he didn't have the numbers to prove or disprove the contention, but said he doubted the company could be hurt very much.

Norton Simon has sales of $2.8 billion, he explained, and it employs 25,000 workers turning out Hunt-Wesson foods, Canada Dry beverages, Max Factor cosmetics, Avis cars and various liquors.

What if it does hurt productivity a slight bit. No company is at 100 percent efficiency, he said.

The social problem is said to be a time bomb whose fuse is lit. For a quarter-century black youth unemployment was more than 20 percent; now it is more than 30 percent. Most Americans, however, think the situation has been improving.

Under Mahoney's plan, the 1,000 largest industrial corporations and the 50 largest banks and retailers, each would hire only 10 minority youths for every thousand employees.

"This could open up 200,000 jobs," he said. In an interview later he said again, as he had last April, that 200,000 jobs would "open the doors to half the presently unemployed minority youths."

But wouldn't the Mahoneys plan merely take jobs from others who needed them? Kistler considered the question. In his opinion, he said, it wouldn't, thus seeming to put the AFL-CIO imprimatur on the program.

fold? Just so. Grandmotherly Louise Snyder also might be the best-known paperhanger, painter, carpenter, bricklayer, concrete pourer and all around handyman in town. Or hand-woman.

"I've never thought of work as being man's work or woman's work," she said. "Work is work. You do what you have to do."

Neither, apparently, do the people of Sayreville seem to find anything unusual about a matronly lady scaling a ladder with a paint bucket on her arm. "They all know me," she said. "I guess they're used to it."

To the dismay of two generations of satisfied customers, however, Louise Snyder now says she plans to cut back on her work.

"Not because of my age. I feel just fine. It's that my husband has not been well and he needs me at home. I'll find plenty around the house to keep me busy. I have to keep busy."

Louise Snyder has been keeping busy since her mother died, when she was seven, and never broke the habit.

Her father, a Danish immigrant, did carpentry when he could find work and when he couldn't he peddled fish. "He wasn't home much, so I had to shift for myself. There was no choice."

She learned the skills of a handyman from a neighbor. Another neighbor taught her to cook and gave her a bread dough maker.

"I can make enough dough to make 10 loaves at a time, and do that ten times in a day. One hundred loaves."

Earlier this year, she did just that every Friday for 12 weeks to raise money for stained glass windows at the First Presbyterian Church. She sold the bread for a dollar a loaf. Word spread. Each batch she made was sold before it cooled.

She never had to advertise, either, for work to redecorate other people's houses. Her only advertisement was the work she did renovating her own home.

It had been a stable, built in 1877, at a brickyard. Its walls were 14-inches thick, of brick. The brickyard went bankrupt and in 1946 Louise and her husband bought the stable for $2,000.

It took them three years to rebuild it into a 16-room, three-family house. They rent the other two apartments. When townspeople saw what she had done, a career was launched.

"I've always had more work than I can handle," she said. "People lie in wait for me. But no more. Now I'm taking it easy."

She paused in thought. "Well," she said, defensively, "last week I did paper a stairwell for a friend, a widow, and next week I'm going to paint three bedrooms for another friend ... but, really, I'm going to start taking it easy. I really am."

Ritt Col. ...

What does this mean for autoworkers?

Already, some 54,000 have been laid off, and Data Resources Inc., a Cambridge, Mass., economic forecasting firm, predicts the toll will reach 102,000 by year's end.

"Even workers not laid off will see their paychecks shrivel," said Jouppi. "Workers' buying power will be severely shrunk. Retailers in Detroit already feel that pinch."

DRI predicts auto output will reach its low point in late fall, then begin an upswing in early 1980. By then, other industries will be feeling the recession, some directly because of Detroit's doldrums.

Many economists say the layoff of 100,000 autoworkers can create 200,000 layoffs across the nation in industries that supply Detroit, such as steel and aluminum from Pittsburgh, rubber from Akron and plastics from Delaware.

Illustrating this ripple effect, DRI offers these scenarios:

—Rubber industry output will fall only half a percentage point the rest of this year, but it will drop 3 percent in 1980; layoffs will be minimal in 1979, but increase by 41,000 workers next year.

—Steel output will drop 2.5 percent this year and 6 percent in 1980. Unemployment won't grip the industry until next year, when 66,000 workers will encounter some joblessness.

—Chemical output will experience an overall gain into late 1979, but drop 1 percent next year; unemployment will increase by 18,000 during 1980.

Whether the recession is mild or severe depends largely on how well businesses manage inventories. The 1973-74 recession was made more severe, economists say, because inventories grew too fast.

"Even after the economy turned weak in 1973, inventories continued to accumulate through the third quarter of 1974," said Wharton's Green. "That was too slow a reaction."

According to figures released Tuesday by the Commerce Department, business inventories increased in June by 1.3 percent, which followed a 1.1 percent swell in May and a 1.4 percent rise in April. Since June 1978, inventories have risen 12.9 percent.

The ratio of inventories to sales in June was 1.43, compared to 1.40 in May, but below the 1.57 average of the 1975 recession year.

Auxiliaries Help In Power Pinch

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — The Cape Hatteras Electric Membership Corp. has used auxiliary generators for the past three weeks to meet the power demands of inhabitants of Hatteras and Ocracoke islands.

Jack S. Gray, president of the cooperative, said Tuesday "we're getting by by the skin of our teeth" in providing electric power to the two islands' 10,000 summertime inhabitants and the estimated 4,000 year-round residents of the islands.

The cooperative has asked residents to curtail the use of power from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

Georgia Sets Mar. 11 For Presidential Test

ATLANTA (AP) — State election officials have chosen March 11 as the date for Georgia's 1980 presidential primary.

Feinsilber Col...

coalition of civil rights veterans and opposed white Republican Rep. Fletcher Thompson, who said Young's election would lead to the collapse of western civilization.

Thompson won, but two years later a court ordered the state redistricted and Young won a House seat.

In Congress, he was a liberal. He supported extending the minimum wage to cover domestic workers, day-care, food stamps, busing, tax reform, simplified voter registration and land reclamation.

Young and Carter met in Georgia's 1970 gubernatorial campaign. Carter often consulted him. In 1976, Young wanted a more liberal man for president, but finally supported Carter as the Democrat most likely to win.

Carter's debt to him is shown in these figures: Carter won by 1,744,000 votes. An inner-city registration drive headed by Young registered 3,104,000 new voters.

Young first hesitated about the U.N. job — his black colleagues called it a dead end — but took it when promised a role in formulating policy.

Then came the statements that caused trouble: The British "almost invented racism"; Cuban troops were a "stabilizing influence" in Angola; Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini would one day be considered almost a saint; Iran's executions did not seem much different from the electrocution of a convicted murderer in Florida.

But his candor also won him friends. Nigeria's U.N. Ambassador Leslie Harriman said Young was "singularly responsible for a new bridge between the United States and black Africa."

And Carter — accepting a resignation he had promised the Congressional Black Caucus he would never seek — assessed Young's contribution this way:

"You have proven that we are sensitive to the demands for world peace and racial justice and have earned for us the friendship, trust and respect of many nations which had previously considered the United States to be suspect and unworthy of such a relationship. You have truly exemplified the finest attributes of the American character."

giving President Carter a chance to test his political strength in three Southern states on the same day.

Alabama and Florida previously set March 11 for their primary elections.

An 11-member date selection committee voted 7-1 Wednesday to adopt the new primary date. Georgia's 1976 presidential primary was held in early May.

The committee is composed of top state elected officials, members of the state election board and the chairmen of the state Democratic and Republican parties.

Casting the lone dissenting vote Wednesday was Republican State Chairman Matthew Patton, who argued unsuccessfully for a March 4 primary to coincide with the balloting in Massachusetts. Three members were not present.

Most of those supporting the March 11 primary said a tri-state "regional" primary would draw candidates of both parties to the South.

Spokesmen for Gov. George Busbee, however, have said the White House was seeking early primary elections in Carter's home region.

Patton argued that a March 4 primary in Georgia would focus national attention on the state as a "weathervane for the future primaries in the South."

Democrats on the committee noted that national Democratic Party rules forbid primaries from being held any earlier than the second week in March. Massachusetts and some other states are allowed to conduct earlier primaries.

And they chided Patton for failing to acknowledge that politics was the name of the date selection game.

"What you've seen in this room is partisan politics," said Charles Graves, executive director of the Georgia Democratic Party. "We just admitted it, and they didn't."

Graves said the move by Patton to have Georgia conduct its primary on the same date as Massachusetts was aimed at embarrassing Carter.

"I think they felt the Massachusetts primary would negate the impact that the vote could have in Georgia by what they hope is an embarrassment to the President in Massachusetts," Graves said.

Patton denied the accusation, saying, "This is the first time I've ever tried to do anything for Jimmy Carter."

"I think a win in Georgia would help blunt Massachusetts and that by holding the two primaries on the same day, everybody could say he carried his own state."

Driver Ran Into A Utility Pole

Greenville Police reported a car driven by Thomas Weldon Robertson Jr. of 200 Verdant St. collided with a utility pole on Fifth Street, 74 feet East of the Pitt St. intersection yesterday about 3:50 p.m.

Investigators estimated damage to the car at $2,500 and set damage to the pole at $200.

Luckenbach Is For Sale

LUCKENBACH, Texas (AP) — Whoever buys the town of Luckenbach will be the owner of five flush toilets, one parking meter, a single pay phone and a chunk of real estate immortalized in song.

It was the "outlaw" singing duo of Willie Nelson and Waylon Jennings who put Luckenbach on the musical map. They sang that in Luckenbach, there "ain't nobody feelin' no pain." The thrust of their wistful tune was that people caught up in the rat race could "get back to the basics of love" in the scenic Central Texas Hill Country hamlet.

But heirs of the late Mayor Hondo Crouch say they can't pay inheritance taxes on his estate, so they are looking for the "right kind of person" to purchase the rustic nine-acre town. "Those inheritance taxes are really something," said Becky Patterson, one of Crouch's daughters. "They're getting to us."

However, she said the owners — she, her sister and Crouch's partner, Kathy Morgan — hope the buyer doesn't have any changes in mind.

Senator's Prospects Fail Enthrall Joan Kennedy

By LINDA WERFELMAN
BOSTON (UPI) — Joan Kennedy withdrew from her husband's pressure-filled political world 18 months ago, intent on fighting her drinking problem and building a new life as a graduate student in music.

Now, although she says she is not frightened by the thought of coping with the political demands placed on Sen. Edward Kennedy's wife, the artistic beauty has admitted the prospect of becoming the nation's first lady does not enthrall her.

Neither does the prospect of discussing her new life with reporters.

As a result, she has turned down virtually all requests for interviews.

"If she does one (interview), she's going to have to do a whole slew of them, and she doesn't want to do a whole slew," said Thomas Southwick, press spokesman in her husband's Senate office.

A similar message came from Lesley College in Cambridge, where Mrs. Kennedy, 42, is a graduate student in music education.

"She really has asked that the public relations office not give out any information (about her)," a spokeswoman for the college said. "She's not enthusiastic about contacts with the press."

One person she has talked with is New York author Lester David, who wrote her biography several years ago.

She told David, in a story published in the May issue of Ladies Home Journal, "I'm not exactly wild about politics."

Nevertheless, the woman who took over the bulk of her husband's 1964 Senate campaign duties while he recovered from a near-fatal airplane crash has more than proved her political abilities.

"In the early days, I was a very good campaigner," she said, remembering her work on behalf of both her husband and his two older brothers. "I was the best. And I can do all that. I know I can."

She probably will "do all that" if her husband decides to seek the presidency next year, she said. "I'll worry about that when it comes to it."

But she said she won't participate "if I am not well."

Her choice to impose a strict limit on her political activities led her to Boston early in 1978.

"I was not running away from Washington, nor from Ted," she said at the time. Instead, she said, she wanted a new environment, away from both politics and Washington gossip, which often has focused on rumored relationships between her husband and other women.

In Boston, she joined Alcoholics Anonymous to deal with the drinking problems that had plagued her for several years and made frequent visits to a psychiatrist's office to help rid herself of the disease.

She enrolled at Lesley College and is scheduled to graduate with a masters degree next spring.

Her husband and their three children — Kara, Edward Jr. and Patrick — have made frequent visits to her apartment, which overlooks Boston's Public Garden.

She continues to show up with Kennedy for occasional public functions. Earlier this summer, the two were together for a memorial service for the late Boston Pops Maestro Arthur Fiedler at Harvard University and a news conference to discuss the continuing construction of the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston.

At the library site, she and the senator arrived in separate cars, and according to one witness, met each other with polite kisses. Kennedy shook her hand, kissed her cheek and said, "How are you?" in the tone of one casual acquaintance greeting another.

The focus of her life now, Mrs. Kennedy told David, remains her own recovery from an alcoholism.

"I am working on myself right now," she said. "Because if I work on that, if I stay well, then I'll know much better what I want to do with the rest of my life and it will all come together."

Boston's relatively apolitical atmosphere has provided an easier setting to resolve her problems.

Explaining their cause, she last year told McCall's magazine, "Rather than get mad, or ask questions concerning the rumors about Ted and his girl friends, or really stand up for myself at all, it was easier for me to just go and have a few drinks and calm myself down as if I weren't hurt or angry. I found out that alcohol could sedate me. So I didn't care as much. And things didn't hurt so much."

The Kennedy family's tragedies — the assassinations of John and Robert Kennedy, the 1964 plane crash that nearly killed her husband and his 1969 auto accident in which Kennedy aide Mary Jo Kopechne died — also took their toll.

So did her three miscarriages and the amputation in 1973 of her son Teddy's right leg because of cancer.

She recalled nursing her son through his operation and recovery — then finally collapsing into a period of heavy drinking.

Her drinking problem prompted her husband to stop drinking himself for one year, a family friend told the New York Times earlier this summer.

"He wanted to clear his conscience," the friend said. "He always felt so guilty about having brought her into the environment he did. He said she ought to have married a New York banker."

"He felt terrible about Chappaquiddick, but not guilty; he thought he'd done all he could. But he kept feeling guilty for years about Joan."

"She was blue-eyed, blonde and beautiful, and she thought that's what Ted wanted," according to one family friend.

Another friend added, "He wanted to love her, very much. He still does."

Marriage came shortly after her graduation from Manhattanville; four years later, her husband's election to the Senate moved the two to Washington.

Once there, she found it easy to interrupt her own piano lessons and coursework at American and Georgetown universities to accompany her husband on his travels or to attend some "glamorous and exciting" White House event, she said.

She also found politics and government taking over her life, becoming the focus of every conversation.

Nevertheless, she found certain outlets for her musical talents, narrating "Peter and the Wolf" and playing the piano during the Boston Pops' broadcast of the opera, and performing a Mozart concerto with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Diefenbaker Dies Of Heart Attack

OTTAWA (AP) — John Diefenbaker, the prairie lawyer who governed Canada as Conservative prime minister from 1957 to 1963, died early today at his home. He was 83.

He died while working alone in his den after rising early, as usual, and was found by a man who had worked with him on a volunteer basis in recent years, said his secretary, Keith Martin.

A doctor summoned to the house said Diefenbaker apparently died of a heart attack.

The rangy, craggy-faced Diefenbaker, who was born in Ontario, was first elected to Parliament from his adopted province of Saskatchewan in 1940 and had won re-election in every general election since. In time the masterful orator became known to every Canadian as "Mr. Conservative."

Diefenbaker survived a bout with pneumonia this summer and said later that it had been a critical case. But in recent weeks he continued to talk about trips he wanted to make to the North Pole and to China.

He was married twice, but had no children. He married Edna Mae Brower in 1929. She died in 1951 of leukemia. In 1953 he married Olive Palmer, a friend of his youth who was then a widow. She died in 1976.

Diefenbaker's Conservatives won power in the 1957 general election after more than two decades of Liberal Party rule. The next year he called another election and won the biggest parliamentary majority in Canadian history.

His five years as prime minister were a boom time for the Canadian economy. He pursued classically conservative policies, in particular helping the western farmer with improved price supports and other programs.

Diefenbaker lost the leadership of the party at a convention in 1967.

In the face of growing French-Canadian disenchantment with the Canadian confederation, Diefenbaker had long preached the theme of One Canada, a country with a great mission for which he had a great vision.

"I ask you to catch the vision — the vast opportunities open to us as Canadians," he urged voters time and again during his campaigns.

Probe Plaintiff Of Beatings

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state Department of Correction investigation is under way into allegations by 10 to 17 inmates at Polk Youth Center who say they have been beaten without provocation by center officials.

Center Superintendent Gary T. Dixon was among officials named in the allegations.

The allegations were presented to department officials by an attorney for the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union, state officials said Wednesday.

A spokesman for the civil liberties union said the group threatened to take legal action unless the department took action to correct the problem.

"I'm still hopeful the Department of Correction will show us their concern and that they're taking these matters seriously and they're willing to clean them up," said George H. Gardner, executive director of the union.

Ralph D. Edwards, prisons director, confirmed that Dixon was among the accused officials. He said the results of the probe probably would be kept secret if there were any possibility of legal action against department personnel.

J. Dwight Sanderford, director of the department's youth-services complex, said no action had been taken against any of the accused personnel.

"At this point, there has been none. At this point, the investigation has not been concluded," he said.

One of the charges was made by an inmate who said he had been severely beaten for refusal to divulge the whereabouts of some marijuana. Gardner said other alleged beatings involved "disciplinary confrontations where somebody struck somebody or pulled somebody behind a building and struck them."

Gardner said the inmates described the alleged beatings in sworn affidavits.

Quality Off On Farmville Mart

FARMVILLE — Quality of tobacco was not as good Wednesday on the Farmville Tobacco Market than other days this week, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor, Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Some grades were off in price, said Williams, with demand not as strong for some grades. More non-descript grades appeared on the floor Wednesday than at the first of the week. The volume of primings increased Wednesday. Top practical price remained $1.55 per pound.

The Farmville market sold 741,731 pounds for $1,058,634, an average of $1.42.72. To date, the market has sold 8,674,121 pounds for $11,790,488, an average of $1.35.93 per 100 pounds.

A special meeting of the Greenville City Board of Education will be held at 5:15 p.m. today in the board room of the Central Office.

The purpose of the meeting is for the board to consider some staff personnel recommendations.

Plan 400th Anniversary

MANTEO — America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee will meet on Roanoke Island Friday and Saturday, August 17 and 18.

Sessions will be held both days at 9 a.m. and at 2 p.m. in the headquarters of Fort Raleigh National Historic Site.

All meetings are open to the public, and citizens are invited to share suggestions at the Saturday morning session.

The committee, established by the General Assembly to plan and promote the quadricentennial observances of the first English attempts to colonize the New World, will consider a variety of proposals to focus attention of the world upon North Carolina during the four-year period beginning in 1948.

Among subjects to be discussed will be research and publication of a distinguished series of historical works to provide greater understanding of the events of the 16th century, archaeological work to attempt to identify native communities visited by the colonists, and literary contests in the schools of the nation.

Also to be considered is the feasibility of designing and constructing a reproduction of one of the ships that came to Roanoke Island.

Her choice to impose a strict limit on her political activities led her to Boston early in 1978.

"I was not running away from Washington, nor from Ted," she said at the time. Instead, she said, she wanted a new environment, away from both politics and Washington gossip, which often has focused on rumored relationships between her husband and other women.

Spill Cleanup Took Full Day

KENANSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — It took nearly 24 hours for officials to finish cleaning up a chemical spill on Highway 11 late Wednesday afternoon, but they removed even the dirt which had absorbed the liquid alongside the road.

The chemical was spilled Tuesday night when a truck struck a bridge railing that tore into the side of the truck, knocking off drums of the chemical and ripping some containers open.

Police Sgt. Is Among Grads

FARMVILLE — Farmville Police Department Sgt. J. L. Phillips was among 38 North Carolina law enforcement officers to graduate recently from a supervision of police personnel school sponsored by the Governor's Highway Safety Program.

The two-week course, held in Burlington, included instruction in planning, motivation, psychological aspects of supervision, principles of decision-making, discipline and moral, and counseling and interviewing.

Instructors for the school were Charles Leary and William Norton of the National Traffic Management Institute of Central Missouri State University in Warrenburg, Mo.

Young GOP To Meet Aug. 25

The Young Republicans of the First Congressional District, which includes Pitt County, will meet August 25 at Atlantic Beach.

In addition to a 2 p.m. business meeting, the session will include boating, swimming and other recreational activities.

Further details on the meeting can be obtained from Steve Rader, P. O. Box 732, Washington, N.C. 27889.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

The Causes of Belly Cramps

I'm 17, and a junior in high school. I really like school. But every couple of weeks I get cramps in my belly, and it keeps me from going to school. Sometimes I have the feeling that my teachers think I'm goofing off. I'm not too sure that my parents don't have the same suspicion. What makes it worse is that the doctor I go to says there's nothing wrong with me. — Andrew B., Mich.

Dear Andrew:

Both boys and girls are often distressed by cramps, aches and abdominal pains that just cannot be dismissed as "nothing important" and time will be the healer.

Time may help, but no one should neglect these pains by not tracking down the cause. Let's examine some of the reasons that may account for your recurrent stomach aches. When you consider all the junk foods, and even the sensible foods, with which young people overstuff themselves, I wonder that you all are not in a constant state of stomach upset.

Teen-age boys and girls lead a hectic life, constantly racing against time. Poor eating habits and inadequate attention to bowel regularity are culprits that can cause constipation and abdominal pain.

And what about the turbulent emotions of the teen-age years? The tensions of school, social commitments, the pressure of seeking jobs, stressful situations at home and the emotional impact of growing into adulthood can produce all kinds of physical disorders.

Did you know, Andrew, that

National Labor Union Moving Headquarters Into The South

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In a first for the labor movement, a national union is stalking the flight of industry from the North by moving its headquarters to the traditionally anti-union South.

The 30,000-member United Furniture Workers of America is abandoning New York City, home since its founding nearly 45 years ago, for Nashville, Tenn., which has become the center of the furniture industry.

Companies, lured by lower wages and taxes and a non-union climate, have been fleeing the North for several decades. But never before has a union pulled up stakes and moved southward, according to AFL-CIO officials.

The Furniture Workers move should be a warning to business that it is wrong to think union problems can be forgotten by escaping to the South, according to the AFL-CIO, whose spokesman, Albert Zack, said, "We're carrying the fight to the enemy camp."

Since the 1950s, much of the furniture industry has moved from Grand Rapids, Mich., and parts of New York and Massachusetts to North Carolina, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee and southern Indiana.

"We feel most of the furniture industry has moved to the South and that's the place for the union to be," Furniture Workers President Carl Scarbrough said in a telephone interview from Nashville.

Scarbrough, 44, said the building that housed its old headquarters was sold in January 1978, and the union

Offer A Course On Criminal Justice

SNOW HILL — The Greene County Unit of Lenoir Community College will offer a course in Introduction to the Criminal Justice System for the first time this fall at the college unit in Snow Hill.

The course is to begin September 6 and will meet each Monday and Thursday night from 6:30 through 9 p.m., through November 20.

Registration is scheduled for September 4, but will also be allowed on the first night of class.

Other courses to be offered will be studies in the field of nursing to include general studies of allied health, nursing procedures, clinical practice and introduction to health services.

Day classes will be held Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. with the first day of class on Wednesday, September 5. Classes will run through November 20. The less extensive night program will meet each Monday and Wednesday from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning September 10.

An enrollment limit of 15 students is anticipated for each course. For more information on requirements and fees, call Snow Hill 747-2451.

Scarbrough said people have better quality of life here," said Scarbrough, who grew up in Memphis. "It's a lot better than being cooped up in New York, where the whole situation is deteriorating."

So far the response from Nashville has been positive, say union officials who began occupying their new headquarters within the last month and plan to hold formal opening ceremonies next week.

NEW YORK (AP) — After a strong buying surge in early trading, the stock market gave up some of its gains and was little changed from Wednesday's milestone levels at midday today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed more than 3 points in the early going but fell back on profit-taking sales. By noon the Dow industrial was up a sliding .17 at 886.01.

But trading volume remained heavy at 23.84 million shares, up from 16.75 million in the previous session. Overall gainers and losing issues were closely matched with about 630 each.

The Dow industrial index and trading volume both hit record levels for the year in Wednesday's trading. The Dow index closed at 885.84 and volume was 46.13 million shares.

The government today announced that personal income rose at a strong 1.4 percent pace in July but said much of that reflected cost-of-living adjustments for Social Security recipients. Industrial production, announced separately, fell 1 percent in the same month.

Holiday Inn rose 1/4 to 26 1/2 as the most actively traded issue after gaining 1 point on Wednesday. The Nevada gaming authority recommended approval of its plans to buy interest in a Las Vegas casino.

RCA Corp. also actively traded, gaining 1/2 to 26 and Ralston Purina rose 3/4 to 11 1/2.

In less active trading MGIC Investment fell 1 1/2 to 32. The stock has been volatile since announcing last week that merger talks with an undisclosed company had ended without agreement.

The NYSE composite index slipped .05 to 61.63. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .94 to 209.05.

Propaganda Fizzles; More Quit Cuba

By CINDY ROSE
 Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Cuban exiles say they decided to risk their lives to flee their homeland after learning that Fidel Castro's propaganda about "the devil ... in the United States" is false.

"The Cuban people there believed that Cubans here were living in disgrace, that children have been killed," Mauricio Quevedo, a 33-year-old electronics engineer, said Wednesday.

Quevedo, his wife and 4-year-old daughter were among 11 Cubans who faked a picnic on a beach near Havana on Saturday, then swam to a boat at nightfall and braved a trip through the rough Florida Straits.

They landed at Miami Tuesday.

Since April, 102 Cuban exiles have arrived in Florida in boats, officials at the Cuban Refugee Program report. In 1978, just 19 refugees landed.

There were 33 refugees in 1977, 12 in 1976 and none in 1975.

"In talking with the new refugees, they said the government in Cuba always published information that refugees were badly received in the United States — there was discrimination, they had menial employment, they are badly treated," said Jeanne Castle of the refugee program.

"They thought that people who left were not well off. That it was better to stay in Cuba," she said.

"But now relatives are going back and presenting quite a different picture of life here. They

Fine Brandy, But Illegal

LINCOLN, N.C. (AP) — State officials have no argument with the quality of the homemade peach brandy they say Russell Boyde Warlick was storing in the Cat Square Opry House.

"It's grade-A liquor," said ABC officer Frank Hicks, who set up the raid with Detective Jerry Petty of the Lincoln County sheriff's department. "The only thing wrong with it is that it's illegal."

As a result of that there will be a shortage of the concoction in the Cat Square community in western Lincoln County this summer. Authorities raided a still in the warehouse Tuesday morning and confiscated 7 1/2 gallons of the peach mash that has been known to sell for as much as $50 per gallon.

Hicks said sanitary conditions in the warehouse were below standard, pointing out a fly-blown 55-gallon barrel holding the remainder of the still's fermenting peach mash.

"If most people could see how it's made they'd quit drinking the damn stuff," said Hicks.

He said the clear, fiery-smelling liquid was between 110 and 120 proof.

Hicks said officers watched the warehouse, the old Cat Square Opry House, for about two days before breaking up the operation.

What followed was the arrest of the Warlick of Vale. Warlick is an employee of the Sain and Sain trucking company that owns the warehouse.

Warlick has been charged with possession of non-taxpaid liquor and manufacturing non-taxpaid liquor. He claimed sole responsibility for the mash, police said.

Because only peaches and sugar are used to make the brandy, its price usually runs about $50 per gallon, Hicks said, compared to $18 or $20 per gallon for ordinary, corn mash moonshine.

bring their families gifts. And the people there realize the government wasn't telling the truth."

Government surveys have shown the Cuban refugees have made the greatest monetary strides in the shortest period of any immigrant group in U.S. history. Since the heaviest influx of the early 1960s, about 500,000 Cuban exiles have settled in Dade County alone. They compose more than half the population of Greater Miami.

In January, Castro opened his country for exiles to visit and more than 30,000 rushed to the island in the first four months. They carried millions of dollars in gifts for friends and relatives, handing out everything from toonal clippers to television sets and electric fans.

In May, the Cuban president prohibited visitors from entering Cuba with items purchased abroad.

"When the Cuban exiles have been traveling to Cuba then things started to change in the mind of Cubans. Even the Communists learned for themselves that it was not so bad when they saw happy Cubans visiting their families, carrying gifts, well dressed and spending plenty of money there," Quevedo said.

For the Quevedos, the trip across the rough seas with their young daughter, Betsy, was scary.

"We were afraid, but we had made our decision," Mrs. Quevedo said. "We told ourselves that whatever would happen to Betsy would happen to all of us ... either they put us in jail, we drown or we would reach Miami."

"And we're here."

Looking For His Partner

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Frank Ricci is still waiting for a business associate who took nearly $6,000 in cash from him and promised to return a few minutes later. So are police.

Ricci, 38, of Hendersonville, N.C., told Greenville police he gave $5,750 to Frank Barone, who was to use the money to buy silver coins for Ricci's North Carolina flea market booth.

Ricci said he and Barone, 52, came to Greenville Tuesday morning and waited in a motel lobby for a telephone call from a man who was supposed to be selling coins.

Barone, who took the call, said the man promised to meet them "down the road," Ricci said.

Barone drove off in a borrowed car before he could get in, Ricci said. Barone said he would return shortly.

Half an hour later, Ricci called police to report the theft of the money as well as a .38-caliber handgun that was in the car and a gold pocket watch he had given Barone the day before.

A nationwide alert was issued for Barone's arrest.

Bar Food Stamp Use By Store

AYDEN — Amie's General Merchandise of Ayden, has been barred from accepting food stamps for a year, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service in Atlanta has announced.

Owned by Amie Marlene Faulkner, the store was disqualified from the food stamp program for 12 months, beginning May 15, after being charged with selling cigarettes, motor oil, and other ineligible items for food coupons.

Mrs. Paula Kerman, in charge of the Greenville field office of the Food and Nutrition Service, said food stamps, by law, can be used only to buy food. The only exception, she noted, are garden seed and plants to be used to produce food.

Rising 'Prime'

NEW YORK (AP) — Two major banks say that beginning today, their prime lending rate will jump from 11 1/2 percent to 12 percent, and there are predictions the record-matching rate will spread to other banks by the end of the week.

However, the announcement by Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third-largest commercial bank, and Continental Illinois, the seventh largest, apparently did not effect stock prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gained 9.13 points Wednesday, climbing to 885.84 — its highest point of the year, and the fourth straight day of gains. Normally, higher interest rates tend to depress the stock market.

A higher prime rate reflects strong demand for business loans and higher costs that banks are encountering in acquiring money they lend to borrowers.

Pittsburgh Begins To Look Like Champ

By KEN RAPPOPORT

AP Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Pirates — now there's a team that appreciates being in first place.

The Pirates, who used to make it a habit winning the National League East title, went more than two years before gaining the division's top spot on July 28 this season.

They only stayed there a day, but moved in again on Aug. 5. And now they may never leave. "I think the World Series is well within our grasp," said Bill Robinson, who belted a home run as the Pirates beat the San Diego Padres 5-1 Wednesday night.

Robinson, of course, is one of the main reasons that the Pirates are doing so well these days, even if he isn't playing as much as last year because of the acquisition of John Milner. Robinson's homer was his 23rd, pretty good for a "part-timer."

In other NL action, Montreal beat Houston 3-0; Philadelphia stopped Cincinnati 3-2; Chicago edged San Francisco 6-5; Los Angeles defeated St. Louis 6-5 and New York downed Atlanta 6-3.

Expos 3, Astros 0

Dan Schatzeder and Scott Sanderson combined on a five-hitter, pitching Montreal over Houston. Houston ace Joe Niekro, 16-7, was racked for nine hits in seven innings. Andre Dawson and Ellis Valentine led the Expos' attack with two hits apiece.

Phillies 3, Reds 2

Nino Espinosa pitched a five-hitter and singled home a run in the second inning as Philadelphia broke a four-game losing streak by beating Cincinnati.

nati.

Espinosa, 13-9, was touched for a run-scoring double by Harry Spilman in the second inning, and an RBI base hit by Dave Collins in the eighth while pitching his eighth complete game as a member of the Phillies this season.

Cubs 6, Giants 5

Bill Buckner's leadoff homer in the seventh inning powered Chicago over San Francisco. Buckner's game-winning wallop overcame a pair of two-run shots by the Giants' Mike Ivie.

Buckner's 13th homer of the season allowed Rick Reuschel to improve his record to 13-7 with late relief help from Bruce Sutter. The top relief specialist in the majors posted his 29th save.

Dodgers 6, Cardinals 5

Rick Sutcliffe pitched seven strong innings, singled home a run and doubled and scored, helping Los Angeles beat St. Louis. The Dodger attack also included three singles and two RBI by Bill Russell. Dusty Baker added a two-run single during a four-run rally in the seventh.

Mets 6, Braves 3

Doug Flynn had a two-run single and scored another run from second base on a wild pitch as New York defeated Atlanta. Flynn's two-run single came in the seventh when the Mets took a game-breaking 6-2 lead.

Collision At Home

New York Mets' Lee Mazzilli crashes into Atlanta Braves' catcher Joe Nolan at home plate in the third inning. Mazzilli tried to score from second on John Stearns' single to center, but was cut down by Nolan. The home plate umpire is Jim Quick. (AP Laserphoto)

Dog-Fight Shapes Up For AFC Central Spot

By GARY MIHOCES

Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — In Pittsburgh, the Steelers have three Super Bowl titles and potentially their best team ever. But you can't even wrap fish in day-old potential.

In Houston, the Oilers have Earl Campbell, the National Football League Rookie of the Year and rushing champion in 1978 — but it remains to be seen whether the Oilers match their 1978 success.

In Cleveland, the Browns have made some trades and Greg Pruitt has aired his gripes. But it's a big jump from a .500 season to the playoffs.

In Cincinnati, the Bengals have some prize rookies and hopes for major improvement from their 1978 disaster. But great expectations have gone awry there before.

Those are the teams — and those are the butts — in the Central Division of the American Conference, where Pittsburgh's five straight titles belie the toughness of the competition.

Last season, the Steelers had to win the division twice. They overcame Houston in regular season then had to beat the wild-card Oilers in the AFC title game.

This summer, the Oilers got a two-week jump on Pittsburgh by opening camp July 3. But the Steelers' season may have begun the day after their Super Bowl victory over Dallas.

"I think this football team hasn't reached its potential yet," Coach Chuck Noll said before leaving Miami.

"I hope I can say that after this season, too," he said recently.

Last season, Terry Bradshaw posted career highs in touchdown passes and accolades. "I can't help but get better. I'm still working hard. I don't believe I'm as good as people have been saying," he says.

In Houston last season, Campbell's arrival complimented the passing of Dan Pastorini. "Used to be Dan was like a sword fighter with a pocket knife. Now he has his sword," says Coach Bum Phillips.

Propose Bowl In Charleston

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — More than 40 Charleston area businessmen and civic leaders have pledged financial support to help underwrite a proposed post-season major college football game in Charleston's John Hagood Stadium.

Businessman William Ackerman and Citadel Athletic Director Eddie Teague organized the meeting Wednesday at the Citadel to begin the process of presenting a proposal for the bowl game to the NCAA.

The Southern Conference champion would play a selected non-conference team, according to the proposal described at the meeting. The Citadel is a member of the conference.

Those attending signed a petition pledging at least $500 each, and Ackerman read a letter from Charleston Mayor Joseph Riley promising a $10,000 pledge from the city.

The group is to meet Aug. 21 to collect more signatures and draw up a tentative bowl committee.

Teague said the NCAA would have to receive a firm proposal before the 1979 college football season begins in September in order to consider the game for the 1980 season.

Caught In Rundown

Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees tries to avoid being tagged in a rundown between first and second base in the third inning of Wednesday night's game at Yankee Stadium as the throw goes by him from Texas Rangers' second baseman Bump Wills, left. Jackson was picked off first base trying to steal. While the baserunning didn't go well for Jackson, he was four-for-four at the plate and raised his average to .303 as the Yankees won, 4-3. (AP Laserphoto)

Murray Steals Home In 12th To Give Baltimore A 2-1 Victory

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

It was the bottom of the 12th inning, the score was 1-1, and there were two out. Doug DeCinces led off first, Eddie Murray led off third and Chicago pitcher Guy Hoffman had a 1-2 count on Baltimore pinch-hitter Benny Ayala.

One more strike, and it's on to the 13th inning. But as it turned out, Hoffman had the Orioles right where they wanted him.

While Hoffman went into his stretch, Murray danced off third. Hoffman glanced at him, then at DeCinces.

Then Murray took off for the plate and there was a robbery in progress at Memorial Stadium.

"If the pitcher hesitates or takes a step towards first, he's dead," said DeCinces, who watched the pitcher take that fateful step towards first as Murray streaked home to score standing up and give the Orioles a 2-1 triumph over the White Sox Wednesday night.

In the other American League games, the Boston Red Sox beat the Minnesota Twins

9-5, the New York Yankees topped the Texas Rangers 4-3, the Milwaukee Brewers trimmed the Kansas City Royals 6-5, the Detroit Tigers bested the California Angels 6-1, the Seattle Mariners edged the Cleveland Indians 3-2 and the Oakland A's defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 3-1.

Red Sox 9, Twins 5

Carl Yastrzemski hit a two-run homer in the four-run eighth inning that snapped a 5-5 tie and sent Boston to its 14th consecutive home victory over Minnesota.

Twins Manager Gene Mauch insists he will not consider the Red Sox victory official until a ruling is issued on his protest.

He claimed Boston Manager Don Zimmer was permitted an extra visit with pitcher Dick Drago in the ninth inning. Zimmer claimed he only went on the field to ascertain the condition of plate umpire Steve Palermo, who had been struck with a foul tip off the bat of Twins pinch-hitter Willie Norwood.

Yankees 4, Rangers 3

Bobby Murcer ignited two New York rallies with a first-inning double and a second-inning single, helping the Yankees beat Texas to give Tommy John his 16th victory of the season.

Brewers 6, Royals 5

Gorman Thomas drew a bases-loaded walk on a 3-2 pitch with two out in the ninth inning to force in Cecil Cooper with the run that lifted Milwaukee over Kansas City.

Singles by Cooper and Sixto Lezcano, plus an intentional walk to Ben Oglivie preceded Thomas' appearance.

Tigers 6, Angels 1

Jason Thompson's two-run homer in the fourth inning backed the pitching of rookie Dan Petry to carry Detroit over California.

Mariners 3, Indians 2

Willie Horton's two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the eighth powered Seattle past Cleveland.

A's 3, Blue Jays 1

Consecutive fifth-inning singles by Rob Piccolo, Rickey Henderson, Dwayne Murphy and Wayne Gross drove in the run that helped Oakland beat Toronto and snap a five-game losing streak.

Race Death Toll Now Seventeen

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Seventeen yachtsmen were known to be dead and one yacht was unaccounted for in the disastrous international Fastnet yacht race off southwest England, the Royal Ocean Racing Club said Thursday.

The rescue coordination center in this Devon county port said two other sailors were missing and the number of dead may rise.

Thirteen Britons, one American and one Dutchman were drowned. The American victim was Frank H. Ferris, 61, who lived in England.

During Monday night and Tuesday, nine boats lost all or part of their crews in violent Atlantic storms that hit the fleet of 306 vessels in 150 miles of water between southern Ireland and the Scilly Isles.

Helicopters and ships pulled 136 persons from the sea in what Tim Hunt at the rescue center called "the biggest operation of its kind ever carried out in British waters." He said the search will go on until all boats are accounted for.

Australia unofficially won the Admiral's Cup five-race series of which the Fastnet race was the final event.

Steve Taft of San Francisco, a crewman on the American boat Imp, which reached the Plymouth finish line safely Wednesday, said: "It was the worst storm I've ever been in. I'm going to get the first train I can and get the hell out of here. I'm going back home as fast as I can."

Other yachtsmen, however, like America's tough Ted Turner of Atlanta who skipped his boat Tenacious through the storm to finish first on corrected time, and Australian team captain Sid Fisher, said rough weather must be expected in ocean racing.

Turner defended the race organizers' decision not to call off the race. Fisher said he has raced through similar heavy seas around Tasmania.

As aircraft and ships continued to search for the missing yacht and possible survivors from the score of boats sunk and smashed, club officials defended their organization of the race, while promising a "rigorous inquiry."

Cornish fishermen, however, suspecting severe weather was on the way, stayed home Sunday, the day after the race began in sunshine and light winds.

Britain's Department of Trade, responsible for safety at sea, said it also will investigate the event, in which yachts in the 605-mile race from England to Ireland and back battled 70 miles per hour winds and mountainous seas.

Lloyd's of London would not put an insurance figure on the lost and damaged boats and equipment, but one broker suggested the final bill could run up to $9 million.

Southern Cal Picked As Team To Beat In Far Western Region

By The Associated Press
West Coast football fans who follow the Pacific-10 hardly need to buy new programs this fall. Nine of the conference's teams are going to have most of the same starters as 1978.

Only UCLA has fewer than 13 starters returning, and five of the squads have 15 first-stringers back for the 1979 campaign.

Southern Cal is, as usual, considered the team to beat. The defending champion Trojans, 12-1 and second in The Associated Press final poll last season, are expected to once again make a strong run at the national title, although the Pac-10's balance could provide some upsets.

Washington, 6-2 in conference play in 1978 after winning the league title the previous year, could be the Trojans' roadblock. Stanford also may figure in the race for the Roses, while newcomers Arizona State and Arizona have seen the opposition now and could be the Pac-10's surprise teams of 1979.

Cal should improve on its 3-4 conference finish of last year, but the upcoming season could be bleak for UCLA, Oregon, Oregon State and Washington State. UCLA's Bruins face a rebuilding year, while the other three have a number of veterans back, but back from poor seasons.

John Robinson's Trojans

again will feature the running of tailback Charles White, fourth in the Heisman Trophy balloting last year, and the passing of quarterback Paul McDonald.

White, back for his senior season, has rolled up 4,195 yards rushing during his Southern Cal career, including 1,859 last year. McDonald, a senior left-hander, connected on 57 percent of his 203 attempts in 1978, and threw 19 touchdown passes.

Washington moved the ball well in 1978, and this season should be no different. Leading the way for the Huskies is tailback Joe Steele, who rushed for 1,111 yards last year, and Tom Porras, who threw for 1,151 yards.

At Stanford, 5-foot-9 junior Darrin Nelson is expected to once again keep opposing defenses off-balance with his running and pass-catching, but the Cardinals have to find a new quarterback to get the ball to him.

Arizona State, known for its ability to light up the scoreboard, figures to again be a high-scoring team. Quarterback Mark Malone, who ran for 705 yards and passed for 1,305 a year ago, figures to be even better in his senior season.

Arizona will be led by quarterback Jim Krohn, who topped the Pac-10 in passing last year until he suffered a midseason arm injury.

UCLA, 8-3-1 last year, lost runners Theotis Brown and James Owens, but has another potentially outstanding one in tailback Freeman McNeil.

Oregon, 2-9 in 1978, will rely heavily on fullback Vince Williams, who gained 842 yards last season, and quarterback Tim Durando, who started the Ducks' final five games.

At Washington State, Coach Jim Walden has lost the hub of his offense — quarterback Jack Thompson — so he's changing the offensive system. The Cougars will run more this campaign.

Carlen: Don't Rush To Metro

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — If the University of South Carolina trustees ask him, head football coach Jim Carlen says, he'll tell them what he thinks of affiliating with the Metro 7 Conference.

"I don't feel like I should be answering," said Carlen, since the league does not sponsor competition in his major sport.

But Carlen said at a news conference Wednesday he doesn't think USC ought to rush into affiliation with the Metro 7 or any other conference.

"The board (of trustees) ought to decide if they want to join a conference, then decide which one," he said.

The Metro 7 is making a strong pitch for the independent school to become its eighth member. Its commissioner, Larry Albus, was in Columbia Tuesday to make a proposal to university officials.

A committee of USC trustees will report to the full board next month.

Carlen, athletic director for all sports except basketball, noted that three years ago, when South Carolina was considering seeking readmission to the Atlantic Coast Conference, the trustees decided USC should remain an athletic independent.

He said he told the board at that time the athletic program couldn't afford to be a member of any conference because it needed all its revenue. If USC joined a conference, he said, it would have to share its revenue with member schools.

South Carolina basketball Coach Frank McGuire is a strong advocate of conference affiliation and says the Metro 7 would be a good choice.

Masters Title Takes It Toll

By BOB GREEN

AP Golf Writer

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Holding the coveted Masters title has its benefits, but it takes its toll, too, Fuzzy Zoeller has found.

"I've played too much," Zoeller said before teeing off today in the first round of the $400,000 Westchester Classic.

"Before, nobody really cared too much whether I played or not. But as the Masters champion they want you in the field. I've tried to play as much as I could. And, really, I've played too much.

"It's hard to stay sharp playing that much. People wonder why you have those bad rounds. Well, you just can't play good all the time.

"I had a letdown after the Masters and I really haven't got it back since," Zoeller said on the practice putting green. He stroked three balls to the cup, using a different stance on each stroke.

"I'm getting close to having it back, but it's not there yet."

The carefree Zoeller, a boisterous extrovert, interrupted his practice to watch Charles Coody walking across the green with both hands full of putters.

"Hey, Charley, I don't want to say anything but just between you and me, baby, that won't help," Zoeller called, then reflected on his playoff victory at Augusta, Ga.

"It's meant a lot of things to me," he said. "I'm much more recognizable. People know who I am. And that's fun.

"But you know what the biggest thing is? It's when they introduce me on the first tee as the Masters champion.

"It still sends a chill down my spine.

"That's the biggest thing." Zoeller isn't alone in his playing difficulties.

Tom Watson, who appears headed for a third consecutive Player of the Year title, also has been in a mild slump for the last couple of months but said it could end at any time.

Among the other standouts who testing the 6,603 yard, par 71 Westchester Country Club course are PGA champ David Graham, U.S. Open titleholder Hale Irwin, defending champion Lee Elder, Hubert Green, Johnny Miller, J.C. Snead and his 67-year-old uncle, Sam.

Watson: I Can Play Better Golf

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

This is going to scare some people, but Tom Watson, who has won four tournaments and finished second in four others this year, thinks he can play golf better than he has so far this season.

"I know I can be better," he said today before the first round of the $400,000 Westchester Classic. "I know I can be more consistent. I can improve my performance."

Watson likes to illustrate his point by telling this story about Ben Hogan, one of golf's legendary stars.

"One time, Hogan shot a 62, 10 strokes under par," Watson began. "Someone ran up to him and said, 'That was a perfect round.' Hogan shook his head, though. He said, 'Nope, perfect would have been 54 — 18 birdies.'"

"Hogan, Sam Snead, Arnold Palmer ... they strive for perfection and I strive for their type of perfection."

For those of you who thought Watson had already achieved that level, he assures you that he has not.

"There's always room for improvement," he said. "There are more variables in golf than in any other sport. To combat them, you've got to know what you're doing all the time. You have to be able to handle any situation — wind, rain, a bad lie, landing in a bunker. A complete player can do that and that's what I'd like to be, a complete player."

With close to $400,000 in the bank this year, Watson is on target to become the first golfer to win half a million dollars in a single season. The numbers boggle the mind of weekend duffers, but he is nonchalant about them.

"The way I judge my career and my ability is my performance," he said. "It's not money and it's not how many tournaments I win and it's not which tournaments I win. It's simply performance. If I can improve from week to week, if I can avoid complacency ... those are the things that propel me."

The trick to golfing success, said Watson, is learning to play each and every shot as if it was the most important of your life.

"Every shot should be a new challenge," he said. "You can't think of the last hole or the last shot. You can't let yourself get angry if you hit a bad shot or exhilarated if you hit a good one. You have to maintain that steady level. That's one of the things that separates the consistent player from the inconsistent one and it's probably the most important."

Watson says golfers have to develop patience. "That's my biggest problem," he said.

And you thought he didn't have any.

"Every golfer has problems. I rush my shots more than I should. That's my drawback. My rhythm is too fast. I guess it's the desire to hit the ball in a hurry instead of making a careful swing."

Golfers try to maintain the same psychological drive every week but obviously, they approach the Masters or PGA championship with a little more zest than they would the Quad Cities Open.

The Westchester Classic, sponsored by Manufacturers Hanover Trust Bank, has become one of the biggies. It is the second richest stop on the 1979 PGA tour and the only tournament the pros play in New York.

Watson likes the 6,603-yard, par-71 Westchester layout. "Lots of birdies can be shot here," he said. "You can come from behind in a hurry."

His best finish at Westchester came in 1976 when he shared second place at 275 with Fuzzy Zoeller and Ben Crenshaw, three strokes behind the winner, David Graham.

"I've shot the same just about every year in this tournament, nine or 10 under par and it's left me anywhere from fifth or sixth to second," Watson said.

Even though his performance has been reasonably consistent on this course, other golfers have experienced roller coaster tournaments there.

In the very first Westchester event in 1967, Dan Sikes finished with a 273, one stroke behind the winner, Jack Nicklaus. Sikes set a course record with a second round 62 that year but was around at the finish only because rain washed out a disastrous third round 81 and gave him another chance.

Watson smiled when he was asked how a golfer could go from one extreme to another so quickly.

"Who knows?" he shrugged. "It's not a science. It's just a game."

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is an excellent time to make decisions with associates concerning the future. You are under good aspects to easily handle whatever problems that may come up.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take time to study new activities that could give you added income in the days ahead. Express your finest talents.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be sure to handle important monetary matters early in day so you will have time for social activities later. Be wise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study various ways through which to best use your time in the future. You have friends who can be of assistance to you now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Any plans you have may require good advice from an expert before you put them in operation. Express happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Talk over with experts whatever it is that means the most to you and get their advice for attaining such. Attend the social tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Morning is fine for working out a plan that could give you more abundance in the future. A personal aim can be reached now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are able to understand others much better now and improve relations considerably. Take better care of your health.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be on the lookout for any new interest that could bring you advancement. Take no chances with your reputation at this time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Discuss important matters with associates early in the day and later be sure to do your share of the work involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Use your ingenuity in handling your duties instead of depending on others. Take any health treatments you may need now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) An excellent day to communicate with others and gain your aims. Show more devotion to loved one and be happier together.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Concentrate on business matters that can give you added income in the future. Avoid a tendency to spend more than you can afford.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have many abilities and talents but will need guidance in order to make the most of them. Direct the education along lines of the law and public work for best results. Don't neglect ethical training early in life.

The doctrine of honesty always being the policy is not subscribed to by the majority of successful bridge players. They will tell you that a delicate lie at the proper time will show more profit than all the technical expertise ever gleaned from textbooks. Observe East's stellar performance on this hand.

South opened a "convenient" one club and North correctly responded one diamond. He felt that, if his partner had four reasonable spades, he would be able to introduce them at the one-level. However, South's hand was so balanced that he eschewed the one spade rebid in favor of one no trump, and North cannot be faulted for raising to three no trump.

West decided to lead the nine of hearts rather than a club away from his queen into the teeth of declarer's opening bid. East produced the ten and was allowed to hold the trick. He continued with the queen to dummy's king. A diamond went to West's ace and a third round of hearts was played. This time East followed with the jack, concealing the five as declarer won the ace. Declarer persisted with diamonds and East won the king.

East was now in position to complete the defensive book by cashing the long heart, but he paused to look over the situation. Declarer was marked with the two black aces for his opening bid. If South held the queen of clubs as well, the contract could not be beaten. If declarer held the jack of clubs and East cashed his fourth heart, correct technique would land the contract. Declarer should first cash two high spades in an attempt to drop the queen, and then, if that did not work, revert to the club finesse.

Since East's earlier plays had created the impression that he had only three hearts, he was not about to destroy that illusion now by cashing his winning heart. Instead he simply exited with a diamond. To South, the contract now appeared to be in the bag. He crossed to the ace of spades and finessed the jack, "knowing" that, if it lost, the defenders could cash no more tricks.

We regret to report that when East won the queen of spades and produced the five of hearts for the setting trick, declarer's remarks could not be reprinted in this column.

Special Event At Lost Colony

MANTEO—Saturday, August 18 is the annual Virginia Dare Day, honoring the birth of the first child of English parentage born on the shores of the New World—at what is now Roanoke Island.

One of the events marking the birthday will be the presentation of the annual Distinguished Service Award to a cast member, to be presented by Senator Robert Morgan during the intermission of "The Lost Colony" performance.

Another of the special events planned will be the appearance of four local babies in the production in lieu of the usual doll prop used.

Poker Playing Gina Winds Up Joining Mork-And-Mindy Show

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Getting a job in Hollywood: Meet Gina (that's a hard G, as in Geese) Hecht, brown-eyed and bubbly, slightly profane player of cards.

Until quite recently, Gina had plenty of time for that honorable pursuit, poker, being a member of the thickly populated community of unemployed actors here. For three years she hung out, answering casting calls, reading for producers who'd searched all their lives for an actress like her but never called back; waiting, with all the others, for a break.

It came, but not by the prescribed method. It took a little poker, a little basketball, a couple of good pals, and being out of town at the right time.

TV sitcom king Garry Marshall was searching for an actress to step into his "Mork and Mindy" series. Marshall had decided to replace Mindy's father and grandmother with two younger characters, a brother and sister from New York who'd run a deli in the show.

The role meant instant success, "Mork and Mindy" being the most popular new show on TV; and if ever a spinoff was intentionally planted, this was it. It was a plum part, and the hordes ascended.

But nobody seemed quite right for the female role.

Gina said when she returned from a short New York visit, actor Louis Quinn, a poker partner was ranting: "Where were you? We've been trying to reach you all week! You'd have been perfect for this 'Mork and Mindy' part."

Gina continues. "On Saturday morning, somewhere in the wee hours that I don't know exist, like nine or 10, Louie calls me and says, 'Phil Foster is in my apartment, come and meet him.' (Foster plays Laverne's father on 'Laverne and Shirley' and is a pal of Marshall's)."

"I said, 'Okay, Louie,' but I was really doing it as a favor, out of respect. I walk in and I'm talking to Phil and Louie and listening to their stories and not feeling at all on edge, because this whole thing is ludicrous, and I'm just humoring two comedians who've been around twice my lifetime, when Phil picks up the phone, comes back and says, 'Pick up your purse. We're going over to Garry Marshall's.'"

"So, we get there, and Garry's playing basketball. Phil pulls him off the court and says, 'Garry, I want you to meet this girl, this is the girl that's just right for 'Mork and Mindy.' Gary, meet Gina (pronouncing it Jeena).'" Phil doesn't say my last name, because he doesn't know it. And he mispronounces my first name. This is the brilliant actress, the one he knows personally.

"So, Garry, like I'm not there, says to Phil, 'Philly, bring her in Monday for a reading.'"

She did her reading, impressed Marshall, the show's producers, and finally, the network. She was awaiting the final word over at Paramount, where "Mork and Mindy" is made.

"All of a sudden Bruce Johnson ('Mork' producer) rides up on a bicycle, motions me over and says, 'Well, you're hot.' End of conversation.

Getting a job in Hollywood, Gina Hecht style. Seems as good a way as any.

Bank Robberies Rising In N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An FBI spokesman says after a three-year decline, bank robberies in North Carolina are on the rise again.

In 1978, there were 48 bank robberies, 13 percent fewer than in 1977 and 40 percent fewer than in 1976, according to a state Justice Department report.

So far in 1979, 84 bank robberies have been reported in the state, according to a spokesman in the FBI's Charlotte office.

FBI officials predict a 13 percent rise in bank robberies nationwide this year. They expect more than 6,000 bank robberies to have occurred by Sept. 20, the end of the fiscal year. In fiscal 1978, there were 5,300 bank robberies in the nation.

State and federal law-enforcement officials attribute the rise to factors ranging from the decline of the economy to the increase in the number of branch banks.

About 68 percent of the nation's bank robberies are solved, according to the FBI. "North Carolina has been higher than that over the years," the FBI spokesman said. "Last year, it was 90 to 92 percent in this state."

State Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten said bank robbery seems to increase during the summer months.

"I think the inclination of a person to commit a crime is there and any number of things can trigger it," Edmisten said.

Quiz Three On Pot Plane

GREENEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Police say they are questioning three men about a surplus Air Force cargo plane carrying nine tons of marijuana valued at $6 million that was abandoned at an airport.

The men were picked up within a mile of the airport after the four-engine DC6 and its cargo of 349 50-pound bales of marijuana landed without lights at 2:30 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

The men from Atlanta, Chicago and Michigan, including one carrying about $1,200 in foreign currency, had not been charged, authorities said.

Police Chief Kenneth Rollins said the marijuana, except a small amount kept as evidence, was burned at a rock quarry.

The nine-ton haul is the second largest in the state's history. A DC6 carrying 10 tons of marijuana was seized in April 1977 when it landed at Memphis International Airport. A plane loaded with 3½ tons of marijuana went down near Chattanooga in January 1977.

Walt Stone, manager of the Greenville airport, said numbers on the plane indicate it was registered in Nicaragua. Mattresses, blankets, canned food and flight manuals were found in the plane, he said.

After an Army surplus tanker truck loaded with 2,400 gallons of aviation fuel was found abandoned on a state highway about eight miles from the airport a few hours later, police speculated the plane had landed to refuel.

The truck had no license plates and appeared to have been hot-wired, Bob Baird of the Tennessee Bureau of Criminal Identification said.

6 months jail suspended on payment of $200 and cost, surrender operators license; driving while license revoked, voluntary dismissal.

Yesterday's Cryptquip — PRETTY PETUNIAS USUALLY GRACE DAINTY CITY GARDENS.

Today's Cryptquip clue: R equals C

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

No Response Over Temperature Complaint

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has received 600 complaints of buildings kept cooler than 78 degrees, but has yet to dispatch a single inspector to investigate, an Energy Department spokesman says.

And one month after the mandatory thermostat control program began, only 10 states, as yet unidentified, have agreed to help the Energy Department monitor building temperatures, spokesman Odom Fanning said Wednesday.

The department wants every state to help it inspect building thermostats, hoping, for example, to have 10,000 inspections performed in California plus 8,000 in New York and 5,000 in Illinois.

President Carter last month ordered that thermostats read no lower than 78 degrees Fahrenheit when air conditioning is operating and no higher than 65 degrees when a building is heated.

"We are keeping a file on the complaints and we will consider them" when inspectors are dispatched, which should come very shortly, Fanning said.

Despite the mandatory controls, American electricity consumption last week set a record, the Edison Electric Institute reported.

It said output during the hot and muggy week hit 49.51 billion kilowatt hours, 8.1 percent higher than during the same week in 1978.
