Decline Of GNP Is Less Than Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corporate profits slipped 2.4 percent during the second quarter this year, but the nation's overall economic growth did not fall as abruptly as first thought, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the Gross National Product, which measures total output of goods and services, declined 2.4 percent from April 1 to June 30. Preliminary estimates released last month had placed the drop at 3.3 percent.

Nevertheless, the two new statistics on profits and GNP offer further evidence of the nation's slide into a recession, economists said.

Corporate profits, after taxes and on an annual basis, totaled $138.6 billion, compared with $142 billion during the first quarter, the Commerce Department said. These figures are adjusted for seasonal variations.

Pre-tax profits, meanwhile, fell from $233.3 billion in the first quarter to $226.9 billion in the April-June period, the department said.

Corporate profits are seen as a key indicator of the economy's growth because it helps determine how much money business has to invest and pay dividends to attract capital.

The revised GNP decline of 2.4 percent compares with a 1.1 percent increase in the first three months of 1979.

The government also said that the annual inflation rate declined from 9.3 percent in the first quarter to 9.2 percent in the second three months of 1979, as measured by a broad national standard called the GNP implicit price deflator.

Today's reports followed announcements that interest rates are rising, housing starts are plunging and industrial production is falling — signs that economists say point to a recession and higher unemployment.

The Federal Reserve Board, indicating it will risk recession to douse inflation, Thursday boosted the discount rate, or interest charged its bank lenders, from 10 percent to a record 10.5 percent.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department said housing starts fell 7 percent last month, while total industrial output slipped 0.1 percent. Auto production plummeted more than 3 percent.

The increase in the discount rate means that Federal Reserve-member banks, having to pay more to borrow, will charge their own customers higher interest. This tends to discourage some investment and retard economic growth.

Expect Governor Offer Bail Out Medicaid Bills

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a speech tonight to the N.C. Association of County Commissioners, Gov. Jim Hunt is expected to offer to bail out nearly 30 counties which owe the state money for Medicaid programs.

Although details of Hunt's speech were not available in advance, sources said Hunt will propose that the state pay the counties' overdue Medicaid bills by shifting money from other programs in the state Department of Human Resources. The counties have rejected a state offer of two-year loans to enable them to pay the bills.

Sources also predicted Hunt will ask the 1980 General Assembly to scrap the present formula which determines how the state and counties share the non-federal portion of Medicaid care.

In adopting the new formula last year, the legislature increased the county share of the cost of caring for Medicaid patients in nursing homes while lowering the county share for Medicaid patients in rest homes.

The legislature hoped this would result in more patients being placed in the less expensive rest homes. However, the counties argue it has not had that effect because doctors, not welfare administrators, decide where a patient belongs.

As a result, many counties contend that the new formula results in their owing several times as much for Medicaid as they did under the old formula. Moreover, the counties say the state billed them for a larger Medicaid contribution after they had already adopted their 1979-80 budgets.

At least one county, Stanly, has gone to court challenging the new formula and several others have considered such action.

Stanly County halted its $18,000 monthly payment in January, and additional counties owe for April and May, Human Resources Department officials say. The state has been paying those counties' shares but has asked them to submit budgets that provide for repaying the state.

When Stanly County did not submit such a plan, the state cut off its administrative money for May — about $30,000.

In granting Stanly County's request for an injunction, Superior Court Judge John McConnell Sr. said the cutoff would harm the county's welfare program. He will hear arguments Oct. 1 from both the county and state.

Trial Of UNC On Jan. 7

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The desegregation dispute between the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the University of North Carolina will be heard at a formal administrative trial scheduled to begin Jan. 7, 1980.

At that hearing, it will be determined whether UNC is in violation of federal civil rights laws and whether it should lose part or all of the estimated $89 million it receives annually in federal funds.

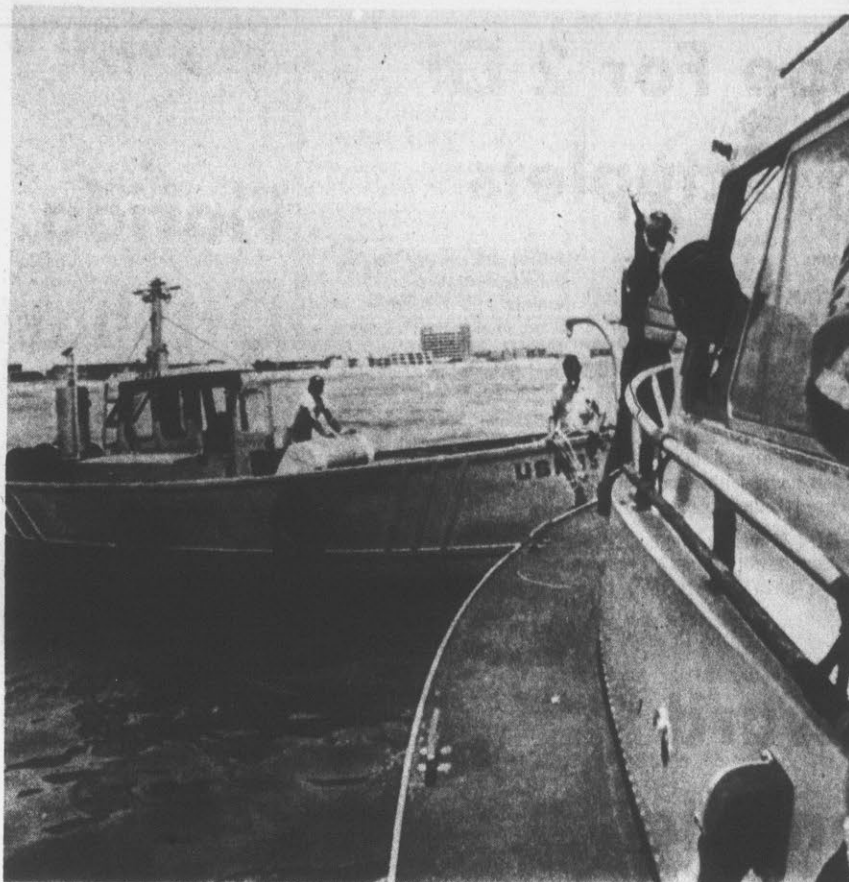

How the 16-campus state university system would be desegregated has been a long-running dispute between university and HEW officials. The parties broke off talks in April, and UNC filed suit in federal court in Raleigh to halt a threatened cutoff of federal funds.

U.S. Judge Franklin Dupree blocked the cutoff but ordered HEW to proceed with its administrative review and trial against UNC.

The two sides have continued to negotiate in the past two months, but apparently have made little progress.

HEW administrative law judge Lewis F. Parker has given permission to the NAACP Legal Defense Fund to intervene in the case. UNC lawyers may appeal that decision, first to Parker and if that fails possibly to federal court.

UNC attorneys had opposed the intervention since HEW's own rules forbid it.

Massive Oil Spill Blackens Beaches

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas

(AP) — Nearly 20 miles of scenic Texas beach have been blackened by history's worst oil spill, and a government scientist says the situation will worsen and remain critical until winds shift this autumn.

"There will be larger areas (of oil) every day than we've had, at least for a while," John Robinson, scientific coordinator of a government task force, said Thursday.

"The only thing coming up that will help us is the reversal of the currents and the northerly winds sometime in the fall," he added.

The Ixtoc 1 offshore well near the Yucatan Peninsula blew out June 3 and has since been spewing thousands of barrels of oil a day into the Gulf of Mexico, producing a spill that covers thousands of square miles.

On Wednesday, a diver working on the well died after apparently suffering a bad case of "the bends." Allan Anderson, 32, of Two Rivers, Wis., died while he was working under 165 feet of water, said District Attorney Jose del Carmen Balan Cano.

On Thursday, oil rolled in soiling more than six miles of beach in the plush South Padre Island resort area.

The area's multi-million dollar tourist industry is reeling from the oily onslaught.

"What we're looking at is the loss of several million dollars over the next few weeks if this trend continues," said Ralph Thompson, spokesman for the South Padre Island Chamber of Commerce.

Since the spill approached, about 30 percent fewer tourists have visited the luxury hotels and condominiums than did during the same period last year, Thompson added.

The goeey crude began staining the beaches Monday afternoon, and by Wednesday, oil was smeared over more than 10 miles of beaches on the northern end of 100-mile-long Padre Island.

Meanwhile, giant patches of oil, some of them several miles long, are still drifting off the Texas coast — some as close as 10 miles offshore.

One huge patch, dozens of square miles in size, lurked 25 miles southeast of Corpus Christi Thursday, and Robinson said it could hit Matagorda Bay — about 100 miles farther north — by next week.

Survival Fight

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — An alarming number of privately owned service stations are going out of business because of their inability to absorb costs, says the president of the North Carolina Service Station Association.

Max Pegrum of Greensboro, says he agrees with reports made by congressional researchers that say independent gasoline dealers are having a tough time surviving.

According to Pegrum company-owned stations can absorb business losses better than independents, and he said there has been an alarming number of stations going out of business during the past six to seven years.

Figures from House researchers working on an antitrust and restraint-of-trade subcommittee show that almost 100,000 independent, leased or owner-operated stations across the nation have gone out of business since 1972.

Rising interest rates already have affected the housing market, said economist Michael Sumichrast in explaining why housing starts in July fell from a seasonally adjusted 1,935,000 units to 1,799,000.

Some builders can't afford to borrow the money needed to construct new homes and potential homebuyers are facing increasingly expensive mortgage rates.

If that housing trend persists throughout 1979, 20 percent fewer homes will be started than during last year, said Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders.

This could translate into the loss of more than 450,000 jobs, from carpenters to land developers to lumbermill workers, according to figures supplied by the home builders' association.

"The drop in housing starts pretty much fits a recession scenario," Sumichrast said.

The fall-off in starts also depletes the supply of homes and helps raise their price because demand continues to be high.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that the average new single-family house cost $72,200 in the second quarter, $3,900 more than three months earlier. Sumichrast said that trend may continue for the next 12 months.

Another sector already experiencing serious unemployment is the automobile industry, where production is expected to fall from an annual rate of 8.8 million cars in July to 7.3 million in August.

Wages and salaries increased only 0.7 percent, while inflation is rising at more than 1 percent a month.

This chronic inflation was a chief motive behind the Federal Reserve Board's decision to increase the discount rate.

It is the second increase in less than a month and the third since November, when the discount rate stood at 8.5 percent.

The boost comes two weeks after Paul A. Volcker, an acknowledged conservative in monetary affairs, was confirmed as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, replacing G. William Miller, the new treasury secretary.

Volcker, at his confirmation hearing, vowed to make the battle against inflation his top priority. That battle has become an increasingly important task as the value of the dollar abroad has slipped in recent months.

While the board's discount rate hike takes effect today, commercialized their prime corporate customers to a record-tying 12 percent.

Inflation is more than an American problem. The International Monetary Fund said Thursday that consumers in 12 industrial nations paid an average of 8.3 percent more for their purchases in May than a year earlier.

Pioneer 11 Approaches The Rings Of Saturn

By BILL DENSMORE
Associated Press Writer

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Nearly 400 years after astronomers first identified the rings around Saturn, a robot spacecraft hurtling toward the planet at 50,000 miles an hour may help scientists determine whether man is alone in the solar system.

Pioneer 11, launched six years ago, will plunge through the planet's mysterious rings Sept. 1, scientists estimate. The flight to the sixth planet from the sun — nearly a billion miles from Earth — will probe the rings and the potential for life on one of Saturn's satellites.

As it sweeps around Saturn's dark side, the craft will pass within 360,000 miles of Titan, believed to be the largest satellite in the solar system.

Scientists speculate that because Titan has a solid surface and an atmosphere of methane — the same gas produced by decaying plants — it could harbor life.

"If the atmosphere on Titan is thick enough, it could insulate the planet's surface and provide a comfortable atmosphere for primitive life," John H. Wolfe, Pioneer 11's top scientist, said Thursday. "One of the things Pioneer is going to do is stick a thermometer into Titan to find out if it's warm enough."

Wolfe said life as it is currently recognized could not survive on other planets because of temperature extremes, and said he believes the huge satellite is too cold to sustain life.

"Titan is sort of the biologist's last hope," said Wolfe. If the planet proves to be too cold, he said, "then we'll have to face the fact that we're alone in the solar system. We'll have to start looking to the stars."

Launched in April, 1973, Pioneer 11 is part of a $165 million National Aeronautics and Space Administration effort to learn more about Earth's planetary neighbors.

Saturn's glistening rings are arranged in at least three circular strips around the planet, and were first observed in 1610 by the Italian astronomer Galileo, who thought they were satellites.

Astronomers recently guessed they are ice-encased metallic objects from either a disintegrating asteroid or the planet's surface.

NASA scientists estimate the rings could range from several yards to several miles in thickness. Individual particles may be as big as cars or as small as snowballs.

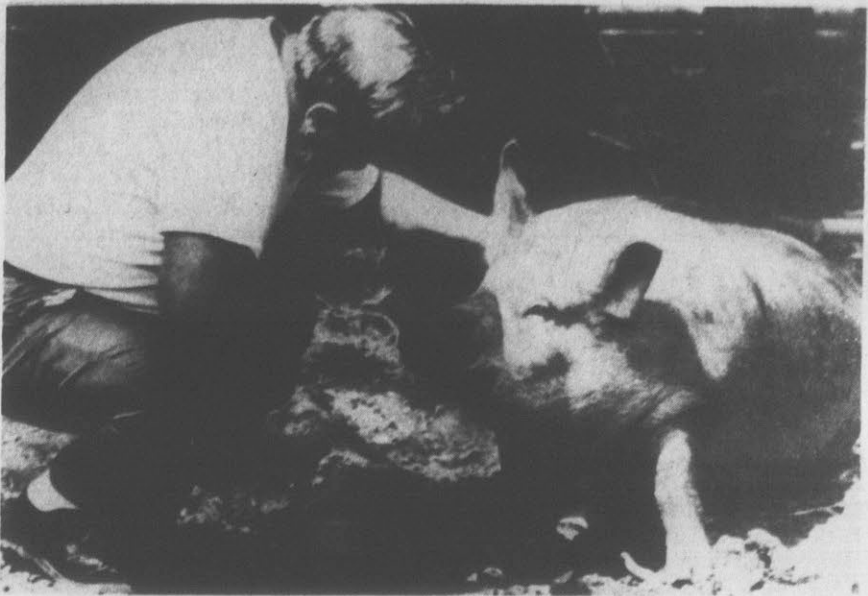

Instruments aboard Pioneer 11 are expected to gauge the size and composition of the rings, and also confirm for the first time the limits of Saturn's gravity, magnetic, and radiation fields.

As the spacecraft passes within 26,000 miles of Saturn's cloud tops, other instruments will take photographs and measure temperature and chemical composition of the outer atmosphere.

The most hazardous moment in the two-day encounter will occur when the aluminum, nuclear-powered spacecraft passes through the planet's rings where it risks collision with debris too small to be seen from Earth, said Wolfe.

Saturn is the second largest planet in the solar system, lying almost a billion miles from the Sun and orbiting between Jupiter and Uranus.

Some Hope For 2 Of Surviving Octuplets

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Five of the seven surviving day-old octuplets born to a Neapolitan woman were given little chance of life today because they were so tiny, but an attending physician said there was some hope for the two largest.

The mother, 29-year-old Pasqualina Chianese, who gave birth to sextuplets three years ago and lost them all, was reported in satisfactory condition physically but despondent that the same thing might happen again.

"This time, when they told me there were eight, I felt pain rather than joy," said the father, Stefano, an insurance company employee. "I begot 14 children and maybe none of them survives. Pasqualina and I desperately want a baby, a good and healthy one, not all these together."

Mrs. Chianese, who had been taking fertility drugs for years, gave birth Thursday to five girls and three boys. The babies were two months premature and ranged in weight from 14 ounces to 2 pounds 3 ounces. The smallest, a girl, died 10 hours later.

The babies were delivered at the Hospital of the Incurable in 20 minutes by Dr. Salvatore Scala assisted by three nurses. Quadruplets had been expected, and when eight arrived some had to be rushed to incubators in other hospitals.

"Everybody in the delivery room was so convinced that four were coming," said Dr. Scala. "You can hardly imagine the surprise of Mrs. Chianese and everybody else when the number kept increasing. ... They were so tiny that the mother hardly felt any pain."

Although the birth of the Dionne quintuplets in Canada in 1934 was a worldwide sensation, fertility drugs in widespread use in recent years frequently result in large multiple births. However, the rate of survival is still low.

Local doctors said they knew of only one previous birth of octuplets, in 1977 in Athens. All died within hours.

The Guinness Book of World Records says the highest number of babies reported at a single birth was 10, reported without medical confirmation in Spain in 1924, in China in 1936 and in Brazil in 1946.

The highest number medically recorded, according to Guinness, was nine — in Sydney, Australia, in 1971, in Philadelphia in 1972 and in Bangladesh in 1977. All died.

The largest number of surviving children from a multiple birth are the Rosenkowitz sextuplets of Cape Town, South Africa. Born in 1974 to Colin and Susan Rosenkowitz, the three boys and three girls celebrated their fifth birthday last Jan. 11.

Pride In 'Stingray Casserole'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — The common, cow nose stingray is an "under-utilized species" to state seafood specialist Sam Thomas. But to Clara Bell Daniels, it's just delicious.

"You can fry it, boil it, charcoal it or put it in a casserole like this," Mrs. Daniels, of nearby Morehead City, said while showing off her specialty Thursday. "But any way you fix it, it's delicious. We hope it's going to be on the market someday."

Mrs. Daniels was offering samples of her stingray casserole at the 3rd annual Strange Seafood Spectacular, a feast of out-of-the-ordinary coastal fare sponsored by the state Hampton Mariners Museum.

Thomas, with the N.C. State University seafood laboratory, heads a project to promote the stingray as a nutritious and tasty food.

They served up samples of the casserole to many of the more than 1,000 persons who turned out for the strange seafood at this small seaport town. Many of the other seafood dishes were bazaar, some tasted no better than they sounded, but all are available from local waters.

There were raw purple sea urchin eggs; left-handed whelk chowder (different from that made with the right-handed variety); sea lettuce soup; sautéed, marinated, boiled and charcoal octopus; shark creole; squid salad; eel newburg and others.

But Thomas says it is the stingray that has the most potential for catching on nationally and would be of most benefit to local fishermen.

"Apparently there's quite a population of them in North Carolina waters. All they are now is a nuisance. They create quite a problem eating shellfish and can destroy beds for scallops, oysters and clams," he said.

"We're looking at the countries like Japan and in Europe to see if we can market ray there first. Then we'll try in the United States."

So far the food is inexpensive. Mrs. Daniels gets her ray free from fishermen who catch them in their nets. Her casserole includes bits of ray meat with mushrooms, peppers, onions and cheese.

Most of the other dishes also are made with seafood usually thrown away. Mrs. Genette Dudley of Morehead City began making shark creole because she saw so many small sand sharks thrown away by fishermen after more sporting catches.

Mrs. Nancy Winfrey of Oriental, N.C., began cooking her eel newburg once she got over being squeamish, and now she also serves her family eel, smoked, fried, in soup and with eggs.

"I started cooking them about eight years ago because it was all I could catch. I threw a whole lot back before I got to where I could eat them," she said.

Charles McNeill, director of the museum, isn't too hopeful about any of the delicacies catching on nationally.

"We just want to show people there's a lot out there to eat that they aren't eating just because nobody's ever fixed it for them before."

Safety Award For Greenville

The City of Greenville has received a Pedestrian Safety Award from the Carolina Motor Club for outstanding achievement in the prevention of pedestrian fatalities and injuries during 1978.

Chief Glenn Cannon, who accepted the award, said the city was rated against cities of comparable size and characteristics among over 2,750 that competed in the judging nationwide, and 53 in the two Carolinas.

The 1978 award was the 13th received by Greenville in the past 28 years.

The chief noted that Greenville's first award was received in 1950. Since that time, awards have been presented in 1952, 53, 56, 58, 59, 1962, 66, 67, 1972, 75 and 1978.

Program areas evaluated in selecting award winners include safety legislation, quality of school traffic safety programs, active public information and education programs, and proper maintenance of records.

According to Cannon, nationwide statistics show that one fourth of all adults killed in pedestrian mishaps have been drinking, while half of the total number of deaths occur at night.

The majority of pedestrian accidents involve traffic law violations, he added.

Farmville Mart

Hit Highest

Average In Belt

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Tobacco Market had the highest average in the state Thursday, with $146.21 paid per 100 pounds.

According to Louis N. Williams, sales supervisor for the market's Tobacco Board of Trade, prices showed some improvement Thursday with more quality grades on the floor. The increase of leaf grade on Thursday was termed "remarkable" over Wednesday's offerings, said Williams. Quality grades of lugs are in strong demand, with orange color appearing to be more popular than the lemon grade, he noted.

The market sold 395,889 pounds for $578,622, an average of $146.21 per 100 pounds Thursday. To date, the market has sold 9,070,010 pounds for $12,369,111, an average of $136.37.

ANNIVERSARY SUNDAY
The Joyful Singers will celebrate their anniversary Sunday, August 19, 5:30 p.m., at the New Covenant Temple Holiness Church, Grifton. Various groups will be on the program and the public is invited to attend, says the Rev. Ollie Harris, pastor.

Florida Could Oppose Offshore Oil Leases

DAYTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Florida may oppose bidding on offshore oil leases in the southeast if it's not satisfied with environmental studies of the plan, a state oceanographer says.

That warning and outright citizen opposition to the leasing proposal greeted U.S. Bureau of Land Management officials here Thursday night.

"The oil companies have sold the American people a bill of goods," said Robert Bullard, a local environmental engineer who proposed the government take over oil exploration.

The proposed leasing involves about 1.6 million acres of the continental shelf off Florida, Georgia and the Carolinas. If federal approval is granted, oil companies could begin drilling for oil and natural gas by 1983. Bids are scheduled to be let in August 1981.

One proposed site is about 60 miles due east of Jacksonville and 100 miles northeast of Daytona Beach.

"If we do not get satisfaction on ... environmental studies, it may be necessary for the State of Florida to object to the sale," said Maurice Rinkel, director of the Florida Institute of Oceanography and adviser to the governor on continental shelf drilling.

Rinkel said the bureau should join with the state in studying the impact of potential oil spills on Florida's tourist industry. "The risk of oil contamination on Daytona Beach would be much greater from tanker traffic than from drilling over here," said Jesse Hunt, an oceanographer with BLM.

The session here was one of six scheduled along the Southeast coast in preparation for an environmental impact statement on the project.

Ed Richardson of BLM said most of the comments at meetings in South Carolina and Georgia earlier this week were favorable. However, all but two of the 50 citizens here indicated they opposed the leasing arrangement.

Either Trust Folks Or Call VD Hotline

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have a terrible problem which I have kept to myself for going on three months. I am a 14-year-old boy and I am almost positive I have VD. (A venereal disease.) I cry every time I think about it. I can't tell my parents. I just can't! Please help me, Abby. I know I should see a doctor, but in the first place I don't have any money, and in the second place I am afraid that if I went to one he would call up my parents and tell them, and if they knew they would kill me.

Is there any place I can go without having my parents find out? I can't tell you my name or address because I don't want a personal reply from you. My parents get the mail first. Answer me in your column. I will be looking for your answer every day. Please, please hurry. I know it's getting worse. Thank you.

FOURTEEN AND IN TROUBLE

DEAR IN TROUBLE: No matter what you think, in time of trouble your parents are your best friends. I urge you to tell them. I promise you they won't "kill" you.

If you absolutely refuse to tell your parents, call the toll-free VD Hotline: 800-523-1885. It is important that you act at once. Please write to me soon and let me know how you are. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I have fallen in love with a divorced man. He's 32 and has many good qualities. I'm 22 and come from a close-knit family.

I have decided to marry this man, but my father has come up with a suggestion. I need your opinion on it. He wants me to get in touch with my fiancé's ex-wife and get her side of the story concerning their divorce.

I've never even met the lady, and would feel very awkward asking her to meet me to discuss her divorce.

I talked it over with my fiancé. Although he didn't forbid me to get in touch with his ex, he expressed his disapproval.

I admit, I'm curious. Should I call this woman and ask her to meet with me?

FIRST TIME AROUND

DEAR FIRST: No. Your chances of getting an unbiased, dispassionate account of the divorce from the ex-wife are slim. Furthermore, your fiancé would probably regard such a meeting as a vote of no-confidence in him. If he reacts negatively, I wouldn't blame him.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to ALLERGIC, who thinks perfumes, colognes, aftershave, etc., ought to be banned along with public smoking. You said that letter about scents made sense to you.

Well, why stop at smoking and scents? Many people are allergic to animal hair, woolen clothing, etc. Why don't we ban these, too?

We could shoot all the animals, outlaw tobacco and perfume, and force the entire population to wear synthetic fabrics. And if synthetic fabrics cause allergies, then maybe we should all go naked.

After all, Abby, we don't want to discriminate.

CATHY FROM ASHTABULA

CONFIDENTIAL TO "CAROL": No matter how "fast" a guy is, he can't be faster than sound. And the "sound" should be no!

Harry, 96, And Helen, 69, Treated To Belated Honeymoon

THE HAPPY HONEYMOONERS. . . Harry and Helen Newberry, 96 and 69 respectively, left their Lakewood, Colo. nursing home residence, for 24 hours on the town in Denver, thanks to the efforts of a senior citizens' advocate and the generosity of Denver businesses. (AP Photo)

DENVER (AP) — They arrived at the plush Denver hotel in a limousine. The bell captain greeted the couple at the door and whisked them to their top-floor suite.

And there, amidst flowers, champagne and candy, Harry and Helen Newberry, residents of the Westland Manor Nursing Home in Lakewood, Colo., enjoyed their honeymoon — two years late.

The fairy tale-like saga of Newberry, 96, and his wife Helen, 69, began when Mary Duty, a local social activist and senior citizens' advocate, dropped by the Newberrys' nursing home to visit with residents there.

While chatting with the visitor, Mrs. Newberry confided that her one wish was to spend "just one night in a motel as a kind of belated honeymoon." The Newberrys were married at the nursing home two years ago.

Upon hearing the wish, Mrs. Duty, a modern-day genie, went to work.

After a short talk with her,

Ira Ash, president of the Cosmopolitan Hotel, agreed to donate a suite to the honeymooners. He had books of matches made up as mementos of the occasion, each sporting Harry's and Helen's names printed inside a small heart.

The American Limousine Service, normally called into action by statesmen and theatrical celebrities, offered a classy set of wheels and the services of a driver for the Newberrys' wish-come-true.

Joslin's, a Denver department store, presented Mrs. Newberry with a new dress. Mrs. Duty supplied the champagne. And delighted friends sent a shower of gifts, which awaited the couple in their hotel room.

As the two entered the hotel, Newberry, twice a widower, serenaded his bride with a rendition of "Happy Days Are Here Again." The retired Denver Tramway Co. foreman is Helen's second husband.

Blueberry Muffins Milk

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

We've updated a favorite recipe of ours by including some wholewheat flour.

1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour

1/2 cup fork-stirred wholewheat flour

2 teaspoons baking powder

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/2 cup sugar

1 large egg

1/2 cup milk
1/4 cup butter, melted
1 cup blueberries
Stir together flours, baking powder, salt and sugar. Beat egg and milk to blend; add to flour mixture with butter; stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Fold in blueberries. Spoon into buttered muffin-pan cups (each 1-3rd cup capacity), filling them about two-thirds full. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out free of batter — 25 to 30 minutes. Loosen edges and serve hot with butter. Makes 12.

Neighborhood Watch Spreads

One of the more interesting developments of recent years has been the Neighborhood Watch programs begun in an effort to reduce crime in residential areas.

In Farmville, the Westwood neighborhood has become the first area to have 100 percent participation in the Farmville Police Department's program.

All households in Westwood are participating in monthly meetings where information on crime prevention is obtained, and agreeing to watch out for neighborhood property.

In addition households in the neighborhood are marking their personal items with identifying numbers. Stickers can then be placed on the homes making it clear that items are marked.

Undoubtedly it is a source of considerable pride to the neighborhood that a sign was posted at the entrance to the area pointing out that the Neighborhood Watch program is underway.

We have nothing but praise for the residents of Westwood who are demonstrating their concern for reducing residential crime. The police can't be everywhere, but if the police are promptly notified when something suspicious occurs, many break-ins and other crimes can be stopped.

We hope the Neighborhood Watch program will be instituted in other residential areas.

Prepare Now For That Contribution

The United Way board of directors has approved a $351,477.08 budget for the coming year, and soon the drive for the funds will be underway.

The budget embraces a number of local agencies offering many services to our community.

We are confident that this budget will be met in the upcoming campaign. Now is the time to begin planning for a United Way contribution.

THIS AFTERNOON

Pushing Backyard Energy

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Small steps are showing promise of helping to solve the nation's energy problems, and North Carolina is in the forefront of that effort.

Several hundred applications have been filed with federal officials to license the operation of alcohol stills in this state. Once famous as a center of moonshine liquor activity, backwoods stills, and the people who know how to operate them, are available in North Carolina.

A windmill perches atop Howard's Knob at Boone in a joint project involving the U.S. Department of Energy and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

And at Research Triangle Institute near Durham at least two top-priority projects are underway: development of batteries for storage of solar power, and a hydroelectric survey.

John Warren, the researcher in charge of the water power project, sums up the advantages in a few words: flowing water is the fuel for electricity-producing dams. Water is free and renewable.

Operating costs and maintenance for hydroelectric plants are low, and their environmental impact is minimal. In addition, the technology for harnessing the energy of streams and rivers has been around for nearly a century and has proved to be a safe and reliable source of electricity.

Much of North Carolina's industrial growth was based on flowing water as textile plants located here to take advantage of the "fall line" from Piedmont toward the Coastal Plains. But there are barriers to development, Warren comments in an article in the July issue of "Hypotenuse", a regular publication of the Research Triangle Institute.

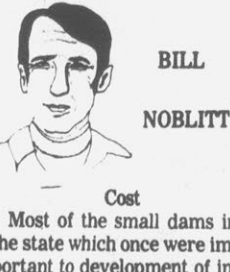

"The major barrier ... in recent times has been the initial financing," he says, but federal assistance for small dam owners may be the incentive needed to encourage development.

Beginning October 1, the Department of Energy will offer low-risk, low-interest loans for studies to back up hydroelectric projects for small communities and industries.

To get North Carolina projects at the head of the line, the state Energy Institute hired the Research Triangle Institute to seek out dam owners who might be eligible. From a list of more than 3,000 dams in the state, 300 have been picked for further analysis. Some 20 or 30 of these seem to be in a most competitive position for federal aid. The institute is also helping owners through the federal regulatory maze in getting aid and licenses.

As an example of what hydropower can do, Warren describes the 50 years of hydropower generation by Consolidated Knitting Mills at Charlotte where a 450-kilowatt hydro turbine saved the firm about $50,000 last year on heating and air conditioning costs.

But Warren cautions that water power alone will never provide the answer to energy needs. "It is not a panacea," he says, but feels water along with other alternatives can help lessen the load on coal and nuclear power plants, and produce significant amounts of electricity for small power users such as rural cooperatives, small towns, and industries.

BILL NOBLITT

Cost

Most of the small dams in the state which once were important to development of industrial, however, have been abandoned or destroyed. The rising cost of other energy is making a return to those sources more and more attractive.

On September 20, the Energy Institute and Research Triangle Institute and the Water Resources Research Institute of the University of North Carolina will conduct a Small Hydro Symposium of the southeastern states in Asheville. Warren can provide further information about that session to interested individuals.

Already the work of the North Carolina researchers is spilling over into other states and national interest is being created.

But Warren cautions that water power alone will never provide the answer to energy needs. "It is not a panacea," he says, but feels water along with other alternatives can help lessen the load on coal and nuclear power plants, and produce significant amounts of electricity for small power users such as rural cooperatives, small towns, and industries.

SITTING IN A GAS LINE WAS HARD ENOUGH!

Conglomerates Are In

Art Buchwald is being reevaluated by the White House to see if he is worthy of staying in Washington. While waiting for a decision, he left behind some of his favorite columns. —Editor.

Almost every day you pick up the newspaper, some company is merging with another company. The average person has no idea what is happening, but it could eventually affect everybody in the United States. What it boils down to is that if you merge an apple company with another apple company, you're violating the antitrust laws.

But if you merge an apple company with a banana company, then you're building a conglomerate, and whether you know it or not, conglomerates are the "in" things to own.

This is how conglomerates work.

Let us say that Dalinsky's Drugstore in Georgetown decides to merge with Fischetti's Meat Market in Bethesda, Md. Since neither Dalinsky nor Fischetti can agree on whose name to use, they call their company the Great American Drug and Meat Co. They issue stock and it is immediately sold out because any company that has the words "great," "American," "drug," and "meat" in it must have potential. Now, with the stock from their company they make a bid to take over the Aetna Curtin Co., offering Aetna stockholders one share of GADAM for every two shares of Aetna.

Once the deal is completed, they go to the bank and borrow $500,000 on the Aetna Curtin Co., to buy the Markay Life Insurance Co.

Then, using the money in the Markay Life Insurance Co., they make a bid on the Mary Smith Pie and Bakery Co., offering one and a half shares of Markay for one and two-thirds shares of Mary Smith.

It turns out that Mary Smith Pie and Bakery has a $3 million surplus cash flow, so Dalinsky and Fischetti use this cash flow to buy the Carey Winston Life Preserver Co., which, in spite of its name, specializes in the building of Nike missiles.

Public Can But Guess

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — In the season of speculation that goes before any presidential campaign, the politicians and candidates frequently while away some time by guessing who the other party is going to nominate for the White House.

That game is on for 1980, with Republican suggestions that the GOP should be preparing for a contest next year in which Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, not President Carter, will lead the Democratic ticket.

It is a rather pointless process, since before any Republican can really start campaigning against Kennedy, or Carter, he is going to have to defeat at least eight other Republicans to win the nomination.

Among the Republican candidates, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas has taken the lead in urging that his party prepare for a contest against Kennedy, not Carter.

"I think we are addressing the wrong target," he says. "My view is that Sen. Kennedy will be the Democratic nominee. We ought to be addressing his philosophy and approach to government."

Former U.N. Ambassador George Bush also suggests the Democrats may field a Kennedy ticket, and says that if he can get the GOP nomination, he would welcome the challenge.

Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. says Carter should renounce candidacy for a second term and devote all his attention to governing, not politics. Should Carter take that unsolicited advice, which he won't, it would virtually guarantee a Kennedy nomination next year.

Looking toward the possibility of a Kennedy candidacy, the Republicans already have taken to campaigning against While much is being said in Raleigh over the killing of dogs by policeman, Chief of Police George Clark of Greenville, today called attention to an ordinance forbidding any person from allowing a dog to run loose on Greenville streets.

"We are not anticipating any action which will get the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals after us, but we are going to make a drive against stray dogs on the streets," said Chief Clark.

Chief Clark explained that when a dog is found on the streets, an effort will be made to determine the owner, in which case the owner will be advised and warned against further occurrences.

Section three of chapter five of the ordinances of the city of Greenville, reads as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any person owning a dog to suffer or permit said dog to run at large within the corporate limits of the town of Greenville. Any persons violating this ordinance shall, upon conviction, be fined $10."

THE GALLUP POLL

Sterilization Considered

PRINCETON, N.J. — About half the women in this country in the peak childbearing years of 18 to 29 have already considered or might, at some time in the future, consider undergoing a sterilization operation which would make it impossible for them to conceive.

Among women of all ages, about one-third say they have either considered such an operation or may do so.

A considerably smaller proportion of men — one out of four — has or might consider having a vasectomy performed.

These are key findings from a survey conducted by the Gallup Organization, Inc. for the Association for Voluntary Sterilization, Inc. The purpose of the study was: a) To determine the number of American men and women (18 years and older) who have either considered surgical sterilization or might consider sterilization; b) To determine the extent of knowledge about these operations and attitudes toward them.

Among both men and women, those more apt to have considered sterilization tend to be younger, better educated, from higher-income homes and have children less than 18 years old living at home.

Also of interest is the fact that no significant difference is found in the views of Protestants and Catholics on sterilization operations.

Here is the question asked of women in the survey:

"Have you ever considered or do you think you might in the future consider having your tubes tied, clipped, or sealed so that it would be impossible for you to have a child?"

Here are the findings nationally and by key population groups:

Other Editors Say Unwanted Pets

(The Charlotte Observer)

More than 8,000 dogs and about 10,000 cats were put to death at Charlotte and Mecklenburg animal shelters in the past fiscal year because nobody wanted them. Others roam city streets and county roads, some vicious, some unhealthy. It is more than a nuisance. It involves public health and safety and stirs our humane concern about animals.

One approach to the problems being advocated before the city council and the county commissioners is to reduce the birth rate of unwanted dogs and cats by spaying female animals and neutering male animals adopted from the animal shelters. The proposal also would provide free spaying and neutering clinics for people who can't afford to pay a veterinarian for those services.

The city is studying that proposal and other possible ways to deal with the problem. Assistant City Manager Bob Hopson fears the spaying and neutering idea will be "very costly", but he doesn't know how much it would cost, or how much of current animal control costs it might save over the years.

Mr. Hopson says he knows of dew cities — Los Angeles is one — that provide the spaying and neutering services, but the study will look for examples in cities of Charlotte's size to learn about costs and benefits.

The study will take at least six or eight months. The concerned citizens who pushed for it, and the officials who responded, deserve the public's thanks. The study should suggest alternatives to the continued slaughter of unwanted cats and dogs.

With government contracts from the Carey Winston Life Preserver Co. as collateral, GADAM buys the Washington Green Sox baseball team, which it merges with the Norfolk Warriors, a baseball team that loses money but can come in handy to write off the profits of a TV station that GADAM is bidding on in Winnipeg.

With these companies as a nucleus, Dalinsky and Fischetti decide to make more acquisitions because, as Dalinsky tells a Time magazine reporter who is doing a cover story on him entitled, "The Boy Wonder of Georgetown," "If you stand still, you die."

The next step for GADAM is to go to the First Citizens Bank of Wesley Heights and borrow $20 million against

Flooded Basement Syndrome

By GAIL MICHAELS

A recent survey found that the number one headache for the majority of Americans is not inflation; it's leaky basements.

Phillip and I have been living with this headache for months, but not until several weeks ago did our problem get out of hand. We came back from a trip to my parents, and Phillip started to carry the suitcases down the steps.

He came back up, suitcases still in hand, shaking his head. "I've always dreamed of having an indoor swimming pool," he said. "But I never envisioned it in the basement."

We had to wait four days and four nights for the waters to recede enough so that we could descend and survey the extent of the damage.

It was like owning my own piece of the Okfenokee. Clouds of mosquitoes hovered drunkenly over pools of stagnant water. Scum-covered toys lay beached about the room. The brown grass rug was growing green stuff, and the scent of mildew wafted through the air.

The situation was exacerbated by the fact that we had been using part of the basement as a study, part as a playroom, and part as a storage area. So an extensive salvage operation was required.

Just cleaning out the storage room almost destroyed my health and my marriage. After 10 minutes, I began to feel faint and needed frequent rest periods. I explained that I was overcome by fumes from the wet cardboard.

Phillip was unsympathetic. He complained that my malady was more likely an allergy to hard work.

Naturally, I was hurt by this lack of confidence, but I was hoping that by the end of the day Phillip would regain his equanimity. He did not. After transferring 20 large boxes to the attic, he was as grouchy as ever. He just did not understand my fear of heights.

The next day I was the one who became disgruntled. We decided to tackle the books that day. Unfortunately, the mold had tackled them first. Rather, it had tackled all the ones that cost more than $10.00. In addition to the green coating, all the covers of the hardback books had warped.

But I think the fact that 100 envelopes had sealed themselves was the actual breaking point. Phillip turned to me and "I'm going to have to move this desk upstairs."

Now this desk is a monster that only its creator could love. And Phillip loves it dearly. He built it especially for himself in the style of Early Lumberyard.

As long as it was out of sight, I could put up with it. But the spot to which he wanted to move it was in our tiny dining room. Not only would the desk be an eyesore in there, but I would have to eat with a reading lamp jammed against my head.

Helping to lift this 300 pound accent piece up the stairs, around two corners, and off my toe did nothing to improve my humor. Phillip told me not to be bitter.

"I have a right!" I yelled back. "I won't even carry Meg up these stairs!"

We finally got the dining room rearranged, the humongous brown book shelves dwarfing the other furniture and the musty odor of damp paper everywhere.

"All in all, I'd say that this has been a religious experience," I sighed.

Phillip was busily dusting his books and the sacred bull's head that serves as his paperweight. "How's that?" he asked.

"Because now I know how Mrs. Noah must have felt when she had to share her ark with a white elephant."

MEANING OF PRAYER

What is prayer?
Sometimes it has been defined as talking with God. But prayer involves repentance, confession, and above all, action as the result of the process. Someone has said that the best prayer is what a person does when he or she is not praying. Our Lord spoke with contempt of the people who pray continually and believe that they will be heard simply because of their much speaking.

Prayer and action go together. A life full of action which does not have prayer as the source of its power has very little power at best, and what it has is destined not to last. On the other hand, a life that is full of prayer yet impotent or weak regarding good works, is a life made up of little more than good intentions.

To be valid and effective, prayer must eventuate in righteous acts and in love for one's fellow man. As Jesus said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God ... and thy neighbor."

Reasons For Not Wanting To Be Sterilized

The principal reasons among both sexes for not having considered sterilization are religious or moral considerations, the desire not to undergo "unnecessary" surgery and the irreversibility of the operation.

Here is the question asked of those who have not considered sterilization and the national findings:

"Here are some reasons people sometimes give for not wanting to become sterilized. Would you tell me which of these, if any, apply to you personally?"

How The Survey Was Conducted

To insure confidentiality, each survey respondent in a regular Gallup survey was handed a special questionnaire dealing with sterilization. The respondent completed the questionnaire, put it in an envelope, sealed the envelope and returned it to the interviewer.

The results reported today are based on interviews with 1,291 men and women, 18 and older, conducted March 23-26 in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation.

Pres. Carter Embarking Tonight On Trip Down The Mississippi

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, seeking some solitude and relaxation amid a floating campaign for his energy program, embarks tonight on a seven-day trip down the Mississippi River on an old-fashioned sternwheeler.

He is flying to St. Paul, Minn., in the late afternoon to begin his week-long adventure aboard the Delta Queen, plying the upper reaches of the river along the Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Missouri shores to St. Louis.

Before boarding the 53-year-old steamboat, he will attend an energy briefing this evening in St. Paul, the first of several energy-related appearances he has planned along the river.

The president, who in the last year has taken advantage of some exotic forms of transportation — a raft on a wilderness river, a train through the Egyptian countryside — will be able to take advantage of what is advertised as "the pampered, good life." It is costing him about $1,800, White House officials said.

Brochures listing the Delta Queen's features note its "sumptuous dining, exquisite cuisine." Should Carter, his wife and daughter choose, they can sample "riverboat ramblin'" at its liveliest "till the wee hours of the morning."

Not to be overlooked, either, are the "burnished brass railings and trim ... rich mahogany ... ornate stained glass windows ... floors of rare Siamese iron-bark."

"She preserves in grand style the romance and pageantry of a bygone era," the boat's owners advertise. Indeed, she is listed in the Interior Department's National Register of Historic Places.

The boat's diversions include jogging on deck, checkers, cards and kite flying.

Carter will go ashore at least four times, stopping in Prairie du Chien, Wis.; Davenport and Burlington, Iowa; and Hannibal, Mo., for a town meeting, a picnic, a radio call-in show and a factory tour to study its energy conservation program.

With two stops in Iowa, the trip is likely to carry some political overtones. Iowa, which holds its caucus to begin choosing Democratic Party convention delegates in January, played a key role in launching Carter's successful 1976 campaign.

White House press secretary Jody Powell acknowledged the campaign aspects of the trip, but said that the campaign would be to win public support for the president's energy program.

In between, he said, the president plans to relax. Slowly, for that matter, because the boat's top speed is 10 miles an hour.

Carter has had little time to relax this summer — a period when he has in the past spent time camping or living by a light schedule at Camp David, Md.

As always, they are saying now that they will conduct positive campaigns and won't turn on other Republicans. But as always, they are going to have to get tougher on their GOP rivals as they go into the primary election season. To prove himself the best man, every one of them is going to have to try to show that the other entries aren't as good as he is.

Furthermore, given Ronald Reagan's early lead, any Republican who wants the nomination is going to have to climb past the former California governor. That will be a full-time campaign task, and he'll have to worry about Kennedy or Carter later.

A liberal Republican organization argues that the way to get ready for Kennedy is to tailor the GOP ticket to appeal to liberals as well as conservatives. The Ripon Society says that among the announced candidates, Baker, Bush or Illinois Rep. John B. Anderson might have the kind of appeal that would head off Kennedy next fall.

While the Republicans guess about Kennedy and Carter, the president has done some guessing of his own about the GOP ticket. He has been quoted as saying that Reagan is the likely nominee, and that Baker would be a better candidate.

He also says that he can withstand any Democratic challenger, including Kennedy, and win a second term.

their stock. With that money Dalinsky and Fischetti buy the Second Citizens Bank of Culpepper and then use the stock to purchase the First Citizens Bank of Wesley Heights.

From there it is only a matter of time before GADAM starts a mutual fund, a fried chicken franchise company, a Puerto Rican rum plant, and a senior citizens' apartment complex in Fairbanks, Alaska.

In less than three years Dalinsky, who put up $30, and Fischetti, who put up $25, control $3 billion worth of businesses and each is worth $50 million on paper. The only danger is that if either Dalinsky's Drugstore or Fischetti's Meat Market loses the lease on its store, the whole conglomerate pyramid could fall down. When you get right down to it, that's the only part of their business that Dalinsky and Fischetti understand.

PLO Today Key Factor In Mideast

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization has become a dominant factor in Mideast politics, and Andrew Young's downshift shows that it affects U.S. politics, too.

"Someday, (President Jimmy) Carter will have to meet and talk with (PLO chief) Yasser Arafat," a PLO spokesman said. "The Palestinian revolution has become an undeniable fact in the Middle East and has been making headway in its efforts to win the American public opinion to its rightful cause."

The Palestinians are working toward a dialogue with the United States and western European powers. Here are some questions and answers explaining the guerrilla movement, its history, factions, loyalties and aspirations.

Q. Are the Palestinian guerrilla groups really united under the PLO?

A. They all are committed to the Palestinian National Charter, which calls for the dissolution of the state of Israel and its replacement with a "secular, democratic Palestinian state" in which Moslems, Christians and Jews would co-exist. Otherwise, the eight guerrilla groups in the PLO are not united.

Q. Why this disunity?

A. Almost every guerrilla group is aligned with an Arab government, usually a different one. Because the governments are frequently at odds with one another, the guerrillas often cannot agree.

Q. What are the main "external forces" dominating the various factions of the PLO?

A. Al Fatah, the biggest group in the PLO, is led by Yasser Arafat and is under Saudi Arabian influence. Nayef Hawatme's Democratic Front For The Liberation of Palestine, the second largest, is oriented toward Moscow. Syria controls Saiga and has close affiliations with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, led by Ahmed Jibril. Dr. George Habash's Popular Front For the Liberation of Palestine, Marxist and hardline, has been aligned with Libya and Algeria. Libya also controls the Popular Struggle Front, headed by Samir Ghosheh. Iraq finances The Palestine Liberation Front led by Abup Abbas and The Arab Liberation Front led by Abel Wahab Al-Kayyali.

Q. Where are these guerrilla groups located?

A. All of them are based

Pollster Sees Religion In A 'Holding Pattern'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Religion seems to be in a "holding pattern" in the United States as the nation heads into a "period of severe dislocations in society," according to a new publication.

In fact, the 1980's "may not be a very pleasant decade in which to live," writes Pollster George Gallup Jr., summing up an array of findings in a 105-page report, "Religion in America, 1979-80."

"All signs point to the fact that the United States is suffering a moral crisis of the first dimension."

Among the findings from the surveys:

—Street crime has reached "frightening proportions," with one in four Americans reporting they've been mugged, robbed, assaulted or had their homes broken into over a 12-month period.

—Hundreds of school teachers are physically attacked each month, and also students; a youth survey found one teenager in five is fearful of bodily injury in school hours.

—Alcohol abuse and drug dependence among youth is "reaching epidemic proportions" and cheating in schools and colleges appears widespread. Six in 10 teen-agers admit cheating on exams.

—Sixty-one percent of Americans think businessmen's honesty and ethical standards have declined, and the public is "suspicious and distrustful of many institutions in our society."

However, among 10 major institutions, more people — 65 percent of them — have confidence in the churches or organized religion than any of the other institutions, such as schools, television, newspapers, the military, the U.S. Congress or Supreme Court. Fewer trust them.

On the surface, Americans appear quite religious — 94 percent believe in God; 89 percent pray; 78 percent are religiously affiliated; 41 percent are in church on a typical weekend — about 90 million people.

The evidence is "that many parents and children alike are 'spiritual illiterates,'" he adds, and give only the vaguest answers when asked about central tenets of their faith.

"A key finding is that large percentages of Americans — both inside and outside the churches — criticize churches for losing their spiritual character."

Oddly, the "unchurched" Americans overwhelmingly remain believers, a first-of-its-kind study found. It says they didn't lose their faith in leaving the church.

Also, teen-agers remain "highly religious although at the same time they are turned off by organized religion," Gallup reports. "They are not self-centered...but rather show great interest in entering the 'helping' professions...they are not looking for a free ride."

In the United States, he notes, "adults of all ages are flirting with a wide variety of movements and activities in the effort to 'feel fulfilled,'" including:

Transactional analysis, zen, sensitivity sessions, pyramid power, pendulum power, color psychology, astrology, tarot cards, organic food, biorhythms, auras, speaking to plants, psychic surgery, astral projection, stroking, the human poietal movement, alcohol, self-assertiveness, marijuana, cocaine and psychic energizers.

OUR DOCTRINAL STANDARDS—Our first and final rule for all doctrine, faith and practice is God's Holy Word, the Bible. We believe the Bible is the written Word of God, without error in the original manuscripts, and of infallible and divine authority in all matters of faith and practice. Therefore, all of our teaching and preaching is from the Bible.

OUR CHURCH'S VISION—All of our teaching and preaching is centered in the Bible. We believe God's Word provides the answers to today's situation, just as it did 2000 years ago. Just as man breaking God's laws disrupts the ecological balance, so man breaking God's spiritual laws upsets man's relationship with other men and God. Submission to God's Word, the Bible, is the key to resolving these problems.

THE DEVELOPMENT

The attractive sign on the highway says "Glenview Estates" or something like that. But to folks in the older part of town it is just "the development."

And to the folks who live here it is home!

Before the builder completed his development a group of the neighbors got together and built a church here. It's a small church, and it took a lot of financial help from denominational headquarters to build . . . but it's here!

And now that the developer has left, our little church has become The Developer. It is bringing to life in Glenview Estates (or something like that) essential ingredients that architects, builders and landscapers cannot provide . . . the Faith around which to build a home . . . the Truth by which to raise a family.

In or near every development there is a real Developer. Thank God! And thank also the earnest people who establish, attend, support and serve our churches!

Back Home, Griffin Bell Says Carter Still Has 'Good Chance'

ATLANTA (AP) — Griffin Bell, back home after more than 30 months as U.S. attorney general, says his old boss, Jimmy Carter, has an "excellent" chance of winning re-election as president, despite the furor in the black community over the resignation of U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young.

"I think black people are very intelligent and Andrew Young is very loyal to the president and that the black community will understand that Ambassador Young thought he should resign and that he's still the president's friend," Bell said Thursday.

Young "has, I am sure, felt the same way that many of us do — that we only have one president and we need to back the president," Bell told reporters as he stepped off the flight home.

Bell, who will return to a private law practice here after a two-week vacation off the Georgia Coast and several days in the mountains, said he will continue to advise Carter on legal matters.

"I told him that any time he needs a lawyer to help with some problem, I'll be glad to help him," said Bell, a close friend of the president. In addition to his duties at the law firm of King and Spalding, Bell will be advising the city of Atlanta on how to combat its rising crime rate.

Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson told a broadcast audience Thursday night that Bell had agreed to "serve as my special adviser on crime," offering "this city the benefit of his considerable, profound expertise in the area of law enforcement."

Atlanta already has recorded more homicides this year than during all of 1978, and national news reports of the city's crime problems are embarrassing officials of this convention-conscious city.

The former attorney general claimed his right to silence as a private citizen when asked whether he planned to reapply for membership in the all-white Atlanta clubs from which he resigned after the issue was raised during his confirmation hearings.

"That would be my business," Bell said Thursday. "I am a private citizen and have been since 11:20 this morning."

Bell said he thinks Carter "has made remarkable achievements" as president and that "the public will see he's done a good job" within six months, as some of his more difficult projects reach fruition.

As for his own accomplishments in office, Bell said, "There's nothing undone. I think we got it all done."

Bell also noted that not all of his comments were published earlier this week when he was quoted as saying Carter had "trivialized the White House."

"What I said was if a Cabinet officer were to ask the president to call 40 congressmen to help him with some jackleg bill and the president were to do that, then the president would be wasting his time. And no Cabinet officer ought to do that. If you can't get your own legislation through, you ought to resign from the Cabinet."

Pot Plane Role Is Charged Two

GREENEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Authorities say two of three men believed aboard a four-engine surplus Air Force plane that landed with nine tons of marijuana have been charged with possession of the weed.

Detective Charles Hinkle said a charge of possession with intent to sell was filed Thursday afternoon against William P. Wright Jr., 33, of Chicago, whom investigators believe was the pilot of the DC6.

Hinkle said a second man, Jackson T. Roach Jr., 32, of Beaufort, N.C., was charged with simple possession of marijuana, a misdemeanor. A third man that investigators believe was aboard the plane, William D. Farris, 30, of Atlanta, was being held for questioning, Hinkle said.

The plane was seen landing without its lights about 2:30 a.m. Wednesday at the Greenville municipal airport. A tanker truck filled with 2,400 gallons of aviation fuel and seen at the airport was found several hours later abandoned about eight miles from Greenville.

The federal Drug Enforcement Administration said the nine tons of marijuana with an estimated value of $6 million was the second largest haul ever seized in Tennessee. Except for a small amount taken as evidence, the marijuana was taken to a rock quarry and burned late Wednesday.

Hinkle said Wright had $1,051 in U.S. money and about $42 in Jamaican currency on him when he and the two other men were picked up by police near the airport shortly after the plane landed. Some Jamaican money was found on the plane, investigators said.

Officials quoted records as indicating that Wright had been arrested once before in Florida on a charge of having marijuana residue aboard an aircraft.

Urges Customs Act On Tobacco Imports

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state farm leader has urged the U.S. Customs Service to take action designed to halt the importation of good-quality tobacco under the classification of scrap tobacco.

John W. Sledge, president of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation, asked the federal agency to change its definition of scrap tobacco.

Sledge said the present definition enables importers to avoid higher tariff that is supposed to be collected on better-quality leaf. The difference is 16.1 cents per pound for scrap leaf and 45 cents for other tobacco, Sledge said.

He pointed out that imports of scrap leaf had increased from 37.9 million pounds in 1976 to 61.8 million pounds in 1978 — an increase of 63 percent. In the same period, imports of better-quality tobacco decreased by 62.5 percent.

The situation, he said, has resulted in "a serious economic impact upon producers of domestic flue-cured tobacco in that it poses grossly unfair and unnecessary competition. It is also depriving the federal government of tax money it should be collecting."

Sledge contended the situation also has resulted in a buildup in recent years of downstalk tobacco in the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp., a grower-owned cooperative.

A Stabilization spokesman said Thursday the co-op had bought 19.1 million pounds of tobacco this season, or 8.55 percent of the 223.2 million pounds sold. In the same number of sales days last year, Stabilization bought 9.4 million pounds, 3.86 percent of 243.5 million pounds sold.

Growing Pains Concern Hawaii On Celebration

By JUNE WATANABE
Associated Press Writer
HONOLULU (AP) — People wept for joy and danced in the streets when President Dwight Eisenhower signed a piece of paper on March 18, 1959, and made Hawaii the 50th state.

Hawaii officially joined the Union on Aug. 21, 1959, and the third Friday in August since has been a day of celebration.

Today is this year's official Admissions Day holiday, but it's unlikely there will be any dancing in the streets to celebrate Hawaii's 20th anniversary as a state.

Statehood plunked the island paradise into a simmering caldron of social and physical change, with results still bubbling to the surface two decades after the heat was turned up.

"The 45 percent increase in resident population during the last 20 years is probably the key to the most important changes that have occurred since statehood," said Andrew Lind, a retired University of Hawaii sociology professor.

"Most of the persons in the giant increase are relative newcomers not acquainted with island cultures and points of view."

Add to this the throngs of tourists flocking to the islands every year and the result is tension, the "stress of numbers," Lind says.

Consider that in the 20 years of statehood:

—The population has grown from 622,000 to more than 900,000, with between 300,000 and 600,000 more expected by the year 2000.

—The annual tourist count has soared from 243,000 to about 4 million, with tourism expenditures of more than $2.2 billion annually, making it the state's No. 1 industry.

—The number of motor vehicles has increased from 217,000 to 580,000, leading to congestion on the chief island of Oahu of the type once confined to mainland big cities. Bitter debate surrounds a possible solution, a mass transit system as the county wants or another big freeway as the state proposes.

—State spending has increased tenfold to more than $5 billion this year, and federal spending from $447 million to $1.4 billion.

"In 1959, we had no county charters, no containerization, little urban sprawl, no buildings higher than 14 stories, no Kaanapali or Princeville or Wailea (resort communities), no 'Hawaii Five-O,' little concern for our water supply, no satellite television and no jumbo jets," Gov. George Ariyoshi said in his state-of-the-state speech this year.

Today, Hawaii has them all. In a place sometimes still glorified as paradise, police and residents know it is only a foolish person who ventures into certain sections of Oahu — day or night.

Honolulu police say one murder is reported every six days, one rape every two days, and five robberies, two assaults, 51 burglaries, 19 car thefts and 114 other thefts every day.

A building boom followed the granting of statehood. There were 166,000 housing units in 1960, with single-family units averaging $21,600 in price. Today, there are more than 281,000 homes, with the average cost of a single-family house on Oahu over $109,000 in 1978.

"In the '60s, economic growth was a major goal," said planning director Hideto Kono. "We were growing like mad and it was good."

"But we have now reached the point where there are other considerations and we have to balance growth with the needs and desires of the people in terms of lifestyles and jobs."

For years, Hawaii was characterized as "the melting pot of the Pacific," where races and cultures blended in harmony and goodwill.

By the time Capt. James Cook found Hawaii in 1778, the islands had been populated for more than 800 years by Polynesians. Cook's exploration opened the islands to the Western world and a chain of events that forever changed them.

New England missionaries arrived in 1820. Immigrant laborers poured in from all over the Pacific Basin starting in 1857. The Hawaiian monarchy was overthrown in 1893. Hawaii was annexed to the United States in 1898 and made a U.S. territory in 1900.

Twenty years ago, the "melting pot" tag was still apropos. Today, there is a growing ethnic awareness — particularly among the disenfranchised native Hawaiians — and growing discord in a community where no single racial group accounts for more than 40 percent of the population, but in which the Caucasians, Japanese and Chinese dominate social, political and business circles.

In addition to the ethnic tensions, there is a feeling of "locals versus outsiders."

Lind said the polarization stems from "the sudden intrusion into the islands of those who hold a great expectation of welcome, but instead are greeted with apathy or hostility by residents reacting to the stress of numbers."

Lind says he sees the situation as a natural outgrowth of societal pressures:

"It seems to me that it is a somewhat deserving development that is partly a consequence of the sudden disruption of the old order of life."

Hang Glider 'Red-Taped'

KILL DEVIL HILLS, N.C. (AP) — The problems Jack Peterson encountered in landing his 145-pound motorized hang glider were more acute than most of those he had during his 38-day transcontinental flight.

The problems were not of an aviation nature — poor landing conditions or engine trouble. Officialdom simply signaled for him to go elsewhere when he tried to set down in the shadow of the Wright Brothers national memorial Thursday.

He had chosen the site to make his own contribution much in the same way as Orville Wright had done in the first manned flight at Kitty Hawk 76 years ago.

When Peterson, completing the final leg of the journey which began in Monterey, Calif., tried to land, National Park Service and local police officials waved him away.

They said he did not have the necessary permission from the Federal Aviation Administration to land. But after circling the area for a short time, he was directed to a private landing spot.

"It was such a beautiful wide open area," Peterson said of the landing spot. "The local police here had all the crowd on the ground under control. The wind was very strong, so I basically hovered there and came down very slowly and just settled right into the sand.

"I didn't want to come down today because I still had half a tank of gas and I was loving it being up there. This is far more exciting than I had imagined when I first took on the endeavor," he said.

Covering 200 to 300 miles each day, Peterson made 80 stops on his cross-country flight. He said he received enthusiastic receptions all along the route.

He said some parts of the country were not so easy to fly over, particularly the deserts and the high mountains of the Southwest. He said his aircraft was very light and the winds very strong.

"You're really riding the winds whichever way they go," he said. "They pick you up, throw you down and carry you sideways."

Peterson said he's ready to make a similar trip.

"They told me when I first started that I was going to be sick and tired of flying that thing when I got across, and that is not the case at all."

Facing Charge Of Air Piracy

AIR PIRACY CHARGE — This young man seen being led into the FBI office in Miami, Fla., allegedly tried to hijack an Eastern Airlines plane bound for Miami from Guatemala to land in Cuba. He identified himself as Allah Roland Kagan of Holyoke, Mass. to the FBI and was charged with air piracy. (AP Laserphoto)

By KATHY MARTIN
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — When the captain of an Eastern Airlines jet lunged for a knife-toting hijacker, James Westendorf saw a chance to make sure he and his wife got home from their holiday in Guatemala.

"When he grabbed him down low, I grabbed him up high and put a half-nelson on him," Westendorf, 58, said late Thursday. "I knew damn good and well when I had him ... we were going to get to Miami."

Capt. Roy Hansen said crew members had to tell Westendorf to free the hijacker's throat from the wrestling hold.

"Maybe I squeezed him a little too tight," said Westendorf, a resident of Hollywood, Fla., who works at an Eastern maintenance facility here. "I don't think he got what he deserved."

Arraignment for Allah Roland Kagan, 24, of Holyoke, Mass., was set for today. He faced air piracy charges for attempting to divert Eastern Flight 980 to Cuba, the FBI said.

Special Agent Arthur Nehrbass said Kagan, a Navy veteran and former amusement park worker, had been released July 23 from Northampton State Hospital, a mental facility in western Massachusetts. Nehrbass said Kagan denied asking to go to Cuba.

None of the 84 passengers and six crew members aboard the Boeing 727 was injured, airline officials said.

Kagan, a lanky, bearded blond, wearing a red bandanna and black pants too short for his 6-foot frame, attracted attention before the flight left Guatemala City for Miami at 3:55 p.m. EDT Thursday, passengers said.

He was playing loud, "spacey electronic music" on a portable radio-cassette player in the departure area, said Gary Shapiro, 25, of Athens, Ga.

The pilot said he was told shortly after takeoff that a passenger claiming to have a bomb in a cassette player was demanding to go to Cuba.

Pioneers Turn To 'Gasohol'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Americans may complain endlessly about the cost of gasoline, but the owner of a western North Carolina oil company says some are doing their best to see that OPEC gets as few of their dollars as possible.

They, like many others, are turning to gasohol. And that, says Harold Wilson, a McDowell County service station operator and customer of the oil company, is good for the farmers.

Wilson said his customers have told him "they'd rather give their money to farmers than to foreign oil companies." He said if distilleries were built in the state, gasohol could be sold for the same price as unleaded gasoline.

Gasohol now costs motorists 4 to 6 cents more than unleaded gasoline. This is because 200-proof alcohol costs twice as much as gasoline on the commodity market and "it fluctuates daily," says Jerry Arnold, owner of the Tri-County Oil Co. in Spruce Pine.

So far, a Black Mountain car wash has started selling the alcohol-unleaded gasoline mixture, and a convenience store started selling gasohol last week.

Arnold, who is urging more dealers and motorists to buy the product, says he wants to be the first on the gasohol bandwagon.

"The nation is going to be needing an alternative fuel and alcohol is a U.S. product," Arnold said. He said he sees distributing gasohol as "a step toward independence from foreign oil."

Wilson, savoring the increased sales from his six-day-old gasohol business, couldn't agree more.

"We think it's going to be the thing of the future," Wilson said.

He said he also believes the 10-percent corn alcohol to 90-percent unleaded gasoline mixture is "10 percent we don't have to get from foreign oil companies."

Currently, gasohol is being shipped from Decatur, Ill., which adds to the price. Both Wilson and Arnold would like to see farmers in the Tar Heel State start producing gasohol.

Claims Mother Not In Cemetery

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Maysie Banks was buried in Lincoln Cemetery when she died in 1977 at the age of 71. Now her son says he can't find her remains, and he's suing the cemetery and the mortuary that handled her funeral for $2 million.

Leon Burley, in a suit filed Tuesday in Jackson County Circuit Court, contended that when he visited his mother's grave the next year, he discovered her body had been disinterred and moved and that the headstone belonged to someone else.

Cemetery owner Herman Johnson said Mrs. Banks' body is in its original grave, but declined to disclose its location.

Contact Drills Begin

Members of the East Carolina University football team fire out in blocking drills yesterday during the first day of contact work in fall practice. Coach Pat Dye has expressed pleasure with the way the workouts have gone so far this week. (ECU Photo)

First Contact Work For Pirates Is Pleasing To Coach Pat Dye

The Pirates of East Carolina put on pads for the first time Thursday afternoon for a three-hour session sparked by some crisp hitting.

"We had a whole lot of contact work," said Pirate coach Pat Dye. "We had some good work with the first and second units and I saw a few good things out there."

"I'm really tickled with the way the first offense is operating as a unit. After 12 practices that group hasn't had a fumble, a bad exchange or been offside once."

Dye noted that the offensive line is coming off the ball well and that the backs are running well.

"This is the best conditioned squad of any that we had had come in since I've been here. The tempo in practice has been good. I'm sure that's at least partly due to the cool weather we've had."

"We're still a long way from having a good football team, but we have some time yet to work on it."

While injuries haven't been a severe problem, the Pirates have been hampered at free safety where Thomas McLaurin is hobbling with a pulled hamstring and Wayne Perry is suffering with a knee injury.

The Pirates practice twice Friday and plan a scrimmage for Saturday. They open the season September 1 against Western Carolina.

Percentages Proved Wrong For St. Louis As Dodgers Take Win

By FRANK BROWN

AP Sports Writer

St. Louis Manager Ken Boyer thought the percentages were on his side when the Los Angeles Dodgers were batting in the 15th inning.

Steve Garvey proved him wrong Thursday night.

The game was tied 2-2. Derral Thomas singled with one out and Dave Lopes walked, then both runners advanced on a Bill Russell grounder.

Garvey, a .317 hitter, was the next batter scheduled.

Cardinals hurler George Frazier had first base open, so there was the option of walking Garvey to face Ron Cey — no slouch at .277 — who had homered in the seventh.

This is where the percentages came in. Both Cey and Garvey are right-handed batters, so with the right-handed Frazier pitching, it seemed the Cardinals had the edge.

Beyond that, said Boyer, "Even a strong hitter is going to make an out seven out of 10 times."

Beyond that, said Boyer, "Cey had already put a ball in the cheap seats and he's the home run hitter (23) for the Dodgers."

And even beyond that, said Boyer, "I'm not going to let Frazier lose a ball game on a (bases-loaded) walk."

So Frazier faced Garvey, who drove a first-pitch single up the middle. Two runs scored, Bob Castillo set down the Cardinals in the bottom of the inning and the Dodgers had a 4-2 victory to pull within 1½ games of third-place San Francisco in the National League West.

"The only thing was, I'd been hitting the ball pretty well."

Which is why a lot of managers have gray hair.

In the other NL games, the Chicago Cubs downed the Giants 14-4, the Pittsburgh Pirates nipped the San Diego Padres 5-4 and the New York Mets beat the Atlanta Braves 6-3.

Boyer insisted the decision to pitch to Garvey "didn't beat us, really. We had many chances to win it ourselves."

That proof of that lies in the 12 runners the Cardinals stranded.

St. Louis took a 2-0 lead on an RBI single by Keith Hernandez in the third and a homer by Ted Simmons in the sixth. Then Cey hit his seventh-inning homer, and Los Angeles tied it in the eighth when Lopes walked, stole second and scored on Russell's single.

Cubs 14, Giants 4
Signs of stress are showing among the Giants, who were routed as the Cubs collected 17 hits — 11 of them for extra bases.

Starter Bob Knepper gave up four runs on seven hits, six of them for extra bases, in 31-3 innings. Then Ed Halicki, one of three Giants pitchers in Chicago's eight-run seventh, said "I don't care if I ever pitch another inning for that man again."

Halicki was referring to San Francisco Manager Joe Altobelli, who wouldn't comment on the pitcher's remark.

Halicki claimed he had been misused by his manager since returning from a viral infection which hospitalized him earlier in the season.

Jerry Martin was the hitting star for the Cubs, scoring three times and driving in four runs with a homer, a double and a single.

Pirates 5, Padres 4

Omar Moreno's two-run single keyed the three-run fourth inning that helped Pittsburgh beat San Diego for its sixth consecutive triumph and its 17th in 23 games.

"There's no chance anyone can catch Pittsburgh," marveled Padres Manager Roger Craig. "The Pirates get the key hits and make the key outs. They're making their own luck."

The RBI gave Moreno 54 for the season — 21 more than last year's total.

Pittsburgh reliever Enrique Romo gave up a run on Jay Johnstone's RBI triple in the seventh and had his streak of consecutive scoreless innings snapped at 22-3.

Mets 6, Braves 3

Alex Trevino singled to deliver the tie-breaking run and Joel Youngblood added a two-run double as New York scored five eighth-inning runs to beat Phil Niekro and the Braves.

"We beat their best tonight," said Mets Manager Joe Torre, who poked some friendly fun at the 40-year-old Niekro, 15-16.

"He's older than dirt," said Torre. "He's old enough to be most of my players' father, and he probably will be there 10 more years."

Thirteenth Victory Luck For Sorenson-He Was Bull-Pen Bound

By KEN RAPPOPORT

AP Sports Writer

Lary Sorenson's 13th victory was a lucky one for him — it kept him from going to the bullpen.

That's where Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger had ticketed the right-hander if he had lost Thursday night's game with the Texas Rangers.

"The whole staff was going bad for a while, and if it continued, moving Sorenson to the bullpen probably would have been one of my moves to shake up the staff," said Bamberger after watching Sorenson pitch a 4-1 victory over the Rangers.

But Sorenson was a long distance from bullpen status the way he was pitching against the Rangers.

"One of his problems seems to be losing his concentration with men on base," said Bamberger. "He starts rushing his delivery. He seemed to be doing that in the first inning tonight, but after that he pitched great."

Sorenson's record had dropped to 12-12, and his self-esteem had dropped even further before Thursday night's success.

"I was starting to dread coming out to the park," he said. "I mean, it was getting embarrassing the way people were talking about me. But now I feel a little better."

Catcher Buck Martinez said Sorenson hadn't been challenging hitters in recent starts, possibly because he has allowed 28 home runs.

"He had been pitching too defensively, in my opinion," Martinez said. "It seemed that every time he made a mistake lately somebody would hit it out. He just had to realize that a pitcher of his quality just has to keep the ball down and stay ahead of the hitters and he's going to be successful. I think the home runs were worrying him a little, and he was trying to be too fine."

Red Sox 7, White Sox 5
Bob Watson drove in four runs with his 150th career homer and a single, and AL leader Fred Lynn belted his 35th home run as Boston beat Chicago.

Watson hit a two-run shot, his 11th of the season, to tie the game 4-4 in the fourth inning. In the fifth, he singled home the lead runs. Lynn slammed a solo homer in the second and Butch Hobson hit his 21st of the year in the sixth, giving Boston 17 homers in the last six games.

Royals 4, Orioles 2

Todd Cruz drove in two Kansas City runs with a sacrifice fly and a homer, and Baltimore mistakes led to two more runs as the Royals defeated the Orioles.

The Royals ended a three-game losing streak and pulled to within 4½ games of first-place California in the American League West behind the four-hit pitching of Paul Splittorff, 12-12.

"We're in a slump," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver, whose Orioles have had but 16 hits in their last four games, batting .119 over a 42-inning period. "It's a matter of waiting it out."

Twins 5, Yankees 1
Ken Landreaux singled home one run and scored the other in Minnesota's two-run sixth inning and Geoff Zahn beat New York for the third time this season as the Twins downed the Yankees.

Zahn, 10-3, was tagged for a third-inning home run by Fred

Stanley, the seventh of the utility infielder's seven-year major league career and his first since June 20, 1978. Minnesota relief ace Mike Marshall pitched the ninth.

Graham Fires Solid 65 For Lead Steve Rosenbloom Is Axed By Stepmother

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Although he will continue his globe-trotting activities, newly crowned PGA champion David Graham will concentrate his activities in the United States.

"I will not take the PGA title and run," the slender Australian said. "I will not turn in my playing card. I've lived in this country for eight years now. This is my home. My children are in school here. All my friends are here."

"The best tournaments, the most money, the best players, the best conditions, the best organized tournaments are in this country."

"I now have a 10-year exemption. I will not turn my back on that," Graham said Thursday after a solid, no-bogey, 6-under-par 65 gave him 3-stroke command in the first round of the $400,000 Westchester Classic, a lead that pleased but mildly-surprised Graham.

"I really thought I'd have a little bit of a problem playing this week," said Graham, who had little opportunity to practice in the week since his play-off victory in the PGA at Oakland Hills.

And continued good play is now more important than before to Graham, whose victories on five continents include such varied titles as the Australian Open, the South African PGA, the World Match Play Championship and the World Cup.

"I look at the names on that (PGA) Trophy," he said. "Hogan, Snead, Nicklaus, Player, Hagen. They are great names. I think it is important that the current holder play well, play to the standard that title deserves."

He is in a stretch of some of the best play of his life. He's finished seventh or better in six of his last seven tournaments.

It continued in the first round here.

"I putted very, very well," said Graham, who one-putted nine times, didn't make a bogey and holed three critical, par-saving putts of 8-10 feet which he called "the backbone of the round. If I didn't make them, it would have been a very ordinary round."

As it was, however, he owned a 3-stroke lead over Mac McLendon, a lead that Tom Watson said may be stronger than it looks.

"The greens are very, very bumpy," said Watson, who has taken four titles this year and already owns a single-season money-winning record. "They're getting very hard and dried out. With conditions like that, David's lead may be a lot stronger than a 3-shot lead usually is at this stage of the game."

"Obviously, he's playing very well. He'll be tough to beat. And he's won on this course before. That's another plus factor for him."

Watson, who used a 4-wood second shot and a 12-foot putt for an eagle 3, was tied for third at 69 with Tom Kite, Bob Eastwood, George Burns, Jack Renner, Mark McCumber and Bob Byman.

Defending champion Lee Elder shot a 75 in the mild, breezy weather. U.S. Open title-holder Hale Irwin had a 73 and Masters champ Fuzzy Zoeller 74. Sam Snead, 67, shot a 76.

Axed By Stepmother

By BOB RAST
AP Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a family squabble, Steve Rosenbloom, son of late Los Angeles Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom, has been fired by his stepmother as executive vice president of the National Football League team and replaced by Don Klosterman.

Steve, 34, whose father owned the Rams until he drowned last April 2 in Florida, was ousted Thursday by 42-year-old Georgia Rosenbloom. She took control of the club when her husband left her a 70 percent majority interest in the team upon his death.

Steve inherited just six percent of the team — the same as four other Rosenbloom children — despite his active role with the Rams in recent years and there reportedly has been much tension at the top levels of the team since Mrs. Rosenbloom took over as owner.

Steve, Carroll's son by a former marriage, had been heavily involved in running the team while his father was alive. Klosterman served as vice president and general manager under both owners, but his powers were diluted recently when Dick Steinberg, director of player personnel, was given the major say in Rams' drafting and trade moves.

Friction between Georgia — the NFL's first active woman president and owner — and Steve has been reported for some time, but both recently denied there was any rift.

A source close to the Rams said Steve was upset that Georgia received the voting rights, since, according to the source, "She doesn't know that much about football — not how to run a team, anyway. Yet everytime Steve wants to make a decision, he has to call her for an OK."

The team issued the following statement: "Due to basic differences in philosophies, Georgia Rosenbloom, owner and president of the Los Angeles Rams, has terminated the services of Steve Rosenbloom as vice president in charge of day-to-day operations, a position that Steve has held for a year. Mrs. Rosenbloom has appointed Don Klosterman, eight-year Rams' executive, as vice president and general manager responsible for day-to-day Rams' activities."

"Georgia will continue to administer the entire Rams' organization following the wishes and dictates of her late husband, Carroll Rosenbloom. All of their philosophies and policies will continue as a part of Carroll's legacy."

Kroc Apologizes For 'Tongue Slip'

By DAN TEDRICK
Associated Press Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Padres' owner Ray Kroc, in hot water again with Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, has apologized for "a slip of the tongue," vowing he will not pursue star infielders Graig Nettles and Joe Morgan after all.

Earlier this week, Kroc said he would "go after" the two stars in an effort to upgrade the struggling Padres. But front office officials of the New York Yankees and Cincinnati Reds say Kroc's remarks constitute tampering.

In apologizing for the remarks, Kroc repented, saying he did not mean to tamper. "I'm sorry — there was no such intent," said Kroc, the 79-year-old multimillionaire hamburger king who told The Associated Press earlier this week that he was "willing to spend $5 million to $10 million" to improve his National League baseball team.

"I made a slip of the tongue. I'm going to consider myself ineligible to draft Joe Morgan or Graig Nettles," he said Thursday. "So I'm making a statement now that the San Diego ball club won't draft them if they do become free agents."

Kroc earlier said he would go after the two all-star infielders, Nettles of the Yankees and Morgan of the Reds, "if they become free agents" this fall.

At the time, Kroc vowed: "You bet your boots I'm going after them." He also mentioned Texas Ranger outfielder Al Oliver, saying "we need one more strong man in the outfield with (Dave) Winfield, and that might be Oliver."

But Thursday Kroc said Oliver "didn't come into that, no way."

The statements brought a quick and angry response from Yankee owner George Steinbrenner and Reds' president Dick Wagner.

Kroc said he anticipated hearing from the commissioner on the matter. "I expect to talk to the commissioner later, but there's been no contact yet."

Five years ago, Kuhn reprimanded Kroc for commanding a public address system and apologizing to an opening day crowd for the Padres' poor play.

The Padres, one of the most improved teams in their division last year, are flirting with another last-place finish in the NL West.

Dirty Business

New York Yankees' manager Billy Martin kicks dirt on rookie home plate umpire Dallas Parks in the eighth inning of Thursday night's 5-1 loss to the Minnesota Twins at Yankee Stadium. Martin was upset with Parks' balls and strikes calls during the evening and when Parks tossed him out he responded by kicking dirt on Parks several times. (AP Laserphoto)

Martin Hits At Umps Following Ejection

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees Manager Billy Martin says that major league baseball hurt itself by hiring the minor league umpires who filled in during the regular umpires' early-season work stoppage.

"The sooner we get rid of these scabs the better off baseball will be," an angry Martin said after being ejected from Thursday night's 5-1 loss to Minnesota by Dallas Parks, one of the new umpires.

"These guys are up here for one reason and I know what that reason is," Martin continued. "It's not helping baseball, it's hurting baseball."

The fiery Martin, who had drawn a warning finger from Parks earlier, was ejected in the eighth inning after going out to talk to pitcher Ron Davis. Since there was no activity in the bullpen, it was obvious Parks was waiting for Parks to come out to the mound.

Parks eventually did and Martin, upset about the umpire's ball and strike calls, let him have both verbal barrels. Parks then gave Martin the thumb and Martin gave it back with his right foot, kicking dirt and dust over Parks' shoes and trousers seven times.

"He showed me up so I showed him up," Martin said. "Did you ever see dirt on a scab? It doesn't hurt because the wound's already covered. I don't like scabs, especially when they're bad umpires. He's not here because of his ability — he's here because he backstabbed his fellow umpires. If he wasn't a scab he wouldn't be up here."

Martin was more incensed about being ejected — he insisted he didn't curse — than he was about Parks' calls.

Denver, San Diego AFC West Choices

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer
Only one game separated the top four teams in the final standings of the American Football Conference's Western Division in 1978 — a competitive balance which figures to continue this season.

The Denver Broncos earned their second straight AFC West crown last year, compiling a 10-6 record before being knocked out by Pittsburgh in the first round of the playoffs. San Diego, Seattle and Oakland each wound up with 9-7 records.

The Chargers finished with a flurry, winning seven of their last eight games. Seattle was the surprise of the league, and its record was the best ever for a third-year franchise. Oakland, although torn by dissension, just missed making the playoffs for the first time in seven years. Only rebuilding Kansas City was not a factor in the divisional race. "I really believe the AFC West has returned to its position of being the strongest division in the National Football League," says Bronco Coach Red Miller.

Most experts feel Denver, which relies on a swarming defense, and San Diego, which has an explosive offense, are the top teams to watch in the division in 1979. The Raiders, with a new head coach and some personnel changes, are more of a question mark, but their record over the past decade indicates they can't be taken lightly. The Seahawks also should be a factor again, especially if they improve their defense. Kansas City still is several years away from being a contender. "We will be better overall," says Miller. "But San Diego and Seattle will be better, too, and Oakland is always tough. There will be four teams right in there again, with Kansas City not far behind. "In the past two years, we've established ourselves as a contender. Now we'll have to work our tails off to stay on top." Denver's major weakness a year ago was in the offensive line. An avoidance of injuries and the addition of new faces such as free-agent tackle Dave Studdard and No.1 draft choice Kelvin Clark will help. Few teams strike more fear into opponents than San Diego, who came under the direction of Coach Don Coryell early last season. In their last three games of 1978, the Chargers averaged 41 points and 460 total yards. Coryell's wide-open offensive philosophy was reflected in the club's topping all NFL teams in passing yardage. Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler, after a frustrating 1978 season which saw him throw 30 interceptions, is back and playing well, and talk of a possible trade has diminished.

Seattle's big threat is scrambling, left-handed quarterback Jim Zorn, who completed 248 of 443 passes for 3,283 yards and 15 touchdowns last year. Wide receiver Steve Largent led the AFC with 71 catches for 1,168 yards and eight TDs. Sherman Smith and David Sims are capable running backs.

Second-year Coach Marv Levy feels he has Kansas City on the right track. After a 2-12 season in 1977, Levy's first club went 4-12 and ranked second in the league in rushing yards. The Chiefs will stick with their run-oriented wing-T formation, although there are indications they plan to upgrade the passing attack.

Death Toll In Yacht Race Has Reached 18

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — The death toll in the storm-battered Fastnet yacht race climbed to 18 today with the recovery of another body by a ship off southern England. A coast guard spokesman said the dead man was from a yacht named Lotus that sailed with the international fleet but did not compete in the 605-mile race from the Isle of Wight to Ireland's Fastnet Rock and back to Plymouth. The victim was not identified, and it was not known what happened to the yacht. The Royal Ocean Racing Club said that of the 306 yachts that set sail last Saturday to compete in the race, "12 are still sailing, 82 finished, 189 retired and 23 were sunk or abandoned."

But a spokeswoman for the club said only two yachts, the Grimalkin and the Polar Bear, were known to have sunk, and a third, the Griffin, was believed to have gone down. All three were British.

The fleet was hit Monday night by the gale winds and mountainous seas of a storm that roared down the Irish Sea, a freak occurrence for August. There were more gales Thursday night, but harbor masters along the Cornish coast said fishermen were at sea in search of abandoned yachts for salvage prizes.

Several big boats among the score abandoned by their crews are worth up to $1 million each. London insurance underwriter Denis Mossman estimated the total insurance bill for abandoned yachts at about $11.3 million.

John Hogan, a London yachtsman who brought his boat Animal safely through the storm to Milford Haven, told a reporter there that after retiring from the race he stopped a French trawler claiming an abandoned yacht, the Camargue, for salvage.

Hogan said his crew jumped on the Camargue and cut the trawler's towline, and the trawler steamed away without an argument.

Hogan said his crewmen were very emotional after nearly losing their lives in the storm, "and we figured the trawler was out to make money from the tragedy." He said he would return the Camargue to its owner.

A Milford Haven port official said the trawler's captain lodged a salvage claim with the British Receiver of Wrecks but later accepted an undisclosed sum offered by the Camargue's owner.

Carol Burnett Works Old Magic In Making One Forget She Left

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — As a beginning, it's a wonderful ending:
The screen is filled with the weepy image of Carol Burnett, red-eyed and struggling with her emotions, recounting the good times during her 12-year stint on "The Carol Burnett Show."

"I'm no dummy," she says, "I realize it's time to put it to bed." She launches into the familiar theme, "I'm So Glad We Could Get Together," and you remember that last show 18 months ago, and just when you're feeling a little teary and nostalgic, onto the screen pops a new Carol Burnett, smiling and bouncy.

"So I lied," she says. And you're glad she did.

It's fitting that Miss Burnett's limited four-week "Carol Burnett & Co." on ABC begins with that tape of her last moments on the estimable "Carol Burnett Show," which for 12 years on CBS set the standard for TV variety. This "little summer show" as she calls it, is a fairly whole reprise of her old show, removed from that original series only in time and network.

After a few minutes, you've almost forgotten that she ever left. There's the patented Burnett opener, the audience give-and-take, followed by a sketch featuring the classic office neemeses, Tudball (Tim Conway) and Mrs. Wiggins (Burnett).

Unfortunately, after four weeks, she'll be gone again. In the meantime, Saturday night TV is enhanced by that special Burnett touch of class.

Besides Conway, Burnett brings back Vicki Lawrence, Kenneth Mars and Craig Richard Nelson, with Cheryl Ladd, easy as ever on the eyeballs, as special guest for Saturday's first show.

Throughout, the Burnett troupe manages to use the standard tools of TV variety — some songs, some sketches, some disco — to fashion a first-rate entertainment, one that is definitely above standard.

One of the funniest bits is a segment on "Palimony," the popular practice of suing estranged "friends" as compensation for years spent in cohabitation. In one part, Miss Burnett plays a Michelle Triola Marvin type who's been awarded $11.80 toward the resumption of her singing career. Miss Triola may want to keep Marvin Mitchelson's phone number handy here.

There is the expected Burnett-Ladd routine, in which Miss Burnett bemoans Miss Ladd's gifts from nature, and the also-expected Cheryl Ladd disco number. Of course.

But this is variety, remember, and among that breed, no one could ever touch Carol Burnett. The class of the star, the professionalism of the troupe, the smoothness that comes from a dozen years of working the craft make this little summer show just shine. I'm so glad we could get together.

STUNG — When actor Victor Mature (now 63) overshot the 17th hole at Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., and went into the rough to look for his golf ball last weekend, he met a cloud of angry hornets. Mature was stung 14 times' once on the lip and more than a dozen times on the arms. (AP Laser-photo)

Scholar Proposes A Study Of Elvis' Life

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — On the second anniversary of Elvis Presley's death, a scholar predicts the singer may be among the first rock musicians whose lives will be seriously studied by historians.

"His influence apparently touched people around the world, each person in a peculiar way," Dr. John Bakke of Memphis State University's Theater and Communications Arts Department said Thursday at a seminar.

Bakke said Memphis State would be an ideal location for archives of Presley material for use by scholars.

"The problem for the scholar is, so few people got close to Elvis," the professor said. "We have so few real facts to go on. So much of his life is left blank...There are so many opportunities to read more into Elvis' life than may be there."

The university hosted the city's first major tribute to Presley, who died at Graceland mansion at age 42. The seminars, non-stop film showings and outdoor country-rock concerts drew more than 3,000 Presley fans to the campus.

At one seminar, Judd Phillips, former marketing and promotion executive for Sun Records, described his generation's first reaction to the singer first recorded at Sun by Phillips' brother Sam:

"I could see the mothers and fathers sitting there all sullen up just like they had eaten a green persimmon."

Elsewhere in the city, fans from as far away as Germany and Australia viewed a model of a proposed bronze statue of their idol, attended fan club meetings and swapped memorabilia at motels booked solid for the observance.

Graceland mansion was supposed to be closed all day Thursday, but Vester Presley, the singer's uncle, opened the gates because he "felt so bad about all the people who had come so far."

"I thought, 'Aw, shucks, it ain't going to hurt me. Why not?'"

More than 1,800 persons toured the burial site of Presley, his mother Gladys and father Vernon, who died in June.

Radio and television stations in Memphis scheduled special Presley tributes and Memphis Publishing Co., publisher of The Commercial Appeal and Memphis Press-Scimitar, sold editions of the Aug. 16, 1977, newspapers to benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

Scholarly examinations of Presley's importance to musical history were spiced with trivia at the Memphis State seminars.

Shelby County Mayor Bill Morris, a longtime friend of the singer, said Presley felt British rock star Tom Jones "was invading his territory, his kingdom. So he scheduled his concerts behind Tom Jones at lower prices and zapped them. People figured, 'Why go see him when we can wait and see Elvis?'"

'Flo' Gets A New Series

POLLY HOLIDAY

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For four years, Polly Holiday has been shrieking "Kiss my grits!" every time folks at the TV diner make fun of her social life. Now the actress who portrays "Flo" on CBS' popular "Alice" series is getting a series of her own.

Miss Holiday's new show, to begin later this year, will be called "Flo," focusing on the off-the-job life of a lusty Arizona waitress. Miss Holiday's character has been one of the strengths of "Alice."

A spokesman for Warner Bros. TV, which makes "Alice," said Thursday a new character, played by Diane Ladd, will be introduced into the show later this year. Miss Ladd earned an Academy Award nomination for the part of Flo in "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore," the film from which the TV show was derived.

The bidding:
South West North East
1NT Pass 2NT Pass
3NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Five of ♠.

Every card tells a story, and if South, declarer at three no trump, were a proficient reader, he would have made this contract instead of going down.

With 9 HCP and a reasonably good five-card suit, a strong argument can be advanced for a jump to three no trump with the North hand rather than an invitational two no trump. Not that it mattered, for South had a maximum no trump opening bid, so he went on to game with alacrity.

West led the five of spades. East rose with the king and returned the jack. South refused to cover, believing that he had nothing to gain, so East continued with the ten of spades and the defenders took the first five tricks.

"Hard luck, partner," remarked South. "I couldn't do anything about it. The contract was sound enough and it would have made against any other opening lead, or if spades broke evenly."

Nothing could be further from the truth. Declarer was the beneficiary of a great stroke of luck, but failed to take advantage of it. When the jack of spades was returned, declarer should have donned his thinking cap.

South can see the three and four of spades, so West's five cannot be from a suit longer than five cards. If the suits break 4-4, declarer has nothing to worry about. Therefore, he need concern himself only with 5-3 splits. If East's original holding was K-J-x of spades the contract is doomed. The defenders will have to come to five tricks whether South covers the jack of spades with the queen or plays low.

But what if East's remaining spade is the ten? If it is, the suit can be blocked. Declarer must cover the jack with the queen. West wins the ace and continues spades, but East is forced to win the third round with the ten, and now he has no re-entry to his partner's hand to cash the last two spades.

That is indeed a fortunate lie of the cards for declarer. But since it is the only chance, declarer should have tried it.

'Mystery Woman' At MacDonald Trial

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The nine-year mystery of a woman who is said to have told several people she might have been involved in the slayings of Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald's family may end today when Helena Stoeckley takes the stand. Miss Stoeckley, 27, had been sought as a material witness in the case. Defense attorneys who interviewed her said, however, she was extremely reluctant to testify.

Defense attorneys say she may be the woman the former Green Beret described as one of the four intruders who killed his family at Fort Bragg in 1970. MacDonald is charged with stabbing and bludgeoning to death his wife Colette, 26, and daughters Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2. And a former Fayetteville narcotics detective told reporters Thursday Miss Stoeckley "didn't rule ... out" being the woman involved. "She told me it seemed in her mind she saw this thing happen," said Paul Beasley. But Beasley added, "I've never seen her hurt anybody." Much of the testimony in the five-week-long trial has centered on technical evidence — blood stains, the patterns of wounds and material found in the house.

That continued this week as the defense started its presentation. But it didn't last long.

A bench warrant was issued for Miss Stoeckley, and she was taken into custody by the FBI late Tuesday in South Carolina. She arrived in Raleigh late Wednesday. No testimony was heard Thursday as attorneys for both sides spent the day questioning her.

Her appearance is expected to be the dramatic highlight of the trial, even if she decides not to answer questions while on the stand.

Wednesday, a former neighbor said he saw three people carrying candles heading toward MacDonald's house the night of the slayings. James Milne Jr., who had never come forward at the time, said one was a woman with beautiful long light brown or blond hair.

MacDonald described one of the intruders as a blond-haired woman who carried a candle and chanted, "Acid is groovy. Kill the pigs."

Miss Stoeckley has shoulder-length jet-black hair, but Beasley said she sometimes wore a blond wig.

Miss Stoeckley told several people of being on drugs that night, according to testimony at the Army's hearing on the case and other, published, reports. Several of those people are expected to testify, Segal said.

Miss Stoeckley wouldn't talk with reporters about her interviews with attorneys. Segal declined comment on the specifics of their conversation.

"What she told us will come out in court," he said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Blackburn said he wasn't worried about Miss Stoeckley's appearance, indicating that Miss Stoeckley's memory of the night may be minimal.

The Army dropped its charges against MacDonald in 1970 after an investigative hearing. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in 1975 after a reinvestigation.

Coastal Carolina Poses Tangled Skein Of Waterways, Marshes

By JONATHAN PHILLIPS
The Washington Daily News
WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Pick up a map of a North Carolina coastal area, use a navigation chart, a geological survey topographic map or even a county road map.

You'll see rivers, sounds, bays, creeks, canals, inlets and marshes. Many of these, in turn, have more branches than Adam's family tree.

Many of the marshes appear on the map under the same color or scheme as solid land although they truly are under water. In short, it's not hard to get lost in those winding, watery coastal areas.

Explorers of such areas can literally find themselves up the creek without a paddle.

Tidal rivers such as the Pungo, Pamlico, Alligator, Neuse and New seem especially tricky to boaters as do the ins and outs of sounds such as Pamlico, Albemarle, Currituck, Bogue and Core.

This very problem was emphasized last week in Beaufort County with almost back-to-back reports of missing boating parties.

Washington dentists Neil Trueblood and William Jackson found themselves lost and adrift on the dark waters of the Pungo for seven hours after their battery went dead.

A few days earlier Chocowinity Police Chief Gordon Edwards and two friends suffered a similar ordeal when they ran out of gas in Hyde County waters. The slept through the night and were towed to a gas pump when the Coast Guard discovered them after dawn.

Beaufort County Deputy Sheriff David Ragland said he has answered six calls for lost boaters this summer. Sheriff O.E. "Red" Davis said he "couldn't even guess" how many calls the department receives each summer.

Last year the 5th Coast Guard District — comprised of North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia — received distress calls for 623 vessels. And many calls do not involve the Coast Guard.

On the Pamlico and Pungo rivers most missing boaters are first reported to the Beaufort County Sheriff's Department. Ragland said the problem intensifies during the summer months.

"It gets so hazy out on the water in this weather, it's hard to see. It's not unusual for people to get lost," he said.

The department first checks the calls and then summons the Washington Fire Department, which performs rescue operations throughout the county, or the Coast Guard.

"But the Coast Guard won't

His Pet Cockapoo Is A Licensed Psychologist

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Her hair is a distinguished gray and her dark brown eyes seem sympathetic, but aside from that Snookums doesn't really look like a licensed psychologist. She looks more like a dog.

In fact, she is both. Snookums, a 5-year-old cockapoo who lives in Winston-Salem, has joined a hamster, a lizard, a gerbil and a Greensboro cockapoo in taking advantage of a loophole in a Florida law that abolished any licensing requirements for psychologists aside from a licensing fee.

The dog received her license last month courtesy of John R. Wilson, a Clearwater travel agent. Snookums belongs to Wilson's daughter, Wendy, a licensed psychologist and director of a Winston-Salem halfway house.

Wilson paid $7.50 for Snookums' license and another $7.50 to license Smudge, a male cockapoo who belongs to his daughter's boyfriend, Whitfield Gibson. He also is a psychologist, employed by the North Carolina Division of Corrections in Greensboro.

When Miss Wilson first learned of her dog's new professional status — intended as a birthday surprise from her father — she thought the whole thing was quite strange. Now she has reconsidered.

"She's a great psychologist, really," said Miss Wilson. "She doesn't talk and she doesn't give advice."

"Ideally, we could both go down to Florida and set up practice together," she said, holding up two slips of paper on which both are certified psychologists.

Wilson bought a Florida license for his daughter along with those of Snookums and Smudge. Snookums' license is similar to Miss Wilson's except it reads "Dog psychologist — male."

Snookums is registered as a psychologist treating males while Smudge's certification says his specialty is treating females.

Despite Snookums' office credentials she doesn't do a bad job around the house, according to Miss Wilson. She says Snookums is very patient although more frisky than the average psychologist.

Does Miss Wilson ask Snookums to listen attentively?

"Sure," she said. "I tell her my problems, are you kidding? She's the only one who'll listen."

Problems In Cotton Crop

GERMANTOWN, Tenn. (AP) — Merchant Walker Taylor is looking forward to a small cotton crop next month if he can keep the bugs, the Yankees and the bureaucrats out of his patch.

The grocer planted a 4-by-75-foot cotton patch near his business last May. "I just wanted people to see what cotton looks like when it's growing. Many northerners get transferred into Germantown and have never seen cotton growing."

But when he asked the Department of Agriculture for advice on preventing weevils, he got more than he wanted. A federal agent came by to find out why he had cotton, but no cotton-planting allotment.

Taylor had to promise he didn't plan to borrow money on it before the agent would leave — but his problems weren't over.

Now he's besieged by transplanted Yankees who like to pick the cotton blooms.

"They don't realize when they pick the pretty blooms, we don't get any cotton bolls," he lamented.

In desperation, Taylor put a fence around the patch, which he said should yield about a quarter-bale "in time to give away during the Germantown Festival Sept. 15-16."

"A lot of folks want some to mail to friends up North," he said.

Protest Letter Covered All

LONDON (AP) — The letter's column of the London Evening Standard was full of complaints: about slow industrial production, road lawlessness, the dearth of raincoat-rewaterproofers, and eyesores in the Walthamstow Marshes.

Londoner Henry Root did not wish to be so narrow. He wrote: "I wish to protest most strongly about everything."

Coretta King Says She Plans Support Carter

By WILLIAM E. SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — President Carter got a qualified endorsement from Coretta Scott King as she returned from a black summit meeting on the resignation of United Nations ambassador Andrew Young Thursday.

"Independently, if President Carter is the candidate, if he runs, I will work for him at this stage," the wife of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. said.

Young could do more to help the president keep his black support and win re-election as a private citizen than he could have as United Nations ambassador, she told an airport news conference.

Young, who has said he will campaign for Carter, "understands better than anyone else what the Carter administration has meant for black and poor people or the nations of the world and he is our most articulate spokesperson," she said.

"So I think that because of the respect people have for him it may very well be that Andy's being out there can do more to help him (Carter) again win the election than had he been on the inside."

Young's resignation, triggered by Israeli protests over his secret meeting with the Palestine Liberation Organization's U.N. observer, must not be allowed to create a permanent split between the American black and Jewish communities, she said.

"Blacks and Jews must see themselves as allies in our common struggles and efforts to gain peace," she said.

Mrs. King said she and other black leaders met in New York earlier Thursday and decided to hold another meeting to discuss problems between blacks and Jews.

"Hopefully, that will lead to a meeting between black leaders and Jewish leaders," she said.

Mrs. King said Young's style made it difficult for him to survive at the United Nations.

"All of us who knew him very well had some concern about his being in the very legalistic world of diplomacy," she said. "Andy is at his best when he is free. I support Andy's decision to resign."

But, she said, she did not think it would have been better for Young and the country if he had served in some other post.

"He has been in a pioneering role and that position will not be the same again," she said. "He has had a tremendous impact on our foreign policy."

He has told the world, she said, that the United States cares about human needs, food "instead of bullets."

"America is looked to as the leading nation. They look to us for leadership, because we have a much more humane policy, which Andy has played a very significant role in," she said. "Without Andy, Mr. Carter's message would not have been carried as forcefully. He has made that contribution and it may well be that he has gone as far as he can go at this point."

Mrs. King said Young explained his position fully in a conference telephone call with black leaders Wednesday night. She stressed that he said the decision to resign was his own and President Carter had "urged him to reconsider."

Life Saved By Dog Hero

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — If Martha Sperrier were to say the best neighbor she's ever had was a dog she would in no way be casting aspersions upon the rest of the neighborhood.

Mrs. Sperrier was treated for chest pains at Lexington Hospital Thursday, but her release brought to end a story which for a time in early morning threatened to become one of those all-too-frequent "Woman Dies in Fire" headlines.

But she's safe and sound to day thanks to the awareness of a dog named Rex, who knew something was wrong next door.

The dog, a 3-year-old German Shepherd, crashed through a window of his owner's home at 4 a.m. and raced to the bedroom of his 5-year-old master, Terry Moore, to warn him.

Terry awakened when the dog jumped on his bed but the sleepy youth did not sense the urgency of the warning. He called to his mother, Jennie Moore, that Rex was inside the house.

When Mrs. Moore answered the boy's call she saw a reddish glow inside the house and found smoke in the kitchen. Mrs. Moore, like Rex, knew something was wrong and she feared her home might be on fire.

Then she discovered the fire was burning in the tool shed next to Mrs. Sperrier's home. By that time flames began scorching the corner of her house.

Mrs. Moore called for help from the Lexington Fire Department and another neighbor, David Walters, 17. They awakened Mrs. Sperrier by calling at her window.

Aid To Poor Is Missing Mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — The World Bank says efforts in developing countries should be directed at helping low-income people where they are rather than modernizing to benefit wealthier classes.

"Instead of bulldozing slums, banning street vendors and traditional modes of transport from public places, and building high-cost public housing, subways and limited-access highways... policies should be designed... to meet the needs of the majority at low cost," the organization said Wednesday in an annual report. It warned that developing nations face unprecedented problems in unemployment and urban crowding.

The 1966 Graduating Class of C. M. Eppes High School will meet Saturday at 7 p.m. at the home of Barbara Wilson Green.

All class members are asked to be present.

Rural Crime Is Sharply Rising

By PAMELA J. HUEY
CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — The trusting farmer who leaves his doors and gates unlocked is an easy target for thieves and, with today's high meat prices, rustlers in particular.

Nationwide, FBI statistics show the rate of rural crime has tripled in the last decade. In Illinois, for example, rural crime in 1977 accounted for a total monetary loss of $1.5 million to farmers and other country residents — a 35 percent increase over 1976.

The 1977 figures are the latest available but Paul Gilligan, an assistant professor at University of Illinois-based Illinois Police Institute who specializes in rural crime, expects that 1978 figures released this summer will show the upward trend continuing. Gilligan is particularly concerned with increasing numbers of livestock thefts — a direct result of soaring prices for live cattle and hogs.

Gilligan said 12 cents out of every dollar spent on meat pays for crime at some point of the sale process. The average individual loss in Illinois is 10 to 15 head of livestock, he said.

Gilligan has these suggestions livestock producers to protect themselves against the modern-day cattle rustlers:

—Avoid housing livestock on uninhabited farmsteads. Locate them whenever possible near occupied farm residences.

—Make it a matter of regular business to count livestock and keep accurate inventory records. Investigation efforts, Gilligan said, are continually hampered by reported losses "sometime during a 10 or 15 day" time period and for "eight to 10 head."

—Take steps to identify animals through hot branding, ear tags or tattoos.

—Restrict access to livestock by keeping seldom used farm lanes secured.

—Secure loading chutes when not in use. Incident after incident when investigated, Gilligan said, has revealed the farmer's own ramps or chutes were used for loading the animals during theft.

—Watch out for neighbor's property and seek his efforts to watch yours.

—Report suspected losses as soon as possible.

Some of the suggestions also work well to prevent theft of other farm property, including machinery, chemicals, grain and vehicles, Gilligan said.

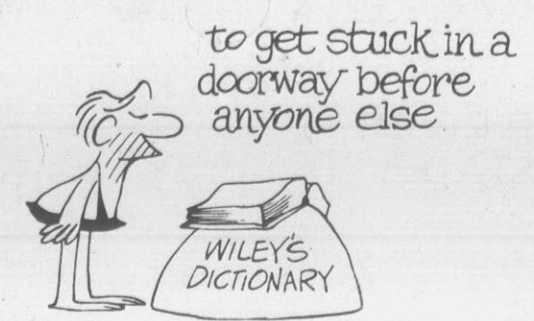

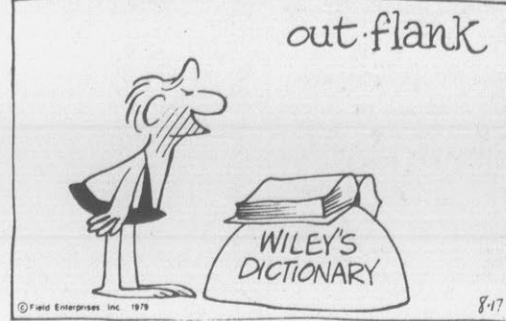

Farmers also have an opportunity to participate in a nationwide rural crime prevention program that involves tagging or marking property with special identification numbers to provide proof of legal ownership.

"One of the strongest aspects of the program is its deterrent effect," said Larry Heisner, Illinois coordinator of the program. "You never know how many people have started into a machine shed and turned away after seeing the (property identification) decal."
