Black History Month Symposium raises awareness

An event to discuss issues and concerns

ADELINE TRENTO
STAFF WRITER

On Saturday, Feb. 24, Student Union Cultural Awareness hosted a conference on campus in honor of Black History Month.

The Black History Month Symposium held in the Mendenhall Student Center brought the community together to address issues that affect minority students. "We wanted to have an event that would really serve and bring awareness to the entire campus community," said Levy Brown, associate director of the Student Activities Center. "We wanted to do something that would not only bring students together, but the city of Greenville as well."

The symposium gave students a chance to interact with each other and attend workshops on a variety of topics.

The workshops informed students about the importance of higher education, financial management and involvement in the community.

Attendants also had the opportunity to talk about personal issues that affect men and women differently.

During the first session of the conference, students were separated into same sex groups and each group discussed issues concerning masculinity, relationships, feminism and self-esteem.

"We tried to take a broad spectrum of issues facing minorities and address those issues," said Michael Caple, Cultural Awareness chair. "We wanted to give people the knowledge to overcome challenges they may face in the future."

At the symposium, students were able to listen to many informative speakers as well.

Omar Tyree, a best-selling author and the 2001 NAACP image award recipient, delivered the keynote speech at the event.

Tyree spoke to students about achieving their dreams and the importance of education. He urged students to make the most of their time at ECU and become successful, well-educated people.

"It is time for dreams to stop being dreams and start becoming reality," said Tyree.

Many students attended the symposium and most felt that they learned something from the different activities.

"I thought the speech by Omar Tyree was very uplifting and encouraging," said Krystina Belle, sophomore clinical laboratory science major. "I learned a lot from the speaker and other aspects of this conference."

Caple believes that this was a very important event for students to attend as part of Black History Month.

He said that this symposium will help empower minority students and encourage them to become leaders.

"As students, we can't just look at things the way they are presented to us, we have to dig deep and find the real meanings," Caple said. "With this conference we tried to address serious issues and get students to really think about these things. We hope that this conference will educate people and encourage them to make a positive change in themselves and in the community."

Throughout Black History Month, Student Union Cultural Awareness has sponsored many other events on campus including movies, plays and concerts.

Caple said that there has been a big turnout at many of the events and most students had positive reactions to the different activities.

The Black History Month Symposium was not an exception as more than 70 people came out to attend the workshops and listen to the speakers.

"I believe it is really important to have very strong programs to focus on empowerment and leadership for students of color, as well as all students who want to hear our message," Brown said. "We wanted to have programs for Black History Month that would reach the whole student body and I think we achieved that goal."

Free health screenings are available on campus

Wellness Wednesdays attract the ECU community

ALYCIA WENDT
STAFF WRITER

A testing center for multiple health issues is more local than the ECU community may think. Wellness Wednesdays offers different free health screenings to students and faculty.

Wellness Wednesdays was created in 2005 by the Campus Wellness team, which is part of the Department of Campus Recreation and Wellness. Their intent for this program was to let students, staff and faculty get involved with the wellness services and educational initiatives programs.

"Wellness Wednesdays have been very successful in reaching people who are on different locations on campus. We have helped people recognize their risk factors for heart disease, cancer and other health issues," said Director of Campus Wellness, Karen Warren.

Monthly screenings for different health issues are scheduled at various locations across campus.

Some of the past screenings have included folic acid awareness, rapid HIV testing and blood pressure and cholesterol screenings.

The next free screening will be held on March 21 from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. at the Student Recreation Center, for diabetes.

"Our main goal is to go out and reach the ECU community, especially those who may not utilize the Recreation Center on a regular basis. This initiative shows them the services we can offer, and will hopefully encourage them to utilize our services," said Assistant Director of Campus Wellness Tywana Jeffries.

The Campus Wellness Center offers many other services besides Wellness Wednesdays. Health educators and nutritionists are available to answer questions about health related matters, plans to improve one's health, alcohol and drugs, stress and much more.

The Campus Wellness Center wants to support and encourage a balanced and healthy lifestyle for the community of ECU.

"ECU has gotten a bad reputation for its populations of students that have STDS and AIDS. By offering free tests, it shows that they are trying to switch the reputation and that they really care about the health and safety of everyone that attends ECU," said freshmen Megan Roome.

The center is operated by the Campus Wellness Education Leaders. This is a group of students who are trained to give accurate health information to students, faculty and staff.

For more information about Wellness Wednesdays, visit the Campus Wellness Web site at ecu.edu/cs-studentlife/crw/programs/campuswellness, or stop by the office on the second floor of the Student Recreation Center.

University proposes plus/minus grading scale

SGA seeks further information about the scale

KIMBERLY BELLAMY
SENIOR WRITER

Representatives from one of the faculty-senate committees came to get feedback from congress members about implementing a plus/minus grading scale.

Martin Taggart, associate professor, and Wendy Sharer, assistant professor, were the two representatives who serve on the committee, that came to give congress further information about the possible changes.

The committee has been working on getting the new grading policy approved since fall 2005, according to Sharer.

The proposal has been sent to various areas for approval but it still has to be signed by the chancellor before it goes into effect.

If approved by the chancellor, the plus/minus scale would go into effect as early as summer 2008.

Under the new system, students would now receive an A plus or A minus instead of an A regardless of the number grade they earned.

Sharer and Taggart made efforts to explain to congress that the new grading scale would not be implemented to harm anyone's GPA but it would ultimately have a positive or a negative effect on it.

"What I've learned is there is quite a difference from an 80 and an 89 on a final project," Taggart said when explaining the quality of work that was turned in to receive a certain grade.

A congress representative expressed that it would appear that a student's performance is getting worse when they start to receive grades with minuses when they haven't in the past.

The committee representatives attempted to clarify that the grading scale wouldn't change the grades as a whole that significantly.

"It's still the same low and high points. We're not changing the way we assess students," Sharer said.

The new grading policy would also establish new rules for the qualifications to apply for a grade replacement.

The new grade replacement policy would apply to grades received that are a F, D minus, D plus or C minus according to Sharer.

Sharer said that part of the decision to switch to this type of system was based on the university inspiring to be like the peer schools within the UNC system who have this scale and from studies that show which grading scale is most widely used.

Congress representatives also expressed opposition to the reason why the university moved towards this scale.

"It's hard enough as is when we're going up against others from one of our peer institutions such as UNC Chapel Hill, when we're going for a job after we graduate," said Ashley Yopp, congress representative.

While the committee representatives were trying to outline the positive points of going to a plus/minus grading scale, the Student Welfare Committee of congress had already typed up a resolution against the change to be voted on that night.

The congress voted to withhold from voting on the scale until they got more of their questions answered about the possible changes in grading.

The chancellor agreed that he wouldn't sign off on the proposal until he heard a response from the congress, according to Jon Massachi, speaker of the congress.

Further discussion about the plus/minus scale will be talked about at the Chat with the Chancellor event, according to Massachi.

Another change that was discussed in the congress meeting on Monday was the term length of the executive officers of SGA.

M. Cole Jones, SGA president, and Keri Brockett, SGA secretary, addressed this during their executive reports in the meeting.

The term length of executive officers can no longer exceed two years, according to Brockett.

This will apply to the president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and the speaker of the congress.

First Engineering and Technology Day held at ECU

Egg toss and bridge competition for local schools

GENERRA CORNWELL
STAFF WRITER

The Engineering and Technology department came together to inform high school students about the engineering and technology programs at ECU with the first Engineering and Technology Day held Feb. 23. The educational festival featured an egg toss and bridge building competition for the students from the local schools.

Both the engineering department and the technology department came together, along with the help of members of ECU's chapter of Society of Automotive Engineers, to host a fun filled day of hands-on learning.

The first Engineering and Technology Day welcomed about 250 students from 18 local high schools.

The event began with an introduction in which the Dean of the Technology Department and others spoke, followed by a tour of the laboratories. Next came the student competitions, which consisted of the egg toss and the bridge contest. Finally, they gave away free t-shirts and went to Todd Dining Hall to have a free meal ECU style.

"For the egg toss [competition] they had to drop the egg onto a target about 30 feet above. The egg had to hit the center of a target. Some eggs survived and some didn't. The students really enjoyed it. They were cheering and getting really excited about our program," said Gerald Micklow, systems engineering director.

"For the bridge building competition the students had to build a bridge made of only Popsicle sticks and glue. The best [bridge] could support about 110 pounds," Micklow said.

The Engineering program is relatively new to ECU.

"We started this program two years ago. In 2008 we will graduate our first students," Micklow said.

Both the Engineering and Technology departments plan to host this program annually from now on.

"We'll get bigger and better. We will have it every year. Next

Urinetown
One of the most uproariously funny musicals in recent years, Urinetown is a hilarious tale of greed, corruption, love and revolution in a time when water is worth its weight in gold. In a Gotham-like city, a terrible water shortage, caused by a 20-year drought, has led to a government-enforced ban on private toilets. The citizens must use public amenities, regulated by a single malevolent company that profits by charging admission for one of humanity's most basic needs. Amid the people, a hero decides he's had enough, and plans a revolution to lead them all to freedom. Inspired by the works of Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill, Urinetown is an irreverently humorous satire in which no one is safe from scrutiny. Praised for reinventing the very notion of what a musical could be, Urinetown catapults the comedic romp into the new millennium with its outrageous perspective, wickedly modern wit, and sustained ability to produce gales of unbridled laughter. year the program will be a two-day program with more competitions," Micklow said.

"I had a class in the Science and Technology building Friday and I saw a lot of students taking a tour. They looked so excited about the campus. I wanted to know why so many people were here and now I know. I could tell it was a major turnout for this event," said Odysseus Chavis, freshman construction management major.

All of these programs wanted to get their names out there for college-bound students. The Technology Department has various undergraduate and graduate programs with the primary goal of producing graduates who can use technology in a way in which they can improve the quality of life.

The Engineering Department helps students to develop fundamental engineering skills with three main concentrations: Bioengineering, engineering management and systems engineering.

The SAE is a chapter that provides the opportunity to build and compete in a Baja car competition. The SAE Mini Baja Competition is a collegiate design competition. The students have to conceive, fabricate and compete with a prototype Baja style race car for a hypothetical production run of 4,000 vehicles.

Teams compete against each other to have their design accepted for manufacture by a fictional firm.

ECU's student chapter of SAE seeks to introduce undergraduate students to these topics through a series of intellectual and social events held throughout the semester.

"Essentially we wanted all the local high schools, within a hour drive, to know about our program so we invited them," said Micklow.

Killing the homeless for sport

Why kick someone when he or she's already down?

JESSICA DUNLOW
OPINION WRITER

Almost everyone has had an encounter with a homeless person. I have been walking back from the parking lot and a ragged, beaten-down-by-life man asks me if I have any change to spare. I admit it, I always assume they are going to spend the little bit of money I might give them on alcohol or drugs, so I consistently refuse and attempt to walk faster to avoid another confrontation.

Get this—in the United States, the homeless are being attacked by college-aged people. According to the National Coalition for the Homeless, it has logged 122 brutal beatings and 20 murders of homeless in 2006. All right, it does not seem like a lot, but the stories are wretched. Some include surprising a homeless man sleeping on a bench in a park and maiming the victim beyond recognition. These perpetrators are facing life in prison.

Yeah, we all suffer from the mentality that all homeless people are drunks or former drug addicts that are too lazy to get jobs. Granted, that is what our culture teaches us, however, it is still not an excuse to think that our lives are more important than theirs are. Regardless of the fact that they are homeless, they are still people and the Constitution protects them.

You should not kick someone who is already down. This takes it to a completely new level. What on Earth could be gratifying about beating up someone who has no possessions other than the clothes on their backs and the random stuff they have in a shopping cart? They are people, too. People deserve to live. Pro-lifers argue that a baby has the right to live upon conception, and so do the souls that life forgot.

OK, the phrase "that life forgot" is somewhat dramatic, but in reality, we cannot assume that the homeless are lazy, no-good bums that have no motivation or intelligence to raise themselves above their current economic status. College kids are beating up and murdering homeless people. It is beneath whatever morals we are supposed to be raised with here in America, since we were founded on the principles of justice and equality.

So way to go, kids with no heart, and thank you for showing the world how much we truly care about our citizens... that if they have no home, they are worthless. To the people that beat up and kill these homeless, you deserve to serve your sentence in jail, and maybe you should have been the one living on the streets. Then you would understand.

Al Gore: President of Hollywood

Do we have a new candidate for 2008?

KRYSTLE STRICKLIN
OPINION WRITER

If Hollywood was its own nation, we certainly know who the president would be. Sorry Arnold, but it looks like Al Gore has swept the showbiz community off its feet.

This past Sunday they welcomed him in with a standing ovation, crowned him king and presented him with a golden scepter—an Oscar. His international blockbuster film, An Inconvenient Truth, won for best documentary film and as he took the stage, the stars rose to their feet to congratulate their king.

So, has our former Vice President abandoned politics for a place in the spotlights of Hollywood? Maybe he just got tired of being ignored. Apparently, Al Gore has spent the better part of his career fighting for environmental causes, but not many people knew this. Then, in one year, with one film, he turns the global warming crisis into a worldwide phenomenon.

I guess he realized that he could reach more people through Hollywood than he could through Washington. As a politician, he mostly represents the great voting debacle of 2000, but as an actor, he has become the face of the campaign to reduce global warming.

He was also recently named one of many nominees for the Nobel Peace Prize, for his work on the environment. Many people think that he has an excellent chance at winning because of the huge impact his film has had on the global community.

Just to recap, since his presidential loss in 2000, Gore has won an Oscar, been nominated for a Nobel Peace Prize and now has half of Hollywood begging him to run for president. How do you say no when celebrities like Leonardo DiCaprio and Cameron Diaz ask you to run?

While he has repeatedly proclaimed that he has no interest in entering the 2008 presidential race, some people are just not taking "no" for an answer. Numerous Web sites, like draftgore.com, have been created to try to draft Gore into the race.

Perhaps even the Democrats will get behind Gore if they think he has a better chance to win than their current nominees do. Maybe Hilary and Obama should start hugging some trees.

One thing is for sure, Al Gore was definitely the biggest winner Sunday night. No recount needed.

JUST ASK JANE

Need advice? Want answers? Just ask Jane.

Dear Jane,

I have a friend who I've known for a long time and he is a really good guy. He treats every girlfriend like she could be that "one special relationship." Unfortunately, now he goes out with this really annoying chick. I hate every ounce of her being to the point that when she's around, I will just stop talking and leave mid-sentence. Not to mention he always invites her to things that our group of friends does, and nobody with us can stand her. Anyway, he's a good looking guy and he is really good to the women that go out with him, so how can I get him to drop [her] and find a girl that's worthy?

Signed,

A Concerned Friend

Dear Concerned,

Well, the fact that neither you nor your mutual friends can stand this girl says quite a lot about the situation right away. She may not be good for him, but that's really only somewhat relevant to what I'm able to suggest.

Good luck,
Jane

RANT OF THE DAY

Where is Urinetown? I believe it's in my dorm room.

John Edwards, champion of the poor...

I think not

JASON PATTY
OPINION WRITER

With the Presidential elections still 21 months away, it is apparently not too early for contenders to begin throwing their hats into the ring. Politicians across the spectrum have already begun to neglect their duties as governors and "congresspersons" (how absurd) in order to tell us how much they can do for our country.

The nearest, but certainly not dearest to us is former North Carolina Democratic Senator John Edwards. He constantly reminds us of the class division in North Carolina and the United States as a whole, yet with an estimated net worth of 60 million dollars, he seems to be part of the problem. According to Wikipedia.com, Edwards took advantage of a tax-law loophole, paying himself through subchapter S corporate dividends, rather than a salary. This helped him avoid paying $591,000 in Medicare taxes. This is awfully hypocritical considering that one of Edwards' main campaign fronts is a universal health care system. Apparently, everyone in America should have health care paid for by everyone but him.

John Edwards' money came from personal injury mass tort litigation. He sued a pool drain cover manufacturer because someone didn't install their product carefully and nobody watched the children taking apart the drain in the pool. His lawsuits against the medical community have done nothing but raise malpractice insurance and increase the cost of health care for Americans. No wonder millions of Americans cannot afford decent health care; lawyers like him chase ambulances just trying to swindle another dollar.

His support for the President and for the war in Iraq has been terrible. He is strongly in favor of cutting off funding to our military for operations in Iraq. I know liberals everywhere will jump at the chance for our country to give up in the Middle East, but cutting our troops off from needed supplies is not the way to do it.

Edwards' new house in Orange County sits on 102 acres, just west of Chapel Hill. It is 28,200 square feet of overindulgence. After completion, its tax value is estimated to be around six million dollars. This will make it the second most expensive private residence in North Carolina, behind the Biltmore Estate. Champion of the poor... I think not.

John Edwards wants to help the poor in this country with health insurance; maybe he should do his part with his taxes. If he wants to be known as a champion of the poor, maybe he should stop being a part of the elitist upper class. If he wants to redistribute my hard earnings (sounds a lot like communism to me) by taxing my hard earned paycheck more and more, maybe he should start with the redistribution of some of his shadily obtained wealth. I bet the homeless folks in Chapel Hill would love to come spend the night at his new estate.

Horoscopes:

Aries
You're doing the preparation now. Try not to attract attention. You'll get enough of that tomorrow and the next day.

Taurus
You have the objective want to accomplish. You can get the financing. You can put together the team to do it. Begin.

Gemini
You do have to be careful. Don't let it all hand out. There's big money involved here, so show you have some class. Put on a really good show.

Cancer
Make it a habit to check all your work before you send it out. It's also a good idea to always think before you speak. Apologize immediately whenever necessary, and you won't be slowed down for long.

Leo
It doesn't seem like you're getting much done, but actually, you are. It's all the behind-the-scenes kind of necessities that you will build upon.

Virgo
Confine your conversations to work-related topics. Take your suggestion to someone who can do something about it.

Libra
You're gaining a lot of appreciation, while not getting any richer. Be gracious in accepting awards, however. They're good advertising.

Scorpio
Follow through with the project you started yesterday. Don't talk it up yet. That'll come later. Get your structure built first.

Sagittarius
This assignment is more of a mystery to be solved. Start out by following the money trail, without telling anybody.

Capricorn
Hard work is necessary sometimes, but that's not all there is. To be truly successful, you also need management skills. Now is a good time to practice.

Aquarius
A lot of the problems you've been working on are almost solving themselves. Actually, the seeds of thought you've planted are finally getting ripe.

Pisces
You're just about to come up with a magnificent idea. You're getting support from a person you love, but the credit for this is all yours.

Drink Recipes:

French Kiss Cocktail
1 part apricot juice
2 parts Champagne
1 apricot slice, for garnish
Pour apricot juice into a champagne flute. Add champagne and stir. Place apricot slice on the rim as a garnish.

Honey-Vanilla Lemonade
2 cups sugar
1/2 cup honey
2 cups water, plus more as needed
1 vanilla bean
2 1/2 cups freshly squeezed lemon juice (from about 24 lemons)
Lemon wheels or wedges, for garnish
In a large saucepan, combine the sugar, honey and two cups water and place over medium-high heat. Cut the vanilla bean in 1/2 lengthwise, then, using the back of the knife, scrape the vanilla seeds from the pod and add to the saucepan, along with the pod. Bring the mixture to a boil and cook for four or five minutes, until the sugar is dissolved and the mixture thickens. Remove from the heat and allow to cool. Put the lemon juice into a gallon jug or pitcher. Pour the sugar syrup through a strainer into the pitcher and discard the pod. Add water to equal one gallon and stir well.
Serve over ice with lemon wheels or wedges.

Pink Sunrise Cocktails
2 shots Campari liqueur
1 quart red grapefruit juice
1 bottle dry Champagne
Add half a shot of Campari to a champagne flute. Add a few ounces red grapefruit juice to the glass then fill the glass with Champagne to the rim and serve.
Please drink responsibly.

Debunking the myths of SafeRide

Clearing fact from fiction

YAZID FINN
STAFF WRITER

When adventuring around Greenville, whether it may be for a standard night of clubbing and parties, or simply to visit friends, safety is often a factor in getting to and from a destination.

Even walking across-campus may sometimes feel like a burden in the wee hours of the morning when students are often spammed with ECU Alerts on a daily basis of armed robberies and assaults. Luckily, an alternative means of getting from point A to B is offered not only on campus, but throughout the city of Greenville as well. One such program offered is none other than SafeRide.

SafeRide is a system offered by the university as an alternative means of transportation for everyone attending ECU with a valid OneCard. SafeRide vans are deployed every day of the week, from 7 - 10 p.m. on Mondays through Wednesdays. They then service Thursdays through Saturdays from 9 p.m. - 3 a.m. and Sundays from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m.

The drivers of the SafeRide vans are paid students, who must apply for the position like any job. They are each trained in dispatching and answering calls, as well as driving. There are two vans, one supporting twelve people; the other vehicle has capacity for fifteen. The drivers will bring students just about anywhere in Greenville, within reason.

Views are mixed on the service SafeRide provides, as it seems to come down to a love-hate relationship, either enjoying their SafeRide experience or cursing it.

Sara Parham, sophomore ele-

SafeRide provides transportation to students in a secure, effective manner. The two vans transport between 12 - 15 students.

mentary education major, used to frequent SafeRide, but was turned off by some of the nights SafeRide experienced heavy traffic.

"I've found they're really bad about coming. If you're in an uncomfortable spot off campus, you might have to be there a lot longer than you'd hope to be," said Parham.

Another view of the SafeRide system students reported was that gender and group size have occasionally played a large role when contacting SafeRide. Several believe females have a higher chance for faster response times over males. Others note the obvious priority of smaller groups over larger mixed gender groups.

"I've used SafeRide twice so far. They always asked who I was with and they always check our OneCards," said Marley Poston, freshman hospitality major.

"They took forever when I was with a group of guys the first time I called. The second time I was in a group of female friends from my dorm. They arrived much faster [that occasion]."

Sitting down with Campus Safety's Annette Parker and Sergeant A. M. Perry cleared up some questions that plague the minds of many students.

Everything about SafeRide is documented, from the incoming calls to the students being transported, to the times students are dropped off. The documentation helps create an outline to measure the traffic from night to night, and keep records in case of any incidents SafeRide may experience.

The incoming calls for SafeRide are answered on a first come, first served basis and the closest van to the caller's location is directed to pick the students up. The callers are given an estimated wait time, but waiting occurs on both ends, as sometimes the SafeRide vans are forced to wait on the students not arriving to their pick up point.

"The only way a van goes out of service is if there is vomit in the vehicle... our drivers are going constantly, with sometimes back to back calls. It's not like they can take personal breaks," said Perry. "As long as we have gas in the tank and tires on those vans, they'll be out there to transport you. The drivers are like you, just not out there partying, but making sure your quality of life is a little better from night to night."

To contact SafeRide for more information on their services, please call ECU-RIDE (328-7433). OneCards must be on hand in order to use the SafeRide system and students are allowed to bring a single guest, but the guest must have a valid form of ID.

Let the ancient gladiator games begin

Students show their strength as pirate gladiators

LAURA HUHN
STAFF WRITER

Who doesn't like the idea of embodying the figures renowned for their strength and power? That is exactly the idea behind the upcoming Pirate Gladiators event, which is being hosted by Campus Recreation and Wellness. Now seemingly ordinary ECU students have a chance of showing off their brute strength to their fellow, captivated students.

The first annual Pirate Gladiators will be held today beginning at 6 p.m. at the Student Recreation Center. The teams of gladiators will compete in four events, including Pirate Ball, Joust, Touchdown and Tug-O-War. The highest scoring teams will then move on to the final event, Gauntlet, to determine who really is the greatest competitor.

Rachel Moser, a junior recreation management major and student employee of the SRC, spoke of the excitement surrounding this event.

"This is a really interesting and new event. We're really excited because we now have over 30 teams, and even more late registration is coming in," said Moser.

Students will battle it out tonight at the Student Recreation Center during the Pirate Gladiators event at 6 p.m.

The student participants are not the only ones getting into the gladiator spirit. The SRC student employees, who will be doubling as true gladiators on Wednesday night, are ready to take on their important roles.

"All of the student employee gladiators are really excited. They've been really getting into putting all of their costumes together," Moser said.

Campus Recreation and Wellness is always trying to find new and imaginative ways of getting the student body involved in healthy, fitness-related activities. The goal is to plan events that will grab the attention of the students who are not already SRC regulars, and to show them what all it has to offer.

Kathryn Hunt, associate director for Wellness Education Promotion, spoke about CRW's goal in putting on this event.

"We were trying to find an event that could combine fitness and intramurals, and something that could be fun but still physical. We are always looking for a way to get students involved in a new way," Hunt said.

Entering college can often have dire results on a student's healthy lifestyle. Schedules are busy, bank accounts are limited, the cheap food is questionable and time is often spent doing anything other than focusing on healthy and active means of enjoyment.

CRW knows this, and hopes that by planning events such as Pirate Gladiators, an active way of life will be even easier to come by.

"Our interest is in getting students, faculty and staff involved in healthy lifestyle, and to give them the knowledge to live healthier lifestyles," said Hunt.

The students and staff involved with CRW have an even bigger goal in mind besides reaching ECU's students. They hope to bring the fun and excitement of the campus activities to the community. Every year, they plan events that are focused on Pitt County residents, especially families.

"On March 21, we will be holding the Youth and Family Fun Day. The event will be free for youth, and will be an exciting event for families to participate in," Moser said. "We are always trying to reach the community, which is what I love so much about it."

Other upcoming events include a softball hitting challenge on March 21, an open house for the grand opening of the new Wellness Center on March 28 and a bench-press competition on April 11.

Registration for Pirate Gladiators will be held again at 5:30 this afternoon, so it's not too late to get a spot in this exciting new challenge. The event will then be held at 6 p.m. in the SRC.

"We love to have spectators as well as participants," Hunt said. "It'll be exciting, and a really fun time!"

Merchandising students gain experience

AIMO Executive Committee pose during the Third Annual Fashion Show.

AIMO organization profile

JENNY AYERS
STAFF WRITER

Apparel and Interiors Merchandising Organization is a student organization geared toward apparel and interior merchandising majors at ECU. The organization provides the opportunity for its members to gain experience in their field of interest outside of the school setting.

Members of AIMO have the chance to learn even more about their future careers in merchandising through conferences with merchandising professionals, service activities and trips that focus on experience in the field. Not only do they hold fundraising events to benefit their trips, but they also volunteer their time and money to other organizations as well.

"Our basic concept is to get students together to learn more about careers in merchandising. There are so many different avenues involved that students of any major can appreciate and enjoy AIMO," said AIMO president Rebecca Andrews.

AIMO sponsored a Dinner Date Auction in which all proceeds went to the Family Violence Program. Every spring the members donate their evening gowns for a Cinderella Store that is hosted at a local high school where students can purchase dresses for next to nothing. The school redeems any and all proceeds made from the dress sales. The members of AIMO also volunteer their services for organizations such as the humane society by participating in events like Doggy Days on ECU's campus.

To sponsor their own trips and outings, they hold events such as this past January's fashion show, Battle of the Boutiques. Dulcinea, Icon, Moxie and Pink all donated clothes for the show, enabling the organization to raise over a thousand dollars for their activities.

One way the organization allows its members to achieve first-hand experience in their field is with the opportunity to work at America's Mart, a trade show in Atlanta. Here they help get clothing organized for display and do whatever other behind the scenes work that is needed. This provides an excellent and rare opportunity for AIMO members to get a hands-on look at apparel merchandising.

"AIMO offers good experience for those students who intend to enter into the merchandising industry. Students gain useful contacts that will be invaluable in their future careers," Andrews said.

This Thursday, the organization is heading to New York City, where they will tour the offices of Shapes magazine, Nicole Miller's fashion line and Macy's where they will shadow a personal shopper.

Volunteer chair, Jenna Jordan, says that, on these trips, they "try to get something in each different field of fashion to really see what it's like."

If you're interested in fashion, interiors and merchandising, then you should look into joining the organization. Jordan reiterates their goal of providing beneficial experience to all the members.

"We mainly focus on the apparel aspect, but we try to do what the members desire. Right now we're talking about going to the furniture market in High Point," said Jordan.

Apparel merchandising and interior merchandising major's alike benefit from the experiences offered by the organization.

AIMO meets at 5 p.m. in Rivers 208 to discuss future trips, events and other beneficial opportunities for their members. For more information about AIMO, please contact the Department of Interior Design and Merchandising at 328-6929.

A fitting farewell for the Captain

Ingram dunks one final time.

And the sad loss of local favorite Ingram

BENJAMIN LLOYD
SENIOR WRITER

An emotional night for lone senior Courtney Captain was capped off with a win against UTEP. Captain, with just 8.3 seconds left, rolled off a pick from guard Brandon Evans and sunk a three-pointer to put the Pirates up by one point, 79-78 to win the game.

The victory broke a 19-game losing streak for the Pirates, and improved their record to 6-21 overall and 1-13 in Conference USA. The UTEP Miners are now 14-14 overall, and 6-8 in C-USA play.

In his last home game ever, Captain set a milestone Saturday night at Minges Coliseum by hitting six treys and achieving the most three-pointers in school history for a two-year player (104). Junior guard Darrell Jenkins also made his mark, setting the single-season assist record (152) after posting nine against UTEP.

Captain was pleased with his final performance in front of an ECU home crowd.

"I want to thank the crowd. The crowd has been helping us the whole year and tonight we had good attendance," said Captain. "We knew that we had to come out and play real hard and emotions were big. I saw it on coach Stokes' face at the beginning but I didn't want to cry. I wanted to cry at the end and it was a good cry. I'm just happy we won. I went out on a good note."

"I want to say that my first basket was a dunk, and the last one here at Minges being a dunk has it's own special significance."

JEREMY INGRAM
JUNIOR GUARD

ECU started the game off hot by hitting five three-pointers in the first five minutes of play, four of which came at the hands of Courtney Captain. Captain went 6-11 from behind the arc and 9-16 from the floor on the night, knocking down all of his free throws.

The Pirates held the lead for most of the first half on 56.3 percent shooting from the floor. ECU got a big lift from beyond the arc (50 percent) and from the charity strip (85.7 percent). UTEP battled hard as guard Stefon Jackson put up 11 points in the first half. The miners also had 11 assists, but could not match ECU who had 13 assists and Captain's amazing 24 points in the first half.

"I think it was a great effort. They battled out there. They got up, they got down and still took the opportunity to battle back. It speaks volumes of their character. They stick together, have faith in each other and believe in one another," said ECU Head Coach Ricky Stokes.

Jenkins got the first points for ECU in the second half on a long range three-pointer to put the team up by 12. On the ensuing drive UTEP guard Marvin Kilgore, a former ECU player, drove the lane and was fouled by Jenkins. Kilgore was quiet on the night, scoring only point from the free throw line.

Pirates forward John Fields was also having a quiet night until making a stand out play with 18:08 left in the second half. Fields received an inbound alley-oop from Jenkins for an authoritative slam. Fields finished the night with 15 points, six rebounds and two big time blocks.

The Miners started a massive comeback as they outscored the Pirates 20-3 over a nine-minute stretch to pull within two, 63-61 with 8:39 left to play. Eventually UTEP took the lead by two with 29 seconds left in the game. But Captain's last second heroics gave ECU their first C-USA win of the season.

The Miners finished Saturday's game hitting 23-55 from the floor, and had four players in double figures. Forward Dale Vanwright had 17 points, but only managed three rebounds. Stefon Jackson finished with 24 points and eight rebounds, leading all players for the game. Malik Alvin had 12 points and Maurice Thomas had 13 in the Miners loss. In his final home game Captain scored a career high 29 points. Darrell Jenkins added 16 points and nine assists while Brandon Evans had six points on a perfect night from the floor. At the end of the night what really mattered was that the Pirates could finally celebrate a win.

"We executed better tonight. We made free throws and rebounded better than in previous games. This group of guys will continue to get better," Stokes said.

On a night filled with so much joy, there was one sad note. Beloved junior guard Jeremy Ingram will not return for his senior year as a Pirate.

"I just want to personally thank everyone that has been here for me since I transferred, but the biggest issue is my knee. Everyone knows I've been under the knife a few times and right now there's no doubt in my mind that I cannot go another full college basketball season," said Ingram about his career at ECU.

Ingram's biggest and only showing of the night came during the first half when freshman Justin Ramsey missed a jumper and Ingram went soaring in from the foul line for a put back slam dunk.

"I want to say that my first basket was a dunk, and the last one here at Minges being a dunk has it's own special significance," Ingram said.

The Pirates have only two games left before the C-USA tournament, and hope to go on a winning streak to enter the tournament in Memphis starting March 7.

"First of all let me congratulate our fans. It was so special to have 5,500 fans tonight. I have been coaching for about 20 years and think our fans are just amazing," Stokes said. "They were a big part of our success tonight. It just warms my heart for our students to come out and support us."

Pirates pack offense in first sweep of the season

ECU wraps up series with big win over in-state rival

RONNIE WOODWARD
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

The ECU baseball team came into the inaugural ECU Invitational on a four-game losing streak, but left the weekend with a streak more to its liking.

By winning all three games this past weekend, the Pirates improved their record to 5-5. In the inaugural series ECU outscored its opponents 22-8.

"We did the things we had to do to win," said ECU Head Coach Billy Godwin after Sunday's 11-4 win over Duke. "It's all about results and this weekend we were able to capitalize and I was real proud of our effort."

The offense came alive for the first time all season as the Pirates scored in seven consecutive innings, starting on Saturday and finishing on Sunday. The offensive surge was highlighted by a five-run eighth inning on Saturday that gave the Pirates a pivotal win over the Washington Huskies. ECU headed into the bottom of the eighth down 3-1, but the first eight batters of the inning reached base safely. Sophomore Stephen Batts hit a double with the bases loaded that tied the game and Senior Ryan Tousley drove in the game-winning runs on a chopper over the first baseman's head.

"It was definitely a big win, especially with the way we've been playing," said Tousley after Saturday's 6-3 victory. "To be down 3-1 in the eighth and come back like this is definitely a good thing for this team and I think it can really help us in the long run."

The Pirates' bats stayed hot on Sunday as they scored ten runs in the first five innings against previously unbeaten Duke. Drew Schieber, who started the Pirates' eighth inning on Saturday with a pinch-hit single, went 3-for-4 on Sunday, scoring two runs and stealing three bases. Sophomore Brandon Henderson smashed a two-run homer in the third inning and recorded three RBIs on the day.

"We've been hitting balls hard, they just haven't been falling. Today we really peppered the gaps and it felt good to finally bust out offensively," said Henderson.

The Pirates had a meeting after Wednesday's disappointing 2-0 home loss to Campbell. Henderson said the focus of the team meeting was to stay confident, keep playing hard and put the early-season blunders behind them.

"We said we're going to start over; we're 3-0 already and we're feeling good," said Henderson, who leads the team in home runs. "Everyone is confident and we're just going out there and having fun and playing hard."

ECU ended its four-game losing skid on Friday, as it defeated St. John's 5-1. Junior T.J. Hose had his best outing of the year after a 0-2 start to the season. Hose picked up the win after allowing only one run on four hits in 6 1/3 innings pitched. Hose also struck out seven batters in the game.

"That was a big win for me and for the team," said Hose. "I was just trying to go out there and have command of all three of my pitches and I think I did a pretty good job of doing that."

Godwin said that Friday's win over St. John's, who had a record of 40-19 last season, was the most complete game the Pirates had played up to that point. Godwin pointed to the pitching depth as the reason for the complete victory.

"It was just an outstanding effort on our player's behalf and a great win for us," Godwin said after Saturday's win. "Dale Mollenhauer was awesome out there tonight and T.J. and the whole pitching staff did a great job. For him [Hose] to come out and throw like this and get a win under his belt is certainly good for his confidence and good for the Pirates."

ECU will look to carry its confidence into next weekend's annual Keith LeClair Classic. Pepperdine, N.C. State and Western Carolina will be in Greenville for the round-robin event. ECU's schedule is highlighted by games with 17th ranked Pepperdine on Friday and a 3 p.m. Saturday showdown with its biggest rival, N.C. State.

"If you look at our schedule, every weekend we play is tough," Godwin said. "We'll have three good days of preparation this week and we have another tournament here this weekend with three outstanding opponents."

MOST VALUABLE PIRATE
WEEKLY SOFTBALL AWARD

SCHIEBER

Schieber played a pivotal part in the Pirates three wins this past weekend. On Saturday, Schieber led off the eighth inning with a pinch-hit single that sparked ECU's 6-3 comeback victory over Washington. The Pirates utility infielder then went 3-for-4 on Sunday, scoring two runs and stealing three bases. Overall, Schieber went 5-for-8 on the weekend, scoring three runs and stealing four bases. Schieber now leads the Pirates in batting average (.375), stolen bases (4), slugging percentage (.688) and is third in on-base percentage (.412)

"What a great job by Drew Schieber coming off the bench right there. I think he really ignited that inning and got something going for us." - Head Coach Billy Godwin after Saturday's 6-3 win.
