ENCOURAGING WORDS.

Since the DAILY REFLECTOR made its appearance it has received many kind and encouraging words from the home folks. These are all fully appreciated, because we feel that the little paper belongs to the people of Greenville—they are going to make it just what it is to be—and in speaking of it they talk about their own. But nothing has gratified us more than two letters Thursday night's mail brought us, and we believe the home people will be pleased to know how their town and an enterprise they are helping to establish is viewed by prominent business men elsewhere, hence we print a portion of each letter.

One is from a leading firm in Baltimore who are well known to the people of Greenville and are largely interested here, and says:

"We are in receipt of the first issue of the DAILY REFLECTOR. We congratulate you on this enterprise, and wish you success in it. The increased life and progress which are now so apparent in Greenville ought to warrant a daily issue of your valuable paper."

The other is from the largest dry goods firm in Salisbury, composed of gentlemen who once lived in Greenville, and says:

"We received a copy of the infant (DAILY REFLECTOR) and comparing the noise it is making with its size we cannot help pronouncing it quite healthy and predict a rising future for same. Hope it will receive proper nourishment from the enterprising business community where it first saw the light of the world. Wish you success," &c.

Ex-Congressman Ewart, and a member of the House in the present Legislature, does not hesitate to express himself upon any public question. He has been interviewed both by the News & Observer and the Charlotte Observer during the present week. Some things he says we presume are not relished much by some of the leaders. For instance, that Mr. Butler by no means has been promised the long term in the Senate. He also says there will be a spirited contest over both the long and short term. That the national Republicans favor the election of two Republicans from North Carolina. That this is not impossible. He declares himself a candidate for one of the places. He expresses the opinion that the present Legislature will be conservative and then mentions a few things likely to be done which will be radical changes in existing affairs. These interviews are interesting in their suggestion at the present time.

The Cherokee Scout says: If you want to "get on to" the financial situation just tackle some fellow with the gable end of his pants out, who spends his time in sitting on the fence corners and attending coon hunts. He can tell you just how the government's finances should be managed, but he cannot manage to keep his wife out of the field, his children at school or meal in the barrel.
