The people of Nebraska, who are now brought face to face with starvation, are victims of an unfortunate choice of homes. The lands are fertile but the seasons are uncertain. And yet over 100,000 immigrants per year have been going to these Western States. The suffering there now will turn this stream elsewhere and the prosperity, the climate and the fertility of the South are already beginning to attract those who are seeking homes.

Depression continues, and why? Here are some of the reasons: Every manufacturer wants to be a millionaire, every working man wants to be "skilled" and receive fancy wages, every merchant wants to be a merchant prince, every doctor wants to be a specialist and get rich fast, every lawyer wants to be the attorney of a great corporation, every preacher wants to be a D. D., and have charge of a city church, every farmer wants his land converted into town lots and most of them "corner lots," every railroad company wishes to span the continent and bind ocean to ocean, every girl wants to be leader in society before she leaves her teens, and every boy wants to be a man before he reaches his. Are we extravagant in saying every one? Well, let's change it to most every one, and what's the result? Universal unrest, widespread disappointment and profound depression. Remedy: Call a halt. Go slower. Having food and raiment therewith be content. The contented are the rich after all.—Durham Sun.
