It looks now as if the women are going to win in the fight for the monument to the Confederate dead. The bill appropriating ten thousand dollars for this purpose has already passed the Senate, two readings in the House and will undoubtedly become a law. We notice that Cox of Pitt did all he could against it. After Wednesday night's proceedings Phillips seems not to have been present Thursday. He is not recorded as having voted at all that day. We don't blame him. He has probably left for his home. This is certainly what he ought to have done.

The Fusionists think by this bill to amend for some other things they have done. For our part we don't believe that they are entitled to one particle of credit for passing it. They voted it down once. They would never have passed it had it not been for the criticism that was lavished upon them.

Below we publish a short extract from the Legislative proceedings of the night of March th sixth. Read and judge for your selves. We are sure you will feel that Pitt County is not very much honored.

Ray broke into the speech of Phillips perfectly coolly—his demeanor having been one of perfect serenity throughout the semi drama, asking, now, had not Phillips said to Hoffman in the presence of Young and Burnham (Burnham sits by Hoffman and Young behind Burnham), that the minority report members had been bought up. "No, sir," shouted Phillips, Ray appealed to Young and Burnham. Young arose Phillips glaring at him. Young said emphatically that Phillips had said in his and Burnham's presence that the minority had been bought up and he called upon the gentlemen from Burncombe to say whether or not it was true. There was a pause—Ray standing, Phillips awaiting Burnham's reply. "Mr. Speaker," said Mr. Burnham, "the gentleman from Pitt stood right there a little while ago in the middle of the aisle and said to Mr. Huffman just by me, that the minority members of the committee had been bought up, and I call upon Mr. Huffman to say whether he did or not." Mr. Huffman arose slowly and every one listened intently, the House having dropped into stillness. Huffman was about to speak, when he was rapped down by the Speaker, who declared him out of order. Mr. Phillips asking in the midst of the ruling that he be allowed to make his statement, but he sat down without having uttered a sound.

A Pretty Good Steal.

That little amendment hitched on to the civil appropriations bill allowing employes of the two Houses of Congress a month's extra pay will cost about $150,000. As some of the Congress men have no clerks, or employ members of their family, this looks like a pretty little steal which in the aggregate amounts to a pretty big steal. Liberality is all right but liberality at the expense of the people, in the interest of dependents or favorites is not all right.—Wilmington Star.

Glass in His Foot 15 Years

Some 15 years ago M. A. Jenkins stepped on a piece of lamp chimney. Five years later his foot pained him and upon investigation a piece of glass was found just under the skin on top of the foot. For several days the same foot has been giving him some trouble. Yesterday afternoon he called upon a physician to see what the trouble was. Another piece of glass, as large as the end of his little finger, was removed from between the large toe and the one adjoining it.

A SHORT WAY OUT OF IT.

Papa—But why do you sign it: "Your loving son, Amy?"

Amy—Why, of course mamma will know, and I couldn't spell daughter.

RUSTIC SYMPATHY.

Uncle Hiram—Say, Mirandy, the darned fool won't have a drop left when he gets home. Look at it leak!—WHEN LOVELY WOMEN VOTE.

Miss Mawbanks—Vote for that horrid man! Why, how can you, when he has such a big, ugly red beard?—Judge.
