Icy N.C. Roads Cause Rash Of Traffic Pileups

By The Associated Press

A late shot of warm air turned predicted heavy snow into sleet and freezing rain that glazed many North Carolina highways today before a dusting of snow added to treacherous driving conditions in the Piedmont.

"We're experiencing a solid sheet of ice over all the roadways in all of the Piedmont," said 1st Sgt. Tom Jeffries of the state Highway Patrol in Raleigh. "Driving is extremely dangerous at this point. I would have to say it would be a life-threatening situation. You cannot steer your vehicle, you cannot stop your vehicle. The troopers are having to park their vehicles at the tops of hills and walk to the collisions."

Jeffries said that there had been about 75 reported collisions just in Wake County since 3 a.m. and that U.S. 401 south of Fuquay-Varina was completely blocked by a pileup at the bottom of a hill.

"We're really backed up," he said. "Our response time is probably two to three hours there have been so many reports."

Charlotte-Douglas International Airport was closed at 10:40 p.m. Sunday because of ice, with all flights diverted to other airports. A runway was opened at 8 a.m. today, said Gene Carney, assistant airport manager.

"I don't think it will be any problem keeping it open now," he said, adding that freezing rain forced the cancellation of some flights.

Bob Muller, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Raleigh, said the storm's center was off Norfolk, Va., this morning and cold air was wrapping in behind it.

The most snow today was expected in the northeast, but Muller said it was unlikely that more than 3 inches would accumulate.

A winter storm warning remained in effect for Catawba, Burke, Caldwell and Alexander counties today while the weather service issued a travelers advisory for the southern foothills, most of the Piedmont and the Sandhills.

Temperatures were expected to remain below freezing through Tuesday, but a gradual warming trend was expected to push temperatures into the 40s by Wednesday, Muller said.

Area Students Get Snow Break

By JANE WELBORN

Sleet and snow made driving treacherous in eastern North Carolina today, with icy road conditions causing numerous accidents and prompting early dismissal of Pitt County schools.

The highway patrol reported a number of accidents on rural roads and highways in Pitt and surrounding counties. An advisory warned travelers to stay off the roads except in cases of absolute necessity.

N.C. Highway Patrol Sgt. Walter Parrish said road conditions deteriorated throughout the day. "All the roads are bad and it is getting worse," he said this morning. "People should stay home and keep off the roads."

Parrish said the patrol couldn't keep up with all the wreck calls they received today. "We have been swamped," he said. "The Williamson radio station said that we were 43 calls behind at one point this morning."

A spokesman for the state Highway Patrol office says the entire crew of the office stayed busy since the early hours of the day helping travelers who slipped off icy roads or whose cars stalled because of the weather. A number of minor wrecks were reported by mid-morning, but no injuries occurred.

According to the Associated Press, a 30 percent chance of snow remains for tonight. Temperatures will likely drop into the low 20s, with northwest winds gusting 10 to 15 miles per hour, driving the wind chill factor into the teens.

Tuesday's forecast calls for variable clouds and cold, with highs reaching 30 to 35 degrees.

Parrish said that the Highway Patrol was besieged with accident calls this morning.

The Greene County Sheriff's office reported at mid-morning there had been no unusual accidents attributed to the snow.

The local Department of Transportation office reported this morning that all supervisors were out checking roads.

Pitt County Schools dismissed students at 10 a.m. due to the deteriorating weather conditions.

"The roads weren't very bad when the decision was made at 5 a.m. to maintain the schedule" today, said Public Information Director Barry Gaskins. Officials, however, decided to open North Pitt High School an hour late due to potentially icy roads, he said.

As road conditions worsened this morning officials decided to dismiss the schools at 10 a.m.

"It wasn't until the buses from the system got on the road that the situation got worse," Gaskins said.

He said that teachers and aides were allowed to leave school when their responsibilities were completed, and administrators and lunchroom personnel were dismissed from the schools at noon.

Pitt County Schools tentatively will open one hour later Tuesday, according to a decision made at mid-morning. If weather conditions change, adjustments will be made to the daily schedule, Gaskins said.

Martin County school officials made a decision at 5 a.m. this morning not to open schools. Administrative director Alton Hopewell said "The early decision to close schools today was based on reports that roads in the northern area of the county, around Oak City, Palmyra and Hamilton, were icy and frozen in some places.

"It's a day off for students and teachers. Staff can come in or take the day off as an annual leave day."

In Greene County, schools opened one hour late.

Classes started an hour late at Martin Community College, with a decision to be made later whether to close the college early. Pitt Community College closed at noon today and canceled night classes.

Sgt. Parrish suggested that

Foreigners Latest Kidnap Victims

By RIMA SALAMEH
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen today kidnaped two men in Moslem west Beirut and one witness said they were foreigners. Police said they had no indication that a group claiming to hold three Americans and an Indian carried out its threat to kill a hostage.

Police said four gunmen snatched the two latest kidnap victims from an office equipment store in the Sanayeh residential district of west Beirut at 11:30 a.m. Police did not identify the victims or their nationalities.

A witness who spoke on condition of anonymity said two gunmen "jumped out of a white Mercedes-Benz, pointed pistols at the two men and dragged them out of the Najjar Continental Store." The witness said the victims spoke broken English.

An employee at the store who also spoke on condition of anonymity said the two victims were "definitely foreigners."

"They are familiar to me, they used to pass by us to photocopy documents, they always spoke broken English, but I do not know their names or nationalities," she said.

She said one victim was "blond and has blue eyes, the other has dark hair. Both appeared less than 23 years old."

The two were kidnaped as students of Beirut University College demonstrated outside Prime Minister Rashid Karami's office, a few blocks from the Najjar Continental Store, to protest the kidnapping Saturday of four professors from the school.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio station said it received two calls Sun-

Panel Urges Reclassification

By STUART SAVAGE

East Carolina University's long-range planning commission Friday recommended that the university be reclassified as a research institution and that the number of doctoral programs at the medical school be increased.

The planning commission's recommendations, scheduled to be approved by ECU's board of trustees at a meeting Feb. 6, will go to C.D. Spangler, president of the University of North Carolina system. The changes then must be approved by the UNC system board of governors.

"My understanding is it's a matter of reclassifying us at that level ... so we can be about discharging our mission," Ralph Kinsey, ECU board chairman said this morning. "It's a matter of being reclassified so we can offer doctoral degrees in academic areas."

At present, only three of the UNC system's 16 campuses are classified as research institutions — the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C. State University in Raleigh and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

East Carolina is now classified as a comprehensive university, offering doctorates only in the medical school.

Five doctorates are now offered in addition to medical degrees, including biochemistry, microbiology, anatomy, pharmacology and physiology, with a degree in pathology being developed. The planning commission is recommending that a sixth doctorate be offered in the field of radiobiology.

Henry Ferrell, coordinator of the long-range planning commission said the proposed reclassification would put ECU a notch below UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. State and on an equal level with UNC-Greensboro.

A spokesman close to the board of trustees, who asked not to be identified, said this morning that UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. State "are true research institutions. By classification, UNC-Greensboro is. But in fact, it is not ... in the same sense" as UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. State.

The spokesman suggested that ECU would seek reclassification so the school "can offer doctorates in

Arbitration

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

People filing lawsuits of under $15,000 in Pitt County may have their cases heard outside a courtroom under an experimental arbitration program which began Jan. 2.

Pitt and nine other counties in the state are participating in the pilot program designed to give residents a faster resolution to lawsuits.

The two-year experiment, proposed by the N.C. Bar Association, was approved by the General Assembly in 1985.

Bill Nichols, trial court administrator in Greenville, said "people in cases where both sides wish to have the case arbitrated can opt for that by stipulating they want to have it arbitrated."

"If they don't specifically request it," Nichols said, they have a 50-50 chance of being picked.

"Of the cases eligible," he explained, "half will be assigned (for arbitration), leaving the other half as a control group to compare the progress through the system to see if arbitration is indeed doing what we think it will."

Nichols said cases picked for arbitration "have to go through arbitration." But if the parties involved are not satisfied, they can "then file for trial in district or superior court."

Under the pilot program, cases to be arbitrated go before arbitrators rather than judges and juries.

The arbitrator, who presides at the hearing and decides the award, must be a North Carolina lawyer with at

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Commissioners will meet with members of the board of education to discuss proposed voting district lines.

Classes Set

Grandparent-in-training classes will be held at Pitt County Memorial Hospital Sunday at 3 p.m.

This class is offered by the staff of the hospital's obstetrics unit the first Sunday of each month. Included is discussion of the changing methods of birth and parenting, the grandparent's role in child rearing, and a tour of the labor and delivery area of the hospital.

To register, call the nursing office, 757-4470.

Family Named

The Charlie James Rasberry family of Farmville has been named the 1986 Coastal Plain Conservation Farm Family by the N.C. Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts (SWCD).

Rasberry was honored by Association President H. Gray Ashburn, Jr. during the organization's 44th annual meeting in Winston-Salem.

Rasberry is a member of the Farm Bureau, N.C. Forestry Association, American Forestry Association and American Legion.

Tax Help

Assistance in filing State income and intangibles tax returns will be available each Monday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. through April 15 at the local office of the Department of Revenue, 400 N. Greene St.

Taxpayers wanting assistance should bring with them the pre-addressed forms mailed to them from Raleigh.

Weekend Arrests

Police said three people were arrested on theft charges over the weekend.

Officer K.D. Lingerfelt said Brian Clark Rightsell, 23, of 236 Aycock Dorm was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of a bag of potato chips from the Freshway Food Store at 810 E. 10th St. that was reported at 3:31 a.m. Saturday.

Officer B.W. Lewis said a juvenile was taken into custody in connection with the theft of a bag of candy from the K-Mart store at Greenville Square Shopping Center that was reported at 5:45 p.m. Saturday.

Officer H.D. Hines said Darryl Lee Roberson, 20, of Route 2, Ayden, was charged in connection with the theft of a cassette tape from the Record Bar at Carolina East Mall that was reported at 3:42 p.m. Sunday.

Indecent Exposure

Allan Lane Moore, 34, of 303 Roundtree Drive was arrested by Greenville police on indecent exposure charges Saturday.

Officer R.G. Mendenhall said Moore was charged in connection with a 5 p.m. incident at the intersection of First Street and Woodlawn Avenue.

There will be discussion and planning for 1987. For information, contact Candace Currin, Pitt County Mental Health Center, 752-7151.

Former Ambassador Says Foreign Affairs Education Is Needed By Students

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Students should be concerned with the broad issues that shape their world, but too often, the focus is narrow, says a former ambassador who would like to see Davidson College become a mecca for international knowledge.

"After all my years in the foreign service, I came back to real life in the United States worried," said Jack Perry, former ambassador to Bulgaria and the director of the Dean Rusk Program in International Studies at Davidson. "I worry about our relationship with the Soviet Union and nuclear war. I worry about our competitive position. I worry a tremendous amount about overpopulation."

"If we continue the way we are going, nothing will change," Perry said. "We need a whole new generation educated in foreign affairs."

In Perry's small corner of the world, a move is underway to encourage students to see the world, both figuratively and literally.

The idea for the Dean Rusk Program was born in 1983, and it completed its first full year of operation in 1985-86. It was launched by Rusk, Secretary of State during the administrations of John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, and a alumnus of Davidson.

"The trustees and faculty decided to launch the program, consciously designed not to be a major or a separate school or departmental program," Perry said. "It has been kept somewhat vague, but it is designed to permeate the whole educational experience."

Though the program bears Rusk's name, the former Secretary of State has remained in the background.

"He doesn't feel like just because it's named for him, that he should give us advice," Perry said.

A $10 million goal was established to endow the program, and more than $3 million has been raised. The Duke Endowment contributed $1 million, and another $1 million was raised by Davidson alumni. The remainder of the money has come from different foundations and donations.

Through the program, students should gain a heightened awareness of the world and the issues that shape policy, and they would have the opportunity to travel abroad, Perry said. He hopes to see all of the roughly 1,400 students involved.

"Davidson is a small and select school and we aim to produce leaders," Perry said. "We had a deep conviction that you can't be educated unless you think of the whole little planet as your classroom."

The program, Perry said, is still on the drawing board. With more time and money, he hopes to see more courses in international studies, more permanent faculty members, more foreign students and more money to help students spend a semester abroad. There are some 30 to 35 foreign students, mostly from Europe, taking classes on the Davidson campus, and Perry discovered a surprising number of Davidson students who have traveled abroad.

In the first year of operation, the program presented visiting speakers like an ambassador who discussed the Reagan-Gorbachev summit, a retired foreign service officer who spoke on U.S.-Latin American policy, and a forum on religious fundamentalism and world affairs.

Student grants were made by the Dean Rusk Program in 1986 for study abroad in Mexico, Pakistan, Italy and India. Two Davidson students held State Department internships in Turkey and Belgium.

So far, Perry says, 15 students have been very active in the program, and there is another larger segment of students who made private trips abroad and are interested in the lecturers.

"That may be about half (of the students)," Perry said. "The others are the ones who need to be convinced that this is worth their time."

"We've got to get that guy started thinking in terms of the whole world," Perry said. "The only way you can measure it is to see what you've done in the minds of students."

With proper funding, the program could include a course that would introduce freshmen studies to international studies. Perry envisions an interdisciplinary study, using a team of teachers who would focus on one area of the world each term.

Perry would also like to see students approach foreign language studies differently. When they leave Davidson, he would like to see them be able to speak the language.

"Since I was in the diplomatic service, I believe in utility of foreign language. I believe that we ultimately should aim for proficiency, not just a number of hours," said Perry, a Russian specialist who retired in 1983 after 24 years in the diplomatic service.

Perry said the creation of the Dean Rusk Program was an attempt to change the scope of education by broadening avenues of liberal arts education.

A Loser?

DURHAM (AP) — The space shuttle program is a loser, conceived after the Apollo program by NASA administrators who were looking for another space spectacular to replace the manned flights to the moon, a Duke University professor says.

Alex Roland, a professor of history at Duke University, worked for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration as a historian when it was developing the shuttle during the 1970s and early '80s. He got an insider's view of the shuttle program, and said he didn't like what he saw.

NASA, Roland said, exaggerated the shuttle's worth, especially its ability to pay for itself by launching commercial satellites. The agency placed too much emphasis on manned flights and sank too much money and too much trust into the program, he said. The result, in Roland's view, is that America's space policy took off in the wrong direction in the wrong spaceship.

"I thought that it was a competent-run program technically, and there would be a certain number of accidents, and this was just one of those flukes," he said this week, reflecting on the Challenger explosion of a year ago.

The ensuing investigations and revelations about mismanagement and bad decisions changed his mind. He was shocked to learn that NASA administrators knew about the problems with the O-rings but still allowed the shuttle to fly.

"I'm more and more convinced that it all stems from the same things I was talking about," Roland said. "It stems from a policy dilemma that they've gotten themselves into. That thing had to pay for itself to meet their claims for it. It couldn't pay for itself, so they kept asking it to do more and more impossible things."

One trait that all good vegetable gardeners have is that they learn from their mistakes. They also learn from past experiences, different planting methods, different varieties and different cultural practices.

Anyone who is a vegetable gardener might do better this year making a few New Year's gardening resolutions. If these resolutions actually become a set of written plans, then anyone can keep a yardstick of their gardening process from year to year. Here are a few ideas that may improve any garden in eastern North Carolina.

1) Take a soil sample and follow the recommendations for adding lime especially. Unless the entire garden is low in phosphorus and potash, sidedressed fertilizer (8-8-8 or 10-10-10) will provide sufficient nutrition for the garden.

2) Keep the soil pH between 5.6 and 6.4. Soil pH is a relative measure of the acidity of the soil. Most vegetables will grow well in this range.

3) Provide adequate water. There is seldom a year that goes by that doesn't require supplemental irrigation. A good gardener knows that "water is the cheapest fertilizer."

4) Control weeds. Most weeds that plague the summer garden sprout during May and early June. By controlling weeds during these months, and while they are small, labor can be reduced. In late summer prevent weeds from going to seed.

5) Control pests. Most insects of the garden can be controlled with two chemicals, Sevin and malathion. Use these and all other chemicals only when necessary.

6) Control diseases. The home gardener's best defense against plant disease is through prevention. It is important not to plant the same vegetable (or its relatives) in the same spot in the garden for two years in a row. Also, destroy vegetables as soon as they become less productive.

This procedure will keep insects, diseases and nematodes from building up to high populations, and causing big problems later.

7) A written gardening log can help prevent making mistakes twice. Also, it can be a record of weather conditions, disease problems, soils sample information, and a host of other things that can help the gardener.

"There's no substitute for experience" is an old truism. It does help to read about gardening and it may be of help to talk to other people, but the best teaching tool is the actual planting of the garden and tending of it. More and more people each year find gardening to be beneficial to them as a recreational outlet and as a source of high quality, fresh produce.

For further information, contact your local Agricultural Extension office and ask for a free copy of the "Quick Reference Home Gardening Guide." It is a helpful guide in determining what vegetables to plant, what varieties do best in this area and when to plant them. In Pitt County, call 752-2934 or visit the office, located on the second floor of the Pitt County Office Building.

PROTECTING FIRST PERMANENT MOLARS

If you have a child whose first permanent molars are now in place, it is important to keep these teeth free of decay. Permanent molars help determine the position of the child's other permanent teeth as they replace his primary teeth. One method your dentist may recommend to protect his first permanent molars from decay is the use of an adhesive sealant.

This is a painless procedure that requires no drilling. After the molars have been cleaned, they are etched with a mild acid to remove bacterial plaque and other surface material. This treatment also makes the tooth enamel more porous so the adhesive bond or sealant will be as strong as possible. The sealant acts as a barrier against the accumulation of bacteria that causes decay on the chewing surfaces of the teeth.

Adhesive sealants provide a long-lasting protective film. When the sealant becomes worn, further applications can be made as needed to protect the tooth from decay.

Call my office and set up an appointment for your child to have sealants. It will help protect the teeth from decay and is a lot easier on a child than having him numbed up for a filling.

New Storm Blasts East Coast With Snow, Sleet

By PETE BROWN
Associated Press Writer

Schools closed and as many as 350,000 federal workers were given the day off today as a wind-whipped storm packing more than a foot of snow swirled into the Northeast before many people had dug out from a paralyzing snow four days earlier.

Mel Goldstein, director of the Weather Center at Western Connecticut State University in Danbury, said Sunday as the storm headed up the Eastern Seaboard.

The storm spread snow, sleet and freezing rain from the South into the mid-Atlantic, closing airports, downing power lines, stranding travelers and causing chain-reaction collisions on glazed highways.

Snow blanketed the mid-Atlantic Coast early today, and was falling from Tennessee to southern New England. Wind gusts to 30 mph were clocked at New York's LaGuardia Airport.

Up to one foot had accumulated early today in the southernmost part of New Jersey as the storm followed the path of one that dumped a foot or more of snow beginning Thursday from the Carolinas to New England, causing 48 deaths.

New Jersey Assembly Speaker Chuck Hardwick, acting in place of Gov. Thomas H. Kean, who was at the Super Bowl in California, declared a limited state of emergency, putting the National Guard on alert.

"It's still pretty difficult to see. It's soft snow, so there's a lot of it blowing around," said Russ Polizzotti, an emergency management official in southern New Jersey. "The problem is that there might be a car in the drift in the road. You have to be really careful."

Atlantic City, N.J., Mayor James L. Usry banned all but emergency vehicles from all roads early today as snow and wind lashed the seaside resort. The ban forced many employees of Trump Plaza Hotel & Casino to sleep at the hotel, said switchboard operator Donna Morton.

The storm was blamed for at least one traffic death, in Maryland. The forecast called for 6 to 12 inches in most areas and up to 14 inches on Cape Cod. Near-blizzard conditions were forecast in some areas.

Accumulation by late Sunday included 8 inches at Roanoke, Va., for a total of 17 inches on the ground. Kentucky had received up to 7 inches, North Carolina as much as 5.

Schools closed today in Massachusetts, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and in Tennessee, where freezing rain, sleet and snow broke tree limbs and glazed roads in the Nashville area with ice nearly a half-inch thick.

Emergency crews worked early today to restore electricity to about 5,000 Nashville Electric Service customers. As many as 12,000 were without power Sunday, said Betty Forsythe, a utility spokeswoman.

Philadelphia International Airport closed before daybreak. North Carolina's Charlotte-Douglas International Airport closed Sunday night because of ice, and Washington's National Airport also shut down as the storm moved in.

The federal government late Sunday gave the 350,000 workers in the capital area the option of when or whether to report for work today.

President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, had to ride by car back to the White House from Camp David, Md., because snow made it too treacherous to take the usual helicopter flight, said White House spokesman Dale Petroskey.

Freezing rain caused an 18-car pileup Sunday on the James River Bridge at Newport News, Va., backing up traffic for three hours, and 22 other cars spun out of control, police said. No serious injuries were reported.

The cleanup from the previous storm had already taxed Virginia's supply of sand and salt, said Aubrey Newman, a state Department of Transportation engineer. "Our troops haven't stopped since the Thursday snow began. We're still pushing snow," he said.

Interstate 40 east of Little Rock, Ark., to Memphis, Tenn., "is a solid sheet of ice, and the motels around there are filling up" with stranded travelers, Tom Watson, an Arkansas State Police dispatcher said Sunday.

One Shell Lake, Ark., motel had people sleeping in the lobby, the laundry room and the game room, said desk clerk Patricia White. "We dug out every available pillow and blanket that we can scrape up," Ms. White said.

In Lexington, Mass., a 26-year-old snowplow operator clearing snow from the last storm was crushed to death Sunday when his head became caught between the plow's hydraulic arm and the cab, said police Sgt. Norman Carlson.

Elsewhere on Sunday, bitterly cold air hung over the northern Plains, with lows in Minnesota of 41 below zero at Warroad, 40 below at Embarrass and 34 below at International Falls, and 22 below at Park Falls, Wis.

Miami set a record high temperature for the date of 84 degrees, topping the 1948 record by one degree. Stockton, Calif., had a high of 67. The old record for the date was 65, set in 1976.

Snow squalls fed by the Great Lakes blew across upstate New York and Barnes Corners, about 15 miles east of Lake Ontario, got 34 inches of snow for a total of 84 inches on the ground Sunday, the National Weather Service said.

Minor flooding was reported along several rivers in eastern North Carolina on Sunday. Wind-driven ice jams caused flooding along Michigan's St. Clair River, but no evacuations were ordered.

Snow also continued today over the mountains of southern Wyoming and Colorado, where 17 inches of snow had fallen in a 24-hour period.

Gas Price Jumps Expected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 3-cent jump in gasoline pump prices over the past two weeks is probably part of a trend as retailers try to recoup mounting costs, an oil industry analyst said.

"The price increase appears to be accelerating," Tribby Lundberg, publisher of the Lundberg Letter, said Sunday.

The average retail price, including all grades and all taxes, was 90.96 cents a gallon in the just-completed Lundberg Survey of gasoline prices across the United States.

It was the second time in a row the increase in U.S. average wholesale prices exceeded retail by about 1 cent, Ms. Lundberg said.

"Which tells us two things," she said. "Retailers lost another 1 cent a gallon of their apparent gross margin, and ... there is mounting pressure for wholesale increases to get passed through to motorists."

According to the survey, at self-service pumps the average price of regular leaded gasoline was 78.75 cents a gallon; regular unleaded was 83.39 cents a gallon, and premium unleaded was 97.14 cents a gallon.

At full service pumps, prices were: regular leaded, $1.0601; regular unleaded, $1.1147; premium unleaded, $1.2087.

While most of a previous 3-cent increase reflected a tax adjustment, the latest hike reflects crude oil price increases passed on to retailers and such non-oil costs as insurance, utilities, rent and labor, Ms. Lundberg said.

Kohl's Party Suffers Setback Despite Victory By Coalition

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservative coalition was elected to another four years in office despite his party's worst showing since 1949 and impressive gains by the anti-NATO Greens.

Kohl's conservative Christian Democrats and their Bavarian allies, the Christian Social Union, won just 44.3 percent of the vote in national elections Sunday, down 4.5 percentage points from 1983.

It was an embarrassing setback for the party that guided West Germany out of the ashes of World War II under Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

"It's like a wedding where the bride doesn't show up," said a commentator on ZDF television.

The official results showed the opposition Social Democrats also slipped from their 1983 returns, winning 37 percent of the vote compared with 1983's 38.2 percent.

The business-oriented Free Democratic Party, part of the governing coalition with the Christian Democrats and Christian Social Union, received 9.1 percent of the vote, up from 7 percent in 1983.

The Greens, which first entered Parliament four years ago as a loose coalition of pacifists and former student radicals, received 8.3 percent of the vote, well up from the 5.6 they got in 1983.

A few independents picked up the remaining seats in the 497-member Parliament.

Kohl, 56, who had campaigned on West Germany's buoyant economy and loyalty to the NATO alliance, said his party's results were "gloomy" and marked a "painful loss."

But he said in a nationally televised address, "We reached our goal of continuing the coalition, and that is the important thing."

The official voting results give each party the following representation in the new 497-member Parliament: the Christian Democrats-Christian Social Union, 223 seats, down from 244; the Free Democrats 46 seats, up from 34; the Social Democrats 186 seats, down from 193; and the Greens 42 seats, up from 27.

The governing coalition now holds 53 percent of the seats in Parliament, down from 55 percent before the election. Officials said 84 to 85 percent of West Germany's 45 million eligible voters cast ballots.

Kohl, chancellor since October 1982, has been riding high in public opinion polls. He was encouraged by the healthy economy and an upbeat national mood that seemed little affected by the terrorist kidnapping of two West Germans in Lebanon this month.

The losses in the conservative camp, however, were a big blow to Bavarian Gov. Franz Josef Strauss, who had hoped his Christian Social Union would perform well enough to catapult him to Bonn as Foreign Minister.

The feisty Strauss did not try to hide his distress on national television, and complained that the Bonn coalition was to blame for losses in his state.

"We are being made responsible for Bonn policies," he said. "We were dragged into these losses."

Christian Democrat campaign manager Heiner Geissler indicated that sniping among members of the governing coalition may have hurt the conservatives.

"One should spend more time shooting at the enemy and not in one's own camp," he said.

Social Democrat Johannes Rau, 56, the popular state governor whose race for the chancellor's office had been viewed as doomed, smiled as he spoke to reporters at his party headquarters.

"Of course, we were the losers," Rau said. "But these results are a warning sign for the government."

Rau's campaign had called for a gradual end to nuclear power plants, the removal of U.S.-built nuclear missiles from Europe, increased social welfare programs and less money for defense.

"The result is worse than what we had hoped for at the beginning but much better than we had feared at the end," said Peter Glotz, the Social Democrats' general secretary.

Your Social Security Disability Benefits

BENEFITS DENIED?

Have you been denied benefits under Social Security's disability benefits programs? Do not be discouraged. That happens to most people who apply the first time.

Have you asked for reconsideration of your disability claim and been turned down a second time? Again, don't be discouraged or give up. That's the way the disability system works today.

Take your case one step further and go before a Social Security Administrative Law Judge for a hearing with a qualified representative to present your case. Then the chances of your winning benefits are somewhere between 70% and 80%. The Judge will see you and hear your personal description of your physical or mental illness, and your representative will present your case as it applies to the complex rules of the Social Security Act.

If you have a hearing requested or scheduled before an Administrative Law Judge, call now for an immediate conference. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for disability.

Where Are They?

There is concern in Winston-Salem and throughout the state with the announcement that RJR-Nabisco will be moving its headquarters to Atlanta.

The economic loss is not the entire reason for the concern. In fact, many employees will be left in Winston-Salem in the cigarette manufacturing industry that still thrives there. The move is a prestige loss in that the headquarters of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., which has always been in Winston-Salem, will no longer be there. The state will be losing one of the few of the nation's largest corporations which is in our boundaries.

The nearest comparison might be the loss of the old Atlantic Coast Line Railroad headquarters in Wilmington when that firm began a series of mergers which has taken the corporate headquarters entirely out of the state.

History tells us that Wilmington survived the blow of losing such a prestigious employer. Its civic boosters, recognizing the community had an adverse economic situation, went to work to bring in other industries and to promote Wilmington's position as a resort area. That, along with state port development, has contributed to the city's present thriving economy.

No doubt Winston-Salem will be spurred to offset the economic loss of RJR-Nabisco headquarters' moving.

The move prompted the thought, however, that many of North Carolina's greatest industries are homegrown. They were founded by entrepreneurs in the last century and early into this century and went on to become major national economic forces. The Reynolds and the Dukes founded tobacco fortunes. The Richardsons made it with patent medicines. Even Pepsi-Cola got its start in New Bern. Many textile and furniture operations began as homegrown industries which became national corporate giants.

As North Carolina searches for new economic impetus we wonder about what happened to that spirit of yesteryear that produced such giants of industry in North Carolina. Are there no Reynolds or Dukes out there today in our state who can provide the vision and drive to create new industries? Do today's counterparts simply settle down to become a successful part of existing corporations?

There must be those with the right mental and emotional tools to take what North Carolina offers and develop great corporations. There has never been a better time for their talents to emerge.

Maybe ...

If your attention is triggered by the letters U F O, then you presumably read some recent news stories of a Japan Airlines pilot reporting his cargo jet was shadowed by a huge unidentified flying object over Alaska last November and a purported second encounter with lights in Alaska's skies in January.

A separate account cited eight apparent UFO sightings in North Carolina during 1986. They were reported to a Lincolnton resident, one George Fawcett, who is connected with an unofficial group that keeps track of such experiences. Fawcett regards those eight reports as especially significant in that they include multiple witnesses, people who have agreed to use of their names. The size, shape and coloring of the objects they "saw" were widely varied.

One of them was purported to be "as big as two football fields"; others were described as being the size of an airplane (which is not helpful) ... and then there were smaller objects apparently the size of a basketball. Among the latter was "a tan-colored crusty object" hovering 70 feet away and emitting a "swishing" sound, that eventually moved away and out of sight.

Taken all together they add up to something highly implausible taking place in North Carolina skies. Yet, the feeling persists that some people have been witnessing something totally beyond their experience and comprehension.

Seeing "flying saucers" or unidentified flying objects has been an American phenomenon for maybe four decades. Tradition has it the first were observed at the close of World War II when a "formation" of saucers was said to have been seen in the Washington D.C. skies. (We do not recall the news media marking that occasion.) Since then the record is filled with hoaxes and manifestly fraudulent claims. There were other claims that could not be so easily dismissed though all were suspect.

None of it makes sense. But the recurring tales over a period of many years tends to add weight to wondering if maybe, just maybe....

Key Chairmanships Open

RALEIGH — The 1986 elections did little to change the face of the General Assembly. Democrats picked up only four seats from their Republican rivals and the number of returning incumbents is the highest of any session in at least the last 20 years.

Despite that relative stability, there will be some significant changes in personalities in the 1987 assembly. The retirement of several important House members, for example, will open key chairmanships to new chairmen.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan won't say who they'll appoint to head committees, but there's considerable speculation about job changes and this column is based on some of that talk.

The biggest plum in either chamber is the House Finance Committee chairmanship which had been held by retired Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, veteran chairman of the Revenue Laws Study Commission, is one possibility. He's sponsored dozens of bills that have fine-tuned the state's revenue laws. But Lilley may already have a more powerful job. He is chairman of the Rules Committee.

Ever since Quinn announced his plans to retire, Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, has been considered the other key possibility for finance chairman. Miller is a lawyer who has chaired the Judiciary I Committee.

Two of the House's four judiciary committees lost their chairmen to retirement in 1986. In the Judiciary III Committee, either Rep. B. Holt, D-Alamance, or Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, could move up from the post of vice chairman. But Blue would have to give up his post as co-chairman of the Appropriations Committee on Human Resources. Mrs. Holt, also a lawyer, would be one of the few women to ever head a judiciary committee.

In the Judiciary IV Committee, vice chairman Rep. Bobby Hunter, D-McDowell, a close ally of Ramsey, would seem to be a logical pick. In Judiciary I, should Miller move to Finance, vice chairman Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, would seem to be an obvious choice.

Three other lawyers might be thrown into this formula. Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, a Ramsey protégé, might want to move from his post as chairman of the Committee on Courts and the Administration of Justice. Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, has distinguished himself and might win one of these jobs, and Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, chairman of the Judiciary II Committee, might be in danger of losing his post. He was part of an insurrection that challenged the House leadership in 1986.

Two other key House posts are opening. Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare, has retired, so a new Banking Committee chairman is needed. Rawsey says only that he'll appoint someone who holds no position with a bank.

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, who many consider a future candidate for speaker, is reportedly anxious to leave his post as Insurance Committee chairman. Nesbitt might very well have first choice of any open chairmanship.

There had been some speculation that Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, might be in danger of losing his post as chairman of the House Expansion Budget Committee. Watkins is easily the second most powerful representative, behind Ramsey, and he is controversial. But Ramsey has only praise for Watkins. Don't expect the ever loyal Ramsey to dump one of the soldiers who rose through the ranks with him.

In the Senate, Jordan says some people will be moved around. Two budget subcommittee chairmen must be replaced, and Sen. Bill Staton, D-Lee, has already been appointed to head the Economy Committee, so his chairmanship of Judiciary II is open, maybe for vice chairman Sen. Bill Martin, D-Guilford.

Can't Stop The Ocean

The Cape Hatteras Light — the tallest structure of its kind in the world, a national landmark and the symbol of North Carolina — is in immediate danger of being destroyed by the sea that is advancing toward it.

We have four choices about what to do:

- Let the lighthouse fall in;
- Pump up or trap sand to make an artificial beach;
- Build some sort of engineering structure around it; or
- Pick up the 208-foot monument built in 1870 and move it.

A lot more is at stake than just the lighthouse. Almost everything built on the East Coast's beachfront will be threatened by the Atlantic within 30 years, if current erosion rates keep up.

More immediately, although there are no definitive studies that have quantified this, most coastal geologists would agree that as much as 30 percent of East Coast beachfront development is in imminent danger from an eroding shoreline today. Ocean City, Md., Sandbridge, Va., and Nags Head, N.C., are examples of communities at exceptionally high risk from a big storm.

Thus, whoever wins the battle of ideas over what to do with the Cape

Hatteras Light will influence the fate of billions of dollars worth of other construction on the East Coast's shores.

For the response of the American people to the possible loss of an important historical landmark may well set the tone for our response on a national scale to the problem of retreating shores.

And that problem is particularly important locally. Not only are erosion rates on East Coast barrier-island shorelines typically on the order of 2 to 4 feet per year, but on Cedar Island, Va., where beachfront lots were recently snapped up by Washington-area residents, the erosion rates range from 20 to 50 feet per year.

My position on the Cape Hatteras Light is that we ought to jack up the 2,600-ton, 20-story structure, put it on rails and move it back from the sea 2,800 feet.

Not only are there precedents for this engineering feat, but I think this is ultimately the cheapest and most effective solution. It will also set an example that offers the greatest promise for the long-range survival of the East Coast.

Shoreline retreat or erosion is a perfectly natural and inevitable phenomenon. Since the first accurate map of Cape Hatteras was made in the 1850s, the shoreline in front of the lighthouse has moved landward more than half a mile.

The whole lighthouse would almost certainly have fallen in during a 1982 storm had not the quick-thinking National Park Service torn up a nearby asphalt parking lot and thrown it into the sea in front of the lighthouse.

Storms are usually the immediate cause of shoreline retreat. But rising sea level is a particular problem for the lighthouse. There is much controversy about why the sea is rising. Some say it comes as a result of global warming. Others challenge this vigorously. But the fact that the sea is rising at a rate of about one foot per century is not in dispute.

One foot may not seem like much, but since, at Hatteras, the sea is rising across the very gently sloping coastal plain, a very small sea-level rise produces a large horizontal retreat. The ratio of shoreline retreat to sea level rise here is at least 2,000 to 1.

The Environmental Protection Agency has made estimates — which are controversial — that by the year 2100 the sea level may rise 4 to 7 feet above its present level due to a planetary warming trend melting the West Antarctic Ice Sheet.

If anything like that turns out to be true, the potential for erosion landward becomes downright startling. This is why the decisions the country must make at the shoreline are so painful-as well as important.

None of the alternatives are easy. We can build massive seawalls. But Americans have extensive experience with that approach, and even outfits like the Army Corps of Engineers have come to the conclusion that all walls do is cost a lot of money which is sooner or later wasted when the walls are destroyed by the implacable force of the ocean.

Truly destruction-proof structures may be possible. At least, that is what the Dutch think they have built. But the cost to the Dutch society is equivalent to our defense budget.

Meanwhile, seawalls have become increasingly unpopular politically. Because of the geological mechanics of shoreline retreat, if you stop erosion in one place with a wall, you will double the erosion somewhere down the coast.

Orrin Pilkey, professor of geology at Duke University and co-author of "The Beaches Are Moving," is editor of what will be a 20-volume study of state shorelines.

Strength For Today

Many of those who condemn hypocrisy accuse professing Christians of being the worst offenders in this regard. But it is only fair to point out that Christians, because of the high ideals to which they aspire, often lay themselves open to accusations of guilt which are not made against those who profess no religious faith.

Christians set up for themselves high standards. But because they are only human and are beset by sins as all people are, they inevitably fail to realize these ideals. Accordingly, the world regards them as hypocritical. It would be much easier for them to avoid having any standards at all.

Then they could never be accused of being hypocrites.

It is the Christian's task to make higher professions than he can live up to, to strive for higher ideals than he can reach.

U.S. Requires Dose Of Its Own Economic Medicine

In 1986 this country's international economic position continued to deteriorate — a deterioration that, if unchecked, almost certainly presages a decline in the American economy and standard of living.

The balance-of-trade deficit widened to more than $170 billion as imports continued to rise to nearly $400 billion. As a result, America's foreign debt grew to about $250 billion, making us by far the largest international debtor.

Optimists argue that the deficit has stopped rising, that the administration's efforts to improve American export competitiveness and level the playing field of international trade are beginning to work. Indeed, the dollar has fallen dramatically, making our exports cheaper in some markets and making imports from these countries more expensive.

While Congress has become more protectionist in rhetoric, the administration has become more protectionist in fact — ordering quotas on Japanese machine tools and reducing tariff benefits to key developing countries — even while loudly protesting its adherence to free trade.

And the United States has become less and less diplomatic in demanding that Japan and West Germany adopt more expansionary economic policies to stimulate world and U.S. trade.

But there is little evidence that the U.S. trade position, and more generally the relative competitiveness of the American economy, is fundamentally improving. On the one hand, American manufacturers and farmers are not finding it much easier to sell their goods in international markets; on the other hand, they seem to be finding that many American consumers simply prefer imported goods. Even the enthusiasts among policy analysts are now forecasting only a $40 billion improvement in the trade deficit. This means that the country's net foreign debt would continue to grow at a rate of about $100 billion per year.

In one sense the underlying problem is simple: Americans are consuming more than they are producing. The difference is made up with imports and is financed by foreign borrowing. From this perspective the problem does not look much different from that which has affected other high-debt countries. And there the solution has been simple: The time-honored U.S. government and International Monetary Fund sanctioned method of correcting an excessive deficit has been to induce a recession, which brings consumption into line with production, and savings into line with investment. If it is reinforced by simultaneous structural changes in underlying economic incentives, the quick fix of a recession can be translated into sustained recovery and expansion; if it is not reinforced by these changes, at least the country learns to live within its means.

Of course, translating the IMF prescription for Mexico to the United States is potentially dangerous in a world that still looks to America for international economic leadership and still conducts most of its commercial activity in dollars. However, sooner or later the world's creditors will demand higher returns for the risk of financing U.S. deficits or will shun U.S. investments altogether. The result would be financial chaos and economic depression for the United States as well as the rest of the world economy.

The premise, then, is that the U.S. balance of trade is so misaligned that only a recession can correct it, and the longer a recession is delayed the more severe and painful will be the ultimate correction. The goal of policy makers now should be to minimize the pain while maximizing the effect of the corrective effort.

If the core of the problem is excessive U.S. consumption (as manifested in the trade gap) and inadequate U.S. savings (as manifested, in part, in the U.S.

budget deficit), then economic policy should be aimed directly at these issues. This could be done through an emergency economic program built around the following elements:

—A temporary tariff on all imports, with the proceeds used to finance an accelerated domestic adjustment process, including worker retraining and relocation, and accompanied by a presidential commitment to forgo new protectionist measures for the duration of the program.

—A two-year income tax surcharge applied entirely to deficit reduction, along with renewed efforts toward the control of expenditures.

—An agreement with West Germany and Japan to help finance our deficits so that interest rates do not rise excessively.

The immediate result of such shock therapy would be a U.S. recession, as consumption of both domestically produced and imported goods fell. The trade balance and the budget deficit would improve. Foreigners would scream that we were trying to solve our problems at their expense, conjuring up the specter of the Smoot-Hawley tariff that helped precipitate the Great Depression, but they might be made to understand the greater danger to the world economy if we continued on our present course.

This would set the stage for more fundamental improvements in the structure of the U.S. economy that are essential to restoring American competitiveness and rebuilding the standard of living. But without a dramatic initiative such changes will be too slow in coming and too gradual in their effect.

This is the cure that American financial experts have prescribed to other debtor countries for years.

IN THE STATE

Ports Authority

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — A state Ports Authority investigation has concluded that dredging in the Morehead City harbor, combined with age and stress, triggered the collapse of a bulkhead that threatened several large oil tanks.

James R. Meeker, port safety officer, said a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers dredge had been working about 100 feet from Berth 1 when the center section of a 350-foot-long bulkhead, concrete work area and piling gave way.

Meeker said his investigation indicated that the bulkhead and dock that slid into the harbor Jan. 16 had been weakened by age, high tides that saturated the underlying soil and stress from large ships. Berth 1 was built more than 50 years ago.

Meeker said all the conditions had "played a part in the collapse" and that a similar incident could have occurred in the next six months even if there had been no dredging.

"Most of the players were in place and waiting for one thing to blow the whistle," Meeker told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "Dredging was the finger on the trigger."

The work, which had been completed within hours of the collapse, had been requested and paid for by the Ports Authority, which operates state ports in Morehead City and Wilmington. A pipeline dredge was used to pump sand from the harbor bottom to a disposal on Brandt Island.

After the collapse, the encroaching water advanced 150 feet, cut through a dike around a fuel tank farm, undermined one oil tank and threatened another tank before the erosion stopped and port officials filled in the holes.

Emergency work to build up the dike and to pump oil from the endangered tanks at the Colonial Oil Industries Inc. tank farm averted an oil spill into the harbor and nearby waters.

Port and Colonial Oil officials said they had known for years that Berth 1 was in poor condition, but they said they were surprised by the location of the collapse and the extent of the damage to the shore. The Ports Authority had planned to reconstruct the berth this summer as part of an $800,000 improvement project.

Weekend Fatalities

By The Associated Press
Three people have been killed in traffic accidents in North Carolina over the weekend, the state Highway Patrol said today.

Kevin Dale Sides, 27, of Richfield, was killed at about 2:45 a.m. Sunday on N.C. 49 about a mile south of Mount Pleasant when his car ran off the right side of the road and hit a

Martin May Propose Expanding Teachers' Career Ladder Project

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says the career ladder program for teachers is working well, but teachers say the pilot program in 16 school systems still has problems, most notably evaluations they say are rigid, unfair and dispiriting.

"Martin's making us fly in an airplane that clearly hasn't had all the bugs worked out of it," said Karen Garr, N.C. Association of Educators president. "You don't get on board something that's still in the experimental stages."

The News and Observer of Raleigh said unnamed administrative sources had indicated that Martin will propose in his February budget message that the program be expanded statewide in 1988-89. Martin would not discuss his timetable for the program.

"It's been tried, and it's going well," Martin said. "I don't want to interfere with the pilots, but we can't wait forever."

The career ladder breaks with the traditional lock-step pay scale in which teachers move up according to years of experience and degrees received. Instead, teachers move up a two-level scale after passing evaluations of their classroom skills.

Proponents say the ladder will sharpen teachers' skills by pointing out weaknesses and will draw a brighter cadre of college graduates into teaching with the lure of higher pay and growth opportunities.

Under the present system, teacher pay peaks early and at a low level — $27,730 a year for a teacher who has 19 years of teaching experience and at least a master's degree. At the top of the career ladder, a teacher with 21 years experience and a master's degree would earn $35,160.

During 1985-86, the first year of piloting, 6,200 teachers were evaluated in 16 school systems four times by teams of principals and trained evaluators. The evaluators were teachers or administrators who had volunteered to do the reviews. Teachers were judged according to a new format and guidelines approved by the State Board of Education. Almost 97 percent passed — not surprising, state officials said, because they all were tenured and had to perform at a standard level.

Those teachers moved to the first of two new pay steps, receiving a 5 percent salary increase. Thus, the top salary became about $29,100.

Teachers seeking to move to Level Two are being evaluated this year, and will have to score higher on the evaluation. Those who pass will receive a 10 percent pay increase.

A third pay level has been proposed, leading to a top salary of $37,000. The legislature has yet to approve it.

Martin said the pilot programs had been successful and that he would propose funding for the state's 124 other school systems to prepare teachers to move to Level One.

"I'm convinced it will work and teachers generally agree it has strengthened the educational process and honed their professional skills," Martin said.

Legislators are putting distance between themselves and the experiment.

"There's not a lot of affection for it, but we haven't yet found the better mousetrap, and that has caused a lot of concern," said Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, co-chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. "I have some serious questions about whether we'll ever be able to implement it statewide."

Journal's Editorial Angers Doctors

GREENSBORO (AP) — The North Carolina Medical Journal's letters-to-the-editor columns this month are spiced with angry doctors' demands for an apology for publishing an editorial that some letters described as "Vatican baiting," "blatant anti-Catholic" and "inflammatory."

The journal's editor, Dr. Eugene Stead, 78-year-old Duke University emeritus professor of medicine, says no apology or retraction is warranted or will be forthcoming.

The editorial urged physicians to counter the influence of the political right, fundamentalists and the Catholic Church toward sex education, the availability of birth control and abortion.

The editorial, "Sobering Thoughts," was the view of its authors, Drs. Takey Crist, Paul Williams, Russell Barnes, H. William O'Neill — all of whom work at the Crist Clinic for Women in Jacksonville.

In the editorial, Crist, an obstetrician and former professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, encouraged North Carolina doctors to "act now and voice our opinions to responsible leaders."

Crist argued that "most of the solid foundation laid down in our state during the 1960s and 1970s by Carolina Population Center, Planned Parenthood and other fertility-control programs, is being crippled by our government, the fundamentalists, the Catholic hierarchy and our litigious society." He said those "forces, working together, are destroying our patients' rights to reproductive freedom."

Crist told the Greensboro News & Record he wrote the editorial to show doctors that many health-care issues affecting women and infants have been tangled up by the "politicizing and emotionalization" of sex education, birth control and abortion.

Stead said his personal view of the controversy is that "certainly the Catholic Church does seem to complicate these (reproduction) problems for doctors caring for people." That's surprising, he added, because "this protestant doesn't take his religion that seriously."

The editorial, Stead said, did not represent the views of the medical journal or its sponsoring society.

Not to have published the piece would have been censorship, Stead said, since the journal's policy is that its pages are "open to all who have something to say and can write interpretable English."

But critics contend that even though the editorial carried the names of its authors, being called an editorial makes it the view of the journal and, thus, the position of the state's 7,263-member Medical Society.

Dr. Stephen J. Naso, a Charlotte surgeon who wrote one of the critical letters, complained in an interview that "about all it accomplished was to enable some more venom to be spit out." He said "bigotry is at the basis of this, not religion."

Despite the disclaimers from journal editors, Naso said "they are responsible for its contents. It was an editorial, published as such."

Dr. Robert W. Prichard, chief of pathology at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, defended the right of both the journal and the physicians to publish the article, writing in a letter that "the Pope and other Roman Catholics are not shy about stating their opinions."

In an interview, Prichard, a member of the journal editorial board, said the reaction was predictable.

"There are a lot of angry people out there," he said. "Look at all the money Jesse Helms gets. I think it comes from angry, outraged people."

Crist said he was surprised by the furor the more recent editorial has created.

Among the seven published letters severely criticizing that editorial was one from the Rev. John F. Donoghue, Catholic bishop of the Charlotte Diocese.

"The Church never has attempted to dictate to members what political stands they should take," Donoghue wrote.

"I never had a bishop write to me," Crist said in the interview. "The majority of the members of the medical society are intelligent, broad-minded physicians ... but a lot of doctors right now are reluctant to speak out in the present atmosphere."

"You do abortions and you get death threats. Abortion clinics get bombed. These people call you murderers. If you try to encourage school boards to have responsible sex education, they accuse you of promoting pornography and being a sex maniac. Most doctors' practices can't take that, but I think it's time to act together."

In his published response to the critical letters, Crist wrote that they "employ the tactic of psychic terrorism directed at all readers. They seek to terrorize physicians so they dare not look critically at Catholic Church positions in American and world affairs, that the Vatican prefers go unexamined and unchallenged."

Committee Deadlocked

By The Associated Press

The Southern Baptist Convention Peace Committee has only four months left to recommend ways to reconcile the feuding factions within the denomination, but some members say two years of work have led them nowhere.

"The fundamentalist mind-set is as rigid as it can be, and coupled with political power it has become even more rigid," one committee member, who asked not to be identified, told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "There's no effort to preserve the denomination intact because they think it's not necessary."

"It's horrible," said another member, a moderate who also asked not to be identified. "We've wasted time and money — and we're back at square one."

But the Rev. Charles Fuller, a Virginia minister who is chairman of the committee, said he has not given up hope.

"Southern Baptists have a right to have someone committed to the task," Fuller said. "The Peace Committee is the best hope we have for this problem."

The convention has been split since 1979, when conservatives took power from the moderate establishment. The animosity peaked at the convention's tumultuous 1985 session in Dallas. Leaders suggested the Peace Committee — made up of 22 laymen and clergy, moderates and conservatives — to examine causes of dissension and make suggestions for healing.

Murder-Suicide

HILLSBORO, Ore. (AP) — Washington County sheriff's deputies say a soldier apparently fired a shotgun blast through a window, killing his estranged wife, then turned the weapon on himself.

Jeffrey Lynn Wray, 19, of Thomasville and James Lee Elliott, 20, of Trinity, were killed about 8 p.m. Saturday on a rural road about a mile west of Thomasville when their car collided head-on with another vehicle, troopers said. Wray was driving the vehicle and Elliott was a passenger in Wray's car.

The fatalities bring the death toll on North Carolina roads to 74, compared with 101 on this date last year.

Valerie K. Hinkson, 27, was found dead of a shotgun wound in the back about 2:30 a.m. Sunday at her home in the Cedar Hills area west of Portland, sheriff's spokeswoman Sherre Calouri said.

At 10 a.m. Sunday, a maid at a nearby motel reported finding a man's body. Deputies later identified the dead man as Sgt. 1st Class Robert H. Hinkson, 35.

Hinkson had been stationed at Fort Bragg in Fayetteville, N.C., and had flown to Portland Saturday, Ms. Calouri said.

"From the results of our initial investigation it appears Hinkson died from a self-inflicted shotgun wound to the head," she said.

A man who was at Mrs. Hinkson's home when the shooting occurred, Thad K. Esser, 19, sustained superficial shotgun wounds, Ms. Calouri said. He was treated at a Portland hospital.

Deputies believe Hinkson shot his wife with the shotgun through the front window of her home.

The couple's 3-year-old son and a teen-age boy, identified as a brother of Mrs. Hinkson, were asleep in another room when the shooting occurred and were uninjured, Ms. Calouri said.

Helms Sees Committee Win As Aiding Reagan

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms says his election as the top Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will give President Reagan an ally who can help keep him informed about foreign policy.

"I will now be able to be sure that the president knows what's going on," he says. "I'll be able to say, 'Mr. President, do you know about this?'"

Helms believes his new position also will force the State Department "termites," officials he considers too accommodating to the Soviets, to deal with him. Secretary of State George Shultz has assured him, he says, that he will be consulted about policy and diplomatic nominations before decisions are made.

"Up to this time," Helms told The Charlotte Observer, "there was no consultation with any conservative about these nominations in the Senate."

Despite Helms's record as a caustic critic of U.S. foreign policy, his fellow GOP senators elected him ranking Republican on the committee last Tuesday in a 24-17 vote. That overrode the 7-0 vote by committee members to give the job to Sen.

Richard Lugar, R-Ind., who was committee chairman the last two years, when Republicans controlled the Senate.

Officially, leading Democrats, State Department officials and the White House say they look forward to working with Helms. Privately, some people say that while Helms can be difficult, he won't be impossible to work with.

But a State Department official curses and a congressional Democrat says Helms's new job "just means that you've got a virtually deadlocked committee" because Helms's committee position gives him more power.

The committee chairman controls two-thirds of the committee budget and most of the staff. But Helms will control the GOP third of the budget, about $650,000, and hire about nine staffers.

He will select witnesses for committee hearings and help draft committee reports. He will negotiate the committee legislative and hearing schedule with the Democrats. He will be GOP floor leader when committee bills reach Senate floor debate.

He will go to the White House for briefings of congressional leaders. If Republicans regain control of the Senate in 1988, Helms is in position to become committee chairman.

In addition, "The ranking minority member really is the No. 1 voice for the opposition in the Senate," says David Sanders, spokesman for the Conservative Caucus. "Jesse Helms is a much more forceful, articulate and clear voice for what the Republicans should be saying about U.S. foreign policy."

Helms says he will name Jim Lucier, a longtime aide, as minority staff director. Lucier is expected to bring with him several members of the "Helms State Department," a cadre of well-traveled, active conservatives who have worked for Helms for years. Critics have accused them of being farther to the right than Helms.

"Helms probably is the most moderate person in his office," said one State Department official who asked not to be named.

Helms minimizes possible confrontations with committee Democrats.

"I get along real well with (committee Chairman) Claiborne Pell," he says. "He's a model of civility, a very pleasant man."

But conflict seems almost inevitable. Democrats will likely try to reduce support for Nicaraguan contras. Helms thinks the country isn't doing enough.

Democrats want to approve two nuclear-testing treaties with the Soviets. Helms already has maneuvered to force a two-thirds vote for approval of the treaties.

Helms has a long record of opposition to the foreign policy of both Democratic and Republican administrations.

He criticized President Gerald Ford for not meeting with exiled Soviet dissident Alexander Solzhenitsyn. He attacked Jimmy Carter for giving Panama control over the Panama Canal. And he has opposed Reagan administration policy and El Salvador and accused Shultz of purging true conservatives in the State Department.

Such attacks stem from Helms's basic philosophy of U.S. foreign policy. He believes it is his duty "to do everything I can to cause this government, and especially the U.S. State Department, to abandon its practice of trying to cozy up to the Marxist countries around the world with appeasement and compromise, and to stand flat-footed with and for our friends."

To Helms, the United States has "concentrated on managing its own decline" since World War II. He believes this decline has been fostered by numerous multilateral treaties that surrender U.S. authority.

This policy, Helms believes, has been pursued by a Foreign Service elite that seeks to avoid crisis rather than overcome it. This elite, he says, believes that "the critical function of U.S. diplomacy is to manage the transition to a world in which both the communist countries and the free countries can agree on the same values."

Since the communists are murderers, tyrants and liars, Helms says, "What does that do to our values?"

To Helms, the United States "should be working to undermine the economic power, the social stability and the military strength of every communist regime in the world." In the end, Helms says, "there can be no compromise with communism."

Inmates Want Compliance Hearing For Corrections

GREENSBORO (AP) — Attorneys representing inmates in 14 prisons say the state has failed to provide educational and vocation training required by a 1985 consent decree that ended a lawsuit against the state.

The attorneys have asked U.S. District Judge James B. McMillan to schedule a compliance hearing at which the state Department of Correction would have to show it is fulfilling the consent order, said attorney Melinda Lawrence of Raleigh.

McMillan signed the consent judgment in a suit brought by inmates at 14 southern Piedmont prisons. The judgement called for eliminating triple bunking, improving recreational facilities and expanding vocational and educational programs for inmates.

The state agreed to involve at least 80 percent of the 2,000 prisoners in the southern Piedmont in programs for six hours a day, five days a week.

The state Correction Department and the inmates' attorneys disagree as to what constitutes a full-time program, assistant Attorney General Lucien Capone said. He said state officials are trying to settle some issues with the inmates' attorneys to avoid going to court.

"We're working on it," Capone said in a telephone interview. "I certainly hope we can avoid going to court."

State officials have said they want to avoid going to court for fear the federal government will take control of the prisons, as it has in other states with crowded systems. North Carolina's prison system has about 4,500 prisoners above capacity, based on federal standards that require 50-square-feet per inmate.

Capone, speaking last month to at the General Assembly's Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations, said the state Correction Department had some inmates cleaning buildings. Some prison officials believed the janitorial work qualified as educational or vocational programming.

"I went to the governor's office and said, 'This has got to be fixed,'" he told commission members at their Dec. 18 meeting.

The state avoided a similar hearing last year by promising to meet requirements set out in the order. Among other things, the Correction Department hired 40 employees to help beef up programs and to handle clerical duties generated by the consent decree.

Some legislators, including Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, were upset that the legislature was not notified of the problems in meeting the consent decree and the need for more prison staff. Money for the additional 40 positions, estimated at more than $600,000, was taken from a Correction Department reserve fund.

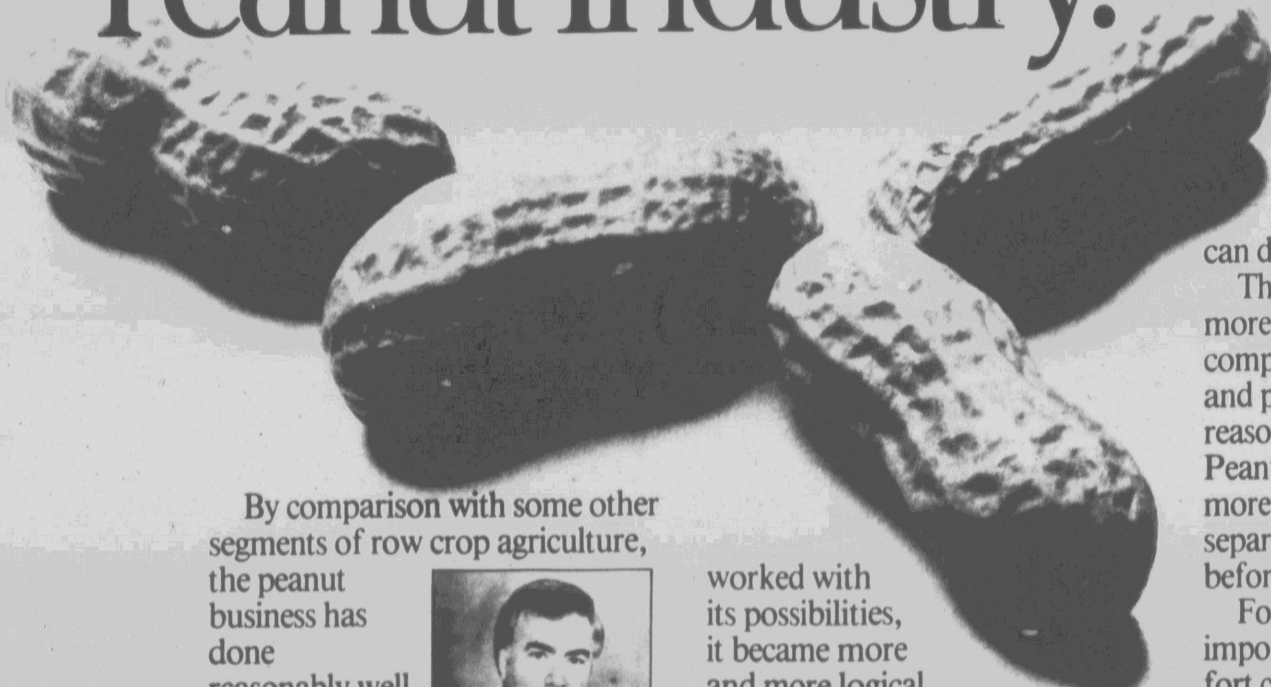

Ms. Lawrence, the inmates' attorney, said the state "has taken some fairly significant steps toward compliance." If the compliance hearing is scheduled, Ms. Lawrence said, the judge could enter an order forcing the state to meet provisions of the court order.

Building A Brighter Future For The Peanut Industry.

By comparison with some other segments of row crop agriculture, the peanut business has done reasonably well. But those of us who are in agriculture and have made it our life know one thing for certain: if we are to have a bright future, even in peanuts, we have to make some changes. And we feel it important to make those changes while we can, before they are forced upon us.

It was in this search for a brighter future for all of us in the peanut industry that the thinking for the new Golden Peanut Company was formed. And as we worked with its possibilities, it became more and more logical that we proceed.

Let me share with you the four driving forces behind this decision to form Golden Peanut Company by blending the peanut activities of Gold Kist and those of Archer Daniels Midland's Columbian Peanut Company.

First, it gave us a company able to focus its total resources and energies on peanuts. Both companies had very knowledgeable people working in the peanut operations, but many of them had duties in other areas, too. We are convinced the success of the peanut industry demands people who are giving their entire attention to peanuts, and that is the case with our new company.

Second, all agriculture is learning the hard way that producing a product isn't enough; we must also market products effectively. Today's U.S. and world markets call for adequate size, the flexibility to meet customers' needs quickly, and a determination to be above-average marketers. Golden Peanut intends to build new and expanded markets for peanuts, both in the U.S. and in international markets. They won't come quickly or easily, but we believe we can do it.

Third, all of us need to be more efficient if we are to compete, especially shellers and processors. For many reasons the new Golden Peanut Company will be more efficient than the two separate companies were before.

Fourth, but probably most important, no marketing effort can go forward without a sure quality supply, which means any peanut sheller which wants to build for the future must be as certain as possible of its supply. To do this we must be able to offer an advantage to peanut producers. This we will do through innovative programs which we believe will be fair to both farmers and customers. And, yes, there were other reasons, but the four listed here drove the idea forward.

The real thing that kept us working on the formation of Golden Peanut Company, through many frustrations and pitfalls, was the common desire for one thing: TO BUILD A BRIGHTER FUTURE FOR THE PEANUT INDUSTRY. Golden Peanut Company is now a reality. We humbly ask your help, knowing we do not have all the answers but striving to do what will be best for all of us.

On behalf of the people of GOLDEN PEANUT COMPANY

Believers Have Seances

EDITOR'S NOTE — After three sisters in upstate New York claimed they had made contact with the spirit world 140 years ago, seance circles began to spread. A reporter who had never tried to interview dead folks recently sat in on a seance at a spiritualist church in the suburbs of Albany, one of several hundred such groups around the country.

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press Writer
LATHAM, N.Y. (AP) — You've never seen a church like this one. No sign on the lawn out front. No inspirational messages. No "Jesus saves." Not even "Have a Nice Day!"

Inside, no stained glass, no holy objects, no crosses.

Look again. There's a scroll on the wall with a "declaration of principles." Principle one: "We believe in Infinite Intelligence."

Principle five launches your mind into a new orbit: "We affirm that communication with the so-called dead is a fact, scientifically proven by the phenomena of Spiritualism."

The National Spiritualist Association of Churches also has a history like no other church. No savior or messiah here. The association evolved rapidly from its origins near Rochester a scant 140 years ago when three sisters claimed to produce spirit "rappings."

Katharine, Margaret, and Leah Fox of Hydesville so amazed neighbors in their central New York community that their reputation soon spread. Some heard in their mysterious thumpings a clear signal that communication with the dead was possible. Some suspected it was the devil's work. Others caught the pungent aroma of hoax.

Their growing fame carried them to Albany and finally New York, where they attracted the interest of some notable people, like Horace Greeley, founder and editor of the New York Tribune.

Greeley witnessed the "rappings" of the Fox sisters when they came to New York City in the spring of 1850. He eventually came to believe in spiritualism, hosted the Foxes on their trips to the city, wrote favorable stories about them, and even sponsored their lectures. He participated in the seances of the so-called "New York Circle" of early American spiritualists.

Margaret Fox eventually admitted that their "rappings" were fraudulent, produced by the cracking of joints in their toes and fingers. But many spiritualists today insist Margaret was paid to disavow the rappings.

In any case, seance circles did begin to form in an effort to conjure up those percussive spirits — whatever they were — and those small groups grew into a national organization incorporated at the 1893 World's Fair in Chicago. Today, the association claims 300 camps, societies, and churches around the country — with affiliated groups in 39 nations. The church in this Albany suburb is one such group, with the same prerogatives and tax-exempt status as any other recognized church in the country.

"The rappings at Hydesville were the rappings that were heard around the world," Alice Hughes said recently. Miss Hughes, at 99 one of the oldest spiritualist ministers in the nation, co-founded the Capital District Spiritualist Church in 1978 with Stephen Robinson.

The Capital District Spiritualist Church concerns itself largely with helping members develop their own psychic abilities, according to Robinson, who now serves as full-time, salaried minister. He said the goal is to find "the ultimate truth, made of intelligence, which is essentially creative."

The church holds Sunday services, much like other churches. There are "lectures" which sound like sermons, hymns, and, of course, a chance for everyone to drop a few bucks into a basket.

But the similarity ends there. People begin to come forward with messages for one another. They are messages from the spirit world — warnings, exhortations and encouragement.

The seances held regularly in the basement of the church focus even more exclusively on honing the sixth sense and talking with the hereafter. At one recent seance, about two-dozen people sat in the traditional circle in total darkness while "The Planets," by Gustav Holst, a turn-of-the-century English astrologer and composer, provided otherworldly Muzak. Participants were told to imagine a beach. Then they were instructed to let their minds drift away from that beach and into the clouds. Soon, they were mentally motoring among the stars.

No spirits materialized that evening — at least none visible to one first-time visitor. But circle members, many of whom were also attending their first seance, did manage to sense some apparently accurate facts about one another based only on a first name.

Psychical development takes on more rigor at the church's Psychic Studies Institute. One of the church's major sources of income, along with fund-raisers and voluntary member pledges, the institute offers instruction in such abstruse topics as psychometry and telepathy exercises; clairvoyance, clairaudience and trance, and the phases of physical and mental mediumship.

The classes brought Hillary Kramer of Clifton Park into the church four years ago. She now teaches at the institute and sports a business card as a "registered medium and psychic."

"I had never thought of myself as psychic," she said. But, she added, "I knew I was intuitive."

Like many members of the church, Mrs. Kramer was raised in a traditional religious setting. However, she felt a desire for something beyond her Jewish upbringing.

Of spiritualism, she says, "The difference I would see between this and most religions is there is no death, that you live on and can communicate with the dead. We believe that there's another world, a spirit world that's on another vibration, but that's here — a higher vibration, let's say."

She also likes the emphasis on individual moral responsibility and freedom from doctrine. "There's no such thing as committed sin, so to speak," she said. "The only sin would be how you view it."

Detractors have often seen spiritualism as diabolically inspired. But Robinson said the church actually accepts no devil.

The result is a church with a distinctly ecumenical, free-wheeling spirit.

"There's a positive feeling that sometimes you don't find in other places of worship," Mrs. Kramer says.

Servicemen Enjoyed Holiday Mail

DEAR READERS: Don Grimes, chairman of the America Remembers Campaign, asked me to help America remember their men and women in uniform who would be away from their homes during the holidays. "We'll call it 'Operation Dear Abby II,'" he said.

I said, "Yes! Dear Abby readers are the nicest people in the world." Well, you didn't let me down. Don called to say that when he arrived in Germany and visited the offices where our servicemen were working, they were inundated with bags of mail. Handmade cards and decorations sent by school children covered walls and hung from Christmas trees.

These young men were 18, 19 and 20 years old, and many of them had never been away from home before. Shouts of laughter filled the air as they opened the envelopes, exchanging with others so each would get mail from their home state. After working a long hard day, they were still up until 3 a.m. opening mail!

The avalanche received in Korea was so voluminous that they had to ship some of the mail to our troops in Japan! Read on:

DEAR ABBY: A great big thank-you from all of us on Okinawa. I'm assistant charge nurse of the Newborn Nursery at the U.S. Naval Hospital here, and cards and letters made their way up to our ward.

Being away from family and loved ones during the holidays is extremely difficult, but that mail assured us that we had not been forgotten. A heartfelt thanks to all who participated. — CONNIE PENNELL, LT., U.S. NAVY

DEAR ABBY: I am a sergeant in the U.S. Air Force stationed at Osan Air Base, Korea. You cannot imagine the excitement that mail created when it hit this base! I hope that everyone who wrote to us receives a response. Thanks, Abby, for making this the best possible Christmas the troops could have so far from home. — TOM CASTLE

DEAR ABBY: The men and women of the 122nd Signal Base in Korea want to express our sincere appreciation for all the wonderful letters and cards that came our way because of Operation Dear Abby II. It made us all feel closer to home during the holidays. — GINNY PARKER, CAMP CASEY

DEAR ABBY: When you printed the addresses of remote bases, I decided to write to someone just for fun. Since then, I've been corresponding with Cpl. Ken Jones. He's stationed in Cuba now, but he'll be out in April and I'm sure we will meet. My own brother goes into the Army in a few weeks and I hope somebody writes to him. Thanks, Abby, for making sure our troops were

remembered. — KELLY ROGERS
DEAR ABBY: I am on a ship overseas. I have a beautiful wife and two lovely children back home, and I miss them very much. I couldn't believe the sacks of mail from good-hearted people from all over the U.S.A. Our ship alone got at least 10,000.

The outpouring of love and support was unbelievable. Please tell your readers how grateful we are. — TIMOTHY WOODS, ON THE U.S.S. VINSON

DEAR ABBY: Just a note to say thank you! I haven't been in Seoul, Korea, long enough for my own family to send cards and letters for Christmas. But when I went to the recreation center yesterday, there they were — stacks of mail! I picked out those from my home state, and one of those letters contained the warmest holiday greeting I had ever received.

Tell your readers that this was the most wonderful thing they could have done for all of us serving our country so far away from our loved ones. — PVT. J. JOHNSON, SEOUL, KOREA

P.S. And now I am hearing from readers saying they were delighted and surprised to receive letters of warm gratitude from our men and women in uniform who were the recipients of their holiday greetings. Aren't people wonderful!

Some Couples Are Unrealistic

NEW YORK (AP) — A third of the couples who seek divorce in the United States actually have "a good marriage" and don't know it, according to Eleanor B. Alter.

Alter is a senior partner specializing in matrimonial law at Rosenman Colin Freund Lewis & Cohen.

Confused by radical changes in male-female roles, couples become unrealistic and over-demanding in many aspects of their relationships, she says.

"More than ever — because of the glamorous temptations continually passing before their eyes — people are falling for the myth that the grass is always greener and romance rosier on the other side of the fence," Alter says. "A strong dose of old-fashioned marriage counseling could save thousands of Americans from crossing that fateful barrier."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices dropped in early trading today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which saw-sawed 115 points inside of an hour Friday and tumbled on record volume, was off 6.75 by 10 a.m. EST to 2,094.77.

Among broader market indicators, the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.75 to 153.27. The American Stock Exchange's market-value index fell 1.23 to 294.22.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange exceeded 18.3 billion shares after the first half hour of trading, where losing issues outran gainers by nearly a 3-1 margin, with 878 down, 320 up and 394 unchanged.

On Friday, the Dow Jones industrials tumbled 44.15 points to 2,101.52, capping a day of unprecedented swings in the widely watched barometer of stock trading.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange soared to a record 302.39 million shares, against 188.66 million in the previous session. The old record volume of 253.12 million was set Jan. 15.

Icy State Roads Cause Traffic Accidents

Forecasters had expected up to 8 inches of snow to move across the state Saturday night, but low pressure and warm air threw many of their predictions to the winds.

"We've had such a hodge-podge of reports about this mixture of precipitation that at any given time, if you were right, you weren't right for long, and if you were wrong, well, you weren't wrong for long, either," National Weather Service specialist Andy Scott in Asheville said Sunday.

Charlotte police reported more than 100 accidents by 11:30 p.m. Sunday, including a nine-car pileup near Interstate 77. No serious injuries were reported, but forecasters said the traffic hazards would be worse by morning.

Shortly before 8 p.m. Sunday, snowfall amounts ranged from 5 inches in Boone to 2 inches at the Asheville airport. Polk County reported 2 1/4 inches, while Yancey County had received 3 inches and Black Mountain 2 1/4 inches.

Stokes County reported 1 to 2 inches of snow, while Surry had 3 to 4 inches. Rockingham reported accumulations of 2 to 3 inches. A mixture of sleet and snow was falling in Forsyth and Guilford counties, leaving about 1 inch of accumulation.

Muller said snow had stopped in Asheville and Hickory early this morning and was trailing off in the rest of the western counties.

As new precipitation fell, some secondary roads were still clogged with ice and snow from Thursday's storm that left 70,000 people without power in North Carolina and South Carolina.

Meanwhile, some minor flooding was reported along several eastern rivers.

Three families in the Princeville community near Tarboro were evacuated from their homes after water from a creek along the Tar River produced water a foot deep in the families' yard, Edgecombe County Emergency Service Coordinator Marion Proctor said.

"We have a small amount of flooding in our low-lying areas," Proctor said. "We were very fortunate that it snowed in the western portion of the state as much as it did, in that that slowed down the amount of liquid or flow."

On Sunday, the Tar River had risen another foot to 25.7 feet, or about 6 1/2 feet above flood stage, the weather service said. In Rocky Mount, the river had crested at 16.4 feet, about 1 1/2 feet above flood stage.

The Lumber River was holding steady at 13 feet or about 2 feet above flood stage, as was the Cape Fear River except at Elizabethtown and the William O. Huske Lock and Dam in Bladen County, where the river has risen to 8 feet above flood stage.

Arbitration Program

least five years' experience. The parties to the suit or the judicial district's senior resident superior court judge will choose the arbitrator from a court-approved list of lawyers specially trained for the program.

In Pitt County, Nichols said, lawyers already appointed as arbitrators include former N.C. Supreme Court Justice Robert Browning, former Chief District Court Judge Charles H. Wheabee, Jeffrey Miller, Russell Houston, Charles R. Hardee, Wilton R. Duke Jr., Randy Doub, Mickey Herrin, and Kenneth Hite.

"If additional people wish to serve, they can be added. It's not a closed list," according to Nichols.

They undergo a training program that includes a day of meetings, simulated arbitration, and receive "guidelines (for) dispute resolution," Nichols said.

"They are paid at a rate of $75 per arbitrated case, from ... grant money from foundations through the bar association," Nichols said. "When arbitration was established by the legislature ... to enhance the efficiency of the courts, (they said) no public funds were to be expended in the testing phase. So the N.C. State Bar Association has gone out and obtained grant support from a variety of foundations," Nichols explained.

Nichols predicted the first case in the arbitration program will probably be heard in March.

"Basically, the program is set up so once a case is filed," the case is monitored to "see when its been served and an answer filed. Once an answer is filed they have 60 days in which to arbitrate the case. The people involved have 20 days to stipulate to arbitrate. They notify us and we set it up. If the two sides can't agree (on an arbitrator) after 20 days, we select randomly one of the arbitrators.

"The rules allow for some flexibility to deal with conflicting needs" of the parties to the suit and the arbitrator. But according to Nichols, "we're mandated to get the case arbitrated within 60 days after an answer is filed."

Nichols said the arbitration sessions will be held in courtrooms or in conference rooms at the court house.

"Based on meetings with bar association people, I would say the majority (of lawyers are) very much favorably inclined" toward the arbitration program. "A few people are negative ... as with any change."

Nichols suggested that the arbitration program will not reduce the number of civil cases that are tried. Rather, he said, it should "move settlements up to an earlier point in the case."

"The date of arbitration will serve as a deadline," he said. Once a date for arbitration is set, the parties to the suit will see that one side is stronger and that a settlement is "in the best interest" of the parties.

"The vast majority — three-fourths — of civil cases are disposed of through settlement," Nichols said. "Now settlement only occurs when cases move into a position they are likely to be tried. (This) means more work for the court administrator, the clerks, the calendar officer. They don't know which ones will settle, which will not."

By having more cases settled, Nichols said, the length of trial calendars will be reduced, "which will help lawyers plan, and reduce the work in the clerk's office. But "judges will try about the same number of cases."

Nichols said that in the Third Judicial District in 1986, "we had about 1,100 cases ... that could have been arbitrated. Most of those were in district court. We averaged 80 cases a month eligible for arbitration in 1986 in district court ... only 6 cases a month were eligible in superior court."

Cases suitable for arbitration are those "chiefly involving monetary disputes," Nichols said. "Domestic relations cases are not included ... any case of personal injury, professional malpractice are excluded."

"Basically that leaves disputes over money owed, reclaiming of items such as appliances, automobiles ... those sorts of things," for arbitration.

Of 8,000 cases in Alleghany County, Penn., last year, Nichols said 72 percent were settled through arbitration. Only 4 percent actually went to trial. The 28 percent that were left filed for trial but only one in seven went to trial," Nichols said.

The Third Judicial District — Pitt, Craven, Carteret and Pamlico counties — Henderson, McDowell, Polk, Rutherford and Transylvania counties composing the 29th judicial district and Durham County, one of the state's eight urban single-county districts, are taking part in the two-year trial program.

academic areas ... not to become a true research institution."

Ferrell said the recommendation "goes to the board of governors ... to Spangler's office, for their long-range plan.

"This is the second time around for this request," Ferrell said, adding, "I think this time it ought to go through."

Angelo Volpe, ECU's vice chancellor for academic affairs, said today he believes "we are very much looking forward to that (reclassification which) will reflect what we're already doing with the doctorate programs in the med school.

Philippines Protest

By ROBERT H. REID Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Government forces fell back today as Cabinet ministers led more than 15,000 marchers arm-in-arm past the presidential palace gates to demand justice for at least 12 protesters slain last week by the military.

President Corazon Aquino, disregarding warnings from advisers, agreed to let the marchers come near her office. But she did not address or appear before the demonstrators.

The protesters marched across Mendiola Bridge, the main approach to the palace where the demonstrators were shot last Thursday. Then, instead of turning down a side street as planned for a rally, they pressed forward toward the palace gate.

About 600 riot police and 1,000 soldiers deployed in front of Mrs. Aquino's office withdrew.

The protesters had planned to hold a rally about 200 yards from the palace. But as their front ranks crossed the bridge, Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra began shouting, "You're marching through, you're marching through."

Social Services Minister Mita Pardo de Tavera said Mrs. Aquino asked about a dozen Cabinet ministers to join the marchers and insure there would be no clash with the military.

Many protesters raised clenched fists, while others wept and sang "Bayan Ko" — "My Country" — the unofficial anthem of the struggle against former President Ferdinand E. Marcos 20-year authoritarian reign.

After passing the palace, the crowd dispersed without incident.

National Affairs Minister Aquilino Pimentel said the decision to allow protesters to advance on the palace "was considered as a way of defusing the tension that was mounting."

"We can say now that Malacanang is truly for the people," said Lean Alejandro, secretary-general of the left-wing Bayan, or Country, movement, an organizer of the march.

The government and hospitals have said 12 people were killed Thursday when militant farmers demanding land reform tried to push through a police blockade on Mendiola Bridge. Opposition groups put the toll as high as 18. In addition, 94 people were injured.

Presidential spokesman Teodoro Benigno said Mrs. Aquino met for 90 minutes with march organizers before today's protest and accepted their demands to remove troops and barriers from the bridge.

"There will be no soldiers, no barbed wire," he said.

"The march will be allowed to go through unimpeded."

Benigno said Mrs. Aquino's military advisers told her they could not guarantee her safety in the palace if the protesters were allowed to cross the bridge, but she overruled them.

Georgetown Knocks DePaul From Ranks Of The Unbeaten

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Reggie Williams' 3-point field goal with 28 seconds remaining Sunday highlighted a 13-1 run that gave Georgetown a 74-71 victory over previously unbeaten and sixth-ranked DePaul.

No. 15 Georgetown trailed 70-61 with 2:44 remaining, but guard Mark Tillmon connected on a pair of 3-point baskets to cut the deficit to 70-67. A free throw by the Blue Demons' Dallas Comegys made it 71-67, but Tillmon hit a running one-hander to put Georgetown within two. After DePaul's Rod Strickland missed the front end of a one-and-one, Williams hit his game-winning shot from the right corner.

After a DePaul turnover on a botched inbounds play, Williams made two free throws with 16 seconds remaining. Comegys tried a three-point field goal with five seconds remaining, but the shot bounced off the rim and the Blue Demons were losers after 16 straight victories.

DePaul trailed by 13 early in the second half and by 51-40 with 14:32 remaining, but Strickland scored nine points in a 30-10 run that gave the Blue Demons an 11-point advantage. DePaul, however, did not score a field goal in the final four minutes.

Williams led Georgetown, 14-2, with 23 points and Tillmon added 19. Comegys scored 19 for DePaul, 12 in the first half. Strickland added 18, including 13 in the second half.

A layup by Ronnie Highsmith and a 3-point field goal by Williams ignited a 15-5 run that gave Georgetown a 35-25 lead late in the first half. After the Blue Demons responded with five straight points, Charles Smith scored two baskets in a 6-0 spurt that gave the Hoyas a 41-30 lead at halftime.

Kentucky.....80
Navy.....69

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Guard Rex Chapman led a balanced Kentucky attack with 22 points as the quicker Wildcats overcame a 45-point performance by Navy's David Robinson to post an 80-69 victory over the 18th-ranked Midshipmen in nationally televised college basketball Sunday.

Robinson's point total equaled a career high and set a Rupp Arena scoring mark, topping the 37 scored by Portland State's Freeman Williams on Dec. 16, 1977.

The 7-foot-1 senior center, hitting 17 of 22 shots, also had 14 rebounds and blocked 10 shots. He was given a standing ovation when he left the game with 14 seconds to go.

Kentucky, which has won four of its last five games, improved to 11-5. Navy fell to 13-5.

Navy, trailing 40-31 at the half, trimmed the margin to 40-37 on Robinson's two free throws at 18:34.

Chapman then hit a three-pointer at 18:06 to ignite a 12-2 run that moved Kentucky to a 52-39 advantage less than three minutes later.

Robinson keyed another spurt by Navy, scoring eight points in a 12-2 surge, that whittled Kentucky's lead to 54-51.

But Kentucky, with freshman guard Derrick Miller hitting two three-point shots, bolted out to a 66-53 lead at 6:13.

Navy could get no closer than five points the rest of the way, the last time at 74-69 on guard Bobby Jones' 16-footer with 1:29 to go.

Guards Ed Davender and James Blackmon each had 13 points and center Rob Lock scored 12 for Kentucky. Navy's Derric Turner had 14 points.

After falling behind 4-2 on guard Doug Wojcik's 12-footer with 17:24 left in the half, Kentucky went on a 13-2 tear, going up 15-6 on Chapman's three-point shot at 14:03.

Kentucky's margin increased to 23-12 on Blackmon's two free throws at 10:39. Robinson brought Navy to within 27-23 on a three-point play with 6:36 to go, but Kentucky spurred out to a 40-31 halftime lead.

Mets' Trial Set To Go

HOUSTON (AP) — New York Mets' Ron Darling and Tim Teufel, both charged with felonious assault of a police officer, were scheduled to appear today before State District Judge Joe Kegans.

Six months ago, four members of the team were arrested following a confrontation with police at a nightclub.

The scuffle resulted in felony assault charges for Teufel, a second baseman, and the right-handed Darling. They were accused of fighting with two policemen who were off-duty and working in uniform at Cooter's nightclub as security guards the night of July 19.

Pitchers Bob Ojeda, 29, and Rick Aguilera, 25, were arrested and charged with hindering police apprehension, a misdemeanor, by trying to help Darling and Teufel avoid arrest.

Ojeda and Aguilera were scheduled to appear before County Criminal Court-at-Law Judge Don Hendrix.

Published reports Saturday said the charge against Darling was reduced to a misdemeanor on Friday. The players' attorney, Dick DeGuerin of Houston, said he could not confirm the reduced charges.

Dejected Denver Bench

Goal-Line Breakdown Doomed The Broncos

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Leading 10-7 in the second quarter, Denver had first-and-goal at the Giants 1-yard line. The Broncos were poised to take command of the Super Bowl and force New York out of its game plan.

Then the Broncos broke down. Denver didn't get the touchdown, failing on three running plays. Worse still, they didn't even manage a field goal as Rich Karlis was wide right from 23 yards.

And as if that weren't enough to kill their momentum, moments later quarterback John Elway was sacked in the end zone by George Martin for a safety. Then Karlis missed yet another field goal, also to the right, from 34 yards.

Denver, although up 10-9 at halftime Sunday, was left to ponder in the locker room what might have been.

With scarcely a dissenting voice, the underdog Broncos had proclaimed all week the necessity of playing a perfect game if they were to defeat New York. What they got instead was a series of decidedly imperfect breakdowns that spelled a 39-20 Giants' victory for the NFL championship.

In approximate order of importance, the errors were:

— The two missed field goals by Karlis, who ironically had been the hero of Denver's 23-20 AFC championship game victory over Cleveland.

— Faulty execution on the first-and goal at the 1.

— Only two net yards on their first three possessions of the second half.

The Broncos even lost a pair of instant-replay decisions.

"To have a chance, we knew we had to do something with every scoring opportunity," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said. "We had a first-and-goal at the 1, and instead of seven points (or three) we came away with none."

"I called those three plays and I felt good about each one. I'd like to have them back. I don't know what happened. On the first-down play, the fullback and guard are supposed to be out front. That was really disappointing."

On their next series, Elway was dumped for the safety. On the previous play, tight end Clarence Kay dived for a low pass, which the officials ruled he trapped. Instant replay official Art McNally let the incomplete call stand, saying the replay was inconclusive.

"I had the ball all the way," Kay said. "There was no doubt in my mind. That was probably the biggest play of the game right there, and when they got that sack it changed the momentum of the game."

Added Reeves: "I wear glasses, but he caught the football. I don't care what the instant replay said."

A subsequent replay review let stand an incomplete call on an Elway pass to Steve Sewell.

"Certainly the missed field goals hurt us," Reeves said. "How much, I don't know. We should have had about 10 more points in the half."

Whether 10 more points would have significantly affected the second half is anybody's guess. By the time the Broncos made their initial first down in the second half, the Giants had taken a 33-10 lead.

"We couldn't get our offense going in the second half," Elway said. "Give the Giants credit for playing great defense."

And for playing great offense. Phil Simms, who completed 22 of 25 passes for 268 yards, led the Giants to 24 straight points.

"They kept us off-balance," Denver linebacker Jim Ryan said. "They threw more than we thought they would on first down, and they ran on second down. They also ran a lot against our nickel coverages. They went counter to many of their tendencies."

A tearful Karlis blamed faulty mechanics for his two misses.

"I pushed them, I blocked them to the right," he said. "I just didn't get my hips through. Maybe I tried to steer them. I just really hurt our momentum at the time. I feel like I let everyone down."

McConkey Gets Awaited Award

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — For 25 years, Phil McConkey has dreamed of Super Bowl glory. After he experienced it Sunday, he wanted the world to know how it felt.

The former Navy officer repeated his message about every other sentence after helping the New York Giants to a 39-20 victory over the Denver Broncos for their first National Football League championship in 30 years.

"You think about this your whole life," he said. "Every pushup you do, every game you play, every catch you make, it's all for a goal — to be the best."

"We are the best in the world and it feels as sweet as I imagined every day for the last 25 years."

McConkey felt particularly fortunate to be with a champion because he began the season with the Green Bay Packers. McConkey played two seasons with the Giants, primarily as a punt returner, but was cut in training camp because Coach Bill Parcells felt the team was deep enough at receiver and had rookie Mark Collins to return punts.

Green Bay grabbed McConkey, but he was back with the Giants after the fourth game of the season. Lionel Manuel, New York's top receiver, injured a knee which sidelined him the rest of the regular season. The Giants sent an 11th-round draft pick to the Packers for McConkey.

"What a bargain," Parcells said Sunday of the re-acquisition of McConkey, who caught two passes for 50 yards and a touchdown on Sunday. One reception came on a third-period flea-flicker that picked up 44 yards to the Denver 1. The other was for six yards and a fourth-quarter touchdown.

He also returned a punt 25 yards to set up a field goal by Raul Allegre in the decisive third quarter.

"I did my little piece to contribute," McConkey said. "I've heard how I can't do this and that. I can't go into the Navy for five years and then play pro football, or I'm too small or not fast enough to play in the NFL."

"But I put my nose down and found a way to do it."

McConkey said he thought the Giants were destined to be champions. "So many plays happened for us all year," he said. "There were so many things to stimulate us."

"George Martin intercepts that pass and runs (78 yards) for a touchdown against Denver. Mark Bavaro drags guys trying to tackle him 20 yards against San Francisco. Every game, you can go back and find plays that stimulated us."

What stimulated McConkey this season?

"I thought about all the men and women in the world who are in the trenches, on ships, to assure our freedom," he said. "They don't get enough credit for the jobs they do. Maybe I can help them get credit."

Edberg Takes Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — After he guided an easy volley into an empty court to wrap up his second straight Australian Open men's singles title, Sweden's Stefan Edberg raised his arms triumphantly.

"I feel just great," the 21-year-old Edberg said. "It is hard to put it into words."

Edberg outlasted a gritty performance by Pat Cash of Australia to capture the Grand Slam title 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 5-7, 6-3 Sunday.

"I gutted it out," Edberg said. "I worked hard on every single point."

"I've been really relaxed and hardly felt any pressure. It was a very gutsy performance today, probably one of my best matches. To win a Grand Slam in five sets takes a lot of effort."

Giants ...

"We'll use that in the game." McConkey caught two passes for 50 yards and a touchdown and returned a punt 25 yards to set up a field goal. He also was the Giants' main cheerleader, leading them onto the Rose Bowl field before the game and at halftime, waving a towel and "getting the crowd involved," he said.

"It tastes as sweet as I ever imagined," McConkey said. "I couldn't have dreamed of this at the start (of the season) when I was in Green Bay."

McConkey served a five-year hitch in the Navy before joining the Giants, was cut in training camp, then reacquired after the fourth game when Lionel Manuel hurt his knee.

"You think about this your whole life," he said. "Every pushup you do, every game you play, every catch you make, it's all for a goal — to be the best."

The game was a culmination of the Giants' greatest season in three decades. They hadn't been in an NFL championship game since losing their third straight in 1963.

But they have been in the playoffs four of the last six years, including the last three seasons. In 1984 and '85, they lost playoff games to the eventual Super Bowl winners, San Francisco and Chicago, respectively.

All of which made this victory even more satisfying. "It's the realization of a dream come true for not only me but the whole organization," said linebacker Harry Carson, a 12-year veteran whom teammates call the soul of the Giants. "It has been a long time coming."

Through 30 minutes, it didn't seem to be coming at all. Elway had taken the Broncos on drives of 45, 58, 74 and 47 yards in the first half. He had the Giants' vaunted defense off-balance, and confused.

But Denver managed only 10 points out of those drives, on a 48-yard field goal by Rich Karlis, tying the Super Bowl distance record, and Elway's TD. The Broncos failed to score after a first-and-goal from the New York 1 when Karlis set a dubious Super Bowl mark by missing from 23 yards, the shortest miss ever. He also botched a 34-yarder with 13 seconds left in the half.

"It hurt us so badly when we couldn't get into the end zone in the first half when we were first-and-goal," Elway said. "What a turning point that was! You know that anytime you don't get points when you have the opportunity, it hurts."

It hurt Karlis the most. The barefoot kicker's eyes were red from tears after the game. "I feel like I let everyone down," said the kicker who beat Cleveland 23-20 with an overtime field goal in the AFC Championship Jan. 11.

Martin's sacking of Elway in the end zone began New York's streak of 26 straight points. But it also signaled that the Giants' defense had had enough of Elway's creativity.

"The safety was a momentum-turning play for us," said Martin, whose 78-yard return of an interception was the key play in New York's 19-16 regular-season victory over Denver.

The Broncos also lost in their other Super Bowl appearance in 1978 to Dallas. Cornerback Louis Wright played in that game, too.

"I thought this one we had a better chance," Wright said. "It's the way we lost that hurts."

It is the way the Giants have beaten everyone the last 12 games. Just like the 49ers and Bears the last two seasons, the Giants were the NFL's best team in the regular season and they became the fifth NFC team in this decade to win the Super Bowl.

Giants, Simms, Take Top Billing

By SCOTT OSTLER

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

The New York Phil-harmonic played the Rose Bowl Sunday, with Lawrence Taylor on percussion and Phil "The Thrill" Simms conducting.

The Denver Broncos, downgraded to Shetland Ponies by Super Sunday, played second fiddle.

And if you were disappointed by the one-sided nature of Super Bowl XXI, a 39-20 Giant win, you haven't learned how to watch this ultimate game.

Viewing the Super Bowl, fans, you don't pray for a close, exciting game. You sit back and watch a demonstration of power and precision and domination.

It's like a prize fight. You don't root for someone to win on points. You don't watch in order to admire Mike Tyson's nifty footwork.

If you look at the game the right way, and if you're not from Denver, Sunday's contest was a thing of beauty.

It was what the ballplayers-like to call a good old-fashioned butt kicking.

Who expected otherwise this year? Listen, the Giants brought their own preacher man to L.A., and Reverend Kenneth Moore said during Super Week, "The man upstairs knows already they (the Giants) are going to win." How's that for an inside tip?

And in the locker room after the game, Giant linebacker Taylor slipped into a Superman jersey — minus the cape, because he planned to fly home with the team.

When you've got God and Superman on your side, you've got a fairly effective nucleus.

And when the opponents concede before halftime, well, as Lester Hayes would say, it's academic.

The Ponies had a 10-7 lead and first-and-goal at the Giants' one-yard-line early in the second half.

The Ponies had rocket-arm, crazy-leg John Elway at quarterback and no real running attack, other than Elway himself. The Denver running backs are furniture. The Giants have the greatest defense against the run since Zola Budd stopped Mary Decker.

So what do the Ponies do? Three sweep-type runs, zero yards. Then they blow the field goal. Suddenly, Denver was mile-low.

"I was surprised they ran as much as they did," said Taylor, who gets so keyed up for games that he gives his pregame meal a round-trip ticket.

"We stop the run pretty well. Any time John (Elway) drops back, we're in double trouble."

What if Denver had scored there? "It (the game) definitely could've got away from us," Taylor said.

Not likely. This was the Giants' day. Everything worked in their favor. For instance, there was some concern that the lush natural grass would work against the Giants, that Joe Morris would need a periscope to see over the high blades.

But after the pregame and halftime shows, starring the lip-syncing Beach Boys, Mickey and Minnie Mouse, Goofy, and the entire population of Kansas and Eagle Rock, the turf was trampled down to a 100-yard-long billiard table.

Broncos in corner pocket.

Strategy played a big part in the game, of course. How did the Giants

Celtics Slam Philadelphia

BOSTON (AP) — Charles Barkley thinks his Philadelphia 76ers are "the most dangerous team in the NBA, everyone fears us."

Barkley may just have to alter that brash statement, adding: except the Boston Celtics.

Boston's defending NBA champions dominated the 76ers almost to the point of boredom Sunday in rolling to a 111-96 victory before a national television audience marking time for Super Bowl.

"We may stink on a certain day, but there's always a good chance we are going to blow someone out of the building," Barkley said after scoring 18 points, but only one in the second half.

The Celtics didn't give the 76ers a chance to even get started as they charged to their fifth consecutive Super Bowl Sunday victory.

"We just played terrible," Barkley said. "We got beat by a great team. A lot of people were thinking about the Super Bowl out there, not the game."

That didn't include the Celtics, who dominated the game with the big front line of Kevin McHale, Robert Parish and Larry Bird.

McHale scored 30 points, including 14 in a third period blowout which padded Boston's lead to 30 points. Parish had 21 and Bird 17. Danny Ainge had 16, while backcourt partner Dennis Johnson took only one floor shot and finished with five points and nine assists.

"It was a mud fight in there and we came out on the good side," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "Our defense was tremendous. Defense was the thing that did it for us. Our guys were really scrapping and coming up with the ball."

"They had a very simple game plan and stuck with it," said Julius

Erving, who had only six points after a stading ovation, joined in by the Celtics, before the game. "We can't play half court basketball with Boston and hope to contend. Our game was not there."

The victory was the Celtes 55th straight against an Eastern Conference rival at Boston Garden since a loss to Milwaukee just before the 1985 playoffs. It also enabled the Celtics to reach the halfway mark of the NBA season with a 30-11 record.

North Carolina Moves To No. 1

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Sports Writer

North Carolina, which last held the No. 1 spot seven weeks ago, returned to the top of The Associated Press' college basketball poll today, replacing Iowa, which held the position for one week.

The Tar Heels, 17-1, received 59 first-place votes and 1,236 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters to easily outdistance the Hawkeyes, who suffered their first loss Saturday to snap a school-record 18-game winning streak.

North Carolina, ranked second last week, was No. 1 in the preseason poll and the Tar Heels held on for the first week of the regular season but they fell from the top spot when they lost 89-84 at UCLA on the way home from two games in Hawaii. Their two games last week were Atlantic Coast Conference blowouts - 79-53 over Wake Forest and 92-55 over Georgia Tech.

Iowa received two first-place votes and 1,141 points after a week of drastic up and downs.

The Hawkeyes beat then-No. 5 Purdue on the road 70-67 and followed that with another Big Ten Conference victory, 101-88 over Indiana, the first time a Hoosier team coached by Bob Knight allowed more than 100 points. They couldn't hold the homecourt momentum, however, as Ohio State beat the Hawkeyes 80-76 to snap the nation's longest winning streak.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 18-1, received the remaining first-place vote and 1,127 points to take third. The Runnin' Rebels, who were fourth last week, won all three of their Pacific Coast Athletic Association games last week.

Events Mark Birthday Of Artur Rubenstein

By CHARLES J. GANS
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Tony award-winning actor John Rubinstein took on a different kind of role earlier this month when he conducted the Artur Rubinstein Lodz Philharmonic Orchestra for two gala concerts honoring his late father, the renowned classical pianist.

The concerts celebrated the 100th anniversary of Artur Rubinstein, Lodz' most prestigious musical son who was born on Jan. 28, 1887.

John Rubinstein admitted to having some butterflies in his stomach before the event. "I love conducting, it's something I probably should have done as a main career. ... But I got lured away from a life of music by the theater," the 40-year-old actor and composer said. "I wasn't a very good pianist and didn't show a lot of talent for playing."

Rubinstein, his sister, Alina, 41, a psychiatrist, and their mother, Aniela Mlynarska-Rubinstein traveled from New York to Lodz to participate in celebrations honoring the late pianist. Another sister, Eva, 52, a photographer, has been in Lodz since October teaching a course at the state film school.

An independent American film crew was also in Lodz to do a documentary on Artur Rubinstein.

The philharmonic orchestra was named after Rubinstein following the pianist's death in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1982 at the age of 95.

The concert program featured two pieces close to the pianist: the romantic Frederic Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 2 in F-Minor, which Rubinstein performed with the Lodz orchestra during his last visit to his birthplace in 1975; and Ravel's "Valse Nobles et Sentimentales," a work he premiered.

John Rubinstein also selected his own orchestral suite, "Amber Waves," which he composed for a television film, and Gershwin's "An American in Paris," honoring his father who became a U.S. citizen in 1946 and lived many years in Paris.

Rubinstein, who won a Tony in 1980 as best actor for "Children of a Lesser God," and who has starred in the television series "Family" and "Crazy Like a Fox," has conducted studio orchestras performing his own film and television scores.

The Lodz concerts mark the first time he has conducted other composers' music in public with a symphony orchestra. He also has had no formal training in conducting, except for several lessons with Mehli Mehta, the father of conductor Zubin Mehta.

However, Rubinstein said he learned more in his childhood about conducting than he could in school by accompanying his father on tour and observing the world's leading conductors, including Herbert von Karajan and Leonard Bernstein.

He last visited Poland at the age of 12 in 1958 when his father returned to his native country for the first time since the outbreak of World War II to an emotionally enthusiastic hero's welcome.

"He played better on that occasion than I had ever heard him," the actor recalled. "When my father played the piano he communicated with and through the music the embodiment of his soul."

This was his first visit to Lodz, a bleak industrial city dominated by its textile factories, and it has been an emotional experience.

The Rubinsteins visited two 19th-century apartment buildings where the pianist was born and lived until he left at age 11 to study in Berlin and begin his distinguished international career. They also met several people who knew the pianist as a child.

The family also visited the grave of the pianist's parents, the owners of a small textile mill, in the city's now-desolate Jewish cemetery.

"Everyone reveres my father very much, but it is also a little sad to be here," Rubinstein said. "My father had three brothers and three sisters, and you would expect to meet loads of long lost relatives, but because they were Jewish there is not a single one left."

'Square One TV' Adds Up On PBS

By LEE MARGULIES
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

HOLLYWOOD — A music video about multiplying the number 9. A comedy sketch about how many different types of sandwiches could be made with various combinations of five ingredients. A commercial for erasers: "Don't make a mistake without one." A rap song about calculating how long it would have taken a wrongly accused thief to travel to the scene of the crime. A serial spoof about detectives who are mathematicians.

Add it all up and you've got "Square One TV," a razzle-dazzle new series about math from Children's Television Workshop, the producers of "Sesame Street," "Electric Company" and "3-2-1 Contact."

The $16 million series, aimed at children between 8 and 12, will air weekdays on the Public Broadcasting Service beginning Monday.

"We're not trying to teach specific math content," stressed David Connell, an executive with Children's Television Workshop since 1968 and executive producer of the new series. "The goal is to change kids' attitudes about the subject and to motivate them to be more interested in it."

The concept for "Square One TV" was born four years ago as the nation was beginning to be barraged with reports about how poorly U.S. students fared in math compared to their counterparts in other countries. Its subject matter ranges well beyond teaching multiplication and division to deal with concepts such as infinity, statistics, map-reading, estimating, graphing and probability — plus trying to show how these skills are used in everyday life.

As with "Sesame Street," however, the serious intent is well disguised. Clearly produced with an MTV-added generation in mind, it employs a rapid-fire pace, flashy video techniques and an energetic cast of seven in sketches and musical production numbers that take their cue from well-known TV genres — game shows, dance programs, music videos, commercials, newscasts.

The 75 half-hour episodes contain a total of 550 such segments, Connell says. Each also includes a 6- to 8-minute segment of "Mathnet," a daily serial with a separate cast that parodies "Dragnet" and features a team of detectives solving problems by using their math skills.

"We can't compete without some fairly dazzling production values," explained Connell, a producer and writer for "Captain Kangaroo" before joining Children's Television Workshop, where he helped get "Sesame Street" off the ground. "A kid coming home at 5 o'clock today has as many as 30 or 40 channels to choose from in cable areas."

And "Square One TV" is designed for home viewing, he emphasized, as opposed to being used in the classroom, as the reading-oriented "Electric Company" frequently is.

"Electric Company," with its emphasis on drill and practice, is better suited for the classroom. This is more complex and abstract," he said.

That does not mean teachers cannot use it, however. Schools have been given taping rights, and Connell suggested that teachers would want to use various segments to introduce or enhance a math lesson in class. Teaching guides are not yet ready but will be available when "Square One TV" begins its first repeat cycle in the fall, he said.

The more immediate goal, though, is to make the students more receptive to the whole subject of math — especially women and minorities, who typically do more poorly and take fewer math classes than white males. Women and minorities are heavily represented in the cast of both the regular show and the serial, with the specific intent of serving as positive role models.

"We're trying to say that it's OK to think about math, that it's OK to be good at it, that it's accessible," said Joel E. Schneider, a mathematician who served as director of content for "Square One TV."

He believes that the program may pass on some of those feelings to adults, too. And Connell hopes it will show them that math is more than merely arithmetic.

Nevertheless, they acknowledged the difficulty of measuring how successfully the series meets its lofty goals. Too many factors influence a student's attitude and performance to try to isolate one, Schneider said.

The best way to put it, he said, is that "we have the potential to be a good influence."

How then to determine whether more episodes will be produced, as Connell would like? He said that they will rely partially on ratings, to tell them how many children the show is reaching, and partially on reaction from parents and teachers, to tell them whether the children are being affected.

Davis, Dee Have Lives And Careers On Course

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In the first half-hour of their new series on public television, Ossie Davis and his wife Ruby Dee portray a couple coping with strong, divergent opinions.

Davis plays Robert Terrell, who became the first black district judge in Washington, D.C., and Ms. Dee plays Mary Church Terrell, a suffragette whose views on civil rights offend her husband's patron, educator Booker T. Washington. Eventually, the husband yields to his determined wife.

In 38 years of marriage, however, the stars say they have never reached a showdown over careers, family or politics.

"Whatever our activity was, it didn't put us in a position where we had to solve it at each other's expense," Davis said in a recent interview.

The play about the Terrells, "A Letter from Booker T.," raises the curtain tonight for "Ossie and Ruby," the couple's 12-week PBS series that will showcase different stories from aspiring writers and producers.

"They were two middle-class black people," Ms. Dee said, "and I suppose we are too ..."

"With college backgrounds," Davis interjected.

"Um hmm. So there are certain parallels there," his wife continued. "The whole question of women's rights and liberties and freedoms ... the problems trail even into marriages today. So we aren't altogether free of them. Even in our marriage, we had to deal with them, spoken or unspoken."

Davis recalled a potential collision three decades ago when his wife was invited to work in London with the distinguished director, Tony Richardson.

"It never came down to the point where it was either-or," said Davis. "We talked about it, we talked about it, but the decision to stay was always there."

"Circumstance, my background, my family, everything in my background even before marriage dictated that I would not go and leave my husband and my children," Ms. Dee said. "I thought about that many times, and it was the first of many times I said, 'No, I don't want to.'"

"One sees these things in retrospect, but when you're a woman coming along, the weight of history and tradition and custom is too much for you to say 'yes' to yourself," she continued. "But remember, Ruby, even then, we were children of the same culture," Davis said, "and the values which were sexist and male supremacist were reinforced from the outside."

"Whatever our activity was, it didn't put us in a position where we had to solve it at each other's expense."

Davis is now appearing on Broadway in "I'm Not Rappaport" with Hal Linden, and Ms. Dee has recently published "My One Good Nerve." Both have extensive stage, screen and television credits.

"Ossie and Ruby" is the couple's second go-round on PBS. "With Ossie and Ruby," ran for two seasons.

The new series includes two core performances from the earlier run: "Crazy Hattie Enters the Ice Age," starring Tyne Daley of "Cagney & Lacey" and Ms. Dee; and "Alice in Wonder," a comedy written by Davis and starring Ms. Dee.

"We feel there is a lot of excellent, exquisite writing in the English language being done by, quote, minorities," Davis said, "and that these minority writers are by and large overlooked by the general reading public, and particularly by the television viewing public."

So the couple commissioned several writers — black, Korean, Chinese, American Indian and white — to produce scripts. With 13 scripts in hand, however, they had only enough money to produce four. So they went shopping for other shows from independent producers, who had perhaps been seen on local television but not nationally.

Davis said he's happy to be on public television, rather than in what he regards as a more restrictive atmosphere at the commercial networks.

"That's one thing I must say (about PBS), they don't look over your shoulder," he laughed. "They don't give you much. They give you the 50 cents and say, 'Don't come back till you finish it.'"

FOCUS

A Nice Place To Visit

The former federal prison on Alcatraz island, already a popular tourist attraction, will soon be getting an overall cleanup, new electrical systems, and a concession stand. During the summer, 3,000 tourists visited the island daily. The U.S. army used Alcatraz as a fort and prison until 1934. After that, the island became home to hundreds of federal inmates, including Al Capone. Robert Stroud, the "Birdman of Alcatraz," actually left all his birds at Leavenworth.

DO YOU KNOW — Alcatraz Island is located in what state?

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Jan. 27

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You see ways to expand your success by concentrating on more facets of your undertakings. This helps you make sturdy progress toward long-time goals.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Make a plan that can bring you more prosperity and feel more secure. Avoid forcing any issues.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Listen to the suggestions of a partner for your mutual advancement. Try not to argue with your mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Study the possibilities for advancement in your career. Confer with a seasoned associate tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Your creativity can be extended considerably and you can accomplish a great deal.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Your health has improved considerably and you can get much done, but don't make any radical changes.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): State your wishes to a fine contact who can help you to gain them. Don't neglect to write important letters.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You can make a lot of progress with home affairs. Invite guests into your orderly home for the evening.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Plan how to make your activities more profitable. Get your work load nicely arranged today.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): If you delve into a wiser system for gaining success, you can use it and get fine results with confidence.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Look to an experienced friend for advice on how to advance in your career.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Do something kind and an influential person gives you good advice about getting ahead faster.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Go to some place with a good friend where you get excellent results. Don't be extravagant with money.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be a deep thinker and can do well in practical matters. Upon reaching maturity the desire to get ahead fast can develop a temper and instigate arguments with others, so teach the importance of self-control. The latter part of life will be happy.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠1053 ♥86 ♦873 ♣AQJ106

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?

A.—In terms of point count pure and simple, you probably should pass. This, however, is the time to let logic prevail over points. Your hand rates to produce four or five tricks for partner, which makes it a better hand than many 10-pointers. We would gamble on three no trump.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KQ73 ♥J65 ♦K95 ♣KJ3

The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♥ Pass 1♠ Pass

2♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
A.—Do not fall into the trap of bidding some number of no trump because you have a balanced hand.

Partner's rebid virtually guarantees a six-card suit, so his hand is unbalanced. Jump to four hearts.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQJ63 ♥AQ952 ♦76 ♣5

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1♣ Pass 2♦ Pass
 2♥ Pass 3♣ Pass

 What do you bid now?
A.—Would we try to trap you? There is no reason not to make the bid that describes your hand best.

You have not yet told partner that you have five hearts, so go ahead—bid three hearts.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K85 ♥9 ♦KQ762 ♣KJ63

The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♣ Pass 2♦ Pass
 2NT Pass ?

 What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand is too strong for an overall of two hearts. The correct action is to double first, intending to bid hearts next over any bid your partner makes.

What do you bid now?

A.—Even if you play four-card majors, North's two no trump rebid does not necessarily deny a five-card spade suit—he might just be saying that he has a balanced hand suitable for no trump play without three-card diamond support. However, it is your job to probe for the best game contract, and you can do that by bidding three spades now.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠7 ♥AKQ852 ♦A93 ♣KJ7

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

A.—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠7 ♥AKQ852 ♦A93 ♣KJ7

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q762 ♥873 ♦964 ♣1042

Partner opens the bidding with two no trump. What action do you take?

A.—Even if your range is 22-24 points, your combined total at most is 26. While that is usually enough for game, that is not the case when the weak hand is possibly entryless and you have to keep leading from the strong hand. Pass.

Lots of big-bank bankers think of your deposits as their money. It isn't.

At First Federal, you don't have to jump through hoops for a consumer loan. We're happy to help.

Some of the bigger banks are so big that their consumer loan officers don't remember where the money came from. That's not a problem at First Federal.

Since First Federal offices are located right here in Pitt County, we fully realize that the money we make available for consumer loans comes from the deposits you make with us.

Consequently, when you need a consumer loan for a car, boat, vacation or whatever, we make an extra effort to see that you get the loan you need, the terms you want and the best rates around. As quickly and efficiently as possible. That's our job.

After all, it's your money.

FIRST FEDERAL

The best place to bank.
