William Casey Resigns Post As CIA Director

By TERENCE HUNT

AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William E. Casey, recovering from surgery for a brain tumor, has resigned and will be replaced by his deputy, Robert Gates, a 20-year veteran of the spy agency, the White House announced today.

"It was Mr. Casey's decision to resign," said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. He said Casey, a longtime friend of Reagan's, would become a presidential counselor when he could return to work.

The resignation came at a time that many questions were being asked about the CIA's middleman role in clandestine arms sales to Iran.

Some members of Congress maintain the agency failed to comply with laws requiring that intelligence committees be kept abreast of such dealings. Casey, however, has held that he did not break the law.

Fitzwater said Casey continues to improve steadily, is alert and has visited with other patients at Georgetown University Hospital.

Casey, 73, was named to head the spy agency in 1981 after helping manage Reagan's campaign for the presidency. Earlier, he served as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and had held other posts during the Nixon and Ford administrations.

Gates, who first joined the CIA in 1966 as an intelligence analyst, has been serving as acting director since Casey was hospitalized in December. He will continue to run the agency on an acting basis while his nomination is considered by the Senate.

Fitzwater said Casey had sent a letter to Reagan announcing his resignation. Reagan accepted it "with reluctance and deep regret," Fitzwater said.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III and White House chief of staff Donald Regan visited Casey in his hospital room last Thursday. At that time, Fitzwater said, "he volunteered his resignation."

Casey entered the hospital and underwent surgery for a brain tumor Dec. 18, shortly before he was to return to Capitol Hill to continue testifying about the Iran-Contra affair. During his hospitalization, it also was disclosed that he had been treated earlier for cancer of the prostate.

On Capitol Hill, Casey has testified at length about the CIA's role in arms shipments to Iran. He conceded that the intelligence agency became involved in the secret dealings with Iran in the summer and fall of 1985, before Reagan issued formal authorization.

However, Casey said he did not learn until October 1986 that profits from those shipments may have been diverted to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels — and that he

Early Returns Favor New Philippines Constitution

By ROBERT H. REID

Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Unofficial returns showed Filipinos voting more than 3-to-1 Monday in favor of a new constitution in a plebiscite seen as a major test for the nearly year-old government of President Corason Aquino.

The military was on full alert after last week's failed coup attempt by ex-President Ferdinand E. Marcos' supporters, who oppose the charter. But the eight hour balloting ended at 3 p.m. without reports of the kind of widespread violence that marked last year's fraud-tainted election between Marcos and Mrs. Aquino.

In the most serious incident, the government's Philippine News Agency said three Communist rebels were killed and three army soldiers wounded when guerrillas attacked several precincts Monday in South Cotabato province on Mindanao island.

Ramon Felipe, chairman of the Commission on Elections, said the nationwide turnout appeared to be more than 80 percent of the 25 million registered voters. The private National Movement for Free Elections, or NAMFREL, estimated voter turnout at 80 percent.

Definitive returns from the Manila area, traditionally the first to report, were not expected until late Monday. Election officials said final official results would not be available for days.

But NAMFREL, which was conducting an independent count, said unofficial returns from 3,709 of the 86,000 precincts showed 814,424 votes for the Constitution and 238,061 against.

NAMFREL said its early count in the Manila area showed 497,930 votes for approval and 124,605 against.

The early returns showed strong opposition to the constitution only in Marcos' northern Luzon stronghold.

In the seven provinces of northern Luzon, NAMFREL said early totals showed 54,178 votes against the Constitution and 49,349 for it.

Precincts in Manila military installations also reported "no" votes predominating.

Arturo Tolentino, leader of a coup attempt last July and a leading opponent of the constitution, said it was too early to declare the charter ratified. But he said that if the early trend continued, there would be no legal grounds to question Mrs. Aquino's claim on the presidency.

But Tolentino, a former foreign minister and Marcos' running mate in the 1986 election, said he doubted a strong "yes" vote would end the political challenges to her rule.

"From the political point of view, there will remain questions," he said. "It will help quiet many things but I don't think it will stop all this agitation."

The government had predicted overwhelming approval of the 20,000-word charter despite opposition from right-wing, left-wing and some Moslem groups.

Board Will Discuss Attendance Option

By JANE WELBORN

Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education is set to discuss tonight an option for redrawing school attendance lines that calls for the construction of a second high school for Greenville.

The new proposals, based on feedback from a public hearing, are aimed at balancing the black-white student ratios at the schools. The proposals would cost an estimated $4 million, according to a report that will be presented to the board tonight.

The board is scheduled to discuss the alternatives — along with the original recommendations — at 7 p.m. in the auditorium of the Brody Building, East Carolina University Medical School.

At a public hearing Jan. 5, speakers opposed the first attendance line proposals, citing racial inequity and population imbalance in the Greenville attendance area as two major problems. Speakers at the public hearing had objected to the underutilization of the Ayden schools and the small size of the Ayden attendance area.

The new options were designed to address those problems.

One new option calls for a second high school to be established in the Greenville attendance area. Rose

Waite Arrest Reported By Shiite Leader

By RODEINA KENAN

Associated Press Writer

(Earlier story on A-6)

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite militia leader Nabih Berri said today Anglian envoy Terry Waite has been "arrested" by Shiite Moslems holding two American hostages. The kidnappers threatened to kill the hostages if the United States attacks Lebanon.

A Syrian newspaper claimed Washington is planning a military strike in response to recent kidnappings.

The underground group Islamic Jihad made the threat against the hostages in a typewritten statement delivered to the west Beirut office of a Western news agency. It was accompanied by a photograph of hostage Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

"Any military attempt against the Moslems in the region, particularly in Lebanon, will result in the death of the captives and America's interests in the region," the statement said.

"Our answer will be cruel. We shall have no mercy."

Phil Says More Winter

By TARA BRADLEY-STECK

Associated Press Writer

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — Punxsutawney Phil, the nation's most prominent four-legged prognosticator, ambled out of his heated burrow at sunrise today, saw his shadow in the overcast dawn and proclaimed that spring is at least six more weeks away.

Groundhog Day folklore has it that if a woodchuck sees its shadow, six weeks of winter follow; if it doesn't, spring is just around the corner.

"The only reliable weather forecaster, Punxsutawney Phil, came out from his official home to celebrate a century of accurate predictions, stood proud for a moment and then saw his shadow at precisely 7:29 a.m.," James Means, president of the Groundhog Club, told about 1,000 spectators.

Phil doesn't always deliver, but if his handlers are to be believed, he's never wrong.

Phil predicted an early spring last year, and "we played golf the first week of February," said William Null, director of the Chamber of Commerce in this western Pennsylvania town of 7,700 people and a member of the Groundhog Club.

While Phil is the undisputed mammalian meteorologist of record, nowhere in the United States were pampered groundhogs like him safe from being plucked from their burrows today to the glare of TV floodlights.

Among the upstarts and pretenders are Melvin of Greensboro, N.C.; Octorara Orphie of Quarryville, Pa.; French Creek Freddie from West Virginia; Jimmy of Sun Prairie, Wis.; Dave from Dunkirk, N.Y.; Tilly from Tacoma, Wash.; an albino woodchuck from Warton, Ontario, called Willie; and the late Millie from West Orange, N.J., who is being replaced by Woodrow K. Woodchuck.

In Lilburn, Ga., General Lee disagreed with Phil, as did Buckeye Chuck from Marion, Ohio.

There is also a rabbit called Fred from Irvington, Ky., who hops around a special "weather tree."

Every year, hundreds of spectators in Punxsutawney follow a century-old tradition and trudge up to Phil's one-day-a-year home atop snow-blown Gobbler's Knob to witness the pronouncement.

The word is that his handlers, 14 tuxedoed and tongue-in-cheek businessmen in the club's select Inner Circle, come up with the forecast beforehand.

At any rate, several hours before sunrise, handler Malcolm "Bud" Dunkel takes Phil from his cushy habitat next to the town library and shoves him into the special heated and lighted burrow atop the Knob.

The chunky woodchuck, whose species usually hibernates until March, is then hoisted from the den at the first light of day to the glare of floodlights, flasbulbs and frenzied fans.

Phil was so upset a few years ago that he bit Dunkel on the thumb, forcing the handler to trudge to the hospital for a tetanus shot. Dunkel now wears leather gloves when handling the rodent.

Swiss Say An American Writer Detained In Iran

By CHARLES CAMPBELL

Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A Wall Street Journal reporter has been detained in Iran after being invited there on a tour with other foreign journalists. The newspaper said it did not know the reason and asked for his immediate release.

The Swiss Foreign Ministry announced Sunday that the reporter, American Gerald F. Seib, had been detained the day before. Hours after the detention, Iran said a person posing as a journalist had been accused of spying.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, said Saturday night a "spy of the Zionist regime" was arrested after entering the country with a false passport and disguised as a journalist. It did not identify the person by name or nationality.

In New York, an official of The Wall Street Journal said it learned through diplomatic channels that Seib was being held.

"We have not been informed of any reason for this detention," Managing Editor Norman Pearlstine said.

"Jerry Seib is a highly respected foreign correspondent and there can be no basis for his detention," Pearlstine said in a statement. "We are seeking explanations through Iranian and other diplomatic channels. We hope any confusion will be cleared up and we are requesting his immediate release from detention and from Iran.

"We are aware of an Iranian news agency report on Saturday claiming that an Israeli spy has been arrested in Tehran. We want to emphasize that this report cited no name or nationality," Pearlstine said.

"Moreover, that report says the person arrested entered Iran with a false passport and posing as a journalist," he added. "Jerry Seib entered Iran legally on a valid U.S. passport and is obviously a well known and well respected journalist. We see no reason to link Mr. Seib's detention with the Iranian news agency report."

Seib, 30, has been a Journal reporter since 1978, and has covered the Middle East from Cairo since 1985. His wife, Barbara Rosewicz, also is a Wall Street Journal reporter.

He was one of 57 foreign journalists invited to Iran for a tour last week of the war front where Iran has been fighting with Iraq since September 1980. A group of about 40 correspondents was given a similar tour the week before.

At the time of Seib's detention, four American journalists from the visiting groups remained in Iran. The other three flew to London early Sunday.

State Department spokesman Bruce Ammerman said in Washington: "The Swiss government has confirmed the detention of Gerald F. Seib, a U.S. citizen. ...

From official diplomatic sources, we do not know why he has been detained." Ammerman said Seib "should be released immediately and allowed to depart Iran forthwith."

He said the U.S. government was "in close communication" with the Swiss government, which handles U.S. diplomatic interests in Iran. There has been no U.S. diplomatic representation in Tehran since the U.S. Embassy was stormed Nov. 4, 1979, and 52 hostages were held 444 days.

In Bern, Foreign Ministry spokesman Michel Pache said the Swiss ambassador in Tehran asked for an appointment with an Iranian Foreign Ministry official to protest the detention. He said he did not know if it would be granted.

Pache said the ambassador also wanted to protest the detention at the same time of a Swiss diplomat, Thomas Furglester, who was released after a short time. Pache said he had no other details.

Seib was taken into a van with the Swiss diplomat outside Seib's hotel about 6 p.m. Saturday, Swiss officials said.

Because of the timing of tours to the war front, most of the visiting reporters overstayed their five-day press visas, but all except Seib had

Episcopalians Gather

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Episcopal delegates at the 171st annual convention of the Diocese of North Carolina responded to a group of conservatively worded resolutions by urging vigorous support for anti-pornography laws and endorsing public school instruction in comparative religions.

About 500 lay and clergy delegates from 121 churches attended the three-day convention in Winston-Salem. The 39-county diocese, largest of three in North Carolina, represents about 40,000 Episcopalians from Hickory east to Scotland Neck in Halifax County.

The Rev. Walter Edwards of All Saints Episcopal Church in Charlotte said the resolutions were an expression of concern for the denomination's "trend away from scriptural standards in recent years."

The 2.8 million-member Episcopal Church supports homosexual rights, AIDS research and an end to the nuclear arms race. It opposes "star wars" funding and defense spending increases.

Students, Teachers Disagree On School For Offenders' Value

RALEIGH (AP) — Some Wake County students attending the state's only alternative school for drug offenders say they are being unjustly punished and doubt they will give up drugs, but teachers and school administrators say the school is worth the effort.

The alternative school's 48 students were among 90 teen-agers arrested on drug charges in November as part of an undercover operation. The students call their makeshift school in an elementary building "Rehab High."

County Superintendent Robert Bridges said he does not expect the school to stop all students from using drugs.

"But academically, if we can get them involved and them to salvage this year, we have made a contribution," Bridges said.

A county school board policy says students caught with drugs must be expelled for the remainder of the year. But the board agreed to offer an alternative school for the convicted students, just as it had following a large drug bust in 1979.

Of the 90 students arrested, 42 have either quit school, entered private schools, moved or they face felony charges on drug offense considered too serious to allow them to attend the Second Chance Alternative School.

The students say their ordeal has been humiliating, frightening and costly. Some had to spend time in jail over Christmas vacation. Many are working one or two jobs to pay lawyers' fees and court costs. School meets 4 p.m. to 9 p.m. to allow many of them to serve sentences of community service.

Some display more anger than remorse.

"I think it was a big waste of time," said one senior. His mistake, he said, was to let an undercover agent talk him into giving her some drugs after he invited her home for lunch one day. Still, he has a 3.5 grade point average and has been accepted to attend the University of Georgia next year.

Mike, 18, a senior, said he was charged during the school drug arrests with possessing marijuana and selling beer to a minor, but was convicted only of the latter.

"I'm not going to say I'm not going to use it again," Mike said.

He and other students said they believed most of the students attending the alternative school probably still use drugs. Patricia Andrews, the alternative school's principal, said she would expect some students still to be wrestling with drug problems.

"I'd be a fool to say nobody here is still using drugs," Ms. Andrews said. "It takes a lot of will power, a lot of determined effort and a lot of support (to quit). Anybody who has tried to lose weight or stop smoking should have empathy for the students."

But critics wonder if a heavier hand might be more appropriate. Ms. Andrews said friends had told her they thought the Second Chance school was a waste of money. Wake County Commissioner Larry B. Zieverink said residents had told him they think thought the students got soft sentences.

"When you come out and say you are going to charge these people with felonies, and then you later go on and reduce them to misdemeanors, it gets kids kind of mixed up," Zieverink said. "I don't have a solution. Maybe this is as good a way as any. I don't think it is the answer."

School board member Craig K. Lewis said he thought the school was a good idea. But he said he was bothered that other students expelled for other reasons such as fighting, skipping class, or smoking don't get the same second chance.

"I think there are some inequities involved in it," Lewis said.

The county school system spent $35,000 to bust the students and is spending another $150,000 so they can continue their studies at the alternative school. Most of the money pays the salaries of its staff of two administrators, five teachers, four tutors and a secretary.

School officials and teachers say it is better to give the students a second chance, even if only some seize it, than to turn them loose for a year to drift deeper into drugs and trouble.

Victims Want Compensation Fund To Begin Paying Off

RALEIGH (AP) — Crime victims and their advocates say a compensation fund established by the General Assembly in 1983 has been empty since the day it was created, but they want that to change this year.

"Everyone agrees that it's a good idea, but it never seems to pass," Gregg Stahl, executive director of the of the Governor's Crime Commission, said of the fund. "If it doesn't pass this time, they ought to repeal it. There's no need to have an act unless you have money."

Under the Victims Compensation Act of 1983, victims of violent crime, or their dependents in cases of homicides, could receive up to $20,000 to cover uninsured medical expenses, loss of income and funeral expenses.

Stahl estimates that such a fund could require between $1.5 million and $4 million a year once it became routinely used.

"It takes a number of years before claims level off," Stahl told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "The first three or four years there is a stair step level of claims."

But once the state has paid compensation to victims for a year, it becomes eligible for federal funding of up to 35 percent of what it paid out the previous year, he said.

"A criminal has a choice in committing his crime," said Lynn Minick of Fayetteville, the president of the N.C. Victim Assistance Network. "A victim has no choice in being a victim. Being a victim is bad enough without having to mortgage your home or go into debt to survive victimization."

Gov. James G. Martin and Joseph W. Dean, his crime control secretary, said that each person convicted in state courts should be assessed a $2 fee to finance the fund and that the cap on compensation be reduced to $10,000.

Critics of that plan say it would place the burden of paying for harm done by violent felons on the traffic offenders and misdemeanants who make up the vast majority of the state courts' business.

Attorney General Lacy H. Thornburg contends that such a court fee would violate the state constitution, which requires that any court surcharge go to schools.

Thornburg would like the legislature to consider alternative sources of funding, such as restitution paid by criminals, profits earned by criminals from books and movies based on their crimes and property seized from criminals.

Critics of Thornburg's plan say the financial resources of criminals may not provide enough money. Thornburg also said he thinks compensation should be limited to $5,000, plus $2,000 for funeral expenses in homicide cases.

"The people of North Carolina want to be confident that any such programs are administered as conservatively as possible," said Phillip Lyons, a deputy attorney general who specializes in crime victim issues. "They need to be assured that what we're doing is not extravagant."

Stahl said the commission will make "a cry for funding" this week when it recommends to Martin that the general fund be used to provide $600,000 in fiscal year 1987-88 and $750,000 in fiscal year 1988-89 for the compensation fund.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said such a cry might be successful.

"I think it would be more equitable to fund it from the general fund," Rand said. "But I think we need to go forward and fund the best program we can draw up so that these people who are victims of crime are not victims of the criminal justice system."

Embezzlement Conviction Shocks Lawton Barber's Friends, Family

LEMON SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — Friends and relatives say they assumed Lawson W. Barber lived in a $200,000 house with tennis courts and a swimming pool because he made successful investments in the stock market with his $24,000 annual salary.

They were shocked several weeks ago when Barber, who donated freely to conservative political causes and television evangelists, pleaded guilty to embezzling more than $2.25 million from Cigar Supply Co., where he had kept books for 22 years. White-collar crime experts say it ranks among the largest such thefts in the state's history.

"He's the last person I ever dreamed would get in trouble like that," said Dorothy Q. Bursey, who co-chaired Sen. Jesse Helms' 1984 campaign in Lee County with Barber. "He's very religious. He's just a kind, gentle man."

For Mrs. Bursey and others, his religious nature is hard to reconcile with his repeated violation of the Eighth Commandment against stealing. Barber supplemented his salary by writing himself company checks for four years, prosecutors say, and during one year he stole 86 percent of the company's profits.

Friends say Barber was a man who kept his business affairs close to himself, not even letting his wife know much about his finances.

"When I heard of it, I looked in the phone book to see if there was another Lawson Barber," one political associate told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "I didn't believe it. It was kind of like finding out your mother did it."

On Jan. 22 — after telling a judge he had gotten on his knees with his wife and pastor to pray for God's forgiveness — Barber was sentenced to 30 years in prison. He will be eligible for parole within eight years. He had faced a maximum of 530 years, or 10 years for each of the 53 counts of embezzlement to which he pleaded guilty.

Barber, a former member of the executive committee of the Lee County Republican Party, began serving his time in Central Prison two weeks ago.

He declined to be interviewed when contacted through prison officials. So did his wife, Faye, and his employer, H. Aubrey Ford Jr., president of the Cigar Supply Co.

Prosecutors say Barber used one-third to half of the money for stock market investments, and some was apparently spent on personal purchases and gifts to family members. But thousands of dollars were donated to GOP causes and television evangelists.

Officials at the Cigar Supply Co. hadn't suspected anything because Barber was the only one who oversaw the books there and because they trusted Barber, said District Attorney Eddie Winstead III, who prosecuted the case. Accountants at the parent company reviewed the records, and an outside firm did independent audits, but both suspected nothing because the money was accounted for on paper, he said.

But several months before Barber was caught, rumors were circulating in the county that there was more to Barber than met the eye.

"Somebody told me about it probably about three months before it was common knowledge," said one local businessman. "One of my clients who came in said Barber was going to put Lemon Springs on the map."

"It hasn't changed my opinion of him in any way, except I can't understand it, of course," said Mrs. Bursey. "I feel terribly for the family. I just feel like he's a fine man, and it makes me sick at heart because it'll ruin their lives."

Like many others, Mrs. Bursey can't explain what led Barber to do it.

They say he wasn't a greedy man, because if it had been greed, he would have begun stealing long ago. They also say he wasn't after fame or attention, because he didn't brag about his spending habits.

"He just wasn't himself to have done that," Mrs. Bursey said. "I just can't imagine ... I don't know whether he was sick or not."

When pressed for a motive, relatives and friends can only point to what a psychiatrist who interviewed Barber said at his trial: Barber, in his restrained way, craved friends, groups and respect so much that he felt he had to steal money to buy those things.

But no one suspected that his need for affiliation might lead to a theft of such magnitude. Most still aren't certain whether that was, in fact, the cause.

"It's something inside that we don't know," said one friend, "or won't ever know."

IN THE STATE

Compter Chips Eyed

DURHAM (AP) — Scientists at the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences say they're trying to get ahead of potential health problems for workers in the semiconductor industry.

In a series of experiments, the Research Triangle Park-based group is exploring the effects of gallium arsenide, the up-and-coming compound in the manufacture of computer chips.

The chemical compound is attractive to chip makers for their engraved circuits because gallium arsenide chips take less power and are faster than standard silicon chips.

Bruce Fowler, one of the key researchers on the work going on at the Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, told the Durham Morning Herald that the work is being done in response to a request from the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health.

The request was sparked, in part, by some information that suggests working with gallium arsenide may be affecting some women workers' ability to have children, Fowler said.

Presentations at the sixth annual meeting of the North Carolina Chapter of Toxicology on Saturday indicated there may be something happening to affect reproduction in laboratory animals.

The scientists at the Institute of Environmental Health Sciences are exposing pregnant rats and mice to gallium arsenide, as well as to each of the compound's ingredients.

Richard Morrissey, head of the group examining possible effects on reproduction and development, said that at high doses, fewer pregnancies develop in the animals.

Weekend Fatalities

By The Associated Press
Two people died on North Carolina highways this weekend, including a pedestrian who was killed in a hit-and-run accident, the state Highway Patrol says.

Fairdine White, 23, of Charlotte, was killed about 12:28 a.m. Sunday in Mecklenburg County when she was struck by a hit-and-run vehicle, troopers said.

Elmer Jerome Cummings, 24, of Wilson was killed in Greene County about 1 p.m. Saturday when he failed to yield for a stop sign at the intersection of N.C. 91 and SR 1325, trooper said.

The weekend deaths bring the total for the year to 80, compared to 131 on the same date last year.

Outlook Improving

RALEIGH (AP) — Heavy rains in the first month of the new year have increased groundwater levels, bringing good news to the state's farmers who last summer watched their crops shrivel in the fields as watering ponds turned to dust bowls.

"It looks like we have quite a bit of water around now," Philip Duncan, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service at Raleigh-Durham Airport said. "Our rivers have been flooding — at least in the eastern part of the state. I'd definitely say the drought is over."

State agricultural officials have estimated farm losses from the last year's drought at $330 million.

However, the state might not be entirely out of the woods. Experts said it will take at least average rainfall in the next several months to maintain healthy conditions for growers in the spring and summer.

But things look good so far this year.

The U.S. Geological Survey says groundwater levels were above normal at three of its four measuring North Carolina sites at the end of January.

At the Blantyre well in Transylvania County, the water level was 29.84 feet below ground, 3.5 feet above normal. The level was 34.31 feet below ground in July.

At the Mocksville well in Davie County, the water level was 18.29 feet below ground, 1.8 feet above normal. The level was 22 feet below ground in July.

Second Transplant

ATLANTA (AP) — A 50-year-old Atlanta area woman remained in critical but stable condition at Emory University Hospital today after her second liver transplant in 10 days.

Peggy Durett was in the intensive care unit this morning following about 6½ hours of surgery that ended early Sunday morning.

"She's still critical but stable, which is a pretty positive sign," said hospital spokeswoman Judy Smith. "We don't expect any significant changes, just slow, steady improvement."

A liver transplanted into the Cobb County woman failed soon after the first operation, spurring an emergency search for a second organ. One was found Saturday night in South Carolina and rushed to the hospital in Atlanta.

BEGINNINGS OF GUM DISEASE

By now, most people are aware of the seriousness and impact of gum disease—the leading cause of tooth loss in adults—but how many people know how it begins and what causes it?

There is a space between the gum lining and tooth called the SULCUS. Bacteria fills this space and unless it is removed by brushing and flossing, it can irritate the gum lining. The cells in the lining swell and separate. Gradually the material inside the lining cells, or the cementing substances which hold the cells together, are destroyed. As the sul-cus becomes diseased, a pocket forms.

At this point, toothbrushing or eating hard foods might cause your gums to bleed. THIS BLEEDING IS NOT NORMAL. Unless steps are taken to correct the situation—and it is reversible—it may lead to the destruction of more gum tissue and bone, and eventually the loss of the teeth themselves.

If you see bleeding when you brush your teeth, call my office for an appointment. We will evaluate your gum tissue and recommend the best treatment for you.

No Solution

Unless there is a change at the federal level, the distribution of surplus commodities in Pitt County will end in February.

North Carolina is canceling its orders for surplus agricultural products and state distribution to 188,000 residents is expected to cease after February.

The Pitt County Department of Social Services board was told Monday by Director Ed Garrison that the program is near termination.

He said that while there has been no official directive, "the administration in D.C. deemed it will no longer support" the program. He said the states will not receive funds for administration and the Department of Agriculture has said it cannot carry on the program without administrative money.

Garrison said the food had been important to many people. In Pitt County 3,450 households and approximately 10,000 people participated.

The commodities distribution program was begun four years ago. It included cheese, butter, corn meal, dry milk, honey, rice and flour which were given to those eligible under the guidelines for the program.

There is a possibility for a final distribution on Feb. 18 and 19, but after that it appears the program will be at an end.

The commodities program does seem to have benefitted large numbers of people in Pitt County and probably throughout North Carolina. It involved the distribution of food items which the government already held and administration was its major cost. No doubt the end of the program will affect the diets of many low income families, and it also extends the problem of what to do with the various commodities which are now stored.

Clearly, however, it is not a problem that can be solved on the local level. If the food items are not available they cannot be distributed locally. That seems a shame when there is nothing else that can be done with these commodities.

Too Many Changes

The president of the American Farm Bureau Federation is looking for our trade dispute with the European Community to approach becoming a bitter trade war. Dean Kleckner tells us loss of a $400 million Spanish market for American corn and sorghum to the European Community is at heart of the dispute between the two giant trading partners. The United States wants the EC to pay American farmers compensation for the loss of markets when Spain and Portugal joined the trading bloc.

The resultant feud could be more costly than the $400 million loss currently at stake. Klecker is unwilling to see U.S. negotiators backing down. There may be room for compromise, he says, "but I don't think it can be very much or farmers will perceive that we lost again."

He had some practical reminders for farmers and lawmakers who rush to their aid at first signals of trouble. Kleckner advised the U.S. cannot expect to raise crop supports without foreign competitors boosting output and undercutting U.S. prices.

Nor is he shy about chiding Congressional rushing to relief of the farm economy. "Congress is to farm bills what little boys are to mud puddles ... they just got to wallow through."

On the average, he said, Congress has changed farm law every nine months over the past 50 years. We can only wonder how many of those changes were really helpful.

Today's Thought

Punxsutawney Phil, the Pennsylvania groundhog, saw his shadow this morning and folklore has it that that means at least six more weeks of winter. Here's hoping that even the famed Punxsutawney Phil can be wrong.

Politicians In The Money

WASHINGTON — Anyone who watched President Reagan's rhetorical State of the Union exercise, and the Democrats' bumbling response to it, must have asked themselves one simple question: Is this the best our country has to offer?

Naturally, there was one constitutional crisis the president overlooked in his speech that erodes the process of ever recruiting new blood in American politics. That is the shameful cost of elections. Until some action is taken on this front, the Capitol will remain top-heavy with wealthy fluff.

Leadership positions here are rapidly becoming bastions of the wealthy, because the process by which we elect our representatives has been reduced to one common denominator: money. It is no coincidence that over half of the U.S. senators (53) are millionaires. Few others can afford the undertaking.

A few numbers tell the tale of the growing influence of money in American campaigns.

It is no longer uncommon for Senate candidates to spend between $5 million and $10 million, and even more — consider the nearly $25 million spent in the recent Senate race in California. Although the final numbers are not calculated for the 1986 races, it is estimated that the combined cost of Senate races last year was $425 million, a staggering increase from the $88.2 million spent in 1974.

Moreover, the influence of political action committees continues to rise. In the 1984 elections, approximately 30 percent of receipts in congressional elections were from PACs, up from 13.7 percent in 1972. It is estimated that PACs contributed $140 million to congressional candidates in the 1986 election, a significant increase from the $8.5 million contributed in 1972.

Besides being owned by special interests, public officials must contend with the fact that the time-consuming business of campaigning and raising money is often more important to them than governing. Several times last year, Majority Leader Robert Dole (R-Kan.) jokingly remarked that the Senate was ending its business early so that members could attend to fund-raising. This took place even though the Senate had not finished its work at hand.

Furthermore, campaign finance reform distorts the kind of legislation that is introduced and passed in Congress. Legislation is often drafted, brought to the floor and voted on with the 30-second political commercial in mind. In turn, Congress passes fewer but larger bills. In obfuscation there is campaign safety.

The solution to political inservitude is fundamental campaign finance reform. Legislation must be passed that provides for taxpayer funding of House and Senate elections. And strict new spending limits must be imposed on political action committees. This is the only way our democracy can be saved, thereby liberating our representatives who remain beholden to a few moneyed special-interest groups.

ABC's "Amerika," the TV docudrama of life in America after a bloodless takeover by the U.S.S.R., has upset more than the Chrysler Corp., which recently withdrew as a sponsor for the program. The United Nations has retained Theodore C. Sorenson, who served as special counsel to President Kennedy, to negotiate with ABC for changes in the film that is to air Feb. 15. The U.N. is upset that its peacekeeping troops are portrayed in the film as rapists and arsonists. The organization is pressing ABC to air material in connection with the 1 1/2-hour film that would mitigate their concerns.

The Soviet ambassador to Pakistan, Mr. Vezirov, has been telling journalists in Islamabad that a Soviet withdrawal from neighboring Afghanistan is unlikely unless the U.S. stops supplying arms to the Afghan guerrillas. Some European diplomats believe that Moscow is seriously committed to leaving Afghanistan but Washington is spoiling this by delivering 150 more Stinger missiles to the guerrillas in February.

The proportion of Americans opposed to busing as a means of integrating public schools has dropped by 25 points over the past decade, according to pollster Louis Harris, in a telephone survey he conducted last month. Although 53 percent of the population at large still opposes busing, a majority under 30 and those whose children have been bused favor busing as a means to promote racial balance.

Another worldwide satellite Live Aid type rock concert benefit is planned for Wembley Stadium in London on July 11 to aid starving children. The man behind the festival this year is Michael Aminian, 34, an Iranian-born billionaire who has given up his lavish lifestyle to do charity work. In addition to a host of rock stars, Aminian has invited Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Mother Theresa and Terry Waite, the archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy, to participate in the affair — if Waite ever reappears in Beirut.

The 1987 Education Front

RALEIGH — Soldiers who have been in combat will tell you that they seldom knew how an entire battle was going. Of an entire hundred mile front, they knew what was happening only along the small plot of land in front of them.

In the 1987 General Assembly, the education front will stretch across at least five different battles. Keeping track of the entire front might be one of the most difficult jobs facing the legislators and lobbyists who'll be pushing for significant education improvements.

The biggest legislative battles are always fought in the Appropriations Committee. This year, three education battles will be fought on that front.

The state may have as little as $260 million to allot for new spending in fiscal 1988. While that sounds like a lot of money, it pales in comparison to demands for new spending which are being made.

The next step of the Basic Education Plan, an eight-year schedule for upgrading the state's public schools, calls for an additional $153 million in spending next year. This is the biggest financial step in the plan. Already Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan have said they don't expect to be able to fund the entire step, although both have promised to fight for as much as possible. Martin is proposing that $33 million for remedial summer school be delayed one year, until the summer of 1988.

The BEP's reservation on that $153 million will be challenged every time a new spending initiative is proposed. Therefore, the real advocates of better education will have a major defensive fight here.

Some of the pressure on the BEP may come from educators themselves. If only $100 million in new spending funds are available after the BEP is funded, that won't leave much for a teacher pay raise.

There may be pressure to delay part of the BEP to allow a greater raise.

The salary wrangle gets confused further by the efforts of Gov. Jim Martin to implement a statewide career ladder within the next two years.

Money is also involved on another front. Local school districts may need as much as $2 billion to build new schools and renovate others. Martin has proposed a state bond issue which would then be lent to the counties for school construction. But Democratic leaders in the legislature are wary of borrowing that much money and are more likely to go with a plan that has the state assume some school costs currently being paid by the counties. This would, theoretically, free up local money for brick and mortar.

The question of ultimate responsibility for school policy will also be debated heavily. There are proposals to reorganize the State Board of Education and to have it elect a state superintendent. Then there are proposals to keep the office an elective one and enhance its authority.

With Superintendent Craig Phillips planning to retire in 1988, the legislature has a rare opportunity to make changes here without involving personalities. Many legislators feel that a better governance structure is needed, but no one proposal has caught fire yet.

In 1987, everyone claims to be for education, but many legislators will be quick to give other items precedence. Those who are really committed to better schools will be fighting along with a wide battlefront.

Strength For Today

In medieval times, it was commonly believed that somewhere a substance existed which could convert lead into gold. This substance was called "the philosopher's stone." Alchemists, the chemists of their day, often spent years in experiments trying to produce this marvelous substance.

Of course, no one ever found a "philosopher's stone" which would change lead to gold. But it is possible to develop good habits of thought and living which will turn leaden lives into golden ones. Benjamin Franklin once wrote, "If you spend less than you get, you have the philosopher's stone." This, Franklin thought, was one easy to contentment — and contentment is a very precious quality indeed.

If we would count the things we have and make the most of them, most of us would find more happiness in our lives than if we found a real "philosopher's stone."

More Open Debate Ahead?

MOSCOW — A fundamental and deeply important change is taking place in the way that the Soviet Union is governed. The key to it lies not so much in the modest proposals for democratization announced by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev this week, as in the fact that they were not immediately endorsed and enacted by the party's Central Committee.

Hitherto, Soviet leaders have usually erred on the side of caution, securing a consensus within the Communist Party for their new policy initiatives before making them public, so that leader and Politburo and party were seen to act as one. But Gorbachev has twice now put his own prestige and convictions on the line by making a public speech to the party that was far more radical than the formal policy resolution that was finally voted through.

He did it during last February's party congress, and he has done it again this week at the plenary meeting of the Central Committee. By all Soviet precedent, this is dangerous ground for a Soviet leader.

In his speech last week, Gorbachev spelled out in some detail what he meant by "the perfection of Socialist democracy." He said that for the Soviet citizen, it meant a choice between candidates at election, whether in the workplace, for the local council or for the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament. For the party member, it meant secret ballots and the right to nominate rival candidates for high party posts.

The document finally agreed by the Central Committee does not go so far. It talks of democracy in general terms and seems to envisage the choice among candidates being made not on the ballot paper, but during the nomination process. And as for the changes in the way party officials are chosen, that will have to wait upon a formal change in the party rule book — which could be delayed until the next party congress of 1991.

Far from getting his own way at this week's plenum, Gorbachev suffered three apparent setbacks. The first was that the widely discussed proposal for a mandatory retirement age of 65 for party officials was not even mentioned. The second was that the veteran Ukraine party chieftain Vladimir Scherbitsky retains his Politburo seat, even though rumors of his imminent demise have been buzzing around Moscow for months. The third, and perhaps, most important, was that Gorbachev's key aide in the Central Committee organization to supervise party reform, Georgy Razumovsky, was not elected to the Politburo.

There are various ways to interpret all this. The more conservative Western Kremlinologists see it confirming their suspicion that Gorbachev could be in trouble, too far out on a limb, and with mainstream party opinion beginning to harden against him.

There is a more thoughtful view, that we are seeing a shift in the focus of Soviet power, away from the Politburo itself, and toward the Secretariat of the Central Committee. Six of the 11 secretaries, including Gorbachev himself, now sit on the Politburo, an unusually high proportion for recent years. After years of foreign policy being run by the career diplomats like Andrei Gromyko, it has now been brought firmly under secretariat control.

But something even more important may be happening, a decision by Gorbachev to govern in a much more consultative and more open way. After his bold speech this week on democracy, and the ensuing Central Committee debate, Gorbachev wound up the session with another speech that nailed his colors to the mast.

The process is not over. Gorbachev's call for an extraordinary party conference next year has mystified those observers who look for a precedent in Stalin's repressive conference of 1941. But in the years after the 1917 revolution, Lenin held such conferences to hammer out the differences in the party between different policy lines. That was the last time the party itself indulged in open government and free debate. That is the precedent that Gorbachev is now seeking to revive, and that could lead to a very different kind of Soviet Union in the future.

Dispatch Of Ships Into Persian Gulf Ominous Sign

WASHINGTON — The nightmare possibility opened up by President Reagan's arms-for-hostages dealing with Iran has always been that it would spill over not only into the American political scene, which has already happened, but also into American foreign policy, which may be happening now.

The ominous specific sign of it, going far beyond the general mushy impact on the Reagan administration's credibility and aplomb, is the president's quiet new dispatch of American warships into and toward the Persian Gulf, where the Iran-Iraq those dealings. The misgivings that his policy engendered among Gulf friends of the United States put the president under a new burden to demonstrate American constancy. He had to show that, as he insists he did, he had truly halted the suspect dealings with Tehran and that there were no further signs of an American tilt, however small and symbolic, to Iran.

He also had to show that he personally had not been so caught up in sentiment for the hostages that he was unprepared to act in a stern geopolitical way. There is an irony

'The fact is that Reagan's initial foolishness in dickering with Iran over hostages has not simply embarrassed him and his country. It has also burdened American policy at a sensitive place at a sensitive time, and it has brought closer the possibility of a military intervention ...'

war is raging. The ships are being sent in order ... Well, in order what?

Officially, the naval movements are being described as a prudent caution designed to sober Iran in its current offensive, to reassure Iraq and its worried Arab neighbors and to improve the U.S. capacity to tend to its strategic interests in the gulf.

These are all considerations that deserved to be weighed regardless of Reagan's dealings with Iran, but they take on a suspect quality after for you: Ronald Reagan, the man who bombed Libya, having to show he has not gone squishy soft.

As fate would have it, moreover, Reagan had to make these multiple showings at a time when a major Iranian offensive in Iraq was starting and, worse, when it looked as though it was making some headway. Arabs of the Gulf had been angered and unnerved by revelations of the earlier Reagan diplomacy; they feared that American arms had emboldened

"HELP! STATE DEPARTMENT!"

Tehran to carry through its offensive. These governments were forced to swallow their resentments and uncertainties and to invite Washington to make the gestures of reassurance that it is making now. It is not possible to say that, but for this sequence, the American fleet would not be where it is today, steaming in and toward the gulf. But it is possible to say that the Iran affair added to the pressures on the president to compensate by moving up the fleet.

Let's be cheerful and assume that the various "signals" of warning, assurance and resolve meant to be transmitted by movement of the ships do their intended work and that, without further American involvement, the threat of the Iranian offensive recedes. In these circumstances Reagan can fairly claim a tonic international success — and a measure of vindication for his naval buildup and for his forward maritime strategy.

And now let's be more cautious and figure that the American show of force, rather than slowing and cowering the Iranians, fails to have the full desired effect. This could produce the familiar painful dilemma of any prospective intervention in which the United States would have to choose between doing more, muddling along or backing off.

One of Iran's leading spokesmen, Hojatolislam Rafsanjani, speaker of parliament, commented on the fleet movements the other day. He said that American military intervention defied logic and wisdom and that the United States would pay heavily for it. "Reagan is not feeling well, he is old and weak and under a lot of pressure from members of his own party," he said. "The administration is corrupt inside so it cannot make the right decisions at the right time."

From the speaker such derision comes easily. Even from Iran's standpoint, however, it seems misplaced. A Reagan being pressed at home and mocked abroad is not necessarily a comfort for Iran.

Nor is there in this situation any comfort for the United States.

Clearing American Wreckage From Arab World

WASHINGTON — In the first effort to clear American diplomatic wreckage in the Arab world after the Iran arms scandal, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger ordered units of the the Navy's Middle East task force into the northern tip of the Persian Gulf once he learned the still unpublicized fact that Iran had fired a salvo of ground-based missiles into Kuwait.

The irony of the U.S. Navy defending Kuwait from Iranian arms following secret Israeli and U.S. arms sales to Tehran was not lost on Weinberger, who, with Secretary of State George Shultz, opposed the secret sale. Privately, Weinberger believes it has crippled the U.S. in the Arab world and could mean America's expulsion from the region if Iran defeats Iraq in the Gulf war.

Shultz, though less concerned with U.S.-Arab relations, is also in the wreckage-clearing business. Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak so fears that his long-planned February visit here might irreparably harm him at home because of Arab anger at America's betrayal of Iraq that he ranks, as reflected at last week's Islamic summit in Kuwait when Mubarak shook hands with Syria's President Hafez el-Assad. That was the first handshake between Syrian and Egyptian presidents since Syria led the Arab world in ostracizing Egypt in 1978 on charges of making a separate peace with Israel in the famed Camp David accords.

That helps explain Mubarak's reluctance to keep his date with President Reagan here. Against the backdrop of the Kuwait summit and U.S.-Israeli collusion against Iraq, he is not anxious to join the Washington scene. He fears his presence here would be hailed as proof that the U.S. had wiped out the Iran-arms stain.

has considered a long postponement or outright cancellation. Keeping Mubarak on schedule to Washington is Shultz's first cleanup task.

The wreckage heap shows how right Weinberger and Shultz were to argue the Iran arms sale against national security aides Robert McFarlane, John Poindexter, Oliver North and Michael Ledeen, backed by their Israeli friends. After getting cowed into silence, the two senior Cabinet members must now find a way to rebuild credibility in the Arab world by dimming the sharpened image of U.S. and Israeli policy in lockstep.

No tool has the credibility of the Navy's Middle East task force. Its reassuring presence less than 10 miles off the coast of Kuwait will soon be backed up by the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk, moving close to the Strait of Hormuz, at the entrance to the Persian Gulf and in a position to rake Iran with airpower and sea-based missiles.

The U.S. flag close to the Iran-Iraq battlefield and to imperiled Kuwait is important considering the apprehension in the Persian Gulf caused by the Ayatollah Khomeini's regime. Kuwait is so fearful that it has not publicly admitted Iran fired ground-to-ground missiles from across the Gulf.

But more than aircraft-carrier diplomacy is needed to restore U.S. prestige and political influence in the Arab world, considering how much credibility the Reagan administration allowed to drain away in the secret U.S.-Israeli conspiracy against Iraq. American arms to Iran follows Shultz' inattention to the Arabs ever since the failure of his May 1983 Israeli-Lebanon peace pact.

That has given the appearance of anti-American harmony in Arab

"Producing Chickens On 4 Acres Of Marginal Land Will Keep Us Farming The Other 396 Acres."

"We have 400 acres here. We grow tobacco on 30, peanuts on 25, corn and beans on 180, we usually have about 1500 hogs... but it is the two Perdue chicken houses we have on four acres of marginal land that will keep us on the farm.

"I especially think you got to do something besides tobacco. Price support has dropped. We don't know what the assessment will be. Or how the Gramm-Rudman bill will cut into the stabilization stocks. We don't know what the allotment is going to be. I think we're looking at a 13% cut at least.

"These days you have to tend so much land to get a little bit of tobacco to sell. Plus, much of the land around here is marginal—can't grow beans or corn on it—anything—until we discovered chickens.

"The land we put our two Perdue houses on is marginal land that never turned a profit for us and never would. But now it's going to be the most profitable four acres we got.

"We are currently into our second flock with Perdue and can already see the benefits. We have a steady year round cash flow and a secure source of income the government cannot touch.

"The work itself isn't all that hard. After the first 9 or 10 days, my wife and daughter-in-law can handle the operation themselves. None of us knew anything about chickens, but our Perdue service representative helped us out every step of the way. He was here every day with the first flock, and we feel we now know enough about chickens to build a third house.

"We also ended much of the skepticism many of our neighbors had about chickens. They really had no idea how advanced Perdue is in the way chickens are raised or how much help they give you or how much of the actual work they do. In fact, when our friends or neighbors open the door to one of our houses, they are amazed at what's inside.

"We made the right choice by growing with Perdue. We're well pleased. And I think it will be chickens that keep us on our farm, not tobacco, peanuts, beans, corn or hogs.

"For the labor we put into our flocks, we get more money out of it than anything we could do. I wouldn't say that if it weren't true." Give yourself a raise—raisin' with Perdue.

I'd like to know more about growing with Perdue.

Waite Letter Stipulates No Rescue Or Ransom

LONDON (AP) — Hostage negotiator Terry Waite, who dropped from sight in Beirut nearly two weeks ago, wrote a letter before leaving London saying that he wanted no one to "risk danger" on his behalf if he was kidnapped.

Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, the spiritual head of the Church of England, said Sunday he believed his emissary made the declaration because "he didn't want people to say, 'Oh well, Terry Waite has made things worse.'"

The letter by the 47-year-old Anglican envoy, who was on a mission to negotiate freedom for foreign hostages, urged that "that no one should risk danger by coming to look for him nor did he ever wish money or people to be exchanged for him," the church said.

The exact contents of the letter will "at present remain confidential," the church said in a statement.

"He wanted to do what he felt he was called to do, at risk to himself. He wanted our support but he would not want to add to the difficulties," said Runcie.

In Beirut, a senior militia official said Sunday that secret negotiations involving Syria, Iran and Lebanese militia leaders were taking place to determine Waite's fate.

"The parties concerned are burning the wires trying to ensure Mr. Waite's safety," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "Plenty of Syrian and Iranian emissaries are shuttling back and forth."

Waite was last seen Jan. 20 leaving the Riviera Hotel on Moslem west Beirut's seaside for what was believed to be a meeting with Islamic Jihad.

The Shiite Moslem group has claimed it kidnapped Americans Terry Anderson, 39, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, and Thomas Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut.

During a visit Sunday to the Church of Holy Trinity at Milton Reis in southeast England, Runcie asked the congregation to pray for Waite.

He said Waite believed he was capable of looking after himself but added, "Terry always said, 'Don't imagine I don't get scared.'"

Waite, who is married and has four children, repeatedly has expressed fears that he might be kidnapped.

Islamic Jihad has demanded that 17 terrorists jailed in Kuwait for the bombings of the French and U.S. embassies there be released.

British journalist Julie Flint, writing from Beirut for the weekly Observer, said Waite was in trouble with Islamic Jihad because he failed to obtain the release of the 17 in return for the freeing of American hostage David Jacobsen in November.

"The interest of Islamic Jihad centers on three Lebanese among the 17," wrote Miss Flint. "Sources close to the Waite investigation here say these include a cousin of Imad Mugniyeh, the man believed to be holding Waite."

"Mugniyeh, a member of the Hezbollah (a militant Shiite Moslem group) ... has refused to discuss the disappearance of Waite. ... His only comment has reportedly been: 'My cousin is still in Kuwait,'" she wrote.

Tension Mounts In Ireland After Former Guerrilla Leader's Wife Shot To Death

DUNDALK, Ireland (AP) — Police said Sunday they feared more killings after the murder of Mary McGlinchey, whose jailed husband once led the now-divided Irish National Liberation Army.

Mrs. McGlinchey was shot in the head Saturday night as she bathed her sons, ages nine and 11, at her home in Dundalk near the border with Northern Ireland, a British province. Gunfire and screams alerted neighbors who found her slumped over the bathtub.

In a message to newspapers in Dublin, the capital of the Irish Republic, the INLA blamed the killing on a breakaway faction of the organization, which itself is a Marxist offshoot of the Irish Republican Army.

Mrs. McGlinchey's husband, Dominick, 32, was chief of staff of the INLA before he was jailed last March after a gun battle with police. He is serving a 10-year sentence at Ireland's high-security Portlaoise prison where he was told Sunday of his wife's death.

Cardinal Tomas O Fiaich, head of the Roman Catholic Church in Ireland, said Sunday that for sheer brutality it would be hard to equal Mrs. McGlinchey's murder.

"Have we now descended so far on the bloodstained path to anarchy that women and children are not safe from slaughter?" he said. The cardinal said it was only by turning away from violence that Ireland could be saved from repeated acts of revenge.

Mrs. McGlinchey's death followed the killings on Jan. 20 of two men linked to the INLA, which claimed responsibility for the shootings at a hotel in Drogheda, 20 miles south of Dundalk.

In the days that followed, unconfirmed reports quoted sources close to the INLA leadership as saying the organization had been divided by serious feuding in its ranks.

"It's hard to tell who could be the next victim of this feud and whether they will be targeted north or south of the border," a Dublin detective said. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

The outlawed INLA's legal political wing, the Irish Republican Socialist Party, said in a statement Mrs. McGlinchey's killers belonged to an INLA breakaway faction and described them as "pro-British agents."

The INLA came to prominence in 1979 when it claimed responsibility for killing Airey Neave, a leading British politician and close friend of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, said Mrs. McGlinchey was believed to have played a role in the reorganization of the INLA and the Irish Republican Socialist Party following her husband's arrest.

"But in recent months she was believed to have distanced herself from the organization," it said.

Portlaoise prison officials said McGlinchey was informed of his wife's killing and moved from the quarters he had shared with other INLA and IRA inmates to another cell.

They said they considered the

move "in the best interests of everyone and for safety and security reasons," Press Association reported.

It also said the officials had not decided if they would allow McGlin-

U.S. Rep. Sala Burton Died Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Sala Burton's death of complications from cancer brought swift expressions of sorrow from public officials who worked closely with her throughout the years.

"Once again, San Francisco has suffered a great loss," San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein said after Burton's death Sunday. "Sala Burton, who followed her husband, Phil, to Congress, has now followed him in death and the entire city mourns her passing."

The 61-year-old Burton died at 8:22 EST Sunday at George Washington University Hospital, said Tom Schulz, a nephew. Mrs. Burton had colon cancer surgery in August and her last public appearance was Dec. 9.

"My friend Sala Burton was a congresswoman of the highest caliber," said U.S. Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif. "She served her constituents and our nation with great distinction. The Congress and the country have suffered a grievous loss. We shall all miss her deeply."

Mrs. Burton had arrived at her congressional office for the opening day of Congress Jan. 6, after insisting she would appear. But she became ill and was forced to leave before the swearing-in ceremonies of the 100th Congress.

The House passed a resolution allowing her to be sworn-in at home, and the oath was administered Jan. 7 by U.S. Rep. Don Edwards, the chairman of the California delegation.

Ford Will Install Airbags

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — By 1990, Ford Motor Co. plans to equip 500,000 to 1 million of its passenger cars with driver-side airbags and drive the cost of the safety devices down to about $300, company officials say.

Under the plan outlined Sunday by Ford President Donald Petersen during the second day of the four-day National Auto Dealers Association convention, Ford will be the first domestic producer making airbags widely available.

Ford now makes airbags available on its midsize Ford Tempo-Mercury Topaz, the only moderately priced cars so equipped and sold in the United States. Ford said it has sold about 11,000 of the airbag-equipped cars.

Ford has not determined which other models will be equipped with airbags, Petersen said. But he said the driver-side airbags probably will be standard on some more-expensive models and optional on less-expensive models.

"We sell them at $800 now, and the cost (of production) is even higher. But we want to get it down to about $300" per car, he said.

Ford intends to produce about 12,000 airbag-equipped cars in 1987, about 30,000 in 1988 and between 500,000 and 1 million in 1990, company spokesman William Peacock said.

Airbags are standard equipment on some European luxury cars and are options on many others. Honda Motor Co. recently announced it would offer airbags on its next generation of Acura Division cars to be introduced in 1988.

Chrysler Corp. plans to offer airbags soon on its LeBaron models, and General Motors Corp. will put the devices on some models in the next few years.

Ford, Honda and other automakers offering airbags agree with federal regulators that airbags are meant to serve only as a supplement to shoulder and lap belts, which they deem the most effective protection.

Ford has asked the government to allow it to substitute the driver's-side airbags for a federal requirement that it install either airbags or automatic safety belts on the passenger side of a certain percentage of its cars.

The proposed substitution would be in effect until 1994, when the government would require that Ford install either passenger-side airbags or automatic seat belts.

Diane Steed, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, has endorsed Ford's proposed substitution.

Annual Gala Honors Mrs. Howell

Friends of the East Carolina University of Music honored Mrs. John M. Howell at its fifth annual scholarship gala held Saturday evening at the Greenville Country Club.

Chancellor and Mrs. Howell joined 150 members and guests for a music filled evening which featured the ECU Symphony Orchestra directed by Robert Hause.

President Nelson Crisp thanked Mrs. Howell for her participation on the organization's board of directors. Mrs. Howell is retiring from the board after serving for five years.

The orchestra performed a varied program of selections from G.F. Handel and Johann Strauss Jr. as well as showtunes by modern arrangers. The musical highlight of the evening was soloist David Langevin's piano performance of the first movement of Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 2 in C Minor.

The gala is the primary fund raising event sponsored by the Friends of the School of Music each year. Proceeds are used to provide scholarship funding to deserving music students at the university. A total of 26 scholarships have been awarded for 1986-87.

Millie's Daughter Needs Counseling

DEAR ABBY: I am a female and have a girlfriend I've known since high school. I'll make up a name — Millie. We are both 30 years old. Two years ago Millie's boyfriend raped her 11-year-old daughter, and Millie is still dating this guy, and she's planning to move in with him!

My problem is that I can't seem to set aside my anger toward Millie. When she calls me on the phone I make excuses why we can't get together. As far as I know, neither Miller nor her daughter has ever received any kind of counseling or therapy following the rape. Am I wrong to hold this against her? She never talks about it — it's as though it never happened. What would you do about it? — COLD IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR COLD: I would get together with Millie immediately and ask her if either she or her daughter has ever had counseling following the rape. If she says no, you should impress upon her the importance of therapy — especially for her daughter. The friendship between you and Millie is not important, but getting the child into counseling now (if she has never had therapy) is very important. The rape crisis treatment center in your area can help Millie and her daughter.

Please don't let this slide. Write again and let me know what's going on. I care.

DEAR ABBY: We have a middle-aged woman in our office who doesn't seem to have a birthday. She's been in this office for going on three years, and even though the rest of us have a little luncheon celebration on our birthdays — and we all pitch in for a cake — this lady has never let us celebrate hers.

When she applied for a job here, she left the space blank where it indicated date and year of birth — informing the head of personnel that it was "against the law" to ask a person's age! And she got by with it, because she got the job anyway.

She's very nice, quiet and competent and a lady in every way, but we find it rather strange that she refuses to disclose her birthday. (It's also slightly irritating.)

Nobody really cares how old she is.

so what's all the secrecy? Any ideas? —THE BIRTHDAY GIRLS

DEAR GIRLS: If the woman doesn't care to disclose the date and/or year of her birth, it's her right. So what is the big deal? You know she was born; now just let her live.

DEAR ABBY: Recently while we were in Munich, Germany, we came upon a display of eight new modern homes, so we decided to tour them since they were open to the public.

We noticed that every home was built with a bathroom about six feet from the front door! It was actually in the entrance hall, and not part of the family living area. There was a partition that one could lock.

I asked the salesman why a bathroom was situated near the front door — and locked away from the main area of the home. He said this was law in Bavaria. Homeowners cannot deny anyone who wants to use the bathroom entrance into that area! I speak German, so I know that I did not misunderstand. I admit that I was shocked. Have you ever heard of this before? — J.F. IN VAN-COVER

Babies: To Comfort Or Not

By MARY JO KOCHAKIAN
L.A. Times-Washington News
News Service

Crying infants should be picked up; you cannot spoil a little baby. That is common advice today to parents.

The thinking is that a baby derives feelings about the world from how his caretakers respond to his needs. If he is attended to quickly and warmly, he will trust his caretakers, grow intellectually and emotionally. If his cries go unattended, he will feel frustrated and negative.

That theory can be an onerous burden for some parents, says M. Alex Geertsma, a pediatrician who is director of the Early Child Development Clinic at St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center in Hartford, Conn.

"The issue of infant crying has been oversimplified," Geertsma says. "One has to qualify a need for response with the age of the child, temperament style of the child and your own understanding of how you are as a person."

A parent must "work out something they (and the infant) can both live with," says Barry Lester, an associate professor of psychology and pediatrics at Brown University in Providence, R.I., who does research on infant crying. At times, he says, "it may be perfectly appropriate to let an infant cry."

Lester, too, sees parents burdened by guilt over the issue of infant crying. "They want to do right by the kid and do the best thing." They fear they will damage the child psychologically if they do "the wrong thing." Such parents, Lester says, need to ask themselves why they feel so uncertain of their competence. People who "question their own belief in themselves as parents create a wedge" if they are afraid they cannot really handle their own children, Lester said.

The conviction that crying should be attended to quickly seems to have come "from the over-interpretation of one bit of research" that "snowballed," Geertsma says. The research, done by Mary Ainsworth and associates at Johns Hopkins University in the 1960s, concluded that infants whose cries were attended to promptly cried less than infants left to "cry it out."

But "it's much more complex than that," Geertsma says. There are different developmental periods, some of which predispose infants to greater stress. There are different reasons for crying. And each infant has a different ability to cope with whatever is causing him to cry.

Some infants in the first three months "do more than just communicate need through crying," and cry frequently. "It doesn't seem to make a whole lot of difference" what response the parent makes to such "fussy" crying, Geertsma says. During the fourth through the ninth month, however, it is important to be responsive, he says, because the baby is building a sense of trust; early, inconsolable crying has abated. Ainsworth thinks that it is important for parents to respond quickly throughout infancy. "By the end (of the first three months), babies that have been picked up promptly tend to cry less," she says. Even "differences attributed to constitutional factors seem to be ironed out."

Babies cry less as they grow. Body rhythms have been established, and food is not needed as frequently. So "it could very well be that it's all the more important to respond when there is crying (in later infancy), because it's more likely to be fear or loneliness," Ainsworth says.

When babies nearing 1 year wake at night and cry, some parents fear that if they do not respond, they may scar the child. But, Geertsma says, "The reality is, the longer this use of the parent as a pacifier in the middle of the night continues, the more difficult it is to undo this pattern."

Parents should encourage older babies to calm themselves, Geertsma and Lester say.

Older babies can be viewed either as helpless or capable, Geertsma says. "My bias is to assume the vast majority are capable. If we give them a chance to do these things, they will learn them."

Not always responding immediately, or responding gradually, will "ultimately help the baby's ego development and sense of self," Lester says. Parents can teach the baby to suck on his fingers or change position to be more comfortable. Be "very, very enthusiastic" when the child calms himself, he says.

"The best thing parents can do is get to know their baby's behavior in terms of likes and dislikes," Lester says, and meet the baby's needs as much as possible. But they also should consider their own. "Sometimes we tell parents, 'When your kid is having a screaming fit, have a shower. You need a break, too.'" did not know for certain until told by Meese on Nov. 24, a day before the scheme was publicly disclosed.

William Casey Resigns Post

Casey's testimony prompted some members of Congress to criticize his apparent lack of knowledge about the diversion of funds, which reportedly began in early 1986.

Casey's resignation comes five days after a Senate Select Committee on Intelligence report said that his testimony on the CIA role in the Iran arms deal "was general in nature" and left many unanswered questions.

Casey testified in closed session before the panel "before the full scope of the situation was known" and was not under oath, the report said.

Although the report consistently describes Casey as an advocate of the arms sales, it does not spell out his exact role in debates over the matter within administration, nor does it give his views on the actions of CIA officers who assisted in the arms transfers and diversion of funds to help the Nicaraguan guerrillas.

In its conclusion, the report said the panel was unable to answer the question: "What role did the CIA and other U.S. government agencies or their officials play in planning and implementing the sale of arms to Iran and the possible diversion of funds to the Nicaraguan resistance?"

CIA involvement in the episode began in May 1985 when an agency analyst prepared a report "arguing for a change in U.S. policy that would seek a more constructive relationship with Iranian leaders interested in improved ties with the West," the report said.

Agency analysts later took a more skeptical view of the Iranian leadership, but CIA officials played important liason roles in delivering U.S. arms to Iran, the report said.

And sources said that some CIA officials in Central America were aware of, and played roles in, delivering aid to the Contra rebels despite a ban on U.S. government assistance from October 1984 to October 1986.

At least one agency official, deputy director John McMahon, protested the White House use of the CIA in the affair, including diversion of "intelligence samples" to Tehran and the use of an agency-controlled airline to deliver arms to Iran. The agency was told the cargo was oil drilling parts, the report said.

As reports circulated last month that Casey might not return to the CIA, former deputy agency director Bobby Inman said Gates "has had enough contact with Reagan at Cabinet and National Security Council meetings so that he understands how little time the president has and knows how precise and concise you have to be."

Inman added that, during Casey's illness, Gates had finished shepherding a new budget that Inman said he had been told deals generously with intelligence.

While Gates is not as close to Reagan as Casey is, Inman noted that "in the last two years of an administration you need expertise, not closeness."

Gates' service at the CIA was interrupted by a six-year stint at the NSC, from 1974 until late 1979.

In January 1982, he was appointed the deputy CIA director for intelligence. In September 1983, Casey appointed Gates as chairman of the National Intelligence Council, concurrent with his job as deputy director.

As chief of the council, Gates directed the preparation of all national intelligence estimates done by the intelligence community.

Board Talks Set

High School and Greenville Middle School both would contain grades nine through 12 under the new proposal, and E.B. Aycock would house grades six through eight.

The option also calls for the Greenville area elementary schools to be reorganized to a kindergarten through fifth-grade configuration. Due to the change in the grade levels attending the schools, the boundaries of some of the attendance areas would be changed.

Officials say under the new proposal, racial balance would be substantially improved from the current levels and from the ratio set forth in the first proposal. For instance, Sadie Sautler Elementary School, which currently has a black-white ratio of 72 to 28, would become 50 percent black and 50 percent white under this new proposal. In the first attendance changes proposal, Sadie Sautler's black-white ratio was projected at 67 percent black and 33 percent white.

Other black-white ratios in the city schools would be improved, in response to public objections that the Greenville attendance area was becoming inner-city in nature.

The Greenville attendance area changes under this option would result in the transfer of 50 percent of the elementary and secondary students and 50 percent of the staff and would require a minimum of 18 months to two years to implement, according to the proposal analysis. The option also affects proposed capital outlay expenditures by deferring proposed projects in other schools to eliminate trailers and enlarge buildings, by requiring new revenue for construction of a high school or by requiring extensive trailer utilization.

Another option for the Greenville attendance area calls for the reorganization of the elementary schools to kindergarten through fifth grade and Greenville Middle School to grades six and seven. Aycock would remain grades eight and nine and Rose would remain grades 10 through 12.

With this alternative, racial balance is improved. The plan, which also would take 18 months to two years to implement, would result in the transfer of half of the kindergarten through fifth-grade students and the transfer of all of the sixth-grade students in the school system. The proposed capital outlay plans would be affected by either deferring proposed projects in other schools, by requiring new revenue for construction of an addition to Greenville Middle School or by requiring extensive trailer utilization.

Two options for the Ayden-Grifton attendance area also have been proposed; both call for the fourth-grade students to be included in Ayden Middle School and for the students in the Clayroot area to remain in the Chicod and D.H. Conley attendance areas. The second option adds three areas north and east of Ayden to provide growth potential for the attendance area.

Changes in the D.H. Conley and North Pitt attendance areas reflect alternative options projected for consideration in the Ayden-Grifton and Greenville attendance areas. No changes would be made in the proposal for the Farmville attendance area.

A capital outlay summary noted that the implementation of option 1 or option 2 would call for changes in the initial capital outlay recommendations. "The change would delay previous recommended 1986-1987 and 1987-88 capital expenditures by approximately two years, unless additional funds in the amount of approximately $4 million were approved," the report states.

When Seib applied Thursday for a visa extension, planning to leave Friday morning, authorities kept his passport.

Seib received a series of telephone calls to his hotel room from a man who identified himself as "Jallali" and said there was a minor problem that could not be resolved until Saturday. In Iran, as elsewhere in the Islamic world, government offices are closed Friday.

Seib told colleagues the man told him his name resembled that of someone Iranian authorities were seeking, but the confusion could be

But Saturday, when Seib went to the Iranian Immigration Department office to which "Jallali" had directed him, officials said they did not know where his passport was or what the problem was.

Officials at the Ministry of Islamic Guidance, which was responsible for arranging the war zone tour, told Seib there was nothing they could do.

Seib told colleagues he spent the rest of Saturday afternoon with Swiss officials. He returned briefly to his hotel, and was leaving again when he and the diplomat were detained.

There have been no recent arrests of Western journalists in Iran. Other Westerners have been arrested on espionage charges.

Irish Upset Top-Ranked Heels

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Point guard David Rivers, who ignited unranked Notre Dame's upset of No. 1 North Carolina Sunday, said he and his teammates had faith in their ability to beat the best.

"We never lost confidence. The intensity was there and no one let up," Rivers said after the 60-58 victory over North Carolina that snapped the Tar Heels' 16-game winning streak.

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps, who registered his fifth upset of a No. 1 team at Notre Dame in 13 years, said the Irish, 12-5, controlled the Tar Heels' trap and penetrated well.

"We didn't crack, and that's a sign of maturity," Phelps said of his team that overcame a 16-point first-half deficit. "We have lost a lot of games in the last few minutes, so now I know we can play against anybody."

Tar Heel coach Dean Smith said North Carolina, 18-2, which played without its leading scorer, Kenny Smith, played well until the final minute.

Kenny Smith underwent arthroscopic knee surgery Saturday and is expected to miss two weeks.

Rivers was held scoreless in the first half but he scored 14 points in the final 20 minutes, including a field goal with 1:06 to play that gave the Irish the lead for the first time since early in the game. He added two free throws with 16 seconds left.

"In the first half, I didn't have any opportunities to take my shot, and I wasn't going to force it because that would benefit North Carolina," Rivers said. "I was patient and waited until my shots came."

Notre Dame sealed the victory with two free throws with five seconds left by Gary Voce, who led the Irish with 15 points and 10 rebounds.

Notre Dame used some sharp free throw shooting in the closing minutes.

Voce made two foul shots with 2:49 to play, followed by two more from Donald Royal 30 seconds later to bring the Irish within 53-52.

North Carolina's Joe Wolf, who scored 14 points, answered with a field goal at 1:54, then fouled Voce as he scored again 18 seconds later. Voce missed the free throw for the three-point play, but a North Carolina player tipped the ball out of bounds and Rivers followed with his jumper with 1:06 to go, giving the Irish their first lead since early in the first half.

Notre Dame fell behind early in the first half, plagued by a series of costly turnovers that began when Reid picked off a Rivers' pass and scored.

finished with 12 points, drove under the basket and missed with 20 seconds left and Rivers made two free throws four seconds later for a 58-55 lead.

Thirteen seconds later, North Carolina's Jeff Lebo, who scored 11 points, missed a 3-point shot.

Reid fouled Voce on a rebound in the Irish's next possession, and the Notre Dame crowd exploded, tossing scores on placards on the floor as Notre Dame was assessed a technical foul.

Voce made both free throws and Lebo made the technical. North Carolina had possession of the ball but Wolf missed a 3-point shot in the closing seconds and Lebo followed with the rebound for the final margin.

Ranzino Smith scored eight points in his starting role in place of Kenny Smith, who was released from the North Carolina infirmary Sunday.

Notre Dame fought back to within 37-35 in the second half, after rallying from a 16-point deficit with a 19-4 streak.

East Carolina University will begin the hunt for a new — whoops — a couple of new head basketball coaches in the next few days, and Dr. Ken Karr, Director of Athletics, said he is hopeful of having the new coaches in place in time for at least a few weeks of recruiting before the national signing date.

Karr will be naming a panel in the near future to handle the job of screening candidates to replace Charlie Harrison as men's basketball coach and Emily Manwaring as women's basketball coach.

Harrison's resignation, officially announced Thursday, was followed swiftly by that of Manwaring on Saturday. Neither coach would go into the details of why they had made their decisions, but, to the credit of both, it does give the school a chance to make its move to the future in time to have a chance to save this recruiting year.

Karr, in a conversation Saturday night, said he would "have a committee established in the next week or so to deal with both vacancies." He did not say whether the committee would seek to fill both positions, or whether two different groups would be handling the process.

Karr also said he could not say at this time how many people would be involved in the searches, but that it would be representative.

"In both instances, we need to identify people as quickly as possible and have them on board so as to give them some chance to get out and recruit before the April signing date," Karr said.

From that, Pirate fans might expect to learn who the new leaders would be sometime in March.

There has been some talk that the athletic administration has committed itself to building the men's program with more financial support with the coming of the new coach.

But again, Karr sidestepped the question. "Every year we have to evaluate what we are spending on a particular program. We will be evaluating these and seeing what can be allocated and what the feasibility of allocating more money to the programs are."

Karr spent most of Saturday in meetings with the Pirate Club. He apparently has survived a move begun last December by some members of the organization to call for his ouster. A move was attempted in the last Pirate Club Board meeting of 1986 to enter a resolution calling for the school to dismiss Karr, but it had not been entered prior to 30 days before the meeting, and was not again submitted in time for this meeting Saturday.

Karr said the meetings dealt mostly with plans for the coming year's funding drives.

However, several projects were discussed, including the new sports medicine building, an addition to Ficklen Stadium and the construction of a new activities center for the campus.

"The new sports medicine building (which will also include athletic department offices and other facilities) is still in the planning stages, and we hope to finish that up shortly. We are waiting too, to see if the legislature will allot the rest of the funding for the building. If they do, then we may be in a position to start taking bids around July 1," Karr said.

As to the stadium expansion, Karr said that the school is still evaluating plans which could see the north side doubledecker with sky boxes for big Pirate Club contributors.

The activities center, comparable to one built at Western Carolina, would serve as a convention center, an auditorium for concerts and the like, as well as a new basketball arena for the Pirates. Plans for that are also still in the discussion stage, but could see some action out of the new session of the state legislature. "We're still trying to sort out where the funding would come from — the county, the state, the federal government — or what," Karr said.

Meanwhile, the Pirate football staff, too, is seeking to fill vacancies. One new coach is to be announced today, but two others, defensive line coach Wally Chambers (Temple) and strength coach Mike Gentry (Virginia Tech) are leaving.

Racing For The Start

Stars And Stripes Takes 3-0 Lead

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — Stars & Stripes dominated Kookaburra III in moderate winds today, winning by 1 minute, 46 seconds to take a 3-0 lead and move within one victory of bringing the America's Cup back to the United States.

It had been in America for 132 years, ever since the competition began in 1851. But Australia won it in 1983. Skipper Dennis Conner, who lost it, is on the verge of regaining yachting's biggest prize.

The fourth, and potentially decisive, race is scheduled for Wednesday (12:15 a.m. EST). The next race had been scheduled for Tuesday, but Stars & Stripes requested an off day because of a forecast for light winds, conditions that make luck a factor in sailboat racing.

After the race, it was disclosed by police that the Kookaburra camp received a phone call saying there was a bomb aboard. A chase boat was sent alongside to inform the crew. No bomb was found.

Chief Inspector John Watts of Perth central police confirmed that an anonymous call had been made to a police station in Sydney claiming a bomb was on board the Australian 12-meter.

Kevin Parry, chairman of Kookaburra's taskforce syndicate, said he had been called out of a board meeting and informed of the bomb scare. Parry said that although he was told it was almost certainly a hoax call, he was given the option of calling off the race and evacuating the boat. But when informed, the crew chose to finish the race.

"Our crew will fight the whole way," Kookaburra III skipper Iain Murray told a post-race news conference. "They're still in very high spirits."

"The boat we're racing appears to be faster than us. But we haven't lost it yet."

Conner won the first race Saturday in heavy winds by 1:41 and the second race, Sunday, in light winds in 1:10. He won today in moderate winds of 12 to 20 knots out of the southwest.

Kookaburra III got off to its best start in the best-of-seven series in today's race. The boats crossed the starting line evenly, then engaged in the most aggressive competition of the three races.

The Australian defender was slightly in front when the boats crossed each other four minutes into the race. Seventeen minutes later they crossed again and this time Conner had Stars & Stripes ahead by about two boat lengths.

Conner never trailed again. Stars & Stripes led by 15 seconds at the first mark then pulled away on the second leg, a downwind run. It added a whopping 42 seconds to its lead to build its margin to 57 seconds.

Moments after the start and late in the second leg, Kookaburra III bowman Don McCracken went up the mast, apparently to work on a main-sail zipper, which controls the sail's shape and area.

The advantages at each of the next five marks were 1:21, 1:31, 1:29, 1:49 and 1:41, respectively.

The Americans were so relaxed and confident that they joked among each other.

Conner, in fact, so enjoyed today's race that at one point he even surrendered the wheel to tactician Tom Whidden.

The American crew chatted and joked like yachtsmen out for an afternoon's pleasure sail during the race as they pulled away from Australia and closer to victory.

Harrison Reveals Reasons For Leaving

BALTIMORE (AP) — East Carolina basketball coach Charlie Harrison says he's walking away from collegiate coaching because "this school has not paid me more than $30,000 a year for five years," according to today's Baltimore Sun.

The 37-year-old coach told the paper that he loved to coach but it was time to gain some "more financial advantages."

Harrison said that he decided to resign on Jan. 23 after five years at East Carolina but school officials didn't announce his decision until last Thursday. His resignation is effective at the end of the season.

Harrison's team meets Navy tonight in a Colonial Athletic Association contest in Greenville, N.C.

The coach said he made his mind up to leave East Carolina during "a six-hour bus trip in the snow to George Mason on a Friday afternoon."

Harrison said he started seriously thinking about it during the Christmas holidays when "I had time for a change to sit down and think things over. It really wasn't an overnight decision."

In addition to financial reasons, Harrison also cited the inability to keep assistant coaches at the school and personal problems as figuring in his decision.

"Every year, my assistant coaching staff changes, because my guys get better offers and move on," Harrison said. "The constant change makes recruiting tough."

Harrison said he's also had some personal problems including the death of his father last summer.

Harrison, who is in the final year of a five-year contract, said the school had not made any decision about his future.

"Even if they had wanted me to come back, I don't know if I would have," Harrison said.

A source close to the East Carolina basketball program told The Sun that Harrison had become disillusioned with the lack of support from the athletic department for the basketball team.

"This is a football school," said the source. "Most of the big contributors are interested in football. I know coach Harrison was hurt by this."

When Harrison was asked about the football team receiving more emphasis than basketball, he would only say, "I don't feel like I've been appreciated for what I've done other than by some people in a few areas around here."

Harrison said he doesn't know what he'll do after this season.

"I like the game of basketball, even the jerk writers," he said. "But the game is changing and there are a lot of aspects outside coaching. I want a chance to be more successful."

Ferrell's Magic Touch Lifts Yellow Jackets Past Terps

ATLANTA (AP) — It was one of those games when Duane Ferrell was confident his shots would fall.

Ferrell hit 10 of 15 shots Sunday and scored 25 points to lead Georgia Tech to a 76-72 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Maryland.

"I felt if I could go to the hole strong and create, I could score," Ferrell said. "I felt confident it would go. They gave us a battle right to the buzzer."

Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said, "We knew we had to play well today and several times in the second half we did. They are a good basketball team. They are going to get a couple of (ACC) wins."

"We were right there, but we didn't execute," Maryland coach Bob Wade said. "It's nice that people respect us now. It shows we are making progress. Hopefully in the second half we'll be able to pull one out."

The Terrapins led only twice in the game, 2-0 and 33-32, the latter coming early in the second half before Ferrell's 19-footer gave Georgia Tech the lead for good with 17:04 remaining in the game.

Georgia Tech, 11-7 and 3-4, built its lead to 50-37 with 11:08 left on a basket by Tom Hammonds and then withstood a Maryland rally led by Steve Hood and Derrick Lewis.

Lewis led the Terps with 25 points, 17 in the second half, and Hood had 22. Hood was 10 of 13 from the field, missing his last two shots in the game, one a dunk.

The Terps fell to 6-8 overall and 0-6 in the ACC.

Freshman Brian Oliver had 12 points for the Yellow Jackets and also pulled down a game-high 12 rebounds and dished out six assists.

Hammonds added 14 points and Bruce Dalrymple 12 for the Yellow Jackets.

Broncos' Stars End With A Win

HONOLULU (AP) — Denver's John Elway and Karl Mecklenburg closed out the NFL season with a measure of consolation.

Elway threw for the game's only touchdown and Mecklenburg was a defensive standout Sunday as their AFC team beat the error-plagued NFC 10-6 in the Pro Bowl football game.

The Broncos had suffered a 39-20 humbling at the hands of the New York Giants in the Super Bowl the previous Sunday.

Although the Pro Bowl featured such high-powered offensive stars as Elway, Walter Payton, Eric Dickerson and Mark Bavaro, the defenses mostly controlled the contest.

The American Conference got all its points in the first half and the NFC could muster only a pair of field goals in the second.

The AFC came up with a couple of late goal-line stands to preserve the victory, just the third for the AFC in the last eight Pro Bowls.

"It was a good defensive battle," Mecklenburg, a linebacker appearing in his fourth Pro Bowl, said. "This is usually an offensive game, not such a defensive struggle. We had a great bunch of defensive players. We played Bronco-type football — bend but don't break."

"It feels good to end the season with a victory," said Elway, who threw a 10-yard scoring strike to Todd Christensen of the Los Angeles Raiders on the last play of the first quarter.

Tony Franklin of New England kicked a 26-yard field goal late in the first half and Morten Anderson kicked a pair in the second half for the NFC.

"Our defense came through, came up with the big plays," Elway, who was playing in his first Pro Bowl, added.

Word Games Help Miller Get Back Winning Touch

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Miller played word games with himself over the closing holes of a tournament he still refers to as "The Crosby." At the end he heard a word applied to him that hadn't been used in four long years — winner.

Miller's buzz word on Sunday was WOOD. "That means it Works Only One Day. I have a lot of little gimmicks like that," he said.

But this one was something different. "I've used it maybe once before in my whole life." It was designed to cure what he called "a terminal putting stroke." Miller said after coming from five shots off the pace with a brilliant 66.

"Over the last four holes, I didn't look at the putter. I looked at the hole," Miller said.

It worked on two occasions, a 6-footer for birdie that brought him to within one shot of the lead on the 15th, and a 15-footer that proved to be the eventual winner on the 18th.

But even WOOD wasn't enough on the 18th, Miller said.

"I knew I couldn't make it. So I pretended my son was putting it. I figured he could do it. So I'm hanging over the putt saying, 'Come on, young John.'"

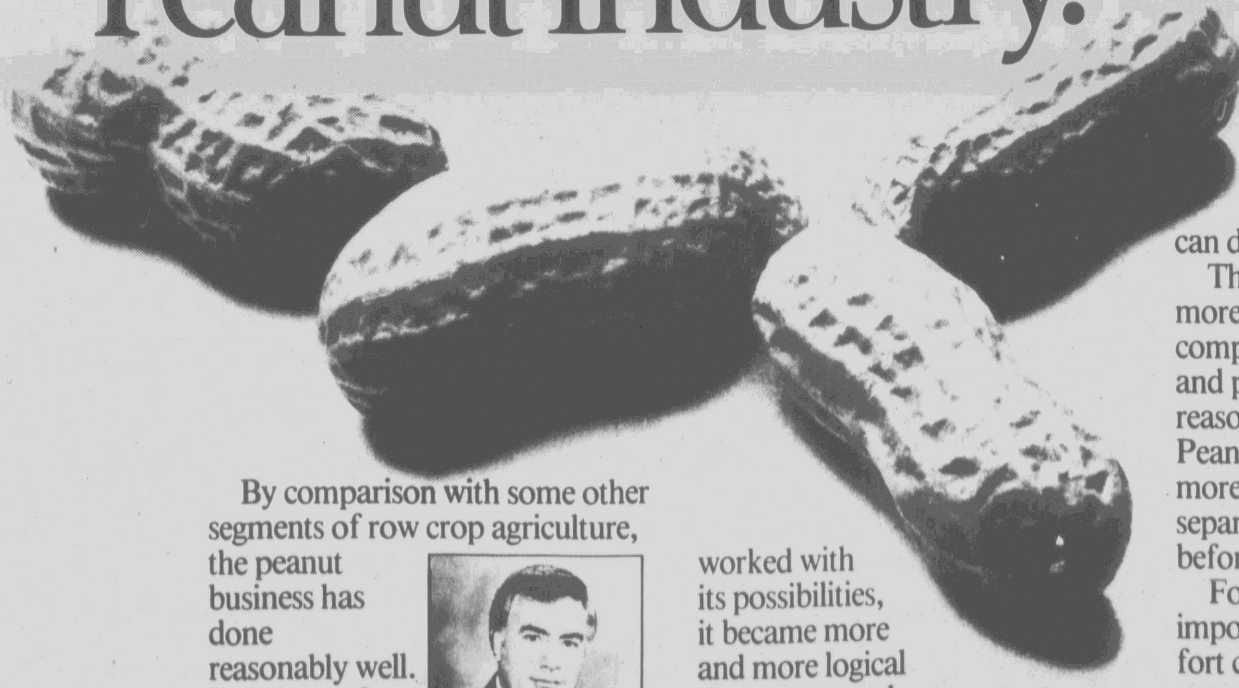

The ball found its way into the cup and, when the stricken Payne Stewart later bogeyed the 17th from a bunker, Miller was a winner again for the first time in four seasons.

"It wasn't exactly a gift, but it was reasonably charitable," Miller said after the one-shot victory in the tournament now known officially as the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

He scored the 23rd victory of his career with a 278 total, 10 under par on the Pebble Beach Golf Links, "my favorite course," Miller said.

Stewart, so frequently a challenger and so rarely a winner, again finished second, with a closing 72 and a 279 total. It was his second consecutive runnerup finish in this tournament and his fourth in 53 weeks. He hasn't won since 1983.

Building A Brighter Future For The Peanut Industry.

By comparison with some other segments of row crop agriculture, the peanut business has done reasonably well. But those of us who are in agriculture and have made it our life know one thing for certain: if we are to have a bright future, even in peanuts, we have to make some changes. And we feel it important to make those changes while we can, before they are forced upon us.

It was in this search for a brighter future for all of us in the peanut industry that the thinking for the new Golden Peanut Company was formed. And as we worked with its possibilities, it became more and more logical that we proceed.

Let me share with you the four driving forces behind this decision to form Golden Peanut Company by blending the peanut activities of Gold Kist and those of Archer Daniels Midland's Columbian Peanut Company.

First, it gave us a company able to focus its total resources and energies on peanuts. Both companies had very knowledgeable people working in the peanut operations, but many of them had duties in other areas, too. We are convinced the success of the peanut industry demands people who are giving their entire attention to peanuts, and that is the case with our new company.

Second, all agriculture is learning the hard way that producing a product isn't enough; we must also market products effectively. Today's U.S. and world markets call for adequate size, the flexibility to meet customers' needs quickly, and a determination to be above-average marketers. Golden Peanut intends to build new and expanded markets for peanuts, both in the U.S. and in international markets. They won't come quickly or easily, but we believe we can do it.

Third, all of us need to be more efficient if we are to compete, especially shellers and processors. For many reasons the new Golden Peanut Company will be more efficient than the two separate companies were before.

Fourth, but probably most important, no marketing effort can go forward without a sure quality supply, which means any peanut sheller which wants to build for the future must be as certain as possible of its supply. To do this we must be able to offer an advantage to peanut producers. This we will do through innovative programs which we believe will be fair to both farmers and customers. And, yes, there were other reasons, but the four listed here drove the idea forward. The real thing that kept us working on the formation of Golden Peanut Company, through many frustrations and pitfalls, was the common desire for one thing: TO BUILD A BRIGHTER FUTURE FOR THE PEANUT INDUSTRY. Golden Peanut Company is now a reality. We humbly ask your help, knowing we do not have all the answers but striving to do what will be best for all of us.

On behalf of the people of GOLDEN PEANUT COMPANY

Golden Globes Honor TV, Film Achievements

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Hearing-impaired actress Marlee Matlin used sign language to accept the Golden Globe for best dramatic actress while a grim Vietnam drama and a Woody Allen comedy were honored as 1986's best pictures.

"I can't believe it! I'm shaking! I'm not much of a speaker — he is," Miss Matlin, who played a troubled deaf woman in "Children of a Lesser God," said in sign, referring to a friend who interpreted her remarks to the audience Saturday night at the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

The 44th annual awards, presented by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, honored achievement in both television and film and are seen by some as signposts to the more prestigious Academy Awards.

Golden Globes for 1986 went to Oliver Stone's "Platoon" for best dramatic movie and to Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters" in the best comedy or musical comedy category.

The dramatic actor prize went to Bob Hoskins of "Mona Lisa," while comedy-musical acting honors went to Australian Paul Hogan of the surprise smash "Crocodile Dundee" and Sissy Spacek for "Crimes of the Heart."

Stone also garnered best dramatic director honors for "Platoon," the product of 10 years of trying to put onto film his own experience as a soldier in Vietnam. He expressed surprise at the awards.

"Through this award you acknowledge the Vietnam veteran and you say you understand what happened over there and that it should not happen again," Stone told the ballroom audience.

"L.A. Law" won the award for best television drama series.

The Cecil B. DeMille award for career achievement went to Anthony Quinn, who acknowledged 210 films in his 50-year career and cited his advice to his children: "You can only be as bad as you dare to be good."

Quinn and presenter Charlton Heston delighted the audience with a brief Greek-style dance in the manner Quinn made famous in "Zorba the Greek."

Olivia de Havilland was honored for her supporting performance in a television movie for "Anastasia: The Mystery of Anna;" Edward Woodward as lead actor in a dramatic television series, "The Equalizer;" Angela Lansbury as lead actress in a dramatic series, "Murder She Wrote;" and Loretta Young for best performance by an actress in a TV movie, "Christmas Eve."

James Woods won a Globe for best performance by an actor in a TV movie for his role as a schizophrenic in the film "Promise," which also won as best miniseries or movie made for television.

"Golden Girls" was named best TV musical or comedy series, and "Moonlighting" stars Bruce Willis and Cybill Shepherd were chosen best actor and actress in that category.

The two-hour awards program was broadcast live in Los Angeles, and was syndicated on a delayed basis elsewhere.

The Golden Globes were once carried on network television but fell into disrepute on charges of rigged voting. Foreign press members have since tightened the voting regulations. About 80 members of the association are eligible to cast ballots.

BEST DIRECTOR — Oliver Stone holds his Golden Globe award after winning for his movie about the Vietnam war "Platoon." The movie was chosen best dramatic motion picture for 1986 and Stone was named best director for the same film. (AP Laserphoto)

Hollywood Begins 100th Anniversary Celebration

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Bob Hope, Jimmy Stewart and Gene Autry put mementos in a time capsule, as they and other celebrities toasted the beginning of Hollywood's yearlong 100th anniversary celebration.

With actress Rhonda Fleming leading a chorus of "Happy Birthday," celebrities gathered Sunday in the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel's Blossom Room, where Academy Awards were first presented in 1929, to fill a 5-foot by 5-foot acrylic time capsule.

Earlier, the late Natalie Wood was honored with a star on the "Walk of Fame." Actor Robert Wagner dedicated his late wife's star amid a crush of hundreds of fans and photographers.

"She was a wonderful lady," Wagner said. Miss Wood, who starred in such films as "Rebel Without a Cause," "Splendor in the Grass" and "West Side Story," drowned in 1981.

"She is one of the dreamers who came here, and was a great success," said City Councilman Michael Woo, whose district includes Hollywood. "I think she symbolizes what Hollywood can again become." Community leaders hope the centennial salute, along with $900 million in redevelopment funds, will help restore an area plagued by decaying stores and street crime.

It was on Feb. 1, 1887, that a real estate developer and prohibitionist, Harvey Wilcox, registered his ranch with the county recorder and his wife named it Hollywood after the summer home of a friend.

The community was incorporated as a city in 1903, then was annexed to Los Angeles in 1910. It attracted the early filmmakers because of its climate, and distance from the East Coast-based trust that once tried to control movie equipment patents.

President Reagan, in a letter that Stewart read before placing in the time capsule, said Hollywood "produces dreams, fame, careers, an important part of our cultural heritage, and has an enormous impact on our customs and mores."

Reagan said he was proud to have been part of the film industry.

Hope, who was bathed in champagne when a gigantic bottle was opened during the festivities, added a special Oscar statuette to the capsule.

"How do you like that," Hope said. "I finally get my hands on a real Oscar, and they have to lock it away for 100 years."

Buddy Rogers put in a videocassette of the academy's first best picture, his 1927 film, "Wings." He pointed out to the audience where he sat for the first Academy Awards with Clara Bow and Gary Cooper.

Gene Autry, the former cowboy star and owner of the California Angels baseball team, put in a piece of the famous Hollywood sign.

Walter Lantz, creator of Woody Woodpecker, put in a cell from a Woody Woodpecker cartoon, wondering aloud if in the future someone might think it represents "what people in Hollywood looked like 100 years ago."

The time capsule will be sent on a nationwide tour before a decision is

Peggy Lee Battles Back

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The indomitable Peggy Lee, recovered from double-bypass heart surgery, is back on the road again, posing her still unanswered inquiries, "Why Don't You Do Right?" and "Is That All There Is?"

Nothing, it seems, can stop the songstress, not diabetes, glandular deficiencies, double pneumonia, nor a near-fatal fall in which "my ribs were torn from my spine." Her closest brush with fate came in October 1985 when she underwent the heart surgery in New Orleans, followed by complications.

"I just came back from a 10-week tour," she said in an interview at her Bel-Air home. "I've also been appearing with symphony orchestras, and it's a real thrill to have all those musicians behind you. I also have a great jazz quintet, so you can see I have the best of both worlds."

A whole new generation of filmgoers has also been hearing Peggy in the Walt Disney classic, "Lady and the Tramp," which has been earning big bucks ($23 million) in a re-release this winter. She not only wrote the songs with Sonny Burke; she also plays the voice of the canine tart Peg who sings "He's a Tramp (but I love him)."

"The character was originally called Mamie," Miss Lee recalled. "But Walt didn't want to insult our First Lady, Mamie Eisenhower."

The singer recalled that her assignment on "Lady and the Tramp" came about by a happy accident.

"I had left Capitol Records for five years because they wouldn't record my version of 'Lover,'" she said. "They already had a huge hit of 'Lover' by Les Paul. Mine was such a different version that I didn't think it competed."

"Sonny Burke and other Decca executives were at the Copa (New York's top night club) when I was singing 'Lover' and the audience was going crazy. I new from the beginning that it was going to do something. My contract was up and I went to Decca. They said they would record 'Lover' right away."

made on where to place it, host Johnny Grant said.

The hoopla will continue through the year. Among the events: a street dance at Hollywood and Vine; a Hollywood Canteen night at the Bob Hope USO Center; a Hollywood Bowl Concert at which Bob and Dolores Hope will be crowned Hollywood Citizens of the Century; a celebrity golf tournament and a polo match.

FOCUS

Frog In The Fog
 Popular American legend says that if the groundhog doesn't see his shadow today, there will be an early spring. European folklore gives similar forecasting abilities to the bear and the badger. In China, farmers believe that the frog is nature's meteorologist. Many of them subscribe to the following rule: If a frog croaks when it is sunny, rain will come in two days. If the frogs croak just after it rains, the weather will be fine.

DO YOU KNOW — If the groundhog sees his shadow, how many more weeks of winter are predicted?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The United States fought the Mexican War during James Polk's presidency.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQ ♥AKQ73 ♦954 ♠A102
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1♥ Pass 2♦ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—There are several possibilities. Three no trump, three hearts and a diamond raise should all be considered—and rejected! Your prime controls and good five-card suit make the hand too good for three no trump; you need a sixth heart for a jump in hearts; and there must be a better bid than to raise partner with three low cards! The solution is a waiting bid of three clubs—a high reverse. Partner's next action should help chart your course.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK9852 ♥2 ♦QJ9 ♠K103
 The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
 1♠ Pass 2♦ Pass
 2♣ Pass 3♣
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Your hand has improved dramatically. You have a fit for both of partner's suits, a singleton in the unbid suit and prime controls in your suit. A mere three diamond preference doesn't come close to describing this sudden powerhouse—jump to four diamonds.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠92 ♥AKJ6 ♦873 ♠Q1062
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South
 1♠ Dbl ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—There is a standard way to describe your hand. Whenever partner's opening bid has been doubled for takeout and you hold 10 or more points, you must redouble. This action requests partner to pass at his next turn because you might want to double the opponents no matter where they alight.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQ103 ♥73 ♦A10952 ♠AQ
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1♦ Pass 1♥ Pass
 1♠ Pass 1NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠6 ♥95 ♦K762 ♠AQJ1063
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West

1♠ Pass 2♣ Pass
 2NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—If you elect to rebid three clubs, you would be showing a sub-minimum two-over-one response with nothing but a good, long club suit. Since you have a king in reserve, that bid must be ruled out. We would opt for three no trump. This hand could easily produce six or seven tricks for partner.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KJ93 ♥AQ7 ♦AJ8 ♠K106
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1NT Pass 4♠ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Your opening bid announced a balanced hand of 16-18 points. Partner's response has stated that he hopes to make 10 tricks at a spade contract opposite your clearly defined holding.
