Gorbachev Reveals Human Rights Shift

By JOHN THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev told an international peace forum today that the Kremlin has adopted a new approach to human rights, but he said it was not doing so to please the West.

In a wide-ranging speech in the Grand Kremlin Palace, Gorbachev repeated his government's opposition to the U.S. "Star Wars" space defense program and charged the White House was trampling the agreement he and President Reagan reached at their 1985 summit in Geneva to spur arms control talks.

There had been speculation Gorbachev might use the occasion to make new arms control proposals. But the speech contained no new plans, stressing instead proposals Gorbachev made at November's summit in Reykjavik and in a January 1985 speech outlining a blueprint for disarmament by the year 2000.

Gorbachev spoke to about 1,000 people from 80 countries who took part in a weekend forum of scientists, cultural figures, religious leaders and businessmen.

Andrei Sakharov, the nation's most famous dissident, was in the audience. In an address Sunday to a group of scientists at the forum, he suggested the Kremlin consider negotiating Star Wars, formally called the Strategic Defense Initiative, separately from other arms control issues.

Sakharov also said "an open and democratic" Soviet Union would be an important step toward international trust and disarmament.

Gorbachev did not discuss human rights in detail, but said: "Our new approach to the humanitarian problems ... is there for all to see. And I must disappoint those who think that this has been the result of pressure on us from the West, that we want to gain somebody's fancy in pursuit of some ulterior motives. No, we do not."

Sakharov, listening to Gorbachev's remarks on human rights, leaned forward and applauded.

Last week, the Soviet Union announced the release of 140 imprisoned dissidents and a government spokesman said another 140 cases were being reviewed. But Soviet security agents last week used force to break up a series of demonstrations on behalf of a jailed Jewish activist, Josef Begun.

A high Soviet official said Sunday that Begun had been released, but authorities told his family today that he still was in prison.

Turning to arms control, Gorbachev said, "One strategic submarine today carries a destructive punch equivalent to several Second World Wars. ... The imagination is powerless to envision the hell, the negation of the idea of man if any part, however small, of the present nuclear arsenal is used."

Gorbachev said Soviet arms control proposals "mirrored the U.S.S.R.'s wish and preparedness to give up its status of a nuclear power, and reduce all other weapons to a minimum of reasonable sufficiency."

He repeated an earlier statement that new U.S. nuclear tests this year ended the Soviet Union's unilateral testing moratorium, which began in August 1985. He did not say when the Kremlin might resume tests.

Referring to the Reykjavik summit, Gorbachev said the meeting in October was "not a failure, but a breakthrough."

"Those were not ordinary talks, but a moment of truth, when the greatest

Pitt Schools Close Early As Streets Become Icy

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

An ice storm that created hazardous driving conditions in Pitt County today caused a number of traffic accidents and prompted area schools to send students home by mid-morning.

Sleet and freezing rain from a winter storm that blanketed North Carolina with frozen precipitation began around 8 a.m. today, covering car windshields and icing sidewalks and bridges, just as many residents were traveling to work.

According to N.C. Highway Patrol Sgt. K.R. Ross, 25 to 30 traffic accidents had been reported by 10:30 a.m. He said the wrecks were due to the icy road conditions and were scattered throughout Pitt County. Road conditions continued to worsen throughout the day, he said.

School officials in Pitt County dismissed students at 10:15 a.m. after touring the county roads and contacting the N.C. State Patrol and N.C. Department of Transportation about the icy roads.

"Due to escalating inclement weather that resulted in ice on many of the bridges throughout the county and the roads, the school administration decided to have an early dismissal," according to Barry

N.C. Gets Coat Of Winter Ice

By The Associated Press

After a week of spring-like weather, winter returned to North Carolina today as a major ice storm coated roads in much of the state with sheets of ice, with accidents blocking at least one highway in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

"There are no ifs about it," said Rod Gonski, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Raleigh. "We have an ice storm situation across North Carolina."

"We have a mixture of just about everything," Gonski said.

The state Highway Patrol said roads became ice covered from the west to east early Monday morning. Several roads across the state were tied up with fender-bender accidents, but no major accidents were reported, authorities said.

In Wilkes County, N.C. 16 near the top of the Blue Ridge Mountains was blocked by a tractor-trailer and several cars that slid off the road, the Watauga County Sheriff's Department said.

Gonski said the ice storm was caused by two low pressure systems colliding over North Carolina. A low pressure system over Alabama brought warmer than expected temperatures to the state, while a system that was building along the Georgia-South Carolina coast was bringing colder air and some snow.

The mixture of freezing rain and sleet was slowly spreading over the central, southern and northern mountains from the southeast by morning, the weather service said.

"Because so much of it (precipitation) is freezing rain or sleet, it is un-

'Platoon' Depiction Of Soldiers Wrong, Says Congressman

By JEFF BARKER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the dozen House members to serve in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War says he almost walked out of the Oscar-nominated film "Platoon" because of what it says about the American soldier.

"That may have been (writer-director) Oliver Stone's war, but it wasn't mine," said Rep. Tom Ridge, R-Pa., who believes he is the only House member to have seen Vietnam combat as an enlisted man.

"We fought the enemy and the environment, not ourselves," he said. "We've got a generation that doesn't know anything about the war and now they've got American soldiers shooting each other and abusing civilians. They've got Oliver Stone's GI."

The Harvard-educated Ridge said the movie vividly brought back his stint as a 23-year-old staff sergeant with the Army's Americal Division in Vietnam's northern corridor during 1969-70.

Drafted after his first year at Dickinson Law School, he served in Vietnam about eight months, then returned to become a lawyer. In 1982, Ridge was elected to Congress, where his moderate voting record has included opposing President Reagan's policy in Nicaragua, in part because of his Vietnam experience.

"Vietnam gives me greater pause to reflect that when you commit troops or surrogates, it better be a last resort," he said.

"Platoon" follows a boot-camp graduate off the transport plane and into the horrors of the war. Ridge, 41, has no quarrel with the appearance of the film — the jungles, the insects and leeches, the camouflaged bunkers and booby-traps.

"It showed the nights, which were so clear you probably can't imagine. There were no lights for hundreds of miles around, just the iridescence of the moon and stars."

Shiites Let Camps Receive Food

By MAIA LAWAND
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem militiamen besieging Palestinian refugee camps for more than four months today allowed food convoys to enter two tiny shantytowns near south Lebanon's port city of Tyre, United Nations officials said.

Four trucks loaded with food supplies and mattresses drove into the Buss and Bourj el-Shamali camps as thousands of refugees from the larger Rashidiyah camp nearby swarmed into the market in Tyre for a second day to buy food.

Rashidiyah's women were allowed out of the camp first time Sunday. Amal, the dominant Shiite Moslem militia, had said the siege will be lifted for seven hours every day, starting at 7 a.m.

In another development, fighting unrelated to the camps broke out Sunday between guerrilla factions in west Beirut, killing at least six people.

An official of the U.N. Relief and Works Agency, which cares for Palestinian refugees, said the trucks at Buss and Bourj el-Shamali unloaded 47 tons of flour, 90,000 tins of sardines, 564 canisters of skimmed milk and 100 mattresses for each camp.

A convoy of three trucks was in Lebanon's predominantly Sunni Moslem port city of Sidon, about 25 miles to the north, waiting for clearance to head to Rashidiyah, said the U.N. official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Amal besieged the three camps around Tyre, 50 miles south of Beirut, and other shantytowns in Beirut on Oct. 1 to curb a resurgence of Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

A police source in Tyre said Amal militiamen allowed the convoy to enter Buss and Bourj el-Shamali only after they confiscated one-third of the flour. U.N. officials in Beirut declined comment.

Reporters in Tyre said the city's shops and supermarkets were crowded with women and children buying flour, powdered milk, meat and vegetables for Rashidiyah's 30,000 refugees.

Smiling Palestinian women emerged from shops carrying large food sacks on their heads.

"I'm very happy. My six children will be eating fresh food for the first time in four months," said a woman who identified herself as Zeina, as she walked past an Amal checkpoint outside the camp.

Several grocers complained that the Palestinians, mostly Sunnis, did not leave enough food for Tyre's predominantly Shiite population. "They almost cleaned up my stocks," said one supermarket owner.

No men came out of the camp, apparently because they feared being kidnapped by Shiite gunmen.

Responses Filed In Civil Suits

Defendants in two civil suits filed by Dr. Joseph M. Ward, a Pitt County physician, have filed responses denying allegations that newspaper articles and television news programs in which Ward's name was mentioned were false and misleading or libelous.

Ward filed a civil complaint in December seeking more than $6 million in damages from The Daily Reflector and more than $3,000 from Alvin Taylor, the newspaper's managing editor in December.

A similar suit, seeking more than $30 million from owners and employees or former employees of two television stations — WNCT in Greenville and WTVD in Durham — as well as $30 in damages from Greenville lawyer Willis Talton was also filed by Ward in December.

The suit against The Daily Reflector and Taylor charged that the newspaper "defamed the plaintiff (and) demeaned the professional reputation of the plaintiff" through "the publication of out of context, false and/or misleading statements" about professional health care services provided by Ward at the University Nursing Center.

The complaint also charged that the alleged libelous statements were published "with actual malice."

The Reflector's answer, filed last week, denied Ward's charges; said the articles published "were either privileged or qualifiedly privileged" and were printed "without any malice or ill-will toward any person, persons or institutions whomsoever."

The second suit named Roy H. Park Broadcasting Co. (owner of WNCT), Roy Hardee (WNCT news director), Roy H. Park of Ithaca, N.Y. (owner of Park Broadcasting), Capital Cities-ABC Inc. of Durham (owner of WTVD), Ned Warwick (former news director of WTVD who now lives in Philadelphia) and Talton, as defendants.

It charged that the television stations "broadcasted" news reports which contained false or distorted or misleading information. "Some of these statements were made by ... reporters(s) and some were made by ... Defendant Talton" who was the attorney for a plaintiff in a suits against Ward and the University Nursing Home.

Answering Ward's complaint, WNCT denied the allegations that the newscasts had contained false, mis-

Meeting Set

The Greenville Human Relations Council will meet on Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the first floor conference room of the Municipal Building located at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets.

Course Continues

The course, "Eating for Heart Health," continues at the Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center each Tuesday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

This week's topic will be "You Don't Have To Give Up Goodies — Baking and Desserts."

For information, call the patient education coordinator, 757-4611.

Vision Testing

The Creative Living Center, an adult daycare/health care center operated by the East Carolina University School of Medicine is offering free vision/glaucoma testing Tuesday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Dr. Donald Bode, Ophthalmologist, will be performing this service at the Center, 2000 E. Sixth St. (St. James United Methodist Church).

For additional information call the Creative Living Center at 757-0303.

Toys Donated

The Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Association of Accountants recently donated over 100 toys to Pitt County Memorial Children's Hospital.

According to chapter officials, the Christmas toy drive and give-away will be an annual event.

For information about ECCNAA, contact Paul Setliff, 752-4126, or Carolyn Darden, 752-2121.

Dekker To Speak

The Rev. John Dekker, pastor of Cub Hill Presbyterian Church in Baltimore, will speak at the "In Defense of Truth" rally Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Greenville Bible Church, 2022 Greenville Blvd. The rally is being sponsored by WGHB radio.

REV. JOHN DEKKER

Dekker is director of the "In Defense of Truth" radio broadcast, which he began in 1963 and is now aired on 18 radio stations. The broadcast can be heard on local WGHB radio at 6:15 p.m. Monday through Friday and at 10 p.m. Saturday.

Dekker was born in Holland, came through the Nazi occupation and the second World War and migrated to Canada in 1948. He entered the ministry in 1955. He has pastored churches in Saskatchewan and Alberta, Canada; North Hollywood, Calif., and Baltimore.

Dekker will also be the keynote speaker at a WGHB Pastor's Breakfast Saturday at 9 a.m. at The Three Steers Restaurant, Memorial Drive.

Halley's Lecture

"Halley's Comet, What Have We Learned?" will be the topic for a Feb. 26 program at East Carolina University given by one of the country's leading astronomers and space exploration scientists.

Dr. William E. Brunk, the former chief of NASA's Planetary Science Branch of the Solar System Exploration Division, will speak at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Jenkins Fine Arts Center. A reception for Dr. Brunk will follow the lecture and will be held in the Gray Art Gallery.

The presentation is provided through the Harlow Shapley Visiting Lectureship Program of the American Astronomical Society. It is sponsored locally by Sigma Xi, an honor society for scientists and the ECU Department of Physics.

Prior to the lecture, a business meeting for Sigma Xi members will be held at 7 p.m.

Brunk, currently the program manager for cometary science of the Universities Space Research Association's Lunar and Planetary Institute, has been involved in astronomy and space research for over 30 years. Brunk is a native of Cleveland, Ohio and received his degrees at the Case Institute of Technology.

Meeting Thursday

The Coastal Plain chapter of the Data Processing Management Association will meet Thursday at Riverside Steak Bar. The speaker for the meeting will be the association president, Robert A. Hoadley, CDP.

The organization is comprised of all levels of management personnel who have an interest in information processing.

For more information, contact Danny Mitchell, Mt. Olive Pickle Company, 658-2535.

Assembly Set

Ayden Middle School will have an assembly Wednesday at 2 p.m. in celebration of Black History Month. Capt. Alvin Mitchell, military science instructor at East Carolina University, will be the speaker. Music will be provided by Debra Leathers, Johnnie Wooten, Johnny C and the Revelation Gospel Singers.

In addition to the assembly, students present a moment from black history over the intercom each morning, and the cafeteria sponsored a Soul Food Day in observance of Black History Month.

Warren Appointed

State Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, has been appointed as a member of the Constitutional Amendments Committee for the 1987 session by N.C. House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

The appointment, which is in addition to assignments Warren received earlier, was made Thursday.

Pork Barrel Flap Continues In New Assembly Session

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislators say "pork barrel" bills are ways of bringing state and local governments closer together, but Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan feel differently about the legislative care packages.

In the past four years, these bills have piled up to form a $27.6 million mountain of cash for projects statewide, according to figures from state budget bills.

A little more than a year ago, Jordan launched an effort to reform the pork barrel process, if not kill it.

"I think it should be done away with," Jordan said in the closing days of the 1985 General Assembly. "Not only is it used at times to keep votes in line, but it is used to delay adjournment."

The Democratic leadership uses pork barrel money as a "process to discipline Democratic legislators to vote the way it tells them to vote," Martin says.

The pork barrel bill unveiled in the closing days of the 1985 legislative session was made up of private applications submitted by lawmakers to legislative leaders, according to the Greensboro News & Record. The items were never reviewed by committees nor were hearings held to examine the needs, as is done with nearly all other legislation.

Since 1985, all pork barrel requests must be submitted in bill form. In the Senate, the requests are reviewed by a Senate Appropriations Committee subcommittee to see if they meet constitutional requirements as a public service.

The requests then are reviewed by legislative leaders, who determine how much money is available for the requests and compile the pork barrel bill. The final bill that includes all the items approved for funding is unveiled in the final days of the legislative session.

The bill is then given quick approval by legislative committees and the legislature as it rushes to adjournment.

Pork barrel items were closely examined in one of the confrontations between Martin, a Republican, and the Democratic-controlled General Assembly during the 1985 session, and checks were held up for months. Martin sent out questionnaires asking details about the pork items and how the money was going to be used.

The results of Martin's review fill two four-drawer file cabinets. In 1985, after reviewing 1,412 items, 48 were never funded because no response was received on the questionnaire. Three were rejected for not meeting the "public purpose" constitutional provision.

Police Investigate Weekend Thefts

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
Pitt Extension Agent

As planting time approaches, more and more fields are once again brought back into cultivation. Many of these fields will be "worked" wet. Others will be disked several times prior to planting. Some of these cultivations are unnecessary and some also will cause problems later in the growing season.

One of the problems that may occur with unnecessary disking of farm land is the formation of a hard pan, tillage pan or pan layer. This is dense, compacted layer of soil at a depth of six to eight inches which restricts root growth and therefore affects plant growth.

Very few annual plants have a root system that can effectively penetrate through this pan. On some soils, large yield increases are possible where the plow layer is broken so as to allow roots to grow into the subsoil below this compacted zone. Obviously, a larger root system can obtain more moisture and nutrients in a larger area.

Tillage pans form due to the combined effects of soil properties, machinery traffic, the action of tillage tools, and the weight of the surface soil itself. This problem becomes more severe when certain soil properties are present. It is related to three factors: the influence of sand in the soil, the roughness of the sand particles, and the effects of changing moisture levels during the year.

With the advent of larger tractors and more weight on the tires, soils that have a tendency to form hardpans often do. Heavy equipment is thought to be the most important contributing factor to soil compaction. An important consideration which research points out is that disking is responsible for compacting soils. It has been stated that when a hard pan has been broken by chisel plowing or subsoiling, that disking will recompact 85 percent of the hardpan.

So, an important consideration is to not disturb a subsoiled field with additional disking. It is better to plant the crop rather than move an additional tillage tool across the field.

In a year where profits will likely be low for the farmer, there is a potential savings of production costs by eliminating unnecessary tillage trips. Also, if a hardpan is created by these unnecessary trips then a yield loss can further decrease a potential profit.

Growers who wish to obtain additional information on hardpans should contact the Agricultural Extension Office in their county and ask for a copy of a publication AG-252, Subsurface Compaction and Subsoiling in North Carolina.

Also, there is a meeting planned for Feb. 24 concerning tillage and water management strategies. North Carolina State University soil scientist George Naderman will discuss the effects of subsoiling equipment and tillage.

Robert Evans, NCSU agriculture engineering specialist, will discuss irrigation and water management. Albert Coffey, soil conservationist in Pitt County, will discuss the 1985 Farm Bill with emphasis on conservation programs affecting farm land.

The meeting will be from 9:45 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. in room 220 of the county office building.

Bitter Cold In Northeast; Southeast Gets Sleet, Snow

By The Associated Press
The Northeast continued to shiver today as a cold snap chased the homeless into shelters and killed car batteries, after tornadoes in the South left a woman dead and a rash of wintry weather claimed two lives.

Single digit readings were common this morning as temperatures dove for the second straight night. It dipped to 4 degrees in Boston, 3 degrees in Buffalo, N.Y., and 8 degrees in New York and in Pittsburgh.

The mercury fell to 17 degrees below zero today in Watertown, N.Y., but that was almost balmy compared to the 30 degrees below on Sunday.

No deaths were directly attributed to the cold, but an elderly couple in New York City died when a kerosene heater exploded and started a fire. Investigators suspect a volatile gasoline-kerosene mixture was being used.

It was the busiest Sunday of the year for the Automobile Club of New York, which received 2,825 calls in the city through 11 p.m., according to spokesman Bob Lavner. The holiday weekend kept the tally far below the record of 8,000, he said.

"If it were a normal workday you would have had an even higher total," Lavner said.

The number of homeless given shelter in New York on Sunday would not be known until Tuesday, but a city spokeswoman said it could be close to the record 10,444 set last month.

Shelters were filled to capacity in Philadelphia and the Philadelphia

Gas Works said it had been swamped with 570 complaints of broken heaters, twice the number of calls received on the same date last year, officials said.

While cold gripped the Northeast, a storm dampened the Southeast today and spread snow, sleet and rain from the Ohio Valley to the Atlantic Coast.

The storm was centered over the central Gulf Coast states and was spreading its water mixture across southern sections of the Ohio Valley, the Appalachians and the mid-Atlantic Coast region. Snow was heavy at higher elevations of North Carolina, where a winter storm warning was in effect for up to a foot of snow by tonight.

The storm was responsible for severe weather, including tornadoes and thunderstorms, that hit the central Gulf Coast states Sunday.

In Louisiana, a fast moving band of thunderstorms and tornadoes left one woman dead and at least three other people injured.

A twister churned across a mobile home park near Sulphur, destroying several trailers and killing a 56-year-old woman who apparently left her mobile home and was pinned beneath the structure, according to police and a relative.

Before the storm front passed, there also were tornado reports from a half dozen Louisiana communities. Three people were hurt and property was damaged when a tornado touched down near the Pierre Part community in Assumption Parish.

Oklahomans cleaned up today after a strong spring-like storm destroyed eight houses and a church on Saturday and caused an estimated $1 million damage.

At Nicholson, in southern Mississippi, a tornado destroyed two mobile homes and a brick house Sunday afternoon, and another tornado caused minor damage when it touched down in Lowndes County in the eastern part of the state.

Michigan state police said two people died in car crashes on slippery roads during the weekend.

Flooding of the ice-jammed St. Clair River in Michigan prompted voluntary evacuations of 10 homes Sunday, as the water rose in East China Township, St. Clair County sheriff's Sgt. Dan Lane said.

A pair of Coast Guard ice breakers join efforts today to ease a jam threatening shoreline houses along the strait between lakes Huron and St. Clair.

The cutter Neah Bay steamed into the ice-choked strait between lakes Huron and St. Clair on Sunday and the Mackinaw was due today, Lane said.

The ice breakers would work from sunrise to sunset breaking up the jam, Lane said. In Chicago, city crews have filled sandbags and erected concrete barriers in hopes of controlling Lake Michigan's fury. Wind-whipped waves have damaged property and flooded streets, but high winds Sunday did not cause any major damage along the city's lakefront.

Activist's Family Disputes Report Of Begun's Release

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The family of Jewish activist Josef Begun said authorities told them he still was in prison today despite a high official report that he had been freed.

Georgi Arbatov, head of the U.S.A.-Canada Institute, a Kremlin think tank, said Sunday on CBS's "Face the Nation" from Moscow that he had just learned of Begun's release.

"I made a telephone call just now," Arbatov said. "This case is resolved. He is free now."

But Begun's wife, Inna, and son, Boris, said they were told today that Begun still was in Chistopol Prison, 500 miles east of Moscow.

The Hebrew teacher was sentenced in October 1983 to seven years in jail on a conviction of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda. His wife, son and other Jewish activists demonstrated for his release Monday through Friday last week at a central Moscow shopping mall, and plainclothes agents kicked and punched the activists and Western reporters during the protests Thursday and Friday.

Boris Begun said an Interior Ministry Corrections Department official, Vladimir Bychkov, reported today he spoke to authorities at Chistopol and was told they had no directive to free Begun.

Mrs. Begun said another ministry official, Vladimir A. Khrabkov, told me that my husband is still in Chistopol and the ministry knows nothing about his release.

Khrabkov is an assistant to one of the deputy ministers of the interior. The Interior Ministry has administrative jurisdiction over Soviet prisons and labor camps. Contacted by telephone, Khrabkov told The Associated Press he had no information about Begun.

However, in an interview today with Israel radio, Boris Begun expressed optimism.

"I think we have to wait a bit," he said. "I think Arbatov said the things he said, father should come."

"If he [Begun] phones us we will know what is happening if he doesn't, that means something is wrong," he said.

The timing of Arbatov's announcement appeared linked to a weekend forum on peace and disarmament attended by about 1,500 Soviet and foreign politicians, scientists, writers, artists and film stars.

The Kremlin's treatment of dissidents and people seeking to emigrate has been a stumbling block to improving relations with Western countries that accuse the Soviet Union of violating the 1975 Helsinki accords on human rights.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Genady Gerasimov announced last week that 140 dissidents were being released from prison early and the cases of 140 others were being reviewed. However, he said Begun was not among them because he declined to submit an application for a pardon.

He later said Begun likely would be released if he applied.

The official Tass news agency, in a commentary Friday on the demonstrations for Begun's release, said the matter was considered "closed," implying that he was to be freed.

Mrs. Begun said Sunday she had received a letter earlier in the day from her husband postmarked Jan. 19.

Demjanjuk Confident As Torture Trial Begins

By ALLYN FISHER
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Former Cleveland autoworker John Demjanjuk went on trial today on charges that he tortured and gassed to death 529,000 Jews in a World War II concentration camp.

Demjanjuk, who says he is innocent, entered the courtroom smiling and waving minutes before the three-judge panel took the bench. He embraced his American attorney Mark O'Connor and kissed his son John Jr., 21, several times.

In his opening statement, O'Connor challenged the Israeli court's jurisdiction to try his client, saying the crimes of which Demjanjuk was accused were committed in Europe before Israel came into being 33 years ago.

Similar defense arguments regarding court jurisdiction were made in the 1961 trial of Adolf Eichmann, a top Nazi official, but were rejected by the court. Eichmann, abducted from Argentina and put on trial in Israel, was convicted and hanged for his role in masterminding the extermination of 6 million Jews.

O'Connor also argued that Demjanjuk was extradited from the United States in February 1986 on an order that specified he would be tried for murder, not war crimes. Demjanjuk was stripped of his U.S. citizenship before being extradited.

He is being prosecuted under the 1952 Nazi and Nazi Collaborators Act that allows Nazi war criminals to be tried in Israel even though the crimes took place outside of Israel. If convicted, he could be sentenced to death.

A 26-page indictment charges Demjanjuk, now 66, was the notorious guard "Ivan the Terrible" who brutalized victims before turning them on the gas chamber engines at the Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland.

He is charged with "crimes against the Jewish people, crimes against humanity, war crimes and crimes against persecuted persons."

Demjanjuk pleaded not guilty when his trial began briefly Nov. 26 and contending he was a victim of mistaken identity. The trial was recessed the same day to give the defense time to prepare its case.

Today's proceedings, broadcast live on Israel's major radio stations, were translated simultaneously through earphones from Hebrew into English for the benefit of Demjanjuk and his lawyer.

* The trial was conducted under tight security to prevent possible attacks on Demjanjuk by survivors of the Holocaust or their families.

Six policemen, among them the commander of Jerusalem police, stood or sat near the defendant on a wooden stage. The judges and prosecutors also sat on the stage, facing the crowd of some 100 people.

Armed police guarded the road leading to the converted movie theater used as a courtroom and those entering the building were checked by metal detectors.

Demjanjuk, who was born in the Ukraine and fought in the Soviet army in World War II, says he was a Nazi prisoner of war during 1942-43, not an SS guard.

"He's confident and talks of faith, which is what we all do," his son, John, said Sunday. "We're looking forward to the day when my father will return to the U.S. and become a citizen again."

Demjanjuk entered the United States in 1952, became a citizen and settled in the middle class Cleveland suburb of Seven Hills. He was stripped of his U.S. citizenship in 1981 for lying to American immigration authorities about his whereabouts during World War II.

Demjanjuk Jr., a student at Cleveland State University, met with his father for 10 minutes Sunday in his solitary confinement prison cell. It was the first time he had seen his father since his extradition.

"The man has incredibly high spirits," O'Connor said. "He is anxious to get on the stand and tell the Israeli people where he was during the war."

O'Connor said Demjanjuk was captured by the Germans while serving with the Soviet army and interned at the Cheim prisoner of war camp near Treblinka.

The trial is being filmed by video cameras to teach Israeli school children about the horrors of the Holocaust. About $200,000 was spent to convert a movie theater into a courtroom big enough to hold hundreds of journalists and spectators.

The Jewish state, which welcomed thousands of survivors of the Holocaust, has vowed to bring Nazi war criminals to trial. But the lapse of more than 40 years since World War II ended and Israelis' pre-occupation with the Arab-Israeli conflict appear to have dampened public ardor about the trial.

A key and controversial piece of prosecution evidence is an identity card supplied by the Soviet Union which shows Demjanjuk was trained by Nazi SS guards at Trawniki, Poland, as a concentration camp guard.

The document does not prove Demjanjuk served at Treblinka but shows he was trained to serve in one of three camps including Treblinka, according to court sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Israel received the original card through American oil magnate Armand Hammer, who has close ties with the Kremlin.

O'Connor has challenged the authenticity of the document. He said he won a temporary injunction from the Jerusalem District Court Sunday barring mention of the card in court pending forensic tests.

The order gives O'Connor until March 15 to perform the tests, he said.

IS IT REALLY SINUS TROUBLE?

Problems you've never experienced before could be the result of pain in your mouth. You may wonder if it's just a sinus problem. This is one of the symptoms of temporomandibular joint syndrome (TMJ), a condition afflicting an estimated 60 million Americans. You should have the condition checked by your dentist to see if the problem is caused by TMJ.

TMJ is not a new disease, but new methods of treatment have recently been developed to correct the condition and relieve the pain and discomfort. TMJ can have many causes, among them improperly aligned teeth or malocclusion. It can also be caused by bruxism, the habit of grinding or clenching the teeth. This can cause them to become misaligned and create other dental problems in addition to TMJ.

The pain and aching associated with TMJ will not go away by itself. Call my office for an examination to see if you have TMJ syndrome and how the condition should be treated.

Bonds Needed

A turnout of about 100 residents in the eastern Pitt County municipality of Grimesland Tuesday night indicated an intense interest in the town's future.

The citizens were attending a discussion on the $700,000 bond issue for construction of improved water and sewer facilities. Plans for the project call for total construction costing $2.15 million. State and federal grants are expected to cover the remaining portion of the cost.

Mayor Ann Hudson said the discussion period was added to the town board's regular meeting Tuesday night to give citizens further opportunity to ask questions and express their views.

A number of people were at the meeting to provide information on the project. They included Roy Spainhour of the N.C. Plan and Design Office in Raleigh; Connie Price and Bob Paciocco, both of the Mid-East Commission; Grimesland town attorney Wayland Sermons; Beth Ward, principal of G.R. Whitfield School; Tim Glendon, manager and part owner of Grimesland's principal industry, Too Tough Togs, and W.M. Pate of the Pitt County Health Department.

Grimesland is in a good position to issue the bonds which will provide for the improvements because it currently has no bonded indebtedness. And how will this bond election fare? Mayor Hudson said that at present it is a matter of "some for, some against."

"We know that we have a lot of work to do before the March referendum."

It's never easy to vote in favor of issuing bonds, but water and sewer bonds can be of immeasurable benefit to the town of Grimesland. The project will have immediate benefits for the people who live there with the obvious one being better water and sewer service. It is also Grimesland's opportunity to share in the growth that is benefitting our entire county. It is, after all, but a short distance from a home in Grimesland to the industrial and medical areas.

The citizens of Grimesland can only do good for themselves and their community by supporting improved water and sewer facilities.

Exotic Crops

At a time when traditional farm produce appears in abundant supply and American agriculture suffering economically it is heartening to read of a vegetable crop specialist testing different types of gourmet vegetables to see if they can be grown on a small scale by commercial growers and home gardeners.

Among the crops are fancy lettuces, radicchio, arugula, cress, mache, green leaf chicory, shallot, snow pea and horseradish. The gardening expert at Cornell University (N.Y.) cites an "explosive" demand for Oriental vegetables and other types of exotic produce.

His list of Oriental vegetables includes cabbage, mizuna, radishes, fuzzy squash, bitter melon, celtuce, edible chrysanthemum, edible burdock, Chinese chives, Chinese artichokes, coriander and Chinese okra.

Most of us have no familiarity whatsoever with the foregoing. (It makes us realize what we must be missing.) Nevertheless, if there is a demand for the items, gardeners and farmers have a market waiting for them.

Climate and special know-how are probable factors in successful growth; still those factors may not apply to all. We hope progress reports on the project will be forthcoming.

Today's Thought

The torch is being passed at East Carolina University, this time from Chancellor John Howell to Chancellor-elect Richard Eakin. The process will require about six weeks with Eakin scheduled to take office around March 1 — which proves torch passing doesn't occur with the blink of an eye on academic levels.

Is The Reagan Administration Over?

WASHINGTON — To my anxious European friend:

You ask whether the Reagan administration is finished. You ask it, furthermore and thank you, in some baffle and dismay but in a respectful tone, without assuming that the pursuit of integrity in government — which is the way most of us here see the inquiry into the Iran-contra affair — is an act of treason to the Atlantic alliance.

Certainly, the Teflon myth of presidential immunity is shredded. Reagan's energy level, after as before his operation, seems up and down. People don't offer him the same deference. If he is counting on the public to get bored by the scandal and to call off the hounds, he must calculate that the inquiry into it is now institutionalized in both houses of Congress and in the judiciary, and is not merely a thing of partisan or media enterprise.

Then, too, Reagan's foreign policy has had a certain structure, and it hurts him now. The structure was to build up positions of strength in arms and in dispute situations in the earlier years and then in the later years to reap the diplomatic gains.

Reagan is the weight lifter who built up for six years and now, with the big match upon him, pulls a muscle.

The number of big issues on his personal agenda is down to two. That's a sorry performance for a great power, but don't knock it: some of Reagan's critics would prefer to see him so enfeebled he couldn't do anything at all. Aides will run the international economy and trade, somehow. You Europeans will get along, chewing your nails. In the Middle East we will respond to alarms — not much more. Southern Africa is for slogging. In Afghanistan we'll support the guerrillas. That leaves arms control and Nicaragua.

On arms control, even before his current time of troubles Reagan had not decided that the kind of agreement perhaps within reach, involving certain restraints on Star Wars, was worth reaching for. That meant, of course, no agreement.

Caspar Weinberger has been pushing hard to force a Star Wars choice that no subsequent president or Congress could reverse, no matter what the impact on arms-control prospects. George Shultz seems to understand that would probably close the door on an agreement, and he wants to keep the door open. The president has seemed to be leaning his way, by agreeing to let you nervous Europeans plus our nervous congressmen get into this whole discussion.

Still, Weinberger remains a strong force, and Shultz's standoffishness on Iran leaves him vulnerable to the Reaganauts' knives on the issue that counts most with them, loyalty to the president's narrower political interests.

My intemperate guess is that Reagan will finally go with Shultz. Certainly the deal looks to be there for the picking on the Soviet side, since in Moscow as in Washington arms control is the single issue on which a politician with plenty else on his plate can make a dramatic move and act like a leader.

I am not so sanguine about Nicaragua. You Europeans, accustomed to living next door to communist states, may not have grasped the full intensity of Reagan's feeling on this issue. When one tries to guess what may be in Reagan's head — and that is what all foreign-policy analysis in Washington comes down to these days — the suspicion grows that in order to do the right thing in arms control he may end up doing the wrong thing in Central America. To make a difficult compromise for the sake of an arms-control agreement with Moscow, he may feel under pressure to stick to his familiar hard-line position in Nicaragua.

Reagan wants democracy for Nicaragua. It's the place where it means the most to him to apply the "Reagan Doctrine" of supporting resistance movements to roll back Moscow's international gains of the 1970s. The calculus of strengths and weaknesses that leads many other observers to think that the contras are a dubious investment makes no visible impression on the president.

In brief, the Reagan administration is not "finished," not limping to the exit. Its largest foreign-policy decisions remain to be made. The beginning of Ronald Reagan's time may have made you uneasy. The endgame could be strictly white knuckles.

Itzhak Shamir Rides High

'Shamir's first triumph was removal of the Iranian arms scandal from discussions with Reagan. "It won't consume more than 25 seconds," one highly-placed official told us.'

WASHINGTON — A private promise from President Reagan to Prime Minister Itzhak Shamir rules out Israel's role in the Iran-contra scandal as a topic during his visit here starting tomorrow (Tuesday), ending any risk that Israel will be held accountable for starting the Iranian arms crisis.

That pledge, say Israeli officials close to Shamir, resulted from private expressions of concern from Israel to the White House. It takes Shamir off the defensive for his first visit here since getting back the premiership last year. With that burden off his shoulders, he can concentrate on Arab-bashing at the Oval Office.

That probably dooms the president to another failure in his ambitious but unannounced effort to restore U.S. credibility with friendly Arab countries — a major foreign policy goal in the wake of the Iranian arms fiasco. It is Shamir, not the weakened president, who will likely be riding high this week.

If Reagan instead used his chat with Shamir to walk down the trail of evidence by investigators laying out Israel's encouragement of the fateful dealing with Tehran, the Israeli would be forced to explain, putting him on the defensive. Instead, he will take the offensive to reach for new victories over the Arabs on the Washington battlefield.

Shamir's first triumph was removal of the Iranian arms scandal from discussions with Reagan. "It won't consume more than 25 seconds," one highly-placed official told us. The prime minister then will turn quickly to his campaign against the Arab arms package that the Reagan administration is preparing for Congress. He might well help change the rules of the game to make such sales even harder in the future.

The president, backed by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State George Shultz, wants to give Jordan's King Hussein the late model Copperhead anti-tank missile in a $5 million artillery package, to be followed later with mobile Hawk anti-aircraft missiles.

Shamir will argue that Israeli tanks — with thick sideskins but weak roofs — are especially vulnerable to the laser-aimed Copperhead, which arches high and drops onto the target. When the pro-Israeli bloc in Congress is mobilized, Pentagon operatives doubt Hussein ever will see a Copperhead no matter how aggressive is the full-court Reagan press.

Similarly, Capitol Hill insiders believe strong Israeli opposition will block Jordan from getting mobile anti-aircraft Hawk missiles, the weapon the U.S. and Israel shipped to Iran for use against Iraq. Also marked for defeat would be electronic countermeasures the president wants to sell Saudi Arabia for its F-15s; while designed for use against Iranian attack, they are unacceptable to Israel.

The only Arab arms likely to be accepted by the pro-Israel congressional bloc are helicopters and the untested Bradley "fighting vehicle" for the Saudis, an aircraft package for Bahrain and what the Pentagon calls "harmless refills" for assorted Arab states.

Reagan has been told by his own officials that if he "prepares the ground" on Capitol Hill and exploits his case that anti-Americanism has now reached intolerable levels in the Arab world, he will have a fighting chance for his entire arms package. But Shamir's campaign, in the Oval Office followed by special meetings with the Senate Foreign Relations and the House Foreign Affairs Committees, is much better planned.

He will show the president evidence that several days ago, two Jordanian trucks laden with high explosives attempted to cross the Jordan River headed for the Israeli-occupied West Bank. Shamir's claim: since no such penetration would be possible without connivance of Jordanian officials, Hussein is prepared to accept a new round of violence.

Shamir will tie that into the king's speech, unpublished here, at the recent Islamic Summit in Kuwait, which the prime minister is prepared to quote to Reagan as follows: "The liberation of Jerusalem and of the occupied territories requires certain preparations by the Arabs." Ignoring the bloody rhetoric that is standard anti-Israeli fare at any Islamic summit, Shamir will argue that now is no time to give Hussein new weapons.

In three unpublished letters to the president and his top advisers since the Iran arms scandal broke, King Hussein has appealed for U.S. support to disprove the charge spread through Islam that the real capital of the U.S. is Jerusalem. The answer — ignoring that scandal during Shamir's visit to the Oval Office — again suggests that what an Israeli prime minister wants, he is likely to get.

Strength For Today

The English man of letters John Ruskin once inadvertently dropped some ink on a fine piece of linen cloth. Apparently the cloth was ruined, but Ruskin restored it by making the ink blot the center of an attractive and artistic design.

Here is an example of making the best out of a bad situation. At the time it happened, the crucifixion of Jesus seemed to be an unmitigated calamity. Yet this blot on the world's life was transformed into something of the most momentous consequences.

Every one of us has some blot on his happiness, yet very often the blots have become the center of a design which in the end brought contentment, if not happiness. The resolute souls are those who will not accept blots as blots, but make unhappy circumstances the basis of a new start in life.

To the editor:

As a citizen of Pitt County, I appreciate the Daily Reflector's editorial, "Error Committed," printed Feb. 6. The paper's display of moral courage to print such an editorial, one has to admire. Glad we have a free press in this country.

Thomas Jefferson, one who considered himself a public-spirited citizen, also displayed moral courage in his day. Jefferson, a slaveowner, wanted to end slavery in the State of Virginia. He wrote, "Nothing is more certainly written in the book of fate than that these people are to be free." A very unpopular view by other citizens at the time.

President Thomas Jefferson, a Democrat, signed into law a federal act prohibiting the importation of African slaves to America in 1807.

Conflicting Signals From Kremlin In Dramatic Week

MOSCOW (AP) — After months of cultivating a more open image, the Kremlin graphically demonstrated the limits of Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms in a week that began with freedom for 140 dissidents and ended with a violent crackdown on protest.

The conflicting signals raised questions about how far Gorbachev is willing to go in his avowed effort to bring a measure of "democratization" to Soviet society and whether he would allow real public debate on important issues.

Speculation also arose about whether the decision to break up three days of protests was made at high levels, or was an independent reaction by the KGB. The secret police has a long history of iron-fisted suppression of public dissent.

By reacting harshly to protests on Moscow's Arbat shopping street, the authorities may have aimed at delivering the message that while the Kremlin might redress some Western complaints about its human rights policy, reform and tolerance of public debate have strict limits here.

This seemingly contradictory approach is common. At times when emigration restrictions have been eased, for example, there usually has been an accompanying wave of press stories against emigres.

Last year, the Kremlin freed imprisoned dissidents Natan Sharansky and Yuri Orlov, and let Andrei Sakharov return to Moscow.

Sharansky changed his name from Anatoly B. Shcharansky when he went to Israel.

Two weeks ago, state-run television ran a two-part series in which it accused all three men of being CIA agents.

A week of perplexing events began on Saturday, Feb. 7, when Sakharov reported the release of 42 imprisoned dissidents.

Although Moscow's dissident community tempered its reaction with reminders that hundreds were still imprisoned, the release was taken as a sign that the Kremlin was serious about its promises to reconsider some dissident cases.

On Monday, seven Soviet Jews gathered on the Arbat for the first of five demonstrations for emigration and on behalf of Josef Begun, a Jewish activist who was not included in the mass release.

The protesters stood on the shopping mall for 90 minutes, attracting a crowd that at times numbered about 200.

Uniformed militia officers stood by as demonstrators and passers-by engaged in a discussion that was at times friendly and at times acrimonious.

On Tuesday, the group of demonstrators grew, and so did the number of plainclothesmen there.

Legislators Begin Review Of Martin's Budget

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Legislators say their review of Gov. Jim Martin's proposed budget may take longer than normal this year because the budget was prepared for the first time in recent history without the oversight of key lawmakers. "It's going to take considerably more work," said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, the appropri-tions chairman who oversees the "expansion budget" — the portion dealing with new and expanded programs. Watkins' Senate counterpart, Aaron Plyler, D-Union, agreed that more time would be needed. He added, however, that he didn't expect the lengthier budget deliberations to prolong the 1987 session. "We'll just work longer hours," Plyler said.

The Joint Appropriations Committee, the largest and most powerful of the Legislature's many panels, will begin work Tuesday and may convene hearings on Gov. Jim Martin's 1987-89 spending program later this week, its co-chairmen say.

Watkins is a member of the Advisory Budget Commission, a 15-member panel consisting primarily of legislators that in past years has had an equal role with the governor and his staff in drafting the proposed budget.

In 1982, the Supreme Court ruled that forcing the governor to consult with the ABC violated the state Constitution's requirement that the executive and judicial branches have distinct functions.

Despite the ruling, former Gov. Jim Hunt did not change his dealings with the ABC in drafting his subsequent budgets.

But Martin downgraded the ABC's importance in putting together the 1987-89 budget. He met regularly with the panel and incorporated some of its suggestions in his package, but made most of the key decisions on his own — such as the amounts he would request for state employee and teacher pay raises, the Basic Education Program and expansion of the Career Ladder Plan for teachers.

For that reason, the legislative leadership knows less about the proposed budget than usual at this stage, Watkins said.

Watkins complained that the governor's budget uses a somewhat different format than previous budgets and is confusing because some programs are "collapsed" — merged — for funding purposes.

"We might even have to take out last year's budget and look at it to keep the line items straight," he said.

He also said Martin's budget was based on some assumptions that might not materialize, such as legislative enactment of tax-code adjustments expected to boost state revenues by some $25 million.

"We've got a lot of talking to do, because if we don't get the extra revenue he wants, we've got a problem since we can't deficit spend," Watkins said.

Most of the Appropriations Committee's time is spent on the "base budget" — money for continuing programs. The co-chairmen who run the committee when the base budget is under consideration are Rep. Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett, and Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland.

Both said they would urge the panel to save all the money they could, but that they had set no specific target for cuts.

Educators Fear Increase In School Dropout Rate

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Every school day in North and South Carolina, 194 children leave public schools at the end of the day, never to return.

South Carolina is tied with Florida with the fifth highest dropout rate in the nation and North Carolina has the 10th highest rate, officials say. One of four students in this country who began the ninth grade in August will not graduate, and although the national dropout rate has remained fairly constant for the last decade, some educators are bracing for a surge in the rate in the late 1980s.

North Carolina's dropout rate has remained steady at about 6.9 percent or about 27,000 students for the last five years. The N.C. General Assembly appropriated $15 million in 1985 and $20 million this year for a statewide Dropout Prevention Program.

The plan is part of the state's Basic Education Program and consists of five components: in-school suspension, job placement centers, extended school day programs, a transition program for handicapped students and a counseling program for students classified as being "at risk" or dropout prone.

"We recognize the problem and we've been involved for the last five years in national programs such as JTPA (Job Training Partnership Act) and our own program which started two years ago," Dennis Davis, director of Support Programs Division of Dropout Prevention at the N.C. Department of Public Instruction, told The Charlotte Observer.

"We feel that the best policy in dealing with dropouts is early identification of the at-risk student so that we can concentrate our attention on them before it's too late."

A factor expected to add to the dropout problem is the recent wave of educational revisions that have swept the nation's classrooms. The revisions have tightened standards and are designed to improve the quality of education, officials say.

Another problem is that the dropout of 1987 is facing a vastly changed economic landscape from that of 20 years ago. Then, a 16-year-old dropout could buy a car for $300 and find work as a loom fixer in a local textile mill or, in a pinch, join the Army. Those low-skill positions not requiring high school diplomas have dried up, leaving today's dropout in a much tighter job crunch.

Black Schools Working To Enroll Black Students

GREENSBORO (AP) — Black schools were once the only avenues for blacks who wanted a college education, but integration that has opened the doors of traditionally white schools has also brought tough times to the traditionally black schools.

"The predominantly white schools have creamed off the top students, not only through academics, but in all other disciplines, including athletics, drama and music," said Gerson Stroud, co-chairman of the Friends of Johnson C. Smith, a fund-raising group. "The black colleges moving toward excellence will survive."

Stroud decided in the 1960s he wanted to be a school principal, but opportunities for blacks were so limited he had to go to New York University to get certified.

"Integration was still only a dream," he said. But black schools have paid a price for integration, educators say, because their blackness has been jeopardized.

"For more than a century, the black college has filled a gap in society," Dr. William Henderson, who teaches Afro-American history at South Carolina State College, told the Greensboro News & Record. "We take raw material, many from the backwoods of these small towns, and produce a finished product that can compete with the products of any comparable institution."

"Without the black schools, many of these students won't have a chance for advanced education," Henderson added.

"Black colleges were the means by which blacks pulled themselves up by their own bootstraps," said Susan Hill, a statistician for the Center for Education Statistics, who has studied black schools. "They trained the lawyers and the ministers who drew the people together to push for change."

During much of the early struggles of blacks in this country, Warmoth Gibbs was president of N.C. A&T College, a Greensboro land-grant school that opened in 1891.

Gibbs joined N.C. A&T in 1926 from Harvard, where he was working on a doctorate in history. For years, he was N.C. A&T's dean of general studies and, from 1955 to 1960, its president.

In February 1960, four N.C. A&T students walked into a Greensboro Woolworth store to buy school supplies. Hungry, they sat at the whites-only lunch counter, ordering coffee and doughnuts. They were told to leave but didn't and were arrested for trespassing.

History would record it as the civil rights movement's first sit-in.

"It gained attention and, in a few days, students in all the black colleges — and from some of the white campuses — all over North Carolina and the South were sitting in," said Gibbs, now 94. "Before the sit-in, the black community hadn't paid much attention to the movement. After it, everybody got behind the movement."

Eventually, students and black activists pushed to integrate the state-supported, predominantly white colleges and universities.

Earlier, they had worked for black professional schools. "If a black wanted to be a doctor or lawyer, he had to go out of state," Gibbs said. "The courts decided that going out of state would not be equal, would not be sufficient."

"Either the state medical and law schools admit blacks or build schools for blacks," he said.

In 1939, a law school for blacks was opened at N.C. Central University in Durham. In the same era, S.C. State's law school was graduating such notable black lawyers as federal Judge Matthew Perry and S.C. Supreme Court Justice Ernest Finney.

In time, the North Carolina and South Carolina legislatures relented to federal pressure and agreed to equalize and standardize the states' black and white campuses.

IN THE STATE

Negligence Ruling

GASTONIA (AP) — The appeal of a Gaston County civil case could set a precedent in allowing employees to sue their employers in cases of intentional acts of negligence, an attorney representing the victim of an industrial accident says.

Under current interpretations of North Carolina law, intentional negligence is dealt with in the same way that industrial accidents are compensated, through the Worker's Compensation Act.

On Dec. 12, a jury awarded Raymond B. Abernathy $800,000 in damages in a trial on the negligence of two co-workers at Consolidated Freightways in using a forklift with inoperable brakes.

Abernathy originally filed suit against two co-workers and the company, but Superior Court Judge James U. Downs of Franklin dismissed the suit against the company.

The jury decided dock foreman Richard P. Whitaker Jr. was negligent in ordering employee Ray Mosley to use the faulty forklift. Mosley lost control of the vehicle on Nov. 8, 1984, and the vehicle pinned Abernathy's leg against a metal post. Abernathy underwent extensive surgery, but will not regain full use of the leg.

Environmental Woes

RALEIGH (AP) — Fragmentation of responsibilities has caused the state to overlook some complex problems and has left the public wondering where to turn when environmental emergencies or problems occur, observers say.

"There's no one state official whose main or clear responsibility is protecting the environment," said legislative lobbyist William Holman. "Accountability is fragmented."

Even many state officials are concerned.

Last summer, the General Assembly set up a committee to study whether the state should combine all its environmental programs under one roof, in effect creating a "super-agency" similar to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The Hazardous Waste Regulation Study Committee has held a series of meetings to gather information and opinions from state administrators, environmental groups, private citizens and industries. But the panel has a long way to go before drawing any conclusions, state Rep. Joe Hackney, a Democrat from Orange County and co-chairman of the committee, told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Another state panel, however, has already drawn some conclusions — after spending two years studying state environmental programs.

The Governor's Waste Management Board, a panel charged with finding ways to safely handle and dispose of hazardous and radioactive wastes, recently completed an 80-page report looking at ways to improve coordination and communication among state agencies.

The report concluded that government officials generally understood their respective responsibilities and usually cooperated when their duties overlapped.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU SMELL GAS.

Call Greenville Utilities immediately. Anytime day or night. We'll get a serviceman to your home or location to correct the problem. While you're waiting for him to get there, open a window, make sure you use no electrical switches. Extinguish any open flames and evacuate the area. If you don't know what natural gas smells like, stop by our office and pick up a scratch and sniff leaflet. Because even though natural gas contains no poisonous ingredients, a leak can become hazardous if combustible gas pockets are allowed to form, which makes it important for you to know what natural gas smells like.

*Note: If the leak is located in the customers piping or appliances, a service charge will be billed on the following monthly utility bill.

Principles, Not Politics Goal Of Alliance Head

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Rev. Henry Crouch did not ask his congregation's permission to become the president of a national alliance of moderate Southern Baptists, but Sunday morning he did not appear to need it as visitors and church members filed out of the sanctuary.

"Several families of visitors — Methodists, Presbyterians and Episcopalians — came up to say they appreciated my stand," the 58-year-old pastor said. "They were glad somebody had the backbone to stand up."

"With 2,200 people, you're not going to get unanimous agreement on anything," said Earl Pope, longtime deacon at Providence Baptist Church. "But the vast majority are in support of Henry, and I think they understand his motives."

"I don't believe it's political," Pope said. "I believe he has a genuine concern about beliefs and about all people — not just people of like mind."

Crouch, president of the new Southern Baptist Alliance announced Thursday, says he is standing up for millions of believers who are tired of the bitter battle between fundamentalists and moderates in the 14.5 million-member Southern Baptist Convention.

He says the alliance will give voice to those who feel shut out by the fundamentalists' eight-year drive to control SBC agencies and schools.

"With elected Baptist leadership being involved in far-right political activities, demanding literal translations of scripture, denouncing women in ministry, claiming the pope to be the Antichrist and declaring that God does not hear the prayers of Jews, we desperately need another voice — with a different viewpoint — from Baptists," Crouch told his congregation.

"We are not interested in the expending of energy which distracts from the mission of the church or leads to the formation of political parties within the convention. We now appeal to those convictions and historical principles that fashioned us into a great people."

The alliance, which will have two directors in each of 12 states, was organized to preserve the individual's freedom to interpret scripture, and the authority of the local church to call men or women as leaders, Crouch said. It will work for open inquiry in Southern Baptist seminaries and speak out on social and economic issues.

Crouch's roots in Southern Baptist life run deep.

His father, Dr. Perry Crouch, is a pastor and former executive secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention. The younger Crouch attended Mars Hill College and Wake Forest University, got two master's degrees at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary and a doctorate at Wake Forest. He and his wife, Jan, have five children.

In his 18 years at Providence, the congregation has grown from 1,100 members to 2,200; the annual budget from $150,000 to $1.4 million. The church has spun off three mission churches and built two additions. A third addition is under construction.

Crouch has been part of the national moderate leadership that has tried unsuccessfully to derail fundamentalist candidates for the SBC presidency. With the alliance, he is taking another tack.

He said he would resign today from the Friends of Mission, a moderate N.C. group that raised money, published newsletters and hired a consultant to help elect moderate candidates at the state level. He wants to distance himself from that kind of political activity.

"I'm going to work for our principles now," Crouch said. "That's where our hope lies."

So far, 16 people have paid $100 each to become founding members of the alliance. The 452-member Oakhurst Baptist Church in Decatur, Ga., voted Sunday to become the first member church, paying an annual fee of $1 per resident member.

"That's not too bad for a group that didn't come into being until 10:30 a.m. Thursday," Crouch said. "People wonder how we'll do. We'll do fine. Our people are tired of paying for politics, but they will support what they believe."

Duke's Hideaway Bar Is Unusual

GREENSBORO (AP) — Like many college-town bars, the Hideaway attracts a lot of students, but it has an edge or two that other college bars don't.

For one, its location is ideal — right in the middle of the Duke University campus. And students are more than just customers at the Hideaway — they are also the owners.

"I don't know if there's another (student-owned bar) in the country," says Robert "Buck" Taylor, 46, a Duke professor who serves as faculty advisor for the owners, a group of MBA students who now run the bar.

The graduate students got into the bar business at Duke in 1979, the year the university lost $35,000 on a similar enterprise. When the university closed the bar, the students offered to run it.

"After the students took it over, the bar made as much as the university lost," says Stuart Smith, 27, of Durham, a former manager of the Hideaway who still works there on an interim basis.

At first, the students ran the bar in partnership with the university. But in 1982, after the university tried to close it again, the students bought the place.

Only one other college in North Carolina serves beer on campus. At Davidson College, students 21 and older can buy beer in the 900 Club, but that facility is run by the college.

The owners say more students drink at the Hideaway rather than at off-campus bars. If they drink at the Hideaway, they can walk home. They don't have to worry about driving drunk or having an accident, they say.

When a student leaves school, he sells his interest back to the bar. That interest is then sold to another student. Currently, a 10 percent share goes for about $3,500.

Paul Bauer, 27, the current manager, figures he's made about $15,000 in 2½ years of part-time work.

"They earn a little money," Taylor told the Greensboro News & Record, "but they learn a hell of a lot about running a business."

"You feel comfortable here," says 21-year-old Pat Keyes from Milwaukee. "You just grab a beer and hang out."

True to its name, the Hideaway is tucked into the rear of the Union Building, next to a loading dock. There's not even a sign over the door.

Painted about two months ago, the walls already flourish with handwriting.

"We don't encourage the graffiti," says Stuart Smith, "but we don't want to curtail people's expression."

Some students even root for North Carolina — but only for Tar Heel freshman basketball star J.R. Reid.

"We won't cheer anybody else from Carolina," said Mike Pruitt, a 36-year-old graduate student from Florida, "but if Reid wants to transfer to Duke, we'll take him."

Duke students drink a lot of beer at the Hideaway. "On some weekend nights we've done $2,500 worth of business," Smith says.

In fact, business is better now than last September, when North Carolina

Tenn. 'Marry-Thon'

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — The Rev. Ed Taylor says he's ready to throw another Valentine's Day "Marry-thon" next year after non-stop services at his chapel drew 74 couples during the holiday for sweethearts.

"We're sort of still like zombies," Taylor said Sunday. "We're heading to the barn as the saying goes."

He and two other preachers performed wedding ceremonies at 30-minute intervals at two chapels during the Saturday holiday.

Mikey West and Helen Lea Massey of Carthage were the first to be married at Little Mountain Church and Wedding Chapel in this Smoky Mountains resort town. When they emerged from the chapel, the couple was cheered by about 30 Auburn University students who heard about the "Marry-thon."

raised its legal drinking age to 21.

"That's the reason Duke put beer on campus," Taylor says. "Students are going to drink and what we ought to do is provide as constructive an environment for them to drink in as possible. And we do a good job."

The Hideaway's lease with the university expires in 1989 — students pay $1,100 a month rent — and Taylor figures it won't be renewed.

The problem is that Duke is running out of space. And a bar — even one as successful as the Hideaway — might not be high on the university's priority list.

Double Ring Vows Spoken

PLYMOUTH — Earlie Mae Washington and Matthew Morris Barnes, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Pentecostal Temple Church of God in Christ. The double ring ceremony was performed by Dr. Leroy Woolard.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Powell of Rocky Mount are parents of the bride. Dottie B. Lanier of Belhaven is the mother of the bridegroom.

Gregory Horton of Plymouth was organist for the ceremony and Juanita Garrett, Angie Washinton and Belinda Moore were soloists.

The maid of honor was Antonia Williams of Raleigh and Angelyn McCowan of Durham was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Annette Whidbee and Carolyn Watford, both of Greenville. Phyllis Raynor of New Bern, Pamela Henry of Greensboro, and Ruthenia Garrett of Durham.

Renita McNeil of Raleigh and Alycia Perry of Powellsville were honorary bridesmaids.

Sharletta Gibbs of Plymouth and Jeretha Holland of Rocky Mount were junior bridesmaids, and Shanta Washington of Rocky Mount was flower girl.

The best man was Clayton Blount of Plymouth. Honorary best man was James Horton Jr. of Greenville.

Ushers were Ronzell Bell of Goldsboro, Leslie Horton and Morris Barrow, son of the bridegroom, both of Plymouth; William Washington of Rocky Mount, cousin of the bride, and Joe Garrett Jr., of Chapel Hill. Jermaine Moore was ring bearer.

Escorted by her brother, Kenneth R. Washington, the bride wore a white chiffon and schiffli embroidered chapel length gown with a fitted bodice and Renaissance sleeves. The neckline was outlined in beaded embroidered scallops with sequins and pearls. Her headpiece was a pointed braided pearl beaded halo with a floral spray down the side. The fingertip veil was accented with pearls. She carried a silk bouquet of red and white roses.

The honor attendants wore tea length dresses of white taffeta accented with red sashes. The dresses had sweetheart necklines with puffed sleeves. Each carried a silk arrangement of red carnations.

The bridesmaids wore red taffeta dresses identical to those of the honor attendants. They carried silk flower arrangements of red roses. The junior bridesmaids wore red taffeta dresses with opened square necklines. They also carried silk red roses.

The flower girl wore white taffeta with a satin sash. The neckline was an open square. She carried a square basket covered with cotton eyelet lace and red bows with white carnation petals.

The reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Evelyn White, directress, and Harrizene Keyes, both of Plymouth. Mrs. Keyes also served as guest receptionist. The cake was cut by Renetta Sawring of Plymouth. Reception hostesses were Wanda Pittman, Valerie Whidder and Yvonne Whidbee.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bride and bridegroom Friday and the bride also was honored with bridal showers.

The bride, an East Carolina University graduate, is employed as a nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom is employed with Farm Fresh Inc. of Greenville. The couple will live in Greenville.

Centers Help Teen Mothers

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bright basement room at Cardozo High School was quiet for the first time in hours — no "Hokey Pokey" or baby wails, just the murmur of hushed adult voices as five well-fed infants eased into their early afternoon naps.

Debbie, 18, gazed into a crib at her son, 8-month-old Gregory, whose picture she wears in a tiny pendant around her neck. In a few minutes her lunch break would end and she would have to return to class.

"I was pleased to go back to school and make my future better, for him," said the teen-ager, so slim in her sweater and jeans. "I need to get a proper job. I want to be a pediatric nurse or doctor."

These might have been empty dreams for Debbie, who lives on welfare, but for a colorful oasis of innocence, stuffed animals and rocking chairs in the bowels of a stark brick urban high school.

"I don't have anyone to look after the baby. I can't afford a baby-sitter," Debbie says. "That's what I love about this center. It really provides for the mother who wants to go back to school."

More than 1 million teen-age girls become pregnant each year and nearly half of them have their babies, according to the Center for Population Options. About half of those who complete their pregnancies drop out of school, often because they don't have child care.

Society pays a high price for teenage pregnancies: low-birthweight babies who may need special medical care and later remedial education, long-term unemployment and welfare reliance among under-educated teen parents, and child abuse and neglect by the inexperienced and frustrated parents — many of whom have disturbed family lives themselves.

But experts believe — and studies are beginning to show — that child care centers at or near high schools can keep teen mothers in school, reduce repeat pregnancies and draw adolescent parents into a web of services that heighten their chances for a good life.

"You pay now or you pay later," says Sharon Rodine, director of the National Organization on Adolescent Pregnancy and Parenting. "All kinds of related social problems can be reduced when you can put a little money into child care for the teen parent."

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, says, "If these mothers stay in school, it makes a great difference in the welfare rolls and a very great difference in their children's futures. A working parent who can read and write is not likely to have an illiterate kid."

Child care usually is the cornerstone of a whole network of support services needed by young mothers, who often have poor basic skills and few opportunities, concludes the draft of an article to be published in March by the Children's Defense Fund.

"You have to provide a special range of services. But without child care, I don't see what pregnant teens' opportunities are," says Helen Blank, the organization's director of child care.

There are 400 to 500 school-coordinated child care services in the United States, according to CDF. Some, like Cardozo, are in public school buildings; some are in separate schools for teen-age parents, while others are in family day-care homes near schools attended by the parents.

The main advantage to students is that scheduling and transportation are enormously simplified. The tie-in also means some mothers can breast-feed, counselors can observe parent-child relationships, and the day-care centers can be used to teach parenting skills. In addition, the young mothers retain their status as primary caretakers — rather than turning that responsibility over to their own mothers.

Most programs arrange or provide health care to both mothers and babies, and make sure new parents learn how to care for and understand their babies. Some provide mentors to student mothers, some offer family counseling and some find ways to involve the baby's father, grandparents, aunts and uncles.

At Cardozo, staff members see to it that mothers and babies receive physicals and immunizations. The girls attend weekly parenting classes or rap sessions. They're required to take child studies in their home economics classes.

Italian Senators Consider Divorce American-Style

By FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — A group of Italian senators is proposing divorce "American-style" as a solution to a process that can leave unhappy couples in limbo for as long as 10 years.

The issue is a subject of daily debates on television and in newspapers.

"We're asking for a true reform," said Sen. Vincenzo Palumbo, a Liberal. "In other words, divorce American-style and not a fraud."

He was referring to the shorter time it takes to get a divorce in the United States.

People danced in the streets the night Parliament legalized divorce in 1970 after a two-decade battle. But the law was conservative by the standards of many Western countries, with a mandatory five-year separation period.

After the long separation, a couple might have to wait another five years, because of slow-moving courts, before a divorce is granted.

A Senate committee recently recommended shortening the mandatory separation period to three years. The proposed law also would make it a crime for a spouse to fail to pay alimony after the divorce.

"Twelve years have passed since 1974, when, by a referendum, Italians confirmed that they wanted to hold on tight to this law, which didn't provoke libertinism, homosexuality, collective suicide by children, as the enemies of divorce threatened," La Repubblica, a left-leaning newspaper, commented recently.

The 1974 referendum was to repeal the law, but after much campaigning and bitter disputes among Italy's leading political parties, the Italian public voted on May 12, 1974, to retain legalized divorce.

Under this law, divorces were granted to couples on condition that they were separated for five years, if one spouse was sentenced to prison for more than 15 years, a spouse was declared mentally unfit to live with the family or convicted of a sex crime.

In the first six months after legalization, some 40,000 people applied for divorces. Since the initial rush, the number has fallen.

In the past five years, about 30,000 to 35,000 separations have been sought and granted yearly, with about half that number of divorces granted annually in a nation of 56 million people.

Divorce lawyers say that mostly middle-class couples take the long road to divorce, with the poor and the rich generally stopping at separation. The poor can't afford the several thousand dollars it takes in legal expenses; the rich want to avoid messy property battles.

Sen. Elena Marinucci, who proposed the Senate initiative, says she has piles of letters from unhappy citizens.

"Probably more than half of the mail comes from parents who want to see their children married and not waiting years for their future spouse to be legally able to marry again," she said in an interview with The Associated Press.

The long wait becomes even more excruciating for couples who plan to adopt children after they marry; Italian law requires a wait of three years after marriage before adoption is permitted.

Liberal Party and Communist Party legislators have pushed for a wait of only one year for spouses who have no children.

The initiative has been a sticky issue for the Christian Democrats, Italy's dominant party which is close to the Vatican and which opposes divorce.

Christian Democratic leaders in the Senate agreed to back the bill after a promise the waiting time would be reduced to no less than three years.

An article in a Jesuit opinion journal, La Civiltà Cattolica (Catholic Civilization), came to the Christian Democrats' rescue by arguing that the party's position helped avoid a worse evil — the possibility of an even shorter waiting time.

Maintaining that "the introduction of divorce has contributed to the real crisis of the family," the journal urged legislators to create services to support families suffering from marital problems.

Some opponents of the proposed divorce law say a longer waiting time is needed to make sure there is no hope of reconciliation in a marriage.

But Judge Anna Peschiera, one of 10 magistrates in Milan's civil court who handle divorce cases, disagreed when queried by La Repubblica.

"In the rare cases in which it has happened, the reheated soup lasted only a little time and the couple separated again," it quoted the judge as saying.

Marinucci hopes the bill will be passed by both the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, the lower house of Parliament, by spring.

The new law would do away with a clause that forces a woman to wait 300 days after the divorce is granted before being allowed to remarry to make sure she did not become pregnant before the marriage was formally ended.

Attorneys Are Wronged By Defaults

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letters from the doctors who complain because they have thousands of dollars "on the books." Well, I've been married to an attorney for 10 years and I do all the billing, and if we could collect all the bad debts we have on our books we could buy our dream house — for cash!

People come to my husband when they're in trouble, pay a retainer and promise to make monthly payments, and one-fourth of them stop paying as soon as their case is completed. When I call to remind them that they are three months behind, they say they can't pay because they just had a baby (my husband and I have three children to support), or they can't pay in December or January because they bought a new TV and VCR for Christmas. One man even told me he wasn't going to pay his bill because he had tears in his eyes when he signed the contract and couldn't read it properly!

Lawyers are called "money grubbers" because they ask for payment in advance. My husband puts in hundreds of hours per year free of charge to help poor people understand their rights, and he has handled many cases at greatly reduced rates for those in need.

When people go into a store to buy merchandise they don't mind paying for it, but for some reason, when they buy a service, they don't feel an obligation to pay for it.

When a person goes to work for an employer, he expects to be paid. My husband's clients are his employers, and if they don't pay him, we can't live. Please print this, Abby. Lawyers are as important as doctors. — ATTORNEY'S WIFE, SANTA ANA, CALIF.

DEAR WIFE: I hear you, and I hope others who buy a service will listen and understand. I am reminded of an ancient Chinese saying: "A wise dentist collects his fee while the patient's tooth is still aching."

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "No Name," the 40-year-old divorcee, who had spent the night with a 37-year-old Vietnam veteran, and was turned off when she found his chest and pelvic area had been patched with surgical-type plastic.

I have written a poem to commemorate the Vietnam vet. It is copyrighted, but you have my permission to use it in your column if you think it merits publication.

THE VIETNAM VET
The Vietnam War never ended
I still fight the war when I sleep
Too many men fell
In the jungle of hell
And their memories are planted too deep

The Vietnam War never ended
The memory of war stayed alive
My friend's in a chair
But his legs aren't there
And he fights every day to survive

Another friend walks with a walker
Another friend walks with a cane
Have another friend
Shoots with a needle
Escaping the Vietnam pain

No, the Vietnam War never ended

It will live till the day that I die
War won't let you forget
See, I'm the Vietnam vet
And at night when I sleep
I still cry ...

"We're Serious About Farming The Rest Of Our Lives. That's Why We Chose To Raise Perdue Chickens."

Stan and Ray Cunningham, Stantonsbury, NC

"These days the tobacco program is so involved with politics that farmers can't see what they can do in the future. It's a year-to-year thing. We feel that soon we won't be able to depend on tobacco as our main source of income, like we used to.

"We can't plan our future on tobacco. Also, the margin of profit on rowcropping is getting very small. It's so dependent on the weather to produce a good yield. Last year, it was so dry we didn't break even on our corn crop.

"But, we know that our two Perdue broiler houses will give us a steady cash flow and a dependable source of income year after year. Perdue chickens are not affected by governmental interference or dry weather.

"And Perdue gives us all the help, assistance and training we need to be successful. We didn't know the first thing about poultry when we started, but through our Perdue representative we're learning and getting better at raising chickens.

"We've discovered that after the first nine to ten days of a flock, the work is not all that physical or demanding. Like any crop, you have to tend to it daily, but that's just looking after your investment.

"And with chickens, we don't have to worry about major equipment breakdowns like in rowcropping. We figure the equipment in each chicken house will last for a long time. And our Perdue representative comes around whenever we need him to check our progress, show us how to use the equipment or answer any questions we have.

"When we first went in to talk to Perdue about raising chickens, they told us what it would be like. It's exactly like they said it would be. And with the millions of dollars Perdue has invested around here, Perdue is here to stay.

"Managing a Perdue poultry operation has been a great learning experience for a young farmer like Stan. It's taught him a great deal about managing a business.

"We're convinced we made the right choice by investing in our two Perdue houses. And we plan to add more in the future because we plan to stay on our farm the rest of our lives."

Give yourself a raise—raisin' with Perdue.

New Kremlin Attitude

prospect for embarking on the path to a nuclear-free world began to open," he said.

Since Reykjavik, the superpowers have been at odds over what Reagan and Gorbachev discussed. A key issue also has been how much research and testing of space weapons should be allowed.

Should weapons be deployed in outer space, Gorbachev said, "the very idea of arms control will be compromised. ... Destabilization will become a fact."

Sakharov, a nuclear physicist and Nobel Peace Prize winner who was released from nearly seven years of internal exile in December, has been one of the stars of the forum, called the Moscow Forum for a Nuclear-Free World and the Survival of Mankind.

Participants quoted Sakharov as saying in a closed meeting Sunday that he believed Star Wars could not work and laser weapons in particular likely would be ineffective.

American guests included writers Norman Mailer and Gore Vidal, actor Gregory Peck and industrialist Armand Hammer.

The forum has put a spotlight on Soviet human rights. On Sunday, three Soviets said they were put under house arrest after sending the forum a telegram complaining about last week's beatings of people demonstrating for Begun.

Jewish activist Leonid Yuzefovich said he and two women distributed an appeal for free emigration of Soviet Jews at one forum site Friday.

The official news agency Tass said some signers of the appeal know state secrets and will not be allowed to emigrate. However, it said four people mentioned in the appeal and two signers likely would be free to leave.

Referring to Afghanistan, Gorbachev said, "Six Soviet regiments have been returned home ... the whole military contingent would be recalled from there within the shortest time possible."

"But to resolve that problem, it takes reciprocity from the U.S.A. and Afghanistan's neighbors," he said. The Soviet Union sent troops to Afghanistan in December 1979 to oversee a change in the Marxist leadership and help fight Moslem rebels. It is estimated to have 115,000 troops there now.

The Kremlin has demanded Pakistan and the United States end support for Afghan rebels before it withdraws. Afghan guerrillas, along with U.S. and Pakistani officials, say a Soviet withdrawal must come first.

Ice Covers State

likely we will get about the foot of snow that we predicted in the mountains," Gonski said.

With a winter storm warning in effect across the state, the weather service predicted that the mountains and foothills would get about 6-8 inches of snow by tonight, while the rest of the state could get 3-4 inches or just a dusting.

"The transition will be gradual," Gonski said. "Trying to pinpoint a time is too hard right now. I would say by 5 p.m. it should be pretty much under way as far as snow goes."

"The ice will be the main problem, though," he added.

Jan B. Price, weather service meteorologist at RDU, said the storm was different from the two last months that dumped up to 20 inches of snow on the state.

"It looks like we don't have as much cold air in place on this system as we had the past two times," Price said.

At 10 a.m., most stations were reporting temperatures hovering around the freezing mark, the weather service said. Freezing rain was reported at Hickory, with rain reported in Asheville and Jacksonville.

Wilmington reported some freezing rain early this morning, but the rain had stopped by daylight.

The storm also was expected to produce a gale along the state's coast, where a gale warning will be in effect through today. Forecasters predicted winds gusting from 15 mph to 45 mph.

The extended forecast calls for cold temperatures throughout the week, with highs in the upper 30s, and the possibility of more snow Wednesday and Thursday in some parts of the state.

"There is a system coming across the Rockies, but we don't want to get into guessing on that one quite yet," Moore said.

The state's last bout with winter weather came Jan. 25 when a similar front dumped snow over the Piedmont and brought snow flurries and freezing rain as far east as Raleigh.

Gaskins, public information officer for the schools. Personnel were also dismissed early.

"School officials will be monitoring the situation throughout the day and tonight to make plans for tomorrow," Gaskins said. The news media will carry notices about school schedules.

Schools in Martin County also closed at 10:15 a.m. due to the icy road conditions. Greene County schools dismissed at 10:30 a.m.

Pitt Community College closed at 11 a.m. All classes this afternoon and tonight will be cancelled.

At 10:30 p.m., East Carolina University was considering early dismissal, but no decision had been made.

Greenville Public Works crews spread sand on icy bridges and slippery intersections throughout the day, a spokesman said.

"The downtown area usually ices up first, and at 8:30 this morning we already had reports of slippery conditions there," according to the spokesman.

The Greene Street bridge was closed for a short time this morning after an accident caused by the slippery conditions blocked both lanes of traffic.

In addition to their answers denying the allegations, both the Reflector and WNCT filed motions to dismiss and counterclaims which charge that Ward instituted the actions "for the sole purpose of harassing each of these answering defendants."

The counterclaims asked that the two news organizations "recover from Plaintiff any and all amounts expended by them in the defense of this proceeding (and) such other and additional relief as the nature of the case demands."

The time allowed WTVD and Talton to answer Ward's complaint has been extended. Spokesman close to the two defendants said today that they are expected to deny Ward's allegations.

Tiger Death

HOUSTON (AP) — A rare, white Bengal tiger suffering kidney damage died at the Houston Zoo, an official said. The 3-year-old tiger, named Indiana Jones, had been separated from his sister, Sankara, since he started showing signs of illness a week ago.

"We don't know precisely what the cause of death was. An autopsy shows heavy involvement of kidney damage. We don't know what the cause is at this point," said Zoo Director John Werler.

The tigers were bought from the Cincinnati Zoo in 1985 for $120,000. Only about 70 white tigers existed in the world then, but Werler said the number has increased slightly since then.

Obituaries

Film Bothers Rep.

Ridge's problems with the film lie in the way the tension, anger and fear of the war are shown to result in Americans brutalizing villagers, and finally each other.

"You go into a village after one of your guys has been shot and you're mad, you're scared. Maybe someone drags a guy in for interrogation and yells and screams," he said.

But the film goes so far in depicting "the inhuman element," according to Ridge, that he almost walked out of the theater. He said he thinks of the 58,000 names of the dead on the polished wall of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

"They probably didn't do any of the stuff in that movie. It upsets me. I think Hollywood has exploited the tension and made it inhuman and barbaric and cruel," he said of the film, which was nominated last week for eight Academy Awards, including best picture.

Ridge said he had seen the film recently and had not yet discussed his feelings with a loose-knit group of 12 House and five Senate members who served in Southeast Asia during the war.

Like Ridge, many saw combat. Ridge, who had never fired a rifle before he was drafted, was given an outpost with several Americans and a company of Vietnamese. He was not injured.

Ridge said he sees nothing wrong with bringing up the subject of the war again to review an important chapter in American history.

But he adds: "Vietnam veterans don't have to go to a movie to relive it. We don't need movies. In Vietnam, there were 3 million stories, and there's not one movie that can reflect those."

Food Reaches Camps

peared designed to cool the 21-month-old intermittent confrontation between its militiamen and the Palestinians. However, there were no indications that the blockade of Beirut's Bourj el-Barajneh and Chatilla camps would be lifted.

Palestinian officials said 15 families of about 90 women and children were allowed to leave Bourj el-Barajneh today and go to the smaller Mar Elias camp, which is protected by neutral Druse militiamen.

Amal has allowed about 500 Palestinians to leave Bourj el-Barajneh in the past two weeks.

Amal let three truckloads of flour, powder milk and bandages into Bourj el-Barajneh on Saturday. But a Palestine Liberation Organization spokesman said the food "would only hold each family for one day."

The camp, home now to an estimated 20,000 people, has been under siege since Nov. 24. Many residents have fled.

A British physician in the camp, Dr. Pauline Cutting, said in a BBC interview that unless substantial supplies reach the camp within a week, many people face starvation. She said like the refugees, she had been eating domestic animals.

"The problem ... is we're running out of cats and dogs," she said.

In the west Beirut fighting, Amal militiamen on Sunday battled members of Lebanon's Communist Party with rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns. Police did not know what started the fighting, but said at least six people were killed and 25 wounded.

Amal and the Communists long have vied for supremacy among Lebanon's 1 million Shiites, the largest sect in the war-torn country.

Fires Killed 18 In Six States

By The Associated Press

A pregnant woman collapsed and died after leading two children from a burning Chicago apartment, while weekend fires in five other states killed 17 other people, most of them children, authorities said.

Those killed included a little boy and three young sisters who died in their home in Pennsylvania, and three children killed in Providence, R.I., in that city's deadliest fire in almost a decade.

A 1-year-old boy died in his crib in New York City, a man and his 18-year-old son were killed in Tennessee and two children died in Seattle. An elderly couple died in New York City and two people died in separate fires in New England.

A firefighter was killed today at Everett, Wash., in a fire that destroyed the library and cafeteria at Everett Community College. Battalion Chief Larry Dressel said the cause of the fire was not known.

In Chicago, Johnnetta Hodges' 5-year-old son, Tecata, ignited bedding while playing with a lighter in their apartment, said Fire Department spokesman Jerry Lawrence.

Ms. Hodges, 26, led out her son and a 14-year-old nephew, then "just collapsed," Lawrence said. "I'm told she had a history of heart problems."

The apparent cause of death was smoke inhalation.

There were no attempts to deliver the fetus, which was at least five months old, officials said.

Fire broke out Sunday in a Cochranton, Pa., home, killing a 4-year-old Amish boy and his three sisters, aged 3 years, 2 years and 1 month, officials said.

Authorities said the fire started on the first floor, apparently from an overheated chimney on a wood-burning stove, said Venango County Coroner Jonathan Hutchinson. The parents escaped through a second-floor window and attempted to re-enter the house to save the children, authorities said.

In Providence, officials speculated that an electric heater placed too close to a bed might have caused a tenement fire Saturday that killed three children. Four children and an 83-year-old baby sitter were injured.

The children were mourned Sunday at a nearby church, and worshippers donated $620 to a fund set up to help the families put out of their home by the blaze.

Fire Chief Michael Moise said the flames and heat inside the house thwarted rescue attempts.

"The pressure in here must have been tremendous," the chief said as he viewed the debris.

One resident of the building kept pleading with police and firefighters to save his Cadillac, parked out front, but stopped after officers threatened to arrest him. He said he feared the gas tank would explode.

Moise said the fire was the worst in terms of deaths and injuries since a 1977 dormitory fire that killed 10 Providence College students.

The four hospitalized children were reported recovering, but the elderly woman remained in critical condition, hospital officials said.

New York City firefighters rescued two men from a ninth-floor apartment fire thought to have started in the room of 13-month-old Seron Eason at about 3 a.m. Sunday. The men sustained minor injuries.

The baby's body was found when the fire was brought under control after about 30 minutes, said Fire Department spokesman Efrain Parrilla. The cause was not determined.

A fire blamed on a wood-burning stove swept through a house in Troy, Tenn., Sunday morning, killing Larry Gargus, 42, and his son, Kenneth. Gargus' wife, Omie, and another son, 20-year-old Mickey, escaped, said Mayor Jimmy Hart.

Mrs. Gargus suffered minor injuries, and Mickey was in stable but guarded condition at Baptist Memorial Hospital in nearby Union City.

In Seattle, a fire that apparently began in a bathroom swept through a nearby children's bedroom Saturday morning, killing Evangel Vau Savini, 10. Her 7-year-old brother, Fili Vau Savini Jr., died early Sunday from burns covering 70 percent of his body, said Harborview Medical Center operator Helga Duckart.

"They apparently were alone when the fire started," Fire Department Battalion Chief Dale Miller said.

In New York City, an illegal kerosene heater used to heat a basement apartment exploded late Sunday, setting a fire that killed an elderly couple, said fire department spokesman Efrain Parrilla.

Investigators believe a volatile mixture of gasoline and kerosene was being used in the heater, Parrilla said. Kerosene heaters are illegal in New York City.

Firefighters had to travel more than two miles by snowmobile to fight a hunting camp blaze near Woodbury, Vt., that killed Welcome R. DeGreenia, 52, of Concord, N.H.

Thank You
We wish to thank our many friends for cards, food, floral designs, and the many visits that were rendered to us during the passing of our son, William Oliver Foreman. Your memories will always linger in our hearts. Special thanks to Hemby Funeral Home staff.
May God bless each of you.
Mr. & Mrs. Robert Foreman

Card of Thanks
The family of the late Ms. Geneva E. Dixon wishes to thank each of you for the varied ways of showing your love during her illness and after her death. Your caring and sharing of God's love has made our loss so much easier to bear. May He continually keep you in His care.

Which Of These Do You Choose?

- Should you want to make Funeral arrangements until the breadwinner is gone?
OR
Should you plan now and have the benefit of his advice and counsel?
- Should you wait for the blow to make Funeral arrangements and then have your family face a heart-breaking trip to the cemetery in rainy weather?
OR
Should you plan now in comfort selecting your Funeral and Burial Estate at home, and later on a bright sunny day review and inspect it at your leisure?

It is not a question of whether to buy Funeral and Burial properties. That is the inevitable purchase. But under what circumstances will you buy it? We're here to help. Call us today about pre-arrangements.

Elliott Cruises To Daytona Win

Elliott Wins

Bill Elliott, from Dawsonville, Ga., screams off of turn #4 of the Daytona International Speedway on his way to win the Daytona 500 Auto Race Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bill Elliott, unable to run away from the field despite driving a car that posted the second-fastest qualifying time in stock car racing history, discovered that the route to victory in the $1.5 million Daytona 500 went through pit road.

While many of his competitors lost valuable time Sunday to a rash of problems in the pits, Elliott's crew was flawless.

And, when defending champion Geoff Bodine ran out of gas with three laps remaining, Elliott went to the front and held on to win the stock car series' most prestigious event for the second time in three years.

"We got in and out of the pits very well, and that's what won the race," said Elliott, who collected a NASCAR-record $204,150.

Pit road, a 2,500-foot strip of asphalt, proved the undoing of many, among them defending Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt. He lost any chance of winning when it took 9.9 seconds to refuel his Chevrolet with 10 laps to go.

"I don't know whether I could have beaten Earnhardt or not," Elliott said. "After that stop I didn't have to race him."

Elliott, who qualified at 210.364 mph in a Ford Thunderbird, needed just 6.3 seconds to fill his tank three laps before Earnhardt's long stop. He also avoided a shootout with 1975 winner Benny Parsons when the latter lost time by overshooting his pit on the 190th of 200 laps and was in for 6.7 seconds.

The margin of victory was .6 seconds over Parsons, who drove a Chevrolet. The triumph permitted Elliott, who averaged 176.263 mph, to join Richard Petty, Cale Yarborough and Bobby Allison as a multiple winner in the 29-year-old event.

"If I hadn't slid down pit road ... I might have been a little better off,"

Parsons said of the stop on lap 188.

Buddy Baker, who joined Bodine, Earnhardt and Parsons as serious contenders for most of the day, faulted himself despite a 6.5-second stop. He was slowed a bit entering and exiting the pits because he was one of nine drivers who stopped on lap 190.

Elliott was one of only three drivers to come in on lap 187.

"We should have stopped with Bill Elliott, but we didn't," said Baker, the 1980 race winner, who finished fourth in an Oldsmobile.

Third was seven-time winner Petty, who ran strong all day in a Pontiac.

Earnhardt was fifth, followed by two-time winner Allison, another of the pit-road victims.

"It's the first time I've ever had two jacks break in the same race," Allison, who drove a Buick, said. "Everytime I'd get in there and have a shot at the lead, we'd have to pit and the jack would break."

Ken Schrader, who had beaten Elliott by four inches in a qualifying race on Thursday, was a factor in his Ford until he experienced the horrors of pit road. He finished seventh, ahead of the Chevrolet of Darrell Waltrip, the Ford of Ricky Rudd and the Oldsmobile of four-time race winner Yarborough.

"We had a pit stop when we got blocked in, another when the air gun broke and two when we had trouble with the transmission," Schrader said.

Bodine, who won the race last year when Earnhardt ran out of gas with four laps remaining, was the ultimate victim. After building a 20-second lead when he didn't join the others in stopping for gas, Bodine had the look of a winner. But he was relegated to a 14th-place finish when he went dry just after passing the entrance to pit road on lap 197.

He barely made it around the 2.5-mile Daytona International Speedway oval, slowing dramatically as the leaders zoomed by and lapped him.

"It was our plan right from the last pit stop (with 45 laps remaining) not to try to race them," Bodine said. "Our plan was to outlast everybody, and we came up 2 1/2 laps short."

Elliott, who dominated this race in 1985, credited his brother, crew chief Ernie Elliott, for the success in the pits.

"We're more organized with Ernie back," he said. Ernie Elliott missed part of last season due to mononucleosis.

Elliott said his plan was to run at or near the front. He led eight times for a total of 105 of the 200 laps. There were 28 lead changes involving 10 drivers.

"When you get behind here, it gets rough," Elliott said. "If you don't pass them on fresh tires, it's tough to get around them."

On Friday, in a subcompact race, Joe Young, a 38-year-old driver from Richmond, Va., became the 16th driver killed at the speedway when his car was struck head-on by another between the high-banked third and fourth turns.

The fatality and the expected high speeds raised fears that Sunday's race could end in tragedy. But the second-fastest Daytona 500 ever was slowed by cautions just four times for 15 laps.

It was only the third accident-free Daytona 500 ever despite driver complaints during the week about wind and a slick surface.

The largest Daytona crowd ever, estimated at 130,000, watched the race, as did a national television audience.

Heels Ease Past Warriors In Impressive Fashion

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — About everything third-ranked North Carolina did in its 83-74 victory over Marquette impressed Warrior coach Bob Dukiet. Even the Dean E. Smith Center and its amenities overwhelmed him.

"I hope in the future we can build the type of program Coach Smith has built," Dukiet said in reference to the Tar Heel basketball tradition and the 22,000-seat arena named for North Carolina's coach. "It's so classy here, it's unbelievable. The bathrooms are even classy."

Dukiet and his team almost left the kind of impression that Tar Heel fans don't like. They used a man-to-man defense and poor North Carolina shooting to build a six-point halftime lead which they expanded to seven in the second half before a Tar Heel run ended the upset bid.

Smith returned the compliments Dukiet handed out.

"It was a hard-fought win and Marquette is certainly an NCAA team if I were on the tournament committee," he said. "I thought they played very hard and played very smart."

An 8-2 run capped by David Boone's follow shot at 8:17 gave Marquette a 25-22 edge. Mike Flory's 3-point field goal with seven seconds before halftime gave Marquette a 41-35 lead, and the Warriors increased their advantage to 53-46 with 14:03 remaining on the strength of a 10-2 run.

"As a team, we just tried to concentrate a lot more in the second half," said point guard Kenny Smith, who along with J.R. Reid scored 17 points. "In the first half we were hustling really hard and we weren't coming up with the plays and they were making some nice passes."

"It wasn't really discouraging in a sense because we were working hard," Kenny Smith added. "We knew that, in the long run, the way we were playing is what would get us there."

North Carolina, 23-2, fought back with a short jumper by Joe Wolf and two free throws by Reid. A dunk by Reid with 11:13 left tied the score at 53, but Michael Sims came up with a steal and basket at 10:28 for Marquette.

Smith drove for a score at 9:50 before Jeff Lebo gave North Carolina a 57-55 edge. Pat Foley hit two free throws for Marquette at 9:01 to tie the score, but North Carolina came back with seven straight points, four by Lebo and a 3-point basket by Wolf, for a 64-57 lead with 7:54 left.

"The concentration level picked up and then we made a couple of steals and got the transition game going and that really helped us out," Kenny Smith added.

The Tar Heels stretched the lead to 79-65 before the Warriors, 14-9, closed to the final score.

"Defensively, we were active in the first half. We kept deflecting or we would have the count at four seconds and they'd end up with a basket," Coach Smith said. "Then all those came our way in the second half."

Dukiet said the culprit in his team's loss was fatigue and foul trouble.

Irish Make It 2-0 Vs ACC By Topping Duke, 70-66

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps says the Fighting Irish are ready for the NCAA tournament — especially if they have to play an Atlantic Coast Conference team.

"If it was tomorrow, we could play," Phelps said. "We've proved we can play against the best."

Phelps' optimistic outlook Sunday came after Notre Dame beat No. 15 Duke 70-66 in overtime. Two weeks ago, the Fighting Irish upset then-No. 1 North Carolina. Both victories came in South Bend.

Freshmen Joe Fredrick and Scott Paddock helped Notre Dame over Duke. Fredrick had an early basket in overtime and later added two foul shots, while Paddock made two free throws to seal the triumph.

"The freshmen scoring six points won the game for us," Phelps said. "I had a feeling all week that Joe Fredrick was going to be the guy to come off the bench and score. I told him to be ready."

Scott Hicks scored 19 points and Donald Royal 16 for Notre Dame. 14-7 John Smith had 19 for the Blue Devils, 20-5.

Royal's two foul shots with 24 seconds left in overtime broke a 66-66 tie. Paddock made his two free throws with three seconds remaining.

"To get the fouls means you're playing good offense, and then to make the fouls means you're shooting under pressure," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said.

"Defensively, I thought we played pretty good, but we fouled a lot," he said. "We were playing defense with our hands and not our feet."

David Rivers, who scored 12 points, lifted Notre Dame into a 60-60 tie with 1:30 left in regulation with two foul shots. Both teams missed shots from the field in the final seconds.

"In the past two years, we lost twice to Duke and twice to North Carolina," Royal said. "I think we just got tired of losing to (ACC) teams."

Sophomore Sean Connor, the Irish' leading scorer off the bench, remained sidelined with an ankle injury.

Notre Dame succeeded in controlling the tempo, Krzyzewski said. "Maybe we rushed our opportunities because we wanted to quicken the tempo," he said. "But we made some poor decisions. We played hard, but maybe not intelligently enough to win."

With 52 seconds left in overtime,

Smith scored to tie the Irish at 66. Amaker, Kevin Strickland and Quin Snyder all missed field goal attempts after Royal's free throws.

Smith then missed the first of a one-and-one with four seconds left, and Paddock followed with his free throws after Snyder's fifth foul.

Regulation play ended with the score tied at 60 after Rivers hit a pair of free throws with 1:30 left. Amaker then missed a field goal attempt, and Mark Stevenson missed from the corner as the second half ended.

The teams tied nine times in the second half. Notre Dame led 29-26 at halftime, then lost an five-point lead early in the second half, and twice trailed by four points.

Thompson Learns Rivalry Quickly

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

It took Mychal Thompson less than 48 hours to learn what it means when the Los Angeles Lakers play the Boston Celtics.

"The second I walked on the court, as soon as I saw Boston, I hated them," Thompson said after scoring 10 points in a reserve role for the Lakers as they defeated the Celtics 106-103 Sunday. "I used to respect them and now it's turned to hatred."

Thompson was acquired in a trade with San Antonio on Friday, and the Lakers' addition of a veteran backup to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was not a welcome sight to Celtics Coach K.C. Jones.

"He can score, play forward, he can play center...it gives the Lakers a 6-10 guy who can come in with Kareem," Jones said. "That's a set of big guys and still they have quickness in the fast break, which means Thompson will make them awesome. They were awesome enough and then they picked him up."

Magic Johnson had 39 points, including eight in the final 3½ minutes, and added 10 assists and seven rebounds for the Lakers, who rallied from a 17-point deficit in the third quarter.

In the only other NBA game Sunday, New Jersey defeated Cleveland 120-104 and Portland edged Atlanta 98-93.

Thompson had 10 points in relief of Abdul-Jabbar, who scored eight of his 10 points in the final seven minutes. His two free throws with 16 seconds left extended his streak of games in double figures to 743.

Johnson's 45-foot 3-pointer at the third-quarter buzzer capped a 17-5 streak that cut a 75-58 deficit to four. Exhorting the crowd with his arms waving, he completed the rally in the fourth period, hitting two free throws with four seconds left to account for the final margin.

"When you're down 17 to the Celtics, you ought to be concerned," Johnson said. "They're not just any other team. They just started missing and we just kept coming and coming and coming."

"He brought them back and hit every crucial shot," Larry Bird said of Johnson.

"That enthusiasm, that little boy, is very refreshing," Riley said. "It's the spirit of this team."

With the Lakers down by three, Johnson hit a 15-foot jumper and then made a spinning layup with 1:29 to play to give Los Angeles a 98-97 lead.

After the teams exchanged baskets, Johnson sank an 18-footer with 23 seconds to play to put the Lakers ahead 102-99.

After Robert Parish scored on a dunk, Abdul-Jabbar made the two free throws that put him in double figures and gave the Lakers a 104-101 lead with 16 seconds to play.

A layup by Parish got Boston back within one, setting the stage for Johnson to make the two clinching free throws.

Kevin McHale led the Celtics with 23 points, Dennis Johnson added 22 and Parish and Bird had 20 each.

Nets 120, Cavaliers 104

New Jersey snapped a nine-game losing streak after outscoring Cleveland 39-21 in the second quarter to lead by as many as 28 points.

Albert King and Buck Williams each scored 19 points for the Nets, who had two 12-2 streaks and a 10-0 burst in the first half en route to a 67-39 lead. It was 72-47 at halftime, and the Cavaliers got no closer than 16 the rest of the way.

Williams had 15 points and six rebounds in the first period, scored seven as the Nets scored 12 of the game's first 14 points. Cleveland cut the deficit to 31-26 on a jump shot by Johnny Newman late in the first quarter, but King had six points during another 12-2 streak early in the second quarter.

Later in the period, Ben Coleman and Mike Gminski had three-point plays as New Jersey grabbed its biggest advantage.

Trail Blazers 98, Hawks 93

Portland missed its last 10 field goals, but hit six straight free throws down the stretch to beat Atlanta.

The Trail Blazers took a 79-69 lead into the fourth quarter, but they hit just four of 17 field goal attempts in the final period, including the last 10 in the final 5:37. Dominique Wilkins, who scored 22 points, hit two free throws with 1:22 left to put the Hawks in front 86-92, their first lead since early in the second quarter.

But Jim Paxson hit four free throws and Caldwell Jones hit two more in the final 40 seconds to give Portland the victory.

Steve Johnson scored 11 of his 20 points and Kiki Vandeweghe added 10 of his 27 in the third quarter as Portland extended a four-point halftime lead to 79-69.

Looking To Score

Rose Takes 6th In State Meet

The Rose High Gymnastics team competed in the North Carolina State High School Gymnastics Championships Saturday in Raleigh, placing sixth out of seven teams.

Raleigh Broughton took top honors with 161.65, followed by Sanderson (157); Raleigh Enloe (145.7); Reidsville (141.88); Raleigh Millbrook (138.10); Rose (137.7) and Raleigh Athens Drive (133.8).

Kerri Moreno, competing in the Class I level, led the Rose qualifiers placing third on the vault with a score of 7.85; third on uneven bars with a 7.3; third in the floor exercise with a 7.8; second on the balance beam with a 7.9 and third in the all-around with a 30.85.

Susan Grimsley, competing in the Class II level, took third in vaulting with 8.4 and fifth on the balance beam with a 7.2. Grimsley also competed on the Class III level on the uneven bars, scoring an 8.3 to take third place.

On the Class IV level, Terri Jarvis was first on uneven bars with a 6.4. Monica Leggett, also on the Class IV level, was sixth on the uneven bars with 5.15 good for sixth place and third on floor exercise with a 6.15.

Peggy Becker, who is a member of the Greenville Gymnastics Club, traveled with the Rose High team while competing for Eastern Wayne High School.

Becker was first in vaulting with an 8.9; second on the uneven bars with an 8.05; third on the balance beam with a 7.7; second on floor exercise with a 8.15 and second in the all-around with a 32.80.

At another meet, Stacy Pochowicz, competing for the Greenville Gymnastics Club, competed in a Class 3.0 qualifying sectional in Winston-

Salem at North Point Gymnastics Center.

She placed sixth in vaulting with a 7.85; third in the floor exercise with an 8.35 and seventh in the all-around with a 29.60.

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Craig Stadler was stung twice during the final round of the $500,000 Andy Williams Open golf tournament.

The first time was by a yellow jacket as Stadler was playing the sixth hole of Sunday's final round on the South course at Torrey Pines.

The sting was painful, and medical personnel were alerted to meet Stadler on the seventh tee.

But that wasn't nearly as painful, or costly, as the sting of a disqualification that awaited him in the scorer's tent beside the 18th green.

That one cost him $37,333, possibly the most expensive disqualification in the history of the PGA Tour.

The prize he would have received as one of three players tied for second behind record-setting winner George Burns was wiped out as the result of telephone calls from television viewers who watched filmed highlights of Saturday's play.

In one of those clips, Stadler was shown kneeling on a towel as he played a shot from beneath a tree on the 14th hole.

The use of a towel on damp ground to protect the trousers of a kneeling player is prohibited by the rules of golf. It is considered "building a stance," PGA Tour official Glenn Tait said, and calls for a two-shot penalty.

Stadler, who told Tait he was unaware of the rule, failed to assess that penalty and, as a result, was guilty of signing an incorrect scorecard. And that, in turn, called for disqualification.

"He took it like the gentleman he is," Tait said. Stadler, who lost a playoff in Hawaii a week earlier, was not available for comment.

The disqualification, while highly unusual, had no direct bearing on Burns' victory, which was nailed down by two dramatic eagles that turned a multi-player struggle into a one-man show.

Six players were within two strokes of the lead when Burns, 37, stroked a putt of about 40 feet through a drizzling rain and into the cup for an eagle-3 on the 13th hole.

That gave him sole control of the lead, and the margin had expanded to three strokes by the time he played his second shot from the 15th fairway.

Burns lofted a 135-yard 9-iron shot to the green, watched it hit about six feet behind the pin, bite the rain-softened surface and back into the cup for an eagle-2.

That swelled the margin to five strokes, and Burns brought it home without difficulty. He finished with a 7-under-par 65, the low round of the dreary, drizzly day. He was further rewarded in the form of bonds issued by tournament sponsor Shearson Lehman Bros. which will mature to a value of $150,000 in 20 years.

Burns' 72-hole total of 266, 22 under par, provided Burns with the winner's check of $90,000.

Margin of victory: 6 seconds. Caution flags: 4 for 15 laps. Lead changes: 28 among 10 drivers.

House Panel Says Summit Results Still Unclear

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Four months after the U.S.-Soviet summit in Iceland, there is still no firm agreement on how close the superpowers came to sweeping nuclear arms control agreements or what the pacts may have contained, the House Armed Services Committee says.

There is an "astonishing degree of confusion surrounding what happened in Reykjavik" when President Reagan met Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev over the Oct. 11-12 weekend, said the report, issued Sunday by the Democratic-controlled panel.

"The Reykjavik meeting has been portrayed as a real and lasting success, as an historic lost opportunity, as both more and less conclusive than initial accounts led the world to believe," the report said, criticizing the "astonishing degree of confusion surrounding what actually happened."

The review was based on hearings by the committee's defense policy panel in November and December, including interviews with a number of U.S. officials who were at the summit.

White House officials said they could not comment on the report because they had not seen it.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the Armed Services panel, called the summit "The textbook case on how the superpowers should not negotiate."

One reason for confusion is Reagan was poorly prepared, the report said, since the summit was held less than two weeks after it was officially proposed by the Soviets.

"The announcement of a summit to take place in less than two weeks astonished most observers," the report noted, because "Reagan's longstanding and considerable opposition to unprepared summits was well known."

The summit followed the confused case of Nicholas Daniloff, the report said. That involved the release by the Soviets of Daniloff, an American journalist accused of receiving classified material, and the freeing by the United States of Gennadi Zakharov, a Soviet employee at the United Nations accused of espionage.

"There is yet to be a convincing explanation for the administrator's claim that there was no trade of Daniloff for a Soviet spy," the report said, "nor any linkage between the summit and the entire Daniloff affair."

No U.S. allies had been consulted adequately and American military leaders were not asked in advance to evaluate the military impact of the U.S. proposals, the report said in criticizing the administration as "ill-prepared for the negotiations."

Reagan "clearly believed" the Iceland agenda would be limited to setting a later date for a full-scale summit and outlining a final agreement on limiting nuclear weapons in Europe, the report said.

But when the two leaders first met, Gorbachev "surprised the president" by pulling out prepared proposals for deep and wide-ranging cuts in atomic arms. "This set the tone of the meeting, with the Soviets driving and the Americans reacting."

After they broke for the day, a group of officials from both sides spent much of the night trying to put together a comprehensive arms control package, the report noted. That effort fell apart on the last day.

Reagan said he rejected a comprehensive package because of Soviet insistence that the U.S. "Star Wars" anti-missile research program be limited. U.S. officials first portrayed the summit as a "failure," then reversed course a day later and began saying it was a success because a wide-ranging agreement almost had been reached.

After the summit, the report said, "In the rush to put a positive 'spin' on events in Reykjavik, the administration succeeded only in contradicting itself and spreading the impression of confusion and disarray."

"Differences between the two sides over what was agreed upon were spurred by an inability of the United States to present a coherent picture of the summit events," it concluded.

"Administration officials directly contradicted one another over such important issues as what they agreed to eliminate in 10 years — ballistic missiles, all strategic systems, all nuclear weapons — and whether or not they anticipated the breakdown over SDI or the ultimate decision by Gorbachev to link all elements of the proposals discussed," the report said.

"In the process of changing the characterization of the summit from 'failure' to 'partial success,' the administration raised questions it has yet to answer about why it was unable to generate simple 'success,'" the committee said.

Two of those questions are: "Why, for example, was there no written, initialed record of the agreements that were reached? Why was there no discussion of postponing the summit breakdown by referring the issues to another meeting?"

The panel concluded that "the process moved too fast — 'progress' went too far, overshot its mark, and yielded the United States nothing but the appearance of confusion and frustration."

"Great progress may indeed be possible when real flexibility is available," the legislators said. "But when dealing with the Soviets at this level, great disappointment — or worse, strategic mistakes — may be more likely."

Retardation Eyed

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

CHICAGO (AP) — The 300 babies born to women who lived near Chernobyl nuclear power plant when it exploded and burned last year appear normal, but an American doctor says they are 50 percent more likely to be mentally retarded.

The mothers lived within 18 miles of the plant, an area where no humans now live and few people go but the nuclear power plant's workers, said Dr. Robert Gale of the University of California in Los Angeles.

Gale, who has just returned from a visit to the plant, said trees around it are brown.

"It's a fairly sizable forest — completely radioactive," he said Sunday.

Studies by Gale, Soviet doctors and the U.S. Department of Energy estimate that 39 of the 300 infants will suffer from some form of mental retardation because of radiation from the plant, Gale said.

That is 50 percent higher than the 26 cases that would be expected in a population of 300 infants not exposed to radiation during fetal development, Gale said.

The estimate is based in part on studies of survivors of the Hiroshima atomic bomb in World War II, Gale said at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Those studies have shown that fetuses exposed to radiation between the 8th week and 15th week of development are likely to have abnormal brains because that is when a primitive clump of nerve cells called the neural crest begins to organize itself into a tiny brain, Gale said.

Two of the plant's four units are operating. One reactor is shut down and the one that exploded has been sealed in concrete. Its nuclear core remains hot enough to boil water, said Gale.

Gale was called to the Soviet Union to do bone marrow transplants on 13 of the most seriously irradiated victims a few days after the Chernobyl disaster on April 26. Two of the patients survived.

The infants that have been born to mothers who were in the vicinity of the plant at the time of the accident showed no signs of abnormalities at birth, Gale said.

First Show Of 'Amerika' Prompts Demonstrations

By MICHAEL WOLCOTT
Associated Press Writer
Most pickets criticized but a few applauded in demonstrations around the nation that accompanied ABC's first installment of "Amerika," a miniseries depicting life in the United States 10 years after a Soviet takeover.

The 14½-hour series which began Sunday night has been criticized by the Soviets and some Americans as a potential threat to superpower relations and global peace efforts.

Protesters turned out opposite the United Nations and outside offices of ABC or its affiliates in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and Atlanta to mark the opening of the most talked about event of the 1986-87 television season. Supporters showed up in Los Angeles and at Yale University.

In San Francisco, some of a group of 50 Latvians who gathered to watch the first segment said it brought back stark memories of a Soviet takeover during World War II.

"This is a realistic approximation of what happens," said Olgerts Puris, an engineer from Palo Alto. "Basically, there is fear for life, for property and a general feeling of insecurity."

"Amerika," is set in Nebraska in 1997 and depicts an America where communications are closely guarded, travel is difficult and food is hard to get.

The New York Spartacist League, which its leaders describe as a socialist labor organization, led marchers outside ABC studios as the broadcast began.

They chanted "World War Three Brought to You By ABC," and other slogans and carried signs, including one that read, "ABC, AmeriKKK Broadcasting Company."

ABC spokesman Tom Mackin said the network had no response to the protests, adding, "They have the right to peacefully assemble; it's in the Constitution." He said the switchboard was "not especially busy."

The United Nations had complained about the show portraying the occupation troops as a U.N. peacekeeping force. As a result, ABC promised to broadcast a disclaimer before each segment.

Fifteen protesters standing in 18-degree weather in front of the United Nations and the U.S. Mission to the U.N. held signs deriding the program as "absurd fantasy" and "dangerous right-wing propaganda."

"We're very concerned about the negative impact it could have on U.S.-Soviet relations and public support for the United Nations," said Kathy Waters, project coordinator for Mobilization for Survival, a pro-disarmament group that staged the candlelight vigil.

In Los Angeles, about 35 demonstrators, some dressed in traditional Lithuanian costumes, held an hour-long demonstration in front of the ABC television studios in favor of "Amerika."

Americans should watch the series so they realize that a threat of communist overthrow is real, group members said. Lithuania has been under Soviet control since Soviet troops occupied the country in 1940.

In Chicago, about 40 protesters from a group called the Chicago Coalition for a Fair Media picketed for about half an hour Sunday before the show outside the studio of ABC affiliate WLS-TV.

Keillor Ending Show

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The news from Lake Wobegon will cease this spring when Garrison Keillor ends his variety show "A Prairie Home Companion," after 13 years on public radio.

Keillor's announcement Saturday that he will "resume the life of a shy person" triggered hundreds of calls to Minnesota Public Radio, which produces the program.

"I want to be a writer again. I'm tired, and it is time to stop," said Keillor, known to an estimated 4 million American Public Radio listeners each week for his depiction of life in the fictitious Lake Wobegon — "the town that time forgot and the decades cannot improve."

Keillor, 44, whose book "Lake Wobegon Days" was a national best-seller in 1985, was not available for comment Saturday or Sunday.

The show, coupling Keillor's rambling, humorous monologues with skits, music and "commercials" for imaginary products such as Powdermilk Biscuits, is broadcast live and distributed to more than 275 American Public Radio affiliates.

Coordinator Randy Toler said station officials refused to talk with the protesters and have refused to provide local airtime for the series' critics. He said the group planned more pickets today.

During the show, 25 members of the Spartacist League picketed WLS, chanting slogans, including: "Who stopped Hitler? The Red Army did!"

In Needham, Mass., a group called No Business As Usual protested briefly at WCVB-TV Sunday night, brandishing signs and chanting.

About 20 demonstrators, most of them members of No Business As Usual, carried signs and chanted anti-"Amerika" slogans Sunday night outside Atlanta's ABC affiliate, WSB-TV.

At Yale University, in New Haven, Conn., about 20 members of the Committee for Freedom staged mock public executions Sunday in support of "Amerika" and to protest what members called "worldwide Soviet expansionism and imperialism."

Thirty student counterdemonstrators gathered nearby and made plans to stage a sit-in Friday at ABC's New Haven office, according to student Liesl Schilling.

Brooks Back With 'Spaceballs'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — After a five-year absence, His Royal Madness Mel Brooks is once more reigning on a movie set.

Having already sent up Westerns ("Blazing Saddles"), horror ("Young Frankenstein"), suspense ("High Anxiety") and epics ("History of the World, Part I"), Brooks is now doing a number on space movies. His new movie is called "Spaceballs," and the production has commandeered a large number of the stages on the Lorimar Telepictures lot.

The other day Brooks was working on Stage 30, which contained the command post of the universe's largest space vehicle — it will take the length of the film credits to pass before the screen. Brooks was directing a scene in which Rick Moranis, in cape and huge black headpiece as the infamous Dark Helmet, flies through the air.

The trick scene required preparations by a small army of technicians. "I am the victim of G forces; this is the part of making movies that I don't enjoy," said Brooks.

He prefers working with comic actors instead of special effects, and he has a rich array in "Spaceballs." The leads are newcomers Bill Pullman, as the space bum Lone Starr, and Daphne Zuniga as "Her Spoiled Highness" Princess Vespa, daughter of Roland, King of the Druids (Dick Van Patten). Thus, she is a Druidish princess.

Tut's Mummy
 On this day in 1923, archaeologists opened the tomb of King Tutankhamen. A 3,300-year-old garland of flowers, some of which still displayed color, lay across the King's mummified body. The Egyptians used common substances such as beeswax, oil and salt to mummify bodies. But the complex procedure took up to 70 days to complete. The body was wrapped in bandages, and wax was used to waterproof it. The word "mummy" comes from "mumia," the Arab word for wax.

DO YOU KNOW — What archaeologist discovered Tutankhamen's tomb?
FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Radial tires are tires reinforced with steel wire.

Horoscope From The Carroll Center Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Feb. 17
GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today you find it difficult to reach a satisfactory accord with those you want to be allied with. Be exact and look for better opportunities.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't involve yourself in an argument between a partner and a bigwig and all works out well.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Get important work done. Choose those interests you are best fitted for and enjoy them.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't plan amusements that are too expensive. Be more thoughtful of your mate, also.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You may get confused if a quarrel starts between a family tie and an outsider, but this soon ends.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Don't take time away from your work to run an errand. Have a pep talk with co-workers and improve efficiency. VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Be careful in dealing with your mate and avoid a possible argument. Confer with experts who can help you.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Tensions may rise, so get away from home early and do whatever pleases you. Try making new friends.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Some outside affair can deter you from carrying through with a plan to extend your activities.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A strange financial affair can interfere with a plan you've made. Be with good friends tonight for fun.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You are uncertain what to do about an outside affair, but tonight you see how to make things work.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): An intimate worry can deter you from going after the goals that mean the most to you.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Make sure you keep a promise you have made to a friend. Later you can have a good time with your mate.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will sway between the idealistic and the practical, so teach your progeny to schedule his, or her, time wisely so that things can be properly handled. Upon reaching maturity your child will be very charming in dealing with others. Sports are fine here.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable; as South you hold:
 ♠Q10763 7 A985 ♣KJ10
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass Pass 1♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—In support of spades, your hand revalues to a full opening bid. However, since you are a passed hand you cannot afford to jump to three spades—that would not be forcing. Therefore, a leap to four spades is the clear choice.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A103 AQJ95 J6 ♣A87
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1♣ Pass 2 NT Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Since partner has a maximum of 15 points, your combined holding is not enough to venture to slam. And even though you have a good five-card heart suit, you shouldn't rebid three hearts, because that would suggest an unbalanced hand with a six-card suit. The correct bid is the obvious raise to three no trump.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠95 873 ♠A106 ♣KJ532
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South
 1♣ 2♣ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—This hand is simple if you play five-card majors—you can raise to two hearts in comfort. And that is the only bid available if you play four-card majors. We do not live in a perfect world, so you just have to take a chance that partner has either five cards in his suit or a good four-card holding.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AJ102 7653 85 ♣954
 The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
 1♣ Pass 2♣ Pass
 2 NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Partner has made a game invitation on a balanced hand. Even though you could hardly have less for your raise, you are not relieved of the obligation to play in your best spot. With your ruffing value and four-card support, you must correct to three spades.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠954 ♠AK83 1062 ♣A74
 As dealer, what is your opening bid?
 A.—In the days when this hand counted as three honor tricks, it was a mandatory opening. In this era of point count, you have a flat 11 points, which is a bit short of an opening bid. Pass. In third seat, we would venture one heart, intending to pass any response by partner.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠6 ♠Q108763 92 ♣J642
 The bidding has proceeded:
 East South West North
 1♣ Pass 2♣ 3 NT
 Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—When did partner invite you into the auction? You can expect him to have a long, solid minor suit, at least one spade stopper and an outside trick or two. Hope that you have enough for him to make the contract. Pass. Four hearts is strictly a no-no.

California Firm Will Open First Tire-To-Energy Plant

By RICH CARTIERE
Associated Press Writer
WESTLEY, Calif. (AP) — The country has billions of unusable tires and an energy company says it has the answer: burn them.

A $41 million plant is being built 90 miles south of San Francisco to consume more than 500 whole tires a minute, non-stop, creating steam for a turbine to generate electricity for 14,000 homes a year. It will be the first such plant in the nation.

"The technology is unique in North America. Nobody's got it but us," said Arch Ford, senior vice president of Oxford Energy Co.

State, county and municipal officials have granted approval for the plant, but environmentalists fear its emissions, including carbon dioxide, sulfur dioxide and hydrocarbons.

"We are opposed not because we know it's going to be bad, but because we don't know it's not going to be bad. There's been no complete environmental study," said Gordon E. Hart, executive director of Ecology Action, which sued unsuccessfully to stop construction on the Westley facility.

Opponents sued unsuccessfully for an independent environmental study of the plant, which is to open near this farming community of 700 in the summer.

The nation has 2 billion unretreadable tires lying around, with 240 million more being discarded every year, or roughly one per person, according to the Department of Energy.

Many landfills no longer accept tires because they work their way to the surface. Dumps that do must take costly storage measures.

As a result, millions of tires are left along roads or stored at illegal dumps every year.

Other tire disposal practices include building ocean reefs, using shredded rubber chips as asphalt additive for softer roads, adding them to farm waste burners as supplemental fuel, and shipping them overseas for burning or retreading. Some dealers resell tires below U.S. retreading standards to Third World countries, according to Oxford officials.

As fuel, tires hardly can be rivaled, said Ford. Each contains the equivalent of 2.5 gallons of oil, enough to heat an average house for a day. About 18 percent of modern tires are steel, which Oxford will recycle.

TIRE POWER — Arch Ford of Oxford Energy Co., Westley, Calif., surveys the world's largest pile of tires which his company plans to burn whole to create electrical power and begin ridding the nation of the troublesome trash once and for all. The plant will be the first whole-tire-to-energy facility in the nation. (AP Laser-photo)

If your banker changes the subject when you ask about Certificate of Deposit rates, maybe it's time to change your account to First Federal.

Our Certificate of Deposit Accounts pay higher rates on a low minimum balance.

It's never been quite clear why big banks reporting millions of earnings every quarter consistently pay lower rates on Certificate of Deposit Accounts than First Federal. But it's a fact.

So, the next time you're checking rates on Certificates of Deposit Accounts, check the rates at First Federal. All insured to $100,000 by the FSLIC.

All in all, our Certificates of Deposit pay more interest and offer you a safe investment. So, we don't want to change the subject when you mention Certificate of Deposit Rates. We want to change where you bank.

FIRST FEDERAL
The best place to bank.
