Council Agrees To Seek Brook Valley Annexation

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council agreed on $5.9 million plans to annex involuntarily Brook Valley, along with attempting to incorporate voluntarily eight developments — including Tucker Estates and Westhaven subdivisions.

Council members also asked the city staff to meet with members of the Greenville Utilities Commission staff to review annexation priorities for the next five years upon the request of Malcolm Green, GUC general manager.

"According to the annexation priorities as they currently exist, most of those areas don't have sewer now, and that's the most expensive part for utilities to take in existing subdivision that have septic tanks," Green told the City Council at a workshop Monday night.

"We recommend looking at undeveloped areas in which the developer would pay for sewers," he said.

The GUC already has the $5.4 million to $5.9 million required for the involuntary annexation of Brook Valley, which includes Azalea Gardens and Highland Park, according to Green, who said the project would keep the utility occupied for about two years.

"That in itself is all the projects we can handle over the next two years," Green said. "It's a major construction project that will take all of our human resources for the next two years. In the meantime, the two staffs will try to get together and set priorities according to the payback on installation, the total cost of projects, and the funds available."

When annexing nearby properties, the city is required by state law to provide all services provided to the rest of city within two years, according to Green, who said the annexation of Brook Valley is necessary for alleviating sewer problems in surrounding areas.

"The reason it is so important is that, in all of the land south of Greenville that is in the extraterritorial limits several hundred feet west of Highway 43, the normal gravity sewer flow flows east," he said. "So we really need the Brook Valley system and to install major supply lines for all of the area."

Under involuntary annexation, the city is required to provide water and sewer service, but developers pay for the system in voluntary annexations, according to Bobby Roberson, director of planning and community development, who said the city would need signatures from 100 percent of the affected population for a voluntary annexation.

The addition of Tucker Estates, Westhaven, Planters Walk, Bedford, Heritage Village, Eastwood, Medical Oaks, and Lindbeth Grove, as voluntary annexations would add $149,000 in tax revenue upon full development, Roberson said. Plans call for those voluntary annexations to be completed by Jan. 1, 1987.

Only street lighting would be provided by the city in these areas, according to Green, who said the developments already have water and sewer hookups.

Approximately 5,000 people would be added to Greenville's population upon the annexation of Brook Valley and the eight developments, Roberson said.

Council member Ed Carter suggested black communities be included in impending annexation plans so minority voting strength is not diluted by an increase in white voters.

Shultz Handcarries Invitation To Gorbachev

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz today renewed the invitation for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to go to Washington for a superpower summit, but the Kremlin leader said "generally without reason I do not go anywhere, particularly to America."

At the start of a meeting with Gorbachev in an ornate hall at the Kremlin, Shultz delivered a letter from President Reagan containing the invitation to Washington.

"You're welcome to come," Shultz said. "I have a letter from the president and it says so."

Reagan and Gorbachev have held two summit meetings — in Geneva in November 1985 and in Iceland last October. They agreed informally in Geneva that Gorbachev would visit Washington to see the president last year. Reagan then would have gone to Moscow this year.

Gorbachev has not acted on the U.S. invitation, which Reagan renewed in the letter. Howard H. Baker Jr., the president's chief of staff, said Monday in California that he would not be surprised to see a decision on a superpower summit emerge from Shultz' three-day visit to Moscow.

As Gorbachev and Shultz shook hands, posing for photographs, a reporter asked the Soviet leader if he would be going to Washington this year.

"That's precisely what we are going to discuss," Gorbachev said. "We must continue the discussion and then answer your question."

The Communist Party general secretary added, speaking in Russian: "I think I have to be hopeful, and it just cannot be that I would avoid America in my travels. But generally without reason I do not go anywhere, particularly to America. This cannot be just a stroll."

The Soviet leader, who is 56, said that when he nears retirement "then I may travel just for pleasure. But now I need business."

Motioning to Shultz, who stood at his side during the picture-taking, Gorbachev said: "The secretary of state keeps silent."

Shultz, as if on cue, said "You're welcome to come" and pulled Reagan's letter from his pocket. "I have a letter from the president that says so."

Gorbachev remarked with a smile: "So, I was able to achieve it."

Shultz met Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov this morning and had a working lunch at the U.S. Embassy. At the same time, arms control experts from both sides met to work on a possible agreement on removing medium-range missiles from Europe.

The secretary of state also arranged to meet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze today, their fourth meeting in two days. Shultz arrived Monday.

Shultz met for more than seven hours Monday with Shevardnadze, and a U.S. official said alleged KGB bugging of the U.S. Embassy was the first item of discussion.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Genady Gerasimov said today Shultz and Shevardnadze spent most of their time discussing security issues.

He told reporters at a government briefing that the "most promising direction" in the talks was the area of medium-range missiles, but he did not elaborate.

Advisory Panel Urges City To Ax Refuse Pickup Fees

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Mayor's Ad Hoc Budget Advisory Committee has recommended the city of Greenville discontinue collecting refuse fees and suggested the evaluation of changing commercial garbage pickup to an independent contracting system.

According to the proposal, which was submitted to the City Council along with 11 other recommendations at a workshop Monday night, residential customers would receive the same service at no cost and the city would drop the current pickup practice and cost of commercial customers.

"This change is to be considered in conjunction with the goal of eliminating the current charges to individuals for garbage pickup," former Mayor Percy Cox, who serves on the advisory committee, told council members.

"Commercial customers can obtain independent contractor pickup service at about the same cost as now required for pickup services — while the size of the containers can be increased as an advantage to these customers. Making this change could save the city approximately $240,000 — which increases the city's ability to drop current charges to individuals."

The Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters submitted petitions with 1,780 signatures calling for an end to the city's policy of billing residences $4 and businesses $15 per dumpster per month.

"We believe that refuse collection is an indispensable public health service which benefits the entire community," League President Terry Shank said.

"Like fire and police protection, refuse collection is a basic and fundamental service and, like them, it should be funded entirely from taxes, as has been done in the past."

The City Council had implemented the refuse collection fees along with the 1986-87 budget to offset the loss of approximately $750,000 in Revenue Sharing mandated by Gramm-

An unidentified worker was electrocuted today when he became tangled in power lines while working near a truck at the Ayden Nitrogen Co. on South Lee Street, authorities said.

Betty Wilson, administrative assistant to the Pitt County fire marshal, said rescue personnel arrived at the plant at about 11:55 a.m. No other details were available.

EGG HUNT — Members of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realty sponsored an Easter egg hunt and picnic Monday at Elm Street Park for special education students in the Pitt County schools. According to Lyle Davis, coordinator of the hunt, about 150 children participated in the hunt. About 2,500 eggs were distributed and, of course, the Easter Bunny was on hand for entertainment. According to Ms. Davis, about 15 local real estate firms helped in the third annual event. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Second ECU Election Ruled Out

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University will not have a second election for the office of Student Government Association president, a review board decided Monday during a closed meeting that lasted about five hours.

SGA presidential candidate Steven Pierce and vice presidential candidate Rick Brown protested the irregularities in the procedures.

The pair lost to presidential candidate Scott Thomas and vice presidential candidate Dillon Kalkhurst, but both vice presidential candidates were disqualified because they failed to meet candidate requirements.

The review board "had three questions to look at" in deciding whether to grant another election, said Mark Heizer, SGA attorney general.

He said the questions were: "Did violations in fact occur, did violations make the election unfair for one candidate or another, and should another election be given?"

"The board did find violations mainly stemming from the election rules," Heizer said. But, "while there were some infractions of rules, no one benefitted" was the conclusion made by the board. "Everybody lost."

Election rules are "too vague and left too many loopholes for interpretation," Heizer said. Therefore, a committee with two faculty advisers has been established to amend the rules.

Arguments were heard from Pierce, Brown and the Election Committee, Heizer said. It was previously decided that each side would have 30 minutes to present their cases, but the time element was eliminated for more complete reports.

"The chancellor may review this case," he said. "I would hope (Pierce and Brown) would let him review it. It would let him in on student affairs."

Pierce said "we want him (the chancellor) to review it. We're going to let him take a look at it."

"It's (the board's decision) illogical," he said, because it finds both candidates affected by the procedures. But, "we will accept it for right now."

This is by no means the last straw," Pierce said. The emphasis, however, will not be on another election, "but on getting changes done that affect the minority students. It's the same thing, but a different approach."

"We've been suffering a long time. I think this election has tipped us off," he said. "We don't feel like we've lost. The students are motivated. The administration is listening to us now; the students are listening to us now. This is just the beginning."

Pierce said his supporters will be concentrating on the upcoming vice presidential and treasurer elections to be conducted this semester. "We have a few candidates" in the race.

Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835. CORRESPONDENCE WITH PRISONER?

My brother who is in prison and has asked me to locate a pen pal organization to set up correspondence for him and other prisoners. Many men he has met in prison receive no visitors and no mail. If there is such an organization, please let me know. P.L.

I am an inmate at Indiana State Prison. My mind is a mass of confusion and frustration. I have been here more than 2½ years and have received no mail. It hurts to see other inmates getting mail from family and friends when my name is never called. Can anyone help? E.R.

Hotline knows of only one organization which sets up pen pal correspondence between prisoners and volunteer letter writers on the outside. This is Prison Fellowship, a Christian organization founded and headed by Charles Colson of Watergate fame. PF serves prisoners with activities from seminars and Bible study programs to criminal justice reform. If there are other pen pal organizers for prisoners that appear reliable, we will be glad to let it be known in a future item.

Prison Fellowship's pen pal program address is March-up Program, P.O. Box 17500, Washington, D.C. 20041-0500. Any prisoner and any volunteer may contact this address.

Each volunteer requesting to be part of the pen pal program will be sent information on a prisoner in another state who has requested a pen pal. It is suggested that each volunteer write about himself or herself, giving age, occupation, hobbies and special interests. He or she is encouraged to share about everyday activities, things that will be interesting to the prisoner whose own daily life experiences are so limited.

The volunteer is encouraged to write regularly — as often as every two weeks. He is advised not to send money nor gifts, only friendly letters and perhaps clippings and pamphlets. He is warned not to allow the prisoner to enroll him into legal matters or disputes. Any time the volunteers wishes, he may end the correspondence by informing the inmate he is doing so. If he wishes, he may then request to be matched with another prisoner.

For information on this and other Prison Fellowship programs, write the organization in care of the mailing address given above.

School Board Gets Reports On Instructional Support

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Instructional support services for the school system were discussed at a workshop session of the Pitt County Board of Education Monday. Coordinators of the various services discussed the programs offered students.

Mary Alice Yarbrough, coordinator of programs for academically gifted exceptional children, said she is working with a task force to provide a consistent program for the above-average students in the system.

"There has been inconsistent delivery and no real program," Mrs. Yarbrough said. "Where you live determines the program."

A total of 1,137 academically talented students have been identified in the county schools, based on state guidelines. Academically gifted programs offered in the school system include the Triad Enrichment Program, Experiential Opportunities in Defining the Unlimited Self (EX-ODUS), Strategic Reasoning, Honors Medical School Science Program and academically gifted classes.

Task force members Beth Ward, principal at G.R. Whitfield School, and Dr. Tom Irons discussed their committee's work with the board.

Mrs. Yarbrough said that the task force recommendations include expanding TEP programs to all kindergarten through third grade schools, establishing a center in each of the five attendance areas which fourth- and fifth-grade gifted students would attend one day each week for enrichment activities, and structured minicourses for sixth-through eighth-grade students.

Jean Averette, coordinator of programs for handicapped exceptional students, discussed the services offered students in each handicapped area in each grade level in the school system. Special classes are offered for students who are autistic, behaviorally and emotionally handicapped, hearing impaired, mentally handicapped, speech and language impaired, visually impaired, orthopedically impaired and multihandicapped, as well as students with learning disabilities.

State, federal and local funds are provided for the programs.

A total of 821 handicapped students are served in the regular classroom with consultative support and 579 students are in a regular classroom with a special resource class. Students in separate self-contained classes number 426, and 38 students are in a special school facility (Agnes Fullilove). Three students are in the residential Earth program and eight students are served from the home or hospital.

She said the Homebound Program is for any student who remains out of school with a health problem for four weeks or more, and the Hospital Program is for students in the hospital for two weeks or more.

Arlene Ferren, coordinator of Pupil Services, told the board about counseling services, high school registration, hearing boards and leadership programs in the schools.

She noted that guidance services are located in all high schools, 13 elementary, middle and junior high schools and four primary schools in the system. The purposes of counseling, she said, are developmental, preventive and remedial guidance and service areas include student appraisal, career development, consultation, placement, counseling and exceptional children.

Mrs. Ferren said counselors assist high school students in selecting the courses they elect to take through open registration. "The students are encouraged to register for the highest academic level," she said.

She said that summer school courses will be available for grades three through eight, for high school students and for students who need additional assistance in English classes.

Mrs. Ferren noted that the in-school suspension program has improved attendance. "There is less out-of-school suspension," she said. The program, which is an extension of the classroom, also has allowed for individual attention to be given the students being disciplined.

During the 1985-1986 school year, 194 scholarships worth a total of $800,000 were presented to Pitt County students, she said.

Leadership activities coordinated by Pupil Services include the Legislator's School for students in grades seven through 12 and a local Teen Leadership Institute for students in grades 10 and 11 co-sponsored with the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Ferren and Mrs. Yarbrough are in the process of writing a proposal for a leadership project for younger students.

Coordinator of Testing Richard Preston said that the county has "an extensive testing program" which includes the California Achievement Test; the North Carolina Writing Assessment Test; the Minimum Skills Diagnostic tests; the North Carolina Competency Test in reading, mathematics and writing; the North Carolina Science and Social Studies test; the Test of Cognitive Skills, and the Pre-Competency Test.

The testing coordinator said that during the 1986-1987 school year, 32,750 local and state tests were administered to Pitt County students as a part of the regular testing program, and over 200 tests were given for placement purposes.

Preston said the procedures for the tests are set forth by the State Department of Public Instruction, with guidelines by the Office of Civil Rights. The test administrators must be trained to properly conduct the testing.

Freager Sanders, coordinator of compensatory education, said he is in charge of "federally funded programs designed to meet the special educational needs of educationally and culturally deprived children."

"All students don't have the same background," he said. "The compensatory education supplements basic education."

A total of $1.75 million is available for the compensatory programs in Pitt County. The funds are distributed among 51 teachers and four aides.

He noted that the funds for the program come from Congress, through the United States Office of Education to the State Education Agency and then to the Local Education Agency. Teachers, parents, students, administrators and members of the community then decide how the local funds will be used.

Compensatory education takes place in the regular classroom, as well as in laboratory instruction or a special classroom, Saunders said.

Alumni Association

The Pitt County chapter of the North Carolina Central Alumni Association will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the home of John Green, 204 Trey Drive in the Lake Ellsworth subdivision.

Employees' Donation

Employees of Empire Brush Co. donated $400 to fund a library of health promotion computer software at the Adventures in Health Center to be opened at Greenville's River Park North in early 1988.

Marijuana Garden

ARCHDALE, N.C. (AP) — An Archdale policeman thought he was answering a breaking-and-entering call at an outbuilding, but he found a well-tended indoor marijuana garden with a street value of $325,000.

Archdale Police Chief Darrell Arney said Officer Ken Rhems and Randolph Deputy Carl Robbins responded to a call at about 9:30 p.m. Saturday. The caller had said it appeared someone was trying to break into an outbuilding between a residence and an apartment complex.

Officers reportedly found 324 marijuana plants growing in a greenhouse.

Ayden Board OKs Zone For Loading

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — The Ayden Board of Commissioners voted to create a loading and unloading zone at an alley on Third Street during its regular board meeting Monday night.

After studying areas bounded by Second and Third streets, Police Chief Tim Phillips said a building housing Van Cleve Systems and a print shop "is the only building that does not have ready access for loading. Every other building has access in the rear from an alley."

Merchants Wally Cleve and Bob Long said they have been loading and unloading from the front of their businesses on Lee Street and in the alley near the Fire-Rescue Building. They agreed to share the zone, which has a 30-minute limit and is subject to review if the merchants leave the area.

Commissioners accepted a low bid of $64,530 from Greenville Paving and Construction Co. to repair Blount, Jackson, Thrower and Joyner streets. The combined funding of the Community Development Block Grant and local funds will provide curbs, gutters and necessary piping to get adequate drainage.

Blount Street is not a target area to receive funding from the CDBG funds, but a program amendment will be sought to include the street, Russell said.

A low bid of $4,452 submitted by J&J Floor Specialist was accepted for repairs on the old middle school gym floor. There is about $2,796 in the Community Development Block Grant funds that will be appropriated to the recreation budget in helping to finance the repairs to the building.

The town received $1,287 as final payment of Revenue Sharing Reserve Funds. A hearing to appropriate the funds will be scheduled. "We already have the money," said Town Manager Donald Russell.

"But, we must have a public hearing" to get input on how to spend it.

Russell recommended the funds be transferred into the General Fund.

An ordinance was adopted to not allow parking on N.C. 11 within the town limits. The Department of Transportation will be responsible for erecting signs in compliance with the ordinance.

During the first of two public hearings on the CDBG application, Melinda Wall of Talbert and Cox Associates discussed five target areas for the program. The lowest incomes coupled with the most need would make the best target area, she said.

Applications for federal CDBG funds are ranked through categories such as severity of needs, the benefits, local commitment of funds and treatment of needs. Items such as water and sewer needs get higher points than repairing streets, she said.

Also the standards for redeveloping homes with CDBG will be lowered to Section 8 standards as opposed to the standards of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Ms. Wall said.

"Section 8 will make them structurally sound," she said. But, "you don't have to weatherize" by underpinning or insulating, and cosmetic features would not be included. "That's about $800 a house" that would be saved, Ms. Wall said.

The second public hearing will be scheduled after the application has begun its development stages.

A public hearing on the annexation of Carmichael's Trailer Park will be held during the board's regular meeting May 11.

The commissioners reappointed Donnie Skinner, Bruce Cox, Margie Hart and J.L. Hufham to the Planning Board, and Warren Kinlaw will serve as chairman to the Election Board where J.R. Lowry and Burt Tripp will serve.

Out damned spot ...

Shakespeare said it in Macbeth. Now it has applied to that garbage barge at Morehead City.

The barge pulled in with New York City garbage looking for a North Carolina home.

The owner had brought it to North Carolina in hopes of burying it in Jones County.

The state said 'No, thank you.' A Carteret County judge approved the state's request for a temporary restraining order which blocked the unloading of the vessel. It was ordered to move on.

We can't think of a more appropriate action for our state. Even now North Carolina is wrestling with the problems of disposing of its own garbage — and we have some knowledge of what is included in that. Scows of garbage which come in from elsewhere are unknown quantities. We have no idea of what is in them and how it will affect our environment.

The populous areas of the northeast could come to view the sparsely populated sections of eastern North Carolina as ideal places to send their garbage. We should, and have, said 'no' to that.

The Down East land is only a little above sea level and we have no understanding of what dumping of large amounts of garbage will do to our waterways.

Garbage is a fact of modern living. The more population in a given area the more garbage will be created. There will have to be another way to get rid of it than dumping it in North Carolina, however.

Award Deserved

The North Carolina Chapter of the American Planning Association has given its Citizen's Award to the Greenville Medical District Land Use Study Committee.

We add our congratulations to this group of citizens who gave its time to a unique project.

The award was presented by the 522-member state planners association at Chapel Hill Thursday.

William A. McNeil, president of the N.C. Chapter of the American Planners Association, made the presentation.

"This is our way of recognizing individuals, groups and planning programs which have shown a commitment to excellence," he said.

The Medical District Land Use Study Committee developed a plan for a 5,400-acre park designed for orderly development of the medical area east of the city. The committee submitted the plan in December 1985.

The plan itself is unique. The area had seized upon an opportunity to do what few communities have ever had the opportunity to do.

This committee put in long hours on a volunteer basis to do its work. It was well known here what they had accomplished. Now their efforts have been recognized by the professional planners of North Carolina. It makes us proud.

No Repeats

Workmen are carrying out the grisly task of righting a sunken British ferry off Zeebrugge, Belgium and identifying the dead.

The ferry Herald of Free Enterprise sunk as it was leaving port on March 6. An estimated 195 persons were killed as the 7,951 ton ferry capsized and many bodies have been removed following the uprighting of the boat.

Divers believe still another 21 bodies remained in the submerged lower decks. They cannot be reached until the vessel can be pumped out.

The teams working on the retrieval efforts said they were moved by some of the scenes they saw below. It was a rare journey into the tomb of many people who died when the vessel suddenly sunk.

Even now the cause of the disaster is not known, although investigation is under way and there is no visible damage to the boat which would appear to cause it to sink.

The death and sorrow of this ferry disaster can't be undone now. They should, however, cause all nations to carefully examine their laws and regulations involving safety of ferries to make such vessels as safe as possible. Passengers rarely think of relatively short ferry trips as potential rides to disaster. It happened in this case and we should do all we can to determine that it doesn't happen again.

Today's Thought

April 15 looms large to millions of people who have yet to file income tax returns. Then there are those other millions of citizens who can sit back and smile at this time of year. Their returns are already in.

U.S. Should Aim Outrage At Itself

Members of Congress have worked themselves into a lather over revelations that security at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow has been hopelessly compromised, and that it will take at least five years and millions of taxpayer dollars to put things right. Even then we won't be entirely sure that American secrets are safe from the eyes and ears of the KGB.

As Secretary of State George P. Shultz left Washington for this week's round of arms-control talks in Moscow, Republicans and Democrats on Capitol Hill were fighting to see who could make the most pugnacious demands for retaliation.

By a large bipartisan vote, the Senate urged President Reagan to call off Shultz's Moscow trip until U.S. diplomatic "facilities there are deemed secure." The President wisely rejected the advice, but pitched in with a statement of his own calling the Soviet penetration of the embassy "outrageous."

It's outrageous, all right, but our anger should be directed more at ourselves than at the Soviets. After all, the KGB was only doing its job — which is more than you can say for the Marines who were supposed to be guarding the embassy and for responsible government officials whose relaxed attitude toward security set the tone.

A whole bundle of investigations are under way to pin down the damage, but the consensus among experts is that we have experienced an intelligence disaster.

Two Marines are accused of permitting Soviet agents to enter the most sensitive areas of the embassy, where they purportedly obtained access to secret files and communications and presumably planted additional listening devices.

The embassy walls are assumed to have so many ears that two visiting members of Congress were advised last week to communicate by writing on erasable children's slates. It is embarrassing, to say the least, that a special van had to be brought in to assure Shultz of secure communications with Washington during his Moscow visit.

The innards of a new but as yet unoccupied U.S. Embassy in Moscow are said to be so studded with hidden microphones and transmitters that the building is like one giant antenna. At best, corrections will cost millions of dollars. The $190 million structure may have to be abandoned.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd sees "a textbook case in incompetence" by the administration. The incompetence is beyond dispute, but the fault is shared by Reagan's predecessors.

Each side was allowed to build a new embassy in the other's capital under terms of a U.S.-Soviet agreement signed in 1972, when Richard M. Nixon was president. But as early as 1966, when Lyndon B. Johnson was president and the deal was in the discussion stage, the National Security Agency warned that the Soviets should not be permitted to build on a site suitable for electronic eavesdropping on U.S. government telephone conversations.

The warning was ignored. The Soviets were allowed to build on Mount Alto, the second-highest point in Washington, which is ideally suited for the interception of microwave telephone conversations from Congress, the White House and the Pentagon.

In contrast, to quote Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., "The new U.S. Embassy is being built in a swamp surrounded by buildings controlled by the KGB."

Washington allowed the new U.S. Embassy to be built by Soviet workers without thorough American inspection. But the Soviets, according to an American architect who worked on the project, made meticulous inspections of everything that went into their new facility in Washington, including X-rays of steel girders. They rejected building materials fabricated outside the complex. When at least one "bug" was found, they began searching every brick that went into the structure.

The Soviets have not yet occupied the new embassy offices — they can't, under the agreement, until our embassy in Moscow is ready for occupancy. But Russian diplomats long ago moved into living quarters at the site, and the Soviets already are using equipment installed atop the residence to eavesdrop on telephone conversations in the nation's capital.

Hart Benefits From Crowding Field

WASHINGTON — The entry last week of Sens. Albert Gore Jr., Tenn., and Paul Simon, Ill., into the 1988 Democratic presidential race all but wipes out the chance for anyone to emerge as former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart's principal challenger before next February's opening round of caucuses and primaries, according to Democratic campaign strategists.

In the short term, this crowding of the field and delaying of the day of reckoning is a plus for Hart, who launched his second bid for the presidency Monday as the only Democratic candidate with a national base.

It is a setback for candidates such as Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., Del., Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, Mo., and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who had hoped that early organizing would enable them to steal a march out of the pack — and sooner rather than later.

"The big struggle those guys now face is the one that Gary faced in 1983 — how do you get a clear shot at an audience in the months before Iowa and New Hampshire?" said Paul Tully, Hart's political director. "With one more here, one more there, it's that much trickier."

There are now eight candidates for the Democratic nomination and a few more waiting in the wings. What stands out most about the Class of '88 is what Biden calls "our stark similarities."

All either came to Washington or won their first statewide races in the 1970s. In 1988, all will stress education, arms control and a call to selflessness and national community. All will talk of balancing social concern against fiscal responsibility. And aside from Simon (age 58) and Jesse L. Jackson, all are "new" Democrats who believe that while government has a positive role to play, it cannot perfect human nature.

"This is truly the year of the generational break in Democratic Party politics," said David Doak, a Biden adviser. The absence of a major cleavage within the party is another advantage for Hart; the fight for the 1988 nomination will be waged on essentially the same ideological turf he laid claim to in 1984. Still, Hart faces major hurdles. One is the near certainty that mass participation, media-based nomination politics sooner or later produces a "Mr. X" — a candidate who breaks out of a big field to challenge the front-runner.

When this happens, Hart will not have the kind of institutional support that Walter F. Mondale used in 1984 to fend off Hart's challenge. Nor is it clear whether he will have been able by next year to erase the character and personality questions that linger from 1984. Here are some of the ways that the entry of Gore and Simon might scramble the situation:

Gore is hoping that the same stirrings of regionalism that led Southern party leaders to schedule their primaries on a single date in 1988 will lead them to embrace him as the South's favorite son. At the least, he provides a place for Southern leaders to "park" until the race clarifies. Tennessee Gov. Ned McWhorter, D, and state Democratic chairman Richard Lodge have begun working their counterparts in the region.

However, the candidacy of Gore, 39, will increase the pressure on Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, 40, to jump into the race. He is expected to decide within a month.

If Gore or Clinton or both are able to amass early southern support, they undercut the rationale for Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., to reassess later this year and conclude that the party needs him. They also would take a bite out of Biden. Except for Jackson, Biden has campaigned more extensively in the South than the other non-Southern, and he had hoped to make early inroads there.

Strength For Today

It was said of the English man of letters, Dr. Samuel Johnson, that upon entering the drawing rooms of his friends, he immediately went about straightening the pictures on the walls. He could not engage in conversation if a single picture was hanging at an awkward angle.

There are people today who make themselves a nuisance by doing very much the same thing as Dr. Johnson did. They may not go about straightening pictures on the walls, but they intrude themselves into the personal affairs of their neighbors and try to straighten up everything that does not please them.

One of the great certainties of life is that people will conduct themselves as they see fit, regardless of how others feel about it. So let us allow people to live their lives as they want to. They alone will be responsible for the outcome on Judgement Day.

The Risks And Benefits Of Verification

Analysis

The superpowers have left the most difficult issue for last in the negotiations over intermediate-range nuclear missiles — how to verify reductions and provide confidence in compliance. The stakes involved are high. If properly devised, an INF verification package can facilitate comprehensive limits on mobile and cruise missiles. Poorly drafted monitoring provisions can compromise U.S. and industrial security and generate numerous compliance controversies.

The Reagan administration is disadvantaged in this negotiation since American officials have no experience in intrusive verification. Nevertheless, it must try to negotiate a monitoring system that works immediately and effectively.

The administration has proposed the most intrusive monitoring system since the Treaty of Versailles was imposed on a defeated Germany. It calls for "cradle to grave" monitoring procedures for mobile and cruise missiles. Data would be exchanged on current inventories, and procedures would be devised for the dismantlement, destruction or conversion of existing missiles and their launchers.

Inspections are proposed for missile deployment, production and storage areas, along with a permanent presence of perhaps 100 inspectors for key locations, such as missile production and assembly facilities. Any building large enough to store a cruise missile secretly would, however, be fair game to inspection teams. The administration believes the Soviets will not request inspections at particularly sensitive sites unrelated to an INF agreement in order to avoid similar challenge inspections in return. In effect, the president's advisers are counting on the country they distrust most to behave with the utmost propriety.

The key question that must be asked about these verification provisions, like the broader agreement they are to serve, is whether their benefits exceed their risks. The primary risks of intrusive verification involve the potential compromise of national and industrial secrets to Soviet inspectors who would have at least the same access rights as U.S. teams in the U.S.S.R. Conventional wisdom holds that the Soviets would have the most to lose in this exchange, but current espionage problems suggest otherwise: Soviet inspectors may have less to learn than their U.S. counterparts because of our open society, but they also may have more opportunities to expand their knowledge.

Another potential cost that comes with intrusive verification is the possible misuse of agreed procedures to frustrate the agreement's implementation and to block subsequent accords. Powerful officials on either side could trigger capricious requests to visit sensitive facilities, requests that are likely to be denied outright or frustrated on the ground. Even routine inspections may generate ambiguous data and false alarms that could quickly be labeled as violations by those least enthusiastic about the agreement. In sum, any inspection regime will provide new opportunities for hard-liners in Moscow and Washington to create draining political impasses.

Against these potential risks, two benefits from on-site inspections are conceivable: the United States should gain added knowledge of Soviet military practices, and the superpowers might be able to build confidence by using agreed inspection procedures to resolve compliance concerns.

The weakest part of the administration's verification package relates to monitoring Soviet missile inventories. Even highly intrusive inventory controls cannot ensure confidence in Soviet compliance for missiles that have already been produced in large quantities: American inspectors could visit countless facilities in the Soviet Union and still not know if missiles were successfully hidden elsewhere. Why, then, provide the Soviets with assured access to an unlimited number of U.S. and European installations?

The "hidden" inventory problem is troublesome, but at least it fades over time, as missiles approach the end of their shelf life. In the meantime, the best insurance against surprise appears to be warm U.S. production lines and other congressionally supported safeguards against Soviet cheating.

Unlike inventory controls, a production monitoring system has great promise, if it is implemented properly. Production monitoring of key components and final missile assembly would make inventory controls superfluous for new weapon systems; it would also open up the possibility of more wide-ranging limits over cruise and mobile missiles. For example, if the two sides could verify compliance with agreed annual production totals for cruise missiles, they may not need to concern themselves with whether they were sea- or ground-launched, or with the warheads they carry; these matters would be properly left to the sound judgment of each side's procedures to monitor production of solid rocket motors, and final missile assembly could reduce the uncertainties associated with a START agreement covering mobile missiles.

Effective production monitoring procedures would be easier to devise than inventory controls, since there are fewer facilities to monitor. Controls would not be easy to negotiate, however, since familiar trade-offs are involved between the desire for intrusiveness at Soviet plants and the need to protect sensitive manufacturing techniques and weapons design data at home. The best solution might be to supplement space surveillance with data exchanges and on-site sensors to monitor production rates outside plant gates.

Routine inspections to maintain this equipment would be required, but challenge inspections inside factories may not be particularly helpful unless inspectors know precisely where to look and have unlimited access — something both sides may not be prepared to accept. Besides, significant cheating is more likely at covert production facilities than at heavily observed sites. For these and other concerns, an effective consultative mechanism would be required to handle the inevitable compliance questions that would arise.

Arrangements of this kind would be unprecedented, but they are possible if the Reagan administration receives wide-scale domestic support for them. Even so, monitoring uncertainties will be greater than in the SALT agreements, particularly for covert production facilities of cruise missiles. However improbable such plants might be, the United States would still be better off relying on congressionally approved safeguards against Soviet cheating than on the troublesome and unenforceable concept of challenge inspections.

The pitfalls hidden in the Reagan administration's INF verification package are formidable, but so too are the potential benefits. We can weigh these considerations with far less rancor than in our domestic political debates over SALT or the Strategic Defense Initiative. Conservatives deeply worried about Soviet espionage can find common ground with liberals leary of the Reagan administration's intentions on at least two points: it would not be wise to rely heavily on on-site inspections, and production monitoring is essential for weapons that are difficult to count once they are deployed.

Collard Greens, A Glass Of Milk ... And A Shad Boat

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Before the 1987 General Assembly heads for home, it may have decreed that the quintessential Tar Heel's favorite pastime is lunching on collard greens and milk while fishing in a shad boat.

The Legislature, which already has designated everything from a state mammal (gray squirrel) to a state rock (granite), approved Monday a bill that would establish the shad boat as the state boat.

Bills pending in the House and Senate would make the collard green the official state vegetable. And Monday night, a Senate bill was filed for introduction to make milk North Carolina's official beverage.

"I'm certainly for milk," said Senate Majority Leader Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, co-sponsor of the bill. He joked that lawmakers appeared "well on the way" to proclaiming an entire state meal — "which we will probably eat in a shad boat."

The shad boat bill sailed through a wave of tongue-in-cheek questions, getting 36-4 approval and setting a course for the House.

"We have a state bird, state flower, state shell, a state gemstone, a state tree," complained Sen. Mary Seymour, D-Guilford, who voted against the bill. "I will have to think long and hard before I vote for establishing ... a state boat."

Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, said the shad boat was deserving of the honor — even though few still exist. Manufacture of the craft ended in the 1930s and their use died out over the next 20 years, he acknowledged.

Basnight said the shad boat was developed on Roanoke Island in the 1870s for use in the upper sounds of North Carolina, "where there were lots of shallow areas and weather conditions subject to rapid change."

He praised the boat's "maneuverability, sturdiness and speed," describing it as 22 to 33 feet long, made of native cypress, juniper and white cedar. "Its long and widespread use have made an important contribution to the economy of this state and its rich maritime history."

Smiling broadly, Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, said she had no doubt about the shad boat's "remarkable role in our history," but wondered why an obsolete vessel should be the official Tar Heel craft.

Basnight said the designation would "preserve its history for mankind and future generations."

Sen. Charles Hippy, D-Haywood, referring to the collard bill, suggested that the Legislature might kill two birds with one stone by stipulating that the official shad boat be painted "collard green."

The milk bill says "experts in health and nutrition proclaim milk as 'Nature's most nearly perfect food'" and that North Carolinians drink 143 million gallons each year.

The state has about 1,000 dairy farmers who produce over 179 million gallons of milk annually, the bill says.

"The delectable, pearly passion of the palate contributes to the betterment of the life, health and enjoyment of all the citizens of our great state," the bill says.

Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, grinned and shook his head when shown the bill. "This is getting to be a silly session," he said.

Dole Says U.S. 'Sloppily Negligent' In Protecting Against Soviet Spying

Sen. ROBERT DOLE

RALEIGH (AP) — While justifiably angry about Soviet bugging of the United States embassy in Moscow, the U.S. government should be equally upset with itself, Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole says.

"I think instead of blaming the Russians, we ought to blame ourselves in this instance," Dole said Monday during a visit to North Carolina to drum up support for his budding presidential campaign. "It appears we were pretty sloppily negligent in Moscow in a lot of ways. ... Somebody's been asleep at the switch for a long time."

Dole, the unsuccessful Republican vice presidential nominee in 1976, said at a news conference that the embassy problem underscored the need for any arms-control pact to provide for "absolute verification" because of the Soviets' tendency to cheat.

But he said Secretary of State George Shultz was correct to proceed with this week's talks despite the spying controversy.

A Kansan who has yet officially to announce his bid for the 1988 GOP nomination, Dole said he was confident he would do well on "Super

But he said the decisions by North Carolina and other states to schedule their primaries earlier next year had made victory in the Iowa caucuses and the New Hampshire primary even more crucial.

"If you have momentum (going into Super Tuesday), you're going to have lots of media coverage ... that you don't have to buy," Dole said at a news conference.

Dole said his experience in Congress and his conservative record qualify him for the presidency, describing himself as "a survivor" whose vision for the nation is "to some extent an extension of the Reagan programs, but at the same time recognizing that as we move ahead we have other problems" such as AIDS and drug abuse.

Dole declined to speculate on how a favorite-son candidacy by Sen. Jesse Helms might affect the GOP nomination picture. Helms has not said he is running but his political organization is soliciting donations to measure his support.

"I haven't tried to assess that," Dole said, adding that he had not spoken with Helms about the matter.

Dole, the latest of at least eight likely presidential contenders to visit North Carolina in recent weeks, stayed just long enough for his news conference and an hour-long reception. Some 70 state GOP activists attended, including state party chairman Jack Hawke, former Gov. Jim Holshouser, several state legislators and Joyce Glass, president of the North Carolina Federation of Republican Women.

Dole said he planned to open an exploratory office in North Carolina in about two weeks.

Hawke, who said he had attended appearances by other Republican hopefuls and had not committed himself, called the presidential race "very fluid."

"It's hard for me to even tell who's in the lead," Hawke said. "I guess I'd have to say it's the vice president (George Bush), with Dole moving up on him."

Dole said he believed he could unite the feuding traditional and New Right wings of the Republican Party, although some conservatives have described him as too moderate.

"I think I have an appropriate, conservative record on all the issues that they seem to be concerned with," Dole said.

He declined to criticize Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., who was attacked by state Republicans for switching his vote on President Reagan's veto of a highway funding bill.

"He had a lot of pressure, let's face it," Dole said. "Nobody's perfect in our business. I think he (Sanford) is a good, decent person."

Dole also predicted the Iran-contra affair would have little impact on Bush's prospects and fallout from the controversy over television evangelism will have little impact on Robertson.

"You've got Oral Roberts ... I'm working on him for my finance chairman," Dole joked.

Tuesday" in early March 1988, when at least a dozen Southern states will have presidential primary elections.

He called North Carolina "an opportunity state for us," noting that his wife, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, is a Salisbury native. "I think the Republican race is wide open."

Ex-White Patriots Convicted

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — Former White Patriot Party chaplain Stephen Miller and former party member Robert Jackson have been convicted of conspiracy in a plot that involved robbery, stolen munitions and the slaying of a civil rights attorney.

A third man being tried on the same charges, 19-year-old Anthony Wydra, was acquitted Monday.

"The White Patriot Party has always felt that it had a sympathetic following in eastern North Carolina," U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said after the verdict was announced. "This jury's verdict repudiates that view."

"Today's convictions prove that the white supremacist movement is not alive and well in North Carolina," Currin said. "If we had lost this case, it would have been a real shot in the arm for the neo-Nazi movement."

The six-man, six-woman U.S. District Court jury handed down its decision midway through its second day of deliberations.

Miller, 36, of Fayetteville, could be sentenced to 25 years in prison and a $30,000 fine for his convictions for conspiracy to obtain illegal weapons, possession of an illegal machine gun and possession of an illegal silencer, Currin said. Robert Jackson, 25, of Oklahoma, who has not appeared during the week-long trial, could be sentenced to five years and a $10,000 fine for his conviction of conspiracy to obtain an illegal weapon.

With his tattered Bible resting before him, Miller stared straight ahead as the verdicts were read. Wydra, who carried his own well-thumbed Bible, flashed a quick smile to his mother, Peggy, who sobbed with joy in the audience.

Wydra, who is Jackson's half brother, quickly left the courtroom after the verdict, saying, "No one can take my Christian beliefs away."

"My guess is they acquitted Wydra because they felt he was a follower taking orders from his older brother," said Currin.

Jackson was tried in his absence under a federal law used for the first time in North Carolina, Currin said. The law allows such prosecutions when a defendant willingly flees when the trial date has been set, he said.

Much of the testimony came from two other former White Patriot Party members who were indicted but agreed to plea bargains.

Currin said a date has not been set for sentencing.

Estranged Husband Kills Wife, Children

LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP) — Albert Junior Goldston apparently reloaded his sawed-off 12-gauge shotgun at least once while killing his estranged wife, his two children and himself Sunday, authorities said.

Seven shotgun shell casings were found in his wife's apartment following the shooting, Laurinburg Police Chief N.W. Quick said Monday.

The 40-year-old truck driver's gun with the pistol grip can carry six shells, including one in the chamber, Quick said.

Annie Ruth Goldston, 23, who had just walked home from church services a few blocks away, "probably ran into the bathroom, trying to get away," Quick said. Her husband shot her at least three times, and she fell fully clothed into the bathtub, Quick said.

Goldston apparently then shot his 5-year-old son, Albert, and his 4-year-old daughter, Shalanda, in the hallway where they were found side by side, Quick said. Then Goldston apparently reloaded and walked to the living room where he shot himself in the head, Quick said.

Whether a seventh shell may be accounted for by an additional wound in Mrs. Goldston may be determined by an autopsy that was being conducted by the state Medical Examiner's office at Chapel Hill, authorities said.

Goldston, who lived with his son in High Point, and his wife, who lived with her daughter in Laurinburg, had been separated for more than five months, Quick said.

"They had differences over who was to have the kids," Quick said.

Chadbourn Council Reinstates Manager

CHADBOURN, N.C. (AP) — Town Manager Steve Wyatt, who has been reinstated with back pay after being fired in what some council members said was a racially motivated dismissal, says he'll be glad to get back to work, but doesn't plan to change his management style.

"I've learned as much in the past five weeks as I've learned in my whole life," Wyatt said Monday. "I'm sure that's going to have some effect but, consciously, I just want the town to have the best government possible."

"I'll perform my job in the same manner I've always performed it, which is the right way," he said. "With God's guidance, I predict for the town an era of harmony and unprecedented progress."

Council members, after meeting in closed session for about 10 minutes, voted unanimously Monday to reinstate Wyatt with back pay and no loss of benefits.

"My first thought is, I just thank God. I think Chadbourn is taking a great step forward," Wyatt said.

"I don't have any animosity against anybody," he said. "What good does that do?"

Council members voted along racial lines last month to suspend, and then fire, Wyatt, 27. White council members said Wyatt had not consulted them sufficiently in personnel matters. But the council's black members charged that Wyatt, who is white, was fired because he planned to appoint Kelly Rogers police chief.

Mayor Dick Tyler, who also is white but did not have a vote on the council, supported Wyatt. He resigned the morning after Wyatt was fired.

In an effort to show their moves weren't racially motivated, the white council members successfully moved to appoint Rogers police chief moments after firing Wyatt on March 19.

Wyatt, whose lawyer had threatened to sue if Wyatt was not reinstated or paid a fully year's salary of $23,000 as compensation, said he would return to work today.

School Merger Proposed

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Greensboro and High Point Boards of Education, trying to sidestep the Guilford County school board's opposition to merger, have proposed expanding their boundaries and uniting the two cities into a metropolitan school system of about 37,000 students.

The proposal approved Monday would let Guilford remain a separate system. But, by letting the two cities expand their school district lines, it would strip the county system of some prime tax-producing territory, take 6,000-8,000 of its students and put them in Greensboro or High Point schools.

Guilford school board Chairman Jim Mebane accused city school and county government officials of "trying to force us to bring about merger," but predicted his board members would refuse to submit.

School officials said they would deliver a resolution to Guilford County legislators today. The resolution, approved unanimously by both boards, asks for a local bill authorizing a study of the proposal.

The two-system proposal comes as the three boards have been meeting regularly for three months to discuss merging the three systems. The county commissioners asked the boards two months ago to devise a plan by Sept. 30 to merge in 1990.

Guilford officials say they will not discuss merger.

Lawyer Indicted

WILMINGTON (AP) — A New Hanover County grand jury Monday returned a 23-count indictment charging former Wilmington lawyer David Rock Whitten with embezzling and obtaining by false pretense more than $800,000.

Most of the charges involve real estate transactions. Whitten is accused of converting to his own use money meant to pay off prior liens on property for sale.

Whitten, who is currently undergoing psychiatric testing in Winston-Salem, was disbarred in January following a two-year investigation by the N.C. State Bar into legal transactions Whitten handled.

Secession

BEECH MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — Beech Mountain Town Council members, meeting in an emergency session Monday, voted against secession from Watauga County — at least for the time being.

Town council members decided there wasn't enough time to drum up the legislative support necessary for passage of a secession bill, Mayor Wilson King said. The General Assembly's deadline for introduction of local bills was today.

"We have decided to make it a long-term project rather than a short-term one," he said of the proposal to change boundary lines to make the entire resort town a part of Avery County.

Three-fourths of Beech Mountain now lies in Watauga County, with the remainder in Avery.

Guards Indicted

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County grand jury indicted a Central Prison guard and a former guard Monday on misdemeanor charges in connection with an inmate's suicide in November.

Former Lt. Bobby W. Birdsong of Raleigh and Sgt. Leamon Jones of Apex were indicted on charges of failing to investigate information concerning the death of William A. Moye, who hanged himself Nov. 1 in a Central Prison cell.

The indictment did not identify the superior officer or the orders the men allegedly failed to follow.

Birdsong, who resigned two weeks after the incident, also was charged with obstructing a State Bureau of Investigation officer by destroying a statement made by another prison guard about the incident.

Inmate Hangs

RALEIGH (AP) — An inmate was found hanging from the bars of his Wake County Jail cell Monday by a guard who was making his regular rounds.

The inmate, identified as Tyrone Quiller, 27, of Raleigh, was in good condition later Monday morning at Wake Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Liz McRoberts.

Quiller tied a strip of bed sheeting to one of the top bars in the jail, tied the other end around his neck and jumped off a cot, Sheriff John Baker said.

Commissioners

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — The Bladen County commissioners, who have been considering at least four plans to redraw their election districts, chose one Monday that black leaders vowed to challenge in court.

The commissioners voted on a plan to increase the board from five to seven members by 1990. It calls for three districts, primarily on existing township lines, with two members elected from each district and one at-large seat.

The proposal must be approved by the General Assembly and by the U.S. Justice Department.

The five county commissioners, all of whom are white, are elected in at-large votes now. Black leaders have said that dilutes their voting strength.

Charged

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A Black Mountain man who was pardoned for one murder and is serving a life sentence for another has been charged in the slayings of an Ohio couple who apparently were robbed and shot as they watched the sunset at an overlook near the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Roy Lee Fox, 50, was transported from Central Prison in Raleigh to Buncombe County Monday, where he was charged with two counts of first-degree murder in the May 1986 deaths of Wesley Mahaffey, 33, and his wife, Bonnie Mahaffey, 29, of Hamilton, Ohio, authorities said.

The Mahaffeyes apparently were spending the last evening of a three-day vacation he had been awarded by his employer at Buzzard Rock, a scenic overlook north of Asheville. They were each shot three times in the head and upper body with a .38-caliber handgun.

Fox was sentenced to life plus 40 years in prison in September after pleading guilty to shooting Morris Sams at a picnic in Alexander, N.C., July 16 and stuffing his body down a storm sewer in Black Mountain.

Fox also was convicted in 1965 and sentenced to two life terms in the burglary-slaying of Ovella Jean Lunsford, who was shot during a break-in at Buncombe County home in November 1964.

On the last day of his term in office in 1984, Gov. Jim Hunt commuted Fox's life sentences and released him from prison as a reward for informing for the FBI, according to Hunt's one-time legal adviser, Jack Cozort.

Record Erased

WILMINGTON (AP) — For most of his adult life, William "Joe" Wright has been at odds with "the system."

But this week, the former Wilmington 10 co-defendant, using a relatively new law, reached into the system on his own behalf and steered it his way. On Monday, New Hanover County Superior Court Judge William Griffin signed an order wiping out the 16-year-old police record that marked the beginning of Wright's tumultuous journey as one of the Wilmington 10.

Wright was among the eight high school students and former students and two activists arrested and charged with burning a building and shooting at emergency crews during racial unrest in Wilmington in 1972. They were put on trial in Pender County, convicted and sent to prison.

In 1976, after a witness for the prosecution testified in a sworn affidavit that he had been coached into giving false testimony, civil and human rights groups throughout the country and abroad rallied around the case as a symbol of racial injustice.

Gov. Jim Hunt, under intense political pressure, commuted the sentences of all 10 in 1978 and 1979.

Greensboro Struggles To Hold On As Mergers Thin Economy

GREENSBORO (AP) — Greensboro prides itself on steady economic growth and high livability ratings, but city leaders are finding themselves helpless victims as Wall Street's merger explosion hits home.

"We can't take this personally," said former Mayor Jim Melvin, president of the Greensboro Development Corp. "It has nothing to do with us. It just so happens that two or three of the most recent large victims of merger mania happened to be in our town."

The city lost two of its most prized corporate residents last year when out-of-state companies bought Southern Life Insurance Co. and Blue Bell. They quickly consolidated operations and moved headquarters to their home offices.

And analysts are predicting that corporate raider Asher Edelman and Dominion Textile Inc. of Montreal will move for control of Burlington Industries.

"Greensboro has grown some very strong, vibrant and marketable companies," said Marc Bush of the Greensboro Area of Commerce. "It's just a fact of life that those companies will be targets of acquisition."

In 1985, R.J. Reynolds Industries, Burlington, Blue Bell, Springs Industries and Fieldcrest Mills Co. were ranked the top five companies in North Carolina and South Carolina by revenue. Burlington, which employs 1,200 people at its Greensboro headquarters, is the only one that hasn't entered a major merger.

"I don't think I can think of any other community hit that quickly by that many major changes," said Robert Goforth, an industrial recruiter for Greenville, S.C.-based CRS Serrine Inc. and former director of industrial development for the North Carolina Department of Commerce.

"It's not rare in this day and age of mergers and acquisitions for that type of thing to happen," he said. "But for it to happen in that sequence is pretty rare."

Combined, the consolidations meant a loss of at least 300 mostly white-collar jobs.

Soon after, Winston-Salem-based RJR Nabisco said it would consolidate and dismiss 280 employees.

RJR Nabisco subsequently delivered the most severe blow yet to the state's economic prestige when it announced it would move its headquarters to Atlanta this year. RJR Nabisco's tobacco subsidiaries still employ 15,000 people in Forsyth County.

The outcome of Washington-based USAir Group's recent purchase of Piedmont Airlines of Winston-Salem, which has about 7,500 employees, is unclear.

"The whole Triad is suffering from the national trend toward consolidation," said Phil Friedman, dean of the University of North Carolina-Greensboro business school. "We're not alone — it's happening to other regions, too. But it's hard when it hits you."

Downtown Greensboro was hit hard by the Blue Bell and Southern Life acquisitions, especially since Southern Life was planning to build a skyscraper.

"The other day, I walked by the Southern Life Center, and I couldn't help but think that at this time last year, I could walk by and say, 'Headquartered there are three of the largest companies in our state,'" Melvin said. "Starting in June, I'll walk by and there won't be any corporate headquarters there."

The city also tried to lure the Carolina-Virginia Fashion Exhibitors downtown by promising a 12-story, $80 million office-showroom, but the group decided to stay in Charlotte. Officials say Greensboro now needs to work even harder to attract diverse, service-oriented businesses. And one element of the city's portfolio must be a healthy downtown with quality hotels, restaurants and retail stores.

Many leaders say the way downtown stands now — and the fact that Greensboro is the only major North Carolina city without a downtown revitalization plan — may cost the area business.

"It already has," Melvin said. "We heard several weeks ago that a major California thrift institution was going to locate a service company on the Eastern Seaboard, so I called to tell them a little about Greensboro."

"The president said he had just visited a place nearby — Charlotte. 'Boy, I was really impressed,' he told me. 'It's one of the most exciting cities I've been to. You can feel the vitality. It's a city on the move.'

"It started sounding to me like he was working for the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce." Downtown Greensboro, Melvin said, "is our wart."

"The first thing the major companies see is the bad," he said. "They see that we've got about eight blocks up here that are underutilized. And they think there must be something wrong."

PLANE BURNS — Firefighters work at the wreckage of a cargo jet that crashed Monday night in a wooded field south of Kansas City International Airport. Three bodies have been recovered and there are reports that a fourth person may have been on board the plane. The aircraft was trying to land in mist and fog when it came down about two miles short of the airport. (AP Laserphoto)

Cargo Jet Crashes In Landing Attempt, Killing Four People

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A cargo jet crashed and exploded in a huge ball of flame, killing all four people aboard, while trying to land at Kansas City International Airport in mist and fog, officials said.

The four-engine Boeing 707, en route from Oklahoma City to Fort Wayne, Ind., smashed into a pasture about 1½ miles southwest of the airport Monday night.

The Buffalo Airways Inc. plane appeared to have been improperly approaching the runway, said Robert Raynesford, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

The bodies of three crew members and a passenger were recovered from the wreck, according to the Platte County Sheriff's office and Harold Knabe, a city Fire Department spokesman. There were no injuries on the ground.

The crash occurred shortly before 10 p.m.

"I went outside and saw a gigantic ball of flame that was twice as high as the highest trees in the area," said Steve Rose, an airline mechanic who lives less than a mile from the crash site.

Rose and another man drove to the wreck and began searching for survivors as the plane burned.

"We ran up and down the side of the plane," Rose said. "The windshields in the cockpit were intact, but we could see there was no movement."

The plane continued burning an hour after the crash, said Charles Fisher, a deputy fire chief. The heat kept ambulance crews away as firefighters battled the blaze. Ten or 15 small explosions rattled the airplane, witnesses said. At the time of the wreck, visibility from the runway was 6,000 feet and cloud cover was 100 feet, Raynesford said.

"I believe the tower tried to alert him that he was starting to fly a little low, then the target disappeared from the radar scope," Raynesford said.

"The plane was making a normal instrument approach to the airport," he said. "Somewhere between 9:55 p.m. and 10 p.m. we couldn't see them on the (radar) scopes anymore."

The victims' names were not released.

City Aviation Director Delbert Karmer identified the cargo as "general freight," but said there were unconfirmed reports the plane also was carrying at least one container of kerosene.

The plane was owned by Buffalo Airways of Waco, Texas, and leased to Fort Wayne-based Burlington Air Express of Fort Wayne, said a Buffalo Airways spokesman in Oklahoma City who refused to give his name.

The plane left Oklahoma City around 8:10 p.m. and stopped in Wichita before heading to Kansas City, the spokesman said.

The fuselage of the aircraft, which crashed just south of a creek, broke into two or three pieces. An engine and a wheel went into the creek.

Hinckley Hearing Interrupted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A courtroom revelation that presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr. exchanged letters with serial killer Theodore Bundy has interrupted a hearing on his bid for an Easter pass from a mental hospital.

A psychiatrist testified Monday that Hinckley showed a lapse of judgment by writing Bundy, who is awaiting execution in Florida for three 1978 murders.

Hinckley, 30, recently wrote Bundy a letter "expressing his sorrow, as I understand it, his feelings of the awful position that Bundy must be in," Dr. Glenn H. Miller told U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker. The hearing will continue Wednesday.

Miller also testified that Hinckley once requested the address of mass killer Charles Manson and he received a letter from Manson follower Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, imprisoned for trying to kill President Ford in 1975.

The surprise testimony brought to a sudden halt the hearing on Hinckley's request for a 12-hour pass from St. Elizabeths Hospital, where he was sent for shooting President Reagan.

Parker abruptly called attorneys to a conference at the bench.

Out of earshot of courtroom spectators there was another revelation.

Hinckley attorney Vincent J. Fuller said, "We learned this morning that there may be two letters in Mr. Hinckley's possession which relate to Bundy that he received from Bundy," according to a transcript of the bench conference.

Federal prosecutors then complained that Miller, who recommended the Easter visit, never told them about the Bundy and Fromme letters or the Manson connection.

The judge angrily noted that "the government shouldn't be surprised, shouldn't be aware of this testimony at the last minute."

Parker ordered the hospital to turn over any evidence it had that would shed light on Miller's testimony.

He also directed Hinckley to produce any pertinent letters in his possession.

The city of Greenville has a 24-hour leash law. Dogs are permitted off personal property as long as they are on a leash or are restrained by some other means of physical control. Dogs found running at large will be picked up and taken to the City-County Animal Shelter on County Home Road.

FAA Confirms Four Reports Involving Near Collisions

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four incidents during a 10-hour period in which commercial jetliners came within 500 feet of small, private planes are under investigation, Federal Aviation Administration officials say.

There were no injuries in any of the near-collisions, all of which occurred last Friday, but in two cases the pilots of the jetliners reported they had to take evasive action.

The four incidents involved a United Airlines Boeing 737 near Burbank, Calif., a Trans World Airlines Lockheed L-1011 near Newark, N.J., a Northwest Airlines DC-9 near Saginaw, Mich., and an American Airlines Boeing 727 over Chicago, the FAA confirmed Monday.

The agency has been under criticism because of an increasing number of such incidents. Last year, there were 340 near-collision reports involving commercial aircraft, most of them filed by pilots, or an average of just under one per day.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said in two of the cases, air traffic controllers had provided the jetliner pilots with advanced traffic advisories and in another case the smaller plane was not on radar.

It could not be determined Monday how many passengers were in the jetliners.

But some aviation safety experts said the total of four such incidents in one day is unusual and four times the rate throughout 1986. "It's unusual, but how unusual, I don't know," Farrar said.

Here are the incidents as described by the FAA:

—12:42 p.m. EDT: A Northwest Airlines DC-9, Flight 203 from Philadelphia to Saginaw, Mich., after a stopover in Detroit, was flying at 9,000 feet 22 miles southeast of Saginaw and came upon a single-engine Piper PA-28 Cherokee which passed just 500 feet ahead at the same altitude.

Farrar said air traffic control had advised the Northwest pilot of the Piper, which was flying under visual flight rules, when the two planes were six miles apart.

—12:25 p.m. CDT: An American Airlines Boeing 727, making an approach to Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, suddenly noticed an unknown aircraft passing 500 feet below and 100 feet away. No flight number was available.

The pilot of the private plane apparently had flown directly over the radar antennae and, therefore, was not picked up on tower radar, Farrar said, adding that the pilot of the small plane "most probably was in violation" of the airport's restricted airspace.

—5:43 p.m. EDT: A Trans World Airlines L-1011, Flight 32 from Philadelphia to Newark, N.J., was flying into Newark International Airport when it banked sharply and began to climb, allowing an unidentified aircraft to pass underneath. The pilot reported the two planes closed to within 200 feet horizontally and 50 feet vertically of each other at 7,000 feet.

Farrar said air traffic control had been tracking the small plane and twice advised the TWA pilot of the traffic. "The second time, the TWA pilot saw it and turned," Farrar said.

TWA officials could not be reached Monday for comment despite several telephone calls to the airline.

—7:25 p.m. PDT: United Airlines Flight 268, a Boeing 737 bound from Burbank, Calif., to Chicago, was three miles southwest of Burbank when it came within 300 feet to 500 feet of an unknown plane at the same altitude.

Last year, the FAA received 839 near-collision reports for aircraft of all types, an average of just over two incidents a day. About half of those cases involved aircraft that came closer than 500 feet of each other.

Senior FAA officials were criticized during a congressional hearing last week because of the increasing number of near-collisions as well as a recent jump in so-called operational errors: whenever aircraft are allowed to come closer than regulations allow.

Regulations generally require that planes remain apart by at least five miles horizontally and 1,000 feet vertically.

There also were two other near-collisions reported Friday, both involving military and private aircraft.

Chief Office Deputy Sarah Jones 'In Time Has Done Everything'

By ELIZABETH GORDEN
Reflector Staff Writer

One might think that Sarah Jones' interest in the law is a family affair. "I have always been interested in the law," Miss Jones said. "My father, Capt. Lester Jones, was the chief of police of Greenville and Washington before he became one of the first North Carolina highway patrolmen."

"Both of my sisters worked here before I did. They left to get married. My sister Thelma Dodd came back after her husband died, she has been here 21 years, her second time around."

Deputized in 1946, Miss Jones is the chief office deputy in the Pitt County Sheriff's Department.

"I handle personnel, financial responsibilities, payroll...after 43 years everything is so automatic I just do it," she said. "Sheriff Ralph Tyson once told me, 'In time, you have done everything.'"

But, Miss Jones works inside the office, she said. She had no formal training when she joined the department.

"I just applied for the job," she said. "I have always done clerical work, I've never done any outside work."

Miss Jones recalled the way the department used to be.

"You just were there when you had to be and stayed as long as you had to," she said.

"I remember one night when I had a group of women at my house for a meeting and the sheriff called and told me he needed me to take a deposition in an arson case. I had to tell a roomful of women to leave because I was needed downtown."

"Back then we had no overtime and no compensation time either. The sheriff, his deputies and I were on call all the time."

"When I started, the department consisted of the sheriff, two deputies and me. The men drove their own cars, wore no uniforms, and were not in charge of the jail. Now we have 86 people in the department and the sheriff is in charge of the jail. A lot has changed since I started working here," she said.

"I remember when we got our first radio, they brought it in and set this big microphone in front of me. It scared me to death. I went home that night and told my father I had to quit because I was afraid to use the radio. He wouldn't let me quit. He said the radio was very important to the development of the department and I should learn to use it."

The people at the department have become like family, Miss Jones said. "The people I work with seem like family to me. I've worked with some really fine people. The work is really interesting, too."

When asked how long she planned to stay with the Sheriff's Department she said, "I have to convince myself there's life outside the office. I would just miss everyone so much."

A native of Greenville, Miss Jones is a graduate of East Carolina Teachers College where she learned teaching was not for her, she said. "My student teaching made me realize that I didn't want to do that."

When she is not working, she enjoys sewing and playing the piano.

Americans Don't Celebrate April 15

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Americans are notoriously party animals.

They celebrate everything with a party. Not just sentimental anniversaries, designated holidays and festive occasions, but disasters. When prophets predicted a Revolutionary War approaching, party-revelers threw a "theme" party in the Boston Harbor. (BYOTB: Bring Your Own Tea Bag.)

And there was nothing that got everyone into town in a gala mood more than a necktie party in the Old West. (Bring a covered dish. String tie optional.)

Americans can dance around a cracked Liberty Bell for a couple of hundred years, celebrate the invention of the telephone while Mr. Watson sits there with acid burning through his trousers, and have a run on T-shirts proclaiming, "I SURVIVED THREE-MILE ISLAND."

Few disasters have escaped the optimism of the American people with the exception of April 15... the day when we file our income tax returns. To my knowledge, no one has laughed on this day since the 16th Amendment was ratified in 1913.

The last year on the 11 o'clock news on April 15, I watched a group of party-people gathered around a mailbox at the downtown post office. They were waving the American flag in one hand, their tax return in the other and removing a cork from a bottle in their teeth. I've heard Lincoln jokes about the Ford Theater and the woman on the Titanic who screamed, "I knew I should have had the dessert," but this was really sick!

Some carried bagfuls of nickels and dimes to pay the government what they owed. Most were dressed in raggy shirts and barrels.

I forgot about it until a couple of weeks ago when my husband, the jogger, received an official entry form for a 1040K run. The entry blank was a replica of a tax return and labeled "U.S. Individual Income Tax Run." There was a long run of 6.2 miles and a short form of a 1-mile fun run.

The directions were written in taxese: "You must mail this form with your check prior to 4/15/87 and on line 5 deduct $1 for each member of family or three or more registering at the same time before 4/15/87. Be sure to note that on line 7 is a contribution to benefit scholarship fund of CPA's and to record contribution, add to total. Map of running course provided on request or keep going until you get to Switzerland."

I'm not an astute observer of humor, but I think something is going on here. A groundswell, so to speak. Maybe we are still chips off the old H & R Block of the party animals at Boston.

If this is true, parties like this usually precede a major revolution. What do you wear to a revolution?

Son's Daily Visit Bad On Mother

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our son, 26 years old, married three years, is attending college full time. The college is located near our home. He and his wife live in a small but very nice mobile home. She works. Now the problem: Our son comes to our house every day for lunch, which I have to make. Then he goes back to school for classes, and returns here to lift weights and exercise in our basement. (He hasn't space for his exercise gear in his mobile home.) He plays loud rock music (nerve-wracking to me) while exercising.

He is a sensitive and well-meaning person, and he would be hurt if he knew how much I resent this daily intrusion on my privacy.

Abby, each day I fix his lunch, give him a hug, then go "somewhere" just to get away from all that racket. I feel as though I'm being driven out of my own home. My husband says if we say anything to him, he'll be hurt, but close friends say I'm foolish for putting up with it. What do you say? — IMPOSED UPON

DEAR IMPOSED: I say tell your son you love him, but his daily routine — lunching and exercising to loud music in your home — is more than you can handle. The alternative is to keep quiet and let your resentment grow and fester, which in my view would be a sorry choice.

DEAR ABBY: While standing on a corner in downtown St. Paul one afternoon, I saw a man in a brown car. He was the best-looking man I have ever seen. I don't know what came over me, but I smiled at him, and when he smiled back at me I thought I was going to faint! I got on the bus thinking I would never see this man again, but I was wrong. I saw him five days later in a shopping mall. This time he was not alone and neither was I. We looked at each other. He didn't smile this time, but I know he remembered me.

I cannot get this man's face out of my mind. He is the image of the man I have always dreamed I would marry.

Abby, do you believe in love at first sight? — HAUNTED IN MINNESOTA

DEAR HAUNTED: No. But I believe in physical attraction at first sight. You were bowled over by the appearance of this man because he fit the physical description of your preconceived dream man. If to you "physical attraction" means "falling in love," then you have indeed fallen in love.

DEAR ABBY: My lady and I were introduced last year by mutual friends, and our relationship has grown to where we are seriously discussing marriage.

While we both appear to be in above-average physical condition, due to our respective ages, plus the fact that both of us have lost our spouses to cancer, the suggestion that we have complete physicals appeared to be in order. Both her doctor and mine concluded that we would probably be around for some time to come.

I am in my 60s, she is in her 70s, and that is her only concern impeding a total commitment on her part. My view is that even if we were to receive a revelation that one of us would be gone in five years, I would rather spend those years with her in loving marriage than to remain apart. Neither of us would consider a "live-in" arrangement.

Your views would be appreciated. — YOUNG AT HEART IN PASADENA

DEAR YOUNG: If you need someone to say "Go for it," you've written to the right person. All good wishes, and do not waste another precious day.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market tumbled again in early trading today, after having suffered its fourth-worst plunge ever on Monday.

At 10 a.m., the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 13.21 points at 2,273.86.

Losers outpaced gainers by nearly 10-to-1, with 1,019 issues lower, 140 higher, and 273 unchanged.

Volume at the New York Stock Exchange totaled 42.62 million shares.

The market, shaken recently by the recent collapse of bond prices and the sharply plunging dollar, suffered two more blows this morning.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 1.15 yen to 141.35 yen, the lowest closing level since modern exchange rates were set in the late 1940s. The previous record of 142.50 yen was set Friday.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department announced that the nation's trade deficit widened in February to $15.1 billion, up from a revised January deficit of $12.3 billion — and more than many analysts had expected.

The January figure had initially been reported as $14.8 billion.

Bond prices reacted to the news with a sharp plunge. The bellwether 30-year Treasury bond fell about a point, or $10 for each $1000 in face value.

The NYSE's composite index was off 1.82 at 160.32. The American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 3.10 to 330.98.

On Monday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 51 points last week, closed at 2,287.07, down 51.71.

Whittington Appeals Belhaven Conviction

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jim Whittington vowed to "keep preaching the gospel" after he was convicted Monday of holding a religious service in violation of the town of Belhaven zoning ordinances.

Whittington, through his lawyer, James Vosburgh, appealed the convictions in Beaufort County District Court to Beaufort County Superior Court.

Judge James Hardison ruled that Whittington did not have a conditional use permit or a certificate of occupancy for the March 15 service. Hardison fined Whittington $10 on each conviction.

Whittington applied for the permit, but the town's board of adjustment had not issued it when the service was held. The board was scheduled to meet March 17 to consider the application.

"They've convicted me of preaching the gospel," Whittington said. The Greenville-based evangelist said he was not on trial but that "Jesus was on trial."

Whittington said he planned to keep on preaching "even if I lose my life." Whittington said that he had received several threats, including one from the Ku Klux Klan.

Vosburgh had asked that the charge be dismissed because the ordinances violated Whittington's constitutional rights of free speech, freedom of assembly and freedom of religion. Whittington said he intended to return to Belhaven to preach and was considering building a church there.

Panel Urges City To Drop Garbage Fees

Rudman-Hollings budget cutbacks.

Cox, who spoke on behalf of the budget committee, said the group studied the 1987-88 budget from a variety of angles.

"We have considered many items of concern to many citizens, both in detail and in terms of policy," he said. "The proposals identified ... were created from hours of discussions between committee members and others."

"It is our consensus of opinion that these recommendations will lead to a budget that will support the growth of goals of the city as well as the objectives of reasonable taxes and fees for its citizens."

The ad hoc committee recommended the preparation of a budget without a tax increase and refuse fees.

"It is the recommendation of the mayor's budget advisory committee that the acting city manager be directed to prepare a budget for 1987-88 that matches revenues and expenses without either a tax increase or the continuation of garbage fees currently being charged to individuals," Cox said.

The committee also suggested setting in place a personnel hiring freeze at the current level of manpower per department.

"This would not eliminate the ability of the managers to adjust personnel, it would only require that all hiring in the future be brought before the City Council for approval (including replacement of personnel and changes in pay grade category)," the committee's proposal said.

The committee recommended eliminating the policy of allowing the city manager to transfer funds without prior approval of the City Council except in the case of a "bona fide" emergency.

"The objective of this proposal is to bring the City Council into the decision-making process regarding budget changes," Cox said.

The committee also proposed establishing a policy that all department heads are to be reviewed by the council prior to employment, a policy eliminating any transfers of funds between primary divisions of salaries, operations and capital expenditures, and the consolidation of any tasks between departments to eliminate the duplication of services.

The committee suggested returning all security responsibilities and tasks from other departments to the police department without the addition of personnel, examining new lands received and gifts given to the city with regard to future potential costs of placing the land-gifts in services, scrutinizing the current status of park lands currently in service as to intended versus actual use, and establishing a policy that the Recreation and Parks Department must provide an annual report on revenues and expenses of each facility to the City Council that justifies continuing support.

The committee recommended further evaluation of the current travel reimbursement policies of the city regarding the requirement that a complete written log of actual expenses be submitted prior to reimbursement.

Serving along with Cox on the Mayor's Ad Hoc Budget Advisory Committee are Kelly Barnhill, president of Hendrix-Barnhill Co. Inc. and former Pitt County commissioner; Dan Bishop, comptroller at East Carolina University; John Bizzell, a retired ECU employee; Charles G. Clark, owner of Clark & Co.; Council member Nancy Jenkins; Stuart M. Shinn, a contractor and former council member; Dr. James F. Buck; assistant professor of business at ECU; Billy Laughinghouse, president of Bostic-Sugg Furniture Co., and Bill Taylor, owner of ABC Moving and Storage.

Acting City Manager Mayo Allen said he would present a balanced budget proposal to council members at a May 4 workshop.

In other business, Mayor Les Garner announced that Dick Farris, personnel director at ECU, has agreed to serve as a staff resource person for the city to help facilitate the hiring of a new city manager.

IBM representative Vern Davenport told the City Council, which decided last week to postpone the purchase of computer equipment until a new city manager is hired, that his company would extend its bid until June 30.

Five Marine Guards Recalled In Austria

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Marine replacements begin arriving in Moscow to protect the U.S. Embassy, a U.S. diplomatic source in Vienna said today that five Marines stationed there had been sent home on suspicion of having had unreported "social contact" with East European nationals.

The official, who requested anonymity, said the five guards had worked earlier at several Eastern European embassies, where the alleged contacts occurred.

The latest question about the security of U.S. missions came as Pentagon sources said an internal Navy study proposes that embassy guards should be subjected to random lie-detector tests.

The study also concludes that the Marine Corps and State Department should no longer rely on senior non-commissioned officers to head embassy guard units, the sources said.

Fifteen fresh Marines had arrived in Moscow by Monday, the first replacements for the 28-member force heading home.

Baseball History Changed

An AP SportScene
By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In the spring of 1947, the Brooklyn Dodgers traveled to Chicago overnight by train to play the Cubs in their first meeting of the season.

It was to be a special game, one in a series of firsts. Jackie Robinson, a college-educated black man, was in a Dodgers uniform, playing baseball and changing the face of America.

Robinson already had become the first black man to play in the major leagues, starting at first base for the Dodgers at Ebbets Field on April 15, 1947 — 40 years ago Wednesday.

When the doors were closed at Wrigley Field, there were more than 47,000 in a ballpark meant to hold about 38,000.

"The place was packed," Cubs outfielder Phil Cavarretta recalled, "and in those days, you know — I don't mean to be degrading — but black people very seldom came out to our games. This particular day, when Jackie was there with the Dodgers, the place was packed, and over half of them were black people."

This was a special day for black Americans in Chicago, just as there had been special days for blacks throughout the country during Robinson's first tour of the National League in 1947. Only later would all of America fully realize how special these days were.

"They cheered for this man like he was the late Babe Ruth," Cavarretta said. "When he came to bat, fielded a grounder or stole a base, there was thunder in the stands."

Jack Roosevelt Robinson, the grandson of slaves, was born in Cairo, Ga., on Jan. 31, 1919, the fifth and last child of Mallie and Jerry Robinson, a plantation worker. Jerry Robinson left home for good when Jackie was 6 months old, and Mallie took the family west to Pasadena, Calif., the next year.

They moved into an all-white section of northwest Pasadena, living in a two-story house on 121 Pepper St. It was there that Robinson first heard the word "nigger," and it was there that he learned how to fight back within the context of the games he would play later at UCLA and in major league baseball.

"Jackie was emotionally volatile," said Rachel Robinson, who married Jackie on Feb. 10, 1946 and was with him when he died on Oct. 24, 1972 of complications from a lifelong fight with diabetes.

"He was always ready to take action. Maybe volatile isn't the right word, but he had a strong emotional reaction to things. He could fight back very easily, as he did at UCLA. He knew all the techniques for fighting back within the structure of the sport he was playing.

"Early in his career, the major stress he was under in baseball was not to react."

Robinson's days at UCLA, where he was a standout football player and track star, and the time he spent barnstorming with a racially mixed baseball team were two things in Robinson's past said to have intrigued Dodgers' General Manager Branch Rickey.

Already a pioneer in the areas of minor leagues and talent scouting, Rickey was ready to blaze another trail. He wanted to get a black man into baseball, and as World War II began to work its changes on the world, he felt the time was right. He also felt that Robinson's history, his ability to operate in an all-white world, would serve him well as he broke baseball's color barrier.

"At the end of the 1945 season, Mr. Rickey called Jackie over," remembered Roy Campanella, who would join Robinson in the majors in 1948 and catch for the Dodgers for 10 years. "We were staying at the Woodside Hotel in Harlem, and we were playing a big league All-Star team in Newark that night.

"Jackie had gone over to the Dodgers office, and he told me all about it. Charlie Dresen was managing the All-Star team, and he asked me if I'd come over the next day, and that was the first I heard of it."

Under the guise of putting together an all-black team he would call the Brooklyn Brown Dodgers, Rickey had signed the major league's first black ballplayer. He met with Robinson in his Manhattan offices for three hours, calling him every name that his strict Methodist upbringing would allow. It was a test, and Robinson passed.

Robinson would play one year for the Dodgers' International League team at Montreal before joining the Dodgers in 1947.

"All of us who played with or against him are so respectful of him," said Hall of Famer Monte Irvin, who broke into the majors in 1949 with the Dodgers' crosstown rival New York Giants. "We knew what he had to go through. A lot of us experienced the same things....

"They called us nigger. 'You're not gonna make it,' they said. 'Coon, shine,' they called us. Anything derogatory," Irvin recalled.

While Robinson was the trailblazer, the experiences of other early black ballplayers closely paralleled those of Robinson.

"You knew you had to go play someplace," Campanella said. "You'd be there on time, play, shower up and then go find a black hotel. You couldn't stay with the team. You did what you had to do. It's always difficult to know you're shunned and couldn't stay with your teammates. We realized we were being given a chance to perform, but we also wanted to prove we were gentlemen off the field as well as on the field."

Campanella vividly remembers the first time he was forced to stay away from his teammates. It was in his hometown of Philadelphia.

"We weren't allowed to stay in the Bellevue Stratford Hotel," he said. "I told Jackie, come with me and stay at my folks home in North Philly. We couldn't stay with the team in three towns: Philadelphia, St. Louis and Cincinnati."

In many ways, the Dodgers protected Robinson, especially in spring training. Instead of touring the South, as so many teams did, the Dodgers spent spring in Cuba and Panama, then came north.

"When we were with the Giants," Irvin said, "we went all down through Texas, Alabama, Louisiana, and Jackie hadn't been down there, so we felt the brunt of all that bigotry and hatred. Even though it was a few years later, they hadn't seen a black

Bell Is Named Top Cage Aide

Dan Bell, who has been an assistant basketball coach at Marshall University for the past four seasons, has been named the top assistant at East Carolina to join newly-named head coach Mike Steele's staff.

Bell, 31, joins the Pirate program with a reputation of being an outstanding recruiter who has been directly responsible for Marshall's success over the past four seasons.

Bell was the recruiting coordinator and defensive coordinator for the Marshall program which posted a 90-36 mark during his tenure there. During that time, the Thundering Herd won three Southern Conference Championships and advanced to the NCAA Tournament.

"We are extremely pleased to have Dan Bell join our staff at East Carolina," Steele said. "Dan is known throughout the coaching ranks as simply one of the finest recruiters in the business."

"Not only will he bring to our staff his expertise in recruiting the top-notch student-athlete, but he is an excellent coach."

The Huntsville, Ala. native began his coaching career as a graduate assistant at his alma mater of Northwestern State (La) University in 1979. He was also a player-coach for the Athletics in Action, a semi-professional team for two seasons. AIA posted a 90-10 record during those two seasons.

Bell was named as an assistant coach at Division I Nichols State University in 1981 and worked there for two seasons as recruiting coordinator before being named interim head coach at Walker Junior College in Jasper, Ala.

"He led Walker to a 29-4 mark and an Alabama State Junior College Championship. That squad won the regional tournament and advanced to the national finals in Hutchinson, Kan., finishing third nationally in the school's first ever appearance in the finals."

Bell then moved on to Marshall in 1983 when Herd coach Rick Huckaby took the head position. He was directly responsible for recruiting 14 of the 18 student-athletes which Marshall has brought in during the past four seasons.

Bell received his undergraduate degree from Northwestern State in 1978. He was a two-year letterman for the Demon basketball program, also. He received his master's degree from NSU in 1980.

He and his wife, Diana, have a one-year old son, Zack.

Clemens, Red Sox Agree; Roger New Millionaire

BOSTON (AP) — The kids at Spring Woods High School in Houston have lost their favorite batting practice pitcher.

Roger Clemens, who spent his month-long salary holdout throwing batting practice to the high school players, is back in good standing with the Boston Red Sox as baseball's newest "instant" millionaire.

Clemens, the American League's 1986 Most Valuable Player and Cy Young Award winner, signed a two-year contract worth more than $2 million with the Red Sox on Monday.

"I'm extremely happy and I'm ready to go out there and do the things I've always wanted — and that's winning," the 24-year-old right-hander said.

"We're delighted to have Roger signed and back in the fold ready to go on and have another great season," Red Sox General Manager Lou Gorman said.

Just two days after he gave up four runs in four innings in Boston's 11-1 loss to Toronto, Clemens and the Red Sox reached agreement on a contract for 1987 and 1988.

In keeping with club policy, the Red Sox refused to disclose terms. However, the two-year contract reportedly was worth about $2 million. And Gorman conceded the pact contained incentive clauses which would add bonus money.

After a 29-day boycott of the Florida exhibition season in a bitter salary dispute, Clemens conceded he faced a struggle in starting the season.

"I might get my lumps here and there in my first couple of outings, but I still think I'm ready to pitch," he said. "I'm looking forward to pitching Thursday on my regular turn (at Toronto) and I'll continue on from there."

Although shelled by Toronto in his first appearance against major-league hitters since last fall, Clemens said "everything's there that's always been there."

"It's going to take a little time, but the arm's there," he said. "My velocity is there. The talent is there. The hard work is there. The stamina is coming on. It's just a matter of getting the ball where I want to get it."

Clemens, who led the major leagues with a 24-4 record in his second full season with the Red Sox last year, said he had "no hard feelings" after his prolonged wage fight with the Red Sox.

"I'm very elated now," he said. "I was disappointed in my performance Saturday. It was not characteristic of the way I pitch. But it's all behind

Brewers' Winning May Kill Tie Rule

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Manager Tom Trebelhorn is ready to take his hat off to his Milwaukee Brewers. For the time being, they might have to settle for a tie.

It goes back to spring training when Trebelhorn promised to relax the club rule on wearing ties during team flights if the Brewers managed to win 10 consecutive games during this baseball season.

Their 6-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Monday night, the Brewers' seventh straight, brought the team closer to that objective. Paul Molitor, who knocked in two runs in the victory, insisted that the condition had been met already, considering that the Brewers won three games at the end of the 1986 season.

"I told him the statute of limitations ran out on those," Trebelhorn said with a grin. "They've got to win 10 straight in 1987."

While insisting that "anytime you go to an airport, you should look first class," Trebelhorn indicated he might let the Brewers forgo their ties on charter flights should they meet his stiff standards.

"If we win 10 in a row," he said, "I'd take my tie off, too."

In other American League games Monday, it was the New York Yankees 11, Cleveland 3; California 5, Seattle 3 in 10 innings, and Oakland 6, Minnesota 3. The Texas-Boston game was rained out.

The Brewers' streak is a club record for the best start in history. Counting the last three games of 1986, the Brewers have equaled the club record of 10 consecutive victories set previously in 1973, 1978 and 1979.

Cecil Cooper, returning from the first six games on the disabled list, knocked in the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning with his second sacrifice fly of the game.

"Things are starting to develop," Cooper said. "This can definitely help us with a start like this. A lot of teams have a chance to win, including ourselves."

Yankees 11, Indians 3
Willie Randolph drove in five runs with four hits and emergency starter Charles Hudson pitched a three-hitter as the Yankees won their home opener.

Randolph, 4-for-20 this season entering the game, tied single-game career highs for RBIs and hits. He had a three-run-double in the fourth inning that gave the Yankees a 6-1 lead and a two-run double in the fifth.

Hudson, 2-0, acquired in the off-season from Philadelphia, made his first American League start after Tommy John came down with a stomach virus. Hudson allowed only home runs to Mel Hall in the second inning, Brook Jacoby in the fifth and Joe Carter in the ninth while striking out 10 and walking two.

Dave Winfield homered and Don Mattingly and Ron Kittle added two-run singles among New York's 15 hits off Greg Swindell, 0-2, and three relievers.

"I just had to put my game face on," said Hudson, who won his first decision with the Yankees last week by pitching 4 1-3 innings of perfect relief. "When there's a big crowd, I get pumped."

Angels 5, Mariners 3
Devon White hit a two-run homer in the top of the 10th inning to lead California over Seattle.

Mark McLemore singled for this third hit of the game off loser Edwin Nunez, 1-1. After Brian Downing sacrificed McLemore to second, White hit an 0-1 pitch for his first homer of the season.

Donnie Moore, 1-0, the third California pitcher, picked up the victory by pitching a perfect 10th inning.

Jordan Cracks 50 Once More

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Michael Jordan doesn't have to score 50 points to impress Chicago Bulls Coach Doug Collins.

When Jordan did just that Monday night, his seventh 50-point game of the NBA season and second in two nights, Collins found other things to be pleased about.

"In my estimation, he's the greatest player in the NBA right now," Collins said after the Bulls beat Milwaukee 114-107. "He came back at the end of the game and got the big rebound, stepped in and made the free throws and dished for a dunk. There's not much more I can say. His performance speaks for itself."

Jordan's performance virtually assured that he will become the second player in NBA history to score 3,000 points in a season. Jordan needs 37 points, his single-game average, in Chicago's last two games to join Wilt Chamberlain, who had more than 3,000 three times, in that exclusive club.

Jordan said his main concern late in the season is getting the Bulls into sixth place in the Eastern Conference, the highest playoff spot they still can attain.

"If I get it, I get it," Jordan said of his chase for 3,000. "My 50 points is not as big a factor as us getting the respect we deserve."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Philadelphia 113, Washington 105; Atlanta 102, Indiana 101; Detroit 120, New York 100; and Sacramento 123, San Antonio 118.

Jordan had 16 fourth-quarter points, made 16 of 31 field goals and 18 of 22 free throws and had nine rebounds as the Bulls improved their record to 40-40, a half-game behind sixth-place Washington and a half-game ahead of Indiana.

"We knew when we went in that if we wanted to win 41, we'd have to win one on the road," Jordan said. "We're still fighting for the seventh spot and now we're up a half-game. This was a great victory."

Jordan scored 16 points in the fourth quarter as the Bulls outscored the Bucks 36-24 to overcome an 83-78 deficit after three quarters. Jordan's steal and basket with 8:02 left gave the Bulls the lead for good at 88-86.

Jordan later scored six points during an 8-0 streak that extended a one-point lead to 102-93 with 2:45 left. Then he added five free throws in the final 19 seconds to seal the victory.

"It was team play, not just one individual," Jordan said of the fourth quarter. "We didn't fold at all. We kept our poise."

Charles Oakley added 22 points and 19 rebounds for the Bulls, while Terry Cummings had 24 points and Rickey Pierce 20 for the Bucks.

Hawks 102, Pacers 101
Atlanta, trying to earn the homecourt advantage in the first three rounds of the playoffs, pulled within a game of Boston in the Eastern Conference standings as Dominique Wilkins scored 28 of his 34 points in the second half against Indiana.

The Hawks, who won their seventh straight game, trailed by nine points in the second quarter, but they got within six at halftime and closed the deficit to 75-72 after three periods.

Wilkins had 14 points in each of the last two quarters, including two free throws that put the Hawks ahead by four with less than two minutes to go. Indiana pulled within one point on a basket by Wayman Tisdale with 35 seconds left, but Antoine Carr's basket and Kevin Willis' free throw gave Atlanta a 102-98 edge.

Tisdale had 19 points for the Pacers, who had won their previous eight home games.

Pistons 120, Knicks 100
Detroit beat New York for its 50th victory, only the second time in franchise history the Pistons have won that many.

Adrian Dantley scored 30 points and Isiah Thomas added 21 for the Pistons. Dantley had nine points as they increased an eight-point halftime lead to 94-75 at the end of three quarters by outscoring New York 32-21 in the third period. Detroit, which won 52 games in 1973-74, went on to lead by as many as 24 points in the fourth quarter.

Gerald Wilkins led the Knicks with 27 points and Bernard King had 19 in his first start in more than two years.

76ers, 113, Bullets 105
Cliff Robinson scored 22 points and Maurice Cheeks added 15 points and a season-high 19 assists as Philadelphia clinched fifth place in the Eastern Conference by beating Washington.

A basket by Robinson completed an 8-0 run and gave the 76ers a 105-93 lead with 2:16 remaining in the game. Washington got no closer than seven points in the final two minutes.

Jeff Malone led all scorers with 24 points, while Moses Malone added 18 for the Bullets.

out there playing with the rest of the guys."

Irvin said black ballplayers learned during their Negro League days that if you couldn't cope with the bigotry of the South, "they'd leave you at home. 'You'd better stay here 'til we come back,' they'd say. 'You better stay at home. If you don't want to say yassuh and nosuh, if you don't want them to short-change you or call you all sorts of names — if you can't take that, then you'd better get out of baseball.'"

Then, in the majors, when the teams went south for spring training, "often times, we would stay right on the train," Irvin said. "We couldn't stay in the hotel with the team. If we could stay on the train, it was OK. But when we couldn't, we'd get off the train, and now the rest of the club goes to a big, fine hotel."

"They leave us at the train station, and we would have to wait until black cabs come and get us. We couldn't even ride in a white cab. If the black cabs are late, we just stand around waiting. Now, here we are, important members of the team, just waiting around with all our bags. Sometimes we'd stand there for a half hour."

"Now, we go to a Negro family's house that the team contacted. They might not be ready for us. Most of the time there's just one bathtub or one shower for all of us. It was a hell of an ordeal."

Through all the slurs, the insults and the degradation, Robinson persisted. He was baseball's first Rookie of the Year. He led the National League with a .342 batting average and 37 stolen bases in 1949. He ended his career in 1956 with a .311 lifetime batting average. He was the first black man to be inducted into the Hall of Fame, in 1962, and he helped change America.

"The significance of Jackie's entry into the major leagues, the fundamentals of the breakthrough, was that America was alerted to the reality of institutionalized racism," Rachel Robinson said. "We knew it was there — and the color line with it — but I think a lot of people — and good people, too — were not tuned into it."

She recalls riding the train to New York several years ago from her Connecticut home while the play about her late husband, "The First," was still running on Broadway.

"There were these two women on the train. One says to the other, 'Have you seen "The First"?' She says, 'No. It's about Jackie Robinson, isn't it?' And, of course, my ears pricked up. Well, this woman said the play had been a shock to her. She had grown up in a politically liberal family, and she said she had been isolated from prejudice, didn't even know some of these things had existed."

"Somehow, Jackie's story was something she hadn't known about. She was in her 30s or 40s. She had grown up going through schools in Westchester County, and she felt she had been isolated from these things. She had assigned the whole picture of racial segregation to the South."

"I hear that over and over again," Rachel Robinson said. "I hear, 'I didn't know. I didn't understand what all the fuss was about.'"

"I think Jackie's legacy was not just that he made people aware of athletes being excluded, but that there was a lack of opportunities in all areas."

'Hill Street Blues' Leaving TV Lineup After 7th Year

By DIANE HAITHMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — NBC's "Hill Street Blues," television's most honored dramatic series, will leave the air for good after seven seasons, it was announced Monday. The hard-edged police drama's final original episode, titled "It Ain't Over 'Til It's Over," will air May 12.

The series' cancellation, which had been expected for weeks, was announced by Arthur Price, president of MTM Enterprises, which produces the show.

"We have enjoyed seven very satisfying years making 'Hill Street Blues,'" Price said in a prepared statement. "It seems appropriate to close this happy venture on a high note and to permit the show's vastly talented staff of writers and actors to pursue other projects."

With its debut in January 1981, the police show set a precedent for gritty reality, dark humor, ensemble casting and complex plot lines, a style that later was emulated by such series as "St. Elsewhere" and "L.A. Law." NBC renewed it despite low ratings, and the show went on to win eight Emmy Awards that September, which helped alert viewers to its existence.

The show has captured a total of 26 Emmys, including being named outstanding dramatic series for four years straight, starting in 1981. Only the "Mary Tyler Moore Show," with 29, has won more Emmys.

"'Hill Street Blues' is the series that signalled a new NBC when it premiered back in 1981," NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff said Monday. "Its talented team has consistently hit and bettered the standard of excellence the series established for dramatic television. I am proud of our association with this gifted group of people."

Although the popularity of the show has declined in recent years — it currently ranks 44th among the 102 network series that have aired this season — ratings were not the primary reason for the end of "Hill Street."

Jeffrey Lewis, co-executive producer of the show (with David Milch), said Monday that the show's ending was as much the result of the desire of some producers, writers and cast members to move on to new projects as its slide in the ratings, which may have been influenced by the show's move to a time slot opposite the popular "Moonlighting."

"I don't think the ratings are at all unsatisfactory," Lewis said. "It (the end of the series) is a result of a complex set of financial and artistic considerations. I personally did not want to work on the show any more, and it is my understanding that a handful of the producers, writers and cast members are anxious to move on to new projects.

"I wanted to leave a year ago, and David Milch was in the same position," he continued. "But let's say I was encouraged and rewarded for doing it for another year. I'm gratified that the show is ending on a high note, and I'm gratified if my participation had any part in that."

Steven Bochco, who created "Hill Street Blues" with Michael Kozoll and was its executive producer until being fired in 1985, said of the cancellation: "It was a wonderful seven years, and it's time." Asked if he had any regrets, Bochco said: "No, it was a wonderful series, and it's time to move along for everybody."

The final installment of "Hill Street Blues," unlike the final "MASH" episode, will not be a good-by show, but will be "an episode very much like the others in 'Hill Street,'" said NBC spokesman Brian Robinette. Part of the plot: Detective Johnny LaRue tries to expose an unscrupulous investigative TV reporter; a fire at Hill Street Station requires some clean-up; and Lt. Norman Buntz, who has been set up in a cocaine theft, is dismissed from the force and punches the chief in the nose.

Golden Gate Becomes A Harp

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Computer musicians who wrote the Golden Gate Bridge Suite wanted something grand to mark the span's 50th anniversary in May, so they decided to play the 9,266-foot bridge like a harp.

The Golden Gate is the second-longest suspension bridge in the country, but it may be the world's largest musical instrument.

"It appeals to our sense of wonder," said Doug McKechnie, who used the span's 500-foot support cables to make music. "It is a little silly, but it is also very scientific."

"We are bridging the gap between music and technology," he said.

McKechnie and the three other members of the San Francisco Synthesizer Ensemble hit the cables with wooden mallets and recorded what they heard.

Using computers and synthesizers, they merged the sound with foghorns, Pacific Ocean surf and the cries of gulls. The result was a 16-minute suite in four parts composed for the bridge's birthday party.

They used suspender cables, which are attached to the main cables and hold up the bridge, because their varying length provided a wider range of sounds, McKechnie said. The longest cables measure 500 feet.

Bridge officials refused the group's first request for permission to play the bridge.

"We had just painted the cables," bridge manager Robert Warren said. "I thought they might chip the paint."

But McKechnie told Warren they were making a film and assured him they would only simulate hitting the cables. Warren took them at their word.

"I lied in the interest of science," McKechnie now admits.

The musicians have played synthesizers for the Oakland Symphony, the Grateful Dead and for television commercials, McKechnie said.

In 1975, their first experiment with making music on the bridge was interrupted by California Highway Patrol officers, he said.

The group is finishing the piece at McKechnie's studio.

Bob Hope Does Easter TV Special With Vanna White

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Hope, rubbing his right arm, complained that pain was keeping him away from his game of golf.

"I can't play. I can putt a little," said Hope, 83, his back to the one-hole golf green in the backyard of his Toluca Lake home.

His usual cure for pain, hanging from rings on an open-air porch outside his second-story bedroom, had not worked. "It straightens out the spine and cures back pain," he said.

"But it didn't work this time. I'll hang for about 30 seconds, then do it again. I've helped a lot of golfers cure their back pains, telling them to go hang," he said.

The pain hasn't kept Hope from taping a new special for NBC, which will be telecast Easter Sunday. Hope goes through a number of songs and dances and sketches with guests Vanna White, Stephanie Kramer, Lynda Carter, Gloria Loring and Jack Carter.

"I did four intimate spots, one with each of the girls, which cut down my monologue," he said. "This is going to be the fastest monologue they've ever seen."

The monologue, which Hope uses to open all his specials, won't be taped until the last minute. "That gives us a chance to be as current as possible with our jokes," he said. "I don't know what we'll do yet. It depends on what's happening then. Maybe something on Peter Holm wanting $80,000 a month alimony from Joan Collins — and an introduction to Linda Evans. He also wants $20,000 a month for clothes. I'd hate to stand behind him in line at Sears."

"Maybe we'll have something on the TV evangelists, if it's still prominent in the papers. I'll call up my writers and give them some ideas for subjects. And they give me their ideas. I'm always looking for ideas in the newspapers. You do everything that happens."

Hope, referring to evangelist Oral Roberts, said, "I called the movie academy and said if I didn't get an Oscar, God was calling me home. They said, 'Have a nice trip.'"

Vanna White gets her first opportunity to do something on television besides flip the letters on "Wheel of Fortune." She did play herself once on an episode of "Simon & Simon."

Yes, Vanna can talk. She can also sing. "After working with her I feel she's had some experience somewhere," Hope said. "She went through it like a pro. There wasn't a hitch."

Ms. White has become something of a phenomenon on the game show, though she only smiles and turns letters of a puzzle. Something about her has caught the public's imagination.

"I'll tell you what it is," Hope said. "It's the underdog. This little girl, she's pretty, she's got a nice figure, she never says a word. I can't tell you how they applauded for this woman. And when you meet her and talk to her, you like her. People want to see her be a big hit."

Hope recalled that on his Christmas show he had the new generation of the Osmond Brothers. "After the show I asked these kids where they were going," he said. "They told me they were going to see Vanna White."

The United States and Canada adopted a system of standard time zones in 1883 to eliminate a plethora of local time zones across the continent.

FOCUS

Minimum Wages

Some workers will get a raise soon if Congress votes to increase the nation's minimum wage. In 1894, New Zealand became the first nation to adopt a statutory minimum wage. Great Britain followed suit in 1910. Two years later, Massachusetts became the first state in the union to establish a minimum wage. It was not until 1938 that the Fair Labor Standards Act set a national minimum of 25 cents an hour for workers engaged in interstate commerce.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the current minimum wage?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Paul Newman won the Academy Award for Best Actor.

the author cites this hand.

The bidding is routine. North's raise to three spades is invitational and South has the minimum for acceptance.

"You lead the king of clubs and partner plays the three. There is no way you are going to beat this on high cards, but there may be a way to promote a trump trick. Three things must happen: 1. Clubs must be 4-3-3-3; 2. Partner must have the ten of spades; 3. Declarer must lead a spade from dummy to his queen.

"If all this happens, you will win the first round of spades and lead the 13th club. This will promote a trump trick. All this happening is against the odds, but something is better than nothing.

"Putting it into practice, you continue with the ace of clubs and another. Declarer wins and leads a spade to his queen and your ace.

"The good news is that partner has the ten of spades. The bad news is he has just played it. When you lead the jack of clubs, declarer guesses the position and makes the rest. What went wrong?

"The answer is that partner was falsecarding ... He played the ten hoping to discourage declarer from finessing in spades if the situation were:

IRS Says Late-Filers Can Expect Delays in Refunds

By JACK NELSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — About 40 million income-tax returns are expected to be filed with the Internal Revenue Service this week in a last-minute rush to beat the Wednesday deadline for filing, but late-filing taxpayers due refunds will face long delays for their checks.

Between 70 percent and 75 percent of all taxpayers are expected to get refund checks, and the average refund will be about $1,000, IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs said Monday.

Those filing late returns will have to wait about six to eight weeks for their refund checks, compared with a wait of four to five weeks for taxpayers who filed earlier.

About 40 percent of the 106 million income-tax returns due to be filed this year still had not been filed two days before the deadline, Gibbs said. It remains to be seen how many late filers will request extensions for their returns, he said, but last year about 5 million were allowed to file after the April 15 deadline.

Gibbs, in a wide-ranging interview during a luncheon session with reporters, said that he found it "incredible" that so many Americans overpay their taxes during the year and then wait so late to file their returns, thereby giving the federal government the use of money during a period when the taxpayers themselves could be using it.

The average refund check has been increasing by about 10 percent in each of the last five years, and Gibbs said that the amount of federal tax deposits of money withheld from taxpayers this year already is running about $1 billion a month ahead of last year's figures.

The IRS, which has been experimenting with electronic filing of tax returns through computers, expects to cut the amount of time required for sending tax refunds by three weeks once electronic filing is available nationwide, Gibbs said.

He predicted that taxpayers would be able to file electronically from anywhere in the United States in the next two to three years. Under a program now in its second year, professional tax preparers in seven areas — Cincinnati; Milwaukee; Norfolk, Va.; Phoenix; Raleigh-Durham, N.C.; Sacramento, Calif.; and Albany, N.Y. — fill out returns for taxpayers and use computers to file them with the IRS. About 26,000 returns were filed under the program last year, and about twice that number will be filed this year.

In addition, the IRS is also studying whether it would be feasible to carry the electronic process a step further and send refund checks directly to taxpayers' bank accounts.

Gibbs also told reporters that he expected the new income tax law to result in a greater rate of voluntary compliance by taxpayers. The new law lowers individual tax rates to only two brackets, 15 percent and 28 percent, from the multibracket system ranging from 11 percent to 50 percent.

The commissioner and other IRS officials have said that a widespread public perception that the old tax system was unfair was a major factor in tax evasion and at least partly to blame for the nation's "tax gap" — the difference between taxes owed and taxes voluntarily paid. The new law, they say, will probably be viewed as more equitable by the public.

Pitt County is located approximately 30 miles inland from the coastal sounds, 80 miles from the Atlantic Ocean and roughly 150 miles from the Appalachian Mountains.

STORM DAMAGE — Tornado winds leveled this store building and 20 other structures in Branch, Ark., on Monday. A tornado also peeled off the roof of an elementary school in Bergman, Ark., and struck a mobile home park in Green Forest, Ark. Four people were injured, authorities said. (AP Laserphoto)

Most Air Pollutants Show Sharp Declines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emissions of the nation's principal air pollutants and their concentrations in the air declined modestly in most categories in 1985 except for lead, which showed a historic improvement in emission levels, the government says.

The Environmental Protection Agency's annual air pollution report released today showed a 48 percent reduction in lead emissions and a 32 percent drop in airborne concentrations.

The drop-off followed the agency's 91 percent cut in the allowable lead concentration of leaded gasoline from 1.1 gram per gallon to 0.1 gram per gallon during 1985. By the end of this year, every leaded gallon must meet that standard.

Lead emissions to the atmosphere, primarily through motor vehicle exhausts, totaled 162 million tons in 1975, according to estimates derived from EPA's computer models. Those emissions fell from 44.2 million tons in 1984 to 23.2 million tons in 1985.

There were larger tonnage declines in the 1970s, but none so large in percentage terms as the 48 percent decline for lead.

Despite the big decline, nine urban areas still failed to meet the federal standard for airborne lead concentrations in 1985, a maximum quarterly average of 1.5 micrograms per cubic meter (about 1.5 billionths of an ounce per cubic foot).

The 1985 maximum quarterly averages were as follows:

Gary, Ind., 12.5 micrograms per cubic meter; St. Louis, 4.61; El Paso, Texas, 3.25; Philadelphia, 2.07; Dallas, 2.01; Indianapolis, 1.64; Birmingham, Ala., 1.59; Seattle, 1.55; Allentown, Pa., 1.52.

Seven of the nine also failed to meet the standard in 1984. Indianapolis and Allentown were new to the list.

Tornadoes Strike Arkansas School, Mobile Home Park

GREEN FOREST, Ark. (AP) — Tornadoes and high-speed winds ripped apart a mobile home park, injuring four people, and peeled the roof off an elementary school filled with children in rural northwest Arkansas.

The storm Monday afternoon appeared to have cut a 300- to 400-yard wide swath through the Old Race Track Mobile Home Park four miles north here, said Carroll County Judge Jack Beeson, who surveyed the damage.

A man and woman in their 20s and a 3-year-old boy were admitted to Carroll County General Hospital at Berryville, said administrator John Johnson. Another man was treated at the hospital and released. The hospital refused to disclose the conditions of those admitted.

Beeson said it appeared five trailer homes were destroyed and an additional eight damaged. He said the injured boy was on the bed with his parents when the storm destroyed their trailer.

The storm also uprooted trees, snapped utility poles, damaged barns and struck another mobile home near the park, he said.

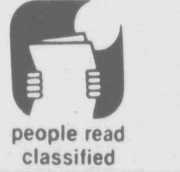

"It had been anchored down," Beeson said, "but it ripped the anchors right out and turned it over. The only thing that kept it from blowing completely away is that it wrapped around a telephone pole."

In Bergman in neighboring Boone County, authorities say wind tore a roof from three classrooms at the public school. There were 23 students in one classroom, 24 in another and three in the third, but there were no serious injuries, according to Superintendent Verlon Breedlove.

Tornadoes and property damage also were reported at Lavaca.

Lawyers For Texaco, Pennzoil Stage Public Battle Of Words

By J. MICHAEL KENNEDY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

HOUSTON — Lawyers for Pennzoil and Texaco stood on the courthouse steps here Monday morning and traded insults, big insults. Decorum was out; verbal brawling was in.

The day before, Texaco had sought bankruptcy protection, giving the corporate giant a respite from the $10.3 billion judgment a Texas court said it must pay Pennzoil.

Until that happened, Monday had been expected to be a big day in the battle, one in which an appeals court would decide how much bond Texaco had to put up while it appeals the judgment.

The bankruptcy filing changed all that. The Monday hearing was postponed, and lawyers for both sides were back on the street in a matter of minutes. Surrounded by television cameras, both sides fired salvos in an escalating war of words.

Joe Jamail, Pennzoil blunt-spoken chief attorney, said Texaco could not get sleazier if it tried. Texaco lawyer Frank Barron heckled him, saying Jamail was spouting nonsense.

"Why don't you wait your turn, fool?" Jamail said. "Who are you? What do you do?"

"My name is Frank Barron and I represent Texaco," the lawyer replied.

Jamail turned to face the cameras before responding.

"I have a book in my office, a scrapbook. It's labeled miscellaneous lies Texaco told. One person can't lift the book," he said. So it went.

Before Barron appeared, Jamail, known for his colorful language, had told reporters that Texaco was going to "slide in their own manure." And he accused Texaco of hiding its assets and failing to comply with court orders.

Later, he added: "(Barron is) with the firm that wrongfully abused the processes and went into the federal system. They got spanked about it. That's the reason he's so churlish today," referring to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that sent Texaco's appeal back to Texas court on the bond issue.

Wall Street Reacts To Filing

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street reacted to Texaco's decision to file for protection under federal bankruptcy laws by driving down the stock value of both Texaco Inc. and rival Pennzoil Co.

Texaco was the most actively traded issue on the New York Stock Exchange Monday, and its shares lost 11 percent of their value. Analysts said investors pulled out their money partly because of concern about the bankruptcy filing, and also because the action meant Texaco would suspend its dividend.

Pennzoil shares dropped by about 16.5 percent amid uncertainty about its ability to collect the $11 billion judgment it won against Texaco in a 1985 Houston jury decision.

Texaco fell $3.37½ per share to $28.50 on volume of 12.6 million shares. Pennzoil fell $15.25 a share to $77, with 1.4 million shares changing hands.

Texaco's filing Sunday under

Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code relieved the nation's third-largest oil company from having to post a potentially debilitating security bond against the lawsuit judgment.

In Houston, an appellate court postponed a hearing on the bond issue, which Texas had requested earlier, because of Texaco's bankruptcy filing.

Light In The Sky

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A bright light streaked across skies in the Southwest, prompting scores of calls to government agencies, but officials were at a loss to explain the phenomenon.

The object, which authorities said could be a meteor, was seen from Arizona to California and south of the Mexican border, according to reports that started coming in shortly before 9 p.m. Monday.

"It was described as something on fire, like a ball of fire in the sky," said Martha Pfrommer, a dispatcher with the California Department of Forestry in Riverside. "Apparently everybody was reporting it as a plane crash."

Beth Kilgore, a spokesman for the North American Air Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colo., said the light did not result from any man-made object such as a satellite or missile.

Amy Says Riot Police Influenced Her Protest

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — Amy Carter told the jury at her trial that she blocked buses carrying other anti-CIA protesters to jail but she refused to budge from the road because "it was the right thing."

Former President Jimmy Carter's daughter testified Monday that the sight of police wearing riot helmets and holding back dogs drove her to sit in front of the buses and link arms with other demonstrators.

Miss Carter, 19, is one of three people being tried in district court on charges of disorderly conduct stemming from the Nov. 24 protest against CIA recruiting at the University of Massachusetts.

Twelve other defendants, including 50-year-old protest veteran Abbie Hoffman, face trespassing charges for refusing to leave Munson Hall after business hours.

Outside court, Miss Carter said her father was proud of her and impressed with the CIA experts flown in from around the country to support the defendants' argument that they broke minor laws to forestall major crimes overseas by the CIA.

"At least people are learning things about Nicaragua they've never heard before," she said. "Either way, it's a victory."

Miss Carter, a sophomore at Brown University in Rhode Island, testified she drove to Massachusetts for the demonstration because it was much like an earlier one at her school.

She said she entered Munson Hall through an unguarded back window and left the building when police announced they would begin making arrests.

Once outside Munson Hall, the sight of police in riot gear prompted her to defy their order to move out of the way of the buses, she said.

"I disagree with the policy of putting state police on campus to handle peaceful, non-violent protest," she said. "I felt very threatened by that."

She told the six-member jury she had no intention of blocking the buses for long. "It seemed it was very important for me to get arrested right then and right there and to tell people how I felt later on."

Under cross-examination, she said, "I would have done something even if I thought the general public wouldn't hear about it. I did the action for myself. It was the right thing to do."

Miss Carter's testimony followed that of a string of veteran protesters and CIA experts who have testified about covert spy agency actions in Southeast Asia and Nicaragua.

Reed Brody, a former New York assistant attorney general, testified Monday about atrocities allegedly committed by CIA-backed rebels in Nicaragua. The results of his four-month investigation were later used as evidence by the World Court in convicting the agency of mining Nicaraguan harbors, he said.

Miss Carter was applauded after her testimony by some of the 120 people who packed the historic stone courthouse.

Delegation

MOSCOW (AP) — A U.S. Congressional delegation led by House Speaker Jim Wright met in Kiev with the head of the Ukrainian Communist Party, the Tass news agency said.

The delegation of about 20 representatives is visiting the Soviet Union through Saturday at the invitation of the Supreme Soviet, the nominal parliament.

Tass said the group met Monday with Vladimir Shcherbitsky, the head of the Ukrainian Communist Party and a member of the Soviet Union's ruling Politburo.

As your responsibilities change, so do ours.

There's a lot more to raising a family than adding a new place at the table. For most families, it's a whole new way of thinking. And one that BB&T understands.

It involves sorting out the best ways to borrow for current expenses. And the best ways to save for future ones. It also means a little extra sensitivity to the credit needs almost all growing families undergo.

So, if it seems your current bank isn't what it used to be, perhaps it's you who's done the changing.

See BB&T. A different sort of attitude. A different sort of bank.

BB&T
It's More Than A Bank.
It's An Attitude.
