President Chas Carr

Dear Sir

Should we admit in our Alliance men who still or make brandy or whiskey — although they may use registered stills. I have not reference only, in a civil point of view but in a moral point, which as I understand we must recognize according to our obligations?

If we admit them, do we not become parties in their defence? or we would not the Alliance have the same right as a body to run a still as one of its members has?

Please answer these questions immediately if will be much obliged

Your Brother
