My dear Sir

The Alliance Constitution says that an applicant for admission into the Order, shall join at the nearest Lodge to him, which one of our esteemed farmers attempted, and was black ball'd, it is believed, on personal grounds. Now after the lapse of six months, is it necessary for him to get a deputy from the Order Lodge in which he was rejected, and carry to Ball's Brook, where he will be unanimously elected? This question is only moved by one or two - it may be an issue -

Could you give us your version of this point in question and much <sup>on</sup> oblige a number of your most substantial friends and brothers -
