Father:

Your letter to Maine, recd morning, was particularly well & I can assure you was heartily rejoiced by us all. Your slow return enough is not without its consolation, we are pleased to think it argues retention of the same, I shall, the time comes, attend to the of the candy to Maud; 'twas deeper thought, & one that ^{she} will prize. She is a good child; ment of selfishness being foreign make up; which is truly to be red at, when we come to consider woundings. I have said some perhaps recently, & in order to make this gay season, every gay Mattie & her friends, I have not been visiting, in a long way & a hat, but have attended card parties & actually have become a devotee shine of "five lanted evens" which, as she expresses it, "tickles her toes", & since these acts of duce such good effect upon not absolutely like me, I shall hear of me in no other Easter. Lily, Keane reached yesterday, & Mrs Blair of B is expected tomorrow with Ma is often at the house. This is a full hand, & hard to beat.

Had a beautiful display of Aurora last Saturday. I was expected however, as the sun is spots. And some of them are seen with a smoked glass between your field glass you might see them near
