Washington
Dear Father;

You will observe & from the enclosed articles that the silver craze is not dead, the clipping in question is an editorial from an Oregon paper which, I learn, did the work of carrying that state for the laws. O yes, the sentiment has begun to change already, & I don't doubt but that McKinley will be forced to do something to raise prices. I spent about an hour with Sen. Morgan at his residence yesterday morning, & he says that silver is in a better position has since -73. He is very, I hope free, & declares that we are going to get, if not all we want, enough at least to demonstrate to the country, the perfect wisdom of the free remonetization of silver. In regard to the Senate, he declares that he has been unable to figure out the majority accurately, but that the silver men will have four or five majority, he has not the slightest doubt. This will give us enough to force the hands of the gold men. There were many exceedingly interesting statements made by him, on which I have not now the time to touch, but suffice it to say, that I am greatly encouraged, & indeed feel like a new man. I note that you are on your message. How I wish I were with you to give
