Dear Mrs. Attyy Mrs.
I am glad that place over to the street.
1891 - That the angels would accept Heaven, if you said, that she had come to my way of thinking Washington, D. C., Dec 8th 1891

Dear Father,

Yours truly read. I believe I am growing daily more & more like Madame de L'Enclos, - I love my fellow man only "in abstracts" that is, of course with the exception of a few hundred, more or less.
In the concrete he is an exceedingly bad egg, & what he does & says never excites any surprise in me, esp. I can recall very vividly Thom. as grotesque physiognomy, & the impression he left upon me, viz - that his total ensemble is an outrageous caricature on the Medicean paragon, A preacher I believe, yet I venture the assertion that there is not enough of the moisture of human kindness in him, & prevent a cure from withering, I am sorry to hear that this victim of the inexorable law of fate caused Lacy to part with any of his indignation, He should have reserved it for appropriate occasions, I have never believed in wasting anything, I note what you say about coming on, & hope nothing will again turn up to delay your visit, Have not seen Jarvis yet, Shall call in a day or two, Mattie took Mrs J. out riding Saturday afternoon, The senator's wife discussed solely of politics, & even the acct. that Mattie brought one of the conversation was exceedingly interesting, She is a Democrat yet I see, notwithstanding the <sup>lead of the</sup> unfortunate party, But it would not surprise me to hear, before Cleveland's term is
