Dear Father,

Yours duly read. I am sorry indeed to hear that mother is so blue. I have recd. several letters of late from her, all of which indicate that she is worrying over John's inability to get work. In a letter this morning she states that he ought to have Charles's place in the office. Were I in your place, I should even go into the detail with her, (& if necessary, time & time again) explaining just why such a thing could not be done. She doubtless needs humoring, & all the confidence you can possibly give her on every subject she touches upon. In your present state of mind you will not, in all probability, feel much like this, but it seems to me best. You can tell her that Jarvis is doing what he can for John, & that Smith & Jones are also interested in a place for him. I shall write her tomorrow.

Am not surprised to learn that Coke is hot for the Gaulle scheme, the Bill sounds like more money, & that is enough for the average pudding head.

Hastily & affly

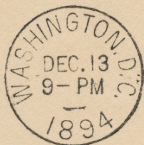

KPM

I sincerely trust that you can bring mother on with you!
