

Distinguished Men and Measures of the United States,

DURING THE LAST QUARTER OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY . . .

AND THEIR RELATIONS TO EACH OTHER,

BY JAMES D. LYNCH,

Author of the "Bench and Bar of Mississippi," the Bench and Bar of Texas" and of the Poem, "Columbia Saluting the Nations," adopted by the World's Columbian Commission as the National Salutation.

VOL. I.

The President, the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, and the Congress, to the number of 250.

VOL. II.

In the States: The Governors, Statesmen, and men of eminent professional and business careers, to the number of 250.

The design of this work is to present a true history of the principal measures of the times, and the qualities and characters of the men who are impressing themselves upon the affairs of the Nation, and of the States.

It will be entirely free from all political influences and party predictions, and will aim to follow the clear pointed flame of truth, so that the future generations may see the men and measures of the day through the glasses of an impartial and observing contemporary.

The subjects will be selected and the work written entirely by the author. It will be elegantly bound in half Russia, and illustrated. Both volumes will be carried on at once, and will be completed with all the dispatch that a careful study of the subjects will permit. The author hopes that the gentlemen selected will kindly respond promptly, as he desires to have the work completed for a book of reference in the campaign of 1896.

The terms offered by Messrs. J. B. Lippincott & Co., of Philadelphia, to bring the work out in elegant style have been accepted, and an elegant copy will be furnished to each subject.

JAMES D. LYNCH.

If requested, a copy of your completed sketch will be submitted to you before it is given to the publishers.
