man died about 9 o'clock, and it began to be talked that he did not rebeive the wound in the manner first nine persons presented themselves as stated but that he had been stabbed in a gambling room. Inquiries began at once as to who was with him Wednesday night. It was found out that George Dudley and Peter Clark had been with him and a warrant was issued for their arrest. A game of base ball between Wilson and Greenville colored clubs was going on at the time up in Skinnerville, and it was known that Dudley and Clark were both at the game, the latter being a player with the Greenville club. While the warrant was being issued some one knowing of it and of Dudley's connection with the to join an opportunity to do so. ground and told him what was going leave. So when Deputy Sheriff King got up there he found only Clark to arrest. Clark was placed in jail and a search at once began for Dudley, both white and colored engaging in it. A little later a warrant was issued for James May, who was arrested and placed in jail. In the meantime Coroner H. F. Keel had summoned a jury and begun an investigation. The first examination by the Coroner was of the grandparents of Blow. They both testified that Blow said he fell down and cut himself, but they had not believed any such tale. The clothing worn by Blow on the night of the cutting were produced and an examination of them convinced the Jury that the cutting was done by some one eise and not in an accidental manner as stated There were holes through the coat vest and top of pants exactly corresponding with the location of the wound, which was in the lower par thought that rough on rats had been of the abdomen to the left of centre

"Did you ever ponder over the untable fancy of the average fiction reader? inquired a prominent Washington bookseller recently. "It is certainly astonishing how a book, by some trick of style or singularity of plot, will suddenly leap into the pinnacle of popu-larity, and after holding the position for a few months it will sink into obscurity just as suddenly as it became famous. The book which had the greatest run in its day from my counters was 'Lorna Doone.' For a long time everybody who came into the store wanted it, and I could not begin to supply the demand. Nowadays nothedy seems to want it, and I seldom sell a copy, but the youthful contingent of the novel readers still cling to THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

He Has Very Much More Control Over the Army Than Over the Navy. The president of the United States is made by the constitution commander in-chief of the army and navy. Curiously enough, his control over the two branches of the service differs materially. So far as the navy is concerned ha has comparatively little executive authority, but his power in army matters is very great. For example, he might, if the senate did not object, take any fresh graduate from West Point, and make him the general of the army. There is in China not only an intimate association between music and poetical speech, but also between nusic and speech generally. The Chinese being a monosyllabic language, it depends to a great extent upon musical intonation to convey meaning. If you listen to the conversation of your Chinese laundrymen you will discover that their ordinary speech is almost as musical as the recitativo secco of the Italian

Many words in the Chinese language take from three to six different meanings, according to intonation. These intonations, as Dr. S. Wells Williams forcibly urges, have "nothing to do either with accents or emphasis." They are distinctly musical, and it is much to be regretted that Dr. Williams was unable, for obvious want of the musical talent, to study them from a musical point of view, as it is all but impossible to convey a clear understanding of their nature by description. There seem to be many variations, but generally there are four of these in the older romances, such as 'Monte Cristo,' 'The Three Guardsmen' and books of that stamp. I sell a copy of Victor Hugo's 'Les Miserables' every tan days regularly."—Washington Post.
