The probability of war with Chili is the topic of conversation with the boys just now. It seems that both the officers and enlisted men are anxious to test our new guns on the Chilian Men-of-War and avenge the murder of our tars at Valparaiso.

Orders have been issued for change of uniform. All formations will now be in overcoats. This uniform may not present to some that neatness that the full dress does yet it is much more comfortable at this season of the year, and our commandant always looks to the interest and comfort of his command.

For the past week we have had but few visitors to witness Dress Parade. The cold weather doubtless keeps them away.

A CALL FOR A CONVENTION.

Believing that the time has come for the organization of the people of the State for the suppression of the evils of intemperance, the undersigned cordially invite every friend of the cause of temperance in North Carolina to a State Convention to be held in the city of Raleigh on Thursday, November 19th, 1891.

We believe that there is need of an awakening on the part of the temperance people to the growing power of the liquor saloon and its long train of evil influences; to the work of swift destruction into which our young people are falling by indulging in intoxicating drink; to the need of circulating temperance literature and public addresses on the same; to the use of the press and public teaching generally in the encouragement of total abstinence and the condemning of the social glass.

We feel the need of a State organization through which the temperance people may express their views and make petition for such legislation as may from time to time be demanded to aid in the restraining and suppressing the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

In our judgment, with a State Convention, on the 19th of November that shall provide for a permanent organization we may so combine all the temperance forces of the State as to largely prevent the increase of liquor saloons and in time wholly abolish licensing the same.

With these feelings the undersigned invite the temperance people of North Carolina to assemble in this city on Thursday, November 19th, for the purpose of organizing a State temperance convention.

The railroad rate of one cent per mile to the Southern Exposition in progress here gives us special advantage for assembling and board with lodging can be secured at from $1.00 to $2.50 per day.

We desire to be understood as not calling a meeting for any partisan political purpose or in the interest of any party organization. We cordially invite the co-operation of whatever name to join in this movement. We ask the presence and aid of all ministers of the gospel, teachers, and citizens generally who favor the temperance cause.

It is our hope that the colored people of the State will hold a similar convention during the same month and give their aid and co-operation to this great cause.

Prominent speakers from this and other cities are expected to address the convention. Let all the friends of the temperance reform from all over the State meet in this great gathering and help to forward the great work. Let us have a large and enthusiastic convention.

"It is not where a man is, but what he is that makes his heaven or hell, whether it be in this world or in another. Therefore the Bible deals very little with the future condition of men, but very much with their present character." That is a pithy expression of a truth which is forcing itself on the consideration of men.

Both hell and heaven begin on earth. Character, not locality, makes or un-makes human happiness.—Ex.

What bearing has this on you, friend, on you who brutalize yourself with drink?

HANDSOME TRIBUTE TO GRADY.

Gov. Hill, of New York Speaks at the Unveiling of the Grady Monument.

His wonderful career resembled a meteor flashing through the heavens, dazzling us with its brilliancy and startling us with its sudden departure.

Proud ought Georgia to be of her noble son! Proud ought the South to be of her great benefactor! Proud ought the nation to be of her eloquent pacifist!

Beneath this bronze memorial and throughout this broad land let Henry Grady's memory be cherished by every patriot. Let the story of his great work inspire every true American. Let the example of his exalted purpose and generous effort make fairer patriots and better citizens.

The sacred task which he accomplished let no man try to undo. The reconciliation which his eloquence brought about let no man dare to disturb. Let that hand which seeks again to kindle the fires of sectional strife that Grady quenched. A re-united people shall quickly avenge that insult to his memory, and smother with reproach that incendiary effort.

To you of Georgia this occasion has a double significance. These exercises to you are not merely commemorative of a national service or evidence of a nation's respect. They remind you of your personal loss they recall to you that affectionate interest which Grady had in your individual and public welfare—that intense sympathy in your sorrows and that rejoicing in your success—that loyalty to the fame and prosperity of your State. He knew your spirit and fired it. He lived, thank heaven, to see your prosperity and honor. "As for me," he said, long before the ravages of war had been effaced from your proud State, "As for me, my ambition is a simple one. I shall be satisfied with the labors of my life, if, when those labors are over, my son, looking abroad upon a better and grander Georgia—a Georgia that has filled the destiny that God intended for her—when her towns and cities are hives of industry, and her country-side the exhaustless fields from which their stores are drawn—when every stream drains on its way to the mists of spindles, and every forest echoes back the roar of the passing train—when the valleys smile with abundant harvests, and from her hill-sides comes the tinkling of bells as her herds and flocks go forth from their folds—when more than two million people proclaim her perfect independence and bless her with their love—I shall be more than content," I say, "if my son, looking upon such scenes as these, can stand up and say: 'My father bore a part in this work, and his name lives in the memory of his people!'"

Points for Boys. A gentleman standing beside a calm, self-possessed old captain on the deck of a vessel remarked: "I suppose, captain, you know where every rock and shoal is along this whole coast, do you not?" "I know where they are not," was the decided reply, and there was wherein lay the safety of those who intrusted their lives and property into his hands.

There is a great deal of knowledge which one is wiser and better for not possessing. If you learn exactly where there are not rocks or bars you may sail safely and profitably.

A good old merchant prince once met a man who approached him in a very confidential way on a new scheme by which he could make a great sum with a small outfit. He was never averse to making money in the night way so he patiently heard him propose a theory for making an imitation of vinegar which cost but a trifle, but could be sold as the real cedar vinegar. The old merchant came down upon him like a thunderbolt when he understood fully the scheme and hurried him from his presence with such words of stinging rebuke and warning that his ears must have rung for a day. The grandsons of that merchant carry on his great business to-day with honor and prosperity.

Last Wednesday week was "negro day" at the Raleigh Exposition. The parade was more than a mile in length, and in it were 200 vehicles and 1,100 school children. The exercises are said to have been very creditable.

THE BRAZEN PALACE.

Wonderful Ruins in the Ancient City of Anavlatun, in Ceylon.

One of the most noteworthy buildings of the "refugee" city was the Lova-Maha-Pala, or the Brazen Palace, erected by King Dutugemunu in the year 142 B. C. It stood upon 1,000 granite pillars, and vied with surrounding dagobas in height, rearing its ninth story 270 feet skyward; it contained 1,000 dormitories for priests; its roof was of brass, and, according to the Mahawansa, the walls gleamed with resplendent gems. The great hall was supported on golden pillars resting on lions, and in the center was an ivory throne with a golden sun and a silver moon on either side.

Several times the Brazen Palace was razed by iconoclastic invaders from India, but it was restored by zealous adherents of the new faith, up to the latter part of the Twelfth century, when the capital was removed to Polonnaruwa. From the upper stories of this magnificent pile the priestly occupants could view the far extending city, and look upon six great dagobas, all within a radius of little more than a mile, and lifting their huge white domes as high as some of the loftiest cathedrals in Europe.

The Ruwanweli dagoba stood near the palace, and according to the native archives, rested on a platform 600 feet square, its glass pinnacle glittering in the sun 270 feet above the city, its base surrounded by marble statues and its outer walls mounting elephants of masonry with real tusks. In the north, beyond splendid pavilions of king and queens, loomed the stupas of Anavlatun, with its 20,000,000 cubic feet of masonry.

The beholder at the palace had only to turn his gaze in the direction of the rising sun to look upon the greatest of the relic tombs, the Abhayagira dagoba.—James Ricalton in Scribner's.

An Acid Bottle Needed. A surgeon has called attention to the fact that a more convenient form of acid bottle is needed. The ordinary bottle allows drops to run down the outside and eat off the labels and burn the shelves and perhaps the hands of the user. A form of bottle is sometimes used for essences and oils which might be adopted with advantage.

In the place of the ordinary apparatus there is a tube with a lip. On the side opposite the lip there is a groove leading back into the bottle. The liquid is then poured out by means of this tube, but any drops that run down the outside run back into the bottle. The whole is then covered by a ground cap. This principle is employed in the ordinary medicine bottle and in some claret jugs.

A stopper has been brought out in England which meets some of the objections to the ordinary form. It is really a glass lid with a pin of glass passing into the neck of the bottle to keep it from falling off. The external appearance of the new stoppered bottle is thus nearly the same as usual, but the stopper is replaced by a much smaller body with straight sides. This form is said to be quite air tight, and at the same time to avoid sticking.—Chicago Herald.

Stone Forests. Stone forests are found in various parts of the world. In many cases they are hardened by some peculiarity of the atmosphere, and are found standing just as they were when clothed with green foliage thousands of years ago. The Little Colorado river, in Arizona, has long been famous as a locality for such finds; at one place more than 1,500 cords of solid stone tree trunks, sections, limbs and logs were found by the government surveyors. Most of them were silicified; many 7 to 10 feet in diameter and from 20 to 50 feet in height. Geologists say that the petrified trees of the Little Colorado were once covered with marl over 1,000 feet in depth. Some of the trees have been changed to Jasper, and have assumed various hues; others resemble apal, and when broken open, the core is often found lined with crystals of the most beautiful tint.—St. Louis K-publie.

Effect of Electrical Light on Fish. A correspondent states that fishing all along by Totland bay, Isle of Wight, was very poor, and that since the setting up of the search light for the forts it had become worse. He also heard that there used to be a very good place for fish near the lights on St. Catharine's point, but that the electric light had driven them all away, and now it was quite useless putting out nets in a spot where, a few years since, a decent haul was looked on as a certainty. He holds opinions on this matter from those who are more versed in sea fish and their ways than he is himself.—Electrical Review.

Took a Hint at Last. It was the time of night when bored bellows yawn and beaux linger. Hints innumerable had been sown on barren ground. Georgie Deadgone would stay. Finally Miss Nosmore excused herself for a few moments. A minute later the cook, in full regalia, entered the parlor, and, walking up to Georgie Deadgone, asked: "What would you like to have for breakfast, sir?"

And then Georgie Deadgone, noticing that Miss Nosmore had gone, waked.—New York Herald.

A Rural Experience. "What kind of seeds ought I to plant, Uncle Sam, to get a good squabb crop?" "Squabb, o' course. What did yer suppose, Hooch?"—New York Epoch.

She Was Taking a Bath. In a pretty house up town a newly arrived Gibraltar was installed as parlor maid. "Is Mrs. B.— at home?" asked a gentleman whose ring at the door she had answered. "She's out the mistress in," said Emily. "And Miss B.— is she out also?" asked the visitor. "No, nor; but she's in the tub cleaning herself." Was the unexpected and ready response.—New York Tribune.

WEE CANNIBAL LOBSTERS.

They Dig Caves in Sand, Whence They Issue to Do Fearful Battle.

By invitation of a well known naturalist I had not long ago an opportunity to witness a curious sight in an aquarium in which about a hundred young lobsters had been placed.

Young lobsters are cannibals of the very worst type, and can give points to the most terrible man-eater in all Africa. The lobsters had just passed out of the spinning stage and were seen crawling about in the tank. The tank had glass sides, giving an excellent chance for observation, and it had a capacity of about fifty gallons of water. At one side of the interior of the aquarium had been piled large stones, with flat sides, resting on sand. The sand was about two inches deep, covering the bottom.

My informant said that the first performances of the young lobsters when put into the tank were very interesting. They gathered around the sides of the rocks, and with their antennae almost against the stone, crossed their claws in front of them and moving backward dragged plashes of sand away from the stone. This was repeated again and again until a hole had been made big enough to hold the little lobster with space to spare.

Then the crustacean climbed over the heap of sand into the excavation, and, turning his tail to the stone, proceeded to push the particles from the bottom of the hole to the top of the heap by placing its two claws together with the tips lapping so that the sand could not slide back. In effect the claws served as a shovel.

After the lobsters had in this manner built for themselves caves for defensive purposes they planted themselves with their backs to the stone and kept their little black, beadlike eyes roving outward in every direction. When I took my place to watch nothing was stirring.

Now and then a lobster would climb out of his retreat and explore the immediate neighborhood. Suddenly, finding an intruded lobster, the errand adventurer would assault it. Then would ensue the biggest attack of a rough and tumble, catch-as-catch-can contest. It was a fight to the death.

When the struggle was between only two lobsters the result was usually a drawn battle, each retreating to his hole with the loss of a claw or one or two antennae.

But when two or three lobsters attacked one in his shallow cave the fight was soon over. The miserable victim was dragged out on the arena by the sharp pinners of the besiegers, and in a trice he was killed. It required but a few minutes for the cannibals to dismember and eat up their victim, dragging the bits to different parts of the aquarium, as dogs would bones.

These attacks are always made at night. I was so fortunate as to see another raid, but it was not like that described above. One of the lobsters that had emerged from his lair in pursuit of food was himself pursued in turn. Caught napping away from his cave by three or four enemies, he scuttled over the sand toward one corner of the aquarium. After him went the pursuers better skulked, and while the pursued resorted to dodging tactics that would be admired by a football rasher, the pursuers separated and closed in around the doomed creature.

It is by a curious instinct that the pursued is made in the night, because it is evidently to the advantage of the pursuer, on the principle in war that night attacks are more successful than those by daylight.

Tracks of these midnight forays were to be found in the morning in the fragments of shells. The result of cannibalism among the young lobsters is that out of a hundred about twenty-five survive, a demonstration of the Darwinian law of the survival of the fittest.

In the cannibal stage of their existence they are about three-quarters of an inch in length, and when the survivors grow to be two and a half inches in length from the tail to the tip of the claws they have outgrown their blood-thirsty instincts.—New York Herald.

Sleeping on a Cobra. An old gentleman living in India said to his wife one morning: "My dear, I have had a very strange dream. I dreamed I was sleeping on a cobra."

"What nonsense!" was her retort. "How could that be?" "Well, my dear," he responded meekly, "I did dream it, and I only hope it wasn't true."

The next night he had the same dream, and in the morning announced the fact, only to encounter his wife's ridicule on the score of his weak nerves. Nevertheless he had the same dream once more.

JOSH BILLINGS' PHILOSOPHY.

Martyr for love may be a little risky, but it is so honest that God can't help but smile on it.

I think I would rather have a nose 7 inches and a half long (in the clear) than to be the handsomest man in our county, for in the first case I should work hard to shorten it, while in the other case I probably should never be told by my looking-glass that I was a fool.

Awl human happiness is conservatism; 2 thirds of the pleasure of sliding down hill consists in drawing the sled back. I don't suppose there would be any fun in sliding down a hill 34 miles long.

Awl or we complain of the shortness of our life, yet we all waste more time than we use.

Some people are fond of bragging about their ancestors, and their grate descent, when in fact their grate descent is just what's the matter with them.

We are told that "an honest man is the noblest work of God." But the demand for the work has been so limited that I have thought a large share of the best edison must still be in the author's hands.

I never bet any money on the man who is always telling what he would he did if he had been there; I have noticed that this kind never git thare.

Success in life is very apt to be made us forget the time when we wasn't much. It is just so with the frog on the jump; he can't remember when he was a tadpole—but other folks can.

I always advise short sermons, especially on a hot Sunday. If a minister can't strike fire in boring 40 minutes, he has either got a poor gimlet or is boring in the wrong place.

A Temperance Congress. A temperance Congress will be held at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago the first week in June, 1893. An elaborate program has been arranged by the committee of the National Temperance Society, who have the matter in charge. The congress will be for deliberation only; no resolutions will be entertained or action taken. Papers prepared by specialists in different parts of the world on thirty-eight assigned topics will be presented. The reading and discussion of these papers will be conducted in French and English, in four sections of the congress, sitting simultaneously and arranged as follows: 1. Scientific and medical; 2. educational and economic; 3. religious and miscellaneous; 4. legislative and political. The State Department will further the purposes of the gathering by instructing consuls of the United States to report, for the information of the congress, concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic in the countries in which they are located. The National Society has shown commendable wisdom and foresight in planning this early and adequate view on temperance reform at the meeting place of the nations.

A Negro's Prayer. A teacher, in one of the colored schools at the South, was about to go away for a season, and an old negro poured out for her the following fervent petitions, which we copy from a private letter: "I give you the words," said the writer, "but they convey no idea of the pathos and earnestness of the prayer." "Go afore her as a leadin' light, an' behind her as a proteetin' angel. Rough-shod her feet wid de preparation ob de gospel of peace. Nail her ear to de gospel plack. Gib her de eye ob de eagle dat she spy out sin'far off. Wax her hand to de gospel pluck. Tie her tongue to de line of truf. Keep her feet in de narrow way and her soul in de channel ob faith. Bow her head low beneath her knees, an'—her knees way down in some lonesome valley where prayer and supplication is much wanted to be made. Hedge an' ditch 'bout her, good Lord, an' keep her in de strait an' narrow way dat leads to Heaven."—Ex.

Old Nick's Suster. A story is told of a shrewish woman who tried to wean her husband from the dram shop by employing her brother to act the part of a ghost, and frighten John on his way home.

"Who are you?" said the man, as the apparition rose before him from behind a bush. "I am Old Nick," was the reply. "Come away, man," said John, nothing daunted. "Give me a shake of your hand. I am married to a sister of yours."

Concord Times. A few Sunday mornings ago Rev. Slade, pastor of the colored Methodist church, announced to his congregation that they had not paid his salary, and that he would positively not administer the sacrament to them until they did so. The morning was the time of a regularly communion service, but he flatly refused to administer it to his flock, and told them that they should not receive it at night either unless they paid him up. There was a rattling among the dry bones that evening, and every darkey who could raise a nickel saved it for the pastor. His salary was made up at the night service, the sacrament duly administered, and everything is now moving along smoothly.

THE ELECTIONS.

Elections were held on Tuesday, Nov. 3, in twelve States. Generally, not much except local interest is felt in these years in which there is no Presidential election.

Virginia, Maryland, and New Jersey are all Democratic. The most important elections were in five States—New York, Ohio, Massachusetts, Maryland and Iowa, and the Democrats carried all of them except one.

It seems that the People's or Third party has received a blow in the recent elections, of which it is not likely it will recover in time to be in the race in '92.

The President of Brazil has declared himself Dictator. It is said that he was forced to this step by the condition of the Republic and by the army.

Some of the Ohio papers since the election have declared for Foraker for Senator and Blaine for President. The election there has complicated affairs for the Republicans to some extent.

The Board of Commissioners for Pitt County, met this day. present C. D. Dawson, chairman, T. E. Keel, C. V. Newton and Leonidas Fleming.

by this result, is put in the front rank as the Democratic candidate for the next President.

There were large Democratic gains in the country districts that swelled the majority beyond the expectations of the most sanguine.

The following order was passed by the board: The Governor of North Carolina having notified this board that a special term of the Superior Court for Pitt County had been ordered to be held for the trial of civil cases only, commencing on the 14th day of December, 1891, and continuing until all the business of said Court shall be disposed of, provided said term shall not exceed one week, it is therefore ordered by the Board that the Chairman cause advertisement of the same to be made according to law.

It is ordered by the Board that the Justices of Peace for the County be notified to meet at the Court House in Greenville on Monday, the 7th day of December, 1891, at 12 o'clock M., for the purpose of electing a member of the Board of County Commissioners to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of G. ### DIVES.

Could he, whom now we call "the late,"
Sneak past the watchful Carberus
And visit once more his estate,
What would he think of all this fuss?
We say his kindred are bereft,
Use speech polite about the dead,
Although he scarce has one friend left;
Of reputation: not a shred!
He hoarded stocks and bonds for years;
With fortune had his many spats;
Ah, could he know how few the tears!
His heirs fight like Kilkenny cats.
He hoped the glory of his gain
Would, like the comets, blaze behind;
Alas, they prove he was insane!
Who riches wins must lose his mind.
He sowed the wind, this moneybags;
They harvest it who break his trust;
The whirlwind not a moment lags,
His treasure gets no time to rust!
He closed his eyes well satisfied,
But all were not so pleased as he,
Newspapers flourish since he died,
For Dives has now the leprosy!
Fables and errors are reviewed;
Lawyers partition his estate;
His virtues are in court eschewed;
It sounds correct to say "the late."
—Mrs. N. B. Morange in Arkansas Traveler.

Poets' Birthdays.

An insurance actuary in former days would hardly have considered a poet's a "good" life. The average was servously pulled down by those favorites of the Muses who thought that decent living and regular habits were inconsistent with their vocation. Byron, Heine, Musset, Poe and others died young, not because they were poets, but because they did not keep their passions and their appetites in good order. But in these later days we know that the greatest poet may be the "sanest," and pass into old age, hale and green, as peacefully as if he had never wandered over the slopes of Helicon.

The great Goethe grew old as comfortably as any well-to-do bourgeois, and was full of life and vigor at fourscore. So was Victor Hugo. Browning at seventy was a constant diner-out and the soul of every party in which he found himself.—St. James Gazette.

How Vessels Go Through the Suez Canal.

The average time of transit of the Suez canal by day is twenty-four hours; by night with electric lights it is nineteen hours, and has been done in fifteen hours. In order to navigate by night a vessel must light the way by carrying an electric projector at her bow as close to the water as possible, and pay the closest attention to the orders from the passing stations or gares. Three white lights shown vertically indicate "slow down;" then the display of two white lights is the order to stop and haul into the gare. The steamer presently hauls in, makes fast, puts out all lights and lies snug in her berth alongside the desert, while the oncoming vessel, looking like a locomotive at night, passes by. One white light from the gare and lines are let go, and the journey continued until Suez is reached.—Lieutenant Ridgely Hunt in Scribner's.

Antiquity of the Umbrella.

No one knows whether the umbrella was originally used as a defense against rain or a screen from the sun, but it seems probable that the first umbrellas were sunshades. In countries where very little clothing is worn rain does not make much difference, but the sun is a power. Why shouldn't the palm leaf be the first sunshade, with its ribs and handles to order? It hints at the umbrella as well as the fan.

Travelers among the Ainos of Japan often make temporary sunshades of gigantic dock leaves, which are sometimes six feet high, large enough for an account of Gulliver. The umbrella has a very great antiquity. The word itself means a "little shadow," showing that it was named for its protection from the sun in this case. Horace says,
"Among the military standards the sun beholds an Egyptian canopy."—Iris Times.

Banquets and Dinners.

Styling a public dinner a "banquet" is something of a mistake; that is, if the use of the word "banquet" is to add more dignity to the occasion, or even to be more uppish or bumpious or "toplofty." "Banquet," from the French and Spanish, means a small bench, a little seat, and when spelled banquets means a three legged stool.
It has reference to sitting while eating, instead of taking refreshment in "stand up" fashion, as at one of our Wistar parties or at a free lunch counter. The truth is that "banquet" is simply a grandiose expression—ambitious and somewhat "affected."—Philadelphia Ledger.

FOUGHT WITH BANANA SKINS.

Thrown on a Stoop by an Enemy, the Fool Proves a Powerful Weapon.

She was walking rapidly up the little walk leading to the front steps of a house on Ferry street. It was her walk and her house, and she had a right to walk any way she chose. That disgusting Brown family next door might better mind their own business and stop watching her. So she was saying to herself, when—flop! thump!
—her feet went from under her and she found herself sitting uncomfortably hard upon that same walk which a moment before she had been treading so proudly. Slowly, she picked herself up and ruefully she looked at the banana peel which had caused her downfall. A half suppressed titter came from the window of the house next door.

"So that's their trick, is it?" she muttered scornfully, tossing her head toward her enemies. "Well, it's a game two can play at."

The next morning the old man Brown got up rather early and started to walk down town. He had barely reached his front steps when he struck something. It carried him off his feet like a cyclone. He went bumpety bump down the steps. At the bottom he struck something else. It carried him along a few feet farther and then shot him into a barbed wire fence which had been mysteriously strung across the path during the night.

The fence stopped him. But what a sight he was! His clothes were torn and covered with mud and ashes. The mud and ashes had also mysteriously got on the path during the night. His flesh was lacerated and bruised and his little finger was broken in two places.

He picked himself up and crawled back into the house and up to the room of his youngest son.

"Ben," he said, "was it you put that banana peel on the Widder Smith's walk yesterday?"

"Yep."

"Well, you young rascal, take that for it, and that!" and he began administering kicks on the person of his son till the youngster howled with pain.

Then as he crawled off in search of the arnica bottle he murmured: "I don't blame the widder a bit. It was a mean trick, but it was a blamed sight meaner of her to take revenge on me when I'm the only one in our family that has stood up for her."—Buffalo Express.

Buy a Secondhand Boat.

When a boy has learned to sail a boat, and has discovered how very delightful sailing is, he is sure to wish for a yacht of his own; nor is he likely to be content until the desire for ownership shall have been satisfied by actual possession. The chief obstacle with which he has to contend, of course, is the cost, for yachts are expensive toys, and not every one can afford to purchase them. But a careful and patient person may, nevertheless, possess himself of a small yacht if he will buy with discretion and at the right season of the year, which is the autumn.

Yachtsmen are droll fellows; they build costly boats, use them a year or two and then sell them for any price they can secure, often less than a quarter of their original cost. Therefore, I say that the ownership of a nice little yacht is not beyond the possibilities if a boy loves a boat and is determined to own one, for pluck, luck and patience accomplish wonders.—F. W. Pangborn in St. Nicholas.

A temptation to avoid is the constantly recurring one to repeat the funny sayings of one's own children, especially before them. A painful recollection occurs of a nervous, only child, whose active brain led her often to make extremely bright speeches, which were repeated with much glee by her unwise mother, whether the child was present or not. One day after this had occurred the child lifted up her shrill voice from the corner of the room where she was sitting, and said, "Go on, mamma, tell 'em that funny thing I said the other day about God!" The mother was much shocked, and it is hoped profited by the lesson thus taught her.—Housewife.

You would naturally suppose that ice would be thicker on still water—a lake or reservoir, for example—than it would be in the midchannel of a swift river. But it is not. According to observations made by the Davenport (Ia.) Academy of Sciences, when ice is nine inches thick on the lakes the channel ice is eighteen inches thick on the Mississippi river.—St. Louis Republic.

USEFULNESS OF SWIMMING.

A Professor That Taught the Art and Yet Could Not Swim Himself.

In my boyhood days water never had any love for me. Whenever I used to go with my playmates to take a bath in the creek near the town where I was born, it would do all in its power to envelop me and draw me down to the bottom. I shunned it.

But a distressing incident changed my determination never to go near water again. I was crossing the old wooden bridge that spanned the creek near our house, when a woman and her child fell into the creek. Both were being rapidly swept away by the strong current and I jumped into the creek. I reached the side of the woman, how I do not know today, and tried to pull them toward the shore, but the antipathy of the water was again aroused and I felt myself sinking. Passers by rescued us and I was the guy of the whole town. Even today some of my friends remind me of that occasion.

Then I swore that I would learn to swim. Not far from where I lived was a school for swimming conducted by a corpulent, good natured gentleman, known as the "Professor." It was to him I went.

He made some sarcastic remarks about the inability of a young man of my age to swim. The first lesson came.
A rope was tied around my waist and the professor held the end of it. The first thing I knew I was floundering at the bottom of the tank, gasping for breath. That good natured professor had thrown me into the water. I tried to cry out to him to pull me out, but my mouth filled with water. Presently I felt myself drawn to the surface, and the professor politely asked me how I enjoyed it. I calmed my wrath and told him it was the happiest day of my life. "Now," said he, "you do the strokes as I count."

"One, two, three. One, two, three."
A little more of that and the first lesson was over. So it went on for ten lessons, the professor never missing the chance to pitch me into the tank when I wasn't looking. I made rapid progress and was soon able to swim without anybody's assistance, although the professor still persisted in having the rope around my waist.

It was near my last lesson. The professor and I were alone in the school. He was busily engaged in beating time with his hand—"One, two, three"—and I was doing the strokes. Suddenly there was a heavy splash beside me that sent the water high in the air. The professor had fallen into the water. I had never yet caught him in the water and I felt that it was my chance now to get even with him for always ducking me so unceremoniously. His big, fat head presently appeared on the surface, and I was rather surprised at the peculiar strokes he was making—strokes so different from those he taught the pupils.

"For heaven's sake, save me," he cried. "I'll drown."

"Are you crazy?" said I. "Why should I save you?" I was afraid that he had some trick ready to play upon me.

"Don't stay there and look at me," he whimpered. "I cannot swim."

"You can't swim! Why, you are a professor of swimming!"

"Yes," he cried, "but I only teach by theory; I never could swim myself." I crawled out of the water and laughed aloud. Was there ever anything to equal this? A teacher of a swimming school not able to swim himself.

My turn had come now. I called in all the pupils and explained the situation to them, and we looked at him helpless in the water and only greeted his cries for help with derision. However, when there was really danger of his drowning we pulled him out, and it is needless to say that there was no swimming school in that town after that. But although I was taught to swim by a professor who was only a master of the theoretical knowledge of that art, I became an expert at it, and I am happy to say that I was never guyed again after we had saved the swimming teacher from drowning in his own tank.

They Shake Their Own Hands.

When among the Chinese settlers on the tobacco plantations in the island of Sumatra I discovered for the first time that the correct way of saluting "John" is to shake not his hand but your own, and I was frequently amused with the sight of two men shaking their own hand with the utmost warmth and cordiality, instead of that of their neighbor.—David Ker in New York Knock.

STORY OF A PIANO.

A Genius Who Found Difficulty in Keeping a Vow to His Sweetheart.

Probably the severest ordeal that genius can undergo is to be deprived of the exercise of its powers. M. de Pont-martin had a pathetic illustration of this in his acquaintance with one of the greatest pianists of the present century.
He relates the strange story in "Les Souvenirs d'un Vieux Critique." Though not a player himself, M. de Pontmartin had a fine piano. One day the proprietor of the village hotel called to say that the evening before a gentleman, apparently a Hungarian or an Austrian, had arrived at his house, a person about M. Pontmartin's age, elegant of appearance and wearing an expression of touching melancholy.

In the morning, it seemed, the stranger would take no breakfast, but besought M. Pierron, the hotel keeper, for a piano, saying that circumstances had prevented his touching one for a year.

A little later the stranger was seated at M. Pontmartin's piano, and it was soon manifest that he was not only a wonderful artist but an inventor of new methods, whose touch tripled the power and volume of the instrument.
He played on and on. Shortly before midnight he seemed to put his whole soul into improvising a funeral march, which ended with a finale of wonderful tragic beauty just as the village clock struck 12.

"Adieu and thanks," said the strange guest, not waiting to hear M. Pont-martin's exclamation: "It is I who thank you! My piano is sacred henceforth." The next morning he went away, begging M. Pierron not to ask his real name.

The following year, just after hearing Liszt, M. Pontmartin called on his friend, Zimmermann. He was explaining to the incredulous musician that his admiration for the great Liszt was tempered by the memory of an incomparable genius whom he had heard at Avignon, when there was a knock at the door, and as the critic relates, "I heard a voice that thrilled me say,
'May I enter?' 'Sigismund Thalberg,' cried Zimmermann in joyful surprise.

"I recognized my mysterious visitor, but my delight was checked by the sadness in his face. He said to me, 'My dear sir, I owe you an explanation.
On the 30th of April I promised Catherine B—, a beautiful girl whom I loved, that I would not touch a piano until April 30 of the next year; this is an evidence that my piano and my art were not first in my regard. At the end of the year she was to become my wife.

"Well, you know the rest. I thought that terrible year would never end. I traveled constantly to distract my mind and to pass the time more endurably. I reached Avignon the 29th of April."

"He stopped. 'And Catherine?' I asked.

"She died on the 30th, at the very hour when I finished the funeral march, just as the clock in the belfry struck midnight."

Didn't Remember the Name.

At the time when Napoleon was the most prominent figure in Europe one man at least was little impressed with his greatness. The conqueror's name actually slipped his mind, so slightly did his career concern the world that for the artist centered in his studio.

Edgar Quinet relates that when he went to Germany he visited the old sculptor, Dannecker.

"We talked," he says, "of art, and the sculptor was eloquent over his theories.
Suddenly, wishing to fix a date, he stopped, reflected, and finally said:

"I think it was in the time of that man—what is his name? you know the man; the one who has won so many battles. I've forgotten the name. You must know it?"

"'Are you speaking of Napoleon?' I asked.

"'Yes, yes, that is it,' cried the artist, and went on with his interrupted statement without giving the incident a second thought.—Youth's Companion.

The Largest Meteor.

Probably the largest meteor that ever scathed the surface of the earth lies on the plains of Incunman, in South America, where it fell. It measures 7-12 feet in length and weighs between fourteen and fifteen tons. Perhaps the next largest is the one, well known to tourists, that lies at the foot of a lesser mountain of the Alps range.—New York Recorder.

Messrs. H. F. Keel and W. B. James left yesterday morning for Rocky Mount where they are to serve as marshals at the fair.
Rev. J. C. Burris, editor University Herald, will preach at King's Roads on Monday, 16th, and Greenville Tuesday night, 17th Nov.
Rev. A. D. Hunter, Messrs. J. J. Cherry and C. D. Rountree will attend the Baptist State Convention which begins in Goldsboro to-day.
Mrs. Alfred Forbes and daughter Miss Hortense, left Monday for Raleigh, to attend the exposition and see Miss Rosa, who is at St. Mary's.
Mr. J. Bryan Grimes of Grimesland and Messrs. Taylor, Blount and Mitchell, of Washington took the train here yesterday morning for Raleigh.
Mrs. J. R. Walker, of Cary who was visiting her daughter, Mrs. A. D. Hunter, left for home yesterday. Mrs. Hunter and the young lady accompanied her home and will remain some days in Wake.
Superior Court Clerk E. A. Moyer, Sheriff J. A. K. Tucker, Rev. A. D. Hunter, ex Gov. T. J. Jarvis, Capt. S. T. Hocker, Messrs. J. J. Cherry, W. L. Brown, J. S. Congleton, Allen Warren, S. B. Hardee, J. B. McGowan and F. Fleming left yesterday morning to attend the exposition at Raleigh. This is Old Fellows' day there, and Gov. Jarvis will make a speech.
Dissolution of the firm of Hart & Hardee.
Mr. President: Where is your Thanksgiving proclamation?
The weather continues beautiful, but it is too dry for the handling of tobacco.
Riverside Nursery is now a beautiful cypressatum show and worth going to see.
Business men should engage advertising space in the DAILY REFLECTOR before it is too late.
There's hardly a doubt that old Joe Forbes cooks the best oyster of any restaurateur in town.
The town looked almost deserted yesterday. It goes down as one of the exceptionally dull days.
Judging from the size of the building going up the Greenville Land Improvement Co's mill will be an immense plant.
Run your eye through your pack house and get out some of the finest tobacco for the Rocky Mount Exposition, Dec. 2nd.
The Tar River Transports Co. will bring delegates and visitors to the Conference over their line at one fare for the round trip.
Our friends in the country having turkeys, chickens and hams to dispose of can find ready sale for them in town between now and the Conference.
The REFLECTOR wants to see Greenville's population soon double what it now is, but this cannot be so unless there are more dwelling houses and a good hotel.
The Scotland Neck Democrat is eight years old. Mr. Hilliard has had charge of it for about four years and is making the Democrat well worthy an extensive patronage.
We just don't believe it would be healthy for a burglar to hit Greenville. He would be apt to find more shooting iron pointed at him than he could shake a stick at.
We see none of the outward preparations for the Conference yet. The town certainly ought to be cleaning up and putting on her best looks. Conference is only two weeks off.
D. D. Haskett & Co. take a margin advertisement on first page of the REFLECTOR to tell you the New Lee and New Patron stoves are the best made. Paste that line in your hat.
The REFLECTOR office is getting to be a regular bee-hive of industry. It is now printing three different papers besides doing its run of job work. Both force and material has been increased.
The editor is in receipt of a neat invitation card announcing that Mr. Charles F. Clayton and Miss Lala V. Ward will be married in Calvary church, Tarboro, at noon of Wednesday, 18th inst.
The parties taken in hand by Policeman Smith Friday night were not burglars, as some supposed, and were not bent on any mischief. They were only a couple who were sailing with too full heads and had lost their bearings so the Sergeant went out and piloted them in.

A telegram received by Mr. J. R. Moore, President of the company, Friday morning, stated that the lumber mill at Kenly caught on fire Thursday night, but was extinguished without damage.
The very low price of cotton will likely cause a much less acreage of it next year. They are wise resolutions the Alliances of some counties are adopting not to plant but five acres in cotton to the horse next year.
James E. Shepherd Jr., a son of Justice Shepherd of the Supreme Court, died at Bingham School, Asheville, on the 1st inst. The remains were taken to Washington, Judge Shepherds home, and interred last Wednesday.
Messrs. Alexander, Morgan & Co., commission merchants, Norfolk, Va., received 273 bales cotton on Saturday Oct. 31st. Give them a trial when you ship your cotton, peanuts or grain if you want prompt returns and best prices.
Two notices of corporation before the Superior Court Clerk appear in our advertising columns to-day, one of the Carolina Paint Company, the other of the Carolina Lumber Co. Both these companies mean the turning loose of more money in Greenville and will add to the prosperity of the community.
As we have been talking about improving the roads it might be well to remind the town street committee that now while it is dry would be a good time to do some work at the top of the hill leading to the bridge. During wet seasons some very bad mud holes are there and they ought to be filled up.
Congleton & Tyson tell REFLECTOR readers to-day that they will sell their dry goods, notions, shoes, hats, crockery, wood, willow and glass ware at cost. These goods will be run off at cost because they want to close out that part of their stock as hereafter conducted only a fine grocery business. During the next thirty days they can give you bargains.
Diss.
In this town on Thursday night, 5th inst., Mr. John Quinn, in his 38th year. He had been in very bad health for some weeks. The burial took place in Cherry Hill Cemetery Friday afternoon. Deceased left a wife and two children who have the sympathy of the community.
$1200 Reward.
The Board of County Commissioners, realizing the importance of suppressing the lawlessness and incendiarism that has existed in a portion of Chicod township, at their last meeting supplemented the rewards offered by the Governor for the apprehension of the parties who set fire to the property of J. J. Laughinghouse, of Mrs. J. H. Saunders and of J. Bryan Grimes. The State reward is $200 in each instance, making $600. The County Commissioners duplicated these amounts offered by the Governor which brings the total amount of rewards up to $1200. This amount ought to be sufficient to induce some good detectives to take hold of the case who can work it out and bring the incendiaries to justice. It is hoped such may be the result.
Amateur Theatrical—Brilliant Success.
How could it be otherwise with that estimable lady, Mrs. Gov. Jarvis, at the head? Those who know how well Mrs. Jarvis manages such entertainments are well aware of her rare abilities and enjoyed a fine treat at the Opera House last Thursday evening; those who failed to attend indeed missed a rare and choice entertainment.
The entertainment opened with a recitation by the charming and bewitching Miss Carraway, who for several minutes superbly entertained the audience with an excellent recitation—The Stampede.
The certain next rose for "Ye Olde Folke" dialogue which was excellently rendered by Miss Sallie Marshall and Mrs. Jarvis. Miss Marshall as Susan Deliverance Sweetbrier was splendid, while Mrs. Jarvis as Obejovial Singlesister brought down the house. Her make-up as a maiden lady of the old school was excellent, beyond description, and her recital of the "patent thing" was admirably rendered and received with applause.
The next was the event of the evening, "Noemie," a drama in two acts, which was produced with a style and composure rarely shown by amateurs, and showed excellent training. Every good feature was strongly presented. To compliment any character would be impossible, as all were so finely produced.
The graceful and queenly Miss Foley as "Valentine" fairly sustained her reputation as an amateur of more than ordinary talent.
The charming and fascinating Miss Carraway as "Noemie" captivated the house with the pathos and feeling displayed in representing the orphan.
The bewitching and vivacious Miss Jarvis as "Annette," elicited rounds of applause by her graceful appearance on the stage and her desire to wed at all events.
The stately and attractive Miss King as "Marguerite" was applauded for her quiet bearing.
The handsome and sprightly Miss Skinner as maid was attractively attractive.
For the male characters, the handsome and composed Mr. Wilson as the "Count" excellently performed the duties devolving on him as husband, father and uncle.
Mr. Jones, sedate and polished, admirably presented the character of "Jules," a reserved young man.
Mr. Heilbronner, ugly and awkward, kept the house in good humor by his portrayal of "Eleonore," a young man whose "debts" were a source of much trouble to himself and his uncle, the count.
All the minor characters were also strongly presented.
A fair audience greeted the amateurs and were delighted to know that Mrs. Jarvis would soon again entertain them with another play. The proceeds go to the Presbyterian church of this place.
It is rumored that Mrs. Jarvis intends taking the company to Kinston in which event a rare treat is in store for our sister town.

Dissolution.
The firm of Hart & Hardee, doing business at Rocky Mount, N. C., is dissolved by mutual consent. N. F. Carr, of Willow Green, is to draw from the firm all debts due to the firm, and to whom all claims due the old firm must be paid. W. F. HART, N. F. CARR, W. F. HARDEE, H. M. HARDEE.
