WHERE ARE THEY? What has become of the cast-off coats That coverd Will Shakespeare's back? What has become of the old rowboats of Kild and his pirate craft?

After these sententious remarks the youth turned and walked up Newspaper row. "There is a youngster who will be worth a big fortune in time," said a bystander.

"What's another," he remarked to a serene and observant individual at the end of the next seat. "A woman comes off a car while facing the right way; at least I've never seen one like it."

"He began to think of the early legends; of Charon, the god, renouncing his immortality; of the Hyperborean, the fabled people, famous for their fidelity, who voluntarily threw themselves into the sea; of Juno bringing death to Biton and Cleobis as the highest recompense of their piety."

"Papa," came the insistent inquiry, "don't the police men know any better than to put 'U. S. Mail' on their wagons? Mamma spanked me northward when I said 'U. S. Mail' instead of 'Our Mail'?"

"That money was put into two other stands that he established in the uptown district. All of them succeeded, and the number was gradually increased until a year ago he had thirteen boys at stands and eleven around the ferry entrances working for him."

"What?" "Ambidexterity—ability to use both hands," the philosopher explained. "The trouble is that most people can use the right hand only in grasping anything, with confidence in the effort—women particularly."

"He poured out more absinthe and put the bottle down empty. Before drinking he undid the package which he had bought from the chemist. First he took from it a box about three inches long. It was a tiny syringe and with it two little instruments. One of these he adjusted in the projecting tube and with his finger felt his way from myself. And yet he pleased himself as mine has been, many times have I found it grateful. After all, it is not life that is short; it is youth. When that goes, as mine seems to have gone, outside of solitude there is little charm in anything, and what is death but isolation the most perfect and impenetrable that nature has devised?"

"What is the price of that?" asked he. "It's a crown." "Could you get me some more of them?" "Well, let me have twenty tomorrow evening."

As a family medicine for general use I consider Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy ahead of anything I have ever seen; and we try it for everything, on man and beast, and like a good friend, it is always ready to help us. I was a frequent sufferer from severe attacks of colic; at such times I would take a big dose, a wine-glass and a half full, which always gave me immediate relief, and its continued use has entirely cured me of the trouble. Being a farmer, I frequently have accidents among my stock. On one occasion I poured some of the Wash on a hog which had been badly bitten and torn by dogs, and the places were alive with vermin; as soon as the Wash touched the affected parts the vermin would leave, and there was no further trouble. I have saved two valuable head of stock by an application of the Wash, and, unlike other things usually used, it is perfectly painless. I think all farmers who own stock should try this great remedy in such cases; it is worth its weight in gold. If all knew the worth of your Remedy and Wash, I do not think you could supply the demand. ABRAHAM C. WOODY, Deputy Sheriff, Person Co., N. C. Bethel Hill, October 3, 1895. BROWN'S IRON BITTERS cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion & Debility. Beware. Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "The name as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—they are not, and they will do you harm. Beware! Beware! Beware!

40 Acres and a Mule. We still hear an occasional good Third party joke. We were told that a rank thirder of this county went over to Snow Hill court last week to trade horses. A man there under the name of "President Harrison" was introduced to him. They stepped aside for a talk and traded horses. The man returned much elated over the fact that he had traded horses with "President Harrison." The story goes that the man says that "President Harrison" told him confidentially that he was not going to allow Cleveland to take his seat, that he knew there was a lot of fraud in the last election and that he had come down to Greene county to have Grover indicted and keep him out of the office. He, "President Harrison," was going to keep the office and would give all the thirder fat jobs. And they do say that the fellow actually thinks it was President Harrison, and is waiting for his "fat job" to come along. Another good one comes down from Falkland township. A P. M. man up there was a pretty strong believer in the $50 per capita business when Weaver got in. One day a letter was received marked all the way from Kansas. The signature to the letter was "Mrs. Lease," and it said "here is your $50 in advance—send me word how many children you have so I can have their share ready." He went to "counting children," and happening to intimate his "good fortune" to a friend was asked to show the money, and gave away the fact that he was cherishing $50 in Confederate bills that somebody had sent him. Another man who was a candidate had some of his church associates to meet the night before election and pray for him. The day after election somebody went to him and said: "You all must have been badly wrong." "Why so?" he asked. "Well, we are told that the prayer of the righteous availeth much, but it seems there was 'nothing available' on all your side." A Notable Float in our Trades Parade. One of the most notable floats in Wilmington's trades parade last Wednesday night was that of Dr. D. S. Harmon, the public spirited and able optician, so well known to the people of Wilmington and to all North Carolina. It was fourteen feet in length and twelve feet in height and was tastefully decorated with National flags and red, white and blue bunting. On a banner in large letters was the legend, "Dr. D. S. Harmon, Optician and Inventor," and the float was beautifully lighted by lanterns and Japanese lights at the top and sides. So far as real value goes, there was doubtless no float in the parade that could equal it, as on the dais was an aggregation of wonderful and valuable instruments that were both rare and attractive as well. On the front of the dais were two operating chairs in which sat two of the doctor's patients, and next to them was an instrument invented in Paris in 1889. It was on a beautiful oak table with an elevating device that regulated the top of the table to suit the height of the person. This table was invented by Dr. Harmon since his residence in Wilmington and was built by Messrs. Lurr & Bailey. The next was a fine nickel plated instrument four and a half feet high, with a large wheel on top, used for examining rays of light. This instrument was invented by Dr. Harmon and it required twelve years in which to perfect it. It was built in North Carolina, and is used for examining the eye. There was still another instrument on the float, one invented by Dr. Harmon at San Francisco in 1883, and to which he gave the name of "optometer." It is a very wonderful instrument and is used for examining each eye separate or both together as desired. There was even another instrument which was invented by Dr. Harmon in Wilmington late in September 1892, to be used for examining asthenopia or weakness of the sight. There was also on the float a very little but important instrument, invented in Paris, and used for examining pupils. Its companion was an oculist trial case, imported, and used in examining the eye. On the rear of the dais were two more operating chairs in which sat another patient and an attendant. Thus was made up the float of Dr. Harmon and it was quite creditable to this eminent specialist. He is a new comer in our midst but he is public spirited, liberal and progressive, and we are glad to know that he is meeting up with the success he so richly deserves. He is a conscientious and painstaking professional man, and his work in his line is almost universally satisfactory. He knows what he is doing, and is thoroughly equipped with ability and instruments, he has the confidence of the public and will continue to be at the head of his profession.—Wilmington Messenger, Dec. 4th. Julia E. Johnson, Stafford's P. O., S. C., writes: "I had suffered 13 years with eczema and was at times confined to my bed. The itching was terrible. My son-in-law got me one-half dozen bottles of Boree Blood Balm which entirely cured me, and I ask you to publish this for the benefit of others suffering in like manner." decl-im.

COTTON MARKET. [Reported by Cobb Bros.] NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 2nd, 1892.—After our last letter the market continued to decline until Monday, 5th, the lowest point for the recent decline (9 cents for middling) being reached on that date, with scarcely any demand for cotton. For three days our quotations were unchanged in figure but on Wednesday, 7th, the market strengthened up considerably, the demand improved and for the first time in a week cotton brought quotations. Values continued on the increase and during the remaining two days of the week the price advanced half cent and at the close of the week-to-night (Friday) the market is steady at 91 cents for middling with indications of a weaker market to-morrow. Plantation prices are higher than ever in comparison with export prices, which shows either a narrow margin in marketing or a holding for future advance. During the entire week the cotton market has been exceedingly nervous and excited and overshadowed by the Hatch Anti-Option bill now pending in the U. S. Senate. The advance of the past two days is due to the delayed action on the Anti-Option bill and the growth of the belief in a short crop. It is stated that Shepperson's estimate of the crop of this season is 4,500,000. Liverpool is reported steady, little doing at a decline of 1-16d during the week. Stock and stock afloat for Liverpool is as follows: 1891-92 1892-93 Stock & stock afloat, 1,061,000 1,565,000 American, 1,488,000 1,300,000 Below we give the movement for the week: WEEKLY PORT MOVEMENT. 1892 1891 Receipts at U. The movement of the cotton crop thus far this season would indicate that there was some foundation for the bad crop accounts daily reaching us from all parts of the cotton territory, if so the staple is selling too cheap and parties wishing to hold for higher prices can do so by shipping it to us and drawing for $25.00 per bale on same and having it held for six months is so desired. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.
