ONE DAY'S FISHING. "Like a blooming idiot," said the major, "I agreed to take the colonel fishing. Well, the next afternoon, which was Saturday, he came around with a fishing rod that I gave him, and when I got into the cab blame me if he didn't have a trunk. Got my things in that, said he, and may I eternally fry if there weren't things enough in that trunk to stock a pawnshop. By g-d, he had everything from evening clothes to a patent bootjack. But he hasn't taken any more," and the major chuckled.

"We started for Mud Run, out in Pennsylvania. I'd never been there before, but a man told me there was good fishing there. He was a liar, by the way. "About the time we got started the colonel wanted to smoke, and by the hick hobs of Gehenna if he hadn't packed all the cigars in that bloody trunk. When I cursed he tried to get up in the baggage car and was nearly killed. Then he got some bad cigars from the porter and growled for an hour steady. Pretty soon he wanted a drink and the whisky was in that confounded trunk.

"The woman at the hotel where we got out said it was too late to get anything to eat, and the colonel got mad and called me a burbling chump for dragging him out into the wilderness. "When the boy waked us in the morning the colonel kicked because he had to get up so early. He had the device of a time finding his things in that infernal trunk and he kicked because I got impatient.

"The woman at the hotel looked queer when we got down. Going fishing?" she says. "You'd better look out for the constable. It's against the law to fish round here Sundays. "Then the colonel got suspicious, and said he didn't want to be locked up. I got him into the wagon and the driver says: 'Better look out for the constable. It's against the law to fish round here Sundays.'

"Say," says the colonel, "I'm not going to get locked up and bring eternal disgrace upon my family." I choked him off finally, and we started. Then we met a farmer and he told that we'd get in trouble if we fished on Sunday. The driver grinned and the colonel, like the eternal gale, he is, says: "I told you so." I took me about ten minutes to choke him off, but he growled all the way to the stream.

"Say," continued the major, "did you ever see the colonel catch trout? No? Well, neither did anybody else. He couldn't catch a trout in a week of leap years. By g-d, it was a sight to see him whip the stream. It was like driving balky mules over a broken bridge. He banged that river until half the fish in it were scared to death, and I guess he thought he could catch trout by knocking them stone dead with his rod. He lost about two dozen flies trying to cast half the length of his rod and then he got his line all tangled up in the bushes. Did you ever hear the colonel swear? Well, his rod carriers and river pirates aren't in it with the colonel. Talk about breaking the Sabbath. Wily, the colonel swore enough to send an army to petition for eternity.

"While the colonel was cursing everything in sight the driver came tearing down the road, waving his hands like a windmill in full sail. "Hi!" he yelled, "the constable's coming, and he's after you, too. You'd better get. Cut up through the woods there, and I'll meet you at the turn of the pike." "We didn't know where the turn of the pike was, but the colonel grabbed me by the arm and hustled up into the woods. When we got under cover he was steaming like a soap factory, and cursing me, too. "What in the name of thunder did you ever bring me out here for? You want to get me arrested, do you?" "I was that speechless that I couldn't answer. I just stood and looked at him. Pretty soon I recovered.

"Brought you out here?" said I. "You blooming blot of idiocy, who brought you out here? You came yourself." "Then the colonel got madder than ever, and he wouldn't talk again. But that was a mercy. "It was getting along toward dark when we got to the hotel. The colonel was prancing up to the front door when the man who drove the team came out of the barn. "Hey," says he, "the constable's waiting for you fellows. He's over to the hotel."

"Maybe I and the colonel didn't run. We just lit out and hung around in the brush until it was plumb dark. Then we crawled back to the hotel, but the constable was still sitting there.

EXHIBITS OF THE OVERMAN WHEEL CO.'S BICYCLES IN TRANSPORTATION BUILDING. [From the Illustrated American.]

IN TRANSPORTATION BUILDING. Exhibit of the Overman Wheel Company's Bicycles. In the Transportation Building, devoted to all the devices that save the legs and arms of man from labor and fatigue, there is no department more interesting in its way than the exhibits of the manufacturers of bicycles. The bicycle is as yet largely devoted to the pleasure that induces health by keeping its devotees out of doors, breathing the sweet air of the country, and gaining vigor of body and strength of limb in the pursuit of pure physical enjoyment. As there are bicycles and bicycles, so there are varying degrees of excellence in the displays made by the various makers of the wheels. The exhibit of the Overman Wheel Company, of Chicopee Falls, Mass., is the most attractive and artistic in this department, combining as it does simplicity, taste and solid work.

Its pavilion is a structure in the style of the Italian Renaissance, the pillars and fittings being a rich, solid mahogany, adorned on capital, cornice and frieze with a chaste design in gold. The furnishings are in mahogany and Spanish leather, and the rugs and draperies harmonize in tone with the rich artistic red of the tropic wood. In all there is richness and taste and a severe avoidance of ostentation. The narrow space fitted with plate glass cases that overlooks the hall below follows the same scheme of color and decoration.

But this beautiful pavilion is only the husk; the kernel is the bicycle; and the display of bicycles is ample without being bewildering, and without those aids and arts that serve to make the wheels secondary and subordinate to their decorations.

The Overman Company, with New England honesty that is the acme of business foresight, exhibits the same machine here that it offers for sale everywhere. The machine must sell upon its intrinsic merits, upon its strength and durability, upon its latest superiority to other wheels, and not upon special additions that a Fair exhibit may show.

The Overman Company makes only a high grade bicycle, the "Victor" and the "Victoria," and as it is the only company in the country that makes every detail that enters into the wheel within its own factory, it can guarantee its work as being the very best that American skill, knowledge, and ingenuity have so far produced. Its wheels are made for work and not for exhibition; they are designed to give speed, pleasure, and comfort to the men and women who ride them, and not for the professional expert who rides for records and for gain. Hence, the Overman Company's wheels are acknowledged to be the best as they are the highest priced in the market; and it is an old saying, and a true one, that the best is always the cheapest. This concern devotes all its money and attention to the constant improvement of its product; and while others are spending money on making records and hiring professional racers, they are putting their cash into the best product and hiring the most skillful hands and heads in the mechanical world.

The pneumatic tire is essential to all wheels to day, and the tire that is most durable, most inexpensively and most readily repaired is the one the rider desires to have.

The Overman Company's "Victor" pneumatic tire is a two inch vulcanized tire, made in two parts. The outer covering, reinforced by canvas resists pressure, and is unharmed by punctures; the inner tube is pure rubber inflated with air. If the inner tube is punctured it can be removed in-

THE GOLD DRAIN. WHERE IS YOUR BOY?

It may be, and doubtless is, true that the Sherman act is partly responsible for the heavy drain of gold from this country, but there are two other causes which have operated even more than that, very much more, for one of which the Republican party is directly responsible. The other is chargeable to fashion, the fashion which every summer draws a hundred thousand Americans to Europe to spend their money there instead of in their own country.

Under the operation of the high protective tariff, which was devised ostensibly for the purpose of encouraging and fostering American industries, our export business has become so contracted that it is only in the year in which there is an extraordinary demand for American food stuffs that our merchants are not debtors to the European nations they buy from. If it were not for the high tariff there would be a greater demand for our farm products, for they could be paid for in European products for which there might be a demand and a market in this country, but with the high tariff this kind of barter is impossible, and the consequence is that the trading is done on cash basis.

Europe uses very few of the articles manufactured in this country, while we, notwithstanding the protective tariff which was intended to be prohibitory, use an enormous amount of articles manufactured abroad, an amount usually aggregating more by millions than the value of the products we sell abroad. This year it nets about $50,000,000. As this difference cannot be liquidated in money, in the money which the European creditors demand, which is gold, when the time comes for payment the American importers, if they have not the gold, have to hunt themselves to get it, and have sometimes to pay a premium on it to get it.

This was one of the reasons for the big and pressing draws on the U. S. Treasury a couple months ago, and one of the causes, too, which precipitated the monetary trouble from which the country is now suffering by forcing the Secretary to cross the imaginary danger line and invade the tenderly but foolishly nursed so-called gold reserve.

As long as we buy more than we sell, import more than we export, the balance of trade will be against us, we will be in debt to other nations, and will have to pay that debt in the kind of money demanded. When we sell more than we buy, export more than we import, then the case is reversed and the gold comes this way, as it is doing now, since we have begun to make large shipments of grain and hay. Some of that same gold that was squeezed out of the U. S. Treasury a few weeks ago for shipment to pay debts in Europe is now coming back to make another trip across again next year, unless the tariff be so modified as to encourage trade with Europe, encourage exports, and keep our gold at home.

We have now the statistics of the exports and imports since the high tariff era began, but they would show that in the meantime we have paid an enormous amount of gold to make up the difference between our imports and exports.

While this has been going on there has been an annual and an annually increasing flow of American tourists to Europe, who now number about 100,000, who spend the summer lounging in European capitals, or touring, as they call it, and who spend in the aggregate about $100,000,000, every dollar of which stays over there, and all they have to show for it is some time worse than wasted for most of them, and some clothes which ought to have been made by our own tailors and dress-makers, which are bought over there because most of them, except the dresses, are bought cheaper than they are bought in this country, and are yanked in without paying duty.

Considering the amount of gold that goes out of this country annually from these two causes, and which has been going out in greater or less amounts for thirty years, it is not surprising that the stock of gold should be small with us and that when there is anything above an ordinary demand for it, there must be hustling to get it.

A great deal, the greater part of our embarrassment and financial troubles, is the result of our own bungling legislation and our slavish following of what has become a fashion, which annually sends an army of "tourists" to Europe, who see little, learn less, the large majority of whom could spend their time much more beneficially and profitably seeing and becoming acquainted with their own country, which is more so a terra incognita to many of them, than the lands on the other side of the sea.—Wilmington Star.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

There never was a time when so much has been said and written in reference to the currency question as is being said and written now.

The work done by the convention was perfectly satisfactory, and makes the State safe for the Democratic party.

Well! Some of the daily papers that pride themselves on the haste they make after news got the joke badly on themselves last Thursday by printing something that had not occurred.

The Board of Directors of the North Carolina railroad at a meeting last week surrendered the company's exemption from taxation.

The author of "My Sweetheart's Man in the Moon" is said to be in jail for drunkenness, but his song hasn't been arrested yet.

Postmaster General Bissell has decided to abandon the three sizes of postal cards now in use.

Sunshine will come into your home if you will just court its presence, and bury your troubles beneath a smile.

Rev. Dr. Black, superintendent of the Oxford Orphan Asylum, is quoted as saying that unless money comes in speedily thirty-eight of the orphans will have to be dismissed.

platform. It repeals the purchasing clause of the Sherman law and declares it to be the policy of this Government to continue the use of both gold and silver as coin to preserve the parity between them, &c.

The Virginia Democratic State Convention met in the city of Richmond on last Thursday. It was an exceeding large and enthusiastic body.

The contest for the first and second of these offices was sharp but the best of feeling prevailed.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 18, 1893. Senator Vorhees tumbled down a good many imaginary structures when he asked and obtained the consent of the Senate for the Finance committee to hold daily meetings while the Senate is in session.

The House has another week of silver debate ahead of it before the voting begins.

Members of the administration were not surprised at the result of the Behring Sea arbitration.

Representative Grosvenor, of Ohio, appears to be in a bad way. He claimed in a speech made in the House this week that President Cleveland's message to Congress was an appeal to partisanship.

Senator Hill this week introduced a bill for the repeal of the Federal election laws.

Speaker Crisp says, and there is certainly no better authority, that all the talk about this or that man for the chairmanship of this or that important House committee is pure guesswork.

It has been stated here this week that President Cleveland was unalterably opposed to any compromise and desired Congress to either unconditionally repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman law or to let it alone.

Did your neighbor do you a favor when he granted you credit? If not, why didn't you pay cash? Don't grumble when an honest bill is presented.

The last fool who "didn't know it was loaded," came to the front at Batesville, Indiana, the other day, playfully pointed a pistol at the head of his sister.
