

THE REFLECTOR

Greenville, N. C.
D. J. WILSON, Editor and Proprietor
Entered at the post office at Greenville, N. C., as second-class matter, 1883.
WEDNESDAY APRIL 17th, 1895.

The insurrection in Cuba is assuming considerable proportions and it is difficult to see at present what may be its results.

Charlotte has had a seventy thousand dollar fire. It originated in the Ada Cotton Mills. A large amount of cotton was consumed.

The United States Supreme Court has decided that the income tax is constitutional, only Justice Fields dissenting from the opinion.

The war has practically closed between China and Japan. Negotiations for peace are progressing at the instance of China. Japan got the better in this war.

The contract has been let for building the Baptist College in Raleigh. It is proposed to make this school to be the girl what Wake Forest College to the boys in the State.

Mr. W. M. Russ has been nominated for Mayor of the city of Raleigh. He is well known here and his many friends will be gratified to know that he is to be in charge of the affairs of the Capital city. He will make a splendid officer.

It is said that the tax on lawyers and doctors exempts them from giving in any income. This was done too by a "reform" Legislature. The "Big Five" save money by it as they are all corporation lawyers with good incomes.

Governor Carr has commenced proceedings against the Secretary of State, to prevent his publishing the mortgage law, and the case will be heard at the next session of the Supreme Court. So this abominable law of the Douglas will not be put in the code until after the hearing of this case.

The decision on the income tax cut off about half what was expected to be realized from it, but it is said that Mr. Cleveland will not call an extra session of congress to supply the deficiency. It looks as if it is impossible to reach by taxation the property of some of the rich men of the United States.

We notice that some papers are still running the advertisement of Davis, Hill & Co. of Washington D. C. If the editors of such papers have not learned that that firm is a fraud they are mighty slow in keeping up with the news, while if they do know it they are treating their readers with much injustice in advising them to ship produce to a fraudulent firm.

The Democratic Executive Committee met in Raleigh during the present week. Reports from all sections indicate a slide in favor of the Democrats in 1896. The people are thoroughly disgusted with the Fusionists and are ready to repudiate them at the polls when another opportunity is given them.

The new interest law goes into effect to-day. It was passed without a ratifying clause and the code provides that all bills passed without this clause shall go into operation in thirty days after the Legislature adjourns. This body adjourned on the 13th of March and in consequence after to-day the legal rate of interest in North Carolina will be six per cent.

TWO SIDES.

The Democrat is carrying about all the advertisements that we can spare space for now, but we are sorry to say that Scotland Neck gets very little credit for it. If strangers should judge the business of Scotland Neck by the advertisements in the home paper they would say that most of our people had quit business. As a matter of home pride the Democrat would much prefer to insert home advertisements, but if few advertisements ask for space we must sell to them, however poorly it shows for the town. We have worked for glory long enough. We want a little cash now.—Scotland Neck Democrat.

If the Democrat's home people could get space on the same terms as the foreign advertisers—Mastange Liniment and Castoria for instance—we doubt if there would be any cause for complaint against the former.

The canvass of the Republican and Democratic National Committees recently made puts McKinley and Stevenson ahead in the presidential race and Chicago the leading city for the Conventions.

The Motto of Broadus was: "Trust in God and Work." This reminds us of another motto given us by a farmer brother the other day, "Trust in God as though you could do nothing, and work as though works would save you."—Biblical Recorder.

A motion will be made for a rehearing of the income tax. If the Supreme Court decides to have a rehearing the decision of last Monday will be set aside and the case will come up on the docket just as if it had never been heard and will be in effect until after the Court renders another decision. It is thought that this rehearing will depend very much upon whether Justice Jackson's health will allow him to be present. He was not present at the last hearing and the Court was a tie upon some of the features of the bill. It is said that Mr. Cleveland will in the meantime fill out his blank putting his salary and all in to be taxed.

It is really amusing to see how the Progressive Farmer and Caucasian try to make it appear that some Democrat got the mortgage law through and had it properly signed. If this is true then it was a pretty set they had as officers and committees. For a Democrat to have gotten the bill though he would have had to bribe both the enrolling clerks, then the enrolling committee, because a bill is not signed until it is examined by this committee and certified that it is all right. There were at least four men, Satterfield, Brown, Moody and Starbuck, that would have agreed before a Democrat could have done the work. What the above papers are saying in reference to this matter is profane positive that they are not fit to be read by decent people. They don't hesitate to lie, and lie wilfully and knowingly as is shown not only by this case but many others. We don't blame them for being ashamed of the acts of the body, but they seemed called upon to defend it, and in consequence have to resort to such means because the truth would convict their own claim. The sooner people stop reading such papers the better it will be for North Carolina.

The Geo. P. Rowell Advertising Agency, of New York, gets out a Newspaper Directory in which it tries to inveigle newspapers to place advertisements at $150 a page. It also publishes a weekly magazine called Printer's Ink in which 25 to 50 cents per line is charged for reading notices, and about $100 a page for display advertisements. It has been trying hard to get up State departments for this latter publication and a recent issue of it attempted to ridicule the papers of those States which would not advertise in it. Of the North Carolina papers it said "they prefer home advertisements, which pay better." We rather think this is a compliment to the North Carolina Press. This same agency that charges such high rates for advertising in its publications has the cheek to offer advertisements to newspapers at about one-third price with a 25 per cent commission, in variably wanting "top of column next to reading matter." We are glad the papers of this State take but little stock in Rowell, and the sooner they cut entirely aloof from advertising agencies, or refuse to give them space at less than regular rates, the better it will be for the papers. It is amusing, too, to see how this Rowell agency, after treating papers as it does, tries to get them to help along its fight with the Postoffice Department to get Printer's Ink admitted at second-class rates of postage.

PROTRACTED SERVICES.

To One and All.

Last Sunday we began to protract our services at the Baptist church, and I take this opportunity to extend a cordial invitation to one and all to attend. Whether you be a Methodist, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Baptist, or not a Christian of any denomination you are earnestly requested to be at every service and share whatever blessings God has in store for us. Rev. Wm. B. Oliver, of the first Baptist church, Wilmington, has kindly consented to be here, and do the preaching. His reputation as a preacher is well known and needs no comment. Suffice it to say that those who miss his sermons will miss a treat. Then, brethren, friends, do not fail to hear him. Let everybody expect a great meeting and God will give it. Truly, G. M. BIZZARD.

LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

TOBACCO FRECKS.

"The cause mentioned in last Friday's REFLECTOR on the Tobacco Frecks, or what some call Frog Eyes is in my opinion a mistaken idea."

The above is an extract from an article written by Rev. C. M. Billings, late of Danville, Va., in reply to an article which we had written on what is commonly known here as tobacco freck. On account of the uncommon use of the word french in this application it was mistaken for the word freck and so printed hence Mr. Billings' article. We are very glad, however, that he wrote as he did on the causes of Frog Eyes, or what is in reality tobacco frecks, however widely we may differ as to the causes and remedies. We want to say before getting away from tobacco french that we have searched Webster's International and find no such word as french as applied in this case and for the lack of a history or work on the diseases of plants until a better word is found we shall have to stick to this colloquialism. We have written Mr. Enery, agriculturist at the State Experiment Station, giving as best we could a description of the disease, and asking him the cause and remedy. His reply will be published and we hope to enlighten our readers on this question.

Mr. Billings says that where he was raised (near Danville) several causes are assigned to Frog Eyes or frecks, most important of which is the over use of guano, and that few of the causes can be remedied under any circumstances. He says too that wet weather and springy or undrained land will produce frecks and the only remedy is to thoroughly drain the land and lay by the tobacco with a daggan plow so that the surface water will drain off. In this we agree with him fully and the farmer who plants tobacco on such land will either have to drain it or become a bankrupt tobacco grower, but in regard to the use of guano we differ widely. He says, however poor the land, not more than 400 pounds of guano should be used to the acre. This depends materially on the kind of guano used. There are brands 400 pounds of which would be a plentiful supply but ordinarily the brands that are used under tobacco it is but little over half enough as time and the practical experience of some of our best farmers has demonstrated. In fact we have frequently seen argument in the leading agricultural journals against the use of strong fertilizer on poor land on the same principal that strong food will not do for a debilitated stomach, and it may be that Mr. Billings has been misled in his experience along this line because of the use of too strong fertilizer on land that was not able to utilize it and hence the Frog Eyes. Only a few years ago when this county was learning its first lessons in tobacco culture the aid and experience of old tobacco men was necessary, and in the heavy application of manures that was practiced by the eastern farmers they expressed wonder and had serious doubt as to the results. Only one year was required to teach these old hands in tobacco culture that the main secret of success of the Eastern tobacco farmers lay in the preparation of the soil and his system of fertilizing while the main cause of the failure of some of the best farmers in the old tobacco belt lay in the deficient fertilizing system.

This writer heard this once remarked by a Granville county man on the streets of Oxford, "no wonder you can make fine tobacco in Pitt county if we were to give the manure you do, we could make it too." 400 pounds of guano may do for some soils but not for Pitt county.

The Living Fruit.

Sam's Horn.

Most people are better than their neighbors give them credit for.

It is doubtful if God ever made a man who could please all his neighbors.

No man can love his neighbor as himself until he first loves God with his whole heart.

People are scarce who think that the folks in the next house have religion enough.

If men had to be judged by one another the gates of heaven would remain closed forever.

Strip off all masks, and there is hardly a man who would know his next door neighbor.

Many are more concerned about what they are for dinner than where they will spend eternity.

A kind word will go farther than rifle shot.

Love never loses by being tested.

Hell is where love is stagnant and hope is dead.

It is not what we do but what we love that decides our fate.

WASHINGTON LETTER

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, April 13, 1895.

Democratic Senators are as a rule in favor of the Republicans reorganizing the Senate committees and taking the responsibility for legislation at the next session of Congress, but they do not favor the proposal which has been informally made to ignore the right of Senator Morrill, of Vt., to become chairman of the Finance committee in order to give that place to Senator Sherman of Vt. The present chairman of that committee, having already been elected to the committee over to Senator Morrill at the beginning of the next session, was asked if he thought Senator Morrill would relinquish his claim to the chairmanship in order to give it to Sherman. He replied: "I certainly do not. Why should he? He is as vigorous as many younger men, and any effort to displace him would be shameful, after his many years of service on the committee. I should personally resent a movement of that character."

So much has been said about what the Finance of the Senate may do at the next session of Congress that Senator Voorhees' diagnosis of that committee is interesting as well as valuable. He says: "It is a silver committee now, and it will continue to be a silver committee regardless of the views of the additions which the Republicans may make to it. Mr. McPherson, a Democrat, is the only member of the committee as at present organized who will not be a member of the next Congress, and he is the only Democratic member who is opposed to silver. The other five Democratic members will, with Senator Jones, of Nevada, constitute a quorum of the committee, even if the vacancy should be filled by the appointment of an anti-silver Republican, but if the silver Republicans should succeed in getting one of their own number on the committee the silver majority will be just that much more pronounced."

No official under the Treasury department who may hereafter get into trouble through any sort of delinquency or misconduct will be allowed to resign. Secretary Carlisle has issued an order to all the chiefs of bureaus that in such cases recommendation for the removal of the offending person must be made to him. This may appear to be a small matter, but it is really an important reform. It has been the custom for many years to allow employees detected in some dishonorable transaction to retire from office by the resignation route, leaving nothing upon the records to indicate that the retirement has been under a cloud, and complaints have been made by those who have afterwards lost money by supporting these men to be honorable because of their department record. The record will in future show these things as they really are.

WORTHY OF CONSIDERATION.

In the course of a column editorial in the Columbia State the following passage occurs:

In a talk the other day with Mr. R. H. Edmonds, the editor of the Manufacturer's Record, of Baltimore, the leading organ of Southern development, he told us something which is appropriate to this case. Two or three years ago, he said, he spent some time in Polk county, North Carolina, near Tryon, on the border of this State, and during his stay hundreds of people from the North came into the neighborhood to prospect for homes. He observed that although a great many bought land and settled in Polk county none located on the South Carolina side of the line, although the natural attractions were fully as great. When he inquired the reason for this discrimination, he was told by names of them that they did not settle in South Carolina because in this State the laws were not enforced. The frequency of lynchings in South Carolina and their infrequency in North Carolina had impressed them, and they said that they would not locate in this State if they could get land gratis, for they feared that they would not be protected by the government.

We are far from glad that the situation in South Carolina is as it is here represented, but it is an infinite satisfaction to know that North Carolina's reputation as a law-abiding State is so good.

All those who love it and wish it well should do all in their power to see that this character is preserved. In the first place, we need above everything to keep our individual hands free of the stain of crime, and next we should desire, for every reason, that the State should stand fairly in the eyes of the sisterhood. This can not be if lawlessness prevails and especially not if lynch law becomes prevalent. We delight to have an honest and a free press in this great crime. Let us cultivate a public sentiment of that healthful character that an offense against God and man and the State, now infrequent, may become unknown.—Charlotte Observer.

It is said that Harriet Beecher Stowe has grown to perfectly abhor any and all reference to her well known book, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." She cannot endure any mention of it however slight it may be, and her family and friends are very anxious to avoid any allusions to it. It has taken the old lady a long time to find out her mistake in writing it.

There are 35 practicing physicians and 35 preachers in Charlotte.

Roads That Lead to Poverty.

That low prices of which the farmer often complains, and which he is in the habit of attributing to other causes, are in large part due to his inability to market his produce otherwise than during the great rush, in which all are anxious to sell, this being because the roads which connect his farm with the railroads are at other times impassable for loaded wagons.—Chicago Tribune.

Good Thing For Davidson College.

Mr. James A. Bradley, of Oakland Cal., just before his death last December executed to Davidson College a deed for certain buildings in Minneapolis, Minn., estimated at about twenty-five thousand dollars. This property is now in the possession of the college, and will add materially to its means of usefulness. Mr. Bradley was originally a Wilmington man, but moved west years ago, and amassed a fortune, and being an unmarried man, he left about half of his fortune to benevolent institutions. The Masonic Orphans' Home at Oxford comes in for about the same amount, and Union Theological Seminary, in Va., for about fifty thousand dollars.

"The effects of Hood's Sarsaparilla in my case have been truly marvellous. It far surpasses any other medicine I have ever taken. For 16 years I was troubled with torpid liver, kidney trouble and nervous debility, and was a Helpless Invalid.

I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for three months and I feel that I am cured. I feel better now than I have for sixteen years. I thank God first, for my health, and G. L. Hood & Co., second, for Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have recommended it to all my neighbors and several of them are using Hood's Sarsaparilla with good results. LOCAL SNAPS.

A negro detective has been working up the cause of the late fires at Kinston, and we learn that two arrests were made Monday night on evidence he had obtained.

Several of the State papers have been calling Pollocksville "the walled city" because the last Legislature placed a fence around it. Greenville has been fenced in for several years in the same way.

Registration books will be open in the several wards again on Saturday. Remember if you do not register you cannot vote at the coming town election. An entire new registration is necessary.

An exchange says that it is a puzzle to know how some men live. With no visible means of support they hang around the street corners from morning till night without doing a lick of work. If the secret is not patented, we would like to know what it is.

We overheard a conversation about John Horne's setting hen. Ambrose Johnson said that he set a hen on thirteen eggs and she hatched sixteen chickens and she laid eight eggs in the nest. A bracket factory is being started here.

The Race Track.

Manager W. L. Cobb, Friday afternoon invited a REFLECTOR reporter out to inspect the race track that is being constructed a mile above town. We found the work progressing finely. Mr. Cobb was very enthusiastic over the excellent condition in which the track is getting and says he is determined there shall not be a better one in the State. The work has been done under the direction of Mr. Cobb and Mr. N. H. Whitley, one of them being present all the time and seeing that every thing is done properly. They say that Pitt county shall have a fair this fall, too.

James' School.

Prof. C. H. James, principal of James' School, at Grindool, brought eighteen of his pupils over Friday to attend the examination before Supt. Ryegdale. They all made a pleasant call at the REFLECTOR office that afternoon. Those Prof. James brought over with him were Misses Flaudie Turner, Henrietta Bryan, Huldah Mizzelle, Hettie Bryan, Jennie Ward, Allie Keel, Nanie Ward, Zolphia Highsmith, Charlotte Beach and Messrs J. H. Taylor, W. W. Bullock, W. H. Frost, W. W. Walters, Brasco Bell, Shep. Manning, M. H. James, J. J. Hathaway and J. E. Ward.

How to Farm Successfully.

Mr. H. C. Jefferson, of Falkland township, the past season raised, fattened and killed 12,000 pounds of pork, against 10,136 pounds the previous year, and made a proportional increase in his cotton and corn crops. Mr. Jefferson reaches such results as this on his farm by constant labor and perseverance. He and his boys scarcely lost a day during the past winter, even through the severe cold and snow of February, but went right ahead cutting and clearing new grounds every day. It is a reminder of what the observant and prosperous Dr. West, of Fieldsboro, said of the times: "That nine-tenths of the people in this country do not average more than half of the days in the year at work. If so, instead of sitting about complaining of hard times, and waiting for the government to turn up some way to provide for them, they would have corn and meat and could pay their indebtedness more promptly."

Superior Court.

The following cases have been disposed of since last report. Benjamin Carr, false pretense, not guilty. William Hanrahan, carrying concealed weapon, pleas guilty, judgment suspended upon payment of costs. Rufus Cherry, assault, with deadly weapon, pleas guilty sentenced 4 months in jail. Reuben Norman, larceny, guilty, judgment suspended upon payment of costs. Elemer Smith, pointing gun, not guilty. Henry Smith, assault with deadly weapon, pleas guilty, sentenced 4 months in jail with leave to Commissioners to hire out for costs.

William Johnson, larceny, guilty, sentenced 18 months in penitentiary.

Pamer Perkins, bastardy, guilty, appeal to Supreme Court.

W. R. Crawford, failure to put up sign boards, not guilty.

Lucy Peyton against Jesse Peyton, action for divorce, decided in favor of plaintiff.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO BURN.

But the Fire is Discovered in Time to Save the Building.

(Special to Reflector.) KINSTON, N. C., April 10th. An unsuccessful attempt was made last night to burn the dwelling occupied by Louis Einstein, on Independent street about half past 11 o'clock, the family were aroused by smoke and the odor of burnt cotton, the alarm was given and the fire company responded promptly. The fire was extinguished by a few buckets of water. Some one had placed a box of loose cotton under Mr. Einstein's bed room and applied the match. Very little damage was done.

To Be Enlarged.

The Wiley Brown stock has been moved out of the store here lately occupied, and Mr. S. M. Schultz, who recently purchased the building, will soon begin improving it preparatory to occupying it himself. The building will be run a story higher and other improvements made.

Almost Scalped.

We learn that a young man named Sam James, who works for the Parmele Eccleston Lumber Co., at Parmele, was painfully hurt a few days ago. While loading a car he accidentally fell, and striking his head upon the scalp from the forehead around to the back of his head.

Frightened Watchman.

Early last night a tube in one of the boilers at the Greenville Lumber Co's mill burst, and the watchman thinking the boiler was about to explode became frightened and blew the whistle alarm. A large crowd rushed out there, thinking the alarm was because of fire.

Fire Company.

The citizens of Greenville are requested to meet in the Court House Friday night at 8 o'clock for the purpose of organizing a fire company. The fire engine will probably be here next week; and it is important to all that a good company be organized at once and it should be composed of the best citizens of the town. Let every body attend.

This Mule Had Hind Legs.

Monday Joshua Mills was driving a mule showing the animal to a prospective buyer. The mule becoming somewhat naivish and not doing the showing off act just right, Mills pulled the lash to him, when the mule leaned forward, stretched out his hind legs over the spatterboard and planted both feet in Mills' breast. Fortunately for Mills that mule's legs, just after extending to reach him, were long enough to reach the end of the kick, or he might not have come off with two light bruises.

The Tobacco Department.

Conducted by O. L. Joyner, Proprietor Eastern Tobacco Warehouse

Tobacco plants the farmers say are now growing very rapidly.

Mr. D. M. Edwards says he intends competing for the $100,000 offered by the Constitution for the best acre of tobacco.

A maiden lady in Newburg keeps a parrot which swears and a monkey which chews tobacco. She says between the two she doesn't miss a husband very much—Athichson Clbe.

Rare old Ben Johnson in his time said: "Tobacco, I do assert, will affirm before any court in Christendom, or before any prince in Europe, to be the most sovereign and precious plant that ever the earth tendered to the use of man."

Mr. W. F. Mewborn came up and sold the first load of his tobacco crop a few days ago. When asked if he had any more at home he said yes, and some of the buyers offered to go out there and buy it. He told them that he would not likely sell to them if they went, that he preferred bringing his tobacco to market and selling it at public sale and open competition. If every vatron of the Greenville market was like Mr. Mewborn we would give a-d soon have the best market in the State. Why? because it would do away with cut throat competition and put every farmer's tobacco on the same footing and second, the prize house light is deep and the buyer or seller can more easily be fooled, and third, and most important, tobacco bought by buyer or warehouseman unless offered on warehouse floor will naturally and necessarily be run, piked as we call it, higher than any tobacco in which they have taken no risk and as a result tobacco that actually is not worth over 10 cts will many times be bought in by the original purchaser at from 11 to 12 cts, he taking the chances of possibly working it off on some one else at these false figures. The consequence of this is not the loss the buyer sustains but the false impression left upon the farmer whose tobacco is being sold at public sale and which although in 15 and sometimes 20 per cent. of the price of the pile just side of it. In this instance not only the warehouse but the entire market is damaged because farmers are just as intelligent as other people and know the difference on the price of tobacco, but are not supposed to know and don't know that the tobacco bought in at such prices already belongs to the men who buy it in on sale.

At last my ancestor awoke. All pain, despair and sorrow had disappeared. He knew that he could always summon his Peri to his side while he could burn incense sweet from the leaves that grew in her garden of paradise. To cultivate them became a labor of love with him. When he succeeded he called them Perique, which he said meant a source of unending strength and joy.

The Carolina Farmer, of Florence, S. C., prints a statement of the farm operations of Mr. Smilie A. Gregg, of that town, for the year 1894. Mr. Gregg cultivated 257 acres, of which 116 were in cotton, 116 in corn and 25 in tobacco. The prices realized, the cost of production and the profits on the three crops were as follows:

116 acres of cotton, 52,018 pounds at 54 cents,	$2,646.40
116 acres of corn, 1,400 bushels at 60 cents,	$840.00
Cost of making corn and cotton	$3,486.40
Deduct value of corn not sold	$1,135.00
Profits on cotton	$295.00
Expenses of making tobacco	$1,000.25
Profit on tobacco	$1,529.00
Profit on cotton	295.00
Total profit	$1,824.00

Mr. Gregg says: "You will see from this resume that there was only $395.00 profit on 116 acres of cotton and $1,529 on 25 acres of tobacco. I would not mislead any one by the above, but would say to all beginners to start with a small acreage of tobacco and increase when they have learned to cure, grade and other necessary knowledge, which they will have to acquire by planting tobacco."

An Arcadian Legend of Perique Tobacco.

Perique tobacco can only be raised in a small area of St. James Parish, La. Its growth is under the exclusive control of the Arcadians, who inherited the secret of its proper cultivation as a sacred legacy from their French ancestors, says Mr. Isidore Hensheim of S. Hensheim Bros. & Co., in an interview with a New Orleans Item reporter, and one of the legends old Arcadians are fond of telling is as follows: "One of my ancestors was a man great in war, great in letters, great in all things that make men great. He loved France, and gave to her the efforts of his greatness. King; are ungrateful. When his greatness could no longer serve the king he was banished so that the people of France could forget him and his glory. He wandered on and on over seas and mountains. He lost his way one day; weary, faint and hopeless, he threw himself under the shade of a tree to die. His despairing dirge was: 'God and man have deserted me; let me die and forget.' He slept. He dreamed a strange, enchanting; dream. A Peri, with soft brown eyes, brown hair and all the sensuous grace of perfect womanhood knelt over him, and kissed his brow with fervent love and passion. 'I am the Peri of Paradise,' she whispered. 'In my domain all men are happy, loving, peaceful. God loves all men. Look to nature for the solaces of grief, pain and sorrow. I will crown you with the leaf that is planted by the gods of content in the spring of the year and gathered in the first dew of the autumn months; the gods press it to their hearts for many months before they offer it as the elixir of joy to mortal man.' The intensity of joy awoke my ancestor. He sighed when he realized that the Peri's kiss was a dream. He placed his hand upon his brow and found that it was crownless. He was silent. God whispers; a strange aroma fills the air. Many plants of large spreading leaves, studded with dew, are spread around him. He eagerly plucked root, branches and leaves and thrust them in his pockets and bosom. One tender branch he placed next to his heart, for he hoped to again dream of his Peri. Once more he wandered, searching for peace and rest. Footsore and heartsick, he sat on a tree that had been hurled to the earth by a windstorm. He took from his bosom the green leaves that he had placed over his heart. They had turned a deep brown, and were soft and pliable. In anger he threw them into the fire he had built. A mist arose. The Peri was at his side. What dreams of delight!

The children of Mexico, according to the Pall Mall Budget, have not over many pets. But they all have familiar acquaintance with the typical Mexican domestic animal. Almost the poorest Mexican family has its mule. Save among the rich, but one largest family rarely has but one such steed. Mexican families are, as a rule, small, and the family mule is perpetually called upon to carry burdens that are enough to sour the disposition of a sweet-tempered animal. White mules, with black faces, and mules of every color are always on the move in Mexico. You will see them in the city streets and they will effectually save you from being lonely when you tramp the country byways. The destination of a Mexican mule is to one—the church or the market.

If the Mexican babies be half well-born and half well-housed they pay the birds with songs for songs. This is the unique custom: When day first breaks into bedrooms of a Mexican house (and she breaks in very early, partly because Mexico is where Mexico is, and partly because the low houses have an abundance of windows)—when, for these two reasons, the sun does make so early an entrance, the head of the house gallantly welcomes it by leaping out of bed. If he is very old or feeble, he, at least, manages to lift himself from his pillow, and he begins to sing a song—a hymn of morning praise. If a priest is staying in the house, then that priest starts the vocal symphony. Nowhere in the western world is the Christian religion so devoutly disciplined as it is in Mexico. Nowhere, save in Spain, is Roman Catholicism so staunchly established as it is in Mexico.

The Mexican babies learn to tell their beads long before they know the names of the many brilliant flowers that tangle about their brown feet. But whether the spiritual or the physical father of the household starts the morning hymn, all the household catches it up, and the wife, the grown children, the half-grown children, the toddling babies, and, last, but not even in Mexico least, servants, catch the sweetly-voiced but simple-melodized song, and out beyond the cabin, the adobe hut, or the richly-carved palace, the howlers of Mexican wood, the drawers of Mexican water, the tenders of Mexican grain and of Mexican flowers, join in the morning chorus. But sweetest of all those sweet Mexican notes ring the treble notes of the baby Mexican voice.

Thousands of rheumatism have been cured by Ho's Serravallo. This is abundant reason for belief; it will cure you.

Persevered and Got a Quarter.

Repertoire is a valuable lesson, as one of the out-of-the-elbow cherubs who have been doing praiseworthy service in sweeping the crossings since slush has made walking a misery, found out, says a Washington paper.

"Please, marm, gimme a little penny" and he held out a grimy hand to a woman of benign aspect who was passing. She shook her head and went on, but the persevering child followed her. "Only a little penny, please, marm." "But, my child, I haven't a little penny," the woman explained.

"Then," said the cherub, with a merry twinkle in his eyes, "a bit quarter will do," and he got it.

Old Bank Notes.

The Bank of England has in its possession a bank note dated December 19, 1699, for £55. It was printed from an engraved plate, but had blank spaces for the amount, date, number and signature. Across it are written ten memoranda showing that it was repaid in three installments. In appearance it is not altogether unlike the modern note. In the bank library is another note, for £25, which was not presented for 111 years. Another curiously, said to be unique, is a note for no less than £1,000,000 dated 1782.

AN ANCIENT HOUSE.

Built in New York City in the Colony Days.

It is Close Upon the Ground Where the First Blood of the Revolution Was Shed—Irrving Was Born Across the Street.

Several decades previous to the revolution, when the Sons of Liberty were struggling to arouse the citizens of New York city to a sense of the indignity that was being heaped upon them by the British government, the city sold lots on what is now William street to enterprising citizens, who agreed to erect houses of two or three stories on them. Of the houses built at this time, or, at any time previous, during the early days of New Amsterdam, the oldest now standing is a quaint, three-story brick structure at 122 William street.

The house, which has changed in appearance but little since it was first built, is owned by Thomas B. Guilford, of Toms River, N. J., by those ancestor, Samuel Guilford, it was purchased from its builders in 1773. Prior to that year nothing of the owner of the place is known, for the records of transfer have long since crumbled to dust, and nothing now remains of the original builders but the queer-looking house, the bricks of which have outlived the sons and great-grandsons of the men whose hands laid them.

In revolutionary times the site of 122 William street was the summit of what was known as Golden Hill. It was on this piece of historic ground that the first blood of the colonists was shed, for the battle of Golden Hill, in which an old Quaker was badly wounded by the British soldiers, occurred about two months previous to the famous massacre of the citizens on the Boston common. The battle took place directly behind 122 William street, and the house at that time was an old one, and had been used as a tavern. Later on it became the rendezvous of Washington, Lafayette, Baron Steuben, Gen. Putnam, and later still of the notorious Capt. Kidd, Marshall Cunningham and Benedict Arnold. For more than one hundred years the unpretentious little building was buried in oblivion, between the walls of big commercial houses that were built around it, and had nothing to distinguish it from its modern neighbors but its antique appearance. The house is built of brick imported from Holland, laid in cement that is as imperishable as the bricks themselves. The roof is slanting, with two attic windows running out to its edge, and the building, taken as a whole, is a perfect type of what a New York house of the revolutionary period looked like.

In as many houses that were erected during the early days of New York, 122 William street has in the basement two of the famous Dutch ovens which were the house anchors and pride of the Knickerbockers. The kitchen, in the basement, is built after the English model, with an immense mantel elaborately inlaid with tiles or porcelain, about six inches square, each tile containing some historic, religious or secular event. The illustrations on these tiles are almost obliterated now, but a few of them still remain. The most striking feature of the building is its tall chimney tower, built also of Holland brick. This small pile has withstood the storms and shocks of almost two centuries, and, with the exception of two or three small patches, made recently, is as firm and fit for use today as it was when the Sons of Liberty were battling for the independence of our republic.

The ancient structure has stood for years, a monument to the stability of the workmanship of the colonists, and its life might have endured in obscurity for another half century but for the formation of the Military and Naval Order of the United States, an organization that has lately been formed, composed of the direct descendants of revolutionary officers in the war of 1812, the war with Tripoli and the Mexican war.

This society held its first meeting recently in the ancient building, which is now used as a table d'hôte restaurant, and it is the intention of the order to buy the building and erect a clubhouse in the rear, on the very spot where the first blood of the colonists was shed.

SCRAP BOOKS.

A Library of One Hundred and Twenty-Five of Them.

They Treat of Many Important Subjects and Are a Source of Much Pleasure to the Man Who Made Them.

Mr. S. Thornton K. Prime, of Dwight, Ill., in writing to the Chicago Record on the subject of scrap books says:

"I might be called a scrap-book fiend. I commenced making scrap books when I was a young man and have continued for the last thirty years making them. There are I think to-day few pleasures of my life so dear to me as looking over the books I have made or commencing new ones. I will tell you a few facts about my collection. To-day they number over one hundred and twenty-five volumes. I was twenty-one years of age when I made my first scrap book, and recently I had it bound in red calf with marble covers. This book I made in New York city. In 1858 I came west and located in this village. I always had a great weakness for cutting out of newspapers every article bearing upon subjects in which I was interested. I still keep up the practice.

"In the 60's the tariff question was very largely discussed in our newspapers. I accumulated a vast amount of stuff on the subject, classified it so I had enough matter to make forty volumes fourteen inches long and sixteen inches wide on every subject connected with the tariff question. Then came along what was known as 'the granger war.' I took an active part in that upheaval, and preserved as far as I was able all the material, historical and discursive. These records when made up filled over ten volumes of one hundred pages each. The drainage then occupied my attention, and I have four volumes of the most prominent practically discussed topics interesting the farmers of Illinois. Every newspaper in Chicago had something to say as to the good results which were sure to follow from the use of the drainage, and as time progressed the sequel proved that we were correct. These books are particularly interesting to me. This era in the history of our state was quite an epoch and went to show what the press could do in the way of improving the country by means of publishing, discussing and agitating questions of a practical character. I was always interested in the crops. How else could I be if I lived on a farm and tried to grow crops, but generally made my living off it? You would hardly believe it when I tell you that I have now on my shelves thirty-four volumes of three hundred pages each filled with crop records of every day of the year from 1882 until the present time.

"But my daily recreations, and I might say with equal propriety my recreation by night, are illustrated scrap books of art at home and abroad. My theatrical scrap books, which I never tire of going over and compiling and arranging are my heart's delight. These number twenty-two volumes. I also keep large portfolios in which from time to time I put all my pictures, which ultimately I expect to make into books. I look back at my first pictorial scrap book and see how small were its beginnings and to what proportions they have now reached, and think how true is the adage: 'Never despise the day of small things.' My present fad is the stage. My collections, first, cover this country, then come Paris, London and Berlin. I have always kept my theatrical scrapbooks. I paste them into my books, with criticisms and pictures of the actors and the plays as far as I am able to get hold of them.

"I have now a cheap cover made to hold the books while I make them, and then after they are finished have them bound up substantially and in uniform binding. I found that I wore out the books more in making them than I did in using them. A good paste is a very important essential to making a successful scrap book so far as its general appearance is concerned. There is a great tendency for the pages to curl up, spoiling entirely the looks of the volume. I have found that starch, say two table-spoonfuls boiled with the white of an egg, makes the best paste I have ever used, and since using it the leaves of all my books made after this recipe retain a smooth and slightly appearance.
