MENTAL IMAGES.

"A man conversing in earnest," savs Emerson in his essay on "Nature," "if he watch his intellectual processes, will find that a material image, more or less luminous, arises in his mind contemporaneous with every thought, which furnishes the vestment of the thought."

This power of forming mental images appears to vary in strength among individuals to a considerable degree. Naturally we should expect to find it powerful in poets and artists. Charles Dickens has himself told us that he actually "saw" his creations as he wrote, the other hand, there are people baby into it. of equal intelligence who, being unable to see such mental images themselves, have doubted their apt to weaken the capacity of forming mental pictures.

Mr. Kirkpatrick of Winona, Minn., an experimental psycholo gist, has made a series of obser vations on this phenomenon with the help of his classes The scholars were asked to write down just what came into their minds when certain familiar words, such as "book," "tree," "church," were called out, and the answers were carefully investigated. He found that the majority of the students formed distinct images of the objects correspond ing to the words, and the rest formed indistinct images, with a few exceptions, who seem to have indulged in philosophical abstrac The word "church" usually evoked fore they are fcu, days old. a picture of some church in the ceptional good health and rapid that is shaved once a week. growth. There is much speculation as to who will succeed colector Carter in the Western District of this State. There are many canditates and most of them have strong backing.

Mayor Russ, of Raleigh, cast some good Democratic votes the other day in the election of officers before the Alderman of that city. He did not hesitate to untie with a good deal of zest the various ballots all of which nearly were a tie. Unless we are mistaken Bill Russ can be counted on to keep the city of Raleigh Democratic, pure and simple.

at the Worlds Fair in 1893. After a very pleasant conversation with her I drove to the center of the farm where I found Mr. Cotten excellent ideas about the preparation of some tobacco lands. We then drove to one of his several pack houses where we examined a large lot of tobacco. Mr. Cotten is one of the most scientific farmers in the State, and also the aded the streets this afternoon largest tobacco grower east of the headed by Smith's band, seventy Wilmington and Weldon Railroad His Cottondale farm has a big canal which runs through the centre of it and carries the waters o the Tar river, a distance of three miles. He has a nice pasture on this canal where he keeps his owe, sheep, goats and hogs. His tarm is so completely terraced and ditched that the water fall is 40 feet to the mile. He runs 26 plows and 40 tobacco barns, plants 170 acres in tobacco, 250 in corn, 75 in oats and ,21 in potatoes. He also keeps up with do well to consult with him and get some of his excellent ideas.

The other irate editor is Mr. H. E. Harmon, editor of the Winston Tobacco Journal.

The Journal in the article referred to, gave a fair criticism of the evidence taken in Danville. The portion which did not meet with the approval of Messrs. Webster and Harman is as follows:

It seems that the defendant is basing his cause more upon the hopes of proving the American Tobacco Company to be a trust, and unworthy the protection of the Government, than in the merits of his patent.

The testimony taken here was for the purpose of showing that since the formation of the American Tobacco Company cigarette formation. The evidence, however, proved the contrary: That worm cigarette tobaccos were bringing better prices than any other class ot tobacco except wrappers, and that if there is any difference in prices now and what they were before the formation of the company, the difference is that the average price is better now.

Mr. Webster, with red-hot zeal and no discretion, distorts the first paragraph into a positive assertion on our part that the defendants are basing their cause solely upon proving the company to be a trust, and then rants in the modern Websterian style, cal

The portrait of M. Felix Faure, president of France, has just been commenced by Bonnat, the celebrated painter, and as this is a semi-official work, there is no doubt of the artist being fully compensated for it. Such is not the case, however, with the many painters and modelers in marble or clay who at each change in the French presidency have made many pictures or busts of the new chief executive or of other prominent men, on the ready sale of which 'You talk.' A MODEST MILLIONAIRE. John D. Rockefeller Takes Life Free

I never saw a man take life less seriously than John D. Rockefeller. He has an easy way of saying and doing things that appeals to the esthetic nature. That $1,000,000 suit brought by Lon Merritt is not costing him a wink of sleep. Nothing worries him, not all his millions. At times I have known John to seem dull. I have known people to take him for a soft, slow, stupid fellow instead of the hard, gliding, firm, rocky fellow that he is. He once had an employe, a nervous, irritable young man, full of his own importance, but, withal, a capable clerk. He occupied an office in which there was one of those pulling and lifting machines, and regularly every morning, about nine, when he was immersed in figures or correspondence, a small, black-mustached man. quiet and diffident in manner, entered, said "good morning," walked on tiptoe to the corner and exercised for a quarter of an hour. It became a bore to the clerk, who at last, unable to stand it longer, remarked, with considerable heat and fireworks, to the inoffensive but annoying stranger: "How do you expect me to do my work properly while you are fooling with that machine? I'm getting tired of it. Why don't you put it where it won't worry a person to death?" The stranger replied with a blush: "I am very sorry if it annoys you. will have it removed at once." A porter took it away within an hour. A few days later the clerk was sent for by Mr. Flagler, whom he found in earnest conversation with the small, black-mustached man. The latter smiled at seeing him, gave Flagler some instructions and left the room. "Will you tell me who that gentleman is?" the young man asked, a light beginning to break upon him. "That was Mr. Rockefeller," was the reply. With a gasp for breath, the clerk staggered back to his office to think. It was his first acquaintance with the New Branch of Business. "There is an establishment out in Chicago that employs nearly 300 clerks and does a business of several million dollars a year, but which does not earry a dollar's worth of stock," said Postmaster Hesing, of the Exposition city. "Not long ago it sent out no less than 500,000 circulars to prospective customers. It is merely a purchasing agency for persons living outside of the city who need articles and do not find it convenient to buy them in person. The concern will buy anything for anybody, according to a well-arranged system. All the customer has to do is to send a description of the article wanted and the amount he is willing to pay for it, and it is gotten by an agent of the establishment and shipped to him at once.

'Suppose, for instance, a man in a remote town wants an overcoat of which he will pay $10. He sends his and at the freight or express office. No charge is made to the customer, as the firm has an arrangement with numerous retail mercantile establishments by which it gets a certain discount off from the market prices, and in this way makes heavy profits. I have been told that the discount ranges all the way from 5 to 15 per cent., so it is easy to see how remunerative the business is. Absolute honesty characterizes all its dealings, and, consequently, very few articles are returned by customers as unsatisfactory."--Washing-

A WOMAN'S WAY. She Stood Up in the Car for Her

Little Son. That the ways of women are passing strange was again proved by an in cident on a Main street car the other evening. A gentleman rose to offer his seat to a lady who had just entered with her little boy. Seeing the seat vacant she sent the boy to occupy it, while she clung to TARRIVER SERVICE a strap. She was evidently very tired and would have enjoyed a seat, but preferred to care for her son first. Presently a lady left the car and the one standing took her seat. Next to her was a serving maid with a pretty baby on her lap. The lady asked permission to hold it, and, the request being granted, she cooed and talked and played with the child for a half hour, utterly oblivious of her own boy's jealous cries and frantic efforts to attract attention.

Wilhelm's Music.

Not much success has been given to the German emperor for his new musical composition: "Sang au Aegir." When it was performed in public it was pronounced pretty and correct, but not wholly original. "Die Wacht am Rhein" makes itself heard at the beginning; then follows a strain from Schubert's "Schone place and kick myself. That's what Mullerin," and a bit from an English hymu ends the thing.
