His Worst Enemy Defeated by P. P. P., Lippman's Great Remedy.

FOR THREE YEARS HE SUFFERED-COULD

HARDLY BREATHE AT NIGHT-ONE

NOSTRIL CLOSED FOR 10 YEARS.

Mr. A. M. Ramsey, of DeLeon, Texas, was a sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form. Truly, his description of his sufferings seem little short of marvelous. Instead of seeking his couch, glad for the nights coming, he went to it with terror, realizing that another long, weary, wakeful night and a struggle to breathe was before him. He could not sleep on either side for two years. P. P. Lippman's Great Remedy, cured him in quick time. Messrs, LIPPMAN BROS., Sayannah, Ga.

Hon. George Fred Williams, the brilliant young Democratic nominee for Governor of Massachusetts, has made a decidedly interesting if not prophetic discovery in regard to the nomination of Mr. Bryan. Said he a few evenings ago in his tammany Hall speech: "On July 10 Columbus discovered America. The idea of the republic was conceived on that date; on July 10th Andrew Jackson refused to charter the United States banks, and on July 10, 1896 William Jennings Bryan was nominated for President of the United States." TO THE TOBACCO PUBLIC:—It is conceded by all the surrounding country that Greenville is the leading tobacco market for the sale of Leaf Tobacco in Eastern Carolina. This being so it behooves all within reach of the Great market to sell their tobacco here. There are four large Warehouse doors open to the public and chief among them is the Warehouse with a corps of clever and gentlemanly assistants. We now have under construction a large Prizery to be used in connection with the Warehouse, that we may be able to handle the vast amount of Tobacco consigned to us. We have associated with us Messrs. H. L. Coward and T. E. Hooker, two large and successful tobacco raisers from Greene county, they having purchased the interest of Mr. McG. Ernul, we are better prepared to handle your tobacco than ever before and when you get your tobacco ready for market drive direct to the STAR where you will always receive prompt. and courteous attention and highest market prices for your tobacco. Your friends,

One of the old residents of a Mas sachusetts town delights the younger generation with her stories of life in the town 70 years ago, when she was a little girl. Her father, with his wife and phildren, and his brother, with wife and children also, occupied a great farmhouse which is still in a state of excellent preservation in spite of its years of hard part of the house and 13 in my uncle's, so that it took a good deal to provide us with food and cloth-

"My uncle had the reputation of being a little more prudent in money matters than was considered necessary by my father or any one acquainted with our affairs, so I have heard since. In those days the chil dren of both families knew by instinct that my father was the person to whom an appeal for some desired bit of finery or what we called 'unnecessaries' had better be made. The common purse seemed to have greater powers of extension in his hands than in my uncle's.

"I well remember my pretty Cousin Myra dancing with delight when she was on the eve of her sixteenth birthday. 'I'm to have a piano after all, Jennie,' she cried, giving me a hug. 'Father was very doubtful about it, but Uncle Amos told me not to worry, for if father couldn't afford to give it to me he could." --Youth's Companion.

France and Fine Speeches

When I read his (Gambetta's) fiery patriotic phrases, and when you tell us that he was avant tout un patriote, I think of Dr. Johnson's brusque saying, "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel." It is hard to practice the plain virtues, but not hard to se griser de mots about la patrie. What France wants is men with a passion for the plain virtues and capable of inspiring this passion in others. His intellectual qualities, his perception of the law of evolution in politics and his suppleness and adroitness in shaping his course accordingly are far more remarkable. * * * They seem to me Italian rather that French, but whencesoever they proceed they are not, aithough valuable, what France most needs and cannot supply the place of this .- Matthew Arnold.

This Most Extraordinary Country. "How did this doosid place get its name?" asked the visiting Britisher.

"The night it was named," explained the Oshkosh citizen, "they was a lot of fellers drinkin hot Scotch. Finally they got full an de cided to name the town 'Hot Scotch,' but by that time they was so full that the nighest they could come to it was 'Oshkosh,' an they let it go at that." "Haw!
