A LACK OF IDEAS.

Causes and Treatment of This Ailment of the Eyes.

Conjunctivitis is an inflammation of the conjunctiva, or mucous membrane covering the front surface of the eyebail and lining the lids.

It may be of any degree of severity and due to many causes, varying from the mildest form of irritation up through pink eye to the most violent inflammation, resulting sometimes, through extension to the deeper structures, in destruction of the eye.

In the simple form of acute conjunctivitis the eyes are bloodshot, the membrane lining the lids is red, the edges of the lids are reddened and swollen, and there is a sticky, more or less yellow, secretion, which quickly dries and gums the lids to gother. The eyes burn and smart and are very sensitive to the light. There is often a feeling as if a hair.

Tremendous High-grade Stock of Fine Merchandise Having been brought to Greenville and Placed in C. T. MUNFORD'S big store for a quick sale.

CONSIDERATION! After considering what we and our Creditors think best, and they say the only wise thing to do with this combined gigantic stock of high-grade merchandise is to sell and satisfy our creditors, the best way possible, as we have no ready cash to keep them quiet, we must listen to them, have this sale, and throw this immense stock on the market. We must take their advice, mark it down like they say, so we can raise a few dollars to send them so that every time the train blows our color won't change, knowing that as soon as the mail is handed to us we will open after where some house writes like this: "You must new this bill of once." after where some house writes like this: "You must pay this bill at once."
