Why Suffer?

Are you one of the thousands of women who suffer from female ailments? If so, don't be discouraged, go to your druggist and get a bottle of Wine of Cardui. On the wrapper are full directions for use.
During the last half century, Cardui has been established in thousands of homes, as a safe remedy for pain which only women endure. It is reliable, contains no harmful ingredients and can be depended on in almost any case.

Take CARDUI

It Will Help You

Mrs. Charles Briggs, of Switzer, Ind., tried Cardui. She writes: "Tongue cannot tell how much Cardui has done for me.
Before I began taking Cardui I could not do a day's work. I would work awhile and lie down. I shall always give praise to your medicine." Try Cardui.

PRES. R. H. WRIGHT'S ADDRESS.

The safety of our State government and the security of our homes depend upon the intelligence of our citizens. Intelligence is the world's most bitter enemy to crime and our nation's most secure safeguard. Our individual security and national greatness depend largely upon the average intelligence of our citizens. Never before has so much depended upon the average intelligence. May we as a nation awake early to our great opportunity and to our national need. We are awake, for all over this land school houses are springing up as by magic, and our people are filling themselves with the knowledge of the world and of our national life. We are spreading it to the four corners of the earth. It is swept over the world in wave after wave of revolution until all forms of tyrannical government have passed from the face of civilization. The French Revolution in a succession of waves lasting to '76 was only the beating of this idea upon the shores of the impetuous French. The same thing has taken place in Germany, Austria, Italy, Russia, Japan and Turkey. Before it, ignorance and superstition are disappearing and this old world is getting closer together. Never before was it so true that "Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge," and that "There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard." We have cast into the stream of human civilization a current that will help to shape the destiny of the world and that now is lifting mankind to a higher plane of life and a more complete realization of God's plan for the universal brotherhood of mankind. For "If I am a man, I am a brother," and the center of the world is the center of life for the Hebrew and the forum of the center of Roman life, so the public school must be the center of American life. And it is.

Here in our public schools, the parents should meet together on an equal footing and thus the community become more thought democratized. The present tendency in some localities to make of our schools only a place for the disposing of information to the young is wrong. Each school should be a center for the life of a given community. Employer and employee should meet here on equal terms; for here we have a common interest.

Today, American life is trying to organize itself. Clubs and organizations are almost innumerable. Every community is literally teaming with organizations, such as book clubs, sewing circles, purely social organizations of a part only of the community, church clubs, political clubs, church clubs, labor organizations, combinations of capital and labor through a variety of organizations that if enumerated would lead one to think that we are as a people one series of organizations. What does this mean? Only an attempt upon the part of Americans to center their life around some norm. The salvation of our ideal depends upon the centering of our life in the temple of our national greatness—our public schools.

When the people of our land awake to a full realization of what our schools mean to us as a people, then the profession of teaching will no longer be looked upon as simply a means of livelihood, but as the guardian of American life and the shaper of American destiny. In this profession, should be drawn the purest, the noblest and the best of American talent. It is to be deplored greatly that the present day tendency is to drive young men of real worth from this field of national activity. It stands in our land second to no profession.

There are men in our nation who realize these facts and realizing them have given their lives to the work. They are the nation's public servants and the direct contributors to the world's advancing civilization. The safety of our State government and the security of our homes depend upon the intelligence of our citizens. Intelligence is the world's most bitter enemy to crime and our nation's most secure safeguard. Our individual security and national greatness depend largely upon the average intelligence of our citizens. Never before has so much depended upon the average intelligence. In this profession, should be drawn the purest, the noblest and the best of American talent. It is to be deplored greatly that the present day tendency is to drive young men of real worth from this field of national activity. It stands in our land second to no profession.

There are men in our nation who realize these facts and realizing them have given their lives to the work. They are the nation's public servants and the direct contributors to the world's ship of the world. This is the real temple of the great king of Israel. Civilization is greater than its cathedrals of its cities. Shakespeare lived but a brief day, and yet he wrote a part of the literature that lives on. Similarly, (human) love, is tragic in its incompleteness, but the love that animates mankind is infinite. We are all a mystical and elemental part of the power that gives luster to a star, perfume to a flower, and melody to all life, but in reality we know little, if anything, of the cosmic secret of the soul. We are mendicants in the kingdom where we should be kings. In meditation to our inheritance, we are confronted by the sublime fact that life is greater than the living, for it outlives it.

There is indeed an infinite highway toward which the race forever moves, but whose discernable vistas it has not yet discerned. For that path—the path of which Job in his vision dreamed—leads through the kingdom of heaven and eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, the wonder of this invisible world that perpetually surrounds our faltering race. And yet to us—

"The works of God are all for naught, Unless our eyes are in seeing. See an earthly thing, and thou shalt see an eternal thing, That animates its being."

The responsibilities of life that rest upon this generation are greater than the responsibilities that have ever rested upon a previous generation. To meet these obligations demands greater preparation for life's work than has ever been demanded before. It was in the conscious or unconscious realization of this fact that the school was established. Here we have built, at State expense, an institution to train young men and women to go forth in our land and help to the youth of the rising generation to equal themselves to the task of the future. We have not here to destroy the old and accept only the new, but to build upon the past a structure, secure, safe and sane, to make this old world a better place in which to live, to be for our generation the better to adjust itself to nature's laws—the laws of God.

Education is in a sense adjustment. There is a spirit of the times, a vox populi, a substratum of thought that runs through the people of each generation, a study current of life that impels men onward and upward, a great stream that moves slowly and steadily along carrying upon its bosom all that mankind is the spirit of the age. It controls our social and economic relations, shapes our ideas of right and wrong, yea, it even controls our destiny, for it is the voice of God to His people, and true education is proper adjustment of each generation to this voice.

This is to be a training school for teachers, a place to prepare men and women to go forth and help our children to adjust themselves properly to the times. For many generations men and women became teachers without special training. Today there are thousands of untrained people "keeping school" in our own State. Some of them are doing well. Almost all of them are conscientious, earnest workers; yet through the lack of preparation the work of many is poor. Teaching is fast being recognized as a profession and the time will soon come when only the well trained will be licensed to practice. Just as the old herb doctor has passed away before the onward march of the medical profession. So the keeper of school must give place to those properly prepared for this profession. There are certain fundamental facts that each prospective teacher must know before he can begin the practice of medicine. And there are certain basic principles in education that will soon be required of every teacher. The profession of medicine is concerned primarily with the physical welfare of the individual, but education deals with the physical, the mental and the moral welfare of the individual. The work of the former ends with death, the work of the latter goes on forever. O, that we could fully realize the importance of this work, that we are not due directly to some physical abnormality, are due to misdirection of the part of parent or teacher. Life is so short and the demands of the age are too great for our children to be started wrong. The stream of life is so turbulent that to turn back many times wrecks the individual career. This is to be a professional school. I hope those who go out from our tutelage will be filled with the professional spirit, that they will be able to stand up to the world as it is, and not as it should be. I hope they will see that true education is more than the simple acquisition of book facts, more than so-called knowledge, but that it is power, yes, growth, and that all information which does not stimulate this growth is useless. May they realize that they are dealing with young life in all of its manifold relations, and may they go forth prepared to live up to the high responsibilities of the great and noble work they have undertaken.

It is not for me today, to deal in platitudes. Since I have laid down my arms at Appomattox, and turned with sad hearts to ward their homes which had been made desolate by the terrible devastations of civil war, and started life anew, it is to the student of history simply to repeat what they have accomplished. First, the stern necessities of life had to be met; then, a new economic basis built. With starvation confronting many, crime running riot, the old basis of livelihood swept away, political prejudices and sectional jealousies to overcome, it is not strange that public education should have been neglected. In fact, all public funds were used in liquidating just and unpaid public debts and in the maintenance of law and order. When public thought could turn to public education it found the school houses gone to ruin or never built. We are now emerging from the era of battle school houses. The next great duty that confronts us is to place a well trained teacher in each of these houses. If the work that has been accomplished is to bring to us proper returns, we must see that those who teach public schools are well prepared for the work. This is not a matter of sentiment, neither are these words of an enthusiast, but it is a duty we owe to our children. They are under no obligation to us. They have been entrusted to us for our care and keeping. If we are to keep our people awake to the times, if the future North Carolinian is to measure up favorably, as he has heretofore done with the citizen of other states, he must be given an equal start with the citizen of other states. I do not fear our native ability, neither do I fear the spirit of our people. I have no patience with those men, who school men may be, but who are inferior to the citizen of other states. I see in our State a people ready, willing and anxious for any good thing. They are filled with the American ideal of freedom. In fact, this state is the pride of our nation's strongholds. We will give to the rising generation the purest inheritance of the nation and better preparation than has ever been given to a preceding generation of that determination, it was built by the people, for the people, and may it ever remain with the people, as a servant of the people.

Land Sale at Grimsland, N. C.
