GOOD MANAGEMENT.

The Chronile has never elt clined to withold praises for the management of the Baptist Orphanage, at Thomasville. Whether in normal times or in times of distress, it is of the best. It is particularly success ful from a financial point of view. Always under a strain, but always making both ends meet, the institution is now out of debt-does not owe a dollar. In making this gratifying announcement, Editor Johnson say in Charity and Children: This is the first time sine the writer's connec tion with the institution began, fifteen years ago, that this statement at this season of the year, could truth fully be made.
