FRIDAY, JULY 22, 1910.

It is too hot to often write right.

If you haven't got a chance, get out and make one.

Some folks wish the bill collector was like Jeffrey, couldn't "come back."

It turns out that the Allen manager was much the best at claiming.

On with the good roads talk. Keep it up every day.

It is time to let the prize fight talk and pictures drop completely.

Those who do not run for office have the best feeling about it.

They used to see snakes. Now they see air ships passing.

Possibly it has been this warm before, but it is too hot now to think about them.

The conventions show that the governor's before-hand appointments did not stick.

They do not die from heat down this way, but the folks get warm just the same.

The politician who loses and gets grouchy over it, should have kept out of the race.

If Pitt county does not get good roads soon we are going to be badly fooled.

We bet you Greenville has a near-park some of these days, that is one near to town.

Government officials have tabooed the ice cream cone as dangerous. Hence beware of the ice cream cone.

Some merchants are missing a good opportunity in the advertising they are not doing.

It was not so much turning down the governor's appointments as it was the people preferred somebody else.

A wheel passing through sand is in effect climbing a hill, but it never reaches the top.

"Uncle Joe" is after the speaker again. He wants to hang on until the end.

Uncle Sam is going to keep on until he gets mixed up in the Nicaragua trouble. See if he don't.

Last year 4500 convicts worked on the public roads of Georgia and built 21,000 miles of roads were built and permanently improved.

We thought Mr. Roosevelt knew it all before, but he says he is going to spend several days working on exhaustive study of New York politics.

Says the Wilmington Dispatch: "The chap who asks 'Is it warm enough for you' ought to be fired alive." A roasting would be better.

Mr. Roosevelt may not find New York politics altogether as exciting what the first congressional district will do when it meets again on the 26th.

We are doing our share of talking, but remember, it is going to take some acting as well to get good roads.

They all can't "come back," but there are some who ought to go back and sit down. The kickers for instance.

We fail to see wherein the Republicans have any cause for rejoicing over the deadlocks in Democratic conventions.

If The Reflector cannot persuade you to build factories in Greenville, it is not because it don't try.

Prize fights must go now for sure. Ex-President Roosevelt has spoken on the subject, and says drive them out.

Wilmington found three cases of small pox right among the city fire department. Ought to have turned the hose on them.

Sand and clay are our road materials. We have them all over the county and it is only a question of mixing them in the right way.

If the people do not can a lot of the surplus fruit this year they will miss an opportunity. Enough fruit ought to be put up for winter use.

The Daily Reflector, published at Greenville, has come out with a new dress, which greatly improves its appearance. Mrs. Whitcomb can always be relied upon to keep up with the times.—Loulburg Times.

Dr. C. W. Stiles, who as head of the Rockefeller foundation is waging war on hookworm, declared in a recent speech on "flies" that the United States is the filthiest great nation in the world.

Mr. Roosevelt is going to visit Georgia in October and the cracker State will be happy. Just watch for Atlanta to get a date with him.

"Constant dripping will wear away a stone," and they kept exploding dynamite in the old Mission temple walls until they were knocked down.

If there are any candidates in Pitt county for the legislature, they are keeping mighty quiet about it. They had better come out in the open and go to talking good roads.

There is one thing above all others our country can do as a whole to advance every phase of its life, social, educational and industrial, that is to build good roads.

Where the largest and strongest banks exist, are likely to be the depositories for the postal savings banks to be established by the government.

That the Democratic State convention platform made no reference whatever to prohibition, indicate that it is looked upon as a finished proposition in North Carolina.

If you do what you ought to do, you will come to the good roads convention in Greenville, on the first Monday in August and bring somebody with you.

It is a waste of time to cite the Democratic papers to the story of Annas.—Greensboro News.

Oh, they don't want to crowd you fellows off the perch.

Pitt county has placed herself at the head in educational progress by establishing good schools. Will she let those schools fall of their purpose by not building good highways to them?

Everybody who knows of her progress says, "Pitt county is the biggest and best county in eastern Carolina." We must maintain our position, but we can not do it without good roads.

Mr. Rockefeller says the people are leaving the cities because the cost of living there is so high. It is time they were waking up to the fact that living in the country is much cheaper and more conducive to happiness. There are thousands, however, who seem to prefer living on half rations and staying with the crowd.

The east could build roads for one-fifth of what they are costing up this way, and yet few of the eastern counties are not doing anything at all in the way of road building.—Durham Herald.

The Republicans throughout the State are getting ready to put up tickets just to see them knocked down. But they have to do something to make the government bosses think they are earning their jobs.

A number of counts of disease germs upon a large number of flies examined, showed a range from 550 to 6,000,000 germs, representing typhoid, consumption, dysentery, not to speak of the presence of filth upon their bodies, collected from their visits to every sort of haunt. Not only do flies transmit diseases through their capacity to carry disease germs upon their feet, wings and bodies, but often in feeding they take germs into their bodies, many of which in passing through the digestive tract, not only remain alive, but increase in numbers so that fly "specks" have been found to contain a large number of disease-producing germs.

It is disgusting to read of these things, is it not? But it is not more disgusting than to see these same flies after their repast of filth, drawn in the milk picher, drop their specks on a frosted cake, or clean their feet on the bread. Is it pleasant to see flies that may have been feasting on the spittoon from a consumptive or upon the waste from a typhoid patient crawl over the lips of a sleeping baby or gather on the nipple of a nursing bottle? These are daily occurrences in homes unprotected from their visits.

This is the sort of "filthy reading matter" which is necessary to publish and necessary for the people to read. It is better that the eye should be disgusted to the earth. As a people, we are not nearly enough in earnest about the danger of the house fly.

Says the Norfolk Landmark: "Next door in North Carolina they have fallen into the fixed habit of re-electing Representative John H. Small, which is a good thing for them and not a bit worse for us. We feel that he is ours too." It is a fact that in his rivers and harbors, canal and general waterways work in North Carolina, Congressman Small has done a great work—more possibly than any of Virginia's Congressmen have done for that city. But then, Norfolk is a North Carolina town, and we are some day going to have it annexed.—Charlotte Chronicle.

KILL OUT THE FLIES

Quarantining The Home Against The Diseases of Summer.

During the next six months—the period of flies and mosquitoes—the average American home will be daily endangered by malaria or intestinal diseases, or both. Yet, in nearly every case, this peril may be reduced almost to the vanishing point by a small expenditure for wire-netting, and a reasonable amount of detergent action on the part of the keeper of the house.

It cannot be too strongly impressed upon the American housewife that every fly that enters her home may be a deadly laden with the germs of typhoid fever or some other intestinal disease. Microscopically, the fly is a tiny animal, but it is the most bothersome of all creatures, and it is not to be despised. It feeds on filth by preference, and its effect is so potent that the germs through which it walks are carried away to be distributed wherever the fly may chance to land. In the milk which it sucks, its poisonous substances are mixed with the milk, and the fact that 100,000 bacteria were found adhering to one fly that was examined in New York City.

Too many people are content with the partial exclusion of flies from the house. Small openings are overlooked, because a few flies do not cause a great deal of discomfort. The extraordinarily rapid rate at which flies multiply is overlooked. Let us suppose that one fly lays her eggs in an unoccupied house that contains sufficient fly-food, and that she deposits a million eggs. If these eggs hatch, the number of flies in that house at the end of five weeks would be about ten million! And yet the housewife who pays no attention to halting the increase of these pests, who does not destroy them from day to day "where so many flies come from!"

If these carriers of disease be rigidly excluded from contact with the food eaten by any animal this summer, the danger of diarrhoeal diseases, such as typhoid fever, will be lessened. The danger of these diseases is within the range of their activity, but they are the hosts of many other parasites. Here is a definite and well authenticated instance of how they quickly spread typhoid germs:

A regiment of healthy young men, most of them from the Spanish-American war, for several weeks they were camped within their own state. It was not a joyous outing; the food was scant and cooked by men who did not know even how to boil potatoes; the sudden changes in tent life produced many varieties of colds; the lack of the camp-followers upset the digestion of two men out of every three; on the whole, vitality was at a low ebb during the first month.

But no body was really sick. A correspondent would send him a few daily the names of men who had fainted during the hot afternoon drills but the victims were back in line by the time the newspaper was published. The surgeons and the hospital stewards were occupied mainly with social functions.

Then the regiment was bled off to Chickamauga Park, where it was to spend the summer. The new camp was laid out in an isolated grove, high and well drained. Its company streets won the praise of the division staff. Its drinking water came from a deep well and from first to last was pronounced microscopically free from infection. The food was nutritious; every man in the regiment had become a fair cook; rank and file were bronzed and "hard as nails."

Within a few weeks, however, the surgeons were daily diagnosing typhoid fever; the hospital tent was crowded with patients; and now and then the word came that this man and that man had died in the general hospital. The perplexed colonel walked the camp to the other every morning, but there was none wise enough to point his finger at the cause. They all guessed, and guessed wrong.

It is as clear as daylight now. The Chickamauga woods were full of typhoid when the regiment with the health record had set up its tents. Within three days the new camp was full of flies, which had come from other regiments. If it had occurred to one of the staff surgeons to examine the fuzzy feet of a few flies, he would have found the typhoid germs which he vainly sought in the well—and his reputation would have been made. These flies walked all over the food in every company kitchen and the proud record of the regiment was quickly shattered.

The mosquito, as well as the fly, should invariably be looked upon as a red flag of danger. It is not worth while to wait until it alights to see whether its body rests in a horizontal position or at an angle. In other words to determine whether he is an anopheles (malaria bearing) mosquito, or one of a number of other varieties. The fact that he is a mosquito should be a signal for his speedy destruction and for the closing of the inlet by which he has entered the house. It is true, that malaria is decreasing both in prevalence and in its virulence, but there are yet many thousands of deaths from it in the United States every year. Moreover, for every case of serious illness from malaria, there are dozens of cases where the diseases work without producing the symptoms of a fever. The important thing to remember is that scientific medicine knows only one way in which the malaria parasite can get into the human blood current—through the bite of the mosquito.

The case with which malaria may be acquired in a region where the mosquitoes are so scarce as to produce no discomfort is shown by the following instance:

An American and his mosquito-bait landed on the west coast of Africa, a region which has been known for a century as "The White Man's Grave." He knew that "African fever" is simply a pernicious form of malaria; and he had been taught that without the mosquito malaria is impossible. He determined to protect himself against mosquito-bites, but he also began to take five grains of quinine daily as an extra precaution.

To his surprise, mosquitoes were not one of the white man's burdens on that coast. None of the European camp followers were secured; the familiar hum was never heard on the porch after twilight; and most of the beds were unoccupied. Presently the American forgot his mosquito-net, but kept up his quinine. Occasionally, on waking in the morning, he would find a small red spot on hand or forehead; but it seemed absurd to protect against mosquitoes so few as to attract no notice.

Before the first of the month had expired, however, the American was lying in bed with the fever that has done his heavy toll on that coast. And thereafter, on an average of every two weeks for six months he had the African fever. He steadily lost flesh and strength, his complexion turned yellow, and there was a look about his eyes that caused more than one European to take him aside and say, "Better get away for a while!"

Then an army surgeon happened along—a man with a reputation as an expert on tropical diseases. He was gathering data for a report on West African diseases. When he met the American he took material for his report. He punctured an ear-lobe, collected a drop of blood on a glass slide, and went off to his microscope. "The malaria parasites are eating up your red blood corpuscles," he said the next day, as calmly as if he had announced that the man was in the garden. "You have two varieties. One of them can be killed with quinine; the other can't. Better run home and build up your system."

"Very well," said the American. "But when I come again the mosquito that bites me must first saw his way through the bars."—The Worlds Work.

MAY REACH 100,000,000.

The United States is booming along on the way to a population of 100,000,000. The Treasury Department at Washington recently estimated that the country had 99,999,999 inhabitants. The census recently taken will, in the opinion of experts, show a total more than 96,000,000.

The country is growing at the rate of 2,000,000 a year. The big cities are rapidly gaining population. The fact that the population is increasing is a fact which is moving some of the students of the situation to anticipate a time when the world is likely "to go super-saturated." Just at present, however, a large majority of Americans refuse to become excited about such a prospect. There is progress all along the line. It may be alarming to some persons that the country is growing so fast, but it would be decidedly more alarming if it were not growing at all. It is a country of vast resources and fertile soil and nobody is seriously overcrowded. In the cities there may be congestion in spots, but there are vast rural territories where the sound of the ax scarcely has been heard. The conservation movement has been fairly launched and the whole country is learning how to preserve its natural resources. The country is growing and it is growing in a healthy way.

C. D. Smith, J. R. Smith, Mark and David Smith, went to Greenville Thursday to see the Bloomer girls play the Greenville boys a game of base ball.

Misses Nannie and Carrie Belle Smith, and others of our section attended the picnic at Allen's school house Friday, and enjoyed an enjoyable time and a plenty of good dinner.

We had very nice Sunday school at Arthur and at Smith's school house Sunday.

We have been having it very dry for several days, but we had a very fine rain Monday morning, which was a pleasure to the farmers.

WATER TRAFFIC.

Visit Washington on a Tour—Built Up Better Water Facilities.

Mr. M. K. King, president, and Mr. J. T. Whitehurst, of the Lake Drummond Canal and Water Company, with headquarters at Norfolk, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon. These gentlemen are now making a tour of the water works in Eastern Carolina with a view of stimulating the water traffic in this section. Their object is to increase the water trade between the eastern towns and Norfolk and Baltimore. They hope to get the people of this section interested in the "transportation." If they do and a steamboat line is established it will mean a great saving in the way of freight rates, says Mr. King. It will be remembered by the Daily News-Record that at one time the vice-presidents and general manager of the Norfolk & Southern Railway, who left this afternoon for New Bern and other towns—Washington News.

THE OLD SPINNING HOUSE.

Bubbling Waters Was Followed by a Vision Long Ago.

I was about fourteen. At the close of a long, hot summer day, on my way from the fields to the barn with my team, I stopped to get a nice, cool drink at the spring-house. Whenever I hear the slogan "Back to the Farm," I think of some of those days, and shake my head. To this day I can not imagine horseback riding for pleasure. Up at break of day, a fire-alarm bell rang. To the pasture for the horses; breakfast; then to work; dinner at eleven; more work; supper at five; more work; at sunset back to the barn to take care of the horses; then remove both suspenders—if there were two—and, as Kipling writes—"If there is sleep," "sink ten thousand miles into sleep." Oh, it was a merry roundelay—I think not.

Well, I stopped at the spring-house. You know the kind, built into the hillside, of good, cool water, and the little, bubbling out of the stone-lined spring, and runs over a trough under a log partition to the water-tight trough inside the real spring-house where the crocks of milk, and jars of butter, and cream, and sugar, and other things are kept cool. There is a spring-door to this treasure-room of the spring-house, and sometimes mothers have had to put locks on the doors, for not only stolen water is sweet, but the milk is sweet, too. I dipped the hollow gourd, and drank deep down in the cool water, and played with the water, and with the fresh water pearls dripping from it, poured the satisfying stream down my hot throat. I wiggle my toes as I think of it, as I always do when I think of the spring-house. Another dipperful of water I drank, and wrote, splashing over the clean stone floor, and I came up out of the spring-house refreshed and clear-eyed to the vision that I met—the prettiest woman I ever saw.

I have met women since who seemed prettier at the time, but somehow I always go back to the vision of the spring. Was it the contrast of her beauty with the hard, daily grind? Was it the environment; the twilight; the time of year; a mood of the moment? I had never thought of a dipper, as pretty or as good as that, before; but as she came down the path to the spring, a new world seemed opening in that instant. Was it the budding of an æsthetic side hitherto unrealized? or was it the wide chasm between boy and man bridged on the instant, and then, when I was the real pretty? often happens?—Erman J. Ridgway, in the Delinquent for August.

THE REFLECTOR QUARTERS.

Where You Can Find The Different Departments.

With the other changes that have come along recently in making the new Reflector, some changes have also come in the arrangements for carrying on the business and editorial departments.

Mr. C. B. Whitehead has been transferred from the printing room to the business office, and has charge of things there.

The editor's office is in the room just in the rear of the business office, and can be found when not elsewhere.

Mr. C. W. Hearne is foreman and superintendent of the printing department up stairs.

If you have business with either of these departments, you will know where to go. There will always be somebody to wait on you. The business office telephone is No. 74, and the printing room 56.

AN HONEST WOMAN.

Over 85 Forty-two Years—Recently Paid It.

About 42 years ago, Ellen Jordan, now known as Ellen Satchwell, contracted a debt with William Bonner, both of whom lived in this city. The transaction had long ago been forgotten by Bonner. A few weeks ago the Satchwell woman paid a visit to Bonner and paid the debt, the amount of which was $5. As she paid over the money she said that the fact of her owing the amount had caused her many a sleepless night. She is one person in a thousand. Her honesty cannot be questioned.—Washington News.
