EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA A GARDEN SPOT.

ON MIDDLE ATLANTIC SEABOARD
—PITT CO. ONE OF RICHEST

Most Fertile in This Favored Section, Possessing at Once a Combination of Soil and Climatic Conditions, That Make For the Very Best Development of an Agricultural People.

(Written by Mr. O. L. Joyner, for Messrs. Collins and Vanderburg, of Norfolk, Va., representatives at a North Western Immigration Bureau.

The soil and climate of Eastern North Carolina are about as near ideal as can be found in a temperate zone. This is one of the oldest sections in the United States, and many of the plantations of Eastern North Carolina have woven around and about them an historic association that goes well back into the Colonial period, yet there are many of these old plantations that have, in the last few years, been improved by crop rotation, and under new management are producing today larger crops of the same products than is produced per acre on much of the high priced land of the northwest, and there is no section of country in these United States where a greater variety of products of the soil can be made than right here in Eastern North Carolina. Many of the abandoned farms of this section instead of becoming poorer would, under skillful management, increase in productiveness and value but the old system of farming in this section embraced the cultivation of large areas on an extensive instead of an intensive system, the result of which was, in many instances, the deterioration of the soil, and the loss of its productivity. Where these farms have fallen into the hands of men who have employed the intensive system, they have rapidly increased in fertility, and although land in this section can be purchased at a much lower price than the same character of land in the newer states, yet, from every standpoint, it is much more valuable.

This section can produce almost every crop that is grown in the Temperate Zone. Corn, cotton, tobacco, peanuts, fruits and all kinds of vegetables for home consumption and for northern markets reach their highest development here. The principal money crops are tobacco, cotton and peanuts. Some estimate of the cost of producing these crops, with their comparative market value may be of interest.

The actual cost of cultivating, fertilizing, harvesting and selling a crop of tobacco depends largely upon conditions and the circumstances of the farmer who makes it. To hire everything done, at the present price of labor the cost of cultivating, harvesting and delivering an average crop of tobacco on the market in an average year will range from $65.00 to $80.00 per acre. The average yield per acre in an average year is from 700 to 1100 pounds. The average price at which tobacco has sold for the last few years on the Greenville market has been from 9½ to 11½ cents. There are exceptional cases, where some farmers produce as much as 1500 pounds of tobacco to an acre, and these farmers secure higher prices because of the superior quality of their tobacco, and consequently, this class of farmers have made a great deal of money out of the tobacco crop. The purpose of this article is to give to those not familiar with the cultivation of our money crops a general idea and therefore averages are mentioned in general terms.

Cotton costs something less to cultivate and market than tobacco, the principal difference being in the cost of the fertilizing material. The cotton crop does not require anything like the attention that tobacco does, although it is a crop that would pay very well for the extra attention given it. The average yield of cotton in this section, I judge, is from 300 to 400 pounds of lint in an average year. The cost of growing and marketing a crop of cotton will run from $35.00 to $50.00 per acre, where the labor all has to be hired.

Peanuts can be cultivated cheaper than either of the other two crops, requiring less high grade commercial fertilizer, and less cultivation, although, like cotton, peanuts respond profitably to good cultivation.

The swamp lands of Eastern North Carolina will yield anywhere from five to fifteen barrels of corn to the acre, which means from 25 to 75 bushels. In some places in Beaufort and Hyde counties, the yield of corn is even more than this. The uplands of this section produce an average of from three to five barrels of corn to the acre without fertilizer, but with careful attention and the judicious use of the right kind of fertilizer, the corn yield in the uplands can be materially and profitably increased.

Owing to the close proximity of the Gulf Stream to the Carolina coast and the range of Appalachian Mountains on the west, which protect this section from blizzards and fierce winds of the Northwest, the winter climate of Eastern North Carolina is about all that can be desired. There are but a few days during the winter, from December until March, when almost at any time farm work cannot be carried on in comfort. We have some hot days in this section during the summer, but generally speaking, they are of short duration, and for the full development of the crops are necessary. However, the climate of this section, as a whole, both summer and winter, can hardly be improved upon in any section of our country. There is no healthier section in the state than Eastern North Carolina. The great "Bugaboo—Malaria," which all the people fear, who live in other sections, is more a scarecrow than anything else. Some of the healthiest and strongest specimens of humanity can be found here, while the general health of the section compare favorably with even the mountain section of the state. Under an act of the last legislature the drainage of the swamps of Eastern North Carolina will reclaim millions of acres of very rich land, and at the same time, remove to a large extent the cause of malaria.

LITTLE VIRTUES.

Do not be troubled because you have not great virtues. God made a million spears of grass where he made one tree. The earth is fringed and carpeted, not with forests, but with grasses. Only have enough of little virtues and common fidelities and you need not mourn because you are neither a hero nor a saint.—Henry Ward Beecher.

A PROGRESSIVE SECTION OF PITT COUNTY.

A VISIT THERE AFTER TWENTY-YEARS BY FORMER TEACHER.

His Eyes Opened to Wonderful Progress Made—Better Farming, Better Roads and Better Schools.

In 1887, twenty-three years ago this month, I took charge of a public school, at what was then called Calico Hill, which the people of that section permitted me to teach, and generously paid me thirty dollars per month. I boarded with the family of the late Mr. George Venters. The people of that section were very good and kind to me then, and since, in my business career, some of the best friends I have ever had are the people I came to know at that time. Although actually engaged in the tobacco business in Greenville since soon after that time, I have not visited that section since. For some time I have promised to go down there, and Monday evening I fulfilled that promise. It seems to me but a short time since I was there, but when I was met at Shelders by the grown and bright young man, son of Mr. H. C. Venters, with whom as a boy I associated when I boarded at his father's I was forcibly reminded of the flight of years.

I spent the night at the home of Mr. H. C. Venters, and next morning together we rode around the country. Although it has been more than twenty years, I have never seen more positive evidence of thrift and progress than there is in that section. Much of the land thereabout that was then an almost unbroken wilderness of wood land has been cleared, and thrifty crops are growing. The little 14 x 16 school house in which I attempted to teach has been replaced by a modern school building that would do credit to any town. The post office at that time was Calico, and occupied a small space in the back room of Mr. Venters' store, the only place of business there. Our townsman, ex-register of deeds, T. R. Moore, was in charge of the store, post office and business of Mr. Venters. The Calico

GRAND JURY REPORT.

Recommendations Made Touching Public Matters.

The grand jury of the August term of Superior court. submitted the following report:

That we visited the home of the aged and infirm, and found everything clean and apparently in good order.

We further find that the superintendent of the county home and the superintendent of health are at enmity towards each other; and that the superintendent of the home and some of the inmates are also "at outs." That the superintendent of the home has failed to visit the Campbells for at least a month.

We recommend that the superintendent of the home raise a sufficient amount of vegetables to feed his family and patients.

We further recommend most emphatically that the superintendent of health be removed at once. This seems to us the most advisable way of settling this dispute or difficulty, and we recommend that the county commissioners attend to this matter at once.

Your grand jury recommend that the township board of supervisors apply to the county commissioners for the excess of funds in the treasury to apply to the worst places on their roads, and to pay a man not to exceed $2 a day to superintend this work. Provided nothing in this recommendation is to be construed into any reflection upon the present method of disposing of said funds, or is intended to hamper the chief force.

The committee examined the jail found it in as good condition as circumstances will permit. We examined the register of deeds office and the clerk's and found them in excellent condition with the exception of some of the records which were badly damaged by water during the late fire, and we would especially recommend that those records be rebound and some of them be re-written; and we would further recommend that a suitable place be provided for the safe keeping of the records as soon as possible, as they are in great danger of being destroyed where they are.

A. J. MOYE, Foreman.

A Good Workman.

There is nothing like being a good workman and knowing how to do a thing. When the wreck of the burned jail was being torn down to make room for the new county buildings, and everything had been removed but the iron cells, a problem was confronted as to how to get them apart so they could be removed. Nobody about the work seemed to know just how to proceed with the job and the task went begging for the time being. Finally Chairman Quinerly, of the board of commissioners, called Mr. R. Greene to look at the job, and the latter said he could get the old cells out of the way. That is just what he did, and was not long about it, either.

In buying cough medicine don't be afraid to get Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger from it, and relief is sure to follow. Especially recommended for coughs, colds and whooping cough. Sold by all druggists.

Friday Mr. Joseph Tripp had in town the first open boll of cotton we have seen this season.

POINTS ON PIGEONS.

Good Homers Are a Profitable Investment If They Have Wise Care.

If you want to make pocket-money by selling squabs be sure to buy good stock, pure homers in pairs, ready mated. Pigeons are very faithful, remaining paired for years. If accident separates them, it is often impossible to get either to accept strange mates that season. Avoid having odd birds; it causes fights and destroys the nesting.

If you should have to pair birds yourself, put them into a two-compartment cage. If you haven't one, make a division with wire netting through the middle of a case three feet long, with a netting door to cover the whole front. Put a bird in each compartment, and when they kiss and coo through the netting they can be put together for two or three days, after which it will be safe to put them in the breeding house. They will soon commence to build their nest by carrying a few bits of hay, or whatever the nesting material may be, into one of the earthenware or wooden nests.

The hen bird lays two eggs, with one day between. Sixteen to eighteen days are required to hatch. Both the old birds have the power to create a digested food, almost a liquid, called by fanciers "pigeons' milk," with which they feed the young for four or five days. Then they are gradually accustomed to eat grain and grit.

About the fifteenth day the nest in the second compartment is built, and again the mother bird lays two eggs and proceeds to incubate them, leaving the first pair of babies principally to the care of the father bird, until at the end of thirty days, you relieve him by taking them for market.

This double family continues all through the year with good homers, well cared for, except when they are molting.

Red wheat and cracked corn, mixed is the best food to keep permanently before pigeons. Two or three times a week give them a treat of Canada peas, hemp seed, stale bread, and kafir corn.—The Delineator.

Conscience-Stricken People.

The Statesville Landmark, quoting from an Atlanta paper an incident of a conscience-stricken man returning 95 cents for a watermelon he had stolen 30 years ago, says: "If all the folks who have stolen watermelons were to feel called on to pay for them, business would be suspended in melon-growing sections until the rush was over." Yes; and what do you suppose would be the effect on the umbrella trade if people should suddenly begin to return stolen umbrellas?—Charlotte Chronicle.

THE GREENVILLE

TOBACCO MARKET.

ONE OF THE STRONGEST IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Buyers, Warehousemen and the Commercial Interests of the Town all Working in Harmony.

For the last several years the average price at which tobacco sold on this market has been published monthly, and so far as we are informed, no other market in Eastern North Carolina has equalled the price paid on the Greenville market.

A reporter for the Reflector was out on the breaks today and followed the sale at several warehouses. We do not believe that a pile of tobacco was overlooked. Competition is stronger than we have ever seen it on this market. There seems to be buyers for every grade that is offered, from the meanest trash to the highest wrappers. The warehousemen are active, wide awake and alert to the interest of the sellers. The buyers are here, with large steam plants, and want tobacco. The way they buy shows that they are anxious for it, and we verily believe that the farmers who sell on the Greenville market this year will get more money for it than elsewhere.

As written above, The Reflector has no sling to make at any small market. We admire the courageous fight that has been made by the smaller markets for trade, but after all, the question is, can the smaller markets compete with the larger markets for the farmers' tobacco? In all fairness and justice to all the markets and the farmers, we would advise all tobacco sellers to visit the different markets and ascertain for themselves where, in their judgment, they can get the most money for their product. Greenville has every facility; it has the very best warehousemen; a strong corps of anxious buyers, and we believe, upon an investigation, they will find Greenville the best tobacco market in the east. We have talked with several of the buyers, and they are all anxious to buy, and will do their part in paying good prices to get it. Farmers will make no mistake this year to keep their eyes on the Greenville tobacco market.

To the Voters of Pitt County:

We can boast of having one of the best clerks of any county in the State. We say the best.

We say this is the wrong time to put him out. You all know that we have lost our court house and a good many papers have been lost. We don't know of any man more capable of getting that straight than our present clerk, D. C. Moore. So let every man turn out and put this honorable gentleman back where he justly belongs.

Not saying anything about his appointment, he is a good man. But no man in this county can fill that place as good as D. C. Moore, at this time. Think of this, voters, we all want something good, but we say give us the best. We have it, and why not keep it?

A Hotel Farmer.

Several years ago, Mr. Edgar B. Moore, proprietor of the Selwyn Hotel, bought the Oliver farm, to the south of the city and since then in a quiet way, he has been developing one of the finest farms in the country. He specializes stock growing and dairying and in these he has been entirely successful. His cattle barns are of modern construction and his dairy house is equipped with the best known to the art. The farm located on a wooden knoll and is the most modest of all the buildings. The tenants live comfortably, but the Jerseys from the point of cow-life, live more comfortably. Mr. Moore goes in to some extent for cotton and what he has is the best round-about. Grass is his long-suit. His farm is green the year round. He has fine crops of timothy, clover, peas and corn and this accounts for the sleek condition of his cattle and hogs. The dairy products of Mr. Moore's farm are served at the Selwyn, the milk, cream and butter and eggs being specialties on the menu cards, and it is this service that helps to sustain the reputation of the Selwyn. It is something new to the Northern people—a hotel backed by a dairy farm—and in their travels they talk about it. Moore gets the benefit of it. His efforts in the direction of dairying and farming have been successful as to prove an incentive to other suburban farmers and in that way are having good results. Farming is not a fad with him. He went into it for practical results and has been securing them. As both farmer and hotel man Moore is all right. —Charlotte Chronicle.

Rolled Off The Train and Slept On.

Greensboro liquor must be something fierce. The News says that Tuesday night a man who gave his name as E. N. King, of Burlington, boarded the train en route to his home, and the train being crowded he took a seat on the platform. Before the train had started he was sound asleep, in fact, dead asleep, and he was totally unaware of the fact when the train pulled out. As a result he rolled off the platform in short order, but he didn't awake when he struck the ground, calmly sleeping on in the clump of bushes where he had been dropped until late Wednesday afternoon. When "Old Sol" began to beat down upon him with his fiercest rays he showed evidences of life and began to bestir himself from his nap. However, he found this more difficult than he first thought was the case, for his knees were badly hurt, and besides he carried bruises all over his body, his head had received an ugly gash.

He gained a sitting posture and after a painful wait of several hours he attracted attention and was taken to a hospital where his wounds were dressed.—Satesville Landmark.

Delightful "At Home."

Misses Minnie and Dora Cox of Winterville, were at home Monday evening, August 22, to a host of friends in and about the village. Miss Pattie Dowell, of Williamston, was the guest of honor.

The largest social gathering of the season expressed the hearty appreciation of more than fifty young people for the invitations received.

The cordial greeting accorded the guests at the door made them feel at once at home. Soon they scattered in groups of twos and threes and more to porch and swings and cozy corners that awaited their coming. Japanese lanterns everywhere made the moon timid about rising, but at her appearance she was still queen. All the while from the parlor came vocal and instrumental strains, rendered so gracefully, by Misses Janie Kittrell, Olive Butt, Venetia Cox and the honored guests.

Cards tied with bows and bells were distributed, and it was not long before beaux and bells were mated. Then came a floral contest in which Mr. Jim Braxton, with Miss Bertha Carroll, and Mr. Joe Kittrell with Miss Essie Hardee tied for the prize—a beautiful copy of "Lala Rookh."

Fate decided for Mr. Kittrell and his partner. Mr. F. F. Cox with Miss Olive Butt, won the booby prize and both were presented in a fitting speech by Mr. J. R. Carroll.

The hostess led the way to the dining room, tastefully decorated in vines and cut flowers, the color scheme being pink and white. Cake and ices in the adopted colors were served.

There was more music and laughter and fun, until all knew that it was time to say good night. So with expressions of genuine pleasure for an evening made glad by such gracious hostesses, the guests departed. Then the lanterns grew dark and only the moon was left.

On Thursday night, about thirty of our fathers and mothers and a few others met in the grove at Dr. B. T. Cox's home. After some planning, they marched over to Mrs. Maggie Butts'.

Mrs. Butt was busily engaged in her home affairs and did not dream of what was happening. There were four of laughter as Mrs. Butt came forward to meet her caller. But instead of finding the expected caller, she found about thirty of the unexpected ones.

It soon became evident from the pleasant smiles and greetings that the situation was understood, and all were seated on the porch to enjoy a pleasant season in the breeze. After about an hour of pleasant conversation, some splendid lemonade was served and music was rendered. Then quite a number engaged in singing hymns that were most familiar to the mothers, and they were sung with such sweetness that our souls feasted.

After the singing and music, prayer was offered, and then good-night was said. We were made to feel sad while bidding Mrs. Butt this farewell as she is going to leave us to take a position in a school near Winston-Salem.

Our best wishes go with Mrs. Butt and family to their new home.

GOOD ROADS ARE CHEAPEST.

Bad Roads are Extravagant and Wasteful.

Good roads are cheaper than bad roads.

That fact alone, if constantly hammered into the public mind by the advocates of good roads, is a sufficient argument for the construction of good roads.

Bad roads are extravagant and wasteful, and the farmers are the chief losers in this extravagance and wastefulness. B. F. Yoakum, a practical man first of all, a great guru in the railroad and business world, told the National Good Roads Congress at Niagara Falls last Thursday that he had estimated how much the farmers of the country would have saved if the roads over which they hauled their products had been good roads instead of bad roads.

What did he estimate their saving would have been? The snug little sum of two hundred and twenty-five million dollars.

Commenting on this fact, the Philadelphia Press says:

"This is not a blind guess. The government shows that the average haul to get farm products to market or railroad shipping point is nine miles, and difference in cost of hauling products over bad roads as compared with good is over 15 cents a ton a mile. This does not include the back haul of supplies over the same soft roads. The farmer needs smooth, hard roads of easy grade. Such roads would bring him rich return in the saving of time and of much of his money, now expended in repairs to harness and wagon and in the purchase and maintenance of more draught stock and equipment than would be necessary if good roads surrounded him."

At the outset, when the construction of good roads is being considered in any given locality, their cost seems very high. After a few years experience changes that seeming high cost into economy.

Let the people keep in mind this fact: in the long run, the good road is the cheapest.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

CLEAN SWEEP IN N. C.

Solid Democratic Congressional Delegation.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 30.—Senator Lee S. Overman, who arrived in Washington today made the prediction that North Carolina Democrats would make a clean sweep at the coming election and send a solid Democratic delegation to the next congress. "I had no idea that the Republicans were absolutely hopeless regarding the result of the congressional election until my arrival here today," observed the popular Tar Heel senator. "I have met many Republican acquaintances during the day and they seem to be without hope for the future. Most of them predict the election of a Democratic house by the largest kind of majorities. Public opinion seems to be approaching unanimity that the Democracy will again assume control of the government. The Republicans are being ground to pieces by factionalism. Insurgents and regulars are saying worse things about each other than they have ever said about Democrats."

"North Carolinians are not unmindful of the political tide that is swinging towards the Democracy in the nation," continued Senator Overman, and they will assert themselves by rolling up increased majorities for their candidates. I expect to see the Democratic vote in the State increased ten thousand over that polled in the Taft election. The Republicans have done a lot of talking, but they have more than they can shoulder in this contest. The people of North Carolina are not prepared to send Marion Butler to the senate, and that would be the result should that State be turned over to the crowd that controlled the recent Greensboro convention. While Morehead is the State chairman, Butler is the guiding genius of the party, and he would deserve election to the senate should such a thing as victory be possible for the Republicans."

"The Democracy in the State is in fine shape. Locally there have been differences, but these will adjust themselves. North Carolinians are determined to keep pace with the balance of the nation in rolling up Democratic majorities. They believe in the cry, 'Turn on the light.'"

"What of Theodore Roosevelt?" was asked Senator Overman. "Looks very much like the former President is a candidate for the nomination in 1912," was the reply. "At any rate that is the impression in Washington."—Thomas J. Pence in The News and Observer.

The Other Side.

The Providence (R. I.) Journal sees something more than a big population for cities to aspire to. It says:

"The thoughtful observer must feel, as he goes about the State, that the great problem is now one of numbers. It is gratifying to know that one's home town is increasing rather than decreasing, but the larger question has to do with its improvement or the reverse. Is life more comfortable within its limits for the mass of the people? Do esthetic considerations receive full weight? What shall it profit Rhode Island if it expands its industries until its inhabitants number a million and meanwhile neglects to beautify its growing towns and to make them sanitary and wholesome?"

TWO SPECIAL OCCASIONS.

Norfolk Southern Tickets at Reduced Rates.

On account of the reunion of North Carolina Confederate veterans in Norfolk, September 4th to 6th, the Norfolk Southern railroad will sell tickets at reduced rates for the round trip, with final limit to return September 14th.

Reduced rates will also be given to the Farmers' State Convention in Raleigh, August 30th to September 1st. Complete information can be had from ticket agents.

"Publicity's The Thing."

"Honest, persistent and well-directed publicity is the great, ever present, silent assistant to the salesman. So argue W. R. Emmerly, of Everybody's, writing in the August number of Judicious Advertising. Of this publicity, Mr. Emmerly says:

"It penetrates where a salesman can never go. It wins over the woman of his house.

"It educates him to realize his needs, and it spends years silently, persuasively leading up to the final order.

Such effort means much to the dealer.

"It is constantly bringing to his place of business new and influential trade.

"It is standardizing his business equally with the standard set and maintained of the product advertised.

"It reinforces his personal guarantee of quality and of merit with the guarantee of the maker emphasized by the reputation of the years of the firm's existence.

"It is constantly, through its persistency, influencing a desire to possess, which would be impossible for the dealer to reach.

"And thereby it cheapens his selling expenses and increases his business.

"The dealer handling advertised goods is realizing upon the asset which has been established and to the extent of the strength of the reputation gained.

"By the same token it means easier sales, more sales, larger sales, more territory covered by the traveling salesman. It is history that men representing advertised lines are selling more goods and drawing more money than competitive non-advertised lines."

The Little Word "Yes."

"Yes" is a simple word spelled with three letters.

It has caused more happiness and more unhappiness than any other word in the language.

It has lost more money for easy lenders than all the holes in all the pockets of the world.

It has started more dipsomaniacs on their careers than all the strong liquor on earth.

It has caused more fights than all the "you're liars" that ever were spoken.

It has procured kisses and provoked blows.

It has caused candidates and elected soundrels.

It has been used in more lies than any other expression.

It is not meant half the time it is said.

Will it continue to make such a record?

Yes.—Life.

Accident Without Injury.

Our esteemed contemporary, the Siler City Grit, has been the medium for announcing to the world some very miraculous happenings recently in that section. Its latest chronicle of an almost unbelievable occurrence was that of a colored well digger falling to the bottom of a 40-foot well without injury save the dislocation of a toe, caused it was stated by a rather tight brogan being worn on that foot.

Without attempting to vie with The Grit in its weekly chronicle of monstrosities and almost unheard-of events, an accident which happened to a colored boy named Sam Burnett here last Monday is worthy of more than passing notice. This boy was hauling brick from the depot here when in crossing the railroad track he lost his balance and fell off the wagon. (loaded with brick) passed over the negro's head, and several persons who witnessed the accident were sure that he was seriously injured. But not so, the boy got up, without assistance, and taking his place on the wagon drove on without any apparent discomfort and none the worse for the wheels having run over his head.—Pittsboro Record.

Don't Appreciate What They Have.

The farmer who owns a farm is the particular person who is fixed. Banks may fail and factories close, workmen strike and mines suspend, merchants fail and towns burn, times may be panicky; even crops may be short but the farmer who owns his acres will get along. He will live in comfort and quiet, with plenty to eat, drink and wear. He is the most independent man on earth. Yet there are lots of them who do not appreciate their situation.

HOME CARE FOR ORPHANS.

The New Philanthropy Seeks to Abolish Asylums.

Friends of the Delineator Child-Rescue Campaign will be gratified to know of the substantial progress that has been made in the propaganda to secure for the dependent child his birthright—an opportunity to be loved and cared for in the family home. Since the campaign was started, there has been much discussion as to the advantages of the family home compared with the old-fashioned orphan asylum. At the great conference of charity workers recently held in St. Louis, and attended by more than twelve hundred men and women who are devoting their lives to philanthropic work, it was considered unnecessary even to discuss this question. Indeed, the unanimous conclusion of those who attended the White House Conference on the Care of Dependent Children has effectually settled the question in favor of the family home.

Miss Jane Addams, the president of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, in her opening address at St. Louis, strongly urged for consideration the wisdom of boarding dependent children with their own mothers or near relatives rather than paying for their support in an institution or in some other person's home. This plan was urged by many other prominent speakers, and one entire session, under the leadership of Miss Alice L. Higgins, Secretary of the Associated Charities, of Boston, was given up to the discussion of the practicability of pensioning dependent mothers in order that they might care for their own children. It was shown that in many communities notably in Massachusetts, this plan is developing successfully.

Few persons realize that but a very small proportion of the children cared for by the institutions or other child-helping organizations are orphans. The great majority of them have one or more parents living. Quite a proportion of these children have worthy mothers who have either been made widows by disease or accident to the father, or, worse still, have been deserted by worthless husbands. Too often in the name of charity the community robs the mother of her only remaining source of comfort by committing her children to some institution where ordinarily she is not permitted even to see them except for a short time at great intervals, and yet this is being done in the name of "charity."—The Delineator for August.

WHEN GRADED SCHOOL OPENS.

Superintendent Smith Gives Some Timely Suggestions.

The Greenville graded schools for white children will re-open on Wednesday, September 21st. The school for the colored children will open on Monday October 3rd.

All persons living within the confines of the graded school district between the ages of six and twenty one years are entitled to attend the schools free of all tuition charges. For non-residents of the district the tuition charges per month are as follows: Primary grades, $1.50; Intermediate grades, $2.00; High School grades, $2.50.

The school of music will be maintained at the white school, as heretofore. The charges for music will be three dollars per month per pupil; families in which more than one pupil registers for lessons will be granted a rate of $2.50 per month per pupil.

While we have no vaccination ordinance as a part of the conditions for entrance into the schools, parents will do well to consider the advisability of having their children vaccinated before the opening of school, provided their children have not been vaccinated within the past three or four years.

Authorities tell us that one out of every three children has adenoids, a disease that makes children dull and listless and hard to teach. We are also told that defective vision is nearly as common as adenoids. Bad teeth, defective vision, adenoids, deafness, throat troubles, and the large number of other diseases that are common in every school, retard seriously the work of the school and the progress and growth of the children.

I suggest that parents have their children examined by their physicians and dentists before school opens, and have them treated if there is need of treatment. It would be immensely helpful to us, and the greatest possible service to the children and the school if there is need of treatment.

I am very hopeful that we shall have a large attendance in the high school department this year. The board of trustees has made a greater effort to furnish the best advantages to the high school than it has yet been able to make. I should like to see every pupil who was in the high school last year enrolled again this year. It is one of the greatest mistakes that a young person can make to drop out of school at the end of the seventh or the eighth grade. Not more than ten per cent. of the pupils who enter the graded schools graduate. This is very unfortunate, and a very great mistake. It is bad enough for a person not to take a college education, and to drop out of the secondary schools prior to graduation is a mistake that is well nigh inexcusable.

WASHINGTON TOBACCO MARKET

Opened Tuesday With Thirty Five Thousand Pounds.

The Washington tobacco market opened yesterday morning in its magnificent new warehouse on Pearce street, under the management of the Farmers Consolidated Tobacco Company, incorporated.

The following are its officers: O. L. Joyner, president; Thad R. Hodges, vice-president; R. J. Cobb, treasurer. The tobacco season yesterday was started under the most favorable circumstances. Nothing but words of commendation and satisfaction can be heard for the way the break was managed and conducted. It was a great success from every viewpoint.

Mr. Joyner, the president of the company in a few pleasing remarks, made before the sale began, stated that Washington had the best lighted warehouse in North Carolina, and that he had never seen people more determined to have a tobacco market than those in Washington. His short talk had a most favorable effect on the crowd present.

About 11 o'clock the sale began with Mr. E. L. Beasley, as auctioneer on the floor. While still a young man he has had several years experience. After the sale had been under way for a short time Mr. W. T. Burton, auctioneer on the Wilson market, was called and he made the sales during the remainder of the break. Mr. Burton is surely an expert in his line. Possessing a strong musical voice, he at once gained the attention of every one, both the farmer and buyer. Not many minutes after he began to cry the sale the crowd began to move closer in and the result attained was conspicuous for its success. The number present and around the piles of golden weed was so dense that it was with difficulty the auctioneer and buyers could keep moving.

There were sixty-six different piles of tobacco on the floor aggregating between 30,000 and 35,000 pounds. It was sold at an average price of about 8c. This considered by the knowing ones a very high average for an opening sale. President Joyner in talking with the editor of the Daily News, said it was the very best opening he had witnessed this season and that he had attended the sales at most of the tobacco markets in eastern North Carolina. This speaks well for Washington and its new industry.—Washington News.

GREENVILLE PUBLIC BUILDING.

Work on it Will Hardly Begin Under Two Years.

Washington N. C., Aug. 24, 1910. Mr. J. B. James, Sec'y., Chamber of Commerce, Greenville, N. C.

Dear Mr. James: I have kept on my desk your recent letter expressing appreciation for the appropriation for the construction of a post office building in your city, with a view of obtaining some definite information as to when the Treasury Department would be ready to take up the matter of plans for your building and to begin construction. I have secured this information, which I regret will be disappointing to your people.

When the Department is ready to take up the construction of a public building the making of preliminary plans is first in order, which is followed by the preparation of complete plans and specifications. Then an advertisement is made for bidders and a contract is entered into with the successful bidder.

The construction of buildings authorized by congress is taken up in the order in which the titles are approved. At the time of the adjournment of congress about July 1st, Greenville was No. 207 on the list of active buildings. The supervising architect informed me that as well as he could approximate, he will not be ready to enter upon the making of preliminary sketches for your building until about March 1912. He further informed me that there were 124 buildings provided for under the act of congress of 1908, for which plans had not been made and approved, and which must be completed before he could make provision for buildings under the recent act approved June, 1910. To illustrate, the public building in the town of Washington has been on the waiting list since 1908, and the supervising architect is only ready just now to begin on the plans.

Perhaps it would be well to publish this letter in The Reflector for the general information of your citizens.

Yours very truly,
JOHN H. SMALL.

BUILDING TEMPORARY VAULT

Records of the County Will be Amply Protected.

We knew that the board of commissioners of Pitt county was composed of the right kind of men that they had the best interest of the county at heart, and that they would do at all times what they think is best for the county. It was recently suggested, when the county records were taken from the old vaults in the burned court house so the lot could be cleared for work on the new building to begin that a temporary vault be built some where on the lot for the safe keeping of these records until the new building is completed and ready to receive them.

That is just what the commissioners are having done, work on this temporary vault has already begun, and the records will be placed therein as soon as it is ready. Then, the records will be absolutely safe and no one need have any uneasiness about them.

Be sure and take a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with you when starting on your trip summer. It is not on board trains or steamers. Chamberlain's water and climate often cause sudden attacks of diarrhoea, and it is best to be prepared. Sold by all druggists.

Summer vacation is about over now, and people who have been away are turning their faces homeward to make ready for fall and winter business. The tobacco market has already opened and is in full swing and in a few weeks more cotton will be coming in. The summer months have been dull, but everybody should quit talking hard times now and buckel down to make the fall business.

The man who thinks the world could not get along without him, is a badly deceived man and is drawing greatly on his stock of self-esteem. Of course every man should think well of himself, and should endeavor to cause others to think well of him; but if he reaches the point of thinking himself indispensable, there are yet things he must learn to the contrary. While "no man liveth unto himself, and no man dieth unto himself," every man's life having some effect upon others, yet there is no man living upon whom the world so largely depends that his taking away would make much difference. So kind reader, if you think the world depends on you for existence and could not get along without you, the sooner that idea is out of your head the better. You have your place in the world, and should make it count for as much as possible, but there is somebody else to take it as soon as you are gone, and you will be missed but a few days at least.

Dead men are only fit to inhabit cemeteries. If they are decently dead, dead all over, we tenderly lay them away in the sleep of the tomb; but if they are dead to all the enterprise out of the narrow plane their own interests and yet persists in walling around, moving their dry bones calloused hearts and consciences where real business is wont to throng and pulse with vigor, they are only like the drone bees, in the way until they are stung to death and dragged outside the hive of legitimate industry. Twenty real live men are worth more to the public generally than a round full thousand of useless material that lies around like rubbish in a rising stream that is aching and foaming to turn mills and factories. Yes, live men bless, and dead men curse a town.—Gaffney Ledger,

The wild Africans called Colonel Roosevelt Ewano Tumbo. If he doesn't be careful the Indians will call him Heap Big Talk. If the colonel could do all he says he would do he might redeem the record of a Roosevelt administration which had lots of thunder in it and very little lightning.—Wilmington Star.

The people of this fine farming section are up and doing. They are farming with their brains as well as with their muscles. While talking a few minutes with Mr. Tom Stokes he pointed to a beautiful field of clover where the ground was literally covered with cow peas, and said: "When I consider how I have cultivated that field and the crop on it this year, I feel like my past life has all been wasted." I asked him why, and he said: "that field has not had a plow in it since it was planted, that he had cultivated it entirely with riding cultivators, that the mules did the work and he rode, and to illustrate the ease with which it was done, said he could have done the work, wearing patent leather shoes and not soiled them." This is the best illustration of modern methods that I have heard. I enjoyed every minute of my stay on this trip. It did me good to travel over this country, and note the wonderful changes in a few years, improvements that are just beginning which in a few more years will give to those people a realization of their hopes and a reward of their industry.

In Memoriam.

On Friday, the 19th day of August,
at 12 o'clock, noon the spirit of Mrs.
Henrietta L. Moye, took its flight to the Spirit land.

If the angel of death was seeking one who was prepared for the summons, a better selection could not have been made.

For over fifty years she had been a devoted follower of her Lord and master, a consistent, loyal member of the Christian church.

She never tired of doing for those she loved, her whole life being characterized by deeds of Christian love and charity.

She leaves three children, A. J.
Moye, Moses L. Moye and Mrs. Josephine Flynn, and quite a number of grand children, all living near Farmville, N. C. At the time of her death she was in her eightieth year, and has left a blessed memory, honored and revered by all who knew her.

As she lived, so she died, with an unswerving faith and trust in God, and she hath gone to her reward, a home with her Saviour.

Dysentery is a dangerous disease,
but can be cured. Chamberlain's Col-

BOTH FOUND GUILTY.

Forbes Gets Seven Years, Johnson
Five Years.

The trial of Frank Forbes and Joe Johnson for murder in the second degree, for the killing of Luke Harris, ended Thursday evening, just at the adjournment of court, in a verdict of guilty as to both. The case occupied the whole day of the court.

When the case was given to the jury they were only four minutes in reaching a verdict that both were guilty. Judge Ward passed sentence of seven years imprisonment in the penitentiary on Forbes, and five years on Johnson.

When the digestion is all right, the action of the bowels regular, there is a natural craving and relish for food.
When this is lacking you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's

"BACK TO THE FARM"IV.—The Modern Farm Home.

By C. V. GREGORY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

ONE of the chief reasons why the girls and women of the farm have occasionally longed in the past for the city is because of the more convenient homes that were found there. Many a farm woman has had her life shortened by carrying water from the well or the spring, bending for hours at a time over steaming washtubs and doing other hard labor from which the women in town long ago were emancipated.
Today the modern farm home is fully as well supplied with conveniences as the house in the city, and

CONVENIENCE IN THE FARM HOME—A WASH-ROOM IN THE CELLAR.

It is done at less cost. The reason that more homes are not provided with such conveniences is that the farmers have grown used to doing without them. They look forward to retiring and moving to town, where they can have all the modern conveniences.
When they get there they will pay dearly for them in the form of house rent. To have them in the country means a direct cash outlay, and too often the farmer pleads that he cannot afford it. A little figuring would convince him that he need not do without a few of these conveniences that make life so much more pleasant for the whole family.

The first consideration in most parts of the country is the heating system.
Farmers are getting out of the habit of using stoves, as they are finding that the added convenience of a furnace or hot water heater, together with the saving of coal or wood, will pay for the installation. With a heating system of this kind all the coal and dust incident to building and keeping up the fire are in the cellar. The whole house can be heated for about what it costs to heat two or three rooms with stoves. There is no need of crawling out of bed into a cold room in the morning. A pull on the chain will open the draft, and in half an hour or so the house is warm. The kitchen also can be heated from the cellar, and an oil stove can be used for cooking.
An oil stove takes up less room, saves fuel and is much more comfortable to work over in the summer time.

A furnace has the advantage of cheapness. It also furnishes fresh air to the rooms, if properly put in. For an eight room house a furnace can be put in for about $150. A hot water system for the same house would cost a trifle more than twice as much. The hot water system has the advantages of being cleaner and keeping a more uniform heat. Cheap coal will work well in the boiler, thus considerably reducing the expense for fuel.

The next consideration is the water system. A good water supply under pressure is not only a convenience, but also a form of insurance, since each farm must furnish its own fire protection. Some farm buildings are built new of concrete and hollow tile, but even then there is always some danger of fire. An elevated tank is one of the best means of supplying pressure. Some of the modern types of silos are being built with a tank on top. A method that is as convenient, though a little more expensive, is a pneumatic tank in the cellar. The water is pumped into this and the air inside compressed. The air pressure will lift the water to all parts of the house.

For power to pump the water a windmill may be used, or a hydraulic ram if running water is obtainable. The most reliable power is a gasoline engine.
Nearly every really up to date modern farm has its gasoline engine, which can easily be made to combine pumping with its other duties. With a little added expense the water system can be made double, so that both hard and soft water can be obtained. For the bathroom and the kitchen sink hot water is needed also, which can be provided by a heater in the range or by a separate oil heater.

With a good water system installed
the work of the housewife is reduced 50 per cent. Cold and hot water, either hard or soft, is always at hand for use in the kitchen. The dishes can be piled into the sink and washed in almost half the time it took previously.
A wash room with permanent tubs can be provided in the cellar. The washing machine can be run with the gasoline engine or with a water motor. While a room of this kind may not make washing exactly a pleasure, it will reduce the labor more than half. With a little planning a small tank can be arranged in the kitchen, so that all the water that is pumped for the stock will pass through it. This is almost as good as an icebox.

A good bath and toilet room is a great convenience to all the family. A shower bath in one corner of the barn will be greatly appreciated by the boys at the close of a hot day's work.
The wastes from the kitchen sink and from the wash room can be run into a tile and taken away. For the wastes from the toilet room a sewage disposal plant will have to be provided. The most convenient method is the septic tank. This is an underground cement lined brick tank divided into two compartments. As one compartment fills it overflows into the next. Nearly all the solid substance will be destroyed by bacteria, and the water that flows out at the lower end can be disposed of through a tile drain.
The entire cost of a water system such as the one described, with the compressed air tank, together with the sewage disposal plant, need not be much more than $250.

The cheapest method of lighting the farmhouse is by acetylene gas. This gas is generated by a machine in the cellar and can be piped to all the rooms and to the barn. If desired it can be used also for cooking. The average cost of installing an acetylene plant is about $200. This includes lights in the barn and in the yard. It costs little to run an acetylene plant after it is once in. The average cost is about a cent for a sixteen candle power light for four hours. Acetylene is the nearest like daylight of any kind of artificial light and is incomparably better than the old fashioned oil lamp.
The newer types of acetylene lamp are provided with a battery, so that they can be lighted by merely turning a button.

By going to a little more expense
electric light can be had on the farm.
If a gasoline engine is already at hand
the total cost of installing an electric plant, with lights in house and barn, need not be more than $375.

A few electric fans will make the house comfortable in hot weather.
One convenience of the city, ice, is still lacking. The way the ice problem is most satisfactorily handled in the country is for half a dozen neighbors to build a co-operative icehouse. The men club together and fill it in the winter, and a plentiful supply of ice is at hand all through the summer. With a small additional expense a cold storage room can be built in connection with the icehouse for keeping meat, poultry, eggs and fruit. In a number of communities co-operative fresh meat societies are successfully run.
The members take turns killing a beef or a hog, and fresh meat is supplied all through the year at much less cost than it could be obtained in the city.

The cost of a heating system, a wash room, a vacuum cleaner, a hot water attachment and other devices of that sort is the same in the country as in the city. The cost of the water and sewage system in the country is about $250. The cost of operating a water system in the country is much less than the cost of city water.

An electric lighting system for the farm will cost from $375 up. The life of such a system can be figured safely at twenty years. The storage batteries will not last so long, but the rest of the apparatus will last longer. This would mean an annual depreciation of $18.75. Interest at 6 per cent would amount to $22.50. The cost of operating the plant will depend, of course, on the amount of electricity used. The cost for lighting the average farmhouse and barn for a year and furnishing electricity for sundry other purposes will not average more than $10 for gasoline. This makes the total cost for electricity $41.25 a year. In the city the average cost for electricity for an eight room house is about $50 a year.

The cost of an icehouse and of putting up ice varies so much with conditions that it is hard to give any general figures. These can easily be obtained for any particular locality, how-

CROSS SECTION OF A SEPTIC TANK.

ever. It is seldom that ice put up in this manner costs as much in the country as in town.

The farm home can be fitted with hot water heat, hot and cold water, bath and toilet room, electric lights, wash room in the cellar, etc., for $1,000. The interest on $1,000 is $60 a year. Ten per cent for depreciation and repairs is $100 a year. The saving in coal will pay for the cost of running the lighting and water systems.
For $100 a year the farm home can be provided with every modern convenience that the city home possesses.

By using a furnace and an acetylene system the annual cost can be lowered to about $85. The city man pays that extra $7 to $14 a month and more in increased rent and thinks nothing of it. The farmer is beginning to realize that it is possible for him to live better, and he is rapidly taking advantage of the opportunity.

Grenville, N. C., Aug. 31, 1910.
Editor Reflector:

I am not opposed to any movement for the betterment of the county, but I am opposed to building roads for automobiles to run on and scare the farmers teams to run away. The majority of automobile drivers have no respect for other people. I know there are some exceptions, but the most of them don't care about the welfare of other people. The good road is indirectly responsible for those three promising young men's death; if it had not been for that hard road, Mr. Flanagan could not have run his machine at such a high rate of speed and Mr. Fleming, Mr. Skinner and Mr. Wooten would have been here living today. I have no doubt. If the automobile men want good roads let them get them a charter and build them one like the railroad does, and keep off the country roads.

I think it is for the farmers to say whether they want good roads or not, as they are the ones that have to haul over them. I would like to ask the good roads convention one or two questions. Why did they have their convention on the first Monday in August? Why didn't they have it on Saturday instead of Monday? They are like the Consolidated Tobacco Company, they wanted it when they knew the farmers could not attend.

Well, so much for the autos and now for the county. The county is already in debt to the amount of about $200,000, and it will cost about $500,000 more to build the roads, making a total of about $700,000. It looks to me like our taxes will be high enough without the roads now. It don't look right for us to vote for $500,000 bonds payable in 10, 20 or 30 years for our children to pay unless we are not willing to pay ourselves, and with the steady increase of taxes it looks to me like our children will have enough to pay without our voting for another additional bond. The Bible says "He that provideth not for his household has denied the faith and is worse than an infidel," and if we vote for bonds for our children to pay, that we are not willing to pay, we come under the same condemnation. For these reasons I am opposed to the good roads movement and shall fight it to the end.

E. E. STAINBACK.

To the Voters of Pitt County

I take this method of saying to the voters of Pitt county, that if I am elected to the office of Clerk of the Superior court for two successive terms, that I will retire without any reservation or equivocation, at the end of two terms. I do this, because I believe that rotation in office is just and that the young manhood should be stimulated to look forward to something for themselves or their friends and that it is for the best interest of the party for which I have given my best service to promote and maintain. It is probably, not generally known in Pitt county, that no man has been elected, since the civil war to the office of clerk of the Superior court for more than three terms in succession. It is now a matter with the people, as to whether they will reverse this time honored custom, or still preserve it and thereby be in unison with, and follow the example of the immortal George Washington, who, after having served faithfully, his country in office for two terms, voluntarily retired, loved and honored by all his countrymen.

PLEDGE YOUR CANDIDATES

They Should be Questioned on The Torrens Land System

We are glad to see the South Carolina Farmers' Union has joined the North Carolina Farmers' Union in advocacy of the Torrens System of registering land titles. Southern farmers by the thousands are getting thoroughly aroused to the importance of this useful reform, and every candidate for the next General Assembly in each State should be pledged to the support of the principle. And for the benefit of our readers who do not fully understand it, a brief explanation of the whole matter may not be out of order.

As it is now every time a piece of property is transferred some lawyer must examine into the legality of the title. Old records—sometimes for hundreds of years—must be searched at great labor and expense; and the next time the property is sold, and the next, and the next, the same work must be done again, and other big lawyers' fees paid.

Now, the Torrens System proposes that instead of this unrelenting investigation of the same thing, this perpetual marching backward and forward over the same ground with no purpose save that of supporting the lawyers, who might better serve their fellows in some other way—instead of all this, we say, the Torrens System proposes that that State shall examine the title once for all, guarantee it and register it—and henceforth it may be transferred as easily as a share of stock in a corporation or a bond issued by State or municipality.

The original cost of getting a Torrens deed will be little, if any, more than the present cost of once investigating the title, and with the Torrens deed once secured, land titles may be transferred at from one-fourth to one-tenth the present expense and with immensurably less worry and uncertainty.

At present, moreover, a deed is only a registered certificate of claim; the State does not guarantee your right to the property described, and even after the lawyers have pronounced the title sound, you can not be absolutely sure. A deed under Torrens System, on the other hand, is an absolute guarantee from the State of your right to the property mentioned.

A lawyer said to us the other day that he knew pieces of property several times transferred on which at least one-fourth the total value had been spent investigating the title—and the next time the property is sold, the same ground will probably be gone over again. Under the Torrens System, at a fraction of this cost, the owner would have a guaranteed title requiring no further investigation and his property as easily negotiable as a United States registered bond.

Easily negotiable, we say—and right here is one single advantage of the Torrens System that ought to insure its adoption, even if it had no other attractions. As things are now, land—which should be the finest of all securities—by reason of the uncertainty of titles and the cost of making inquiries is in no such favor with the banker and money-lender as its value justifies; the farmer, in other words, is at a great disadvantage in borrowing money as compared with the city business men. But with the Torrens System not even a registered Government bond would be as attractive to the bank as land would be—because the Torrens deed would be as much guaranteed by the Government as the bond itself, while Nature, having made land far more indestructible than governments, would better guarantee the safety of the deed. This would not only make it easier for the land owner to borrow money, but it would also certainly increase the market value of all farm property.

In the face of these advantages it is singular that the Torrens System has not already been adopted in every State in the Union—apparently singular at least, until we recall the fact that the large majority of our legislators are lawyers, and a large majority of these lawyers fatten on the abuses of the present system. In the nature of things they cannot be expected to bring about a reform until a strong, unmistakable demand comes up from the people themselves. Until such a demand does come, the doom of the Torrens System must be sealed whenever a lawyer-legislator whispers to his fellows in the language of Demetrius, the silversmith: "Sir, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth."

The demand must come from the farmers, and we appeal to them to pledge every candidate for the Legislature upon this important matter. Give us the Torrens System. As The Progressive Farmer and Gazette was the first paper in the Southern States to champion and advertise the plan, we are naturally gratified at its rapid and unceasing march to ultimate victory.—Progressive Farmer.

EDITOR AWARDED DAMAGES.

Jury Gave Him $600 For An Assault Committed on Him by J. W. Hasty.

Quite a sensational trial took place in Wilkes court Saturday. It was a civil suit in which Editor R. A. Deal, of the Chronicle, a Democratic paper, was plaintiff and G. W. Samuels and J. W. Hasty defendants. It grew out of an assault made on Editor Deal about five years ago, by Samuels and Hasty, revenue officers.

Editor Deal had charged Spencer Blackburn with having organized the distillers and revenue men into a combination by which distillers were to pay $30 per month to Blackburn's campaign fund. As Deal expressed it, "they were to put $30 into the missionary box." No names were used by Editor Deal, but George W. Samuels with J. W. Hasty attacked Deal, Samuels knocking him to the ground and jumping on him and Hasty, with his Colt's revolver shouting to the crowd who ran to Deal's rescue to stand back.

Both of the men were sentenced to imprisonment and served a term in jail.

In the meantime Deal, who is a small, frail man brought civil suit for his injuries. The defendants were never ready for trial. Samuels died last year and Hasty, his co-defendant, thought he would stave off the matter until Editor Deal, who is fast going into consumption, had passed away. At this term of the court Judge Pell was appealed to by Mr. Deal's attorneys to bring the matter to trial, as he would hardly live till another court. Hasty, who lives in Union county, sent a doctor's certificate that his wife was ill and begged to put it off. Judge Pell wired to Monroe and learned that she was not very ill, so forced Hasty to come to trial. The jury consisted of nine Republicans and three Democrats, and contrary to expectations, they awarded Deal $600 damages. The defendant appealed to the Supreme court. It is thought the idea is to keep the case going until Deal's days are over.—Wadesboro Special to Winston Journal.

"Get Away From The Crowd."

Dr. Robert Burdette, in a talk to young men, said: "Get away from the crowd for a while and think. Stand on one side and let the crowd run by, while you get acquainted with yourself, and see what kind of a fellow you are. Ask yourself hard questions about yourself. Ascertain, from original sources, if you are really the manner of man you say you are; if you are always honest; if you always tell the square perfect truth in business details; if your life is as good and upright at eleven o'clock at night as it is at noon; if you are as good a temperance man on a fishing excursion as you are on a Sunday school picnic; if you are as good when you go to the city as you are at home; if, in short, you are really the sort of man your father hopes you are, your sweetheart believes you are. Get on intimate terms with yourself, my boy, and believe me every time you come out of one of those private interviews, you will be a stronger purer man. Don't forget this, and it will do you good."

Good roads pay and whatever pays is worth having. It is always a good idea to spend money for something that will return the money with interest. Good roads constitute that kind of an investment. No money spent in the actual work of building modern highways can possibly be wasted.—Wilmington Star.

Better Agricultural Methods.

A nation which can count a harvest by billions, it might be supposed, would be prone to imagine that it is already practicing good enough agricultural methods.

But we imagine that when the banks are all repaid their loans to farmers to move their crops and profit and loss accounts are closed, the per capita net earnings of our great agricultural population will not be wholly satisfied. When, too, the average yield per acre for each of our products over the entire country is compared with the yield in other countries, we are quite sure that convincing proof will be supplied that we as a nation are prodigal and wasteful in the extreme in farming.

To illustrate: The United States produces an average of 88 bushels of potatoes per acre, and the farmer who grows 300 bushels is justified in boasting of his skill in agriculture. Crowded England often raises 1,000 bushels to the acre, and still more crowded in Belgium, with over 500 persons to the square mile, can often show 1,000 bushels to the acre. What is here said of potatoes is equally and strikingly true of all other land products. So that our Agricultural Department has sent a commission to Europe to find out how they do it.

The principal upon which European farmers work is that of paying due regard to the cost of production. That is all that intensive farm methods mean—getting the most possible out of an acre of land the least possible expenditure of money. It is necessary to emphasize the word "money," for there is a system of farming which obtains in all countries that consists in getting the most possible out of an acre with the least possible expenditure of labor, time, investment, or care. If that is farming at all, it is not intensive farming, but the most expensive kind of farming.

Now and then we are told that the American farmer will soon have exhausted all the natural fertility of the land, and that he must come to intensive farming. That warning is uttered as though it were some impending calamity or fearful alternative.

It is not necessary to wait until the fertility of the land is exhausted before adopting intensive methods. All commerce tomorrow morning. And absolutely nothing else can be conceived which will contribute so much and so quickly to the national and individual wealth as will a radical reform in the direction of more scientific and business like methods of agriculture and horticulture.

They Violate The Law.

In view of the decision rendered by Chief Justice Clark, public officials—county commissioners, road commissioners and others who have been dealing with themselves had better have a care. It is a violation of the law and indictments have been made against such officials, as boards or individuals, in some counties. Not only is it against the law for a member of any board of commissioners, county, road, school, etc., to sell to the county any material, lumber, rock, merchandise, and the like upon which they have to pass in allowing the account, but no member can receive pay for committee work done. When the services of such persons are required an outsider, one who is not connected with the said board in any way, must be employed. This of course, applies where such services are to be paid for. Of course, any body can delegate one of its members, or any number of them as a committee to attend and look after certain matters, but without compensation other than that provided for their regular duties.

This being the case if there has been any one receiving pay for special committee work or otherwise in violation of the law, through ignorance on their part of any wrong doing, the thing to do is to cover the amount so received back into the treasury and let that be an end to the matter. —Henderson Gold Leaf.

FISHERIES DISPUTE SETTLED.

Great Britain has Sovereign Right to Make Regulations.

By Cable to The Reflector.

The Hague, Sept. 7.—The award in the fisheries dispute between England and Canada against the United States, was signed this morning. This was a triumph for arbitration. It holds that the British have absolute sovereign rights to form regulations in New Foundland waters, but recommends that two months' notice be given on the whole. The award is regarded in the diplomatic world as satisfactory. The decision is unanimous on all questions but one, this being the question of defining bays, which the commission refused to do. By the award the dispute that has lasted almost a hundred years, and has twice nearly brought England and the United States to war, is definitely settled. An industry of a million dollars a year is beyond dispute and complicated questions, which have been wrangled over since 1818, are solved. The agreement of British and American judges is complete, the only objection being made by Senor Drago, the Argentine representative. The agreement, it is believed, will prove generally satisfactory to all three countries involved.

ALMOST A FIRE.

McLemore's Pressing Room Gives a Scare.

There was some excitement on the street a little before 10 o'clock this morning, when smoke was seen pouring out of Mr. B. F. McLemore's clothes pressing establishment. His place is located in one of the rooms in the row of frame buildings on the Dancy property, a very inviting section for a fire.

Large numbers of citizens and the fire department were quickly on the scene and the fire was put out before there was any damage of consequence, except to the contents of Mr. McLemore's establishment. The clothing of several of his customers on hand to be pressed were ruined, and all of his fixtures were more or less damaged.

The fire occurred in the back room of the establishment where the cleaning and pressing are done, and in some way caught from one of the small gasoline stoves. The entire room was in a blaze in a moment.

Messrs. W. B. Wilson & Son and Mr. F. H. Beaton, who have offices on each side of where the fire was, moved out their fixtures in a hurry.

Locked Up in Theatre.

Tuesday night a little son of Mr. C. A. Cash attended the Amuzu Theatre, and fell asleep during the performance. The boy was not observed and was locked up in the building when it was closed. Later he awoke and raised a yell. Mr. C. W. Hearne was passing the building and hearing the boy crying inside, went around and found the back door unfastened and let the prisoner out.
