Food for Babies.
Until a baby is a year old it should live almost entirely upon good, pure milk. It also requires a moderate amount of water every day. The only addition to the diet should be a teaspoonful of orange juice once a day, after it is six months old. The habit practised by some mothers, of taking the baby to the table during the regular meal time and giving it a taste of the various articles of food is reprehensible.
After the baby is a year old a little prune juice or pulp of a baked apple may be given once a day. Gradually other articles of food may be added, but these must be such as are easily digested. Meat broths, soft boiled eggs, cereal and baked potatoes moistened with milk should be the chief thing given. At first these should be given only at the noonday meal, but gradually they may be added to meals. Oat meal is a good winter food for children. It should not be given in summer, as it is too heating.
The child should be urged to drink plenty of water between meals, but never should be given ice water. No drugs should ever be given except on the advice of a physician. Especially should mothers shun soothing syrups as they would poison, for these have caused the death of numerous babies.
Letter-Writing.
The courtesy of letter writing is something which the summer either develops or kills.
So many new acquaintances are made, so many courtesies shown that those desirous of being really polite can best show their spirit of good-will in a few lines the kindness that some hostess has shown of some travelling companion accorded the trips which are a part of the summer days.
This letter writing habit need not mean more than a line or two. But if words in the real spirit of good-will, a friendly note will mean as much to the recipient as a gift, which may seem to deem the material and best evidence of gratitude for hospitality or courtesy.
Young girls often grow careless and remiss in this particular. Thereby they show a lack of breeding for they take only a few minutes to write the little note of appreciation. It is an evidence of remembrance as well as good manners.
The sustained correspondence that is the outcome of new friendships is sometimes difficult as it is pleasant to keep up, but there is really no excuse for neglecting the note of appreciation.
I believe all mothers in their curriculum of good manners should enshrine this habit among their graces physical, mental and moral which makes their daughters shine in society.
While a little thing to do, it is a big thing to leave undone. If neglected judgment is accordingly severe, while in the observance the writer shows good form and achieves a higher place in the estimation of all who value courtesy and breeding.

SENATOR BANKHEAD REFUSES VICE PRESIDENCY FOR OSCAR UNDERWOOD
New York's Move That Nomination Be By Acclamation Rejected and Final Ballot Sees State After State Join New Jersey Governor's Banner—Two States Remain True to Speaker

William Jennings Bryan Centre of Attraction As Fight UNDERWOOD'S WITHDRAWAL SIGN FOR WILSON BREAK

BALTIMORE, July 3.—Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, was yesterday nominated for the presidency by the Democratic National Convention. The nomination was made after Clark had released his supporters and New York as a climax, had moved to suspend the balloting and make the nomination by acclamation.
There was objection to this plan. As the final roll call came on state after state fell into line for the New Jersey executive, piling upon overwhelming majority.
The result was reached with tumultuous demonstrations by delegates and spectators.
Bryan was a center of interest as Wilson's nomination became certain. He said he wanted most of all the nomination of a progressive.
Upon motion of Senator Stone the nomination of Governor Wilson was made unanimous at 3:33 p. m.
After then omission of Wilson the next order of business was nominations for vice president. Prominent by mentioned were Governor Marshall of Indiana; Governor Burke of North Dakota; Representative Henry of Texas and Senator Kern of Indiana.
Congressman Fitzgerald of New York moved that roll call be dispensed with and nomination of Wilson be made by acclamation.
The convention rose en masse as the New York spokesman moved Wilson's nomination by acclamation.
A frenzy of cheers swept the floors and galleries.
The delegates stood on their chairs waving hats and flags.
Senator Stone, speaking for Clark released all Clark delegates.
Stone said the delegates were perfectly free to vote for whom they pleased. But the Missouri delegation regardless of what others might do would vote for Clark on all ballots.
Mayor Fitzgerald, of Boston, took the platform to withdraw Foss.
Senator Bankhead, manager of the Underwood campaign, went to the platform and spoke amid breathless silence, withdrawing the candidacy of the Alabama congressman.
He said Underwood had entered the contest hoping to be the nominee. But his chief desire was to eradicate every prestige of sectional feeling. That had now been demonstrated by the liberal support given the Alabama candidate. He would not be a party to the defeat of any candidate.
"But I think time has come to recognize that he cannot be nominated in this convention, nor can he be used to defeat any other candidate," Bankhead proceeded.
"Vice president" quired a delegate from the floor.
"No," houted back Bankhead. "He will not turn from the important duties he is performing to take such an office as vice president."
Underwood would remain where he was, doing his great constructive work. Bankhead went on, and he expressed the hope no one would further urge the Alabama candidate for vice president.
"Mr. Underwood directs me to withdraw his name from this convention," said Bankhead, amid impressive silence, adding a tribute of thanks from Underwood for the sincere and loyal support given him. He added that all his friends were now released to vote for whom they pleased.

Mrs. William J. Bryan Was at Baltimore With Her Husband

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN has a political secretary in whom he reposes the largest confidence. It is his wife. It has been her custom in all of his campaigns to travel with him, acting as his amanuensis and legal aid. For Mrs. Bryan, the daughter and wife of a lawyer, is herself a member of the legal profession. It was a matter of course, then, that she should have accompanied her husband to Baltimore as long as to Chicago, where he reported the Republican convention. Mrs. Bryan's 1906. She is fond of travel, but the place she likes best in the world is the farmhouse at Normal, four miles from Lincoln, Neb., which has been the home of the family since 1901.

GOVERNOR THOMAS R. MARSHALL INDIANA'S FAVORITE SON.
INDIANA GOV. FOR 2ND PLACE
But Three Ballots Taken For A Vice-President
MARSHALL DEFEATS BURKE
Strongest Opponent to Gov. Marshall Was Gov. John E. Burke of South Dakota, Who, However, Was Defeated After 3 Ballots
BALTIMORE, June 3.—For president—Governor Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey.
This was the ticket completed by the Democratic national convention at 1:56 a. m. today.
The nomination of Governor Marshall for vice president, came somewhat as a surprise for when the night's balloting for vice president ended it seemed that the Bryan-Wilson contingent in the convention had definitely settled upon Governor John E. Burke, of North Dakota.
There was not much of a fight however, and when the two ballots disclosed Marshall easily in the lead, Governor Burke's name was withdrawn and Marshall was proclaimed the nominee by acclamation. A minute later the convention had adjourned, in the delegate, worn and weary, made their way out of the big convention hall singing and happy to be tarred for home.

BIG DIRIGIBLE A TOTAL WRECK
Yanniman and Crew of Three Are Killed
EXPLOSION CAUSES FATAL FALL
Wives of Men on Air Craft Witness The Tragedy That Makes Them Widows. The Four Bodies Fell into the Atlantic
ATLANTIC CITY, July 2.—While 3,000 spectators stood too startled to utter a single sound, the big dirigible balloon Akron was shattered by the explosion of the gas bag and blown to atoms at 6:33 this morning, a half mile off shore, over Absecon Inlet.
Melvin Yanniman, who had built the airship with the idea of flying across the Atlantic Ocean, Captain Yanniman, his younger brother, Fred Almos, Walter Guest and George Brilliant, his crew, were instantly killed.
The dirigible was sailing at a height of 1,000 feet and had been in the air since 5:15 o'clock when the accident occurred. She was a quarter of a mile south of Brigantine Beach, which is across the inlet from this city.
The huge envelope, containing thousands of cubic feet of gas, was rent by the terrific force of the explosion, probably caused by expansion from the sun's rays. It burst near the middle. A mass of flames hid the ship from view. For a space of probably ten seconds the half million dollar dirigible was invisible while in the air about the spot where she had been hovering to be all flames.

Comment on Current Events

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The beginning of the fiscal year, July 1 when Uncle Sam balances his accounts turns over a new leaf in his ledger and starts a new record of receipts and expenditures, will find a treasury filled with money but with no authorization for its expenditure for the current needs of the government.

The constitution provides that no money shall be taken from the national treasury without authorization of Congress, and although that body has been in session for nearly six months this calendar year it has not passed the necessary measure directing the expenditures of funds for the maintenance of the government, except in the case of two or three of the minor supply bills. The bill appropriating money for the diplomatic and consular service and the one making appropriations for fortifications for the coming fiscal year have been passed and signed by the President, and the annual supply bill for pensions has been favorably acted upon, but none of the other big measures has become a law.

This situation would tie up the affairs of the government were it not for the fact that Congress discovered many years ago that there was a way out of the difficulty. That method is to pass a resolution which has all the force and effect of law, authorizing a continuation of existing appropriations until such time as the regular supply bills should be passed. The passage of such resolution will enable the secretary to pay warrants drawn upon the treasury for the regular and routine expenses of the government and for contracts already authorized, but it will not permit of the payment of money for new projects.

Such a resolution has already been introduced in the Senate by Senator Gallinger or New Hampshire and doubtless will be one of the first measures accepted upon when Congress again takes up the serious business of legislation after the first of July. How long it will be before the general supply bills are enacted, no one can tell, but it will doubtless serve weeks, as the President has already voted the army appropriation bill and there will be a big fight before Congress yields to his objection and passes the measure without features to which he has taken exception. It is also freely predicted that a similar fate will befall the bill making appropriations for the legislative, executive and judicial departments of the government because of the rider which abolishes the United States Court of Commerce and disposes with the services of the five judges who have served upon that tribunal.

The failure of Congress to make the necessary appropriations is due largely to the inaction of the Senate. The custom has grown up in Congress that all of the big supply bills shall be framed in the House, although there is no constitutional provision requiring this, as is the case revenue measures, but it has come to be practiced in this sort of division of work between the two Houses. In this custom the principle is followed that inasmuch as the House is elected by the people and the Senate is elected by the electors, it is felt that the House should have first say in the matter of control over the public purse strings. The House has done its share in this work and has passed all of the general supply bills with the exception of the general deficiency bill, which is always the last to be acted upon. The Senate, however, is far behind in this work.

The end of the fiscal year also shows that the House has passed tariff bills revising the woolen schedule, revising the meat schedule, and revising the chemical schedule, and is now providing for the admission of sugar at free of duty. To meet the loss of revenue because of the proposed free admission of sugar, the House has also passed an excise measure, really an income tax bill, which it is said will produce upwards of twice as much income to the treasury as the sugar duty. One of these measures, the metal schedule bill has passed the Senate, but with a rider repealing the Canadian reciprocity law which Canada resented to accept. This has thrown the measure into conference where it now rests.

The House has also passed the bill providing for the operation of the Panama canal and fixing the matter of tolls. That matter remains unacted upon by the Senate.

The two measures favorably acted upon by both Houses which are recognized as of more importance than the others, are the solution proposing an amendment to the constitution providing for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people, and the so-called Sherwood "four-day" pension bill. The latter mea-

Circumventing the Squash Bug.
Last season I tried the old way of trapping the squash bug and it was an emphatic success. I laid down a single besides each hill and early in the morning turned them over and killed the bugs. At the start I would find from three to 15 clinging to the underside of each plant. The numbers grew less and less till finally they seemed all gone and the vines were the rankest and thrievest I ever had writes E. P. Snyder in Farm and Home.

FOR THE FARMERS

From HOME AND FARM

How to Build a Stack.
The secret of successful stack building is to keep the middle flat and well tramped. A stack is bound to settle, and it is important that the middle settles the least. Some use pole as a foundation for their stack. The grain should be protected from the ground by hay or straw placed on some old rails or timbers. The stack may be started similar to an ordinary shock, with the outside bundles practically flat. The center of stack should at all times be kept high. The outside layer of bundles can be placed with a fork and should not be tramped. The "bulge" should come about four feet from the ground. This bulging makes it easier to slant the bundles down and provides for drop of bundles when the stack settles, says John M. Fuller in Farm and Home.

A Good finish is important in stack-building. Bundles should be placed very carefully. A few sticks four or five feet long are very useful in holding the bundles in place. Some use a little sough grass for topping. Wires with heavy weights at each end may be placed over the top; this will help keep bundles in place in case of high wind. As a finishing touch a wooden rake should be used to rake off all loose straw. This operation has a tendency to give the butts a more domeward slant.

Home. On account of the depression of the market I have found it almost impossible to raise Hubbard squashes. If 10 days of vigilance at the start will help them off, it is time well spent.

Cutting And Shooking Oats
The proper time to cut oats is just before the heads turn yellow. There are two or three days just before maturity when the heads are white but are not entirely ripe. If cut at this period the oats will ripen and cure in the shock, giving a brighter color, and are no less likely to shatter as when they are left until dead ripe. The best form of shoe will vary with the ripeness of the grain. Shock threshing is a pernicious practice. There is no excuse for damaging the palatability of oats by putting them through the sweat in the bin, and hence. Co. can be stacked and threshed as when they are hauled directly to the machine. When the oats are sweat out in the stack there is much more aid around the grain.

It comes out bright in color and crisp in texture. There is usually one grade's difference between stacked and shocked threshed oats in favor of the former.

Cutting Millet with a Binder.
Millet hay makes excellent forage if cut at the right time and cured in good order, but it is full of sap and very likely to mold, in which case it causes kidney trouble with horses. Farm and Home says that a very successful Massachusetts farmer cuts millet with a self-binder and reaper, stacks it up in shocks and lets it cure out in this way. It never molds, even under the honds, if dry when cut, but it will mold if wet with rain, dew. After being cut, it may stand out during several rains without spoiling. This saves a lot of time in

Some Good Sowing Crops.
The most suitable green crops are alfalfa, where it can be grown, clover peas and oats, barnyard millet and fodder corn, says Prof. J. B. Lindsay in Farm and Home.

Clover seed may be sown at the rate of 15 or 20 pounds to the acre, in late July. The first cutting may be made about June 10 of the following year, and usually another cutting in August. If the clover will yield good returns for two consecutive years.

Alfalfa at the rate of 30 pounds per acre can be seeded with one half bushel of oats about May 15, or by it self late in July. Three cuttings may be expected yearly, one about June 29, and two others in early August and September.

Peas and oats at the rate of one and one-half bushels each year may be sown about April 25, May 10 and May 25, and cut as soon as the oats show the head, usually about June 25, July 6 and July 17.

Barnyard millet at the rate of 16 quarts of seed per acre can be sown May 15, June 5, and June 20. The first seeding will be ready about August 1 and the three seedlings will supply green feed during most of the month. Millet requires moist land and will suffer if sown on light, leachy soil. Corn is far excellent the most satisfactory green feed for the winter, even in a heavy rain, and it is cheaper than Paris green.

Best Spray for Potato Bugs
In spraying the potato bugs, O. E. Unruh explains in Farm and Home that he has found arsenate of lead superior to Paris green for the following reasons: It mixes easily with water. A barrel of solution can be made up thus saving time in application. There is no danger of its burning the foliage which the Paris green will do if applied too strong. It does not wash off in a heavy rain, and it is cheaper than Paris green.

Longfellow and Hustler's White Dent are all satisfactory varieties. Corn has the advantage of not toughening like many crops, and of furnishing an increasing amount of palatable and digestible material as it approaches maturity.

From Woman's View-Point

A Contrast Party—Something Original—Many Unique Details
I was invited to a "Contrast" party lately, designed by a girl who is always getting up something unusual. This novelty permits of fancy dressing and I believe will be appreciated by any hostess seeking something new.

It is of the nature of a game of wits, without irksome. It is so out of the ordinary that it is sure to be welcomed by hostess and guests alike.

When invitations are sent out, they should refer to the evening of "Contrasts". Each person invited is told what he or she is to represent, strict secrecy being enjoined on this point. For twenty, the following list can be followed, with as many additional couples as there are extra guests asked.

- Darkness—Light.
- Tempest—Sunshine.
- Old Age—Youth.
- Riches—Poverty.
- Heat—Cold.
- Tears—Laughter.
- Fat—Lean.
- Tall—Short.
- Winter—Summer.
- Ugliness—Beauty.

The conditions on the left should be assigned to the masculine guests, those on the right to the feminine. The arrangement will be much more interesting if persons physically at variance with the conditions are called upon to represent them, but it should be borne in mind that personal feelings are to be regarded in such conditions as ugliness and beauty for example.

In the case of Fat and Lean and Tall and Short, a very thin person can be called upon to represent Fat and a fat one put to the task of looking fragile and willowy, while a short broad man in an endeavor to look tall, will be much funnier than a tall person merely looking natural.

As the guests arrive, the ladies are ushered to one room, the men to another and they do not see each other until the "Contrasts" are picked out.

The plan is to have the men all arranged in a row in a room leading from the hall. At the door the hostess stands and as the ladies descend she asks them what they represent. For example Light represented by a young woman with glistening ornaments that catch the rays of the gas, or, if purse will allow, some electric lighting arrangement devised for trimming.

At the door the hostess says, "Enter Light—she seeks her mate, Darkness". Then the person representing Light selects from the waiting partners the one she considers typical of Darkness. If by chance she makes a mistake she is ushered into another room, there to wait until the other's have made their choice.

Much sport is occasioned if there are several similar characters. For example Darkness Blackness Clouds, and Coal, all would be of somber hue, their contrasts, Light, Whiteness, Sunshine, Ice, being all along similar lines of dress representation, so that Ice might pick out Darkness as well as the proper mate, Coal.

An ingenious hostess can devise even sharper contrasts than these mentioned which are the best known. When the final coupling has been accomplished a vote is taken as to the most effective pair, to whom a prize is given, also a consolation prize to the poorest.

The supper should also show contrasts. Things usually served with ones from dainty china planters, silver spoon could be eaten with wood, instead of flowers in the center of the table, a contrast would be to have a center piece of potatoes. Every ridiculous contrast to the usual method of procedure would add to the fun and make the evening one to be remembered in contrast to the usual form of entertainment.

At the door the hostess says, "Enter Light—she seeks her mate, Darkness". Then the person representing Light selects from the waiting partners the

Advertising

Is the connecting link between the merchant and customer—it is the merchant's salesman.

Goods snugly resting on a shelf are very much like a miser's gold—all right, but in need of circulating.

A Secret has better chance to travel than the goods of a merchant who will not talk about them all the time. The up-to-date merchant looks to advertising like the announcer to his megaphone. Advertising enlarges the circle of merchant's business, the megaphone strengthens the volume of the voice. Both multiply the chances of a hearing. In grand father's time advertising was not thought of. But in grandfather's time competition was slight. Today it is so keen that a merchant must look out else the edge of competition may separate him from his business. Be sure to tell the people what you have, why you have it, and what they can have it for. This is vital to your business. Also when telling the people use a medium that will reach them with your message of intelligence.

The Daily Reflector will do it for you!

King George V. and Prince Albert at Weymouth Review

Photos copyright, 1912, by American Press Association.
LIKE his father before him, Prince Albert, the second son of King George V., is receiving the training of the navy. He is now in the naval school at Dartmouth and is so strictly held to his studies that he did not go home for Easter, when all the rest of the royal family were assembled at Sandringham. It is said that his liveliness and strong will make a measure of Spartan treatment desirable for the young prince, who is, by the way, the cleverest and best looking of his family. The king and his son were interested observers of the recent naval maneuvers at Weymouth, the former even making a descent in a submarine. The photograph shows father and son on the deck of the warship Neptune with Admiral Calaghan between them.

SUPPORT LACKS CAUSING DELAY. Petition Asking Taft to Withdraw Drags IS NO NATION WIDE AFFAIR. On Investigation It Has Been Found That Petition It Outcome of a Few Dissatisfied Progressives in the House

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Publicity given to the plans of progressive Republican members of the House to circulate petitions calling upon President Taft to withdraw as head of the Republican national ticket had the effect today of retarding development if not actually circumventing the scheme.

Further inquiry today developed the fact that what was proclaimed yesterday as a general nation wide movement to circulate petitions amongst voters had thus far been confined almost entirely to a number of well known progressives of the House.

The reported support of conservative Republicans, it was admitted today, probably will not be forthcoming. Representative Davis, of Minnesota has been actively advocating the drafting of petitions to be sent out through the country for voters signatures.

Picturesque House In Which Charles Dickens Once Lived

Photograph, 1912, by American Press Association. BROADSTAIRS, one of the quieter English watering places, has been a favorite residence of popular British novelists. George Elliot, Wilkie Collins and Charles Dickens spent much of their time there. A house which was occupied at different times by the last two has recently been sold. It is Bleak House, where "David Copperfield" and other Dickens novels were written. An English doctor bought it for £3,000. It stands on a commanding site overlooking the town and harbor and has charming gardens. The house is marked by a commemorative tablet and a bust of Dickens, which may be distinguished in the photograph.

U. S. ATHLETES LEAD THE WORLD

American Champions Lead all Nations by Five Points. FIRST HONORS IN CONTESTS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, July 8.—The United States led by five points in all the events contested at the Olympic games including swimming and athletics, shooting and all other kinds of sport up to this morning, according to the list compiled by the officials here.

The score reads: United States 59; Sweden 54; Great Britain 26; France 17; South Africa 11; Germany 11; Denmark 10; Finland 8; Norway 7; Italy 5; Hungary 4; Russia 3; Austria 3; Greece 3; Holland 1; Australia 1. The United States cannot increase her lead today, because in the only event which is to be concluded, the javelin throwing, E. Lemming, of Sweden is sure of victory.

Yesterday's decision disqualifying the United States relay team in the four hundred meter race caused considerable grumbling. Some of the American officials and spectators assert that both the Swedish and British runners in that race committed the same foul, but that the Americans alone were selected for punishment.

The officials of the British team predict that this meeting will cause a revolution in British athletic methods. British followers of the Olympic games declare that the team lacks discipline and that some of the men, including the university athletes, have broken their training, as they were unable to resist the attractions of Stockholm.

The Rev. Dr. Courney Lafan, a former prominent athlete in England, thinks that the English should send their trainers to the United States to study American methods.

HILLES TO LEAD TAFT'S FORCES. The President's Secretary is Made Manager. TAFT DID NOT HELP ELECT HIM

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Chas. D. Hillies President Taft's secretary, was today unanimously chosen for chairman of the Republican national committee.

Mr. Hillies will meet the subcommittee of nine to arrange for the other officers. Chas. B. Warren, Republican national committeeman from Michigan, made the motion to make Mr. Hillies selection unanimous. He was appointed a committee of one to notify Mr. Hillies and bring him into conference at once with the subcommittee to decide upon the other officers of the national committee.

Chairman Hillies and the full National Committee will meet on Friday, July 19th at the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York, to appoint a treasurer, other officers, an executive committee and an advisory committee. At today's meeting Otto Barnard of New York; Charles C. Dawes and David R. Forgan of Chicago; Jno. W. Wainwright of Philadelphia; E. F. Swinney of Kansas City and John Hays Hammond of Washington, were all considered for the office of treasurer, but not even a tentative decision was reached.

Mr. Hillies will resign his office as secretary to the President on Saturday night. It is thought unlikely that Mr. Taft will appoint a successor, but will turn the business of the executive offices over to two assistant secretaries, Rudolph Forter and Sherman Allen.

Headquarters of the national committee are to be opened in New York the first of next week. They probably will be in the Metropolitan Life building, the same as four years ago.

The opening of a Middle West headquarters at Chicago and a Pacific coast headquarters at Portland, Oregon, was considered at today's meeting of the subcommittee and practically decided upon. Ralph E. Williams former Republican national committeeman for Oregon, was practically selected to take charge of the far Western offices.

Before the committee went to the White House it was said the Western members had decided to stand for the appointment of a man who would be approved by the Western Republicans.

Some of the committeemen declared this indicated the nomination of William Barnes, Jr., of New York, from the list of possibilities and brought forward again Chas. D. Hillies, the president's secretary.
