believed that fate had treated him rather shabbily. He didn't quite appreciate her reserve. No matter how late he wandered through the mysterious hamans, either here in Egypt or over yonder in India, nothing ever befell more exciting than an argument with a carriage-driver. He never carried small arms, for he would not have known how to use them. The only deadly things in his hands were business and tennis rackets. No, nothing ever happened to him; yet he never met a man in a ship's smoke-room who hadn't run the gamut of thrilling experiences. As George wasn't a liar himself, he believed all he saw and most of what he heard. Well, here he was, eight-and-twenty, a pocket full of money, a heart full of life, and as hopeless an outlook, so far as romance and adventure were concerned, as an old maid in a New England village. Why couldn't things befall him as they did the chap in this book? He was sure he could be as well, if not better; for this fellow was too handsome, too brave, too strong, not to be something of an ace once in a while.

"George, you old fool, what's the use?" he thought. "What's the use of a desire that never goes in a straight line, but always round and round in a circle?"

He thrust aside his grievance and surrendered to the never-ending wonder of the Egyptian sunset; the Nile feluccas, riding upon perfect reflection;

This Girl Was Elegant, in Dress, in Movement.

tion; the date-palms, black and motionless against the translucent blue of the sky; the amethystine prisms of the Pyramids, and the deepening gold of the desert's brim. He loved the Orient, always so new, always so strange, yet ever so old and familiar.

A carriage stopped in front, and his gaze naturally shifted. There is ceaseless attraction in speculating about new scenes in a hotel, what they are, what they do, where they come from, and where they are going. A fine elderly man of fifty got out. In the square set of his shoulders, the florid white mustache and imperious there was a suggestion of militarism. He was immediately followed by a young woman of twenty, certainly not over that age. George sighed fully. He envied those polo-players and gentleman-riders and bridge-experts who were stopping at the hotel. It wouldn't be an hour after dinner before some one of them found out who she was and spoke to her in that easy style which he concluded must be a gift rather than an accomplishment. You mustn't suppose for a minute that George wasn't wellborn and wellbred simply because his name was Jones. Many a Fitz-Hugh Maurice or Hugh Fitz-Maurice might have been—But, no matter. He knew instinctively, then, what elegance was when he saw it, and this girl was elegant, in dress, in movement. He rather liked the pallor of her skin, which hinted that she wanted one of those athletic girls who bounced in and out of the dining-room, talking loudly and smoking cigarettes and playing bridge for sixpenny points. She was tall. He was sure that her eyes were on the level with his own. The grey veil that drooped from the rim of her simple Leghorn hat to the tip of her nose obscured her eyes, so he could not know that they were large and brown and indefinitely sad. They spoke not of a weariness of travel, but of a weariness of the world, more precisely, of the people who inhabited it.

She and her companion passed on into the hotel, and if George's eyes veered again toward the desert over which the stealthy purples of night were creeping, the impulse was chanced; he saw nothing. In truth, he was desperately lonesome, and he knew, moreover, that he had no business to be. He was young; he could not pinch a joke as well as the next man; and if he had never had what he called an adventure, he had seen many strange and wonderful things and could describe them with that mental afterglow which still lingers over the sunset of our first expressions in poetry. But there was always that by-the-headed monster, for ever getting about his feet, numbing his voice, paralyzing his hands, and never he lopped off a head that another did not instantly grow in its place. Even the worst of Pegasus could not have saved him, since one has to get away from an object in order to get it down.

Had he ever tried to overcome this moment? Then he would have thrown off this species from Hades! It is all very well, when you are old and dried up, to turn to ivories and metals and precious stones; but when a fellow's young! You can't shake hands with an ivory replica of the Taj Mahal, nor exchange pleasantries with a Mandarin's ring, nor yet console your and his into a casket of rare emeralds; indeed, they do but emphasize one's loneliness. If only he had had a dog; but one can't carry a dog half way round the world and back, at least not with comfort. What with all these new-fangled quarantine laws, duties, and fancy ship-officers who wouldn't let you keep the animal in your state-room, traveling with a four-footed friend was almost an impossibility. To be sure, women with poodles. . . . And then, there was the bitter of acid in the knowledge that no one ever came up to him and slapped him on the shoulder with a— "Hello, George, old sport; what's the good word?" for the simple fact that his shoulder was always bristling with spikes, born of the fear that some one was making fun of him.

Perchance his mother's spirit, hovering over him this evening, might have been inclined to tears. For they do say that the ghosts of the dear ones are thus employed when we are near to committing some folly, or to exploring some forgotten chamber of Pandora's box, or worse still, when that lady intends emptying the whole contents down upon our unfortunate heads. If so be, they were futile tears; Percival Algernon had accomplished his deadly purpose.

Pandora? Well, then, for the benefit of the children. She was a lady who was an intimate friend of the mythological gods. They liked her appearance so well that they one day gave her a box, casket, chest, or whatever it was, to guard. By some marvelous method, known only of gods, they had got together all the trials and tribulations of mankind (and some of the joys and pleasures of it, too) and put them in this box. It was the Golden Age, as you may surmise. You recall Eve and the apple? Well, Pandora was a forecast of Eve; she couldn't keep her eyes off the tache and at length her hands—Fatal curiosity! Whirl! And everything has been at sixes and at sevens since that day. Pandora is eternally recurring, now here, now there; she is a bit of a nuisance, and again she is a brunette; and you may take it from George and me that there is always something left in the casket.

George opened the book and consulted his sailing-list. In a short time he would leave for Port Said, thence to Naples, Christmas there, and home in January. Business had been ripping. He would be joyous to go home again, to renew his comradeship with his treasures. And, by Jove! there was one man who slapped him on the shoulder, and he was no less a person than the genial president of the firm, his father's partner, at present his own. If the old chap had had a daughter, she would have been a gem. Here he was, . . . And here one comes a lady to whom he is engaged to be married. He had only one devilish suspicion: a healthy human longing, the only longing worth while in all this deep, wide, round old top; to love a woman and by her to be loved.

At exactly half after six the gentleman with the reversible cuffs arrived; and George missed his boat.

CHAPTER II.

An Affable Rogue.

The carriage containing the gentleman with the reversible cuffs drew up at the side entrance. Instantly the Arab guides surged and eddied round him; but their clamor broke against a composure as effective as granite. The man was almost disconcerted by a low gurgle, as of little waves receding. The proposed victim had not spoken a word; to the Arabs it was not necessary; in some manner, subtle and indescribable, they recognized him. He carried a long, cylindrical bundle wrapped in heavy paper varnished secure by windings of thick wire. His regard for this bundle was one of the keenest, for he checked it under his arm, cumbersome though it was, and waved aside the carriage-porter, who was, however, permitted to carry in the kit-bag.

The manager appeared. When comes he not upon the scene? His quick, calculating eye was not wholly assured. The stranger's homeliness was travel-worn and time-worn, and of a cut popular to the season gone by a year before. No fat letter of credit here, but the not unreasonable conclusion reached by the manager. Still, with that caution, acquired by years of experience, which had culminated in what is known as Swiss diplomacy, he brought into being the accustomed smiling smile and inquired if the gentleman had written for reservation, otherwise it would not be possible to accommodate him.

"I telegraphed," crisply.

"The name, if you please."

"Ryenne," spelled R-y-a double-a.

"Have you ever been in County Clare?"

"No, sir." The manager added a question with the uplift of his eyebrows.

"Well," was the enlightening answer, "you pronounce it as they do there."

The manager scanned the little slip of paper in his hand. "Ah, yes; we have reserved a room for you, sir. The French style, rather confined, but this was not offered in Italy, or in France, or in Spain; it was a Swiss brain for the saving grace of humor is about as remunerative as the extraction of gold from sea-water. New room is 208."

"I will see, sir." The manager summoned a porter. "Room 208."

The porter caught up the somewhat collapsed kit-bag, which had in all evidence received some rough usage in its time, and reached toward the roll. Mr. Ryenne interposed.

"I will see to that, my man," tersely.

"Yes, sir."

"Where is your guest-list?" demanded Mr. Ryenne of the manager.

"The head-porter's bureau, sir, will see if you have any mail."

The manager passed into his own bureau. It was rather difficult to tell whether he was an American or an Englishman. His accent was western, but his manner was decidedly British. At any rate, that tone and carriage must be hastened by good English sovereigns, or for once his judgment was at fault.

The porter dashed upstairs. Mr. Ryenne, his bundle still snug under his arm, sauntered over to the head-porter's bureau and his entrance up and down the columns of visiting-cards. Once he nodded with approval, and again he smiled, having discovered that which sent a ripple across his sleeping sense of amusement. Major Callahan, room 206; Fortune Chedoke, 205; George P. A. Jones, 210.

"Hup! the Major smells of County Antrim and the finest whiskey in all the isle. Fortune Chedoke; that is a pleasing name; tinkling brooks, the waving green grasses in the meadows, the knee in the water, the beetling shadows under the oaks; a pastoral, a bucolic name. To claim Fortune for mine own; a happy thought."

As he uttered these poetic expressions alone, in a voice low and not unpleasant, for all that it was bustling, the head-porter started at him with mingling doubt and alarm; and as if to pronounce these emotions mutely for the benefit of the other, he permitted his eyes to open their widest.

"Tut, tut; that's all right, portier. I am cured with the habit of speaking my inmost thoughts. Some persons are afflicted with insomnia; some fall asleep in church; I think rather. Beating habit, eh?"

The porter then understood that he was dealing not with a species of mild lunacy, but with that kind of light-hearted cynicism upon which the world (as porters know it) had set its approving seal. In brief, he smiled faintly; and if he had any pleasantness to pass in turn, the approach of the manager, now clothed metaphorically in deferentialism, relegated it to the limbo of things thought but left unsaid.

"Here is a letter for you, Mr. Ryenne. Have you any more luggage?" "No," Mr. Ryenne smiled. "Shall I pay for my room in advance?" "Oh, no, sir. Ten years ago the manager would have blushed at having been so misanderated. 'Your room is 208.' 'I shall myself attend to that. If the room is not what you wish it may be exchanged.'"

"The room is the one I telegraphed for. I am superstitious as to degrees. On three boats I have had the state rooms numbered 208. Twice the number of my hotel room has been 'the same. On the last voyage there were 208 passengers, and the captain had made 208 voyages on the Mediterranean."

"Quite a coincidence."

"Ah, if coincidence could be played with such a certainty."

Mr. Ryenne sighed, hitched up his bundle, which, being heavy, was beginning to wear upon his arm, and stinked out the manager to lead the way.

As they vanished round the corner to the lift, the head-porter studied the guest-list. He had looked over it a dozen times that day, but this was the first instance of his being really interested in it. As his chin was freshly shaven he had no trouble to stroke to lighten his mental processes; as he fell back, as we say, upon the consolidated kit-bag, which had in all evidence received some rough usage in its time, and reached toward the roll. Mr. Ryenne interposed.

"I will see to that, my man," tersely.

"Yes, sir."

Postal Bill Fails to Report On

INVESTIGATION IS RECOMMENDED

Postoffice Committee Presents New Document to House. No Provision for Good Roads, Changed Parcels Post System

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The post-office appropriation bill shorn of the good roads provision and embracing a revised parcel post system with charges based on zones of distance was reported to the Senate today by the postoffice committee.

The total appropriations proposed by the bill are above those of the House measure which carried approximately $260,000,000. One of the principal increases is in the pay of railroad for transporting mails, the Senate committee adding more than $250,000.

In striking out the Shackelford good roads feature of the House bill, the committee for Federal improvement of highways, the Senate committee by a special commission of three House members and three Senators and provides for no highway improvement until this commission has reported.

The Barnhart amendment in the House bill for the regular publication of the names of stockholders of newspapers and periodicals is changed to provide for publication once a year when lists of stockholders are required. Its of stockholders are required 500 folded with the local postmasters.

The parcels post section is radically different from that incorporated in the House bill, which provides a flat rate of postage for all distances. The Senate provision is that of the Bourne bill slightly modified. Senator Bourne recommended that third and fourth class mail matter be combined for the parcels post service; but the bill makes the parcels post apply only to fourth class matter.

The Senate committee struck out of the House bill the provision giving to postal employees the right to combine in labor unions and the right to petition Congress for redress of their grievances.

It also provided for the abolishment of the present system of carrying second class mail by freight under what is known as the blue tag system.

Under the Senate bill all second class would be put back into regular mail cars after August 31.

A special commission is also proposed to investigate the subject of pneumatic tube service and determine whether the government shall purchase that now in use in various cities. A ten thousand dollar appropriation is authorized for improved mechanical devices in the Chicago postoffice, which is now overcrowded.

Steel cars for railway mail service which were required by the House bill, is to be in universal use by American railroads by 1917, are also required by the Senate bill. The House bill required the railroads to replace 50 per cent of its wooden mail cars every year; while the Senate bill would give the roads one year of grace and then require them to replace 25 per cent of their cars each year for four years.

Here he was saved from further cerebral agony by a timely interruption. A man, who was not of bucolic persuasion either in dress or speech, urban from the tips of his bleached nose, leaned across the counter and asked if Mr. Horner Ryenne had yet arrived. Yes, he had just arrived; he

FIRE DESTROYS GUILFORD PLANT

Explosion of Night-watchman's Lantern Starts it

MUCH FINISHED PRODUCT LOST

Flames Try to Gain Admittance to

Them Was the Presbyterian Church and Cottages

TROY, July 23.—Fire, the largest and most destructive that has ever occurred in this town, originated last night about midnight in the plant of the Guilford Lumber Company, completely destroying the plant and a large portion of the lumber yard.

Thousands of feet of rough lumber were stacked on the yards and the sheds with finished lumber ready for shipment.

The loss cannot be stated accurately, but at a conservative estimate it will be from $25,000 to $50,000, partially covered by insurance.

The fire had its origin in the roof of the boiler room, the explosion of a lantern used by the night watchman being the cause. When the lantern exploded fire was scattered among the timbers of the building, which were covered with dry sawdust and so fast did it spread that before the watchman could give the alarm the building was in a mass of flames.

The lumber plant was located just outside the incorporate limits but was near the main business section of the town, and had it not been for the stillness of the night the damage that would have been done is incalculable. For a time little hope was had for saving the Presbyterian church, which was located across the street from a corner of the Guilford plant. Several cottages were also in danger and but for a slight wind which turned the course of the flames they would have been destroyed also.

The Guilford Lumber Manufacturing company is a branch of the Greensboro firm of the same name. Its plant here was one of the largest lumber plants in this section and was one of the largest manufacturing establishments in Troy. It was located here more than 12 years ago and has been the means of giving employment to hundreds of people, bringing thousands of dollars to the town. Should the company decide not to rebuild it will be a great loss to the town and section.

Man With Whom Boy Was Last Seen Located in Berkeley Ward, But Refuses to Make Statement.

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C., July 23.—About ten days ago the young son of Charles Loden, a resident of Belvidere, N. C., left home with a man who seems to have undue influence over young boys.

As the boy did not return the family became alarmed and searching parties have been sent out in various directions. The man with whom the boy left was located in Berkeley Ward, Norfolk but absolutely refuses to give any information in regard to the disappearance of the boy.

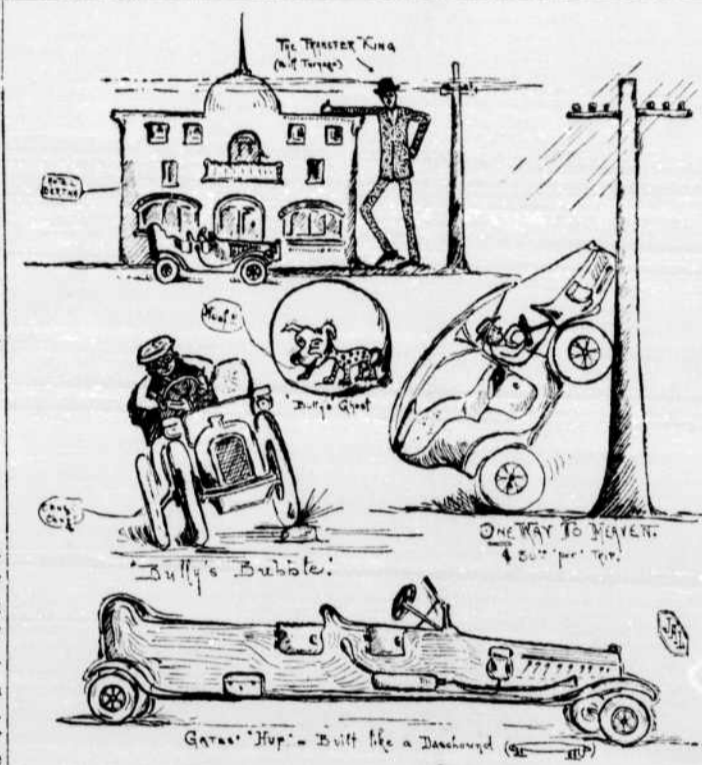

A brother and several relatives arrived in this city and found the bicycle belonging to the boy at Cartwright's repair shop.

Mr. Cartwright stated that a man who seemed in great haste asked permission to leave the wheel at his shop, but failed to return for it.

As yet there is positively no clue as to the whereabouts of the boy.

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT

The Benzine automobile permeating five points would be conclusive evidence that Greenvilleans (them as can afford it, at least) are automobile mad. And if the mentioned automobile should not be sufficient a two or three minute stop at Five Points would route any suspicion of doubt. Around from every street they swing honk-honking along at a gait that means so much per hour in gasoline and abetting oil.

Many funny stunts have happened since Greenville acquired the 'mobile habit. Some ride slow, some ride fast and others again faster. Any how they all ride. Perhaps the queerest thing that happened in the Greenville auto world was the presumption that an ordinary five passenger car could dispute a right of way to a N. S. freight. You should have seen the engine of the disputing benzine wagon!

Ever heard of "Bully" Anderson's goat? Look up above. A staff photographer was on the job when B. A. got a glimpse of it and shivered his way out of sight. You just gotta believe the camera, even if you don't believe B. A.

More Arrest Being Made

NEW YORK, July 23.—The gunmen wanted for the killing of Gambler Herman Rosenthal are beginning to fall into the nets.

Harry Vallon, one of the five notorious gangsters who were in the murder car the night Rosenthal was shot, surrounded himself to the police this morning and within ten days Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty expects to round up the whole gang of gun carriers.

With the men who actually did the shooting in the tolls the main work of District Attorney Whitman and Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty will commence, that of trying to learn the identity of the conspirators who so greatly desired that Rosenthal be done away with before he could make further revelations of the relations between the police and gamblers.

Several of New York's prominent citizens have offered to pay for a private investigation into the question of whether police partnership with gamblers led to the slaying of Rosenthal.

Commissioner Dougherty remarked significantly to District Attorney Whitman that "I guess we agree as to who is back of this killing." But the public prosecutor does not feel that Commissioner Dougherty can swing the investigation into the killing alone, as he is of the belief that the police department will give no real aid.

The surrender of Vallon may be followed by the voluntary appearance of the other gangster known to have been in the murder car the night of the killing.

Besides Vallon there were Harry Horowitz, best known under his gang name of Gib the Blood, Dago Frank, an East Side gangster; Lefty Louis and Whitey Lewis.

Vallon has nothing of the appearance of a gangster of the meaner sort. His appearance at police headquarters dumfounded the desk sergeant and he had to convince the sergeant as to his identity before they locked him up.

Vallon drew up at headquarters in a taxicab and loungers saw a fastidious dressed, dapper, little chap stepped lightly out from the car swinging a cane from a gloved hand, mounted the steps of the building.

"Kindly tell me where the detective bureau is," he asked. Then Vallon appeared before Lieutenant McNelly and gave himself up and was locked up after that astonished officer could summon an officer.

Hundreds of barrels of beer were seized and is being stored in a building in market square which was cleared for that purpose about a week ago. It is estimated that 500 or 600 barrels have been seized.

The warrants were signed by E. J. Kennedy who is represented by Shaw and McLean and Newton, Horning and Oates as counsel.

"Noah, is my husband home?" "Yes, mum; he's in the library working."

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Former Senator Nathan B. Scott, of West Virginia, today told the Senate committee investigating campaign funds of 1904 and 1908 that no contributions were made to Colonel Roosevelt's campaign by corporations, by Henry Havemeyer, the sugar king, or any representatives of the International Harvester Company so far as he could recall.
Mr. Scott testified that the largest contribution of which he had knowledge, made to the national committee in that campaign was his own, amounting to $30,000 or $40,000. Geo. W. Perkins, he said, had given $15,000 but not to the national committee. Both contributions were used in the Virginia state campaign.
In October, 1904, Mr. Scott said, Mr. Perkins asked him the situation in West Virginia and he told him we had a very hard fight on for governor and that it was doubtful whether we could elect Wm. O. Dawson. Mr. Perkins said, as a friend of President Roosevelt he would be very sorry to see him again until his acceptance speech is finished.
Mr. Scott said some of the Harvester people had contributed to the 1904 campaign.
How about the Perkins contribution asked Senator Clapp.
Well, I understand that Mr. Perkins' contribution was a personal matter of his own, said Mr. Scott. He caused of the personal relations that existed between him and President Roosevelt.
Was Mr. Perkins at that time a member of the J. P. Morgan and Co.? asked Senator Jones.
Mr. Scott did not know.
Do you know whether Mr. Perkins intended with the president as to the taking over the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company? asked Senator Paynter.
I don't know anything about that matter, said the witness.
Mr. Scott said he knew of no one connected with the steel oil or beef trusts who had given anything to the campaign. It had been the settled policy of Geo. B. Cortright and Cornelius N. Bliss as the heads of the committee, to make it known that no such contributions would be received, he said.
My own corporation never gave a dollar to the campaign, he added. Mr. Scott was then a glass manufacturer.

Japans, Emperor Fights on Bravely
TOKIO, July 22.—The bulletins issued from the palace by the court physicians reporting the improved condition of Mutsuhito, the Emperor of Japan, have been received with satisfaction throughout the capital today. The stock market improved generally as a result of the satisfactory news.
The Nishi Nichi, one of the leading newspapers, publishes a report that entertainments are to be resumed tomorrow.
A note of warning, however, is sounded by one specialist, who is quoted as saying that it is only the first stage in the Emperor's malady and advising against over-optimism because the second and third stages of the disease must be passed through before full confidence in His Majesty's recovery can be restored.

WYTHEVILLE, Va., July 22.—The bloody and bitter argument between the two sides in the case of the late Allen Waxen, who was shot by the Hillsville club, was continued today at the trial of the case. The jury at today's session of the Claude Allen trial.
After having been first identified by D. R. Blankenship, the greengrocer, who was handed to the jury each of whom spent some time counting the exact number of bullet holes. They found in Potter's coat and trousers in Webb's coat and trousers. The Commonwealth closed its case in chief after producing one other witness, C. C. Webb, who testified that he had heard Floyd Allen muttering complaints over the manner in which he had been reprimanded by Judge Massie on the evening before the tragedy.

For State Senator
Having been endorsed by the anti-slavery of the Democratic party, I announce myself a candidate for the State Senate, subject to the action of a voting primary of the Democratic party under the plan of organization. Upon the questions confronting the people I stand upon the following platform of principles:
1. No extension of the stock law except by a vote of the people in the territory affected.
2. The repeal of the stock law legislation of the last legislature.
3. The improvement of the public lands without bond issues.
4. Against any bond issue in Pitt county for next two years except in towns—and then only by vote of the people affected.
5. Improvement of the county house.
6. A legalized primary for North Carolina.
7. Initiative and Referendum.
We desire the above principles to be adopted. I most earnestly solicit votes.

MOOSE CHIEF VERY HOSPITABLE

Ex-Republicans and Ex-Democrats to be Given Royal Welcome Into New Party. No Need to Worry About Former Politics

NEW YORK, July 23.—In his first speech since he returned from Chicago, Colonel Roosevelt today set forth his reasons for leading in the formation of a new party.

His address was delivered at a meeting of the New York State county chairmen of the national progressive party. Colonel Roosevelt did not intend to speak, he declared, but the chairmen would not be denied. The Colonel Roosevelt said: No man knows better than I that enthusiasm and high principles cannot be effective without organization and work.
A great responsibility rests upon you men here, who are undertaking the organization of a new party which is to stand foursquare to democracy, which is to be literally the party of the people.

It will fight on live issues and not dead ones. It will embody a protest against the corruption of both of the old party machines. It will be a party into which ex-Democrats and ex-Republicans without regard to their political past as to come in an exact equality and to have each the same voice in the party management.
When we get this started it will be a party and not only representing the people at election time but will represent them in party management.
We are going to see to it that it is organized so that it will be impossible for any fifty three men, chosen four years before by politicians to stand superior to all the voters of a great state like California and that if that site has not shaped its laws according to a given class of fifty three private men, the state shall not be disfranchised.

My own judgment is that Messrs.
Barnes, Penrose, Guggenheim and Co. made a poor swap when they took two stolen delegates from California in place of the electoral vote of California. They were not content with that. They swapped the electoral vote of Massachusetts for the vote of two delegates. I think it was about as expensive a swap as was ever made by political men. I am not at all satisfied by political managers.

It makes the head feel fine. No, it isn't sticky! Zemo is a fine, clear, vanish-

ARM OF LAW DESCENDS HEAVILY UPON BECKER'S SHOULDER

Lieutenant Leader of the Strong Arm Squad Arraigned Before New York Judge And Charged With Rosenthal's Murder

JACK ROSE TELLS WHITMAN BECKER "ORDERED CRIME"

BECKER'S POLICE CAREER

NEW YORK, July 30.—Lieutenant Chas. A. Becker, whose arrest last night came as a dramatic climax to the past fortnight's investigations of the Rosenthal murder, has been a member of the New York police force for nearly twenty years, his appointment dating back to November 1, 1893. He remained a private in the ranks for ten years, being promoted to a post rankman in 1903.
A few months after he became a roundman Becker came into public view as the hero of a sensational drowning rescue on the East side water front. For this rescue he received a hero medal. Two years later, however, during the trial of Inspector Schmitzberger, the man whom Becker had rescued from the water, it is said to have made an affidavit stating that the rescue was faked and that he received a certain sum for his part in it.
The first serious case in which Becker was concerned was the shooting death of a young plumber's helper, John Fay, who was killed by a bullet fired during a dispute over a plumbing job. Becker was placed in charge of the so called strong arm squad on June 30, 1911. Since that time he has been much in the public eye, making many spectacular raids. Last March a man was killed by a bullet fired during one of his raids. Becker was relieved from charge of the squad for a time, but was later reassigned to it. During the year he was in charge of the strong arm squad Becker made more than 75 raids, including the attack on Rosenthal's place on April 15.

NEW YORK, July 30.—While Chas. A. Becker, for nearly twenty years a member of the New York police department and later commanding the so called strong arm squad, paced his cell in the Tombs today protesting his innocence of murder,
New York officials from Mayor Davidson went forward with the investigation into the death of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, whose murder Becker is alleged to have instigated to frustrate Rosenthal's threat of revealing an alliance between the lieutenant and gamblers of the ten-derloin.

In different cells, fearful of the lieutenant's vengeance and begging for protection are Jacob (Jack) Rose, Louis (Bridgie) Webber, erstwhile gamblers and workers of the underworld, who confessed last night they set the stage at Becker's bidding and hired the assassins who put Rosenthal to death in front of the Hotel Metropole.

The indictment and arrest of Police Commissioner McAdams, who thrusts to shake it to its foundation, for District Attorney Whitman believes the story of police graft has been half told. Bald Jack Rose confessed that Becker came to him and fairly desperate over Rosenthal's insistence of telling all he knew of his relations with Police-Lieutenant Becker, said: Rosenthal has lived too long.
He has got to be put out of the way.

The public prosecutor, following the trail of the three confessions, continued his search for evidence that would implicate those higher up than Becker, and more indictments of police officials are expected by the district attorney.

The arrest of Becker lays bare a secret in the police department that threatens to shake it to its foundation, for District Attorney Whitman believes the story of police graft has been half told. Bald Jack Rose confessed that Becker came to him and
fairly desperate over Rosenthal's insistence of telling all he knew of his

er, said: Rosenthal has lived too long.

From the 3rd of the coming month
Mr. Alvin Dupree, who for the past three years has been identified with the office of Mr. H. A. White, will take up his duties as insurance man with the local firm of Moseley Bros.
During the time Mr. Dupree has worked up insurance and his closely allied lines he has made many friends both in business and otherwise, and they always find him a most obliging

His intimate knowledge of the line of business he has pursued for the past three years, his ability and his willingness, augurs well for the choice of Moseley Bros.

Hippopotamuses—The Pygmy And the Ordinary Size

Lower photo copyright, 1912, by American Press Association. Upper photo

A PAIR of pygmy hippopotamuses has been acquired by the New York Zoological park at a cost of $12,000. They are the first pygmy hip-popotamuses to be exhibited, the pygmy animal having been regarded as almost mythical. They were captured in Liberia by an intrepid hunter and explorer in a country reeking with cannibals. An ordinary hippopotamus will weigh more than 4,000 pounds and measure some eleven feet in circumference and twelve feet in length. The male of these pygmy hip-popotamuses weighs 419 pounds, is thirty inches high at the shoulders, seventy inches in length from end of nose to base of tail, and the tail itself is twelve inches long. The female stands eighteen inches high at the shoulders and weighs 176 pounds. The skull of the pygmy is more convex or rounded on its upper surface, its legs are longer and more slender in proportion, and its eyes do not protrude like those of the giant species. The lower jaw bears only two teeth, while the large species has four. The eyes are not set as high in the head of the small animal as in the large one.

Black and White Voters Disagree

RICHMOND, Va., July 30.—There is a fifth division now in the Republican party in Virginia.
The black and tan faction of the Republican wing of the G. O. P. has been split by the formation of a straight negro convention which has cut loose from theilly white and the black and tan national progressives and will gather here tonight under the leadership of J. R. Pollard to name delegates to the Chicago convention of the so called Bull Moose party.

This movement has no connection with the 2nd Republican scheme which includes the Virginia negroes that have followed Gen. Giles B. Jackson in supporting the native son, Wood Wilson.

Taft Republicans, Wilson Republicans, Lily White Roosevelt Republicans and straight black Roosevelt Republicans are now before the public in Virginia.

Serious Accusation Against Asheville Man

ASHEVILLE, July 30.—William Edwards of West Asheville, a man about 65 years of age, respectable family, was arrested at Bryson City on the charge of criminally assaul-ing a 16 year old girl of West Asheville Saturday and brought here and placed in jail. He would not make a statement, but told the sheriff of Swain county he was not guilty of assault. According to the story of the girl, she was attacked in a secluded place as she was going from a neighbor's to her home. Officers were notified and began search for Edwards immediately, but the matter was kept quiet for several hours.
Physicians report the girl is not in a dangerous condition.

Mother of Accused Husband Tells Court That Mrs. Grace Wanted to Place Blame on Negro Butler, Court Crowded

ATLANTA, Ga., July 30.—How Mrs. Daisy Grace, on trial here accused of having attempted to kill her husband, once declared that if any body had shot Grace it was "J. C." a negro butler, was recalled on the stand today by Mrs. S. L. Hill, Grace's mother.

Mrs. Grace arrived at the Hill home in Newnan, Ga., testified Mrs. Hill, and was informed that Grace had been shot in his home in Atlanta.
After I had told of the shooting, testified Mrs. Hill, Daisy said she did not believe it. I told Daisy that her public acts are public property, and we have a right to scrutinize closely the measures which they have advocated and for which they will stand if elected to the senate.

"Senator Simmons was chairman of the Democratic executive committee back in the nineties and he retained that position long after he became senator and indeed, I believe until his second election to that high position.
He has a large acquaintance and indeed I may say, organization among those who organize voters in the different townships and counties in behalf of the candidates.

"Governor Kitchen for 12 years represented the Fifth congressional district in Congress and of course, had an organization to aid him. In his campaign for governor he extended this throughout the state and since he has been governor he has added to this the natural gratitude of the men whom he has appointed to office and their friends and also without reflecting upon his exercise of the pardoning power in any way, he has in many cases the good will of men at whose instances he has granted pardons.

For many years it was understood that these two gentlemen were as pirants for the office of senator and that these strong battalions, well organized by their friends expected to face each other in this contest. When a year ago Governor Aycock and myself announced ourselves candidates, it caused intense astonishment to both sides. They considered it as rash and inconsiderate on our part. * * *

"The road to the United States senate is open to any man whom the people shall wish to send there. I do not need to have any hat chalked by any set of men. In the language of Mr. Roosevelt, it is in the ring and will be there when the sun goes down on November 5.

It was asked:
Why didn't you tell during your preliminary examination what you have just said about Mrs. Grace's remark concerning the proximity of the heart and lungs?

Developments are expected when the status of Rebecca Sims, a mulatto dressmaker, is explained. Her name was brought into the record yesterday, but her connection with the shooting was not indicated.

Also, it is intimated that Mrs. Grace will try to show that her husband is not paralyzed from the waist down.
During the proceedings yesterday she made a mild sensation when she remarked to an attorney: Watch Gene's legs move.

When questioned about the twil-ings of his limbs Grace attributed it to reflex action. If anyone thinks I am feigning helplessness, he said, I'll allow them to stick a pin in my body. But I'll not let an eye. I'll submit to any punishment.

Grace was again present at the trial today in spite of the intense heat in the courtroom. Mrs. Grace came to court unaccompanied. She wore a black silk dress, a new Parasol pompadour rannier creation. Her head was almost completely hidden from the curious crowd, mostly women, by an expensive Panama hat.

Chief Justice Walter Clark Delivered Opening Speech Before Large Crowd in Greensboro—Clearly Outlines His Platform.

GREENSBORO, July 30.—In opening his campaign for the senatorial nomination, Chief Justice Clark addressed a Greensboro audience last night.
He spoke, in part, as follows:

"I wish to state unequivocally that I shall say nothing in this canvass that will reflect upon the personal character of either of my competitors.
They have lived clean lives. They have been, and I hope still are, my personal friends. It is no reflection upon them that I aspire to the same office which they desire. Their characters are not in question and will not be an issue in this campaign. Their public acts are public property, and we have a right to scrutinize closely
the measures which they have advo-
