HAVE THE RAILROADS AND SIMMONS' FRIENDS COMBINED AGAINST JUDGE CLARK?

For some time, the friends of Senator Simmons, rendered desperate at the certainty of his defeat have been quietly using against Judge Clark the same attack, the Southern Railway and American Tobacco Company made on him in 1902. Mr. J. O. Carr, one of Simmons' leaders, has come out into the open and publicly made the charge over his signature.

The Charge of the Railroads and Simmons' Friends

"It is also known that in 1896 Judge Clark accepted the nomination from the Republicans and was elected to the Supreme Court bench while Connor and other Democrats refused to accept such nomination and that the distinguished Judge created many intimate letters to Gov. Russell during his administration, commonly known as 'The Please Burn Letters'."

Read the Facts

Judge Clark was nominated for office in 1896. The reference must be to his nomination in 1894. If you recall the facts or will look up the newspaper files, you will find that in 1894 either Justice Connor or Justice Walter Clark was nominated.

In regard to the letters which the railroad attorneys and Simmons' friends charge Judge Clark with writing to Governor Russell, it will be recalled that this whole matter was thoroughly thrashed out in 1902 when Judge Clark was a candidate of the Democratic party at that time and asked for his advice. Mr. Simmons told him by all means to accept the endorsements as it absolutely insured his election and that the Democrats should run the risk of being defeated by refusing endorsements.

Judge Clark asked F. M. Simmons to put that in writing and he would accept the endorsements. Mr. Simmons

THE FARMERS' UNION PLATFORM

Twenty Reforms Which the National Farmers' Union Endorsed at the Chattanooga Meeting.

At the recent meeting of the National Farmers' Union in Chattanooga, Dr. H. Q. Alexander, president of the North Carolina Farmers' Union, was made chairman of the committee on legislation and drafted a notable platform which the convention enthusiastically approved. Here is the platform in full:

1. The election of United States president by direct vote of the people.

2. The election of supreme court judges by the people.

3. The election of United States Senators by vote of the people.

4. We endorse the income and inheritance taxes as a method of raising revenue.

5. That the rules of the lower house of Congress be amended as to make it impossible for the Speaker and chairman of committees to block or control legislation.

6. That the banking laws be made in the interest of borrower as well as the lender.

7. That Congress shall not delegate to individuals or corporations the right to regulate the circulating medium as it now delegated to the national banks.

8. That the natural resources, iron, coal, petroleum, phosphate beds and children's clothing, also a nice line of matting, floor oil cloths and carpeting.

Mrs. Fannie Jenkins and two daughters, Roland and Hattie Lee, of Greenville, spent Sunday at Mr. M. T. The weather will soon be cold, but you will find heavy cotton flannel out and all kinds of underwear.

Messrs. Walter Cherry and Durwood Tucker of near Greenville were in town Sunday evening.

Mrs. J. B. Kittrell, of Greenville, was in town Friday on business.

Messrs. M. B. Bryan and Claud Wilson, of Greenville, were pleasant callers in town Sunday night.

See us for bargains on men and boys pants, overcoats and jumpers, work shirts and in fact anything in the wearing line. Come and give us a trial. Union Mercantile Company.

Mr. Stephen Waters made a short visit near Black Jack Sunday.

Messrs. H. P. McClellan, G. Tucker and W. Meeks went to Greenville Monday.

We gin your cotton in about ten or fifteen minutes and the short time you have to wait is not boring, as it seems to be amusing to watch the unloading which is within five minutes.

Pitt County Oil Company.

Rev. John H. Griffin, of Kinston, came in Monday morning to attend services at the Episcopal church.

Miss Yula Cox, a trained nurse from Kinston who has been spending some time with her parents here, left Monday for Grifton where she goes to assist Dr. Dawson in his practice.

After October 1st the Bank of Winterville will charge ten cents exchange on cashier's checks.

Bishop Strange held services in the Episcopal church Monday morning and evening and preached two excellent sermons. He was assisted in the night services by Rev. Dallas Tucker, of Greenville.

mons, state chairman of the Democratic party sat down in Judge Clark's office and wrote out with his own hand the statement I have just given. This was written in the presence of Hon. B. R. Lacy, now state treasurer and that statement as written by him in Judge Clark's possession now and was published in the Southern Railway and American Tobacco Company.

Judge Connor was not nominated that year by the Democratic party as Judge Clark was, but was offered the nomination by the Populist and Republican parties against the Regular Democratic nominee, Judge Burwell, and of course, refused to run against the regular nominee of the Democratic party.

Mr. Simmons' friends have doubtless overlooked the fact that Justice Connor and Justice Walker in 1902 were nominated by the Democratic party and endorsed by the Republican party. Judge Clark was a candidate that year and nominated by the Democratic party and bitterly fought by the Republican party, yet he called the facts or will look up the newspaper files, you will find that in 1894 either Justice Connor or Justice Walter Clark was nominated.

In regard to the letters which the railroad attorneys and Simmons' friends charge Judge Clark with writing to Governor Russell, it will be recalled that this whole matter was thoroughly thrashed out in 1902 when Judge Clark was a candidate of the Democratic party at that time and asked for his advice. Mr. Simmons told him by all means to accept the endorsements as it absolutely insured his election and that the Democrats should run the risk of being defeated by refusing endorsements.

Judge Clark asked F. M. Simmons to put that in writing and he would accept the endorsements. Mr. Simmons

Carl Hayden

Carl Hayden, who has the distinction of being the first congressman sent by the new state of Arizona to the national house of representatives, was born in Tempe, Arizona, October 2, 1877. After graduating from the Normal School of Arizona in 1896 he attended Leland Stanford Jr. University, where he distinguished himself as a member of the football team. Upon his return to Arizona after completing his university career young Hayden succeeded his father in the presidency of the milling company that years before had built the first flour mill in Arizona. His public career began ten years ago with his election as treasurer of his home county. Following this, he was twice elected sheriff and upon the admission of Arizona to statehood last year he was the Democratic choice for delegate-at-large to Congress and ran neck and neck with Senator Ashurst for first honors as a vote getter.

KITCHIN-SIMMONS DEBATE IN BURGAW

GREENVILLE LAWYER, MR. ALBION DUNN, ABST. REF. SEVENTH GOV. KITCHIN IN BURGAW

DUNN SAID TO HAVE MADE VOTES

(A. M. Faison)

BURGAW, N. C., Oct. 7.—Ex-Congressman Thomas representing Senator Simmons and Mr. Albion Dunn representing Gov. Kitchin engaged in joint debate here today. Dunn opened in a speech of one hour. Thomas replied for an hour. Both speakers had fifteen minutes rejoinder. Dunn cut into the record of Senator Simmons in 1905, 1909, 1910 and 1911, showing how the votes of Simmons upon lumber, coal, iron and reciprocity were absolutely contrary to Democratic principles. He made Congressman Thomas admit that his vote on reciprocity and the ship subsidy were contrary to Simmons' vote on these questions. In the course of his remarks he laid down the proposition that if North Carolina is committed to protection Kitchin will be defeated, that if the state on the contrary is to remain in the Democratic faith and hold to Democratic principles, then Simmons ought to be defeated. He further showed, to the satisfaction of good Democrats, that Governor Kitchin has made a faithful public servant and is needed in the United States Senate to uphold the policy of the program of President Wilson.

Thomas, in an hour's rejoinder, ridiculed the charges and dodged the issues absolutely failing to explain the conduct and vote of Senator Simmons in upholding the hands of Senator Aldrich in his trust legislation. On Dunn's rejoinder, he showed that Thomas had refused to meet the issue and proved in the face of the record Senator Simmons bore Congressman Thomas would never be able to explain Simmons' vote on these questions.

Thomas in reply still failed to meet referring to the youth of his opponent the charges against Simmons' record and his own vast superiority as a debater. This was amusing to the supporters of Governor Kitchin when they knew that Thomas had refused to speak unless Dunn opened and he was allowed an hour in rejoinder and according to those present the youth was there with the goods and Thomas has yet failed to answer.

After the debate there were many favorable comments upon the argument produced by Kitchin's representative and it is currently reported that many Simmons' advocates left the court house Kitchin convicts.

For Lower Express Rate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 9.—This was the date tentatively fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission for the express companies to show cause why the new rates fixed by the commission should not be adopted by them. But as the new percents post system has raised some what inside his thinking box. And when you once get a system of regulated monopoly, then you get a system of controlled labor, don't forget that. Narrow the lines of competition and you stiffen the lines of labor control. You have not now a free market for your labor any more than you have a free market for your commodities, for under this system of monopoly, regulated or unregulated, the monopolist can determine the amount of goods to be produced, and therefore determine the amount of laborers to be employed and the price that the goods are to bring.

According to passengers the engineer of the train stated that he did not see anything of the child on the tracks. It being already quite dark when the fatality occurred.

The patient was placed in the detention ward of the Marine Hospital and the Chaucer was placed in quarantine for six days. Dr. Corbett, of the quarantine station, stated there were no other suspects aboard the steamer, but that all members of the crew would be subjected to close examinations.

Dr. Johnson was scheduled to speak at the woman's missionary meeting here two weeks ago, but was prevented from coming, so on Sunday morning made the talk that he intended to make on the former occasion, dealing mainly in the part the women are taking in the missionary work of the state and in helping to build churches. The talk was full of interest. Sunday night he delivered an excellent sermon on "The Two-Fold Life," showing that God was the giver of both physical and spiritual life, that He was the God of both and cared for His children through the physical life in preparation for the spiritual life and that as the physical life grows it broadens and merges into the spiritual life.

We look to quality first of all—see to it that the leather is right, the linings substantial and the general construction of the shoe procurable anywhere. We depend upon you for our business, and you depend upon us for square dealing, we are in duty bound to give it to you—and will.

Our new season's styles for ladies and gentlemen, and boys and girls are ready for your choosing.

N. C. BAKER DIES FROM GAS JET

J. C. Robertson, of Robertsonville, is Victim, Found Lying in Bed Covered Up.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 5.—With the covers pulled tightly up around his neck, J. C. Robertson, a banker of Robertsonville, N. C., was found dead in his room at the Westminster hotel shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday morning with gas flowing from a jet. Coroner John G. Jeffers, gave a certificate of death due to accidental asphyxiation. The body is now being held for relatives.

The odor of gas issuing from Robertson's room was first detected by a negro waiter at the hotel. With the aid of the clerk and the waiter, a policeman burst into the door and by the dim light of a jet, which was burning very low, he could see the form of the southerner lying in the bed. The windows were immediately thrown open and it was found that the man was dead.

Mr. Robertson was well known in Greenville and Pitt county, and his death is much regretted here.

CHAPTER XV.

Fortune's Riddle Solved.

Fortune, without deigning to reply, walked slowly and proudly to her tent, and disappeared within. She looked neither at Ryanne nor at George. She knew that George, his soul filled with unlovely quixotic sense of chivalry which had made him so easy a victim to her mother, would not accept his liberty at the price of Ryanne's, Ryanne, to whom he owed nothing, not even mercy. And if she had had to ask one of the two, George would have been the natural selection, for she trusted him implicitly. Perhaps there still lingered in her mind a recollection of how charmingly he had spoken of his mother.

She could have set out for Cairo alone; even as she could have grown a pair of wings and sailed through the air! The fate that walked behind her was malevolent, cruel, unjust. She had wronged no one, in thought or deed. She had put out her hand contentedly to the world, to be laughed at, distrusted, or ignored. Was it possible that a little more than a month ago she wandered, if not happy, in the sense she desired, at least in a peaceful state of mind, among her camellias and roses at Mentone? Her world had been, in this short time, remodeled, reconstructed; where once had bloomed a garden, now yawned a chasm; and the psychological earthquake had left her dizzy. That Mahomed, now wrought to a kind of berserk rage, might begin reprisals at once, did not alarm her; indeed, her feeling was rather of dull, aching indifference. Nothing mattered now.

But Ryanne and George were keenly alive to the danger, and both agreed that Fortune must go no farther. Ryanne, under his bitter railing and seeming scorn for sacred things, possessed a latent magnanimity, and it now pushed up through the false layers. "Jones, it's my funeral. Go tell her. You two can find the way back to the canal, and once there you will have no trouble. Don't bother your head about me."

"But what will you do?" "Take my medicine," grimly. "Ryanne, you are offering the cowardly part to me!" "You fool, it's the girl. What do I care about the rest of it? You're as brave as a lion. When you put up your fists the other night, you solved that puzzle for yourself. For God's sake, do it while I have the courage to let you! Don't you understand? I love that girl better than my heart's blood, and Mahomed can have it drop by drop. Go and go quickly! He will give you food and water."

"You go. She knows you better than me." "But will she trust me as she will you? Percival, old top, Mahomed will never let me go till he's taken his pound of flesh. Fortune!" Ryanne called. "Fortune, we want you!" She appeared at the flap of the tent. "Jones here will go back with you. Go, both of you, before Mahomed changes his mind."

"Miss Chesedye, he is wrong. He's the one to go. He was hurt worse than I was. Pride doesn't matter at a time like this. You two go," desperately.

Fortune shook her head. "All or none of us; all or none of us," she repeated. And Mahomed, having witnessed and overheard the scene, laughed, a laughter identical with that which had struck the barnard's ears sinisterly. He had not studied his white man without gathering some insight into his character. Neither of these men was a poltroon. And when he had made the offer, he knew that the conditions would erect a barrier over which none of them would pass voluntarily. So much for pride as the Christian does know it. Pride is a fine buckler; none knew that better than Mahomed himself; but a wise man does not wear it at all times.

"What is it to be?" he demanded of Fortune. "What shall I say to him?" "Whatever you will," Ryanne was tired. He saw that argument would be of no use. "All or none of us." And Fortune looked at Mahomed with all the pride of her race. "It is not because you wish me to be free; it is because you wish to see one of my companions made base in my eyes. I will not have it!"

"The will of Allah!" He could not repress the fire of admiration in his own eyes as they took in her beauty, the erect, slender figure, the scorn upon her face, and the fearlessness in her great, dark eyes. Such a woman might have graced the palace of the Great Caliph. He had had in mind many little cruelties to practice upon her, that he might see the men writhe, impotent and helpless to aid her. But in this tense and dramatic scene, a sense of shame took possession of him; his pagan heart softened; not from pity, but from the respect which one brave person gives free-handed to another.

Mahomed was not a bad man, neither was he a cruel one. He had been terribly wronged, and his eastern way had but one angle of vision: to avenge himself, believing that revenge alone could soothe his outraged pride and re-establish his honor as he viewed it from within. Had the courier returned with the Holy Yhordes, it is not impossible that he would have killed them all. But now he dared not; he was not far enough away. To Bagdad, then, and as swiftly as the exigencies of desert travel would permit. One beacon of hope burned in his breast. The Pasha might be deposed, and in that case he could immediately dispose of his own goods and chattels and seek new pastures. It would come hard, doubly hard, since he never could regain the position he was to lose.

Nine hundred pounds English, and a comfortable fraction over; the yellow-haired dog would have nothing in the end for his pains. It would be what the Persians called a good joke. A week passed. Christmas. And not one of them recalled the day. Perhaps it was because years had passed since that time when it meant anything to them. The old year went out a-lagging! neither did they take note of this. Having left behind civilization, customs and habits were forgotten.

Sometimes they rode all day and all night, sometimes but half a day, and again, when the water was sweet, they rested the day and night. Never a human being they saw, never a caravan met or crossed them. In this week, the secret marvels of the desert became theirs. They saw it gleam and waver and glitter under skies of brass, when the north wind let down a haze, and a breeze came over from the Persian Gulf. They saw it covered with the most amazing blues and greys and greens. They saw it under the rarest azure and a stately fleet of billowy clouds; under the dawn, under the set of sun, under the moon and stars; and unfailingly the interminable reaches of sand and rock and scrubby bush, champagne-like, resplendent its countenance to each change in the sky. George, who was a poet without the gift of expression, never ceased to find new charms; and nothing pleased his fancy more than to see the cloud-shadows scud away across the sands. Once, toward the latter end of day, Fortune cried out and pointed. Far away, palely yet distinctly, they saw an ocean liner. She stood out against the yellowing sky as a magic-lantern picture stands out upon the screen, and faded similarly. It was the one and only mirage they saw, or at least noticed.

Once another caravan, composed wholly of Arabs, passed. What hope the prisoners had was instantly snuffed out. Before the strangers came within hailing, Mahomed hustled his captives into his tent and swore he would kill either George or Ryanne if they spoke. He forgot Fortune, however. As the caravan passed she screamed. Instantly Mahomed clapped his hand roughly over her mouth. The shriek of the passing caravan looked keenly at the tent, smiled grimly and passed on. What was it to him that a white woman lay in yonder tent? His one emotion was of envy. After this the prisoners became apathetic.

Upon the seventh day, they witnessed the desert's terrifying anger. The air that had been cool, suddenly grew still and hot; the blue above began to fade, to assume a dusty, copperish color. The camels grew restless. Quickly they rose out of the horizon, saffron clouds, approaching with incredible swiftness. Little whirlwinds of sand appeared here and there, rose and died as if for want of air. Mahomed reined the caravan toward a kind of bluff composed of sand and precipitous boulders. All the camels were made to kneel. The boys muffled up their mouths and noses, and Mahomed gave instructions to his captives. Fortune buried her head in her coat and nestled down beside her camel, while George and Ryanne, under the leadership of George, left his camel and sought Fortune's side, found her hand and held it tightly. He scarcely gave thought to what he did. He vaguely meant to encourage her, and possibly he did.

The storm broke. The sun became obscured. Pebbles and splinters of rock sang through the pall of whirling sand. A golden tone enveloped the little gathering.

Had there been no natural protection, they must have ridden on, blindly and desperately, for to have remained still in the open would have been to await their tombs. It spent its fury in half an hour; and the clearing air became cold again. The caravan proceeded. The hair of every one was dimly yellow, their faces and their garments.

When camp was made that night it found the captives unaltered. The girl and the two men sat moodily about the fire. Fatigue had dulled their bodies and hopelessness their minds. The men were ragged now,

Chicago, Resting Easy, Wound is Pronounced Serious by Physicians

With Complete Rest the Ex-President Will Recover Completely in Two Weeks—Fear That Bullets Sent to Destroy Roosevelt's Life Might Have Been Poisoned

All Plans For Third Party Campaign Have Been Abandoned by His Managers

GREAT THRONG GATHERS ABOUT HOSPITAL

"Condition Hopeful is Statement Made by Physicians
Chicago, Oct. 15.—The following official statement was issued by the surgeons attending Colonel Roosevelt:
"Colonel Roosevelt's hurt is a deep wound in the chest. The wound was not probed. The point of entrance was to the right of an inch below the level of the right nipple. The range of the bullet was upward and inward, distance of four inches deeply in the chest wall. There was no evidence of the bullet penetrating the chest wall.
Pulse 90; temperature 99.2; respiration 20; leucocyte count 32 at 10 a. m. No operation to remove bullet is indicated at present time. Condition hopeful but wound so important as to demand absolute rest for a number of days.

Medical men when shown the official statement issued by the surgeons attending Colonel Roosevelt seemed to think conditions most favorable.
CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Col. Roosevelt's wound is not more than a chest wound, but is a serious wound in the chest, said the bulletin issued this afternoon by physicians at Mercy Hospital.
Chicago, Oct. 15.—Colonel Roosevelt, shot by John Schrank, an assassin, in Milwaukee, last night, lies today in Mercy Hospital, "resting easy."
Half a dozen of the most noted and skilled surgeons in Chicago led by Dr. John B. Murphy, made X-ray examinations of the Colonel's wound and announced that the bullet did not pierce the lung, but had lodged in the chest. They have not planned to operate today.
Schrank was taken to the District Court in Milwaukee this morning for preliminary examination.
The action was taken on recommendation of District Attorney Zabot, who issued a warrant charging Schrank with shooting Colonel Roosevelt with intent to kill.
Judge N. B. Neelen, of the Milwaukee District Court, immediately after the arraignment of Schrank, ordered Professors E. W. Somer, head of the Chemical Department of Marquette University, to make a chemical examination of the bullets remaining in the would-be assassin's revolver.
Judge Neelen announced that this action was taken to determine immediately if the bullet which entered Colonel Roosevelt's body had been poisoned. The judge said that his
