issue. They say that the only thing program: that can cause them to lose the election will be the laxity of their registered voters in going to the polls and oting. Those men who have fought so hard for the issue do not hesitate in claim that they will have a hig majorty when the final windup comes. They realize, however, that their biggest obstacle is getting the voters to the nolls, and they are aware of the fact that some hard work must be done in this respect.

Opponents of the bond issue are equally as confident of the election, and will be satisfied with nothing less than a big majority in their favor. They will be very active during the last week before the election is to come off, and expect to fire some of their biggest guns during this time.

It is pointed out by the advocate of the bond issue that unless Greanvile townshit carries the coming election the progress of the town will be greatly relived in many respects Counties in every section of the state are voting bonds for the inforovement of their roads, and where bonds have been issued and the roads improved in this way, the people generally are very much satisfied. Considerable activity has been noted in Western North Carolina in regard to good roads, and the slogan of the enthusiasts all over the state at the present time to awaken an interest in the matter in this section of the state. In a letter recently sent out by Mr. Joseph Hyde Pratt, announcing the date for the next annual good roads convention at Morehead City, the following paragraph appeared, and will be read with interest:

"Since the last convention was held in Charlotte a year ago, much enthusiasm for good roads has been shown in Western North Carolina; and in this section counties and townships have voted for road bonds to the extent of $2,500,000.
