FRIDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1915.

It seems to be the idea of Germany to serve a rough.

Speaking of points, there's the point of the tack in a chair.

The proper thing to do would be to erect a few more smokestacks in Greenville.

That the price of gasoline is soaring will not affect any of the paragraphs fraternally.

The Germans and Bulgars have formed a junction, but the main question is will the allies stop for it.

After you get left it is too late to worry. See that you don't get left and you will be relieved of the worry.

The chicken hearted young men who paraded up the street with the suffrage parade have our deepest sympathy.

Well, there's nothing to prohibit Kinston from claiming a population of ten thousand if she wants to, but figures do tell a lot.

The warring nations in Europe have worked hard to get Rumana into the brawl and it looks as if they are about to succeed.

If the Atlantic Coast Line would build a new passenger station here the looks of that section of the town would be greatly improved.

Editor Britton would have us locate the biggest goose. Now, if he had just said gander, we could have pointed at him with much pride.

"Shah put new shamarak and enosi buioka," yells the Chief of Kansas and we quite agree with him, too. It ought to be looked after.

So many of the young naval officers are getting married that it prompts us to inquire of 'Sophus' how much he is paying the boys?

There is little cause to worry over the preparedness problem. An increase in the army and navy is just as sure as it is sure that the sun will set today.

More complications now have arisen in the French Republic. The whole cabinet has resigned. The president will likely get shot on the job next.

Eastern Carolina is becoming a section noted for suicides. It is certain that those who have ended their lives were not aware of the possibilities and opportunities down here.

It should be a matter of gratification to all the citizens to know that much improvement is being made in Greenville now on the streets. If we had a little more pavement, Greenville would have the finest streets of any town in this section.

The editor of the nearby daily, who says that certain young aspirants to the editorial chair bore their readers with attempts to get their name in the big papers, should remember that they succeed, and that they also succeed in producing a paper that pleases their readers.

HOW TO STOP FANATICISM

According to a Washington dispatch, the German embassy attaches have reported that they are often approached by fanatics who want to sink a ship, blow up a munition factory or start some kind of row in the United States. These fanatics are confined, generally, to the German-Americans who are out of work and who have nothing else to do except spend their time in an effort to handicap American industries where these industries are turning out munitions of war.

Strange to say, none of these so called fanatics have been turned over to the police, and by the embassy's failing to do this, one must necessarily draw the conclusion that the Imperial embassy is upholding this fanaticism of the German-Americans.

There are five good ways by which the United States can well rid itself of this opposition to the manufacture of war munitions, the first of which is not at all practicable, though many Americans would be glad if it was. It is to forthwith ship all the Germans, who are not satisfied with the manner in which this country is conducting its business, home. This is not practicable because they would never get by the English fleet.

The second method would be to imprison, or have secretly watched, all suspicious looking characters. This might work.

Third is to establish a rigid government censorship on all the hupenated press of the United States. It would be well to create this, anyway, for this German-American press is doing a deal of harm.

The fourth way to have this trouble stopped is through the German embassy. It could be made to understand that it would be expected to account for all the depredations committed by its countrymen. The embassy would then be sure to get in communication with many of the investigators of the munitions fight.

The fifth method is to accede to the demands of all the Germans in this country. Cease to manufacture war munitions, or to supply anything to the allies, secure good positions of trust for those Germans who have been raising such a howl, and finally get them signed up as American citizens.

Summing up the five and taking the one that seems to be the most logical, we prefer the fourth. We believe that the German embassy has encouraged the work that the German spies and gangsters have been doing, not openly, however, but by its easy assent to every question that has arisen between Americans and German-Americans.

However, the good will of the United States government will not allow it to become harsh or rude with the German agents here. It has too much respect for itself to tell them what's what.

The United States regrets to have it dinned upon that the German embassy is treacherous, and it is with a hope that everything will come out all right, that it refrains from adopting more stringent measures for the enforcement of order and law within its borders.

The German-Americans should take a hint to that, but they have not yet set about doing it.

A DANGEROUS MENACE

Under the caption of "Loaning Out Deadly Weapons" the Raleigh Times yesterday said:

"Having personally witnessed a mad dash of automobiles through a residential street on which many children were at play at the time, we managed to throw a following eye far enough to catch one of the vanishing numbers.

"A search of the public records then discovered the fact that the offending car was listed in the name of a Raleigh woman, possessed of every sedate virtue.

"The deduction is simple. "She had merely placed in the hands of a dare-devil youngster and his friends a deadly weapon, in order that youth might be served with play on the public streets.

"We would be the last to take pleasure in the firing of a perfect lady, but to impose a lesson or so on such a one as we describe might tend to discourage the loan of motor cars to the reckless, to saving of life on the streets, and possibly to the prolongation of the lives of the children who are thus tempted to endanger it."

While Greenville has been almost free from accidents, too much emphasis can not be laid on the fact that the autists should be careful. Scarcely a day passes that we do not see some fellow, who is more suited to drive a grocer's wagon than an automobile, speed up Dickinson avenue at a thirty mile an hour clip, and in view of the extreme narrowness of this street this feat is made even more hazardous.

It should be stopped if possible, and we believe that there is a way to stop it.

PERKINS AND HIS NONSENSE

George W. Perkins, a man in the upper ten, makes known through an Ohio paper that he entertains grave fear that after the war is finished the cost of living in the United States will be reduced.

While this is good news to everyone, Mr. Perkins hasn't the least bit of justification for making this statement.

The idea that he has is that after the war is finished, the European nations will want to unload a lot of worthless goods upon us, and that they will be so cheap that they will affect the cost of living in the United States.

Perkins once said a very fine thing when testifying before the commission on Industrial Relations. He declared that if a traveler was to fly over the United States in an aeroplane, see its great natural resources and witness such a small population that he would imagine that the United States was an insane asylum.

If that same traveler were to see foreigners dumping goods, which we badly need, on our shores, and yet if we were to be diligently trying to devise some means of legislation to keep those goods away, what would that some traveler say?

Would there not be too much moderation in the statement that this "is an insane asylum?"

ROTATION IN OFFICE

Rotation in office in some instances would work out fine. In particular it is needed in offices where the work goes on in a fixed way from year to year. Here rotation is needed.

But just because it works out well in a few offices, does not justify its application to all our government, or State officials.

If one party's man makes a mistake, the other party's man is sure to catch it, and if elected, he will be pretty apt to remedy this mistake. Here's where the election manner comes in to serve its purpose well.

The rotation in office would mean a greater corruption of our political parties, for a man in office would naturally take advantage of his position to retain it.

When we have a public official, who serves his people well, let him retain the office through his own popularity and influence and not through a provision of the State, thus, causing us to have to hold in a man whether he is fitted for the job or not.

GRAFT

Graft is an important American industry which never has a dull season. It is one of the few industries which are not harassed by strikes, boiler explosions or shortage of raw material, and the only thing that can tie up the works is a newspaper with some radical and vociferous ideas about public service.

In the early days of the republic there was very little graft, owing to the fact that there were fewer people to watch. Also there was very little money in circulation, all the spare change being shipped to England in exchange for tax receipts. But as our country developed and began to plant the prairies to street car, electric light and telephone franchises, water-power sites and brick paving, the unctuous promoter sprang up and soaked the common people with $3 gas and a twelve to one minute of sand and portland cement. This seldom aroused any resentment until some prominent citizen drove in a top buggy through a concrete bridge which was not reinforced by anything except the county bonds, when a new board of supervisors was elected and added to the pay roll of the bridge company.

There are a great many different forms of graft from joining the church to draw trade to salting a silver mine and selling the salt to the unwary boob. The grafter is under heavy expense, however, for he is frequently obliged to buy a few of the board of aldermen in order to secure speedy and harmonious action of a humane and transparent franchise. Then every once in a while some older man who is a candidate for re-election will kick over the dashboard and return the money in the opening speech of the campaign, thus creating a strong impression of inherent righteousness and beating the opposition newspaper to it. This act of treachery is unusually followed by an indeterminate sentence which expires just prior to the next city election.

There would be much less graft in our large cities if the average voter would devote more time to politics and less to golf. After a man has chased a golf ball over an eighteen-hole course for several hours, he is in no mood to look up the pedigree of candidates who are photographed in the bosom of their family, with one arm resting on the family Bible. That cure for graft is in the man who votes with his head as well as his hands, and is not handled by anybody except a wife who reads the newspapers.

AUCTION SALE

OF CHOICE SMALL FARMS

Near ARTHUR, N. C.

MONDAY, NOV. 1

10:30 A. M.

We have subdivided into small tracts the farm of C. S. Forbes, known as the old Williams Farm, which is located on the Farmville to Ballard's Cross Roads road, one half mile from Arthur, 4 miles from Farmville, 9 miles from Greenville, and each tract will be sold to the highest bidder at our sale.

Each tract will have a good road frontage--schools and churches are within one half mile of the property--the neighborhood is unexcelled. The soil is a loamy top-soil with a good subsoil and produces large crops of tobacco, cotton, corn, and in fact all crops grown in this section. The average yield of cotton is 1 1-2 bales per acre, and the average yield of tobacco is 1000 lbs. per acre. There is one main dwelling, two tenant houses, four tobacco barns, stables and pack houses on the place. This is one of the best farms that we have ever had the privilege of offering in Eastern North Carolina, and if you are at all interested, it will be well worth your time to go today and look over the place thoroughly, for it is positively going to be sold on Monday, November 1st, and the highest bidders get the pie.

The Terms of the Sale Will Be Easy and Within Reach of All.

FREE DINNER TO ALL ATTENDING THE SALE.
