THE SAGE OF GREENVILLE.

A Tribute To The Late Dr. Chas. J. O'Hagan.

When a man like Dr. C. J. O'Hagan dies the loss to a community is instantly realized but not so easily estimated. The value of such a life is indelibly fixed in memory, for it is seldom indeed that one so great in mind and heart is found dwelling among us. It is not the purpose of this writer to attempt a sketch or review of the notable career of this uncommon man, but only to mention in brief and simple words of appreciation some of the qualities and virtues that made him for so long a time a valued and distinguished citizen in our midst.

Dr. O'Hagan was endowed by nature with rare talents and superb gifts of mind. His luminous intellect, his fertile brain, his superior knowledge, his learning in books and intelligent observation of human affairs, his inflexible honesty and unswerving rectitude in aim and purpose, his laudable and enduring traits of character,—all these gave him a high place in the esteem and affections of men, and they bestowed on him their homage and admiration without stint or reservation. As a physician of long experience and busy and lucrative practice, he stood in the forefront of his profession. His superior merits and abilities were widely recognized, and doctors far and near bowed to his mature wisdom and sought him for advice and consultation. He was devoted to his great work, he loved his profession, and mastered it and practiced it as a science and a blessing to mankind. From the beginning of his professional career his aptitude and talents made his progress and success certain. He didn't falter, nor "lag superfluously on the stage," but advanced steadily forward and upward to an eminence and distinction that but few ever reach. He diligently toiled "up the steep where Fame's proud temple shines afar," and became the pride and ornament of his profession. Never arrogating to himself superior excellence, he seemed to care nothing for the airy honors of a name, nor sought any of the crafty arts to elevate himself above his fellows, and yet by his higher wisdom and knowledge, greater learning and experience, he could but fill his natural place and stand in the first rank as a physician with few equals and no superior in our State. There are numerous families today who feel that there is none other who can take his place as doctor in their homes. In him they had implicit faith and adoring confidence; their hearts, like muffled drums, are beating mournfully over the departure of him who can visit them no more. Besides his great medical skill, his very presence, his attractiveness, his hopeful, assuring words, served as a benediction in the sick room, giving cheer and strength in the battle with stubborn disease and wasting illness. For the past several years of his aged career he had a valuable and needful assistant in his busy, arduous professional duties in the person of his talented grandson and namesake, Dr. C. O'H. Laughinghouse, and the partnership thus formed gave him some relief from his incessant labors, and these occasional hours of leisure could but be welcome to a nature so ripe in years though still strong in physical and mental force and apparently unweary by the four-score years that whitened his head. We may believe that the grandfather felt a just pride in the signal success and growing reputation of the grandson, seeing him so well equipped in brain and talents, already established in a lucrative practice and secure in the public confidence, and destined to wear high honors in the profession which he himself adorned for so long a period and gave the best years of his life.

It can be said with truth that Dr. O'Hagan possessed qualifications that would have brought him lofty distinction outside of his profession if his genius had inclined him to such ventures. His intellectual powers, his resolute will, his chivalrous nature and commanding presence, would have served him well in any political ambition he might have cherished. But in our recollection he had no such aspirations, and at the slightest intimation of such preferment by his friends he rebelled against the very thought and tossed back the proffered plume, unwilling to woo the fickle fortune of politics, and immovable in his high purpose to pursue with whole mind and heart the one noble calling he loved and honored so well. He was a fluent, earnest and forcible speaker though the occasions were infrequent when he appeared upon the public rostrum. In response to calls in a political assemblage his addresses were brim-full of reason and logic, delivered in terse and cogent English, evoking most hearty applause. He was well informed on political questions, and while a vigorous partisan he believed the contests between parties should be conducted on a high plane of thought and action. The Louisville Courier Journal was one of his favorites in newspaper reading, being specially fond of the wise and brilliant editorials of Henry Watterson, so compact in potent thought and political philosophy, and written in a style so felicitous and vivid. Dr. O'Hagan kept himself in touch with the brightest and best thought of the times. He was a ripe scholar, his acquaintance with both ancient and modern literature was extensive, and his memory retentive and un-failing. In classical lore none other among us knew near so much as he. To have his critical opinion and comments on any literary question or production was always a delight, for in his discourse the erudition of his own brilliant and cultivated mind shone forth in full splendor. By his courtliness of manner and matchless graces of speech he would become the cynosure of all eyes in any circle or company. He could command attention at will by the charms of his conversation. Such the versatility of his genius and scope of acquirements, he could instruct and enlighten by his learning or delightfully entertain and amuse by his wit and pleasantry. The richness of his vocabulary and apt and witty illustrations made him a favorite, and if circumstances justified his use of the weapons of sarcasm and ridicule was unsurpassed and most effective.

Dr. O'Hagan seemed to live in an atmosphere of dignity and stately independence. He stood as a chief among men, not because of self-assertion or that he claimed greater excellence, but by right of his honor, his courage, his magnanimity and his well known virtues. There was within a proud consciousness that he wore no hypocrite's mask, and that none of the arts of dissimulation he practiced. Mens conscia recti was his guide. He carried no false banners, but followed the straight and open path. He was candid and sincere in all things, and believed in straightforward honest dealing in square and manly fashion. He was bold and outspoken in his opinions, and never spoke in low whispers to escape "the oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely." He hated all sharp practices, all shams and petty policies, and fearlessly denounced wrong or injustice wherever he saw it, unceasing the consequences. His moral nature was never stained by selfish greed and unholy avarice. In this Mammon-worshipping age he never became soul-seared in the mercenary scramble for wealth. To amass great riches was not the object that spurred his genius and industry. He was satisfied with a sufficient competence to meet all reasonable wants and conveniences and for himself and family to live in comfortable and independent fashion, and this was the extent of his estate. There were other rewards in life besides money which he prized and gained. The good accomplished by his faithful work and the appreciation and gratitude of the many he served and helped, were compensations that counted much with him and added to his sum of human enjoyment.

Notwithstanding his preeminent powers and the exalted station he filled, he was accessible alike to all—the lowly as well as the high born, the poor as well as the rich. He tendered his outstretched hand as graciously and spoke greeting words as warmly to the toil-worn man, no matter how sorely tried by poverty's peltings, as he did to the opulent and mighty. He believed with Robert Burns:

"The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
The man's the gold for a that."
The honest man, tho' e'er so poor,
Is king o' men for a that."

His heart was full of generous and sympathetic impulses. A most considerate, kind and indulgent father, tender and devoted in his attachment to each and every member of his family. In his nature there was a wealth of tenderness and affection that disclosed itself all through his long life. The deeds of kindness, the acts of charity, the numberless little benefactions dispensed so freely and unostentatiously by him, form a bright jewel in the crowning honors of his extraordinary life and bespeak the innate humanity and immense generosity of his nature. We will not say such a man was faultless, for there is none perfect among us. Whatever his few frailties they are reckoned as but slight and fade away as we contemplate his shining virtues and noble and manly deeds, which are written on the iron leaf of eternity to give him a post of honor in the higher world to which he has gone. His deeds is the epitome of the man. It was his to know his work and do it, and in the eyes of the Great Taskmaster such faithful labors was worship in a noble sense and the essence of a religion divinely sanctioned.

Dr. O'Hagan's death came not as an unseasonable blow, yet all wished that in his venerable age many years still might be spared him. So grand and useful were the threads that he wove in the web of a life so long associated with the history of our town and so intimately blended with its society, a figure so majestic and popular wherever known, his death produces more than ordinary regrets, and they reach the furthest limit of his acquaintance. His departure leaves a void that cannot be easily filled. A benefactor has closed his eyes to all earthly concerns and is taken from us. A luminary, clear-shining and constant, whose light blessed and helped humanity, has sunk from mortal sight to be gazed upon on earth no more. The sage of Greenville has passed away, and we bow our head in sorrow to pay to noble dust our tribute of love and esteem. G. B. KING.

The Shoe on The Other Foot.

A man walked into a country printing office the other day, and said to the editor:

"Say, if you want something to fill up your paper with, you might say in your next issue that I have just started a shop to make and repair wagons and carriages, and would like to have everybody to call and see me."

"All right," replied the editor, "do you want an advertisement in the paper, too?"

"No," said the man; "just an item of news in the local column."

"Do you want to subscribe for the paper?" asked the editor.

"Well, no," said the man. "I am taking two or three city papers, and some story papers from Chicago; I haven't got time to read any more. Maybe I'll take your paper when some of the others run out."

"All right," said the editor; and he smiled to himself.

Next day the editor sent his carriage around to the shop. He wanted two spokes put in the wheel, and told him he had a little job for him, just to fill up his time and keep him busy.

The man looked it over, and said: "Well, the spokes will be 50 cents each, and the dashboard $1; that will be just $2."

"Oh," said the editor, "I didn't mean to pay for it. I just brought it around, same as you brought that item yesterday, just to fill up your time. It's only an item, you know."

Then the wagon repairer saw the point, and the editor went back to his office, and deftly pitched the item into the wastebasket.—Newspaperdom.

The Old And New.

There was a merry ringing of bells Monday night when the old year and old century passed away and the new were ushered in. Nearly every bell in town joined in the chime, and one could not suppress a feeling of both joy and sadness as the peals rang out upon the stillness of the night. A few minutes before midnight they began tolling in keeping with the dying moments of the old, and promptly at 12 the tolling changed to a merry ringing in greeting to the new.

And what a moment of heart-searching was this. First a reflection of the past and then a hopeful looking to the future. A grateful thankfulness to Almighty God for the blessings of the past, followed by a prayer for His continued blessings upon the future. An humble confession of sins of the past year with a prayer for forgiveness and a supplication for grace and strength to live nearer to the Savior in the new year. A solemn moment indeed, and may every one be benighted who experienced it.

Of Days of Old

How often persons who are engrossed with the cares of business life find themselves in the quiet moments going back to the scenes of childhood, and how they long to go back over those days again. Sometimes these scenes come in review unbidden; again they are called to mind by hearing some one tell their experiences; but come as they may, they long to again go over the play ground, the fields, the forest and once more be a free, untrammelled child again, to wade the branches, catch minnows, go swimming or chase the hare and squirrel. The impressions of these things come into the mind when young and pliant, and nothing short of insanity can efface them from memory. Such things bring mingled joy and sadness; joy, as one imagines they are going over the scenes again, sadness, on maturer reflection, bringing the knowledge that those scenes have changed. The open field may now be a forest, the grove a thicket, and on going to the old home they find few objects that remind them of other years, and the return does not give the pleasure expected. But it is all a dream, and only a short rest for a weary mind, and cars crowd in and engross the mind again.—Orange Va. Observer.

IN NEW QUARTERS.

The Reflector to have a Home of its Own.

The Reflector greets its readers today from new quarters in the Biallo building. We have purchased from Messrs. Elliott Bros. through their agent, Mr. W. H. Long, the two-story corner portion of this building for the purpose of making it a permanent home for the paper, but at present only our business office is in the portion of the building included in the purchase. The Masonic and Pheasant lodges occupy the hall in the rear story, and rather than cause them to move out with no other conveyance which they could occupy, we agreed that they should remain and have placed our printing department in the store three doors from the corner.

The editor can be found in the business office on the corner, and the printing room will be in charge of our efficient foreman, Mr. T. W. McBryde. Either will take pleasure in serving the wants of our patrons. Everything is not yet in good shape, but already many compliments have been received upon the excellence of our new quarters in both the office and printing departments, and we are beginning to feel very much at home.

While we have made the purchase above referred to, we are frank to confess that it is not paid for. Yet the liberality of our patrons has encouraged us to make this venture of getting a building of our own, and we believe our friends will show their appreciation of this enterprise by continuing their patronage. We believe they had rather see their home paper prosper and be able to make improvements than to merely enjoy it as a hand to mouth existence.

With THE REFLECTOR of the past year has been one of its best, and we wish to thank every patron for the part each has contributed to the success of the paper. We hope to find the first year of the new century better still. Mr. E. E. Griffin, the jeweler, Mosses, Harding & Harding, attorneys and Mr. J. L. Sugg, insurance agent, will continue to occupy their former quarters in the building purchased by THE REFLECTOR. Altogether we are going to make it a very busy corner and invite our friends to come to see us.

Store Robbed.

Sunday night robbers made a raid on the store of Z. V. Johnson & Co., taking a large quantity of goods. Two efforts were made to get in the store. A brace and lat were used to bore holes through the wood shutter on a rear window, but the fastenings to the window could not be reached from the opening thus made. Then a large section of the door was cut out in the same way, and through this the lock could be reached and unlocked. Mr. Johnson sustained a large quantity of goods were stolen. He has issued several overcoats and suits of clothing, boxes of jewelry, gloves, neckwear, shoes and other things that could be easily carried away. There is no clue to the robbers.

Two Cured.

There were many delighted people at Christmas eve tokens of remembrance and esteem received from friends and relatives, but there were not two better pleased men to be found than Mr. W. B. Wilson and D. J. Whitehead. Both of these were cured in a manner that will not be forgotten. Mr. Wilson's toxic typhoid fever came and THE REFLECTOR office forces presented the editor with beautiful silver headed oblong canes. The recipients in both instances are very proud of their canes.

Worry

It is the Crap on the Door Announcing a Fencer, which is Yet Future.

Among the good resolutions that might be made for this year and one that should be carefully kept in a determination not to worry. Some one has said of the habit of worrying:

"This would be a comparatively happy world if we did not suffer so much from things that do not happen. How our shoulders ache under the weight of burdens we are never called upon to bear! How are hearts are wrung by griefs that never take shape?" If no more serious changes could be brought against it, worrying would head list of all evils. It costs us an untold amount of unnecessary misery. It takes away the strength we need for work. In all its irreparable to point to a single good result it has brought about. Worry is the nail in the coffin of the man not yet dead; it is the cramp on the door, announcing the funeral, that should not think place for worry yet to come.

Worry is the dyspepsia and indigestion, brought on, not from over-eating or eating too much rich food, but from thinking too much before about what we are going to have to eat, or whether we are going to have anything at all to eat. It is the overcast put on as a protection against the expected cold wave that turns out to be a warm one; it is the umbrella turned out to keep off the rain that rains out to be sunshining; it is the celestial telescope, which throws inverted images.

Worry has never yet brought sunshine to any one, but has times without number, caused the sun to pass behind a cloud, when there was not a cloud to be seen in the sky. It has exhausted the strength in the yesterday, that is needed to push forward the work of today. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Let us borrow no trouble for each day and leave it to come laden with its proper amount of sunshine and cloud.

We have pointed to the absurdity of worrying and it is now in order for us to point the way out of it. To get rid of the blues in a room we should not think of dipping water in it, as we would so much water we would displace it with light. If we put worrying under the head of nonsense, it is easy to understand that it must be driven out by an influx of sense. We cannot get rid of worry by an effort of the will not to worry, we must drive it out by seeing that it is entirely foolish and unprofitable as well as worry. Anything that would naturally happen, will come just the same, no matter how much we worry, and if we do worry, the thing will happen in our weakened state of mind.

The Burglar Dead.

All mystery about the man who was shot while attempting to break into the dwelling of Ben. Whitely is over and so is his life. His brother and uncle in law came here Saturday night and identified him as Walter Evans, a feebly, half-witted fellow living about five miles from Greenville. On Monday, the 24th, he wandered away from home. When he did not return search was made for him and he was traced as far as Bellet and there nothing more could be heard till the killing of a strange man was reported.

While the operation of extracting the ball was successful, it did not save his life which ended as he past 8 Saturday evening in the county jail, where everything was done for him that the authorities could do. He was placed in the woman's compartment, which was quite comfortable. The authorities could not get any one of his race to take charge of him, although Chairman Clark announced that the county would pay for it—Tarboro Southern.

Fair pricing is a basic principle in this store. To buy the right thing at the reasonable price is better, far better and more economical than the wrong thing at most any old price. The poorly priced article usually made, got a wrong twist in it somewhere, you can't depend upon it. When you want good dry goods you can't depend upon it. MUNFORD'S BIG NEW STORE.

Well may the good people of Greenville and surrounding country be thankful and proud of their Big Store and the wonderful bargains that come from that great institution. For the third time this season has the buyer been north, picking and scouring the New York, Boston and Philadelphia markets and aptly snugged up all the "Juley Pimus." This was securing leading manufacturers' fall shipment of the clothing for men and boys intended for a dealer in Galveston, Tex., but which was countermanded on account of the flood. The result is, we can offer men and boys highest grade clothing at just one-half the old time dealer's price. They will be ready and placed on the tables on

SERMON ON ADVERTISING.

An Iowa Editor's Views on how to Attract Business.

Recently the editor of the Cresco (Ia.) Times gave an instructive talk to his patrons through the medium of his columns. He said in part:

"It may gratify the vanity of the citizen to have his business ability and his success enlarged, but it will never add a dollar to his fortune to pay a transient, travel-stained pencil pusher to write a few paragraphs of praise concerning himself and his business. His neighbors, who are associating with him daily, know him too well to believe anything that is not true about him.

"What the merchant needs to help him sell goods is not a picture or write up in the publication of some smart 'foreign' advertising fakir, but a regular advertisement in the local papers of which he has to sell and then to invariably adhere to price and quality to the specifications of the advertisement.

"Editors have an opportunity to scan pretty closely the effect of different kinds of advertising and to see the effect of neglecting to advertise in the local papers. The observant editor might be dropped down into a dozen stores in a town in which he was an entire stranger, and he could determine in half an hour any pleasant way of doing business in the stores advertised judiciously.

"Merchants who advertise at tract strangers; those who do not, keep a few old customers until they begin to learn through the advertising columns that cheaper and more up-to-date goods are sold at other stores. The merchant who does not advertise cannot afford to renew his stock with up-to-date goods, so he loses his old customers and keeps his old goods, and all because he will not advertise."

Christmas term.

On Monday night December 24, a very enjoyable German was given at the local opera house. It was a festive occasion and the following couples were initiated into the Christmas holidays:

W. H. Dail with Miss Mary Blow, J. D. Garden with Miss Louise Latham, C. B. Mayo with Miss Mabel Mosely, C. T. Lipscomb, of S. C., with Miss Pattie Skinner, M. I. Fleming with Miss Bertha Patrick, W. B. Wilson, Jr., with Miss Nell Skinner, S. H. Kings with Miss Nina James, J. H. Adams with Miss Emily Hughes, B. E. Patrick with Miss Lottie Breen, Darwood Wilson with Miss Ethel Skinner, Charlie James with Miss Winnie Skinner, Dr. Greene, of Snow Hill, with Miss Betty Greene, J. Ben Higgins with Miss Bossy Patrick, Z. V. Johnston with Miss Lillian Cherry.

Stags—R. C. White, Dr. R. L. Carr, C. S. Forbes and Frank Wooten, of Norfolk.

Masonic Growth.

A year ago there were 315 Masonic lodges in this State. Since then five new lodges have been instituted. The membership a year ago was 11,260. Now it is 12,000. The next convention will be the largest ever held. It will be centennial of Hiram Lodge, No. 49, of Raleigh. It will be the second centennial celebration of the kin. The first was of St. John's Lodge, No. 1, of Wilmington. The latter and Royal White Hart Lodge, No. 2, of Halifax, are the oldest lodges. Most of the old lodges are now extinct. St. John's and Royal White Hart have the charters from the grand lodge of England. The Royal White Hart claims to be older than St. John's, but cannot prove its claim.

A good way to start the twentieth century is to pay the printer what you owe him. That is if you owe him anything. If you do not you might subscribe for the paper and have it sent to a friend. It would be a weekly reminder of your thoughtfulness all the year round.

SEEN AND HEARD IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, N. C. Dec. 31 1900. Farver's system causing establishment is being rebuilt. Mrs. Rolt Manning (see Cor.) died on the 28th of December after a long illness.

Christmas was very quiet here. Dr. J. C. Rodman's building, corner Main and Market streets, will soon be completed, and the second story will be occupied by B. B. Nicholson, Dumpey Grimes, Pendleton, W. B. Rodman and Dr. A. S. Wells.

E. Peterson Co.'s building is completed, and occupied by A. M. Latham down stairs for a store and up stairs for sleeping apartments.

Mrs. W. C. Allen, of Waynesville is visiting relatives at Pate and Belhaven. The building is being prepared for use as a knitting mill and the machinery is ordered. We hope to see it in operation soon.

Mr. Ernest Ray and Miss Mattie Woolard were married at the bride's home on the evening of the 25th. Rev. J. D. Waters performing the ceremony. Spencer Bros. Co. will occupy their new store early in January. I think it is 15 stores that will be soon ready for occupancy in the burnt district, all brick, modern and apparently solidly built.

A Hoo Hoo lodge was organized here on the evening of the 28th by Mr. Denny Vice Snash. E. M. Short Lumber Co. will overhaul their mill early in the New Year and put in another 80 horse power boiler.

Rumor has it that the Freeman and Hodges Lumber Co. has purchased the Washington Planing Mill and will operate a saw mill at that place. They have purchased a small steamer to use in connection with their business.

Dr. Kelly, of Jno. Hopkins, of Baltimore has spent some days here hunting. The market house is near ready for use. A. B. Whitley has sold his stock, corner Harvey and Third streets, to Mr. Sterling, but it does not appear to be a business manager of the Watch Tower Publishing Co. and trust he may not find it necessary to sever his connection with the company.

N. S. Pufford has moved to his residence on Main street.

A man and lady were baptised at the Christian church on Wednesday evening by Rev. A. Latham, ex-pastor. JIM NASTIC.

The Supreme Duty. "Whatever else you do or do not do for children, brethren, educate them. God has given me three sons, and I do not expect to leave them a home or money, but I do expect to give them an education. I never expect to live in a home of my own, but I am going to educate my boys. They are all good young men, and if I stay out of the ground a few years longer they will be educated young men."—Bishop Morrison at Methodist Conference in New Bern.

Herein is summed up the Supreme duty of parents, excepting of course the religious training of their children. There has never been a time when education was not equivalent to sharp tools, but at no time in the history of the world has the necessity for education been so apparent as now. The competition is greater, the chances for building up an independent business are smaller, the combinations of wealth are more powerful, and the young man who forgets at the front needs to have his tools well sharpened. Education is the kind of kind will furnish him this equipment. Therefore the Supreme duty of the parent is to give his children the capacity to win the strenuous competition that lies before them.

It would be a blessing to this Commonwealth if the good and mighty words of the wise bishop could impress every father and mother with the same ambition and purpose which the bishop says influences and controls him in his thoughts about his children.—Raleigh News and Observer.
