inds me of the sad incident in the life of Capt. James Evans, of Cumberland county. Ten year ago there was no man living that valued a fast horse more than Capt. Evans, but now he would pay as much for a good strong blind mule as for Cresceus. It all came about this way: The captain got hold of a horse that he was certain was the quickest traveler in Cumberland county, and he spent all his leisure time putting the animal in good racing shape. He had visions of unlimited first prizes at county fairs; and there's no doubt about the fact that the horse was a hummer. One day Capt. Evans hitched him to his light dog cart and started to town. Just as he drove out of his gate he met a farmer that he knew, who was driving a big tall white steer to an old fray ed out buggy. The captain said it was the most remarkable ox that he had ever seen and had the longest legs be had ever seen on any cattle kind. The captain and the farme drove side by side for about a mile, talking of one thing and another, and just as the captain was about to touch up his horse and hurry on the farmer said:
