JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

The world was made when a man was born.

He must taste for himself the forbidden springs.

He can never take warning from old-fash-

He must fight as a boy, he must drink as a youth.

He must kiss, he must love, he must swear to the truth.

Of the friend of his soul; he must laugh to scorn.

The hint of deceit in a woman's eyes That are clear as the wells of Paradise.

So he goes on till the world grows old, Till his tongue has grown cautious, his heart has grown cold;

Till the smile leaves his mouth and the ring leaves his laugh.

And he shakes the bright headache you ask him to quit.

He grows formal with men and with women polite.

And distrustful of both when they're figuring on his sight.

Then he eats for his palate and drinks for his head.

And loves for his pleasure, and 'tis time he were dead.

New York Looks as Bold as Sould Can be—Some Registration Figures.

New York Star Syndicate Letter to the REFLECTOR.

New York Oct. 31st, 1888

New York is in a state of feverish excitement in this crowning week of perhaps the most sharply contested political fight of our times. Every man in both armies is at his post.

All the big and little guns are booming for what they are worth, and banners are fluttering everywhere, and long files of enthusiastic warriors are marching in every direction to strike terror into the hearts of their antagonists. Not only every day but every hour of the day, and far into the night, there is a big demonstration, a parade, mass meeting or blow-out of some sort.

The comparatively few people who don't take part in them, line the streets and public squares to look at the who do, and as a consequence the business man of every day life is seriously interrupted. A gentleman who employs no more than a dozen people in a little establishment overlooking Broadway informed me that he lost at least $500 this month in time thrown away by his help watching passing parades.

"Why didn't you prohibit it?"

"So I did, but what's the use?"

Everybody else's help was either parading or watching, and what everybody does becomes the privilege and prerogative of the American citizen, and you can't suppress him. Besides, who could work in all that noise and clatter?"

That tells the whole story, a story that involves millions, to the business of the Metropolis. But they are far from complaining. In fact they are doing very much of the shouting and tramping themselves—much more than in former years.

This was strikingly illustrated by the big parade of the Democratic Business Men's Clubs on Saturday.
In its way it was unprecedented.
The newspapers estimated the number of men in line all the way from 20,000 to 50,000. All day long the rain fell in a drizzle, liberally punctuated with brisk showers. The festive New York mood oozed up from between the paving stones, so that the middle of the streets resembled a sower in a state of active eruption.
But the parade went on just the same. Millionaires were rarely trust themselves to anything below the rank of a handsome cab tramped in the wet and slush four solid miles, to be reviewed by the President. Stock brokers and drygoods justices joined their clerks and porters in the same line and did their full share of the shouting. Spruce silk ties and nob-by new suits were sacrificed by the thousands, but the spirits of the paraders were water-proof if their coats were not. There will be another monster Democratic parade before the close of the season. It will take place on Friday evening.
The Republicans will have their parade in the afternoon and the naughty Democratic managers couldn't resist the temptation afforded by the opportunity of a contrast.

Next week the cold, concrete figures of result will take the place of speculation, but while we have still the chance of indulging the latter it is not without its attractions as a pastime. New York city's registration closed Saturday. The total is enormous—quite beyond the expectation of the Democrats who are elated by it correspondingly as the Republicans are depressed. The figures in round numbers are 286, 000, an increase of 56,000 over four years ago. This means that Cleveland and Harrison will divide about 270,000 votes between them. The Democratic managers are confident that Harrison will not get more than 100,000 votes, which is 10,000 more than Blaine got four years ago. This would give Cleveland 70,000 majority in the city. The Republican calculation is that Harrison will get 110,000 votes, which would give Cleveland 50,000 majority, or 7,000 more than he got here in 1884.

Brooklyn's registration increase of 26,000 would normally indicate a net Democratic increase of 8,000.
Not since 1884 have the Republicans in the State outside come down to the Harlem river with a majority big enough to overturn these figures.

At the National Headquarters they say that Indiana, New Jersey

Washington Letter.

Special cor. to REFLECTOR.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 29th, 1888

Senator Gorman came over from the national democratic head quarters in New York, and had a long conference with Mr. Cleveland this week. Mr. Gorman gave the Press identical account of the present status of the campaign, and also fully informed him of the expectations of the national committee, together with the grounds upon which they are based. Just before returning to New York, Mr. Gorman informed your correspondent that he regarded the election of Cleveland and Thurman as an absolute certainty, as the case now stands, but he intimated that he feared the effect of large sums of republican money upon the hoodlum voters of the lower wards of New York City on election day. Many republicans here say openly that if money will carry New York they are certain to win, but I think it more likely that some of their eminent statesmen will get in jail if they attempt bribery on a large scale in New York City. The democratic committee are fully alive and will frustrate any attempt upon the part of the republicans to buy votes in New York or elsewhere.

Democrats here are confidently figuring on the Senate after the 4th of next March, as well as the Presidency and the House. It will only take democratic legislatures in West Virginia and New Jersey to accomplish that much desired result and then the democratic party will have a real opportunity to bring about some of the many reforms that are so badly needed.

Mr. Cleveland leaves to-night, for New York, where he will to-morrow afternoon review a mammoth business men's Cleveland and Thurman parade. He will return to Washington immediately after the parade.
He has not yet decided whether he will go to Buffalo to vote or not, but it is probable that he will go, not so much because he considers his vote necessary to success, but as an example to other New York voters temporarily residing in this city—there are over 3,000 of them.

Nearly all the members of the Cabinet are actively engaged in the campaign. They are doing excellent work, too.

Washingtonians now rejoice in the possession of a genuine English Lord. The British minister here has recently, through the death of a relative, become Lord Sackville.

Could John Calhoun have lived until the present time, he would have had an opportunity of verifying the ancient adage "all things come to him that waits." For several years past the United States Supreme Court has been handing down decisions in favor of the doctrine of "States Rights," which Calhoun so ably advocated, but this week the Court made two decisions which are in effect far beyond anything ever claimed by Calhoun and his associates. One of these decisions upholds the constitutionality of the Alabama state law providing tests for color blindness in all employees of railroads or in any several years of the past, this demonstrates that a state law is superior to Congressional legislation, and the regulations of the United States Inter-State Commerce Commission.
The other affirms the decision of the Supreme Court of Iowa to the effect that under the prohibitory law of that state no liquors can be made within its borders no matter where they are to be sold. These decisions are the more remarkable when the fact is remembered that two-thirds of the Justices of the Supreme Court are republicans. How the old fashioned states' rights doctrine must enjoy these decisions, proving as they do that the principles for which they fought for so many years was the right one. Perhaps after a few more decisions like the above, rabid republican editors like Murat Halstead, and Whitelaw Reid will agree that this country is a confederation of Sovereign States.

Already inquiries are beginning to be received here from organizations that propose attending Cleveland's inauguration.

Chief Justice Fuller delivered his first opinion in the Supreme Court this week. It was to the effect that the State of Pennsylvania was not entitled to collect a tax on messages sent by the Western Union Telegraph Co., except messages between points within the borders of the State.

A prominent business man of New York City, who was in Washington this week, gave it as his opinion that Cleveland would have a plurality of 25,000 in his state. He says that the National Committee are now certain of holding their own in the labor vote, and they are daily making gains among business men, and men who study.

The swiftest bird on the wing is the frigate bird, a sort of nautical bird of prey. Sailors believe that it can start with the peep of dawn from the coast of Africa, and following the trade wind, land on the American coast before sunset. It can undoubtedly fly more than two hundred miles an hour, but we do not know of any trustworthy record of the speed of which it is capable.

Sam Jones.

Concord Times.

We went down to Durham last Saturday night to hear the famed evangelist, Sam Jones, who began a series of religious services in that town. We arrived Sunday morning and heard the evangelist preach two sermons, one at 10:30 A. M. and one at 3 P. M. The meetings are being held in Parish's large tobacco warehouse, which has a seating capacity of 4,000. At the afternoon service the large auditorium was packed to its limit, and full 4,000 people drank in the words of wisdom as they fell from the lips of the great preacher.

One has to hear Sam Jones to appreciate him. His sayings have to be heard from his lips to be fully appreciated. They may be quoted word for word but they possess a freshness and charm when heard from him that they otherwise cannot have.

Sam Jones is rather a good looking man, of medium stature, straight as an arrow, black hair, black eyes, and a bushy mustache.
He has a fine head, which when viewed from the side is especially well proportioned. He is, too, possessed of a great big heart, which beats in sympathy for the unfortunate, the needy and distressed.

We hardly dare express an opinion of him as a preacher. To people who are used to goody-goody, white-washing preaching, and who have not been told of their faults by the pulpit, he appears rough and even sacrilegious. But when you analyze any of his sayings by the light of reason, there is common sense in everything he says.
He has his own peculiar way of saying it, on which, he says, he has a patent right. We believe it, for if any other man should attempt to imitate him he would meet with signal failure. He has no real imitators. His patent will never be infringed. He is the "only original," and there will never be another.

Sam Jones is a man of power.
He is a wonder. Evidently, "God works in a mysterious way," and his wonders to perform," and this is

MAIL MATTER.]

Before And After.

A Republican and Democrat were arguing on our streets Saturday morning, in the course of which the former said, in substance: "You Democrats, just before the election, abuse and denounce us and say we are no better than negroes, but after the election is over all is forgotten and we are just as good white men as any of you." This remark is in a great measure true, and we propose to make it the text for a short sermon which we propose to preach to the Democratic readers of the REFLECTOR.

Now, that the election is over and some of the bitterness of the campaign is forgotten, let us sit down calmly and look over the past. Let us ask ourselves a few questions, and answer them conscientiously, and then let us be guided in the future by the conclusions arrived at. Have not the experiences of the campaign through which we have just passed, and that of all other campaigns in North Carolina, plainly shown us that the white leaders of the Republican party seek to secure the control of affairs by inciting and arousing into activity all the baser elements of the negro nature, and to awaken in them feelings of resentment against the white men?

Have not the speeches of the Republican leaders in this country during the campaign just ended shown them to be bitter, malicious partisans, unworthy there-spect of decent and peace-loving white men? Is not the practice of distributing malicious, lying literature, which they are afraid for decent white men to see, among the ignorant and superstitious negroes, to excite their passions and arouse them to deeds of violence to be condemned by all respectable people, and unworthy of any one who professes to be a man? Have not the base slanders, the malicious falsehoods and the depraved and indecent utterances of the Republicans in this campaign--from that of their highest candidate down to the dirty cross-roads skunk--branded them as men totally devoid of character and not to be recognized by self-respecting people?

Finally, was not the last trick of the party--that great and consummate piece of rascality by which J. B. Hayes, Chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee, attempted to intimidate Democratic poll holders in the discharge of their duty by threats of Pinkerton detectives and the Albany penitentiary-- one of the dirtiest and meanest attempts ever made by a corrupt and excited party, on the eve of political dissolution, to prevent honest men from the faithful discharge of their sworn duty, the crowning act of infamy of a party already so black from the stains of its offenses as to be offensive to all people of decency? Answer these questions conscientiously, think of the many other corrupt things the Republicans have done, and then ask yourself if the remark above is not a just rebuke for your inconsistency. We are compelled to plead guilty of the charge, but were forced to it by circumstances. In one respect we think the white Democrats could well afford to pattern after the negroes. The latter ostracize every one of their race who dares to vote the Democratic ticket, expel him from their churches, and refuse to have him at any of their social gatherings. In the face of these facts and for the protection of themselves, would it not be well for the white men to pursue a similar course-- though a little milder? Don't go to the extreme that the negroes do, but show any white man, who so far forgets himself as to consort with the negroes before election times that he loses caste and respectability, and make it felt equally as much after as before election. Then we will not be charged with inconsistency, and cannot be put to shame by such remarks as that made at the beginning of this article. The REFLECTOR does not wish to be extreme or unjust, but it is our opinion that a man who is a villain and the enemy of his race before election is equally as detestable and dangerous afterwards, and should receive the same kind of treatment at all times. Think of these things calmly and dispassionately, and see if there is not justice and right in what we say.

The Democracy of old Pitt county have covered themselves in glory.

Never before have the white men been more earnest, and never before were the lines more closely drawn. The result of yesterday's election--shows plainly what white men can do, and is convincing proof that the county is always safe in a square fight. The death knell of Republicanism has been rung, and those men who have for so long lived on public pay will retire to private life and give place to men who are representatives of the people.

The entire Democratic ticket carries Pitt county by majorities ranging from 140 to over 200. More unbusiness was felt over the election of D. H. James, candidate for Register of Deeds, but the last doubt concerning him is dispelled. Every township has been heard from, and while our figures may not be exactly accurate, they will be changed very little by the corrected returns.

We give the majorities for James and Wilson by townships, and as the great majority that James' opponents can make themselves satisfied over the result.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 2nd, 1888

The President by his prompt and coronations action in dismissing

Lord Sackville, the British minister has turned his meddling letter, upon which the republican managers hung their last hopes into a boomerang that in its recoil will knock the republican party out of existence. It is only another striking example of the manner in which the wicked fall that the pits they have prepared for others. When the republican party, through its managers entered into a conspiracy with the British minister to write a letter endorsing the candidacy of Mr.

Cleveland, they imagined that they had concocted a scheme which would give Blaine--I beg pardon; Harrison--the entire Irish vote of the country, but they mistook the mistake the man they had, to deal with. As soon as Mr. Cleveland ascertain that the letter was genuine, he instructed Secretary Bayard to inform the British Minister that he could go. And at the same time the English government was informed that the United States had dismissed Lord Sackville, and would no longer recognize him as the representative of that government.

By this action Mr. Cleveland has made thousands of friends even among republicans, for Lord Sackville's letter was an insult to every American citizen, republican as well as democrat, and if any doubt had remained of his election, his sturdy and uncompromising Americanism in this matter would have instantly removed it.

It is a rather singular thing

Many of our people did not know there was to be an illumination last Thursday while the torch light procession was going on, and but few houses were illuminated. The residences of Mr. M. R. Lang and Mrs.
A. Arnheim were beautifully illuminated, and the latter was gorgeously decorated with bunting flags and Japanese lanterns. There were several other buildings with illuminations.

One of the enthusiastic Democrats of this township came here last Thursday morning with the avowed determination of registering and going back home immediately. The vast crowd present and the honors paid to Judge Fowle so fired his patriotic heart that he stayed in Greenville all day long, and finally went home forgetting entirely the one mission that had brought him to town. Monday morning he came here before sunrise and did not leave until he had registered. Of course it is not necessary for us to say that this man performed his whole duty yesterday and voted the entire Democratically ticket.

A Letter from two old Friends.

GREENVILLE, Nov. 1st, 1888

DEAR DAVID:—We have noticed of late that one of your editorial brethren has been showing a disposition to make the most bitter and uncalled for attacks on the REFLEC-TOR whenever an opportunity offers, and in a recent issue we saw that he located that mythical personage the "campaign liar" in your office.
Now of course no one could be expected to believe what he had to say in regard to your paper unless some proof were offered to substantiate his statements and his attempts at proof have thus far shown up as disastrous failures. He is, of course, left in something of a predicament, unless it is shown by some one that this person that has never existed, the campaign liar, has now, or has had the REFLECTOR office for his abiding place. Now David we know full well that with your kindness of heart you cannot see, one of the fran-ternity in such a scrape without being willing to lend all possible aid to any scheme that might be suggested for his assistance. So we have been searching amid the vaults of memory to see if we could not find some one who had at some time in some way been connected with the REFLECTOR office who would in some measure answer to the requirements of this personage whom it is so necessary for your contemporary to produce. Our search has been successful. Even as we write there rises before us the image of a friend who in bygone days was wont to exclaim: "Among newspaper men truth must be a secundary consideration," and as we remember how readily we seconded that proposition both by word and deed, it seems to us that perhaps the two of us together may answer for a scape goat, and while it is true that the minds that conceived and the hands that penned those colossal yarns that we want to impose on a confiding public, have long since engaged in other and hope better pursuits, and while we also hope that the spirits which prompted these conceptions have departed from us still we would recall those spirits to night just long enough to write a faint justification to the position of "Campaign Liar" in favor of your esteemed contemporary.

The "Campaign Liar's" Farewell.

Farewell to thee, David, our toils are ended, Our usefulness past and our labors are over.
The bows of imagery that so often we've bended, Must bend, alas, to our touches no more.
Our day has gone by, and nothing is left us, Save memory's taper and that has burnt out.
Of dearly bought fame hath arisen benefit
us,
And said to thee, David, thy liars must go.

And perhaps it is best, we should formally sever, Each farewell has bound us to thine and to thee,
And yield up to him our title forever Whose hands may be tied but whose tongue still seems free.

'Tis hard to turn back when the gleamings of glory Have faded from the future to dazzle the eye;
But our rival, in language all lurid and gory, Demands and so we must bid you good bye.

Goodbye to the hopes that long we have cherished, Goodbye to the pleasures that once might have been,
Goodbye to the dreams of a fame that has perished, Goodbye to the paper, goodbye to the pen.
