Gov. Jarvis's Speech.

Below we publish the speech of ex-Gov. Jarvis, delivered at the laying of the corner stone of Trinity College, at Durham, on Tuesday 11th inst., as taken from the Raleigh Chronicle.

Gov. Jarvis said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: We are engaged to-day in laying the corner stone upon which is to be erected great and costly buildings of brick and granite. The materials out of which these buildings are to be constructed are durable and lasting, and it may reasonably be expected that many generations yet unborn will occupy them and revere the name of the men who designed and erected them. Yet there will come a time when these must decay and pass away. They are of earth earthly and cannot exist perpetually. Fashion and decay and secure them as we may, the hand of time will surely tear them down and obliterate the very foundations upon which they stand. But the good works which shall be done in them will live on and on till time shall be no more, and eternity shall reward those who have acted well their part in this grand effort for the uplifting of the young men who have been made better by reason of the existence and noble work of Trinity College. Craven and Crowell and Carr and Duke and hosts of others who have generously contributed, in one way and another, to this noble cause have put in motion forces whose influences shall live and grow and multiply and bear rich fruit long after these buildings have crumbled to dust and others have arisen upon their ruins.

I would not undervalue the work of the architect who designs, nor that of the laborer who constructs the splendid buildings which will, in due time, adorn these hills and in which a great work is to be done. From forest and field and quarry crude, unsightly material will be gathered which skill and labor will convert into magnificent buildings, faultless in appearance and perfect in appointments. Thousands of our countrymen passing to and fro will admire them, and multitudes will annually gather about them, but after all, prize them as we may, they are inanimate, lifeless things without power, in themselves, to go or harm. Such of necessity is the work of the architect and the artisan. They build houses.

Not so with the men who are to occupy these buildings as professors and instructors. It will be theirs to deal with mind—to make character. From country and city, from village and hamlet, from the palace and the cottage will come youth in its various types to be instructed and led into the paths of useful manhood. The indolent must be stimulated, the reckless restrained and the ambitious guided. How difficult the task! How precious the result! See these untutored youth grow under the tutelage of their Christian instructors into the trained thinker, the ripe scholar, the useful citizen, the Christian gentleman. And then see these go out into the world to do the same good work for others whose influence will be felt by those who may live in the far off future. Who can fix a standard by which the lives of such men are to be valued? We give due, served praise to the great Architects, Sculptors and Painters and we often record their names among the renowned men of their age. They simply give form and beauty to material things. How much more than should we honor and revere those who devote their time and talents to giving form and beauty to the lives of their fellow men by which humanity is elevated, society purified and the world made better. Noble army of teachers! They are the salt of the earth. The service they render the State and society is beyond human conception. Their good deeds form a golden chain which is endless in life and which will link them to the reward of the life to come. To me it is a source of infinite pleasure to know that they are appreciated and esteemed and loved and honored by our people as never before. May the time come when they shall be our most beloved and honored citizens.

Among the great educators of the past, Braxton Craven stood in the front rank. It was under his guiding hand that Trinity College rose from the humble little log cabin school to a high rank among our educational institutions. He gave to it all that a great brain and a warm heart could bestow, and when he laid down his life work a Crowell was found to take it up. Did time permit it would give me pleasure to speak of the noble professors and instructors who stood by the brave Craven in his heroic efforts to make Trinity a College worthy of his denomination and of his State. Some of them worked upon meager, half-paid salaries rather than desert this struggling institution when they might have been better paid by going elsewhere. The College had its dark days before and after the death of Craven cast a gloom over its prospects, but in all these days of trial, generous friends, with patriotic hearts and noble purposes, came to its rescue, and, at no little costs to themselves, lifted it out of the grave of desolation which it had reached. The story of these days and the names and the deeds of these good men will always interest the friends of Trinity and will always form an important part of its history. But I must forbear to repeat this story to day, lest for want of full information I might omit the name of some one who should be gratefully remembered.

The Trinity of old Randolph has done a noble work notwithstanding its youth and its embarrassments. Scores and hundreds of trained young men of well-formed Christian characters have gone out from its halls to elevate humanity, to bless society and to fill important positions in church and State. But a feeling has grown up among its friends that the sphere of usefulness might be greatly enlarged by its removal to a more accessible locality. In obedience to this feeling, which grew and increased as the matter was discussed, the necessary orders have been given for its removal and we are here to day, with loyal hearts and loving hands, to transplant our cherished institution into this progressive community and to dedicate anew our sacred honor to its support and maintenance. And need I appeal to our Durham friends to be faithful to the institution in its maturer years which our Randolph friends nourished so tenderly and devotedly in its infancy. I am sure not. They have already given the most substantial assurances of what we may expect of them. Nor need I appeal to those who opposed this removal to join us in expanding and extending the influence which their own beloved Craven put in motion up in the hills of old Randolph. Whatever may have been their feelings and opinions before the removal, they are decided upon to give aid and devotion to the College will follow it and uphold it in its new home as loyally as in its old; and I think I risk nothing in saying that its accomplished President and his able faculty will have the cordial, united support of the Methodists of North Carolina anywhere.

But, my friends, we all know that suitable buildings and apparatus and money to pay teachers are necessary parts of a successful educational work, and that the men who supply these requisites are worthy coadjutors of the presidents, professors and teachers of our schools. Hence, in the very beginning of this movement, I linked the Dukes and the Carrs with the Cravens and the Crowells in the good and far reaching influences of Trinity College. And was I not right? How can schools be kept without suitable houses in which to keep them? How can teachers be employed unless they be paid? The rich have their responsibilities for the manners and the destinies of the poor. If men of fortune withhold their means from all enterprises for the education and elevation of the poor, they are assisting to perpetuate the cruel slavery of ignorance. If they contribute of their means to these noble causes they are assisting in breaking these galling shackles, in carrying light into the dark places, in lighting up their fellow men and bestowing blessings upon their country. To build the school house is only second to building the church. To pay the teacher is only second to paying the preacher. In fact the school house and the church, the teacher and the preacher, flourish best together. The one moves slowly, the other more rapidly. Our Baptist friends well understand this, and with commendable zeal and wisdom, they have secured for Wake Forest an endowment which has greatly increased and extended its field of usefulness. In consequence of these generous gifts to the sacred cause of education Wake Forest is enabled to send out an increased number of trained young men to lift up humanity and to become a blessing to the world. What Christian of patriot does not rejoice over the great work done for the cause of education and religion by that progressive Christian denomination in our State in the last few years. What they have done for Wake Forest we may do for Trinity if we will only be as united, as active and as zealous as they have been. And I come to-day to appeal to our Methodist friends throughout the State to forget section and locality, to forget the divisions and bickerings of the past, if any ever existed, and to gather around their college with a purpose to make it a great institution. We ought to have in North Carolina one great college. Let us make it here. It may have and should have its branches and feeders scattered about over the State, but these should be helps and not hindrances in putting Trinity in the forefront of our educational institutions. Let us urge upon our people in every county, city and town the duty and the privilege of giving something to the endowment of the college which we trust and believe is now beginning to take on new life. The rich should give bountifully and the less favored according to their means, but all should give something. No man should hesitate because his gift is small. Great rivers are made up of multitude of little streams. So a great endowment may be made up of a multitude of little donations. I ask for no impossible thing. I suggest no very difficult task. It is within the power of the Methodists of North Carolina to richly endow this college. It only requires a UNITED, DETERMINED, CONTINUED EFFORT. And I tell them their college can never rise to the full height of a great institution until it is endowed. The sooner we recognize this and set systematically about the accomplishment of the work, the sooner our denomination will have a college to which we can point with commendable pride and which shall stimulate to greater activity, the entire educational work of the State. I have addressed this appeal especially to the Methodists because to us it is a great college. If it shall be forced to close out of existence it is THEIR shame, as I hope it may, till it shall stand forth, here in the centre of the State, as a great educational light, it will be their glory. And yet I would not be understood as not asking help from others. We will be glad to have the sympathies, the good wishes, the kind words and the donations of all computation. Then let us in regard to sect or creed. The good of the College may do will be felt by all and we hope it may have the good will of all. And why should it not? It stands for North Carolina. While we will be glad to welcome students from other States, yet we build it and endow it chiefly for North Carolina boys, and those who aid it in the endowment are aiding in the education of their own citizens. And who can compute the good he is doing in the world when he gives to the endowment of colleges in which learn of religion are taught, and men are better fitted for the duties of life. Through the instrumentality of this endowment many a poor boy is lifted out of the sloughs of ignorance and superstition into the light and life of an educated, refined citizen, who, in turn devotes his life to elevating his fellow men; and thus the good influence set in motion by the gift of a few dollars goes on ever widening and increasing till they pass beyond the power of human computation. Then let us give and continue to give until we build and endow a college whose facilities and resources shall be equal to every demand which may be made upon it, and the men who contribute to this noble cause will assist in putting in motion forces which shall work for God and humanity long after this corner-stone which we plant to-day shall have crumbled into dust and scattered to the four winds of heaven.

We are bringing Trinity much nearer to our State University, geographically speaking, and I rejoice that we bring nearer to that honored institution in sympathy and in earnest co-operation in the advancement of the general educational work of the State. There is an abundance of room for both of these institutions and I beg that there shall be no bickerings between them. There is a great work for each to do and when each has rendered the best possible service to the State there will remain much still to be done. I repeat, there must not be any friction between them and I appeal to the friends of these two institutions and to those of other institutions of learning in the State to see to it that no jealousies shall rise up among any of them. I urge this because of my earnest desire to see the University, the colleges, the high schools and the common schools work together in perfect harmony and accord for the conquest of ignorance, the education of the people and the glory of the State.

In erecting these buildings we begin at the foundation and work upwards. If we wish to rear them down we would begin at the top and go downward. So in building up a permanent, healthy, stable, progressive educational system, we must begin in the common schools and make them sufficient for their work and then wish this firm foundation it is easy to build up high schools, colleges and universities. Hence, I argue that the presidents and professors of our universities and our colleges and academies should be the earnest advocates and steadfast friends of our common schools. On the other hand I wish to say to the friends of the common schools who are disposed to ignore the university and the colleges, that they cannot find a more ready way of injuring the common schools than by tearing down the heads of our educational system. I therefore insist that the friends of our common schools should be active in their support of the university and the colleges of the State. The best results will be obtained when all work together. I have thought these general reflections upon our educational work in the State not inappropriate to this occasion, and I trust they may have the thoughtful attention of those who hear them.

We are now closing a year of unusual abundance. In less than sixty days we will have entered upon a new year with its duties, its responsibilities and its possibilities. It will be the beginning of the last decade of a century of great activities and magnificent achievements. I hope to see the people of North Carolina signalize that year by the general advancement along all the lines of education work, and I trust our General Assembly will lead that advance by increasing the funds dedicated to our common schools. We must do more for the sacred cause of education than we are doing. North Carolina does not stand ahead of her neighbors in this noble work according to the census reports which will soon be published to the world. Let's put her there before the close of the next decade. We can do it if we will.

Denounced by Blaine.

Secretary Blaine Denounces the Idiotry of the McKinley Bill—Harrison's Smallest Trick Exposed.

Special to Atlanta Constitution, WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Saturday morning's Post prints a highly sensational interview with Speaker Blackburn, in which the distinguished Kentuckian gives a graphic account of Secretary Blaine's denouncement of the McKinley bill before the senate finance committee last July.

According to Senator Blackburn, the scene was every bit as exciting as when, on a memorable occasion, he (Blackburn) took a New Hampshire Bill by the ear and banged him about a senate committee room. Senator Blackburn says Secretary Blaine appeared before the committee, accompanied by William Eloy Curtis, and a bright, brand new silk hat. He appeared to be in a good humor until Blackburn asked him his opinion of the McKinley bill, which had just passed the House. This was the signal for the outburst.

The Secretary colored up in an instant and said:

"This bill is an infamy and an outrage. It is the most shameful measure ever proposed to a civilized people. Go on with it, and it will carry our party to perdition."

Senator Blackburn said he suggested that it would be a good thing for the country if Mr. Blaine was in the Senate, so that the opponents of the measure might have the benefit of his assistance.

"I wish I were," was the Secretary's reply. "If so, I would stamp it under my feet and spit on it."

Then advancing towards Senators Allison and Hale, he snapped his fingers under their noses, and with rising inflection, said:

"Go on with your driving idiotcy, and see to what destruction it will lead the Republican party. Pass this bill, and in 1892 there will not be a man in the party so biggared as to accept your nomination for the Presidency."

Mr. Blaine then proceeded to dissect the bill in a merciless manner, and when informed of the sugar bounty clause, which had been added, said:

"It isn't true."

Being assured that Senators Morrill and Edmunds had secured such an amendment, Mr. Blaine said:

"It is a good sample of the breadth of their statesmanship."

"And then," says Senator Blackburn, "the climax came. The Secretary's next behavior was in earnest. With a sudden blow he brought his clenched hand down on it with such force as to smash it flatter than a pancake, and then, seizing the battered chapeau, he buried it against the wall violently. I never saw such an ebullition, but it only emphasized the deep earnestness of the Secretary."

Blackburn's interview is confirmed by friends of Senators Allison and Hale who told in confidence the episode at the time it happened.

"It is said Mr. Blaine's greatest regret is that he allowed President Harrison to coax him into taking the stump for McKinley and Quay. The administration has pulled it together, and to-day Mrs. Maria Watkins, a soldier's widow, who is employed at one of the delivery windows of the city postoffice, was made to feel the power of Harrison, Wananaker and Quay's vengeance. Dick Quay, son of his dignified and quiet father, called at the post-office for his parent's mail. Mrs. Watkins carried the clerk's, to inquire as to its whereabouts, and one of them more mischievous, a Democrat who had been reading the Pennsylvania election returns, said: "The Senator's mail now goes to the dead letter office."

Taking the remark in earnest, Mrs. Watkins imparted the information to young Dick. The latter rushed off to Postmaster-General Wananaker's office, and in a short time Postmaster Sherwood received an order from Bion John to suspend the woman, and it was promptly complied with. The woman was perfectly innocent, and she desired to offer insult, and Superintendent Devisery Bell, who made the remark, came manfully to the front and exonerated her, but Wananaker's order went into effect, and the widow of a union veteran was summarily suspended. This is regarded as about the smallest trick of this small and hypocritical administration.

The Prosperous South.

The Wonderful Activity Continues to Speed, Despite Wall Street's Flurry.

The Manufacturers' Record of November 15th, says: The excitement in Wall street, if long continued, would necessarily have an injurious influence upon all lines of business in all sections of the country, but as trade and manufacturing interest everywhere are prosperous, it is not probable that the stock jobbing operations of New York will have more than a temporary effect upon general business.

Under any circumstances, though, the South is in a better position to stand even a panic than any other section. It has gathered big crops that will aggregate in value for the year nearly $1,000,000,000, and its cotton alone, including the seed, counting up this year between $450,000,000 and $500,000,000, every dollar of which it will draw from the North and Europe. Its farmers are practically out of debt, and many of them have good surplus; its manufacturing interests are prosperous, and its railroads are crowded with freight traffic. The whole South is advancing rapidly, and if dependent upon its own financial resources could stand the strain far better than the West. But the enormous shrinkage in stock values in Wall Street will tend to drive money from that center of wild speculation to safer investments in Southern development and manufacturing interests.

The decline in 23 stocks on the New York Exchange since November 1st, represents a wiping out of $100,000,000, and the people who have seen fortunes swept away like this will prefer to put their money elsewhere in the future. The daily accumulation of wealth in the United States is enormous, and it must find a field of investment somewhere. Driven from Wall Street speculations, and no longer finding any profitable openings in the West as in former years, it must inevitably turn to the South.

Thus, instead of Wall Street's flurry injuring the South, it will help to give it a still larger volume of money this year. The past week shows continued activity in the organization of industrial enterprises and of town-building companies. Salem, Va., leads off with an appropriation of $500,000 in cash to secure the establishment there of a rolling mill, cotton mill, car works and other enterprises; in Buena Vista a $1,000,000 company has been organized to build basic steel works, and three improvement and building companies with an aggregate capital of $300,000 have been started in the same place; Glasgow has organized a $100,000 car work company; Norfolk, three land improvement companies with a capital of $700,000; Wheeling, W. Va., is to have new steel works; at Vicksburg, Miss., a $600,000 phosphate company has been chartered, and at Aberdeen, in the same State, a $50,000 machine shop company; at Algiers, La., a $75,000 brewery will be built; Bessemer, Ala., has organized a $100,000 pipe manufacturing company; Baltimore, a $200,000 car company; Bartow, Fla., a $50,000 manufacturing company; Blacksburg, S. C., a $40,000 stove foundry; Rusk, Texas, a $500,000 company to build an iron furnace, and Rogers, Ark., a $40,000 ice factory. These enterprises, scattered all over the South, show how widespread is the activity that is seen from Maryland to Texas. Without any fictitious speculation or wild booming the South is steadily pressing forward, building new towns, new railroads, new factories and furnaces, and everywhere shows evidence of activity and prosperity.

Charlotte Chronicle.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Stinson of Crab Orchard have a little child about two years old, who went to sleep last Tuesday night and up to last Saturday night all attempts to wake it had proved without effect. It seemed to be well, its breathing being perfectly regular, but several doctors tried in vain to arouse it out of its heavy sleep or stupor.

Sanford Express.—An amusing incident occurred in court at Carthage on Monday. Rev. Mr. Furmy, a Baptist minister, was on the witness stand and his manner of testifying was so animated and demonstrative that Judge Graves thought he was drunk. The judge asked the sheriff if the witness was drunk, whereupon Mr. M. Robins informed the judge that the witness was a minister of the gospel, and his style on the witness stand was his usual style. Judge Graves apologized to the frightened clergyman in admirable style.

Washington Progress.—Mr. Stephen Corson a Republican of this town was up Saturday last for circulating libelous circulars in regard to some of the Democratic candidates and some of its citizens just before the election. He was bound over to court under a $200 bond. Invitations are out for the marriage of Mr. J. H. Kugler and Miss Mary Ritch on the 25th inst. Mr. Kugler is a lumber dealer of the firm of Geo. W. Kugler & Son, of Philadelphia, and Miss Ritch is the niece of Mr. Ed. Long of our town.

Goldsboro Argus.—While out on hunting with a neighbor Saturday night Mr. James Hood, son of Mr. Solomon Hood, of this county, met with what, ere this, has probably proved a fatal accident. The dogs had "treed," and while the tree, which he and his friend had cut down, was falling James held back the dogs to keep them from getting hurt. But in the darkness he did not get to a sufficiently safe distance, and a limb of the falling tree struck him on the head breaking his skull and prostrating him senseless. When last heard from he was not expected to live.

OVER THE STATE.

Happenings of Interest Occurring in North Carolina.

AS REFLECTED FROM OUR EXCHANGES

Leatham's majority over Newborn is 1220.

Bishop Watson and wife have sailed from Glasgow, Scotland. They hope to reach Wilmington in a few days.

Wilson Advance.—The gin house of Mr. George Lane, in Wayne county, was destroyed by fire last Friday night. About fifty bales of cotton were destroyed.

Weldon News.—Near Garysburg Thursday morning about 4 o'clock the gin house and contents, belonging to Messrs. J. W. and N. Grant was burned. The origin of the fire is unknown. Loss about $1,200; insurance $600.

Burlington [Company Shops] News.—We learn that one night last week a colored man on the train was cursing in the presence of ladies, and when spoken to by a gentleman, he deliberately spit on him, whereupon said gentleman knocked him down and pummeled the life nearly out of him with a chunk of coal.

Durham Globe.—The W. Duke, Sons & Co's cigarette manufactory last month made in Durham, and sold throughout the world, 71,000,000 cigarettes. The New York house of this company has not reported, but it is thought that the output will reach a hundred million. And how is this for a Durham institution? It beats the world.

New York Letter.

IRELAND'S ENVOYS—THE KING OF THE COWBOYS—ARRIVAL OF STANLEY.

New York, Nov. 14th, 1890. A large and distinguished delegation of Irish leaders arrived in this city last week and are preparing to make a tour of the country in the interest of Ireland and Home Rule. They have come to address the American people as the representatives of the Irish people, and explain the thoughts and aspiration of the latter in their struggle with the Tory Government. The funds which they hope to collect in this country are not, as might be supposed, to relieve the impending Irish famine, but may be used for that purpose if found necessary. The delegation has received a hearty welcome from our citizens and will be given a grand public reception at the Metropolitan Opera House to-night. From here they will proceed to Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, and other large cities after which they will separate and speak in different sections of the country until New Year's.

The delegation consist of O'Brien and Dillon who escaped from Ireland during their trial for intimidation, together with Sullivan Harrington, O'Connor and Gill, all members of Parliament.

BUFFALO BILL'S INDIANS. An athletic looking man, over six feet in height, wearing long hair, a fur-lined overcoat and an immense somber, arrived in town last week and immediately created a sensation. However, he was not Buffalo Bill, as most people thought, but "Buck" Taylor king of the cowboys. He has been travelling with Buffalo Bill's Wild West show, for several years and, having made a snug sum of money, has concluded to retire. He will not start a show of his own, but will probably embark in some other business. He says that the stories about the ill treatment of Indians by Buffalo Bill are false. The Indians will soon arrive here and will be sent home to their reservations. The Wild West show is laid up in Strasburg for the winter and Buffalo Bill will probably engage a new force of Indians in the spring.

LIGHTING UP AFRICA. Henry M. Stanley, the explorer, has arrived, and is renewing his old acquaintances, besides preparing for a lecture tour of the country. He has made a very full reply to the charges against him concerning the death of his lieutenant, Major Barttelot, and claims that the latter met his death fate deservedly. He accuses Barttelot of atrocious cruelty, and the other officers of the rear guard, he says, were selfish irreligious, and cowardly. Many men under Barttelot, were flogged to death and over a hundred of them died of starvation in one place when they might have been saved. Barttelot was of a most violent temper, and was shot dead by a native chief whose wife he was beating and kicking for disobedience. Stanley says that half the horrible truth has not been told, and that he has sufficient evidence to vindicate him in a legal suit. With charges and counter-charges like these we may well ask, do the natives of Africa really need such civilization.

Poetry.

AS YOU GO THROUGH LIFE. ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Don't look for the flaws as you go thro' life
And even when you find them,
It is wise to be somewhat blind
And look for the virtue behind them.
For the cloudiest light has a hint of light
Somewhere in its shadowy hiding:
It is better by far to hunt for a star,
Than the spots on the sun abiding.

The current of life runs ever away
To the bosom of God's great ocean,
Don't set your force 'gainst the river's course
And think to alter its motion.
Don't waste a curse on the universe—
Remember, it lived before you.
Don't butt at the storm with your puny hand—
But bend and let it go o'er you.
The world will never adjust itself
To suit your whims to the letter.
Some things must go wrong our whole life long
And the sooner you know it the better
It is folly to fight with the Infinite,
And go under at last in the wrestle.
The wisest man shapes into God's plan
As the water shapes into a vessel.

There Should Be Unity

Mr. Josephus Daniels, the well-balanced editor of the State Chronicle, in speaking editorially of the great day at Durham when the corner stone of Trinity College was laid, and the excellent speech of Gov. Jarvis upon the occasion (this speech is published in full in the REFLECTOR to day) and many other good things in connection therewith by way of urging the people to unite and make this one of the great institutions of our State, says the following:

But this day has a significance wider and broader and larger than any denominational movement, great as that is, could possibly have. It witnesses an advance movement in higher education and thus has interest, deep and genuine, if not personal, for every patriotic North Carolinian whether Methodist or Baptist, Greek or Jew. Education is higher and broader than any church. Indeed while denominational colleges are among the great agencies in making strong men, Education cannot be denominational. There is no such thing as Methodist Latin or Baptist Mathematics or Presbyterian Greek. The mastery of these studies has nothing to do with religious denominations.

The REFLECTOR is glad he uttered these words. They are sound patriotic through and through, and the expression of such sentiment will be productive of good. We have for sometime entertained thoughts along this line, yet the circumstances being just as they are, have hesitated in expressing them through fear that our meaning would be misconstrued. And even now we fear there are some who will be ready to impugn our motives.

It is unfortunate that there exists in Greenville, to a greater or less degree, a spirit very different from that set forth by the Chronicle, and wherever manifested it operates against the material progress and prosperity of the town. This is true whenever from prejudice or personal feeling a man withholds his influence from any movement inaugurated for the advancement of the community. The man who is at heart interested in the welfare of his town will not oppose any enterprise because it happened not to be started in accordance with his individual ideas, but will lay aside all personal feeling in the matter and lend his undivided support to whatever has for its aim the material upbuilding of his community.

The schools of Greenville have suffered along this line, because of certain prejudicial feelings, when there should be a united effort on the part of the citizens to make them second to no preparatory schools in the State. Our schools are an advertisement of the town, they attract interest from far and near and are great factors in material development. They should be fostered and encouraged, for whoever helps the schools of a town is furthering his own interests at the same time.

The Scotland Neck Democrat is six years old. Bro. Hilliard is doing splendid work with his paper and every issue of it strongly advocates the Roanoke section. His editorials are always interesting and filled with deep thought.

The Baptist State Convention held an unusually interesting session at Shelby last week. Col. L. L. Polk was re-elected President of the Convention. The next annual session will be held in Raleigh.

The East Should Awake

The educational progress of North Carolina for the last decade has been very satisfactorily viewed as a whole, but viewed with regard to sections, the eastern counties have fallen far behind the western. Perhaps one explanation of this is that the effects of bad crops for the last few years have not been so sorely felt in the west as in the east, and the people have not been in such stringent circumstances. But we think a far greater reason is the indifference of our eastern people in the matter of education. From a careful review of the catalogues of our Colleges and University it will be seen that the eastern counties of Carolina do not keep pace with the western in the number of students. While this is the case with regard to the University and the three leading Colleges of our State, there are several other Colleges of lower grade which draw their patronage almost exclusively from the western counties. The academics of the west are not only more numerous, but they also receive a much larger patronage. In Davie county for instance, which is not more than one fourth as large as Pitt county, and with not more than one fourth the population, there are six well built academies, each of which receives a good patronage. In addition to these six in the county there are three others in adjoining counties not more than a mile from the Davie line which also draw patronage from the county, thus making nine schools, which are kept open the full school year and each within the reach of the people of Davie.

How many good school buildings are there in Pitt county? Not more than four or five that we know of. What a difference! Pitt with an area and population four times as great as Davie, and we will add with more wealth in proportion to its population, has fewer schools, and these schools a smaller patronage than those of Davie. Davie is not ahead of the other western counties, nor do we believe that Pitt is behind the other eastern counties. We merely take these two as an illustration because we know more of their educational progress than we do of others.

Go to most any of the larger towns of West North Carolina, and among the prominent buildings you will see the school buildings. Wherever the population is large enough they have a well regulated Graded School, and where the population is not sufficient they have good academies, and they unite and support these academies and are not divided into a half dozen or more schools like we are in the east, when one mixed school or two, one male and one female, are enough for the place. And these schools are not confined to the towns, but you will find them scattered through the country in almost every village, hamlet, and neighborhood. The people take pride in them, and give them a liberal patronage, and keep them open at least eight months, and the most of them ten months during the year. One other matter they use to advantage, which we do not in the east, and that is the public school funds in the districts in which these academies are situated. During a certain number of months the teachers are paid out of the public school money, and after the public school is over each student has the opportunity of pursuing his studies right on through the year, while here in the east the public school not being more than two or three months, and not followed by any private school, what little the student learns in public school, he will forget before it opens again. The people of the west seem to have gotten hold of the true theory that it is better to be united and have good schools than to be divided and have no schools and let their children grow up in ignorance.

As a North Carolinian we take great pride in the intellectual growth of our State, and we earnestly desire to see the day when the east shall take its stand beside the west in educational as well as in other matters, and march on to the great development to which we believe our State is destined. We see no good excuse for this intellectual lethargy among our people. Our fields are as productive, and our resources are as good as those of the west. While they may have the advantage of us in some things, we have the advantage in others. It is time our people were waking up to the importance of more and better education.

The REFLECTOR is authorized to announce Mr. H. A. Latham, editor of the Washington Gazette, as candidate for re-election to the position of Reading Clerk in the next House of Representatives. Mr. Latham served faithfully and creditably in this capacity at the session of the Legislature of 1899, and we would be glad to see him again elected.

For this reason we again invite the people to call and examine our stock. We have but—

ONE PRICE! ONE PRICE!

SEEING IS BELIEVING!

For this reason we again invite the people to call and examine our stock. We have but—that is marked in plain figures on every article in our store. We only ask you to examine our goods and compare our prices with those of others. We are willing to leave the result to your good judgment. We have no shoddy second-hand goods. (If we had we should be more than glad to sell you at any price to get them out of our house.) But we have a full, new, clean stock of—which we will sell you so cheap you will see at a glance it will not pay you to buy second-hand goods.

Our goods were—

BOUGHT FOR CASH! BOUGHT FOR CASH!

after the rush was over. We were therefore able to pick up a great many—

"JOB LOTS," "JOB LOTS,"

which we bought at a sacrifice to the manufacturer, and from 10 to 20 per cent. cheaper than some of our competitors. We are willing to give you the benefit of this. Besides—our goods are—

Marked Down at Least Ten Per Cent. Less Than

they are usually sold. We therefore guaranteed to save you 20 per cent. in every dollar's worth of goods you buy from us. It will cost you nothing to come and look. This is all we ask you to do.

Very truly yours,

YOUNG & PRIDDY.

The N. C. Conference of the M. E. Church will meet in Wilson December 10th. The Advance will be issued as a daily during the Conference and mailed to subscribers at 25 cents for the week.

It is a pleasure to see that Mr. T. B. Eldridge is back into editorial harness again. Since retiring from the Durham Globe he has gone to Madison and revived the Leader at that place. He is a good all around editor and sends out an excellent paper. We wish him all the success he desires.

Matters in commercial centres North were decidedly shaky and unsettled last week because of several failures in Wall street. And the excitement was raised to a much higher tension on Saturday by the announcement that the great banking house of Baring Bros., London, was embarrassed. New York was thrown into such a panic because of this that stocks declined to the lowest price on record.

The New York Tribune, one of the leading Republican papers, says the Democrats have the earth and two years to bury themselves in it. Well, if it takes them two years they will hold out longer than the Republicans. Less than a year ago, when they met in Congress, what little of the earth they did not have they tried to steal from honestly elected Congressmen of the South and from Senators of Montana, so they were not given an opportunity to bury themselves, but the people buried them on November 4th.

We believe the Republican party is dead, although it says it is not and the leaders say it can be resurrected. Its situation reminds us very much of the sick man who was crossing the sea. A negro servant came up to him and tried to throw him overboard. While he was struggling and begging for his life the captain came along and asked the negro what he was doing. "I am trying to throw this dead man overboard," said the negro. "But he is not dead," said the captain, "don't you hear him begging you and telling you he is not dead?" "Yes sir, boss, I hears him. But he is such a liar nobody believes anything he says."

Time to Change. Business men of Greenville are still so engrossed in their individual interests as to be giving no heed to the early establishment of tobacco warehouses or factories of any kind. And still our tobacco is being carried off to enrich other towns with no organized effort to prevent it. The time has come that Greenville should be awaking to a full appreciation of the advantage and opportunities surrounding her.

Grimesland Sparks. As this is the first time we have had space in your paper we will leave you for another time. Cotton continues to come in, but the farmer wears a long face when you tell them the price. Goods up and cotton down. Poor encouragement to the farmer. Mr. C. W. Venters brought Messrs. J. O. Proctor & Bro. a pumpkin that measured 5 1/2 feet around one way and 4-6 the other, and weighs 80 pounds. The friends of Miss Bessie Wilson were glad to see her home on last Friday evening. Her charming little school-mate Miss Annie Johnson accompanied her home. The Grimesland school taught by Miss Bettie Johnson closed on last Friday evening and Miss Bettie leaves us. We hate to see her go, for we know some of the boys will have a sad heart. [The laws are so stringent against anything appearing in newspapers about games of chance that we have to omit what our correspondent said about guessing the number of seed in the pumpkin.—Ed.] H. D. M.

Marlboro Shells. We were shown a curiosity the other day by Marcellus Cotton, a colored farmer of this place. It was a hill of potatoes which had five potatoes in it, three of which were a deep red color—the variety known as Cuba yam—and the other two were white, the variety known as Bahamas. This goes to prove that potatoes planted together will mix.

There is quite a diversity of opinion among our farmers as to which there is most money in, tobacco or cotton. Some say that the cost of cultivating tobacco is more than the profit, while others contend that tobacco can be raised with but very little more cost than cotton. We would advise them to plant some of both, and if one should fail the other may not. The Free Will Conference, which was held at Rock of Zion this year, appointed Eld. J. T. Phillips, of this township, Evangelist or Home Missionary for the year 1891. He will rent out his farm and move to Farmville, as that point will be more convenient to his work. Eld. Phillips is a young man of promise and influence, and is full of energy. We feel sure there could not have been a better selection and wish him much success in his grand and noble work. CHARLEY.

We wish to say to our customers everywhere that we have the largest and best selected stock that it has ever been our pleasure to place before you. And beg of you that you will inspect our stock and compare quality, quantity and prices given you anywhere else by any first class house. We realize that competition is the life of trade but we are fully abreast of the times and feel able to meet any competitor fairly and squarely. We give our customers the very best that can be bought for the MONEY invested in that article. We are with the people in their demands that they shall buy goods cheap. And we promise all who shall give us their patronage that they shall have them cheap. If you fail to get as good bargains, when you buy of some one else, as your neighbor gets who buys of us, you have only yourself to blame, because we have invited you time and again to come in and see us. Our invitation to all people is this: LEARN OF US, KNOW US, BUY OF US. With these three injunctions ringing fresh in your ears every week, we again ask you to come and examine the following lines of General Merchandise:
