Christmas.

Christmas is on hand again. To-morrow morning will usher in and heat of summer by the hope hundred years this principle was another day set apart and recognized by the national government as a holiday. It has been custo forgets the worry and fatigue of driven the people from its ranks, mary for centuries to celebrate the 25th day of December as the anthe store and counting room, be niversary of the birth of Christ cause his mind is constantly run-Since the day nearly nineteen hundred years ago, when the angels of God accompanied by a throng of heavenly hosts, announced to the shepherds in the fields of Judea the birth of the Savior of mankind, the human heart has turned joyfully and with fond anlooks joyously through all to the anticipation to that day as a day time when the last paper for the of all others of rest and enjoyment. But the day is not observed as it ought to be nor as we believe the Creator intended it should be. Instead of a day of thanksgiving and praise to God for his great love and kindness towards fallen man, it is turned by a great many into a day of revelry and dissipa tion. But we must recollect that human nature has always been, is, and always will be human nature, and we must not expect perfection. So let us all take it as a day of rest and enjoyment, for it is nothing but right that we should rejoice and be glad. Men of all professions after the worry, yexation and anxiety of a year need a season of rest free from all care. Our schools are closed for a whole week, and we hope the school chil dren will enjoy themselves. Indeed we feel sure that the average school boy will have his share of fun and frolic. After four months of study and worry over books of various kinds, let him, as well as others, have his rest. Let him take it and enjoy it, and return to his work with a light heart and a good conscience, determined to do a better year's work next year than the past. And the teachers, too, poor, patient creatures, need some rest. After their hard and unappreciated work, after the abuse,

People of all professions, of all sizes, of all ages, and of all colors seem to enjoy Christmas above all other times But above all whom enjoy Christmas the young children are the ones. Well do we remember the days of our boyhood, the coming of Santa Claus, how impatiently we awaited the coming of Chrisimas, and counted the weeks and days when each week seemed a month long and each day a week long. And when that final day came, the day above all others for us, well do we remember how early we would rise. No matter how well we loved to sleep ly, and without taking time to dress, hastened to the chimney corner to see what Santa Claus about with his merry face, tooting has done. his horn, and hailing his friends. "See what Old Sandy brought me," we almost wish we were a of you a prosperous new year, the num. fun of the happiest days of life.

And last but not least we must 1891. come in for our share of Christmas During the past year we and our printers have served our patrons faithfully, and now we propose to take a holiday. And next year we hope to still do faithful work for one and all. A peep at the Chistmas goods shows that there is enough in store for all who wish to have something nice, and no one needs to have a dull time Christmas. We hope that every body will join in with us in a season of rest and rejoicing. And now, kind readers the REFLECTOR wishes you each and every one a merry Christmas.

While the poeple of western North Carolina and Virginia were was two and a half feet deep, and while the wind was almost a blizzard, we were having a lot of fine ground that it would cause great damage to both the white man and the black Salem Sunday.
