A Populist in giving his reasons for quitting the Populist party and uniting with the Democrats, says: "We did not think so at the time, but when we first faced with the Republican party we sold our birth-right for a mess of pottage." True, every word of it, and the gentleman might have added the bad men in the movement got all the pottage, while the honest masses were left to scuffle about without relief of any sort. On the contrary, instead of "relief" they have greater burdens, an increase of offices and salaries, scandals and disturbances as their only share of the fusion. It was not holy, and all have suffered, except the pottage eaters.—Raleigh Post.

Agree with Dancy

The negro is making rapid strides in these days. From a slave to freedom. From a political inferior to social equality, these are easily, quickly passed, and now the infamous Dancy into marriage of the races is being discussed, and it is a measure meeting the full approval of the negroes.

A local instance of this took place the other day in a talk between a country man and a negro office holder of Craven.

The conversation turned upon the Rochester, N. Y., convention where John C. Dancy, colored, of Wilmington, N. C., was elected vice president, and where a resolution was passed favoring the abolition of the law prohibiting intermarriage of whites and blacks.

"I suppose you will be glad to see the marriage of whites and blacks," said the white man, in order to get the negro's views.

"Yes, I am in favor of the law, but it will be hard on the white men, for while we colored men can get white wives, it will not be so easy for white men to get good looking colored women. It would take a good white man to get such a fine looking colored woman as my wife is. Yes, I want to see this law enacted, but it will be hard on the white man."

Is any commentary necessary? Could the estimate of the character of the white race be placed in any lower, meaner or more common degree?

Truly the negro is setting a rapid pace, one which is leading to his destruction.—Newbern Journal.

Tobacco Sales Untaxed

The internal revenue department a few days ago issued an order directing a tax upon all sales of leaf tobacco in excess of one hundred dollars, the tax to be imposed upon all states made to the farmer of his sales and also to the buyer of the tobacco.

This tax was imposed under the provisions of the bill taxing the sales of produce made by exchanges and boards of trade, or similar places.

Mr. Swanson, member of Congress from Virginia, who is always alert to the interests of his constituents and in that respect different from the Congressman of the Eighth North Carolina district, went immediately to Washington to have the ruling reversed and appeared before the department. He insisted that the methods of selling tobacco in Danville, Winston and elsewhere did not make them exchanges or boards of trade. He was referred to Assistant Attorney General Boyd whose construction of the law had imposed the tax. Mr. Swanson insisted that the opinion of Boyd did not apply to such sales of tobacco. The commissioner told Mr. Swanson that if Boyd would render an opinion stating that such sales were not liable to the tax, he would revoke the order and not impose the tax. Swanson went immediately to Attorney General Boyd and discussed the matter fully with him. Mr. Boyd finally agreed with Mr. Swanson that the tobacco sold was not liable to tax and promised that if the matter was again referred to him he would so decide.

Mr. Swanson then addressed a letter to the commissioner stating all the facts and reasons that bear on the disposition of the tax.

This letter will be referred to Attorney General Boyd, who will render an opinion against the imposition of the tax and then the order will be issued by the department prohibiting the collection of the tax.

The whole matter will be settled in a few days to the complete satisfaction of the tobacco trade. This matter is one of very great interest to all warehousemen and equally so to all tobacco farmers for what redounds to the interests of the warehouses is a benefit to the farmers, for whatever taxes are paid finally come out of the farmers' pocket. Mr. Lanney, Pritchard and Holton to the contrary, notwithstanding.—Winston Journal.

The railway system in the United States employs 36,000 locomotives, 26,000 passenger cars and 8,000 mail and baggage cars. These figures seem large till the number of freight cars is stated, which is 1,250,000. A passenger train consisting of locomotive, ten cars, baggage and six passenger cars, with their contents, is estimated to weigh about 184 tons. Freight trains sometimes reach a weight of 550 tons.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, has accepted an invitation to speak at a Democratic barbecue in Fayetteville on the 21st instant.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Grotton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles. It has cured me, and thank God I am saved and now a healthy woman." Trial bottles free at Jno. L. Wooten's Drug Store. Regular size 50c, and $1.00.

The fusion leaders in their desperation are secretly sending out circulars to frighten the negroes and poor white people, saying that if the Democrats carry the legislature they will deprive them of the right to vote, and some "evil fellows of the baser sort" are privately telling them the same thing. The Democrats had power for twenty years, and never attempted anything of the kind. Besides, the constitution of the State forbids it and it cannot be done. It is simply a lie, started and spread for the purpose of seating people.—Concord Times.

A Pop who invited a negro to drink with him in a bar in town one day this week, said "I expect to vote with you and I can afford to drink with you." The negro replied, "Boss I don't know who nigger you're going to vote, but I'm going to vote the Democrat ticket straight." "Well then," said the Pop, "I can't vote with you." "Dat all right," said the colored man, "I'm much obliged to ye for do dram."—Rocky Mount Motor.

The present fight in North Carolina is no ordinary one. The contest is over the civilization of the Commonwealth and he who fails to do his duty now will be forever a marked man. He will be welcomed hereafter to the ranks of the victorious Democracy, which is always patient, long-suffering and full of mercy; but if he fails to help it now, when everything that a good citizen should hold dear is at stake, he need not come saying "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name, and in Thy name done many wonderful works?" He need not come expecting honor and preferment at its hands; for the campaign and election of 1898 will be remembered, along with the Maine, and so will be the record that every man makes this year.—Charlotte Observer.

Mr. H. S. Ward, the Democratic candidate for the Senate, is the only one of the campaigners that we have heard so far, come square, fully and positively out on one of the most vital questions in North Carolina politics; the education of each race by their own money. In his speech at Wilmington on the 22nd he declared that the graduating of young negroes on the hard earned money of the white man was a crime, and he would oppose it and endeavor to alter it through his political life, in absolute defiance, if it must be, of any and all political parties.

He declares he is willing to do charity to their afflicted and needy, but will forever protest against the education of a negro young man with the money of a white man who is unable to educate his own children.—Plymouth Beacon.

The campaign is now on. Let all white men get down to solid work for the success of the Democratic ticket. With it success will crown our efforts in the county in November. Without it the enemies of Democracy will win.

Oxida Cotton Mills:
About two and a half years ago my boy about ten years, and my daughter about two years, each had an ailment at of the glands about the throat. At the same time, I was inclined to think it mumps, but soon observing to the contrary, I called in the doctor, who said the trouble came from colds, prescribing accordingly, yet swelling continued to grow, until each had to hold or the lances, the little boy having been lanced in three places, and at three times, his face at times, looking alarming. The nature of the trouble was termed one thing by one and another thing by another. This however, did not come in me, as I was looking for a cure, and Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy having been called to my attention so I finally I dropped the treatment from the doctor and commenced to use Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy. To say that the results obtained have been satisfactory is putting it in mild terms, the children, and especially the little boy being entirely well, yet wearing the scars that will ever keep fresh in my memory the merits of Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy. resp.

A JOKE THAT FAILED.

Harding worked in a bank. By inclination he was a bookworm, chief by occupation. In common with many other bookworms his chief complaint was that he did not have enough money to give his collecting instincts free play.

There was a Mrs. Harding. Her principal complaint was that so much of Harding's money went for books.

Quite recently that person who crept into the ark under cover of darkness—to wit, one book agent—made his appearance at Harding's office. He had a whole lot of books, and Harding wanted most of them. The argument was that "you only have to pay 25 cents a week, and as soon as you make that first payment you get the books. Only so many of this edition to be printed, and in six months your copy will be worth twice what you pay for it."

So Harding decided to buy an edition of Dumas and an edition of Victor Hugo. He paid his first installment down, and the next day the books were delivered at the bank. The agent remarked that he would have the books sent to Harding's house in Brooklyn if he so desired, but Harding declared that for certain reasons he would rather have them sent to the bank. Of course everybody in the bank knew why.

"I'll just take Victor Hugo home tonight," he said, "and see how Mrs. Harding likes him."

Victor Hugo went to Brooklyn last night, and the latest reports were that Mrs. Harding didn't like him at all. In fact, Harding said the next day that he really had never seen any one so provoked in all his life as Mrs. Harding was when she heard that the money that should have bought dresses for the girls had gone for books.

"I'll just have these books of Dumas kept here for a few days," added Harding, "and let Mrs. Harding get over Hugo before I show her Dumas."

The books were packed away. They made quite a respectable bundle and weighed a good deal.

A week passed, and Harding announced with great glee that he had broached the subject to Mrs. Harding and that she had forgiven him for spending the money on the Victor Hugo purchase.

"I'll take them home tonight," he announced, and an hour or so later he went out for luncheon.

While he was away the spirit of evil entered into some of the clerks, and they substituted in the package for the books a number of large bricks and many newspapers. The books they stored away in a desk, and then they told every body else what they had done.

The whole office rejoiced to see Harding bending double under his load of books that afternoon and speculating on what Har and Mrs. Harding would say and do and think when the packages was opened in Brooklyn that night.

The next morning the whole force was on hand early to catch at Harding, and when he arrived the preliminary greetings were enjoyed, but Harding looked sad, so there was not much laughing.

MULES AS TIMEKEEPERS.

When They Have Done Their Trick on the Towpath, They Die.

It was just before 7 o'clock in the morning and the sun had just come enough way from across the sea to climb up part way on the big globe and cast a pale gray light over the awakening city. Laborers and shop-girls were hurrying to work, shivering in the chill air that marked the sudden appearance of winter.

On the bridge crossing the canal at the weighlock two men stood watching the approaching boats, and yawning and stretching in contemplation of another day's work. One was a canal employe.

"See those sleepy mules," said he, as he stretched himself again sympathetically. "See that clock there in the tower of the railroad station across the river. Two minutes of 7. Bet you those mules will give the time first before the whistle blows. They're great on time. Know it better'n you do. Just watch."

The three gaunt beasts, with their ears flapping in apparent forgetfulness, were urged into a trot over the bridge, and the two men dodged the towline that slipped over the bridge railing to the other side of the canal.

It was an eminute of 7. The mules stopped on the towpath.

All three loudly brayed, and the chorus of "Eah, heeh" awoke the sleeping people along the canal bank for hundreds of yards. And then the whistles in all the factories sent out steam into the cold air and in tones shrill and somber sounded the beginning of the day's work.

"Wot'll you?" Them mules beat 'em out by a minute," remarked the canal employe leaning on the railing of the bridge. "They won't go no further. They know it's time for feed and rest. See the boatman. They're going to take a snub and put on a new team."

Lines were thrown and in a few minutes the cableboats were tied fast to the bank. Three dejected looking mules, still munching a wisp of hay, scrambled up the gangplank, and their places in the stable of the forward part of the boat were soon taken by the timekeepers.

"Why, those mules," remarked the canal man on the bridge, as he watched the new team starting under way and the towline stretching as the line were cast off, "know more about the time of day than you do unless you look at your watch. They work just so many hours. They go along the towpath with heads cast down and ears drooping, and unworked occasionally with the whip, when they have to hustle across bridges and take up the slack of the towline, but when breakfast or dinner or supper time comes, why you can bank all your money on it every time that they'll halloo within a minute of the right time whether it rains or snows, whether it's dark as pitch or the sun shines out clear and bright. They may call 'em jackasses, but they're wiser than wears pants." Rochester Union and Advertiser.

THE HERIDAN'S JOKE ON GRANT.

The Only Time the Great General Found a Cigar Too Strong for Him.

They had "done" Florida—that is, as much of the Per insular State as people generally are agreed to see 17 years ago—and the party, composed of General Grant, General Sheridan, their wives, two nieces of Mrs. Grant, the sec retary, Mr. Byron Andrews and a solitary artist, had just voyaged down the gulf coast, stopping for an evening's "send off"—and a very lively time was—at Key West, and now they were domiciled in Havana. Grant's perpetual cigar was a pillar of cloud early in the morning and a twinkling of fire late at night. The Cuban colony of cigar makers at Key West had stowed their staterooms full of their choicest goods, while the famous manufacturer of Havanna had all brought out special brands, sending sample hunches to the palace for the approval of the two famous soldiers. It could have been a breach of etiquette to keep a check upon one's smoking under such tempting conditions. So the American visitors puff ed away at countless incomparable cigars while the gayly clad officers of the palace household rolled their cigarettes and wondered how long the famous smoker could keep it up.

Presently there came a day when the party fortress of Cabana, over the bay. The heavy state barges received the brilliant little party across the breezeless harbor, and oh, what a hot! They climbed the zig-zag path which leads up to the portal cut into the grim front of the great military prison, which was even then nearly filled with prisoners of state. They were shown through courts, deep, dark passages, parades, barracks and prisons, which fill the whole vast interior of this great, gloomy, terrible place. General Ponceur, then commandant of Cabana, paraded the troops with a fine fanfare from a bugle squad, and then lunch was served at headquarters, high up on the battlements, commanding a grand view of
