At one time during unch I was introduced to twenty five or thirty, of the heads of the leading houses in the city, and I must say, was more than forcibly struck at the confidence constanty expressed in the belief that Judge Parker will be elected. Everybody seemed to be overflowing with confidence in the result, and the business men of the city are determined that noeffort on'their part shall be lacking that

That Judge Parker's celebrated telegram in which he made known his personal views to the convention and to the American people on the money question' and declining the nomination if his views did not ac cord with those of the convention, was the bravest act of the century and it will cause thousands who would have voted for Roosevelt, to vote the Democratic ticket. Everywhere I went, on the train, passing hrough the towns and cities on the oute, I could hear nothing but exressions of confidence in this being a Democratic year, and Judge Parker will be the next occupant of the White House."
